

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. You can search through the full text of this book on the web at <http://books.google.com/>

NYPL RESEARCH LIBRARIES

3 3433 00064232 6

KTN

P.

THE

Parliamentary Gazetteer

OF

ENGLAND AND WALES,

Adapted to the most recent Statistical Arrangements, and

Lines of Railroad and Canal Communication,

WITH A COMPLETE COUNTY-ATLAS OF ENGLAND,

FOUR LARGE MAPS OF WALES,

AND AN APPENDIX,

CONTAINING THE RESULTS, IN DETAIL, OF THE CENSUS OF 1841.

VOLUME I.

A—D.

A. FULLARTON & CO.:

STEAD'S PLACE, LEITH WALK, EDINBURGH;

AND 106 NEWGATE STREET, LONDON.

1851.
A 116

EDINBURGH:
FULLARTON AND MACNAE, PRINTERS, LEITH WALK.

P R E F A C E.

N offering the present Volumes to the notice and patronage of the Public, it cannot be necessary to expatiate at any length on the value and practical utility of Works of this class if accurately and comprehensively compiled. A TOPOGRAPHICAL DICTIONARY or GAZETTEER of one's own country is a valuable acquisition, not only to persons in business, but to every one who feels an interest in what is going on around him, or wishes to avail himself, in any form, of that ceaseless and rapid intercommunication now happily established betwixt every town, village, and hamlet, included within 'the four seas of Britain.' At the same time, it will be expected that the Publishers of the present GAZETTEER should assign some reasons which may induce a favourable opinion of their own undertaking in particular. These reasons may be briefly stated as follows:—

Although several extensive, and in many respects, well-executed Gazetteers and Topographical Dictionaries of the United Kingdom, and of England and Wales in particular, have appeared within these few years, it is a fact that all the existing Works of this class have become in great part obsolete, and more or less unfit for the exact purposes of a Gazetteer, by reason of the extensive and important changes which have taken place since 1830 in the Franchise, and since 1835 in the Municipal representation, and in the Ecclesiastical arrangements, of this portion of the United Kingdom. When to this consideration it is added that the present is the first GAZETTEER in which special attention has been paid to the operation of the new Poor-Law, and the formation of the Poor-Law unions, and in which the Great Railroad lines of communication now intersecting the kingdom are noticed in detail, the utility of a Gazetteer which shall specially embrace these topics will be at once felt and admitted by the Merchant, the Manufacturer, the Tourist, the Landed proprietor, and Professional gentlemen of all classes. To supply this desideratum has been the object of the PARLIAMENTARY GAZETTEER, which—as is meant to be implied by its title—rests its claim to public patronage mainly on the ground that all its Municipal, Ecclesiastical, and Statistical details have been derived from Parliamentary documents. As regards the purely Topographical portion of their Work, the Publishers will not impose on public confidence by representing it as founded upon 'actual survey,'—a mode of procedure which, however desirable, and indeed necessary to absolute correctness in a Work of this class—would, it is evident, require at once the authority and the funds of Government to execute with any degree of accuracy and correctness; but every means in the power of private parties has been adopted to render this part also of their Work satisfactory to the reader,—the best Topographical authorities, and in particular, the Ordnance maps of the great trigonometrical survey of England and Wales, have been studiously consulted,—and local information has been obtained, when necessary, from competent sources.

The PARLIAMENTARY GAZETTEER, in addition to the usual Topographical information furnished by Works of the class, exhibits the movement or progress of the Population of every county, city, borough, parish, town, and village in England and Wales, from 1801 to 1831;—the amount of the assessed taxes as last raised in 1815, which still determines the County-rates in 18 counties;—the sums paid for the support of the poor in the different parishes in 1837, and the increase or diminution of these rates in particular instances;—the name of the Poor-law union to which each parish belongs;—the area in statute acres of each parish and hundred;—the nature and extent of the various Charities existing throughout England and Wales, as reported upon by the Charity commissioners;—the past and present state of the Franchise and Municipal governments,—and the Revenues and present condition of the various Borough and Corporate towns, as ascertained by the Parliamentary commissioners;—the distances of all the principal towns and villages, from the Great lines of Railroad in their vicinity;—the nature and operation of the new Ecclesiastical arrangements; the gross Revenue, and the names of the Patrons, of the various Clerical Livings and Corporations throughout England and Wales;—the number of Dissenting chapels, as well as of Churches and Chapels belonging to the Establishment, and of the National, Lancasterian, British and Foreign, and Sunday schools, in every town, parish, or village, in as far as accurate returns of these exist;—and a variety of information too miscellaneous or minute to be dwelt upon in this Preface.

It has been the study of the Editors of the present Work to shun the errors and profit by the experience of their predecessors in this department of compilation. Anxious to avoid the two extremes of prolixity on the one hand, and of excessive compression on the other, they have been careful to omit whatever would have swelled the bulk of the book without adding materially to its usefulness, and to exclude nothing which was really important or which might reasonably be sought for within its pages.

In the higher department of antiquities and archæology, the expensive Works of our National Societies, and the magnificent volumes of Dugdale, Camden, Tanner, the two Lysons, Britton, Fosbrooke, Stothard, Colt Hoare, and others, have been consulted; whilst the guidance of Turner and Palgrave, and recent historians of original research and established accuracy, has been gladly followed in the sketches of history. The Works of tourists, and lovers of the picturesque, have been referred to for the most vivid and accurate descriptions of natural scenery; and the more remarkable observations of various writers, in different departments of natural science, have been occasionally introduced under the proper articles. Finally, wherever the Editors have seen reason to doubt the accuracy of their sources of information, or their correctness under existing circumstances, or to desiderate more information, on any particular point than they could glean from these sources, they have applied for and obtained it from correspondents whose local knowledge and means of information were of the best kind. It will now be understood that the Editors have aimed at something higher than a mere Gazetteer,—they have sought to produce a Work which, in every useful and important sense, may be regarded as a General Description of England and Wales, adapted to the perusal of all classes of readers, and presenting, in easy and obvious combination, the most valuable results of the vast amount of topographical, statistical, historical, antiquarian, and scientific research, which has been bestowed, especially of late years, upon this portion of the United Kingdom.

Among the various subjects comprehended in the present Work, in addition to the ordinary matter of a Gazetteer, are distinct articles on the principal mountains and rivers of England and Wales,—hydrographical notices of harbours, roadsteads, estuaries, light-houses, and other maritime objects,—accounts of canals, railroads, and tunnels,—notices of the principal agricultural and mineral productions of different districts,—descriptions of remarkable scenery,—notices of splendid mansions, and works of art,—of extensive libraries, museums, and galleries,—of colleges and academies,—of scientific and literary institutions, schools and hospitals,—of curious and memorable local incidents,—and of illustrious or remarkable personages. The Editors have also, when fit opportunity presented itself, endeavoured to make the reader acquainted with the ancient as well as the present state of the objects of his inquiry. The remains of Druidism,—the Roman roads, encampments, and stations,—the ancient monastical and conventual establishments, chapels, churches, and cathedrals,—the fortifications and castles of earlier ages,—are noticed with more or less of detail under the proper heads in the course of the Work.

Contents of Introduction.

CHAP.	I. Boundaries and Extent of England and Wales	.	.	.
—	II. Physical Features—Mountains—Rivers—Coasts	.	.	.
—	III. Climate—Soils—Minerals—Animal and Vegetable Kingdoms	.	.	.
—	IV. Ancient Population, and Roman Geography of Britain	.	.	.
—	V. Civil Divisions	.	.	.
—	VI. Representative System	.	.	.
—	VII. Municipal Corporations	.	.	.
—	VIII. Poor-Rates	.	.	.
—	IX. Population	.	.	.
—	X. State of Education	.	.	.
—	XI. Ecclesiastical Statistics	.	.	.
—	XII. Of Monasteries and Religious Orders	.	.	.
—	XIII. Ecclesiastical Architecture	.	.	.
—	XIV. English Language, and Composition of Local Names	.	.	.
—	XV. Welsh Language, and Composition of Local Names	.	.	.

INTRODUCTION.

CHAP. I.—BOUNDARIES AND EXTENT OF ENGLAND AND WALES.

Boundaries.—ENGLAND and WALES, together forming the southern and larger portion of the island of Great Britain, are situated between the parallels of 50° and $55^{\circ} 45'$ north latitude, and between $1^{\circ} 46'$ east, and $5^{\circ} 42'$ west longitude. The sea bounds this part of Britain on three sides. On the east it has the North sea or German ocean; on the south it is separated from France by the English channel; and on the west that part of the North Atlantic ocean which has received the names of St George's channel, and the Irish sea, separates it from Ireland. It is divided from Scotland on the north, by the river Tweed from its mouth to Kerholm; thence by a line running south-west by Keddonburn, Haddenrig, Blackdown-hill, Merslaw-hill, Baltonbress-hill, and to the sources of the Kail and the Jed; thence by Kershope-burn, Liddal-water, and the course of the Esk to Tod-holes; and thence by the March-dyke to White Sark on the Solway frith.

Figure.—Its general figure is triangular. The base of the triangle is formed by a line drawn from the South Foreland in Kent, to the Land's End in Cornwall. The eastern side may be conceived as formed by a line drawn from Berwick, on the north-east, to the South Foreland; and the western side, by a line drawn from Berwick to the Land's End. The dimensions of the triangle thus formed are as follows: base, 340 miles; eastern side, 345 miles; western side, 425 miles. The breadth of the country rapidly contracts according to the figure thus traced; so that to the north of the Humber the average breadth does not amount to one-third of the average breadth south from that point.

Area.—The earliest approximation to an estimate of the superficial area of South Britain fixed its extent of surface at 29,000,000 statute acres. This computation was first disputed by Gerard Malines, who, in his 'Lex Mercatoria,' stated that England, according to an admeasurement of his own upon the map, contained 29,568,000 acres, of which 5,568,000 were waste ground. Sir William Petty reduced this estimate, by another series of calculations, to 28,000,000; but Gregory King, in 1696, by one method of computation, estimated the total superficies of South Britain at 38,660,000 acres, and by another, at 39,938,500 acres. Dr Grew calculated the superficial area of England and Wales at 46,000,000; Templeman at 31,648,000; and Dr Young at 46,915,933 acres. None of these calculations, however, were or could be founded on correct data, for no trigonometrical survey of the country had yet been executed; and all the existing maps of England and Wales, therefore, were more or less incorrect. In the third report of the Emigration committee of the House of Commons, the following statement is given of the probable number of acres in England and Wales, and their agricultural condition:

	Cultivated Acres.	Uncultivated but capable of cultivation.	Unprofitable.	Total.
England,	25,632,000	3,454,000	3,256,400	32,342,400
Wales,	3,117,000	530,000	1,105,000	4,752,000
				<hr/> 37,094,400

The following table exhibits the area of each county in England and Wales, in square miles, according to Arrowsmith's map of 1815-16, which was principally founded on the Ordnance survey:

ENGLAND.		ENGLAND.
Bedford,	463	Brought forward,	34,292
Berks,	756	Southampton,	1,628
Buckingham,	740	Stafford,	1,148
Cambridge,	858	Suffolk,	1,512
Chester,	1,052	Surrey,	758
Cornwall,	1,327	Sussex,	1,463
Cumberland,	1,478	Warwick,	902
Derby,	1,026	Westmoreland,	763
Devon,	2,579	Wilts,	1,379
Dorset,	1,005	Worcester,	729
Durham,	1,061	York { East Riding, }	5,961
Essex,	1,532	York { North Riding, }
Gloucester,	1,256	York { West Riding, }
Hereford,	860	Total of England,	50,535
Hertford,	528
Huntingdon,	370
Kent,	1,537
Lancaster,	1,831	WALES.
Leicester,	804	Anglesea,	271
Lincoln,	2,748	Brecon,	754
Middlesex,	282	Cardigan,	675
Monmouth,	498	Caermarthen,	974
Norfolk,	2,092	Caernarvon,	544
Northampton,	1,017	Denbigh,	633
Northumberland,	1,871	Flint,	244
Nottingham,	837	Glamorgan,	792
Oxford,	752	Merioneth,	663
Rutland,	149	Montgomery,	839
Salop (Shropshire)	1,341	Pembroke,	610
Somerset,	1,642	Radnor,	426
Carry forward,	34,292	Total of Wales,	7,425
		Grand Total,	57,960

CHAP. II.—PHYSICAL FEATURES—MOUNTAINS—RIVERS—COASTS.

THE general aspect of England is varied and delightful. "In some parts verdant plains extend as far as the eye can reach, watered by copious streams, and covered by innumerable cattle. In others, the pleasing vicissitudes of gently rising hills and bending vales, fertile in corn, waving with wood, and interspersed with meadows, offer the most delightful landscapes of rural opulence and beauty. Some tracts abound with prospects of the more romantic kind,—lofty mountains, craggy rocks, deep narrow dells, and tumbling torrents; nor are there wanting, as a contrast to these scenes, the gloomy features of black moors, and wide uncultivated heaths." The general aspect of Wales is bold, romantic, and mountainous. It presents continued ranges of lofty mountains and impending crags, intersected by deep ravines and extensive valleys, and affording endless views of wild mountain scenery. These ranges generally extend in a direction from south-east to north-west, having their most abrupt declivity facing the latter quarter. Numerous projecting ridges laterally expand, on various points of the compass, in countless ramifications; many of these present the appearance of mountains piled upon mountains; in other instances, they shoot up ragged and abrupt from the bosom of deep valleys, in solitary and sublime grandeur.

Mountains.—In the northern part of Northumberland, the mountains approach very near the coast,—the top of Cheviot, the most elevated of them, in N. lat. $55^{\circ} 29'$, not being distant from it more than 18 miles. The mountains around Cheviot, considering their elevation, are very valuable, being in general fine green hills, thrown into a great variety of forms, and enclosing many sequestered glens, some of which, from their magnitude,—the solitude which reigns in them,—and the gloom of overhanging precipices from which the infant rivers seem struggling into the light of day,—have an air of great wildness and sublimity. These hills extend from the head of the river Coquet, down to Allenton, and thence northward to Prendwick, Branton, Ilderton, Wooler, Kirknewton, and Mindrim; occupying an area of at least 90,000 acres.

Of the two mountain-districts of Cumberland, one bounds the east side of the county, and is the loftiest part of what may be called the British Apennines, which, extending from Derbyshire and Staffordshire to Linlithgow, separate the eastern from the western coasts. The highest point in this chain is Cross-fell, 2,901 feet. Here are the sources of the South Tyne and Tees. The other range—commonly known as the Cumbrian mountains—occupies the south-western division of Cumberland; the immense elevation and singular form of these mountains are the most striking features in the romantic scenery of the lakes. They rise from 1,000 to 3,055 feet above the level of the sea, and occupy above a third of Cumberland.

The Cotswold hills, in Gloucestershire, may be considered as a continuation of the great chain, already noticed, stretching from Derbyshire into Scotland. They extend, in one direction, to Bath; and in another, to Salisbury plain; and form the dividing ridge between the basin of the Severn on the west, and that of the Thames on the east.

The principal range in North Wales is the Snowdon chain, occupying its centre. The greater part of the rocks composing these mountains are schistose, hornblende, schistose mica, granite, and porphyry, inclosing considerable blocks of quartz. The western side of this range is very precipitous, consisting of hornstone, upon which are placed a number of basaltic columns, more or less regularly pentagonal, and standing perpendicularly to the plane of the horizon. The Ferwyn chain occupies the eastern part of Merionethshire, and branches out into Denbighshire. From Pennant, in Montgomeryshire, to the sea-coast near Llangyllin in Merionethshire, is another extensive ridge containing several lofty mountains, known under the appellation of the Arrans and the Arrenigs. The most eminent of these are Arran-ben-llyn, and Arran-fowddy; and the extremity of the line is marked by the triple head of the lofty Cader-Idris. The celebrated Plynlimmon elevates his lofty crest over a range of table-land which extends from Llanvair, on the north-east, to the abrupt cliffs bounding the bay of Cardigan near Aberystwith. In South Wales an extensive chain stretches from Bleddva forest in Radnorshire, through Brecknock and Caermarthenshire, terminating in the Prescelly mountains, in Pembrokeshire. The most distinguished eminences in this line are the Cwm Rhysglog, Pen-y-cader, Mynydd castle, Newydd 'Carreg Wen, and Llanvernach. This group is distinguished by the name of the Yellow mountains. The Fothoc hills, on the east of Brecknockshire—from the dark heath with which they are covered, called the Black mountains—form another range which is inclosed by the isolated mountains called Penbre hill. Its more remarkable elevations are Tre Beddw mountain, and the Pen-Mallard hills. The hills of this division abound in valuable minerals, and rare vegetable productions. They are also interspersed with romantic valleys, fertile in the extreme, and highly picturesque.

A range of mountains, which may in some respects be considered as a continuation of the great western chain of English mountains, runs through Devonshire, Cornwall, and Somersetshire, embracing the huge waste called Dartmoor, which is said to be 1700 feet above the level of the sea. Some ranges of chalk hills run from Dorsetshire into Kent; or are perhaps to be regarded as offsets from the high table-land of Salisbury plain; and geologists have traced something like a connected chain running along the east side of the island from the isle of Portland to the Wolds of Yorkshire. But by far the most mountainous regions of England are on the west side of the island, and the general direction of the ranges is north and south, or that of the island's length.

The following table of the latitude, longitude, and altitude of such hills in England and Wales as exceed 2,000 feet in elevation, is taken from Mudge and Colby's 'Trigonometrical Survey':—

	N. lat.	52° 47' —"	W. long.	3° 42' —"
Arran-Fowddy, Merionethshire, . . .	52	53 24	3	45 —	2955
Arrenig, ditto,	51	53 4	3	25 26	2899
Beacons of Brecknock,	52	52 —	3	21 —	2892
Cader Ferwyn, Merionethshire, . . .	52	42 2	3	52 36	2563
Cader Idris, ditto,	51	52 58	3	41 35	2914
Caermarthen Vair,	54	22 11	2	30 13	2596
Calf Hill, Westmoreland,	—	—	—	—	2188
Carn Fell, Yorkshire,	51	51 47	3	29 3	2245
Capellante, Brecknockshire,	—	—	—	—	2394
Caernedd David, Caernarvonshire, . .	—	—	—	—	3427
Carnedd, Llewellyn, ditto,	—	—	—	—	3469
Cheviot, Northumberland,	55	28 52	2	8 12	2658
Conistone Fell,	54	22 20	3	6 34	2577
Cradle Mountain, Brecknockshire, . .	51	57 7	3	6 39	2545
Cross Fell, Cumberland,	54	42 18	2	28 37	2901
Grasmere Fell, Cumberland,	—	—	—	—	2756
Hedgehope, Northumberland,	55	28 28	2	4 54	2347
Helvellyn, Cumberland,	54	31 43	3	0 21	3055
High Pike, ditto,	44	42 27	3	2 49	2101

Ingleborough Hill, Yorkshire, . . .	N. lat. 54° 10' 4"	W. long. 2° 23' 18"	2361
Nine Standards, Westmoreland, . . .	54 27 21	2 15 57	2136
Pennigant Hill, Yorkshire, . . .	54 10 56	2 14 22	2270
Pillar, Cumberland, . . .	54 29 57	3 16 7	2893
Plynlimmon Hill, Cardiganshire, . . .	52 28 3	3 46 4	2463
Radnor Forest, Radnorshire, . . .	52 16 2	3 11 16	2163
Saddleback, Cumberland, . . .	54 38 30	3 2 17	2787
Sea Fell (Low Point), ditto, . . .	54 27 2	3 12 45	3092
Sea Fell (High Point), ditto, . . .	— — —	— — —	3166
Shunner Fell, Yorkshire, . . .	54 22 21	2 13 31	2329
Skiddaw, Cumberland, . . .	54 39 12	3 8 9	3022
Snea Fell, Isle of Man, . . .	54 17 28	4 26 46	2004
Snowdon, Caernarvonshire, . . .	53 4 9	4 3 38	3571
Water Cragg, Yorkshire, . . .	54 26 19	2 6 8	2186
Whenside (in Ingleton Fells), Yorkshire, . . .	54 13 45	2 23 35	2334
Whenside (in Kettlewell Dale), ditto, . . .	54 9 44	1 59 24	2263

It hence appears that there are in England and Wales, twenty-eight mountains between 2,000 and 3,000 feet in height; and seven exceeding 3,000 feet.

Rivers.—The most considerable rivers are the Thames, Severn, Medway, Trent, Ouse, Tyne, Tees, Wear, Mersey, Dee, Avon, Eden, and Derwent, which, aided by an extensive system of canal navigation, afford an easy access into the interior of the country, and enable the most inland districts to communicate readily with the sea as well as with one another. In the edition of Camden's 'Britannia,' published in 1605, there is a table, from which it appears that there are upwards of 550 rivers and streams in England and Wales, distinguished by particular names. The reader will find accounts of the principal rivers and their tributaries, under their respective alphabetical heads, in the body of our work.

Coasts.—The western coast, beginning at the Solway frith to Braich-y-pwl point, is partly flat, partly bold and elevated. A wide inlet presents the estuary of the Solway frith, Morecambe bay, the estuaries of the Ribble, the Mersey, and the Dee, and, in the very centre of it, the Isle of Man. Directly south from the Isle of Man—which may be regarded as a prolongation of the Scottish mainland—is the isle of Anglesey, forming one of the counties of Wales, and separated from the mainland by a long and narrow passage called the Menai straits. Cardigan bay, another immense opening, stretches from Braich-y-pwl point to St David's head, presenting a coast in general rugged, mountainous and wild; and between St David's head and the Land's-end there is another vast indentation which gives space to St Bride's bay, Milford haven, Caernarthen and Swansea bays, the Bristol channel or estuary of the Severn, and Barnstaple bay. The beach along this tract continues mostly high and rocky; off from it, there are some small scattered islands, of no particular note, if we except the isles of Scilly, which lie nearly 30 miles west from Cornwall. Ancient history fully supports the belief, that a great change has been gradually going on for the last ten or twelve centuries in the coasts of Britain in this quarter. The lands forming the Scilly islands, the isle of Wight, &c. were evidently once united with the mainland, but are now detached by a considerable channel, and a great portion of the coast of Cornwall and Devonshire has been invaded and swept away by encroachments of the sea. The Scilly islands, it is stated upon good authority, were formerly only 10 in number, though they are now upwards of 140.

Proceeding eastward, along the southern shore, from the high rugged projection called the Land's-end, in N. lat. 50° 4' 20", W. long. 5° 41', the spacious bay of St Michael soon opens on the view; and, on doubling the Lizard point, there appears a large semicircular sweep, including, among other inlets and capes, Falmouth haven, Rame head, and Plymouth sound. Nearly opposite to Rame head, about 14 miles out at sea, are the Eddystone rocks, over which the sea frequently breaks with tremendous violence, and on which is built a strong light-house for the direction of vessels leaving the Channel and Plymouth sound. Between Prawle point and Portland bill, is another vast indentation, the most remarkable objects in the curvature of which are, Start point, the bay of Dartmouth, Froward point, Torbay, Hopesnose, and the estuary of the Exe. Next follow Portland road, Weymouth bay, and St Alban's head. From this promontory to Selsey bill, the coast is very much deflected by several creeks and headlands; among which are Peverel point, Sandwich bay, Poole harbour, with an island in its entrance, Christchurch bay, Hurst cape, Southampton water, Portsmouth harbour, and a capacious basin interspersed with small islands. Opposite to the estuary of Southampton lies the isle of Wight, which forms with the mainland a sheltered channel consisting of the Needles passage, the Solent, and the famous road of Selsey bill. From this point nothing remarkable occurs until Beachyhead, a bold and elevated point of Sussex, makes its appearance in N. lat. $50^{\circ} 44'$, E. long. $0^{\circ} 15'$. The only other objects which attract particular attention in this quarter are the rock of Hastings, Dungeness, and Dover cliffs.

Off Kent, as we enter on the eastern coast, are the Downs,—a road much frequented by ships, and defended from the swells of the British ocean by the Goodwin sands. These very remarkable banks are situated between the North and South Forelands, opposite Deal and Ramsgate, and about seven or eight miles from the coast. The length of the sands is about ten miles, and the breadth nearly two. They consist of a more soft, fluid, porous, spongy, but withal tenacious matter, than the neighbouring sands; and are consequently of such a quality, that when a ship strikes upon them there is little chance of her getting off,—the nature of the sand being such as to swallow the vessel up sometimes in a few hours, while the surf which breaks upon them renders all attempts to approach the ill-fated vessel impossible. A level sandy beach separates the high chalky cliffs which face the coast for a considerable way on each side of the South Foreland, from those which skirt the bold and rugged shore of the Isle of Thanet,—a place formerly detached from the rest of Kent by the navigable river, but now little more than a peninsula. The most easterly point of this isle is the North Foreland; between which and Orfordness, there is a vast gulf into which the rivers Medway, Thames, Crouch, and Maden, discharge their waters, and along which, the shore, after passing the isle of Sheppy, is for the most part flat and marshy. From Orfordness to the spacious inlet called the Wash, which presents the estuaries of the Witham, Nen, Ouse, and Welland, the coast assumes a circular direction, and presents an intermixture of low ground, sandy hillocks, and clayey precipices. Lowestoff, on the Norfolk coast, in E. long. $1^{\circ} 46'$, is the most easterly point of Great Britain. Crossing the Wash, and keeping the level beach of Lincolnshire, we come to the Humber, beyond which, with the exception of Spurnhead, Flamborough head, and Scarborough, there are few indentations or promontories of note. Scarborough stands on a vast rock, projecting into the sea; but Flamborough head, in N. lat. $54^{\circ} 7'$, W. long. $0^{\circ} 4' 45''$, is a far more magnificent object, being formed of limestone of a snowy whiteness, and stupendous height, visible far off at sea. From Spurnhead to Flamborough head, the coast is commonly flat; from this to Bamborough castle, it is first bold and precipitous, and then descends to low cliffs of sandstone and other materials; and from this to Berwick-upon-Tweed, it is tame and sandy. Not far from the shore, opposite to the Northumbrian coast, appear the Coquet isle, the Fern isles, and Holy isle.

CHAP. III.—CLIMATE—SOILS—MINERALS—ANIMAL AND VEGETABLE KINGDOMS.

THE climate of England may be characterized as variable, inclining to moisture and cold; though neither extreme of temperature is felt so keenly here as on the continent under the same parallels. There is perhaps no country in Europe which displays a richer and more beautiful verdure for such a large portion of the year, as the southern part of our island. It would appear, however, that the climate of England has not only become considerably colder in the summer-months, but also more humid, than in former days. William of Malmesbury remarks, in his book 'De Pontificibus,' that the vale of Gloucester used to produce, in the 12th century, as good wine as many of the provinces of France; and, it is well-known, that in the counties of Worcester, Hereford, Somerset, Cambridge, and Essex, there are lands which bear the name of vineyards,—many of them having been attached to particular church-establishments whose ruins are yet in their vicinity. In regard to the vale of Gloucester, William of Malmesbury says, "there is no province in England which has so many and good vineyards, neither on account of their fertility or the sweetness of the grape." All modern attempts, however, to cultivate the vine in England, except when trained against walls, have failed. The climate of Wales is colder and more humid than that of England under the same parallels.

Average Quantity of Rain and Dew.—Dr Halley supposes the average quantity of rain which falls in England to be 22 inches; but this is certainly below the average. Mr Walton, with much greater probability, fixes it at 31.3 inches. In this country it generally rains less in March than in November, in the proportion—as a medium—of 7 to 2; less in April than in October, in the proportion of 1 to 2; and less in May than in September,—at least the chances for this are as 4 to 3. Dr Hales thinks that the quantity of dew that falls on moist earth, in this country, is 3.28 inches; but Mr Walton has estimated the total deposition at 5 inches annually; or that 36 inches of water are deposited, at a medium, annually on the surface of the earth, in England and Wales, which is equal to 28 cubic miles, or 115,000,000,000 tons.

Temperature.—It appears from an account kept at Liverpool for 25 years, that the mean heat in that town, at 12 noon is 53°. The greatest degree of heat experienced was 86°; the least 22°. The mean heat at Dover is 53°; at London 51° 9'. It is said that in the winter of the years 1794, 1798, and 1813-14, the thermometer was observed to sink to 5° of Zero. In the summer of 1808 it was as high as 90°.

Winds.—The west and south-east winds are very prevalent, and the most violent in the south part of the island. Next to them are the north and north-east winds. The former may be accounted for from the exposure of the island to the Atlantic ocean. The latter—which prevail generally from about the middle of April to the 7th or 8th of May, and sometimes longer—may be thus accounted for. In Sweden and Norway the face of the country is covered with snow to the middle of May or longer. This frozen covering, which has been formed during winter, grows gradually shallower to the 15th or 16th of May, or until the sun has acquired 17° or 18° of north declination; while, on the other hand, the valleys and mountains of England have received an accession of temperature of 24° or 25°. On this account, when the temperature of Sweden and Norway is cooled down by snow to 32°, that of Britain is 24° or 25° higher; because, while the ground is covered with snow, the rays of the sun are incapable of heating the air above 32°. The air of Sweden and Norway will then, of course, by the law of comparative specific gravities, displace that of England; and, from the relative situation of those countries to this country, will produce a north-east wind. This current is commonly stronger by day than by night, because the variation of temperature in the air of Great Britain is at that time the greatest, being frequently from 50° to 60° about noon, and sinking to 32° in the night. The wind that most seldom occurs is that from the south.

State of the Barometer.—Mr Hutchison ascertained that the mean heat of the barometer at Liverpool, during 25 years, was 29.74 inches; the greatest range being 2.89; and the annual average range 1.96. The barometer at Dover, on an average of 5 years, showed a mean height of 29.90, and 2.47 of greatest range, the mean range being 1.80. The mean annual height at York, on an average of 4 years, was 29.70; and at London, for many years, 29.88. According to Mr Kerwan, the usual variation of the barometer in England is 2.5 inches.

Soils and Agriculture.—The soils of England are various, but may be classed under the following general heads: clay, loam, sand, chalk, gravel, and peat. Mossy soils are very common and extensive in the northern parts of England. The wolds of Kent, Surrey, and Sussex exhibit a larger extent of one species of soil than any part of the kingdom. The best husbandry is in the east parts of England, particularly in Norfolk and Northumberland. The deposits of coals and metals are in the northern and western districts; especially in Durham; Westmoreland, Lancashire, Shropshire, Worcestershire, Devon, Cornwall, and Wales. Norfolk is famous for barley; Leicestershire is the first in the grazing counties; Herefordshire is remarkable for orchards; and Worcestershire and Kent for hops. The quantity of corn raised per acre varies of course according to the soil. In some places the produce of wheat amounts to 6 quarters, in others to 1½ quarter per acre; but 2½ quarters for wheat, 4 for barley, and 4½ for oats, may be stated as a fair average return. The average weight of a bushel of good English wheat is about 58 lbs.; under very favourable circumstances it reaches 64 lbs. The price of wheat in the beginning of last century was 50s. per quarter; since 1792, it has varied from £2 to £6. The annual average quantity of hops raised throughout England, is 20,000,000 lbs. Mr Cumber, some years ago, drew up the following table of the extent of land in cultivation in England and Wales.

	ACRES.
Wheat,	3,800,000
Barley and Rye,	1,000,000
Oats and Beans,	3,000,000
Clover, Rye-grass, &c.	1,200,000

	ACRES.
Roots and cabbages, cultivated by the plough,	1,200,000
Fallow,	2,300,000
Hop-grounds,	34,000
Nursery-grounds,	9,900
Fruit and kitchen-gardens,	41,000
Pleasure-grounds,	16,000
Lands depastured by cattle,	17,000,000
Hedgerows, copses, and woods,	1,000,000
Ways, water, &c.	1,300,000
Commons, and waste-lands,	5,094,000
	<hr/>
	37,094,000

The annual consumption of wheat in the United Kingdom has been estimated at 12,000,000 quarters, and that of other grain at 36,000,000, making together 48,000,000 quarters, of which not one-twentieth part has during any year been imported.

Minerals.—The following are the principal minerals obtained in England, with the districts in which they are found :

Gold.	In different places, particularly it is said near Silsoe, in Bedfordshire; but never in a quantity so great as to indemnify the labour of procuring it.
Horn-ore.	In Cornwall. It is wrought with secrecy, and the quantity procured is uncertain.
Tin.	Cornwall. The quantity of tin furnished by this country is great; the quality excellent. Cornwall has been noted for this metal from the earliest antiquity.
Copper.	Redruth, Alston's Land End, in Cornwall, in Yorkshire, in Staffordshire, and in the Parys mountain in Anglesey.
Lead.	Mendip hills, Somersetshire, Derbyshire, and Alston in Cumberland, where the mines employ 1,100 men.
Iron.	Found in many districts. The chief mines are those of Colebrookdale, Shropshire; Dean-forest, Gloucestershire; and Ulverston, Lancashire.
Wolfram.	Huel rock.
Zinc.	Cornwall and Derbyshire.
Plumbago.	Borrodale, near Keswick, in Cumberland.
Nickel.	} Cornwall.
Arsenic.
Menachanite.	} Mendip hills, Somersetshire.
Calamine.
Manganese.
Coal.	Newcastle, Shields, Sunderland, and in many districts in the central, northern, and western parts of England.
Rock-salt.	Cheshire. The mines of Northwich are so extensive as to produce, yearly, 65,000 tons.
Marble.	} Portland and Purbeck.
Freestone.
Alabaster.	Derbyshire.
Fullers-earth.	Berkshire.

The principal minerals of Wales are silver, copper, iron, lead, and coal. These are found chiefly in the counties of Flint, Caernarvon, Montgomery, and Cardigan. M. Bakewell, in his 'Introduction to Geology,' states that in South Wales, adjoining the Bristol channel, there are from 1,000 to 1,200 square miles of coal, sufficient to supply England for 2,000 years, after all other coal-mines are exhausted.

Animal Kingdom.—The English horse has been greatly improved by crossing with the finest foreign breeds, till in spirit, strength, and speed, he is fully equal or superior to that of any other country. The different breeds of sheep, too, have been greatly improved by the care and skill of the breeder. Dogs of every variety have been naturalized; but the bull dog is said to be peculiarly English, and it possesses strength and courage in an extraordinary degree. Of savage animals; since the extirpation of the wolf—which was effected in the reign of James VI.—the largest and strongest are the fox and wild cat. The badger is frequently met with, as also the stoat, the martin, the otter, the squirrel, and the dormouse. Rats are numerous, particularly the brown rat of India, falsely called the Norway rat, which has nearly extirpated the native iron-gray rat. Mice of various kinds are common. The hedgehog is not rare, and the mole is still a nuisance in every rich and well-cultivated field. The stag is yet found in its native state upon the borders of Cornwall, and two species of fallow-deer are still preserved. The sea-calf and great seal are frequently seen upon the coasts, particularly the coast of Wales. The larger birds of prey have now almost everywhere disappeared; but the golden eagle is indeed still found on Snowdon in Wales, and the black eagle is sometimes seen in Derbyshire; but the osprey, or sea-eagle, seems to be extinct. The peregrine, or foreign falcon, is confined to Wales; but the various kinds of hawks are numerous all over the country. The largest wild bird is the bustard; it is found only in the eastern counties, and weighs from 25 to 27 lbs.; the smallest is the golden-crested wren. The nightingale, celebrated for its plaintive tones and extraordinary compass of voice, is confined chiefly to the eastern and middle counties, and is rarely observed to the north of Doncaster. The domestic birds of England seem to be wholly of foreign origin; the poultry from Asia, the Guinea fowl from Africa, the peacock from India, the pheasant from Colchis in Asiatic Turkey, and the turkey from America. The English reptiles are the frog, the toad, a species of tortoise, lizards of several kinds, and serpents some of which have been found four feet in length. The viper alone is venomous. On the coasts are caught turbot, dace, soal, cod, plaice, smelt, mullet, pilchards, and herrings; the basking-shark sometimes occurs on the Welsh coasts. Among river-fish are the salmon, trout, char, greyling, tench, perch, and many other kinds. Various parts of the coast afford shell-fish of different species. The most esteemed oysters are the green oyster from Colchester in Essex, and the white oyster from Milton in Kent.

Vegetable Kingdom.—Of the vast variety of trees which wave on her hills, and adorn her innumerable plantations, a very few only are indigenous to England; and of these the oak, which carries the terrors of her name, the fruits of her industry, and the light and spirit of her admirable institutions over the globe, is the chief. Shrubs, ferns, mosses, lichens, and fungi, are far too numerous to be here described. The flora of England, though it cannot boast of the most splendid and exquisite of vegetable productions, yet contains as great a variety of genera and species as any other country of equal extent. The first for importance and variety is the family of grasses. The leguminous or papilionaceous plants are likewise numerous. The native fruits belong, for the most part, to the natural class of rosaceous plants.

CHAP. IV.—ANCIENT POPULATION, AND ROMAN GEOGRAPHY OF BRITAIN.

Britain peopled from Gaul.—All the traces of the past which we can still read in the present, as well as all traditional and recorded history, point to Asia as the cradle of our species, the fountainhead from which all the nations of the earth have descended. At what time the great primitive wave of population, generally designated the Gaelic, first set in upon the western regions of the world, we have no means of conjecturing even with an approach to certainty. There are reasons, however, for concluding that it had overflowed a great part of the continent of Europe, as well as the half-separated peninsulas of Greece and Italy—in both of which it had by that time been partially displaced by a succeeding wave—fully a thousand years before the Christian era. It is the opinion of some of those who have most elaborately examined this question,—of M. Gosselin, for instance, the learned French geographer,—and of our own acute and ingenious Whitaker, the historian of Manchester,—that it could not have been long after this date before the first emigrants began to pass over from Gaul to Britain. There can be no doubt, at all events, that it was from Gaul that Britain actually derived its first inhabitants. The position of the two countries,—the testimony of ancient authorities,—the resemblance of manners and customs,—the identity of religious doctrines and practices,—and, above all, the clear and strong testimony of language,—all prove the one people to have sprung from the other. The whole of the southern coast of England, from Kent to the Land's End, appears to have been peopled before either the more northern or the midland districts of the island had been penetrated. As the descendants of the original settlers, however, increased in number, and new bands of emigrants successively arrived from the mother-country, the back woods were gradually cleared; till, at last, the whole island had become inhabited. There is abundant evidence that this result had taken place before the commencement of the Christian era. During this interval, also, a great part of Ireland had been taken possession of, and peopled, no doubt, from the neighbouring coasts of the west of England.

Origin of the names Albion and Britain.—The original name of our island is that by which it still continues to be designated in the language of our Scottish Gael, the unmixed descendants of its primitive inhabitants. They call it Albinn, as we find Aristotle, the most ancient of the classic authors by whom it is mentioned, calling it Albion. Inn is the Gaelic term for 'a large island'; alb, though not now used by the Scottish Gael, anciently signified 'white.' It is preserved both in the Latin albus, and in the geographical terms Alps and Apennines, (that is, alp-pennin, or 'white mountain,') these ridges being so called from the perpetual snow seen on their summits. Albinn, therefore, means the white island; and the name was probably given to Great Britain from the chalk cliffs which it presented to the view of the people on the opposite coast. As for the word Britain, numerous interpretations have been given of it; but perhaps the most probable is that advanced by Whitaker, in his history of Manchester, and afterwards more fully developed in his 'Genuine Origin of the Britains asserted,' in answer to Macpherson. It would seem that Britin, the barbaric term from which the Greeks and Romans formed their smoother Britannia, was really not the name of the island but of its inhabitants. The termination in, in fact, which has so much perplexed Camden and other able antiquaries, is nothing more than the sign of the plural according to the usual mode of declension in the Gaelic tongue. And brit, Mr Whitaker maintains, signifies 'the divided' or 'separated.' It is in fact the same word with brik or brechan,—a garment distinguished by divided or variegated colours, and still the common appellation of the Highland plaid. The Britin, therefore, were the separated people—or the emigrants, as we should say,—those who had removed from the rest of their countrymen in Gaul, and settled in Albinn.

Scots, Caledonians, and Picts.—It seems to have been to one of the bands of foreign invaders, who thus overrun Ireland, that the epithet Scots was first applied. The word—of which, however, different interpretations have been given—is most probably the same with the modern Gaelic term scuit or scaoit, signifying 'a wandering horde,'—the origin, also, in all likelihood, of the name Scythians, so famous in all the records of these remote ages. From Ireland a branch of the Scots, several years afterwards, passed over into Scotland, and eventually gave their name to the country. Scotland, however, had long before this been peopled both along its coasts, and in part, at least, of the interior, by the gradual movement northwards of the tide of population from South Britain. The general name given to the inhabitants of the northern part of the island before, and for some centuries after the era of Christianity, was not Scots, but Caledonians or Caoilldaoin, that is, 'men of the woods.' They are spoken of by the Roman writers as divided into the Deucaledones and the Veturiones. The former of these designations is the Gaelic Duchaoiddaoin, literally 'the true' or 'real inhabitants of the woods;' and it was applied to the mountaineers in the north-western part of the country, or what we now call the Highlands, as distinguished from the inhabitants of the plains. These latter were denominated Veturiones—a word smoothed down from the Gaelic Uachtarich, that is, the people of the part of the country called Uachtar, the name given to the Lowlands, and still preserved in the appellation of the mountainous ridge Drum-uachtar, from which the descent of the country towards the east commences.

Roman Geography.—Camden fancied that he had discovered traces of a geographical knowledge of Britain and Ireland in Orpheus's Argonautics! And Hearne supposes that the Cantiani of Herodotus (vi. 49.) were the early Britons. Polybius notices the tin-mines of Britain; Diodorus Siculus, Strabo, Mela, and Dio Cassius, describe the island in general terms. Ptolemy of Alexandria, who flourished in the former part of the second century, wrote a description of Britain which is still extant. A rapid outline of this work will be useful to the reader of our Gazetteer. According to Ptolemy, the southern part of the island was divided among the following tribes:—

1st, The Damnonii.—These were the ancient possessors of Devonshire and Cornwall, and, as some think, of a part of Somersetshire. Their towns were: 1. Voliba, which is placed by Camden at Grampound; 2. Uxela, supposed by Camden to have been Listurthiell, by Horsley to have been Exeter; 3. Tamare, the modern Tamerton; and 4. Isca, or Exeter.

2d, The Durotriges.—The Durotriges were the ancient inhabitants of Dorsetshire. Their town was Dunium, which is supposed by Camden to have stood where Dorchester now stands; but Horsley thinks it was situated at Eggerton-hill.

3d, The Belgæ.—The Belgæ inhabited Wiltshire, Somersetshire, and part of Hampshire. Their towns were: 1. Iscales, which is generally placed at Ilchester; 2. Aqua Calida, evidently Bath in Somersetshire; and 3. Venta, supposed to have been situated where Winchester now stands.

4th, The Regni.—These were the ancient inhabitants of Surrey and Sussex, and perhaps of part of Hampshire. Their town was Neomagus, or Neriomagus, which is generally placed at Woodcote in Surrey, though some antiquaries contend for Ravensburn in Kent.

5th, The Cantii.—The Cantii were the ancient inhabitants of Kent, and perhaps of a part of Middlesex. Their towns were: 1. Londinum, since become the capital of the British empire; 2. Daruenum, or Darvernum, evidently Canterbury; and 3. Dutupia, generally believed to have been situated at Richburrow near Sandwich.

6th, The Attrebatii.—According to Camden, the Attrebatii inhabited Berkshire, but Baxter thinks that Berkshire belonged to the Bibroci, a British people mentioned by Cæsar, and that Oxfordshire was the country of the Attrebatii. Their town was Nalcua, or Calcua, which Horsley labours to prove was situated at Silchester in Hampshire, while Camden and Baxter place it at Wallingford in Berkshire.

7th, The Dobuni.—These were the ancient inhabitants of Gloucestershire, and perhaps of Oxfordshire. Their town was Corinium, which is agreed to have been situated at Cirencester in Gloucestershire.

8th, The Silures.—The Silures were, according to Camden, the ancient inhabitants of Herefordshire, Radnorshire, Brecknockshire, Monmouthshire, and Glamorganshire. Their town, according to Ptolemy, was Ballæum, which is placed, by Camden, at Bualt in Brecknockshire; by Baxter, at Caerphyli, in Glamorganshire; and by Horsley, at or near Usk, in Monmouthshire. It is surprising that Ptolemy makes no mention of two other towns which unquestionably belonged to the Silures, viz. Venta Silurum and Isca Silurum. The former of these was situated at Caerwent, about 4 miles from Chepstow; and the latter at Caerlein, upon the Usk.

9th, The Demetæ.—The Demetæ were, according to Camden, the ancient inhabitants of Caermarthenshire, Cardiganshire, and Pembrokeshire, to which, Baxter thinks, should be added, Brecknockshire and Radnorshire. Their towns were, 1. Luentinum, which is supposed to have been situated at or near Lhan-Dewi-Brevi, in Cardiganshire; 2. Maridunum, which may have been situated where Caermarthen now stands.

10th, The Trinonantes.—The Trinonantes, or Trinovantes, were, according to Camden, the ancient inhabitants of Middlesex and Essex; but it does not appear that London belonged to them. Their town was Camudolanum, which is placed by some of our antiquaries at Colchester, but by others, more justly perhaps, at Malden, the capital of Cunobelin, a British prince.

11th, The Iceni.—The Iceni, or Simeni, Camden supposes, were the ancient inhabitants of Norfolk, Suffolk, Cambridgeshire, and Huntingdonshire; but Horsley thinks their territories were not so extensive. Their capital was Venta, which was situated at Castor, upon the Yare, about 3 miles from Norwich.*

12th, The Catyeuclani.—These were, according to Camden, the ancient inhabitants of Buckinghamshire, Bedfordshire, and Hertfordshire, to which, Horsley conjectures, all Huntingdonshire, and part of Northamptonshire, should be added. Their towns were, 1. Salenæ, which is generally supposed to have been Saludy, near Biggleswade, in Bedfordshire; 2. Urolanium, or Verulanium, universally agreed to have been situated near the present St Albans.

13th, The Coritani.—These were, according to Camden, the early inhabitants of Northamptonshire, Leicestershire, Rutlandshire, Lincolnshire, Nottinghamshire, and Derbyshire. The towns were, 1. Lindum, near Lincoln; and, 2. Ræge, or Ratæ, situated where Leicester now stands.

14th, The Cornavii.—The Cornavii, according to Camden, inhabited Warwickshire, Worcestershire, Staffordshire, Shropshire, and Cheshire, to which, Horsley thinks, might be added part of Derbyshire. Their towns were, 1. Deuna, or Deonna, which is universally agreed to be West Chester; 2. Viroconium, or Uriconium, which was situated at Wroxeter, in Shropshire.

15th, The Ordovices.—The Ordovices were the ancient inhabitants of North Wales. Their towns were, 1. Mediolanum, which is generally supposed to have been situated at Maywood, in Montgomeryshire; 2. Brannogenium, which, however, is placed by Camden and Baxter at Worcester.

* As Venta was the name of several British towns, such as Venta Belgarum, Venta Silurum, Venta Icenorum, our antiquaries have been at much pains to discover the derivation of the word. Baxter's conjecture seems most probable: he supposes it is derived from wend or went, which signifies head or chief. For it is observable, that all towns named Venta, were the capitals or chief towns of the tribes to whom they belonged.

16th, The Parisi.—The Parisi seem to have been a very small tribe, inhabiting Holderness and some other parts in the east riding of Yorkshire. Baxter thinks they were the Ceangi, or herdsmen of the Brigantes. Their only town was Pituarium, which Baxter reads Picuarium, and places at Pocklington.

17th, The Brigantes.—The Brigantes were, on several accounts, the most considerable nation of the ancient Britons. They possessed part of Northumberland, all Durham, Cumberland, Westmoreland, Lancashire, and Yorkshire. Their towns were, 1. Epiacum, which Camden thinks may have been at Elchester, on the Derwent, but Horsley inclines to place it at Hexham, in Northumberland; 2. Vinovium, which is universally agreed to have been at Banchester, on the Vere; 3. Coturractionium, unquestionably Cattarick, near Richmond, in Yorkshire; 4. Calatum, which is placed by Horsley at Appleby, and by Baxter at Kirklythore; 5. Isurium, now Alburrow, near Burrowbridge; 6. Rigodunum, placed by Camden and Baxter at Redchester, in Lancashire; by Horsley, at Manchester or Warrington; 7. Olicana, agreed to have been situated at Ilkley, on the Wharfe, in Yorkshire; 8. Eboracum, now York.

18th, The Otadeni.—The Otadeni seem to have possessed the sea-coast from the river Tyne, northward, to the Forth, including all Northumberland. Their towns were, 1. Caria, or Coria, supposed by Camden and Baxter to be Corbridge, in Northumberland; by Horsley, to be Jedburgh; and, 2. Brimenium, now Buchester, in Northumberland.

The Romans found all these tribes in the rudest state with regard to the arts of life; their historians speak with respect, however, of their intellectual and moral character. Their persons were tall; their clothing was untanned skins; and they painted the naked parts of their body with a blue colour, decorating the skin with figures of various objects, particularly of the heavenly bodies. They shaved all their beard except the upper lip, which, like the Gauls, they suffered to grow to a great length. Agriculture had been introduced into Britain by the Belgic Gauls; but the general food was milk and the flesh of their herds; superstition had forbid the use of fish, and several kinds of animal food, to these poor savages. Their towns were a confused assemblage of huts covered with turf or skins, little superior to the kraals of the Hottentots; and, for the sake of security, generally planted in the midst of some wood or morass, and surrounded with palisades of trees piled upon each other, like the fortifications observed at this day among the New Zealanders. They seem to have been able to fabricate warlike weapons from metals. Their arms were small targets, and swords and spears; and in battle they used a very formidable kind of chariot, which was armed with iron scythes projecting from the axle. Little is known of the limits of regal authority amongst them. Dr Henry conjectures that the popular power was considerable; but whatever either the royal or popular power may have been, the priestly influence was certainly paramount to both. From Cæsar we learn that the British Druids were the judges of the people; and that they dispensed rewards and inflicted punishments without the sanction or interference of any higher tribunal.

Roman Walls.—Agricola endeavoured to secure the southern part of the island of Britain for the Roman empire, by building a series of forts along the narrow neck of land between the friths of Forth and Clyde. But the emperor Adrian judged it prudent to endeavour to render the province more defensible by contracting its limits; and accordingly, relinquishing altogether the northern parts of it, he erected at its utmost boundary, in that direction, a rampart from the mouth of the Tyne to the Solway frith. This fortification was formed entirely of earth, and consisted chiefly of a mound and ditch. Although of considerable strength, it was found insufficient to prevent the inroads of the Caledonians, who soon broke through it in various places. In the year 140, therefore, in the reign of Antoninus Pius, the Roman governor Lollius Urbicus, resolved to reassume the possession of the part of the province which had been abandoned by Adrian, and for this purpose he again erected a very strong wall nearly on the line of the series of forts originally built by Agricola. This wall—the same of which the remains are still popularly known by the name of Graham's dyke—was built of turf, on a foundation of stone, and was four yards in breadth. On the north side was a very wide ditch, and on the south a magnificent military way. It appears to have effectually barred out the Caledonians for many years; but at last, in the year 205, in the reign of the emperor Severus, they burst through this barrier. Two years after this, Severus himself, accompanied by his two sons, Caracalla and Geta, came over to repel the barbarians; and, in order to put an end for ever to their troublesome hostility, he resolved if possible to effect the subjugation of the whole island. He did accordingly succeed in penetrating to its northern extremity; but having lost the immense number of 50,000 men in the expedition, he abandoned his design of conquest, and contented himself with raising a new wall of stone along the line of Adrian's earthen rampart, between the Tyne and Solway: thus contracting the limits of the province instead of enlarging them as he had originally intended. This wall—of which fragments still remain—is one of the most remarkable remains of Roman art which are to be found in England. It extends from the river Tyne on the east to Bowness on the Solway frith upon the west. It was built about the beginning of the 3d century, most probably in the years 209 and 210. Its length was somewhat more than 68 British miles. On its north side ran a wide and deep ditch, the precise dimensions of which are unknown; the wall itself was of freestone, founded on piles where the ground was unfavourable. The outward surface, on both sides, was built of square stones; the inward space was filled with broad thin stones, placed obliquely on their edges, and strongly cemented with mortar. The thickness of the wall was 8 feet, and the height 12 feet exclusive of the parapet.* Almost every vestige of it is now obliterated, but not so much from the destruction of time—which it could long have resisted—as from the barbarous industry of the neighbouring inhabitants, who, during many ages, derived from it the principal materials of which their houses were erected. The fortresses erected upon this line of wall were of three kinds: stationes, sometimes called castra, 'stations,' or 'garrisons,'—castella, 'castles,'—and turres, 'turrets.' The stations were places appointed for the reception of such garrisons as had in charge the protection of the frontier. Their number was 18. Their size and figure differed according to the nature of the ground and position. They joined the wall—as all the other fortifications did—upon its south side; and were strongly fortified with walls and ditches. The following table exhibits the number of the stations,—their Latin names,—the modern appellations of the same places in English,—and their distances from each other in miles, furlongs, and chains. The order is from east to west; and the distance opposite to a station is that to the nearest in the same direction:

No.	Latin Name.	English Name.	M.	F.	Ch.
1.	Legedunum,	Cousin's House,	8	5	1½
2.	Pons Ælii,	Newcastle,	2	0	9
3.	Conducum,	Benwell hill,	5	6	5
4.	Vindobala,	Rutchester,	7	0	¾
5.	Hunnum,	Halton-chesters,	5	1	7
6.	Cilurnum,	Walwick-chesters,	3	1	8
7.	Procolitia,	Carrawburgh,	4	5	¾
8.	Borovicus,	Housesteads,	3	1	8
9.	Vindolana,	Little-chesters,	3	6	4
10.	Æsica,	Great-chesters,	2	1	6½
11.	Magna,	Carrvoran,	2	6	0
12.	Amboglanna,	Bardoswald,	6	2	8
13.	Petrisa,	Cambeck,	2	6	6
14.	Aballaba,	Watchcross,	5	1	9
15.	Congavata,	Stanwix,	3	3	6
16.	Axelodunum,	Brugh,	4	0	6
17.	Gabrosentum,	Brumburgh,	3	4	1
18.	Tunnocelum,	Bowness,

Length of the wall, 68 3 3

The castles were generally, though not always, at the distance of 7 furlongs from each other. They were of a square form, being 66 feet on every side; and were fortified by a high wall, without any ditch. Their number was 81; and they were occupied by guards from the neighbouring stations or garrisons. The turrets were forts of 12 feet square, built so near each other that the voices of the sentinels could easily be heard from one to the other. Their exact number is not known, but it is supposed to have been 324. The number of troops appointed for the protection of this wall generally amounted to 10,000. For the convenience of passing from one port to another, two roads were constructed upon the southern side of the wall. These were formed of square stones. That nearest the wall was narrow; and, following its direction in all its parts, served the troops and sentinels to pass in small parties between the castles and turrets. The other was much broader. It left the direction of the wall, and running, by the nearest way, from one station to another, served for the passage of great bodies of troops. The Romans were always careful to form such roads in the provinces of their empire as should secure a speedy intercourse between the principal settlements and stations; and of these roads, England had many.

* These dimensions are recorded by Bede, who lived in its neighbourhood at a time when many parts of it yet remained entire.

Writers on the Roman Geography of Britain.—Dr Gale was the first who published Ptolemy's Geography of Britain by itself, with notes, at the end of his 'Historiæ Anglicanæ Scriptores,' 1691.—The names of Roman places in Britain were ably illustrated by William Baxter, in his 'Glossarium Antiquitatum Britannicarum.'—Salmon's 'Roman Stations in Britain,' first published in 1726, is a good book of its kind.—But the most complete work on this subject is John Horsley's 'Britannia Romana,' published in folio, in 1732.—Dr Stukeley's writings are valuable to the topographical antiquarian.—Camden's 'Britannia' was first published in 1586. It is a most valuable book, the fruits of prodigious industry and accurate research. The best edition is Gough's.

CHAP. V.—CIVIL DIVISIONS.

The Anglo-Saxon civil divisions.—The Anglo-Saxon civil divisions of England are still, in a great measure, retained at the present day. The division of the country into tythings, hundreds, and counties or shires, has been generally attributed to Alfred; but the tything and shire certainly existed long before his time, for they are mentioned in the laws of Ina, king of the West Saxons, towards the close of the 7th century. The names of several of our English counties occur in history before the extinction of the heptarchy, some of the smaller kingdoms of which, as Kent, Sussex, and Essex, became counties in the future arrangement of the kingdom. Hampshire, Somersetshire, Wiltshire, and Berkshire, are mentioned before A. D. 871, as forming shires, or portions, of the kingdom of Wessex. The existing division was systematized and completed, however, by Alfred, who, according to Ingulphus, first caused a general survey to be taken of the whole kingdom, and the lands to be classed in their respective shires and hundreds.

The Tything.—The tything, freeburgh, or decennary, originally consisted of a community of ten freemen householders, who became answerable for each other's good behaviour to the king. Each tything formed a little state or commonwealth within itself, and chose its own dean, or head, who was sometimes called the alderman of such a tything, or freeburgh, on account of his age and experience, but most commonly the borsholder, from the Saxon words borh, a surety, and alder, a head or chief.* The members of each tything, with their borsholder at their head, constituted a court of justice in which all the little controversies arising within the tything were determined. If any member of a tything committed a crime against the public laws, and made his escape, and the tything could not establish that none of them had been accomplices in his crimes, or connived at his escape, they were obliged to pay the mulct or fine prescribed by the law for the crime committed. A tything was sometimes called a neighbourhood; its members fought in one band on the day of battle, and often eat at one table in the time of peace. No man could be a member of a tything in which he did not reside; and the members were all of equal rank, for thanes were not members of any tything, the family of a thane being considered as a tything within itself. A more admirably adapted political expedient for promoting the peace and good order of society, at least in those times, could not have been contrived. Ingulphus assures us, that by its means "so profound a tranquillity, and such perfect security, were established over all the land, that if a traveller left or lost ever so great a sum of money, in the open fields or highways, he was sure of finding it next morning, or even a month after, entire and untouched." The advantages of this excellent institution were so great and obvious, that the nobility and clergy—who were by law exempted from the necessity of being members of any tything—formed voluntary associations, or sodalities, among themselves upon the same plan.† It is maintained by Mr Whitaker that the Saxon tything was the original of the manor of the present day, the judicator of which is still denominated the tything court. Tythings, townships, and vills, are deemed synonymous terms. Sir Henry Spelman is of opinion that an entire vill consisted of ten freemen; demi-vills of five; and hamlets of less than five.

* Spelm. Gloss. p. 86.

† Hickea. Dissert. Epist. pp. 18—22.

The Hundred.—The hundred was formed by the union of ten tythings, and was presided over by the hundredary, who was commonly, if not always, a thane or nobleman residing within the hundred. The hundredary was the captain of his hundred in time of war, as well as their civil magistrate in time of peace; and for the performance of his duties he received one-third of all the fines imposed in his court. This court commonly met once every month; and all the members, in imitation of their German ancestors, came to it in their arms,—a custom from which it obtained the name of the wapentac or wapentake. At the beginning of each meeting, all the members touched the hundredary's spear with theirs, in token of their acknowledging his authority, and being ready to fight under his command.* In these courts, the archdeacon, and sometimes the bishop, presided with the hundredary, and both civil and ecclesiastical affairs were taken cognizance of in them. The hundred-courts did not possess the power of inflicting capital punishments; an appeal lay from them to the tything, the next superior court. The petty-sessions for the hundred have grown out of this jurisdiction. The ancient cantrefs, or commots, the name of the Welsh districts, were first altered into that of hundreds by virtue of a commission under the Great seal in the reign of Henry VIII. The government of towns and cities, in the Anglo-Saxon period, very much resembled that of the rural hundreds. The chief magistrate in a landward town was called the alderman, or town-grieve; and in a sea-port, the port-grieve; and had the same authority in his town or city that the hundredary had in his hundred. The chief court in towns and cities was called the burgemote, or folckmote. It assembled monthly, and all the burgesses were entitled to attend it. It may be observed, that as the hundred was formed, not according to territorial extent, but according to the extent of free population in a district,—as it regarded not the land but the people,—the irregularity in their size and boundaries was necessarily considerable from the very first. “The felling part of a primeval forest, or sacred wood,”—to use the language of Sir Richard Colt Hoare—“the draining of a marsh, or the cultivating of a waste by any one individual, would extend the liberties of a hundred in that direction. To have drawn a map at this period assigning boundaries to the hundreds, would have been like writing on sand, or like attempting to give a permanent representation of a surface of water when agitated by the wind.” Hence, while many hundreds do not exceed, upon an average, one square mile in area, or contain a population of above 1000 souls, the hundreds of some other districts greatly exceed this average both in extent and population; those of Lancashire, for example, average 300 square miles; and one of them, Salford, includes a population of 430,000.

The Trything.—The next magistrate above the hundredary was called the trythingman, or lathgrieve, presiding over three, four, or more hundreds, formed into what was called a trything, in some places, a lath, and in other places, a rape. Hence the laths of Kent, the rapes of Sussex, the parts of Lincoln, and the trythings, or ridings, of Yorkshire.

The Shire, or County.—The shire or eorl was composed of a number of hundreds under the jurisdiction of an eorl, or eorldorman, who was commonly a thane of large estate and noble family, and often assumed the title of prince in subscribing charters and other deeds.† In the most ancient Anglo-Saxon times, the earls were appointed by the king; but latterly they seem to have been elected by the freeholders of the shire in the shiregemote, or county court.‡ Some of these great men held also offices which required their attendance at court; hence his office in every shire was usually filled by a deputy, with the title of the shiregrieve, or sheriff. The shiregemote was a court of great importance in Anglo-Saxon times; and held two annual general meetings, one in spring, and another in autumn, for the transaction of business, civil, military, and ecclesiastical. But as it was soon found impossible to despatch all the business at these two meetings, county-courts were appointed to be held by the shiregrieve every four weeks, called folckmotes. The word county (in Latin comitatus,) is derived from the comes, or count, of the Franks, an officer of similar rank and jurisdiction with the Saxon earl. The lord-lieutenant of a county may be regarded as the successor of the Saxon eorldorman.

According to the division of England by Alfred, it contained only 32 counties; Durham and Lancaster being included in Yorkshire; Cornwall in Devonshire; Rutland in Northamptonshire; Monmouthshire in Wales; and Northumberland, Westmoreland, and Cumberland, being subject to the Scots.

* Du Cange Glos. voc. Centenarii.—Spelman. in voc. Hundredarius, Wapentachium.

† Selden's Tit. Hon. p. 502.

‡ Ann. Sax. p. 49.—Wilkin's LL. Sax. p. 205.

Counties-Palatine.—Three of the counties in England are called counties-palatine, viz., Cheshire, Durham, and Lancashire. They are so called a palatio, because the owners of them anciently had the same powers and privileges within them respectively as the king had in his own palace. These extraordinary privileges were probably granted to them because they bordered on enemies' countries, and were continually exposed to sudden invasion from the Welsh and Scots. Chester and Durham were counties-palatine by prescription, or immemorial custom, at least as old as the Norman conquest; but the earldom of Chester was united to the crown by Henry III., and has ever since that period given a title to the heir-royal. Lancaster was created a county-palatine by Edward III., in favour of Henry Plantagenet, first earl and duke of Lancaster. Pembroke also, and Hexham, were anciently counties-palatine. The latter belonged to the archbishop of York, but was stripped of its privilege in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, who annexed it to the county of Northumberland. The former was dissolved in 27^o Henry VIII.—The isle of Ely has been sometimes reckoned among the counties-palatine, but it is properly only a royal franchise, the bishop having, by grant of Henry I., jura regalia, within the isle, whereby he exercises civil and criminal jurisdiction in all cases. There is a court of chancery in the counties-palatine of Lancaster and Durham, over which there are chancellors.

Counties-Corporate.—County-corporate is a title given to several cities, and ancient boroughs, on which the English monarchs have thought fit to bestow extraordinary privileges, annexing to them a particular territory or jurisdiction, and making them counties of themselves, governed by their own sheriffs and magistrates. There are ten such cities in England, viz., London, Bristol, Canterbury, Coventry, Exeter, Gloucester, Lichfield, Lincoln, Norwich, Worcester, York; and five towns, viz. Hull, Newcastle-on-Tyne, Nottingham, Pool, and Southampton; the two Welsh towns of Caermarthen and Haverfordwest are also counties of themselves.

Parishes.—Parishes were originally considered as ecclesiastical divisions, but are now regarded as civil divisions also. The name comes from the Latin parochia. In very early times there was one large edifice in each city, for the people to worship in; and this they called the parochia, or parish, from its usual proximity to the bishop's house, the word being a compound of the Greek παρε, near, and οικος, a house. England was first divided into parishes by Honorius, archbishop of Canterbury, in the year 636; and the boundaries of them, as marked in Domesday book,* agree very nearly with the present division. They were recognised by the laws of King Edgar, about the year 970, who directs that the tithes of lands should be paid to the church of the parish in which they were situated. It seems pretty clear and certain, says Blackstone,† that the boundaries of parishes were first ascertained by those of a manor or manors; because it very seldom happens that a manor extends itself over more than one parish, though there are often many manors in one parish. The lords, he adds, as Christianity spread, began to build churches on their own demesnes or wastes, in order to accommodate their tenants in one or two adjoining lordships; and, that they might have divine service performed therein, obliged all their

* This invaluable record was intended to contain a survey of all the lands in the kingdom,—of the names of their then possessors, as well as of those who had them in the Confessor's reign,—and likewise of the number and apportionment of the freemen, villains, cottagers, and slaves. But as the chief object of interest was the extent of the king's own demesnes and those of his tenants-in-chief, only an account of these is complete. Domesday book affords, however, a very interesting description of the state of property to which the Conquest had led. It appears from it that the tenants-in-chief of the crown did not amount to 700 in England, except the four northern counties, which were not included in the survey. Of these 700, almost all were Normans. Of the sub-tenants, however, of whom, it is generally supposed, that Domesday book contains but a partial enumeration, a great proportion were undoubtedly Saxons. The king himself was the greatest landed proprietor, possessing no fewer than 1442 manors in different parts of the kingdom. Many of the Norman chieftains had obtained enormous grants from the crown, as well of the lands which had been confiscated after the battle of Hastings, as of those seized during the numerous risings in which the English engaged. These lands they again let out, often with equal liberality, to their immediate followers, or allowed to remain in the hands of the old proprietors, under the burden of feudal services. Thus, though the number of tenants-in-chief was comparatively small, there were no fewer than 60,215 knights' fees in England, 28,015 of which are said to have been in the hands of the clergy. But many of these knight-fees were of little value. The unsettled state of the country had destroyed its fertility; and we have a striking picture of the ravages which had been committed in the Conqueror's reign, in the fact, that the houses in the towns were reduced, on an average, to at least one-half of the number existing in the days of the Confessor. "Know," said a tenant-in-chief to Henry II., "that I hold of you a very poor fee of one knight, nor have I enfeoffed any other therein, because it is hardly sufficient for me alone, and my father held it in the same manner."

† Com. vol. i. p. 112.

tenants to appropriate their tithes to the maintenance of one officiating minister, instead of leaving them at liberty to distribute them among the clergy of the diocese in general; and this tract of land, the tithes of which were so appropriated, formed a distinct parish; and this accounts for the frequent intermixture of parishes one with another, for if a lord had a parcel of land detached from the main of his estate, but not sufficient to form a parish of itself, it was natural for him to endow his newly-erected church with the tithes of such lands. Extra-parochial waste and marsh lands, when improved and drained, are, by 17^o Geo. II. cap. 37, to be assessed to all parochial rates in the parish next adjoining.

Camden reckoned 9,234 parishes in England; and Chamberlayne, 9,913. "The question," says Mr Rickman, "What is a parish? has often occurred, and has been found not easily determinable. It has been asserted, that a parochial chapel is that which had the privileges of administering the sacraments (especially that of baptism) and the office of burial. 'For the liberties of baptism and sepulture are the true distinct parochial rights: and if any new oratory had acquired and enjoyed this immunity, then it differed not from a parish church. And till the year 1300, in all trials of the rights of particular churches, if it could be proved that any chapel had a custom for free baptism and burial, such place was adjudged to be a parochial church.' But however true this may have been until the date of the taxatio ecclesiastica,—in the present sense of the word parish, it is evidently fallacious, inasmuch as almost every chapel of ease would thereby constitute a separate parish: and in the various degrees of the dependence of chapels on their mother churches (as some rule must be adhered to) it has been deemed safe to assume, that where the curate is appointed and removeable by the incumbent of the mother church, and more certainly where church-rates still continue to be paid towards the repair of such church, the chapelry is not parochial. On the other hand, a perpetual curacy has not been struck out of the list of parishes merely because the curate is appointed by the incumbent of the mother church, his permanent tenure (especially if the curacy has been augmented under the laws which direct the distribution of Queen Anne's bounty,) seeming to alter the case materially. The churches built under the act of 1818 [58^o Geo. III. c. 45.] for 'building and promoting the building of additional churches in populous parishes,' have created another class of doubtful parishes, so that the total number of parishes (ecclesiastically speaking) is materially increased during the last ten or twelve years; and for any general purpose the number of parishes and parochial chapelries in England and Wales may safely be taken at 10,700."

Townships.—Some extensive parishes in the northern counties were divided, in the 13^o Charles II., into townships, for the more effectual administration of the poor's laws,—each township maintaining its own poor.

Extra-parochial places.—There are some districts which are styled extra-parochial, as not within the limits of any parish. These enjoy a virtual exemption from parochial burdens, and their tithes are payable to the king instead of the bishop of the diocese. "They are found," says Mr Rickman, "usually to have been royal palaces, or the site of religious houses, or of ancient castles, the owners of which were unwilling to permit any interference with their authority within their own property; and in rude times, the existence of such exemptions, obtained from the crown by pecuniary purchase or favour, is not surprising. At present the case is widely different; and there seems to be no good reason for permitting extra-parochial places still to avoid sharing the burdens borne by the rest of the community. For an extra-parochial place enjoys a virtual exemption from maintaining the poor, because there is no overseer on whom a magistrate's order may be served; from the militia laws, because there is no constable to make returns; from repairing the highways, because there is no surveyor; besides all which, the inhabitants have a chance of escaping from direct taxation of every kind. For in the language of the ancient law of England, such places were not 'geldable nor shireground,' non sub districtione curiæ vicecomitis; and as the sheriff was the receiver general in his county till about the time of the Revolution, extra-parochial places were neither taxable nor within the ordinary pale of civil jurisdiction; and the inhabitants are still virtually exempt from many civil duties and offices served not without inconvenience by others for the benefit of the community at large. The number of such places is not inconsiderable, though difficult to be discovered; the present volumes exhibit above 200 of them; and the subject is the more worthy of attention, inasmuch as the acquisition of new land, whether by reclaiming forests, drainage of fens, or embankment from the sea, furnishes frequent occasion for endeavouring even now to establish extra-parochial immunities."

Manors and Baronies.—A manor, or manerium—so called a manendo, because the usual residence of the owner—seems to have been originally a district of land held by a lord, or other great personage, who kept in his own hands as much land as was necessary for the use of his family, and which was called terra dominicales, or demesne lands. The other, or tenemental lands, belonging to a feudal chief, were distributed amongst his followers or his tenants, and were held by two different tenures. Book-land, or charter-land, was held by deed under payment of certain rents, and performance of certain services, and, in effect, differed nothing from free soccage lands. It is from this species of tenure that most of the freehold tenants have arisen, who hold of particular manors, and do suit and service for the same. The other species of holding was called folk-land; it was not guaranteed by writing, but was liable to be resumed at pleasure by the lord of the manor; being, indeed, land held in villenage. The residue of the manor, being uncultivated, was termed the lord's waste, and served as a common pasturage for the cattle of the lord and his tenantry. In the opinion of Blackstone, barons were originally the same with our present lords of the manor, whose courts, for redressing misdemeanours and nuisances within the manor, and for settling disputes of property among the tenants, are still called Courts-baron. This court is inseparably attached to every manor; and if the number of suitors should so fail as not to leave sufficient to make a jury, or homage, that is, two tenants at the least, the manor itself is lost. All manors existing at this day must have existed as early as King Edward I.

Honours.—The union of several manors in one great baronial proprietor, who held his seigniorship over those which he granted to inferior persons, was usually and exclusively called an honour, until the appellation was extended by Henry VIII. to Amptill, Hampton court, and Grafton, as being composed of various manors, although not strictly according to ancient principle, as they had never formed either baronies alone, or the capital seats of baronies. As a manor consists of several tenements, services, customs, &c.; so an honour contains divers manors, knights' fees, &c. It was also called a beneficium, or royal fee, being always held of the king in capite.

A City.—A city, according to Cowel, is a town corporate which hath a bishop and cathedral-church. According to Blount, city is a word that hath obtained only since the Conquest: for in the time of the Saxons there were no cities, but all the great towns were called burgs, and even London was then called Londonburg, as the capital of Scotland is called Edinburgh; and long after the conquest the words city and burgh are used promiscuously, as in the charter of Leicester, where that place is both called civitas and burgus. It would appear, then, that although the word city usually signifies with us such a town corporate as hath a bishop and cathedral-church, yet it is not always so; and though the bishopric be dissolved—as in the case of Westminster—it may still remain a city. “Certain large and ancient towns, both in England and other countries, are called cities, and they are supposed to rank before other towns. On what the distinction is founded is not well ascertained. The word seems to be one of common parlance, or at most to be used in the letters and charters of sovereigns as a complimentary or honorary appellation, rather than as betokening the possession of any social privileges which may not, and in fact do not, belong to other ancient and incorporated places which are still known only by the name of towns or boroughs. On the whole, we can rather say that certain of our ancient towns are called cities, and their inhabitants citizens, than show why this distinction prevails, and what are the criteria by which they are distinguished from other towns. These ancient towns are those in which the cathedral of a bishop is found; to which are to be added Bath and Coventry, which, jointly with Wells and Lichfield, occur in the designation of the bishop in whose diocese they are situated; and Westminster, which in this respect stands alone.”*

A Town.—In England, any number of houses to which belongs a regular market, and which is not a city, or the see of a bishop, is called a town. Those towns which contain the county court-houses, gaol, asylum, infirmary, and other public buildings, and at which the assizes, general sessions, and other public business of the county are generally conducted, are called county-towns.

A Borough.—The term borough, burrough, or burg, is frequently used for a town or corporation which is not a city. Borough—in the original Saxon borge, or borgh—has been supposed to have originally meant a tything. Afterwards, as Verstegan informs us, the term came to signify a town that had something of a wall or enclosure about it: so that all places which among our ancestors had the denomination borough, were one way or other fenced or fortified. But, in latter times, the same appellation was bestowed on several of the villæ insigniores, or country-towns, though not walled. The ancient Saxons, according to Spelman, gave the name burg to such places as in other countries would have been called cities; but divers canons being made for removing the episcopal sees from the smaller to the larger towns, the name city became appropriate to episcopal towns, while that of borough was retained by all the rest. The term borough, or burgh, is now particularly appropriated to such towns and villages as send burgesses or representatives to parliament. [See next Chapter.] Boroughs are equally such whether they be incorporated or not: there being a great number of them not incorporated, and several corporations that are not boroughs, e. g. Kingston, Deal, Kendal.

* Penny Cyclopædia. Article, City.

A Hamlet.—The word hamlet, hamel, or hampsel—from the Saxon ham, and the German let—signifies a little village, or part of a village, or parish. By Spelman there is a difference traced between villam integram, villam dimidiam, and hamletam; Stow expounds a hamlet to be the seat of a freeholder.

CHAP. VI.—REPRESENTATIVE SYSTEM.

THE British parliament consists of the king in his royal capacity, and the three estates of the realm, viz. 1st, The lords spiritual; 2d, The lords temporal; both of whom, constituting as it were one estate, sit with the sovereign in one House; and, 3d, The knights, citizens, and burgesses, who form the Lower House, or House of commons. The whole parliament sat together originally; but about the reign of Edward III., the lords and commons separated, and have from that period down to the present time held their parliamentary meetings apart. The composition of the House of lords, in 1839, was as follows:—

Princes of the royal blood,	3
Dukes,	21
Marquesses,	19
Earls,	112
Viscounts,	18
Barons,	196
Peers of Scotland, (elected each parliament,)	16
Peers of Ireland, (elected for life,)	28
English archbishops and bishops,	26
Irish representative archbishops and bishops,	4
	<hr/> 443 members.

Rise of the principle of Representation.—The origin of the House of commons, and the precise period when counties, cities, and boroughs, were first regularly represented in parliament, are points involved in considerable doubt. The descriptions by our ancient historians of the constituent members of the great national councils are extremely vague and indefinite, and they often state that resolutions were proposed or adopted with the consent of classes of men whose presence they had not previously noticed. Unquestionably, the privilege of attendance was extended to all the tenants-in-chief of the Crown by knight-service; but there are many historical passages which show that—though in point of constitutional right not essential—there were often many others present, not as spectators merely, but assisting in the deliberations. In a council held in the 4th year of William the Conqueror, twelve persons attended from each county to declare the old laws and customs of the realm,—a task, in such times which it is very difficult to distinguish from legislation.* In the council of Clarendon, and among the laity, besides the earls and barons, the older and more noble of the land—‘nobiliores et antiquiores regni’—are also mentioned. Who these older men were, it is difficult to say; but the supposition is not improbable that they were men selected in each county—perhaps by the freeholders—from their age and knowledge best acquainted with the laws of the kingdom, and well-fitted therefore to participate in a council in which very important questions were to be agitated.

* Wilk. Leg. Aug. Sax. 216. Hovenden, 343.

Still, too much stress ought not to be laid upon many of those apparently extensive enumerations. They show, undoubtedly, that others besides the king's vassals were often present in the great council; but the language is apt to mislead by its comprehensiveness. The phrases of 'the whole kingdom,'—'all the people,'—seem, indeed, to have been often employed by the writers of the age to characterize any meeting of the great council which assumed to itself or had the power of binding the nation: just as in later times, by common usage, the House of commons was said to be composed of the 'representatives of the people,' when the great proportion of its members had in fact no claim to that title. Lord Lyttleton and others have contended, that while the tenants-in-chief of the Crown were entitled to appear each of them on his own account, the other freeholders of the kingdom,—comprehending all who held of the barons either by knight-service, or free soccage, all the possessors of allodial estates, and all the free inhabitants of cities and burghs,—appeared by representatives.² This proposition is far too broadly stated. But though the practice of representation was undoubtedly not so constant as this eminent author would have it, yet, if such a practice had been introduced for the first time by the earl of Leicester in the 49th of Henry III.—as is generally believed—it is reasonable to conclude that it would have excited more observation among the historians of the period, and occasioned greater opposition than it did. The most decisive examples of the gradual rise of a settled plan of representation are to be found after the date of John's great charter. Immediately before that event, however, and in the 15th year of John's reign, writs were issued to the sheriffs of different counties, directing them to require the presence of four knights out of their respective counties at a council to be holden at Oxford. In the 4th of Henry III., we have a writ directing two knights to be chosen for the purpose of assessing an aid granted by the great council. In the 7th of the same reign, every sheriff was ordered to inquire, by means of twelve knights, what were the rights of the crown in his county on the day on which the war began between John and his barons. In the 8th of the same reign, two knights, elected in the county-court, were sent from each county to the great council. In 1246, the burgesses of the cinque ports are expressly said to have been present. Several early instances occur of the attendance of the inferior clergy in parliament; and it appears from the Annals of Burton—sub. ann. 1255—that the whole body of the clergy sat by representatives in the 39th of Henry III. History supplies other examples, and none of them are mentioned by the writers of the time as a novelty: a strong presumption, certainly, that the practice of representation was not altogether unknown long before the end of Henry the Third's reign.

If the representation of counties before the close of the third Henry's reign be involved in doubt, that of cities and boroughs may be considered more questionable, though supported by the authority of some eminent names. It is true that in the Saxon times the towns were often places of considerable strength and importance, and that London in particular had a great share in the politics of that troubled age. From Domesday book it appears that many boroughs included among their inhabitants persons of the rank of thanes, and owed military service to the king; and that the burgesses held their lands and tenements in heritage. The Conquest indeed materially affected their prosperity, but they gradually recovered it, and they acted a conspicuous part in the obtaining of Magna Charta, and the barons' wars of Henry III. But whatever the growing importance of the burghs, it is difficult to see on what ground, before they were incorporated, they could have claimed admission to the great council. As on the continent, before the gift of charters of incorporation, the barons were generally ruled by a chief elected by the sovereign, or over-lord, to whom the appellation of burg-graf, or châtelain, was given, so in England those belonging to the Crown were under the administration of the king's reeve or bailiff. The 12th century is the first epoch of civic enfranchisement. London got its charter from Henry I. on the day of his accession, in 1100, and had the priority of all the other cities of England. But even after the rise of corporate boroughs in England, the aids of the burgesses in ancient demesne were certainly not imposed by the parliament or great council. Under Henry I., and in the beginning of the reign of Henry II., the talliages imposed upon them were accounted for by the sheriffs without any indication of the authority under which they were levied; but during the reign of Henry II., and for a considerable time afterwards, they were solicited or extorted by the justices on their circuits. There was no motive therefore to convoke the boroughs for the purpose of obtaining money, and ² Hist. vol. iii. p. 274.—Vol. iv. p. 94.

If delegates from them attended parliament at all, it could obviously have been only on extraordinary occasions. It must not be forgotten that in the writ issued in the 49th of Henry III., enjoining the attendance of representatives of burghs, only two—the cities of York and Lincoln—are particularly mentioned: a separate writ appears to have been sent to London and the cinque ports, and then there is a general direction, ‘ceteris burgis Angliæ,’ to attend by two of their burgesses. This vague mention of them has been urged by Lord Lyttleton as a strong argument that the boroughs which had been in use to send members to parliament were well known: but the inference is doubtful, for the utmost that can be asserted is an occasional appearance of the representatives of boroughs in the earlier periods of our history, not that constant attendance which would have been necessary to point out clearly the boroughs entitled to the privilege. In Leicester’s parliament of 1265, writs were issued in the king’s name to various cities and boroughs, as well as to the counties, each of which was commanded to return two representatives to parliament, and the cinque ports four. This parliament consisted of 166 members, who, it is to be inferred, were elected by some extensive franchise. This innovation—if it was one—was not lost sight of; and though in some parliaments in the beginning of the reign of Edward I., representatives of boroughs may not have been summoned, we have unquestionable evidence of their occasional presence at least, even during that period; and after the 21st year of the first Edward’s reign, they formed an undoubted part of the parliament of the kingdom.

Qualification of County electors.—Prynne holds that the original right of voting was in the inhabitants at large, without reference to the possession of any landed property whatever. Be this as it may, the statutes 8^o and 10^o Henry VI., and subsequent acts, restricted the right to persons having a freehold estate in the county for which they vote of the clear yearly value of 40 shillings; and this continued to be the necessary qualification until the passing of the Reform act. The word freehold being construed to refer to the tenure as well as the quantity of estate, copyholders were excluded from the privilege of voting. By the Reform act, the elective franchise, in counties, is now extended to leaseholders, copyholders, and tenants paying a certain rental, in addition to the old 40s. freeholders.

Electors in Cities and Boroughs.—The voters for cities, towns, and boroughs, under the old franchise, were of various descriptions in different places. There were 1st, voters of burghage-tenure; 2d, corporate freemen; 3d, freeholders; 4th, inhabitants; 5th, leaseholders and copyholders. As the rights of these different classes of voters are preserved to them under the Reform act with certain restrictions, it may be useful to define them in a general manner. A burghage is defined to be “an entire indivisible tenement, holden of a superior lord of a borough, by an immemorial certain rent, distinctly reserved, to which the right of voting is incident.” Though a burghage is generally freehold for life, or in fee, yet both leaseholders and copyholders paying a burghage rent have been admitted to vote. Time immemorial, in a legal sense, is previous to the reign of Richard I. As to corporate freemen, or free burgesses, their right of election is comparatively modern, and is defined by charters which are still in existence. The right of voting in corporate towns is sometimes in the whole corporation, comprising an indefinite number of freemen; and in some cases it is confined to a select part of the corporation, generally including only the chief magistrate, aldermen, and common council, or the mayor and capital burgesses. In some corporate towns, the elective franchise is vested in freemen of all descriptions, viz. freemen by birth or patrimony, by servitude, by marriage with a freeman’s daughter, by purchase or redemption, and even in honorary freemen. Another species of voters in cities and boroughs are freeholders, who are not restricted as to the value of their estate as in counties. The right of voting by inhabitants, in the full and most unrestricted meaning of the word, existed nowhere except in Preston; but was generally restricted by the addition of some qualification as,—paying scot and lot,—being a householder, or pot-waller,—or being legally settled. The terms scot and lot are construed to mean parish-taxes or parish-payments. Potwallers are such persons as furnish their own diet, whether householders or lodgers. Leaseholders for terms of not less than three years, and common copyholders having occupied for 40 days before the election, were admitted to vote in the borough of Cricklade alone. In cities and town which are counties of themselves, [see p. xix. ante.] the voters are similar to those in other cities and towns, except that in some of the former 40s. freeholders have had the privilege of voting. The Reform bill introduced a new and extensive body of electors into cities and boroughs, viz. occupiers of houses of the annual value of £10 and upwards. These will, it is probable, ere long entirely displace the anomalous genera and species of voters above enumerated.

Disfranchised boroughs.—The Reform bill wholly disfranchised the following boroughs:—

Aldborough,	Corfe Castle,	Lostwithiel,	Seaford,
Aldeburgh,	Downton,	Ludgershall,	Steyning,
Amersham,	Dunwich,	Milborne Porte,	Stockbridge,
Appleby,	East Grimstead,	Minehead,	St. Germain's,
Beeralston,	East Looe,	Newport,	St. Maw's,
Bishops' Castle,	Fowey,	Newtown,	St. Michael's, or Midahall,
Blechingley,	Gatton,	Newton,	Tregony,
Boroughbridge,	Great Bedwin,	New Romney,	Wendover,
Bossiney,	Haslemere,	Okehampton,	Weobly,
Bramber,	Hedon,	Old Sarum,	West Looe,
Brackley,	Heytesbury,	Orford,	Whitchurch,
Callington,	Higham Ferrers,	Plympton,	Winchelsea,
Camelford,	Hindon,	Queenborough,	Wooton Bassett,
Castle Rising,	Ilchester,	Saltash,	Yarmouth, Isle of Wight.

Boroughs reduced.—The following boroughs which formerly returned two members were deprived of one member:—

Arundel,	Great Grimaby,	Midhurst,	Thirsk,
Ashbarton,	Helston,	Morpeth,	Wallingford,
Calne,	Horsham,	Northallerton,	Wareham,
Christchurch,	Hythe,	Petersfield,	Westbury,
Clithero,	Launceston,	Reigate,	Wilton,
Dartmouth,	Liskeard,	Rye,	Woodstock.
Droitwich,	Lyme Regis,	Shaftesbury,
Eye,	Malmesbury,	St. Ives,

List of Places now returning Members.—The following is a list of the counties, towns, and districts, in England and Wales, which now return members to parliament. The figures placed opposite each denote the number of members returned by each. The new boroughs and districts are in italics:—

1 Abingdon,	1 Calne,	2 Dorchester,	2 Huntingdon,
2 Alban's, St.,	3 Cambridgehire,	2 Dover,	1 Hythe,
2 Andover,	2 Cambridge University,	1 Droitwich,	2 Ipswich,
1 Anglesea-shire,	2 Cambridge Town,	1 Dudley ,	1 Ives, St., Cornwall,
1 Arundel,	2 Canterbury,	4 Durham, (county,)	1 Kendal ,
1 Ashbarton,	1 Cardiff, &c.,	2 Durham,	4 Kent,
1 Ashton-under-Lyne ,	1 Cardiganshire,	4 Essex,	1 Kidderminster ,
2 Aylesbury,	1 Cardigan, &c.,	2 Evesham,	2 King's Lynn,
1 Banbury,	2 Carlisle,	2 Exeter,	2 Kingston-upon-Hull,
2 Barnstaple,	2 Carmarthenshire,	1 Eye,	2 Knareborough,
2 Bassetlaw,	1 Carmarthen, &c.,	2 Finsbury District ,	4 Lancashire,
2 Bath,	1 Carnarvonshire,	1 Flintshire,	2 Lancaster,
1 Beaumaris, &c.,	1 Carnarvon, &c.,	1 Flint, &c.,	2 Lambeth ,
2 Bedfordshire,	1 Chatham,	1 Frome ,	1 Launceston,
2 Bedford,	1 Cheltenham ,	1 Gateshead ,	2 Leeds ,
3 Berkshire,	4 Cheshire,	2 Glamorganshire,	4 Leicestershire,
2 Berwick-upon-Tweed,	2 Chester,	2 Gloucestershire,	2 Leicester,
2 Beverley,	2 Chichester,	2 Gloucester,	2 Leominster,
1 Bewdley,	2 Chippenham,	2 Grantham,	2 Lewes,
2 Birmingham ,	1 Christchurch,	1 Great Grimaby,	4 Lincolnshire,
2 Blackburn ,	2 Cirencester,	2 Greenwich ,	2 Lincoln,
2 Bodmin,	1 Clithero,	2 Guildford,	1 Liskeard,
2 Bolton ,	2 Cocker-mouth,	2 Halifax ,	2 Litchfield,
2 Boston,	2 Colchester,	4 Hampshire,	2 Liverpool,
2 Bradford ,	4 Cornwall,	2 Harwich,	4 London,
1 Breconshire,	2 Coventry,	2 Hastings,	1 Ludlow,
1 Brecon,	2 Cricklade,	1 Haverfordwest, &c.,	1 Lyme Regis,
2 Bridgenorth,	4 Cumberland,	1 Helston,	2 Lynton,
2 Bridgewater,	1 Dartmouth,	3 Herefordshire,	2 Macclesfield ,
2 Bridport,	2 Denbighshire,	2 Hereford,	2 Maidstone,
2 Brighton ,	1 Denbigh, &c.,	3 Hertfordshire,	2 Maldon,
2 Bristol,	4 Derbyshire,	2 Hertford,	1 Malmesbury,
3 Buckinghamshire,	2 Derby,	2 Honiton,	2 Malton,
2 Buckingham,	4 Devonshire,	1 Horsham,	2 Manchester ,
1 Bury ,	2 Devonport ,	1 Huddersfield ,	2 Marlborough,
2 Bury St. Edmunds,	3 Dorsetshire,	2 Huntingdonshire,	2 Marlow, Great,

2 Mary-le-Bone District ,	2 Penryn,	2 Southampton,	1 Walsall ,
1 Merionethshire,	2 Peterborough,	1 South Shields ,	1 Wareham,
1 Merthyr-Tydvil,	1 Petersfield,	2 Southwark,	1 Warrington,
2 Middlesex,	2 Plymouth,	4 Staffordshire,	4 Warwickshire,
1 Midhurst,	2 Pontefract,	2 Stafford,	2 Warwick,
2 Monmouthshire,	2 Poole,	2 Stamford,	2 Wells,
1 Monmouth,	2 Portsmouth,	2 Stockport,	2 Wenlock,
1 Montgomeryshire,	2 Preston,	2 Stoke-upon-Trent ,	1 Westbury,
1 Montgomery, &c.,	1 Radnorshire,	2 Stroud ,	2 Westminster,
1 Morpeth,	1 Radnor, &c.,	2 Sudbury,	2 Westmoreland,
2 Newark-upon-Trent,	2 Reading,	4 Suffolk,	2 Weymouth, &c.,
2 Newcastle-under-Line,	2 Richmond,	2 Sunderland ,	1 Whitby ,
2 Newcastle-upon-Tyne,	2 Ripon,	4 Surrey,	1 Whitehaven ,
2 Newport, Isle of Wight,	1 Rochdale ,	4 Sussex,	2 Wigan,
4 Norfolk,	2 Rochester,	1 Swansea, &c.,	1 Wight, Isle of ,
1 Northallerton,	2 Rutlandshire,	2 Tamworth,	1 Wilton,
4 Northamptonshire,	1 Rye,	2 Tavistock,	4 Wiltshire,
2 Northampton,	1 Ryegate,	2 Taunton,	2 Winchelsea,
4 Northumberland,	1 Salford ,	2 Tewkesbury,	2 Windsor,
2 Norwich,	2 Salisbury,	2 Thetford,	1 Woodstock,
4 Nottinghamshire,	2 Sandwich,	1 Thirsk,	2 Wolverhampton ,
2 Nottingham,	2 Scarborough,	2 Tiverton,	4 Worcestershire,
2 Oldham ,	1 Shaftesbury,	2 Totness,	2 Worcester,
3 Oxfordshire,	2 Sheffield ,	2 Tower Hamlets' District,	2 Wycombe,
2 Oxford University,	2 Shoreham,	2 Truro,	2 Yarmouth,
2 Oxford City,	2 Shrewsbury,	1 Tynemouth,	6 Yorkshire,
1 Pembrokeshire,	4 Shropshire,	1 Wakefield,	2 York.
1 Pembroke, &c.,	4 Somersetshire,	1 Wallingford,

CHAP. VII.—MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS.

In 1834 there were 246 corporations aggregate in England and Wales, possessing or exercising municipal functions. With a view to ascertain the existing state of these corporations, and remedying various defects in their constitution the existence of which had long been matter of complaint, a commission was appointed under the Great seal, shortly after the passing of the Reform act; and on the 5th of June, 1835, a bill was brought into parliament, founded on the reports of the commissioners, which having been passed into law, after receiving sundry modifications, on the 7th of September following, has greatly altered the constitution of the municipal corporations throughout England and Wales, and rendered obsolete much of the information under this head hitherto given in all existing Gazetteers and other topographical works. We shall here introduce a full digest of the commissioners' general report, as containing much curious and valuable information; and also of the act 5° and 6° Will. IV. c. 76, now regulating 178 municipal corporations of England and Wales.

Early Constitution.—"It would be difficult," say the commissioners, "to describe accurately the early constitution of the municipal corporations in England and Wales; it is certain that many of their institutions were established in practice long before they were settled by law. In some places, as at Newcastle-upon-Tyne, Carlisle, and Scarborough, the forms of the municipal government were defined by an express composition between the magistracy and the people. It is probable that the powers of government in all ordinary cases were exercised by the superior magistracy, but that in extraordinary emergencies the whole body of burgesses was called upon to sanction the measures which interested the community. The difficulty of conducting business in such an assembly seems to have suggested the expedient of appointing a species of committee out of the larger body, which acted in conjunction with the burgesses, and which was dissolved when the business was concluded. These committees afterwards became permanent. In some boroughs the common councils seem to have been formed out of fragments of the leet-juries, whilst in others we have reason to suppose that they were what their name strictly imports, councillors, called into the chamber by the aldermen, or presiding functionary, with whom they were to advise. We have not discovered that there was any general principle in the mode of forming the constituency of the boroughs, nor can we assume that any one system of policy or common law-right prevailed at any period throughout the realm. As far as we can judge, neither the opinion of those who treat every extension of authority beyond the select body as a popular usurpation, nor of those who view every municipal corporation as formed out of a symmetrical and uniform organization of the people, can be supported. It is sufficient that we are enabled to collect the main principles of administration,—namely, that the municipal magistracy and municipal councils were the resident and effective heads of the community, and that the community probably included in its members, all who shared in its burdens, and were liable to fill its offices.

“In a period, of which the beginning cannot be distinctly shown to have been much earlier than the reign of Richard II., arose a new and very important feature of our municipal policy,—namely, the annexation of the powers of ‘Justices of the Peace and of Labourers’ to the municipal magistracy, with a considerable enlargement of their civil and criminal jurisdiction. In that reign the usage began of appointing municipal magistrates justices of the peace by charter, and in many instances, with a nonintromittent clause. The practice gained ground, though at first slowly; and thereby produced an essential change in the functions and character of the municipal magistracy. Another very important feature of the era between the reigns of Richard II. and Henry VI. is the introduction of a legal principle hitherto unknown; that is, of a municipal body politic and corporate which takes by succession, admitting members upon a mere personal right, without any qualification either of residence or of property.

“The greater number of the governing charters of corporations was granted between the reign of Henry VIII. and the Revolution; the general characteristic of these documents is, that they were calculated to take away power from the community, and to render the governing class independent of the main body of the burgesses. Almost all the councils, named in these charters, are established on the principles of self-election. The criminal jurisdiction of the boroughs received still further enlargement; and numerous instances occur in which a recorder was created, which office had been before that time confined to some of the larger boroughs. There is little reason to doubt that the form given to the governing classes, as well as the limitation of the burgess-ship, during this period, was adopted for the purpose of influencing the choice, or nomination, of members of parliament. At this time the honorary office of high steward was created in many boroughs, by which the borough became connected with the aristocracy or with the crown. Some of these charters contain clauses by which the right of electing members of the house of commons is limited to the select bodies which they created.

“During the reigns of Charles II. and James II. many corporate towns were induced to surrender their charters, and to accept new ones, containing clauses giving power to the crown to remove or nominate their principal officers. After the proclamation by James II., dated 17th Oct., 1688, the greater number of these towns returned to their former charters. The charters which have been granted since the Revolution are framed nearly on the model of those of the preceding era; they show a disregard of any settled or consistent plan for the improvement of municipal policy, corresponding with the progress of society. The charters of George III. do not differ in this respect from those granted in the worst period of the history of these boroughs. It has become customary not to rely on the municipal corporations for exercising the powers incident to good municipal government. The powers granted by local acts of parliament for various purposes, have been from time to time conferred, not upon the municipal officers, but upon trustees or commissioners, distinct from them; so that often the corporations have hardly any duties to perform. They have the nominal government of the town; but the efficient duties, and the responsibility, have been transferred to other hands.”

Corporate Body.—“The constitutions of the existing municipal corporations in England and Wales,” the commissioners go on to observe, “are exceedingly various in detail, and do not admit of being summarily described, except with regard to some of their most prominent features. Some corporate towns are counties, and have the same powers in that character as the shires of the realm. The importance of others is increased by the exclusive jurisdiction which the corporate magistrates exercise within their limits. The constitution of a great number is, practically, much affected by the return of members of parliament. The municipal powers of many are almost nominal. A distinction of great practical importance may be made between corporations consisting of a definite and those of an indefinite number. Most of the charters incorporate the men and inhabitants of the borough. There are very few charters, which unequivocally designate the corporate body as a small and definite number of persons, but in many places, custom (supported by the silence of the charters as to any general right to the franchise, and by its disuse and oblivion, where any such may have formerly existed) has practically established the same restricted constitution. A very numerous class of corporations exists, which may be considered as occupying a middle place between those in which the number of corporators is indefinite, and those in which it is now treated as necessarily definite. This class consists of the corporations in which, although there is no doubt, both from the wording of the charters, and from the modern practice, that the number of corporators may be indefinite, it has been the policy of the ruling body to restrict the number, so as to retain all the privileges constitutionally belonging to a large and indefinite body in the hands of a small and select one. In a great proportion of the instances in which the number of corporators is, both in constitution and fact, large and indefinite, the freemen have no share in the management of the affairs of the corporation; this prevails to so great an extent, that, in such corporations, the commissioners often found that the freemen had long ceased to consider themselves as forming any part of the corporation, which term in popular language, was exclusively applied to the ruling body. In some places, this notion has been further refined upon, and a distinction has been drawn in the large indefinite body of corporators, between those elected by the ruling body, and those claiming by an independent right; the former class only being treated as forming an integral part of the corporation.

Rights of Freedom.—"In those boroughs where the number of corporators is definite, or where it has been always kept small, the principal mode of entering the corporation is by the nomination of the ruling body. In some cases the election must be from persons qualified, the most usual qualification being residence in the borough; in other cases, the choice of the electors is unfettered by any conditions of eligibility in the persons chosen. This mode of acquiring the freedom is usually said to be by gift or purchase, and in fact, a sum of money, varying with the circumstances of the corporation and supposed value of the franchise, is usually paid by each corporator on his election. In the boroughs where, both by charter and in practice, the number of corporators is unlimited, the circumstances under which the freedom may be demanded of right, are very various; but almost all may be classed under the general titles of freedom by birth, marriage, and servitude. In a few places, the possession or occupation of property gives a title to the freedom. A distinction is now made every where between the freemen and the inhabitants, except in a very few places, as at Beccles and Wisbech. The right of conferring the freedom by sale or free gift is claimed and exercised by the ruling body of almost every corporation." The Municipal Corporation act, which came into operation on the last day of 1835, has remedied this state of things, by declaring, that no person shall in future be enrolled a burgess, in respect of any other title than that enacted by the act; and that "every male person of full age who on the last day of August in any year shall have occupied any house, warehouse, counting-house, or shop, within any borough during that year and the whole of each of the two preceding years, and during such occupation shall have been an inhabitant householder within the said borough, or within seven miles, shall, if duly enrolled as hereafter, be a burgess of such borough and member of the body corporate; but he must have been rated for the relief of the poor of the parish wherein such premises are situated in respect thereof during his occupation, and have paid on or before the last day of August as aforesaid all such rates, including therein all borough rates, if any, under this act, except such as shall become payable within six calendar months next before the said last day of August; but such rating and occupation need not be of the same premises or in the same parish; but aliens and persons who have received parochial relief within twelve months before the last day of August, are not to be enrolled."

Functions of Freemen.—The functions of the old freemen in most towns arose out of their share in the election of members of parliament, and of their own corporate officers. They had retained the former right in many places in which they had been long deprived of the latter. In a great majority of those towns in which there was a large body of freemen, they had no share whatever in the elections of the corporate officers. In a few instances, such as Berwick-upon-Tweed, Ipswich, and Carmarthen, they had the right of electing, from among themselves, all, or nearly all, the corporate officers; in others, such as Beverley and Pontefract, they elected only the mayor; in Norwich, they elected the aldermen, common councilmen, and one of the two sheriffs; in some, such as Plymouth, they had the right of electing their officers out of a select body; in others, as Oxford and Swansea, they had only the power of selection from the nominees of such a select body. In many places no trace existed of a more popular mode than self-election having been used at any time; in others, such as Newcastle-under-Lyme and Bridgnorth, the right clearly appeared to have been taken away from the freemen by ancient usurpation of the select body; and in the case of Newcastle-under-Lyme, it had been recently restored, after an interval of 200 years, by a decision of the court of king's bench. In some towns these rights were possessed only by the resident freemen, in other places by all the freemen, whether resident or non-resident. The latter was the more common case. The privileges of the freemen, besides their share in elections, generally consisted in exemption from the tolls and duties which in many towns are levied under various grants from the crown. The freemen, in most towns, were exclusively eligible to corporate offices. They were also very generally excused from serving on county juries. They had sometimes exclusive privileges in the local courts. And in many places the exclusive right of trading within the corporate limits, as in Oxford, York, and Beverley. Another privilege often belonging to the freemen was, that they, or their widows, or children, were designated as the sole objects of local charities. The Municipal corporation act, while it provides for the prospective abolition of all these privileges and exemptions, reserves all the rights and exemptions enjoyed by individuals on or previous to June 5, 1835.

Governing Body.—The government of the municipal corporations in England and Wales was generally vested in a chief officer, and a council, called the common council, over which he presides. The chief officer or head of the corporation was variously designated as mayor, portreeve, bailiff, steward, &c. Sometimes the chief authority was shared between two, as bailiffs or stewards. In some towns, bailiffs co-existed with and were subordinate to the mayor. In some boroughs the freemen were themselves the governing body, as at Ipswich, Carmarthen, and Berwick-upon-Tweed. The body of the council was often composed of two classes—the most common distinctive name of the superior class being that of aldermen, while the others were simply called common councilmen. In many corporations, the presence of a majority of each class of the common council was necessary to constitute it a legal assembly; instances rarely occurred in which the aldermen met also by themselves as a separate deliberate chamber. But in others, as at Kingston-upon-Hull and Pontefract, the head of the corporation, and the aldermen, or persons filling an analogous situation, constituted the whole council. A legal officer, who is found in most corporations with the title of recorder, was occasionally constituted by charter a member of the common council. There were very few instances in the corporations of indefinite number, in which, as at Berwick-upon-Tweed and Ipswich, the general body of the freemen had the power of choosing whomsoever they pleased as the head of the corporation. Sometimes he was chosen by the freemen from the aldermen, or from the members of the common council. In some boroughs he was chosen by the body at large from among two or more nominated by the select body. The most common case was, that he was elected either from among the aldermen or common councilmen, by the court of aldermen or common council. In some places he was presented by the jurors of the court leet. In several boroughs the same person was re-eligible only after a given interval. In all cases the election was for a year. The members of the common council were elected in the great majority of instances by the common council, or by that division of it commonly comprised under the name of aldermen. In some cases they were nominated by the mayor. The election was generally for life. Residence was sometimes a necessary qualification; but often it was little attended to. The aldermen generally filled up vacancies in their own body from the other division of the common council. The aldermen also were usually chosen into that class for life. The charters generally empowered the corporations to make bye-laws for the good rule and government of the town, and in some instances to tax the inhabitants for municipal purposes. This legislative authority was exercised by the common council; but in a great number of corporations the power was disused. In some cases, the regulations and bye-laws were offered for approval or confirmation to a more popular assembly. Some charters required that the bye-laws should be approved by the judges of assize. Many corporations had the power of enforcing their bye-laws by fine and imprisonment. The common councils had many other important duties to perform. They often nominated all the freemen; they appointed and settled the salaries of the corporate officers; they managed the corporate property. In many cases they elected the borough magistrates, and used to choose the members of parliament for the borough. They dispensed the patronage belonging to the corporation, and distributed the charities of which the corporations were trustees. They were often commissioners under local acts. In several boroughs some or all of the duties here attributed to the common council were exercised by the aldermen, more rarely by the mayor alone. The Municipal act repeals local acts only in as far as they are inconsistent with its provisions, but chiefly aims at rendering all functionaries responsible to their constituents.

Corporate Officers.—The duties intrusted to the several officers of the corporation varied much, in consequence either of prescriptive usage, bye-laws, or the express directions of the charters. The chief officers in most corporations, besides the mayor and recorder, were a town-clerk, a coroner, and a chamberlain or treasurer. In those cities and towns which are counties, there were also sheriffs. The mayor, recorder, town-clerk, and sheriff, often had power to appoint deputies, to exercise, in some cases the whole, in others, a part only of their duties. Besides these principal officers, there was a great variety of subordinate officers. Many corporations had an officer called the high-steward, whose legal connection with them was entirely honorary. He was usually a nobleman, and seldom resident in the borough. The mayor, or head of the corporation, under whatever name, besides being (either in person or by deputy) the president of the common council, as already stated, was the chief magistrate and executive officer of the corporation. In almost all boroughs returning members to parliament, he was the returning officer, except in those boroughs or cities which are counties. This duty was there usually exercised by the sheriff, as in the shires of the realm. The mayor usually presided at the quarter-sessions for the borough, and was often a judge of the court of record, where such a court existed. In a few ports, as at Rochester, he was the admiral, to the exclusion of the admiralty of England; in others, as at Southampton, he had by charter a concurrent jurisdiction of that nature. He was often conservator of the rivers and waters adjoining the city or borough of which he is mayor. All chartered admiralty jurisdictions are now abolished. In numerous instances, the appointment of the inferior officers of the corporation rested chiefly or entirely with the mayor, and in many small places, he practically united in his person almost all the authority of the whole body. The mayor is now elected every year from the aldermen or councillors. The recorder, sometimes called the steward, was elected in most cases by the common council; in many others by the aldermen; in some cases, by the general body of the burgesses or freemen. By the terms of most of the charters in which a recorder is named, he is required to be learned in the law. This condition was sometimes considered to be complied with by electing a peer of the realm, who being a judge by the constitution of parliament, has been held to come within that technical description. Sometimes recorders have been chosen, notwithstanding such a provision in the charter, who were neither peers nor educated to the legal profession. He generally held office during good behaviour. He was the principal legal adviser of the corporation; and commonly a magistrate within the borough, and a judge of the courts of quarter-session and record, where these existed. In some cases, the recorder was only assessor to the justices; at Hull, Newcastle, Preston, and some other towns, he was not a judge of the court-of-record. He was seldom required to be resident in the borough. The deputy was sometimes a barrister; but in numerous instances the town-clerk practically officiates as deputy recorder. The crown now appoints a recorder, upon petition from any borough showing ground for the request. He must be a barrister of five years' standing, and has the power of holding quarter-sessions, in which he is sole judge. The office of sheriff in a corporate town is the same as that exercised under the same name in the shires of the realm, and is found only in those cities and boroughs which are counties. In London the sheriffs are chosen by the liverymen; at Carmarthen and Poole, by the freemen from among themselves; at Bristol, Exeter, and Gloucester, by the common council, from themselves; in Canterbury, by the mayor and aldermen, from the citizens; at Haverfordwest, by the freemen from the nominees of the common council; in Hull, by the freemen from two persons nominated by the common council; in Southampton, practically by the common council, from those who have served the subordinate office of bailiff; in Newcastle-upon-Tyne, by the mayor; in Lincoln, one is chosen by the common council, the other by the mayor-elect; both from the freemen who have served the office of chamberlain. In no case is the sheriff of a corporate town nominated by the crown. The election is always for a year. The sheriffs often have the care of the gaol, and the custody of prisoners confined there. The bailiffs are usually chosen annually, and similar varieties occur in the mode of their election as in the election of sheriffs. In those boroughs in which they are found among the chief-officers subordinate to the head of the corporation, they perform the duties of sheriffs. They seem to have been originally receivers and managers for the crown, or other lord of the borough, and not to have had any duties in connection with the corporate body until after the property of the soil became vested in the corporation, when the bailiffs also became corporate officers. In Bedford and Southampton, they were returning officers jointly with the mayor, and were so formerly at Cambridge. They often have the custody of the gaol. In many places the office has become entirely nominal. In many boroughs the mayor, or other head of the corporation, is coroner ex officio; in others, the bailiff or town-clerk. When a separate officer is appointed, the election is generally in the common council. In York, he is elected by the freeholders. His duties and emoluments are those of a country-coroner. In most places he is not required to be either of the legal or medical profession, and is often an inferior tradesman. The town-clerk was appointed to hold his office during good behaviour; most frequently by the common council, and sometimes out of their own body; in a few places he was named by the recorder; and occasionally, either nominated or approved by the Crown. The town-clerk is usually an attorney; he acts as legal adviser, and records the proceedings of the corporation. He is generally required to reside in the borough, and he is usually clerk-of-the-peace, and registrar, and principal officer of the court-of-record. He is generally paid by a salary, which in most towns is almost nominal,—the real inducement for holding the situation being the legal business. The chamberlain, or treasurer of the corporation, was usually chosen by the common council, and in a great majority of instances was a member of it. His duties are to receive the revenues, to make the necessary payments to the order of the competent authorities, to keep the accounts, and generally to superintend the property of the corporation. In some instances the mayor acted as treasurer. By the Municipal act the whole body of functionaries, together with the constituency, form the corporation, under the title of 'the mayor, aldermen, and burgesses.' By the 25th section of the act it is provided that "a mayor, aldermen, and councillors, be chosen in every borough, who together shall constitute the council of the borough; and the number of councillors shall be that mentioned in conjunction with the name of the borough in schedules A and B (see below); and the number of aldermen shall be one-third of the councillors; and on the 9th day of November in this present year (1835) councillors first to be elected, and on the same day, 1838, and in every third succeeding year, the council shall elect from the councillors, or from persons qualified to be councillors, the aldermen, or enough to fill the places of those who then go out of office,—viz., one-half; and the councillors, immediately after the first election of aldermen, shall appoint who shall be aldermen to go out of office in 1838; and thereafter those shall go out who have been aldermen for the longest time without re-election; but any alderman may be forthwith re-elected, but may not vote in the election of a new alderman." All officers of old corporations, discontinued by the new councils, are entitled to compensation for the loss of office. In most corporations a power existed of fining those who refuse to serve the corporate offices to which they were elected. Such fines have been occasionally made a source of considerable emolument. At Leeds the whole revenue of the corporation accrued from this source. By the 51st section of the Municipal act, every burgess elected to the office of alderman, councillor, auditor, or assessor, and every councillor elected to the office of mayor, is bound to accept the office in five days, or pay such a fine to the borough-fund as the council shall declare, not exceeding £50 for burgesses, and £100 for mayor, which fine may be levied by distress; but persons disabled by infirmities, and sixty-five years old, and who have served or been fined within five years, and officers in service, are exempted.

Magistrates.—In almost all the principal boroughs there are municipal magistrates whose authority as justices of the peace extends over the whole borough. They are often chosen by the common council, and almost always are members of it; where there are aldermen, they are usually taken from that class. The mayor is always the chief-magistrate within the borough, when the borough-justices are named in the charter: in a few cases, as at Lancaster, Preston, and Liverpool, he is also ex officio a magistrate of the county. In many of the large cities and boroughs all the aldermen were magistrates; in others only those were so who had passed the chair, as in Liverpool, Norwich, and Lynn; in Norwich the aldermen who had not passed the chair were magistrates in their own wards. Their jurisdiction was sometimes concurrent with that of the county magistrates, more commonly exclusive; and even when the county magistrates had a concurrent jurisdiction, it was rarely exercised by the latter within borough. County justices have still jurisdiction in all boroughs not having a separate court of quarters-sessions.

Criminal courts.—The majority of corporations in England and Wales exercise a criminal jurisdiction within the limits of the borough; in some, no traces of any such powers can now be found ; in others, it has been long disused ; in others, it is but partially exercised. Many send all serious cases to the country-sessions or assizes. Some of those which formerly exercised jurisdiction over capital offences have now abandoned it ; others, as Salisbury, Southampton, and Chichester, still try capital offences ; but when capital punishment is expected to follow conviction, an arrangement is made to prevent a trial before the corporate authorities solely. Several corporations, as Berwick-upon-Tweed, Bristol, Canterbury, Exeter, Rochester, still exercise their chartered privilege of trying and executing criminals for capital offences. The ordinary criminal courts are those of gaol-delivery, and of general and quarter-sessions. The courts of gaol-delivery are found in very few places ; where they exist they are sometimes held under the charters without any commission issuing from the Crown. In London, Oxford, and some other places, they are never held without such a commission. Where no commission issues, the corporate magistrates are the sole judges. The borough-sessions seldom differ as to the times and manner of holding them, from the county quarter-sessions. In all the corporate courts some magistrates are especially named, without whose presence the court cannot be held ; these are usually the mayor or recorder, sometimes both. The juries were generally summoned from the inhabitants at large, without strict reference to any qualification ; sometimes from the freemen alone. At Pontefract the petty jury was always chosen from the freemen, the whole number being only twenty-six. At Scarborough freemen never served on the borough-juries. In many of the principal towns, as Liverpool, Bristol, Berwick-upon-Tweed, Hull, Leeds, Newcastle, York, the criminal courts are attended by barristers ; but in most of the smaller places the business is conducted solely by attorneys.

Civil courts.—In a large majority of the boroughs in England and Wales, there were local civil courts with a jurisdiction co-extensive with the limits of the borough. They varied considerably with regard to the nature of the actions which they might entertain. In some, actions real, personal, and mixed, might be brought, and in general they had cognizance of all personal actions. Those courts whose powers were most limited, were confined to suits where the debt or damage does not exceed 40s. The borough-courts, or as they are usually denominated, the courts-of-record, in their general constitution resemble the superior courts of common law. Where created by charter, the proceedings were according to the course and practice of some one of the superior courts at Westminster. They seldom possessed any printed or written rules regulating their proceedings, and their practice, therefore, was very ill-defined. The presiding officer in these courts was generally the mayor, and hence they were not unfrequently termed the mayor's court. Sometimes the bailiffs presided with the mayor, in other instances the recorder, and occasionally some of the aldermen were judges. The town-clerk in many boroughs practically officiated as judge. He issued the writs, filed and enrolled the proceedings, granted rules, taxed the costs, and signed the judgments. The bailiffs, or serjeants-at-mace, performed in these courts the duties which in actions brought in the superior courts of common law, devolve upon the sheriffs of counties. In some boroughs, as in Liverpool, the bailiffs were judges of the court, and the office of sheriff was performed by the serjeant-at-mace ; in others, the bailiffs were the officers for the execution of process. At Berwick-upon-Tweed, the bailiffs were judges, and impannelled the juries. No jurisdiction can now be exercised by the officers of corporations, save by express delegation from the Crown. In many boroughs, before an attorney is allowed to practise in the court-of-record, he is compelled to enter himself as an attorney of that court ; in others, every person admitted an attorney of any her majesty's superior courts is permitted to practise without any further qualification. In many instances the number admitted is limited. In a few of the larger boroughs barristers practise ; in the other borough courts the attorneys act both as advocates and as attorneys.

Gaols.—In nearly all the boroughs possessing criminal jurisdiction, there are gaols under the superintendence of the corporation or municipal magistrates. Sometimes the expenses of the gaols are defrayed by the corporation, sometimes out of a borough-rate, sometimes out of the poor-rate. In many boroughs the same gaol is used indiscriminately for criminals, and for the prisoners committed by the court-of-record. In boroughs where the municipal magistrates commit to the county-gaol, the borough-gaols are only used as places of temporary confinement. The gaols are now placed under the inspection of officers specially appointed for that purpose by government, who annually report on their condition to the home-secretary.

Police.—In a very great number of towns there are no watchmen, nor police-officers of any kind, except the constables, who are unsalaried officers. They are sometimes appointed at a court-leet, more frequently by the corporate authorities. The police, and the powers conferred by local acts for paving, lighting, and watching the town, were seldom exclusively in the jurisdiction of the corporation; sometimes they were shared by the corporate authorities and commissioners; sometimes vested in commissioners alone. In several large towns more than one of these boards had been introduced. In many places, where power to watch and light had been obtained, they were not put in execution. Some boroughs had adopted the provisions of 11 Geo. IV. c. 27, for enabling parishes to levy rates for lighting and watching. All local acts for paving, lighting, and police, are now done away with; and the police is committed to the mayor and some of the councillors, specially subject to the control of the secretary-of-state. Where there are fairs and markets within the circuit of the corporate towns, the municipal corporation in most cases has the superintendence and management of them, as incident both to their property and to their general municipal authority.

Management of Poor.—The management of the poor in some towns is vested in the corporation, in others, as at Bristol and Exeter, it is vested in a distinct corporate body, of which some of the members of the municipal corporation form a part.

Extent of Local jurisdiction.—The boundaries of the jurisdiction exercised by the several municipal corporations in England and Wales, are generally known with tolerable accuracy. Occasionally doubts and disputes occur with regard to small parcels, frequently arising from a confusion between corporate and parochial boundaries. The corporations in some places make periodical perambulations of a district not continuous with that in which they claim authority; occasionally, as at Lancaster, this is connected with a vague tradition of former authority or property; sometimes no explanation can be given, unless it resolves itself into a case of confusion of the acts of the corporation with those of a parochial vestry or leet-jury. In those corporations which have abandoned or lost their power of municipal government, much difficulty often occurs in ascertaining the limits of the municipal privileges, which in such cases are usually of little value. In some cases, as at Grantham and Brecon, the corporate boundary is not continuous, but includes outlying parcels of ground. Several remarkable instances of this occur in the Cinque Ports; one of the most striking is at Hastings, where the corporate magistrates have authority, among other places, over two detached precincts distant from Hastings forty and fifty miles respectively. The town of Ramsgate is subject to the jurisdiction of the corporation of Sandwich, as is also the corporate town of Deal, which adjoins Sandwich. In most important towns, the suburbs have extended themselves far beyond the limits of the corporate authority. Frequently there are precincts locally situated within the limits of the corporate authority, but exempted from its jurisdiction. Such are found at York, Lincoln, Norwich, Winchester, and Chichester. These have usually originated in ecclesiastical privileges, or have been the site of the castle of the lord of the borough. In the city of Canterbury there are not less than fifteen such precincts, though some are in dispute between the counties of Kent and Canterbury. By the act 2 Will. IV. c. 45, for amending the representation of the people of England and Wales (commonly called the Reform act) the right of voting for members of parliament was extended to the inhabitants of all such precincts, but that act did not effect their exemption from the corporate jurisdiction. Many corporations exercise authority over the adjacent waters to a considerable distance beyond their land boundary. The liberties and jurisdiction of Rochester on the Medway extend to Sheerness, a distance of 20 miles. Bristol has jurisdiction as far as the Holmes in the Bristol channel, 25 miles from the town. Newcastle-upon-Tyne has jurisdiction on 10 miles of the river below the town, and 7 above it. The jurisdiction of Ipswich extends over a considerable part of the harbour of Harwich.

Property.—Many of the corporations have considerable revenues derived from various sources; from lands, leases of tithes, and other property; from tolls of markets and fairs; from duties or tolls imposed on the import or export of goods and merchandise, usually called town-dues; from other duties, as from quay dues, anchorage, &c.; and from fees payable on the admission of officers and burgesses, as well as from fines imposed on persons refusing to perform the duties of corporate officers. The whole property of the old corporations—except tolls, which are abolished—is now vested in the town-council, subject to the inspection of auditors, appointed by the burgesses in public meeting. In many of the corporations the revenues are sufficient for the maintenance of all necessary municipal institutions. In many, though amply sufficient for supporting the various purposes for which municipalities were instituted, they were but partially applied to them. In most, however, the revenues would be inadequate to these purposes, though they should be entirely expended upon them. In several boroughs a rate is levied on the inhabitants, in the nature of a county-rate. In some, before the passing of the Reform act, the members for the borough, or the patron, paid all the municipal expenses. Since that epoch, these contributions have ceased, and such corporations have no longer the means of maintaining municipal institutions of any kind. Extensive commons often belong to the freemen of corporate towns, the benefits of which were shared by them in various modes. Sometimes, as at Lancaster and Bath, the whole was farmed out, and the profits divided among all, or a certain number of them; more frequently they themselves exercised, under restriction, the rights of common of pasturage. At Berwick-upon-Tweed, where the affairs were administered by the whole body of burgesses, the value of the lands of which the profits are taken by the freemen is near £6000 per annum. Some corporations hold their estates charged with the duty of repairing bridges and other works in their neighbourhood. Others have the control of funds appropriated to specific objects connected with the welfare of the town. In numerous cases they are the trustees of property vested in them for charitable purposes. The revenues of the corporations were variously employed: a great part was usually absorbed in the salaries of their officers, and entertainments of the common council and their friends. The debt of many corporations is extremely heavy. In some the payment of the interest absorbs a large proportion of the revenue; others are absolutely insolvent.

Patronage.—The corporations frequently possessed patronage, both ecclesiastical and lay. They presented to livings, appointed lecturers, masters of schools and hospitals, and had the power of selecting the objects of various charities. This patronage was sometimes exercised by the governing bodies, sometimes by particular officers. By the Municipal act the council are required to sell the advowsons of all livings belonging to the old corporation, and to appoint trustees of all property held by them for charitable purposes.

CHAP. VIII.—POOR-RATES.

The poor-rate is an assessment raised throughout England and Wales for the temporary relief or permanent maintenance of all such persons as from age, infirmity, or poverty, cannot themselves procure the means of subsistence. The first English statute which gives any particular directions concerning paupers is that of 11° Henry VII. cap. 2., which directs that "every beggar not able to work shall resort to the hundred where he last dwelt, is best known, or was born, and shall there remain." In 1531 an act was passed empowering the justices to grant licenses to poor and impotent persons to beg within a certain precinct. In 1536 an act was passed directing the magistrates of counties and towns to provide for every aged, poor, and impotent person who should have dwelt three years in any place, by means of the voluntary alms of charitable persons, which were to be collected for this purpose in every parish. In 1563 an act was passed authorising the justices to levy a reasonable sum from every parishioner for the support of the poor in his parish. This may be considered as the origin of the poor-rates, which were further established by an act in 1572. Further regulations were adopted on this subject by 43° Elizabeth, cap. 2., which directs that every parish shall provide for its own poor by an assessment to be fixed and levied by the justices in general sessions assembled.

The following is a list of the statutes, under the authority of which the poor-rates are chiefly levied and expended:

AUTHORITY.

43 Eliz. c. 2
4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 76, (P. L. Amendment Act)

CHARGES ON RATES.

Setting to work the able.
Relieving the impotent.
Maintenance of the poor in workhouses.
Out-door relief to the aged and infirm.
Out-door relief to the able-bodied.
Out-door relief in cases of emergency.
Casual relief to the poor.
Medical relief.
Relief to bastards.

9 Geo. 4, c. 40, s. 38	Charges of conveying and maintaining pauper lunatics.
5 Eliz. c. 4, and subsequent Acts	Putting out apprentices.
2 & 3 Anne, c. 6, and 4 Anne, c. 19	Apprenticeship to sea-service.
2 Geo. 3, c. 22	Register and regulation of parish poor infants within the bills of mortality.
4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 58 (P. L. Amendment Act)	Loans to poor persons.
59 Geo. 3, c. 12, s. 30	Loans to Greenwich and Chelsea pensioners. (The advances are recoverable quarterly, and an arrear of one quarter is not therefore allowable.)
59 Geo. 3, c. 12	Providing land, &c. for the poor. (The authority must have been exercised under the direction of the Poor Law commissioners.)
4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 76, (P. L. Amendment Act)	Emigration.
52 Geo. 3, c. 16	Charges for relief to paupers during their confinement in gaols which are not county gaols.
5 Geo. 4, c. 85	Allowances to discharged prisoners. (These are recoverable from the treasurer of the county on application by the overseer.)
3 Geo. 2, c. 29	Reimbursed charges to parish officers for maintaining and removing certificated persons.
4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 84, (P. L. Amendment Act)	Cost of relief to persons under orders of removal.
9 Geo. 1, c. 7; 22 Geo. 3, c. 83; 59 Geo. 3, c. 12; 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 76; s. 21-25, (P. L. Amendment Act)	Building, altering, enlarging, purchasing, hiring, and fitting up of workhouses.
4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 14, (P. L. Amendment Act)	Expenses of witnesses before Poor Law commissioners where allowed by them.
4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 82	Costs of appeals.
59 Geo. 3, c. 12, s. 7	Salary to assistant overseer.
12 Geo. 2, c. 29, &c.	County rate.
5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 92, (Corporation Reform Act)	Borough rate in the nature of a county rate.
7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 31, s. 15	Compensation by the hundred in places not contributing to the county rate.
7 Geo. 4, c. 64	Costs and compensations in the prosecution of felony in such places.
25 Geo. 2, c. 36, s. 5; 58 Geo. 3, c. 70, s. 7 & 8	Costs of prosecuting persons keeping disorderly houses.
18 Geo. 3, c. 19, &c.	Sums expended by constables in doing actual business of the parish, in the relief or removal of vagrants, &c.
11 Geo. 4, 1 Will. 4, c. 30, s. 10	Making population returns.
6 Geo. 4, c. 50, s. 9	Printing a sufficient number of jury lists.

"This list," the Poor Law commissioners state, "is not to be deemed complete, as by clauses inserted in various general acts, as well as by many local acts, charges are, in certain cases, made payable out of the poor-rates for objects not connected with the original intention of the poor-laws. In no case, however, except in relief of destitution, will it be safe to make any payments out of the poor-rates, unless sanctioned by the express direction of some statute. In doubtful cases, therefore, the proper inquiry will always be, 'Under what statute, or by what regulation, is the proposed charge warranted;' and, unless the authority can be found in the words of the statute, or in some lawful order or regulation of the Poor Law commissioners, it must be presumed that the charge would be illegal."

The sum expended for the maintenance of the poor of England, in the year ending 25th March, 1830, was £6,553,443. For Wales, the sum for that year was £275,598. Although the population since 1750 has only about doubled itself, the poor-rates have increased since that year more than ten-fold. The sum expended for the poor of Middlesex, in 1830, was £675,285; next to this came Kent, though only the sixth county in the order of population; then Norfolk, though only the ninth in population. The ratio of the poor-rates of the ten principal manufacturing counties to their population was about as 1 to 3; that of the thirteen metropolitan and other counties about one-half; and that of the nineteen agricultural counties as about 2 to 3. The chief burden of pauperism, therefore, falls upon the agricultural districts.—A new system of poor laws has now been in operation for several years, and has produced a very great diminution in the amount of the assessments levied for the support of the poor throughout England and Wales.

The following is a statement of the amount of money levied by assessment for poor's rate and county rate in England and Wales, in the years ended 25th March 1832, 1833, 1834, 1835, and 1836 respectively; and also of the amount of money expended in the same period, distinguishing the payments made for the relief of the poor, the sums expended in suits of law, removal of paupers, &c., the sums expended in county rate, and the sums expended for all other purposes; and specifying the rate of increase or decrease, as compared with the year preceding:—

Years.	Total Money levied.	Expended for Relief of the Poor.	Expended in Suits of Law, Removals, &c.	Payments for or towards the County-Rate.	Expended for all other Purposes.	Total of Parochial Rates Expended.	Increase per Cent.	Decrease per Cent.
1832	£8,622,920	£7,036,969	£ . . .	£ . . .	£1,646,492	£8,683,461	4	—
1833	8,606,501	6,790,800	254,412	. . .	1,694,670	8,739,882	—	—
1834	8,338,079	6,317,255	258,604	. . .	1,713,489	8,289,348	—	7
1835	7,373,807	5,526,418	202,527	705,711	935,362	7,370,018	—	13
1836	6,356,345	4,719,238	172,482	699,952	823,241	6,414,912	—	15

From the last report of the poor-law commissioners up to the 25th of March, 1837, comparing the results with those of 1834, it appears that a diminution has been effected in the expenditure for the relief of the poor for England and Wales, amounting to £2,702,481; or a saving at the rate of 36 per cent. Much of the saving appears by the return to have been made under the head of law-charges, removals of paupers, and travelling expenses of overseers, items which, in the year 1834, amounted to the enormous sum of £258,604. In 1837 the charge under these heads is £126,951, a difference of more than 50 per cent. The poor rates, in 1834, were equivalent to a tax of more than ten shillings a-head upon the whole population of the country, men, women, and children. In the body of our work much attention has been paid to the subject of the poor-rates of different districts and parishes.

CHAP. IX.—POPULATION.

THE total population of England and Wales, according to the census taken in 1831, was 13,894,574. The following list exhibits the progress of the population of England and Wales, in decennary periods, from the year 1700:—

In the year 1700, Population, 5,475,000	In the year 1770, Population, 7,428,000
1710, 5,240,000	1780, 7,953,000
1720, 5,565,000	1790, 8,675,000
1730, 5,796,000	1801, 8,872,960
1740, 6,064,000	1811, 10,163,676
1750, 6,167,000	1821, 11,978,075
1760, 6,736,000	1831, 13,894,574

It is proper to observe, that we cannot place entire reliance on any of the above enumerations excepting the four last. An actual enumeration, from survey, or census, is the only mode of ascertaining the population of a country that can be depended upon; but this is a national measure, and can be carried into effect only through the interposition of government; and it was not until 1801 that the sanction of government was obtained for this purpose. The first method which seems to have presented itself to our statist for ascertaining the probable amount of the population of England, was to enumerate the houses, and then to multiply the houses by what might be supposed to be the average number of persons occupying a house. Previously to the Revolution, a hearth-duty, or tax proportioned to the number of fire-places in a house, was payable by all houses in the kingdom; and since the Revolution, the number of houses was inferred from the returns made by the collectors of the house and window-duties. It is quite clear, however, that neither of these modes could afford very certain data for the calculation in question.* The books containing the returns of hearth-money have been lost; and there can be little doubt that the negligence or partiality of the collectors of this duty would often operate to render these returns very erroneous or defective. Again, as to the assessed taxes, the collectors were only required to make out and return to the commissioners lists of the houses within their respective districts chargeable with the duties in question; but all cottages exempted from the usual taxes to church and poor, were also exempted from the house and window-duties; and, consequently, little dependence could be placed on such returns, as affording data for estimating the total population of the kingdom. The carelessness or connivance of the officers would operate in this case also to render their returns incorrect or defective.

The registers of births and burials that are kept in most places, have been resorted to as a means by which to estimate the magnitude of the population; but these registers—previous to the passing of the act for registering births, deaths, and marriages—were seldom either complete or accurate; and as a means of ascertaining the progress of the population throughout the kingdom, must be regarded as totally inadequate and misleading.† Even in the case of a census, many precautions—such as it is scarcely possible to get adopted—are requisite to insure perfect accuracy; and there is good reason to think, that, while the last four censuses furnish much nearer approximations to the truth than any other mode formerly devised for ascertaining the amount and classes of the population, they have never yet been perfectly accurate in their results. The census of 1801, in particular, excited a good deal of foolish suspicion in the minds of less-informed people, who viewed it in the light of a preliminary step towards some severe and comprehensive plan of taxation, or as some new scheme with respect to the levy of the militia. These prejudices had nearly disappeared in 1811, and were not encountered at all in 1821; still there were many obvious sources of error in some departments of the returns, and some districts actually made no returns at all. But there can be no doubt whatever, that the population of England and Wales has been regularly increasing for the last two centuries. The rate of this increase between 1801 and 1811, was 14½ per cent.; between 1811 and 1821, 17½ per cent.; between 1821 and 1831, 16.01 per cent.; and between 1801 and 1831, 16.13 decennially. The increase of the forty English counties, taken together, since 1700, has been 154 per cent.; and that of the twelve Welsh counties, 117 per cent. Assuming that the latter rate of increase, which differs so slightly from that of the whole 30 years, has continued from 1831 to 1838, it will result from calculation that the population of England and Wales on January 1, 1838 (the middle of the first year of registration ending June 30, 1838), was about 15,324,720.

* A famous controversy was carried on during the latter part of the American war between Dr Price on the one side, and Mr Wales and Mr Howlett on the other, with respect to the population of England. Dr Price maintained that it had gradually decreased from the Revolution downwards, and that the ratio of decrease had increased during the twenty years ending with 1780. The laws which govern the increase of population were against Dr Price's conclusion; but these were little known at the time; and, as to facts themselves, it is sufficient to show how little dependence could be placed on the methods of approximation then in use, to state that while Dr Price estimated the population of England, in 1777, to be only 4,763,670, Mr Howlett, proceeding upon another principle of computation, calculated the population, in 1780, to be 8,691,600!

† The earliest of the parish-registers date from the establishment of the church of England; injunctions to that effect having been issued by Cromwell, Henry's vicegerent for ecclesiastical jurisdiction, in 1538. The canons of the church, now in force, date their authority from the beginning of the reign of James I., A. D. 1603. One of these prescribes minutely in what manner entries are to be made in the parish-registers, and contains also a retrospective clause, appointing that the ancient registers, as far as they could be procured, should be copied into a parchment book. This new regulation appears to have been carried into full effect, so that the only parish-register books now extant are usually transcripts, commencing with Queen Elizabeth's reign. The parish-register act of 1812 obviated some of the previous sources of error, and insured the further usefulness of the registers from that period. But a satisfactory system of registration was not established until the year 1837, when the act for registering births, deaths, and burials came into operation in England and Wales. From the Second Annual Report of the Registrar-general—which bears date, June, 1840, but only brings up the results of the registration to June 30, 1839—it appears that the register of births is considerably more complete than the old parochial registers of baptisms; for on a calculation of the number likely to have been entered in the parochial registers for the year ending June, 1839, founded on the numbers ascertained to have been entered there in former years, it appears that 20,000 more births have been registered in the General Register than in those old records. The register of deaths is believed to be very complete. Comparing the present returns with those for the ten years ending 1830, the Registrar-general infers, that fully 20,000 deaths were omitted annually under the old system. This accounts for the extremely small annual mortality of 1 in 50 attributed to England by some writers, who took the facts as they stood, without inquiring into their accuracy.

The following table exhibits the rate of increase in each county of England and Wales since 1801 :—

POPULATION RETURNS.—ENGLAND.

COUNTIES OF	1801.	Increase per Cent.	1811.	Increase per Cent.	1821.	Increase per Cent.	1831.
Bedford	68,393	11	70,213	19	83,716	14	95,993
Berks	109,215	8	118,277	11	131,977	10	145,289
Buckingham . . .	107,444	9	117,650	14	134,068	9	146,529
Cambridge	89,846	13	101,109	20	121,009	18	143,955
Chester	191,751	18	227,031	19	270,098	24	334,410
Cornwall	188,269	15	216,667	19	257,447	17	302,440
Cumberland	117,230	14	133,744	17	156,124	10	169,681
Derby	161,142	15	186,487	15	213,333	11	237,170
Devon	343,001	12	393,308	15	439,040	13	494,168
Dorset	115,319	8	124,693	16	144,499	10	159,252
Durham	160,361	11	177,623	17	207,673	22	243,827
Essex	226,437	11	252,473	15	289,424	10	317,233
Gloucester	250,809	12	285,514	18	335,843	15	386,904
Hereford	89,191	5	94,073	10	103,243	7	110,976
Hertford	97,577	14	111,654	16	129,714	10	143,541
Huntingdon	37,568	12	42,208	15	48,771	9	53,149
Kent	307,624	21	373,095	14	426,016	12	479,155
Lancaster	672,731	23	828,309	27	1,052,859	27	1,336,854
Leicester	130,081	16	150,419	16	174,571	13	197,003
Lincoln	208,557	14	237,891	19	283,058	12	317,244
Middlesex	818,129	17	933,276	20	1,144,531	19	1,358,541
Monmouth	45,582	36	62,127	15	71,838	36	98,130
Norfolk	273,371	7	291,999	18	344,368	13	390,054
Northampton . . .	131,757	7	141,353	15	162,483	10	179,276
Northumberland . .	157,101	9	172,161	15	198,965	12	222,912
Nottingham	140,360	16	162,900	15	186,873	20	225,320
Oxford	109,260	9	119,191	15	136,971	11	151,726
Rutland	16,356	—	16,380	13	18,487	5	19,385
Salop	167,639	16	194,293	6	206,153	8	222,503
Somerset	273,750	12	303,180	17	355,314	13	403,908
Southampton . . .	219,656	12	245,080	15	283,298	11	314,313
Stafford	239,153	21	295,153	17	315,895	19	410,485
Suffolk	210,431	11	234,211	15	270,542	9	296,304
Surrey	269,043	20	323,851	23	393,658	22	466,326
Sussex	159,311	19	190,083	22	233,019	17	272,328
Warwick	208,190	10	228,735	20	274,392	23	330,988
Westmorland	41,617	10	45,922	12	51,359	7	55,041
Wills	185,107	5	193,823	15	222,157	8	239,181
Worcester	139,333	15	160,546	15	184,424	15	211,356
York (E. Riding) . .	110,992	16	134,437	14	154,040	10	168,046
City of York and Ainstey } York (N. Riding) } York (W. Riding) }	24,393 158,225 565,282	12 7 16	27,304 169,391 655,042	12 11 22	30,451 187,482 801,274	17 2 22	35,392 190,873 976,415
	8,331,434	14	9,551,888	17	11,261,437	16	13,069,338

1,371,206

WALES.

COUNTIES OF	1801.	Increase per Cent.	1811.	Increase per Cent.	1821.	Increase per Cent.	1831.
Anglesey	33,806	10	37,045	21	45,063	7	48,325
Brecon	31,633	19	37,735	16	43,603	10	47,763
Cardigan	42,956	17	50,960	15	57,784	10	64,780
Carmarthen	67,317	15	77,217	17	90,239	12	100,655
Carmarvon	41,521	19	49,336	17	57,958	15	65,753
Denbigh	60,352	6	64,240	19	76,511	8	83,167
Flint	39,622	17	46,518	15	53,784	11	60,012
Glamorgan	71,525	18	85,067	19	101,737	24	125,612
Merioneth	27,506	4	30,924	11	34,382	3	35,609
Montgomery	47,978	8	51,931	15	60,899	9	66,485
Pembroke	56,290	7	60,615	22	74,009	9	81,424
Radnor	19,060	9	20,900	7	22,459	9	24,651
	541,546	13	611,788	17	717,436	12	806,236

The following table exhibits the progressive increase of the ten principal towns of England :—

	1801.	1811.	1821.	1831.
London,	864,845	1,009,546	1,225,691	1,474,069
Manchester, Salford, and suburbs,	94,876	115,874	161,635	237,832
Liverpool,	79,722	100,240	131,801	189,244
Birmingham and suburbs,	73,670	85,753	106,721	142,251
Bristol and suburbs,	63,645	76,433	87,779	103,886
Leeds,	53,162	62,534	83,796	123,393
Plymouth, Devonport, and Stonehouse,	43,194	56,060	61,212	75,634
Portsmouth, with Portsea, and Gosport,	43,461	52,769	56,020	63,026
Norwich,	36,832	37,253	50,233	61,116
Newcastle-on-Tyne, with Gateshead,	36,963	36,369	46,948	57,937

Rate of Mortality.—The increase in the duration of human life in England and Wales is remarkable. Notwithstanding the great increase of population between 1780 and 1800, Mr Rickman states, that the annual average number of burials did not differ materially during that period.† From the parish-register returns of the decennial periods of the greater part of the last century, or from 1700 to 1780—which vary from one death in 31 to one death in 42—the average rate of mortality is deduced to have been one death in 37 or 38 of the existing population. This becomes one in 45, in the year 1790; one in 48, in 1800; one in 54, in 1810; and one in 60, in England and Wales, in the ten years preceding 1820. These results, however, are comparative, not absolute; for the registers of burials were kept with different degrees of accuracy in different places.

The Registrar-General thus reports on the rate of mortality in England and Wales:—“I am aware that with a progressive population, and especially with a population of which the ratio of increase appears to have varied so considerably in different parts of the kingdom—varying between the years 1821 and 1831, from 2 per cent. in the north riding of Yorkshire, to 36 per cent. in Monmouthshire—an attempt to form a table of mortality, showing the expectation of life at successive ages, deduced alone from the abstracts of deaths for a single year, must be attended with great risk of error. I shall, therefore, not attempt to form any such table from such materials, but shall exhibit only recorded facts, accompanied with such deductions as are clear and unimpeachable, and may serve to render comparison more easy. The largest and most important collection of facts relative to deaths at various ages made hitherto in this country, is the table given in the preface to the population-returns for 1831, containing the ages of 3,938,496 persons—of whom 1,996,195 were males, 1,942,301 females—buried in England and Wales during 18 years, 1813–1830. In the subjoined table, I have afforded the means of comparing the result of this registration of burials with those of the registration of deaths for the year ending June 30, 1838, reducing each to the same denomination, and exhibiting their respective proportions to a common total. The difference between them will be found to consist chiefly in the larger proportion of deaths of infants, which appear in the registration of deaths—a difference which was to be expected; for it was known that it was in the record of such deaths that the registration of burials was principally deficient.

Table showing the proportion of Deaths at different Ages, out of 10,000 Deaths of Males, of Females, and of both Sexes, according to the Registers of Burials in 1813–1830, and according to the Registers of Deaths for the Year ending June 30, 1838.

Age.	REGISTERS OF BURIALS.			REGISTERS OF DEATHS.
	Males.	Females.	Both Sexes.	Males.	Females.	Both Sexes.
Under 1 year.	2,188	1,756	1,975	2,339	1,933	2,140
1 to 4	1,498	1,450	1,474	1,742	1,780	2,760
5 — 9	437	410	424	457	462	460
10 — 19	579	636	607	554	647	599
20 — 29	724	839	781	738	833	785

* As a matter of historical curiosity, we subjoin the population of some of these towns in the year 1377, when an enumeration was made on account of a poll-tax :—

London, 35,000	Plymouth, 7,000	Newcastle-on-Tyne, 4,000
Bristol, 9,000	Norwich, 6,000	Oxford, 3,500

In that remote age, the total population of England was estimated at 2,300,000; but the proportion of town-population was far smaller than at present, since the number of towns containing above 3,000 inhabitants was only eighteen.

† Prelim. Remarks to Census of 1821, p. 26.

Age.	REGISTERS OF BURIALS.			REGISTERS OF DEATHS.
	Males.	Females.	Both Sexes.	Males.	Females.	Both Sexes.
30 to 39	621	725	672	655	715	683
40 — 49	649	670	659	653	632	643
50 — 59	715	684	700	656	621	638
60 — 69	911	922	917	813	823	819
70 — 79	1,012	1,086	1,949	830	883	856
80 — 89	584	700	641	473	556	514
90 and upwards.	75	116	95	94	115	104

Among the diversities which especially demand attention are those which relate to longevity, showing the varying proportions of deaths in old age, in different portions of the kingdom. From a few instances of extreme longevity no inference can be safely drawn; but the fact that of the deaths in any district a comparatively large proportion is above the age of 70, is a strong presumption in favour of the health of that district. These proportions will be found to vary greatly. In the whole of England and Wales, according to the Registrar-general's first report, out of 1,000 deaths, 145 were at the age of 70 and upwards; while in the north riding and northern part of the west riding of Yorkshire and in Durham—except in the mining districts—the proportion was as high as 210. In Northumberland—excluding the mining district—in Cumberland, Westmoreland, and the north of Lancashire, the proportion was 198; in Norfolk and Suffolk 196; in Devonshire 192; and in Cornwall 188. In the metropolis and its suburbs the proportion was only 104; and even this proportion is favourable when compared with that of other large towns—the proportion in Birmingham being 81, in Leeds 79, and in Liverpool and Manchester only about 63. A very marked diversity also appeared in the proportion of deaths of infants in different parts of the country. In the mining parts of Staffordshire and Shropshire, in Leeds and its suburbs, and in Cambridgeshire, Huntingdonshire, and the lowland parts of Lincolnshire, the deaths of infants under one year were more than 270 out of 1,000 deaths at all ages; while in the northern counties of England, in Wiltshire, Dorsetshire, and Devonshire, in Herefordshire, and Monmouthshire, and in Wales, the deaths at that age out of 1,000 at all ages scarcely exceed 180. The tables of deaths in the Registrar-general's report for the year ending June 30, 1839, show a much greater mortality among infants in towns than in the country, and in some towns than in others. Inferences, however, must not be too hastily drawn from these isolated facts as to the salubrity of the place. In districts where the population is rapidly increasing, the proportion of children living is much greater than in those where it is stationary, and hence the actual mortality among 1,000 children of any particular age may be the same in two districts while the apparent mortality is very different.

The diminution of mortality, though great everywhere, has been most conspicuous in towns. According to the bills of mortality, it appears that the rate of mortality in London, at the beginning of last century, was less than it afterwards became. It increased from 1700 to 1720, and seems to have attained its maximum in the period from 1720 to 1750. Mr. Rickman states, that the annual mortality in London towards the middle of last century was as high as one in 20! But from about 1770, a decided improvement commenced; and in 1800, the mortality had declined to one in 32; in 1820, it did not exceed one in 40. The rate of mortality in Manchester, in 1770, was one in 28; whereas, at present, it is not supposed to exceed one in 45. In 1773, the proportion of deaths to the whole population in Liverpool, was as one to 27.25; but in 1821, the deaths were only in the ratio of one to 44.8. Making allowance for the increase of the population, the Registrar computes the proportional annual mortality to be as follows:—

	Males.	Females.	Both.
1837–1838, . . .	1 in 44.5	1 in 47.5	1 in 46
1838–1839, . . .	1 in 45.7	1 in 49.	1 in 47.3.
Mean of 2 years, . . .	1 in 45.1	1 in 48.2	1 in 46.6.

Allowing 2 per cent. for omissions in the registers of deaths, he thinks the mean mortality may be about 1 in 46. The causes of this remarkable improvement in the duration of human life in England are various: houses less crowded, better clothing, and more cleanliness of habits, cannot have been without some effect; and to these may be added, the increased extent of drainage, which must have acted beneficially on the health of the agricultural population. The improved treatment of diseases is also another powerful cause.

Diseases.—From the Registrar-general's first report it appears that the diseases of different parts of the kingdom differ very much in intensity. It appears that in 1831, the population of the Metropolitan division, including Greenwich, was 1,594,890; and the population of five counties—Cornwall, Somersetshire, Wiltshire, Dorsetshire, and Devonshire—was nearly the same, or 1,599,024. The total deaths in the metropolis amounted to 24,959; in the counties, only to 15,210. The deaths in 24 city-districts, including Manchester, Liverpool, &c., were 22,994; in seven counties, with nearly the same population, the deaths only amounted to 14,473.

Deaths by Twelve Classes of Fatal Diseases in City and in County Districts.

	CITIES.	COUNTIES.
Estimated population, Oct. 1, 1837	3,553,161	3,500,750
Epidemic, endemic, and contagious diseases	12,766	6,045
Sporadic diseases—of the nervous system	7,705	3,607
respiratory organs	12,619	7,847
organs of circulation	590	309
digestive organs	3,476	1,832
urinary organs	219	161
organs of generation	460	265
organs of locomotion	262	154
integumentary system	62	55
of uncertain seat	4,306	3,730
Age	2,924	3,102
Violent deaths	1,370	929
Not specified	1,104	1,657
Total	47,953	29,693

The concentration of the population in cities doubles the deaths from the two first classes of disease; the ratio of deaths having been as 1 to 2.11, and 1 to 2.13. The augmentation in the latter class occurs principally in convulsions and hydrocephalus:—Deaths by convulsions, counties 1,347; cities 3,723; ratio 1:2.76; by hydrocephalus, counties 559; cities 1,540; ratio 1:2.75. The three following diseases, which principally affect adults between the ages of 15 and 65, show that unhealthy places augment the fatality of diseases in different degrees:—

	COUNTIES.	CITIES.	INCREASE PER CENT. IN CITIES.
Deaths by consumption	5,857	8,125	39
— childbirth	217	372	71
— typhus	1,564	3,456	221

The occupations in cities are not more laborious than agriculture, and the great mass of the town population have constant exercise and employment; their wages are higher, their dwellings as good, their clothing as warm, and their food certainly as substantial as that of the agricultural labourer. The Poor-law inquiry, and successive Parliamentary committees, have shown that the families of agricultural labourers subsist upon a minimum of animal food, and an adequate supply of bread and potatoes. The source of the higher mortality in cities is, therefore, in the insalubrity of the atmosphere. It will be found, ceteris paribus, that the mortality increases as the density of the population increases; and where the density and the affluence are the same, that the rate of mortality depends upon the efficiency of the ventilation, and of the means which are employed for the removal of impurities. It is stated that the general adoption throughout the country of sanitary measures which are in actual but partial operation would probably reduce the annual number of deaths in England and Wales by 30,000; and diminish the numbers constantly disabled by sickness in the same proportion.

CHAP. X.—STATE OF EDUCATION.

In the session of 1816, the house of commons appointed a committee to institute inquiries respecting the education of the poor, of which Mr Henry Brougham was named chairman. In 1816-17-18, and 19, that committee made various bulky reports, each report consisting of several hundred pages of evidence, documents, &c., a digest of which was published in 1821, which gave the following results and grand totals for England and Wales :—

ENGLAND.

Number of endowed schools, with a revenue of £300,525	4,167
Scholars	165,433
Unendowed day-schools	14,282
Scholars	478,849
Sunday schools	5,162
Scholars	452,817

Out of the grand total of children then educating in England, being 644,282, there were 321,764 who paid for their education, while 322,518 were educated free of expense.

WALES.

Endowed schools, with a revenue of £5,817	209
Scholars	7,625
Unendowed day-schools	572
Scholars	22,976
Sunday schools	301
Scholars	24,409

Out of the total number of children educated in the Welsh day-schools, as 30,601, there were 17,283 who paid, while 13,318 were instructed free of expense. The report stated that the number of unendowed schools, and the number of children attending them, varied from year to year; but there was every reason to believe that they were upon the increase, and had been augmented considerably since 1818, when most of the returns above digested were made. In fact, since the date of these returns—a period of 20 years—extraordinary exertions have been used by all parties to promote the education of the people.

In 1838, another committee of the house of commons made an interesting report on the education of the poorer classes in England and Wales, of which the following is an abstract:—The committee commence their report by stating that “they are convinced that, however inadequate the present system of instruction for the humbler classes may be in many districts, it is owing almost entirely to the laudable and persevering efforts throughout the country, of benevolent individuals, that anything at all worthy the name of education has been afforded to the children of the working-classes in large towns. In some places schools are supported almost entirely by the bounty of one or two persons; in other districts, individuals, led by religious or charitable motives, have formed themselves into school-societies; have subscribed (often from restricted means); have given their time and attention to the establishment of schools for the poor, and have thereby done much good.” The committee go on to say they “lament that the materials are so scanty which are afforded them for giving an account of the present state of education of the humbler classes. Until very recently the subject appears to have entirely escaped the attention of government. There appear to be no returns to parliament of any authority on this point, nor indeed are there at present adequate means of making them. The returns made to queries sent out by the committee on education of 1835, are found to be incorrect as well as defective. And on this matter, important as it is to the welfare of all classes, there seem to exist no sources of information in any department of government.” Under these circumstances, the committee had recourse to such means as were within their power, viz. :—The annual reports of the National and of the British and Foreign School societies; the Reports printed by the Statistical society of Manchester, of the state of education in the towns of Manchester, Liverpool, Salford, Bolton, York, Bury, and by the Statistical society of Birmingham. Returns of the state of education in several parishes in Westminster, printed by the Statistical society of London; and, generally, such other returns on the state of education in large towns as they deemed worthy of credit. In addition to these sources of information, they issued a set of queries, in a tabular form, in order to find what was the state of education in several large towns. Before stating the results of their inquiries,” the report proceeds, “your committee would observe, on looking to the population-returns, which have been referred to by the Manchester Statistical society, it appears that one-fourth the population of any given place may be considered as children, between the ages of 5 and 15, and this is the class for whom many persons seem to think education should be provided. Your committee however believe, that as regards the children of the working classes—more especially those residing in large towns—it would be as much as would be desirable, to afford them the means of instruction until the age of 13; but, on the other hand, it would be of the utmost consequence, as respects their future conduct and happiness, and the comfort of their families, that preparatory or infant-schools, in populous districts, should be open for the reception of children from the age of three years. The numbers between 3 and 13 would be rather more than between 5 and 15; but may, for the convenience of calculation, be reckoned in round numbers as the same, or one-fourth the population. From these would remain to be deducted all the children of the richer or middle classes, and the proportion of these, it must be evident, will vary considerably in different towns and districts.* Large allowance must yet be made for those who, from obtaining early employment, or assisting their parents at home, are prevented attending school, and this number will depend in some measure on the poverty or habit of the district. In the great Lancashire towns, and other manufacturing districts, it is the custom for many children, between the ages of 9 and 13, to work in factories for at least eight hours per day. After making all these deductions, and reasonable allowances for other causes of absence, your committee have come to a general conclusion, that it would be necessary to provide daily school-education for more than one-eighth the population of any large town. If the instruction given was in some classes confined to a few hours' attendance morning or evening, the proportion expected to come might be somewhat larger; if extending nearly to the whole day, it would probably be less. As a general, though not invariable rule, your committee would conclude that it was desirable to provide efficient daily school education in all populous towns for one-eighth the population.†

“Having thus stated the amount of education, which it appears important to attain, they now proceed to give what they consider to be a fair calculation of the numbers who now are enabled to attend school in the large towns of England. For the purpose of attaining greater accuracy, your committee have endeavoured to calculate,

1st. The numbers of children attending schools in the Metropolis, and their proportion to the population.

2d. The numbers in the large manufacturing towns which have recently much increased in size; and in some second-rate towns, where there are no extensive manufactures, and where the increase of population has been slower.

“There being no authentic returns of the number of schools or scholars in the Metropolis, your committee give an abstract of such information as has been laid before them for particular districts, and a calculation thence resulting for the whole.

“By an accurate return, printed by the Statistical society of London in 1837, it appears that in five parishes of Westminster, having a population in 1831 of 42,996, there are

Attending Sunday-schools only	666
Attending Daily schools, supported solely by the scholars	2,231
Attending Daily schools, supported or aided by charity, including Infant-schools	1,789
Attending Evening-schools only	84
Daily scholars	4,104

From this number of 4,104 will be to be deducted 1,035 attending middling or superior schools; and the remainder, 3,069, will be the number of children of the poorer classes receiving any kind of daily instruction in these parishes. Of these 3,069, 1,024 are attending Dame or common Day-schools; of these schools the Report thus speaks:—‘The information acquired in these schools cannot be said to amount to education; it can have but little effect in expanding the minds of the scholars, in teaching them to observe

* The proportion which the working-classes bear to the whole population appears to vary as follows, in six towns examined:—

Borough of Manchester	64 per cent.
Salford	74
Bury	71
Ashton	81
Staleybridge	91
Duckenfield	94

† This is taken independent of instruction in Sunday schools, which your committee do not advert to at length, but which they consider of great advantage to the working-classes, though not supplying the want of daily instruction.

or to reflect, or in giving them a desire for further knowledge; and it can exercise but little influence in forming their moral characters, beyond what may possibly be produced by the restraint consequent upon attendance at school." It appears, as a general result, that in these five parishes some sort of daily instruction is afforded to about one in 14 of the population, instead of one in 8. It must also be borne in mind, that such is the imperfect nature of the education supposed to be given in the common day and dame-schools, that in many instances it may be left almost out of account. If these be omitted, then the amount of instruction given in public schools will stand thus:—

Parish.	Population in 1881.	Scholars 1883.
Christ Church, Spitalfields	17,949	1,338
St. Mary, Whitechapel	30,733	845
St. George in the East	38,505	1,110
St. John, Wapping, &c.	3,564	450
St. Mary, Newington	44,526	1,247
St. Mary, Bermondsey	29,741	1,055
Christ Church, Surrey	13,705	678

Average, one in 27 of the population, without allowing for the deficiency in attendance—calculated at 15 per cent.—or for the increase in numbers since 1831. With respect to the state of education in the large manufacturing and seaport-towns, where the population has rapidly increased within the present century; the committee report the following results:—"1st. That the kind of education given to the children of the working-classes is lamentably deficient. 2d. That it extends—bad as it is—to but a small proportion of those who ought to receive it. 3d. That without some strenuous and persevering efforts be made on the part of government, the greatest evils to all classes may follow from this neglect."

PLACE.	Population.	Children of Working Classes at Daily Schools: viz.		TOTAL.
		Day and Dame Schools very Indifferent.	Other better Schools.
1836. Liverpool	230,000	11,336	14,024	25,000
1834. Manchester.....	200,000	11,520	5,680	17,100
1835. Salford.....	50,810	3,340	2,015	5,350
— Bury.....	20,000	1,648	803	2,451
1835. { Ashton..... } { Duckenfield..... } { Staley Bridge..... }	47,800	2,496
1837. Birmingham	180,000	8,180	4,697	12,877
1837. Bristol	112,438 not including scholars in private schools.....	5 to 15	4,133
		Total.....	5,254
1838. Brighton..... { B. & F. } { National }	40,634 in 1831	{ 1,367 863	{ 3,033 3,247	{ 4,400 4,110
1837. West Bromwich..... of 6,375 children under 14 years old.	1,554
1838. Leeds B. & F.	123,393 in 1831 no return of dame or day, but only public schools.	2,971	—
1838. Sheffield.....	96,692 in 1831	3,359	5,905	9,314
Northampton { B. & F. } { National }	20,000	{ 1,011 996	{ 1,215 1,202	{ 2,226 2,198
Reading..... B. & F.	15,595 in 1831	297	962	1,259
Exeter	28,242 in 1831	2,045	1,830 including evening.	3,875
1836. York.....	25,359 in 1831	1,494	2,697	4,191

The general result of all these towns is, that about one in 12 receive some sort of daily instruction, but only about one in 24 an education likely to be useful. In Leeds, only one in 41; in Birmingham, one in 38; in Manchester, one in 35. The deficient education of the people is very decisively proved by the great number of persons married who have signed their marks, in the Register of Marriages, from inability to write their names. The average proportion per cent. who signed their marks in the year ending June 30, 1839, in England and Wales, is 33 per cent. of the men, and 49 per cent. of the women,—showing the women to be more uneducated than the men. Out of 121,083 couples married, there were 40,587 men and 58,959 women who could not sign their names! Here is ample room, indeed, for the schoolmaster!

CHAP. XI.—ECCLESIASTICAL STATISTICS.

THE ecclesiastical government of England is divided into two provinces: viz., Canterbury and York, which have the following suffragan bishoprics appertaining to them respectively:

Province of Canterbury.—Canterbury, London, Winchester, Litchfield and Coventry, Lincoln, Ely, Salisbury, Exeter, Bath and Wells, Chichester, Norwich, Worcester, Hereford, Rochester, Oxford, Peterborough, Gloucester and Bristol, Llandaff, St David's, St Asaph, Bangor.

Province of York.—York, Durham, Carlisle, Chester, Ripon, and Man.

Until the time of Theodore, who was consecrated archbishop of Canterbury by Pope Vitalian, A. D. 668, there was but one bishopric in each of the six kingdoms of the Saxon heptarchy which had embraced the Christian religion, with the exception of Kent which had two. Some of these bishoprics were of great extent, particularly that of York, which comprehended all the countries between the river Humber and the frith of Forth. Egfred, king of Northumberland, prevailed on Theodore to consecrate two new bishops for the Northumbrian territories. The new bishops were Bosa, who was fixed at York, and Eata, who had his episcopal residence at Lindisfarne. Not long after, two more bishops were consecrated for the Northumbrian kingdom, of whom one was fixed at Hexham, and another at Abercorn, then within the kingdom of Northumberland.* The bishopric of Mercia, which was seated at Litchfield, and comprehended all the dominions of the Mercian kings, was dismembered about A. D. 680; and out of it no fewer than four bishoprics were erected, viz., those of Worcester, Leicester, Hereford, and Sydnacester.† On the conversion of the kingdom of Sussex, a bishop's see was founded at Selsey, which was afterwards removed to Chichester.‡ The venerable historian, Bede, when concluding his history of the church of England (A. D. 731), acquaints us that it was then governed by sixteen bishops, who had their seats at the following places:—Canterbury, Rochester, London, Dunwich, Helmham, Winchester, Sherburn, Litchfield, Leicester, Hereford, Worcester, Sydnacester, York, Holy Island, Hexham, Withern. The consecration of Sigelm, bishop of Selsey, a few years after, made the number of bishops in England before the middle of the 8th century, seventeen. At the Conquest, Canterbury and York were archiepiscopal sees; and the following cities were the central places of bishops' dioceses: London, Winchester, Chichester, Rochester, Salisbury, Bath and Wells, Exeter, Worcester, Hereford, Coventry and Litchfield, Lincoln, Norwich, and Durham. In 1109, Henry I., to gratify the abbot of Ely, freed him from the authority of the bishop of Lincoln, and erected Ely into a bishopric. The same king founded the see of Carlisle in 1133. No other change was made for several centuries. On the surrender of the monasteries, Lord Cromwell brought a bill into the house of peers to empower the king to erect new bishoprics, deanries, and colleges, by letters patent, and endow them out of the revenues of the suppressed monasteries. A draught of the preamble of this bill, written in the king's own hand, is still extant, to which is annexed, in the same hand, a scheme of eighteen new bishoprics, and as many deanries. But before Henry proceeded to execute his scheme, he had granted so many of the lands, and squandered so much of the money, that he could not perform what he had projected; and, in virtue of the above act, he erected only six new bishoprics at the following places:—Westminster, Oxford, Peterborough, Bristol, Chester, Gloucester. These sees were all founded in the course of the years 1540, 1541, and 1542.§ The see of Westminster was only separated from the diocese of London about nine years. The bishoprics of Gloucester and Bristol have been united since 1836. In that year the see of Ripon was created; and there exists an order in council creating Manchester a bishop's see whenever a vacancy shall occur in either of the sees of Bangor and St Asaph, which are to be united. The history and settlement of the bishoprics of England and Wales, will be best detailed under the head of each bishopric in the body of our work.

Rank and Functions of Archbishops and Bishops.—All the English bishops are peers of the realm, except the bishop of Man; and as such, they sit and vote in the house of lords. They are barons in a threefold manner: viz., feudal, in regard to the temporalities annexed to their bishoprics; by writ, as being summoned by writ to parliament; and lastly, by patent and creation. Accordingly, they have the precedence of all other barons, and

* Bedæ, lib. iv. c. 12.

† Bedæ, lib. iv. c. 13.

‡ Higden Polychron. p. 241.

§ Rym. tom. xvi. p. 795.

rank next to viscounts. The archbishop of Canterbury is the first peer in Great Britain next to the royal family; and the archbishop of York is the third; the lord high-chancellor taking rank betwixt them. The archbishop of Canterbury writes himself, "By Divine Providence, Primate of all England;" the archbishop of York, "By Divine Permission, Primate of England." The bishops of London, Durham, and Winchester, have precedence of all other bishops; the others rank according to seniority of consecration. The function of a bishop in England may be considered as twofold; viz., what belongs to his order, and what belongs to his jurisdiction. To the episcopal order belong the ceremonies of dedication, confirmation, and ordination; to the episcopal jurisdiction, by the statute law, belong the licensing of physicians, surgeons, and schoolmasters—the uniting small parishes, assisting the civil magistrate in the execution of statutes relating to ecclesiastical matters, and compelling the payment of tithes and subsidies due from the clergy. By the common law, the bishop is to certify the judges, touching legitimate and illegitimate births and marriages; and by that and the ecclesiastical law, he is to take care of the probate of wills and granting administrations, to collate to benefices, grant institutions on the presentation of other patrons, command induction, order the collecting and preserving the profits of vacant benefices for the use of the successors, defend the liberties of the church, and visit his diocese once in three years. To the bishop also belongs the powers of suspension, deprivation, deposition, degradation, and excommunication.

Minor Dignitaries and Inferior clergy.—Besides archbishops and bishops, there are deans and prebendaries, who assist the bishop in the duties of his office; and archdeacons, who induct into benefices, reform abuses of smaller importance, and inspect the property of the church. The inferior clergy consist of rectors or priests, where the tithes are entire; vicars, where the tithes are in secular hands; and curates, who perform the ordinary duties of a priest in the place of one who has several benefices. The lowest order of clergy are deacons, who are empowered only to perform the ceremony of baptism, to read in the church, and, at the communion, hand the cup to the priest. To be eligible as a deacon, the candidate must be 23 years of age; a priest must be 24; and a bishop 30. The church-wardens superintend the repairs of the church.

Ecclesiastical Revenues.—The ecclesiastical commissioners reported, in 1835, that the total amount of the gross annual revenues of the several archiepiscopal and episcopal sees in England and Wales was £181,631, affording an average of £6,727; and the total amount of the net annual revenues of the same was £160,292, affording an average of £5,936. The total amount of the gross annual revenues of the several cathedral and collegiate churches in England and Wales was £284,241, and the total amount of the net annual revenues of the same was £208,289. The total amount of the gross annual separate revenues of the several dignitaries and other spiritual persons, members of the cathedral and collegiate churches in England and Wales was £75,854; and the total amount of the net annual separate revenues of the same was £66,465. The total number of benefices, with and without cure of souls, the incumbents whereof have made returns to our inquiries, omitting those which are permanently or accustomably annexed to superior preferments, was 10,540. The total amount of the gross annual revenues of these benefices is £3,197,225, giving an average income of £303; and the total amount of the net annual revenues of the same is £3,004,721, giving an average income of £285. The total number of benefices, with and without cure of souls, in England and Wales, including those not returned, but exclusive of those annexed to other preferments, (about twenty-four in number,) is 10,718, the total gross income of which, calculated upon the average of those returned, would be £3,251,159, and the total net income thereof £3,055,451. The total number of curates returned as employed by resident incumbents was 1,006, whose annual stipends or payments in money amount to £87,075, affording an average of £86. Those employed by non-resident incumbents were 4,224; the amount of their stipends £337,620; and the average £79. And the average of the whole of the curates stipends £81. In concluding their report, the ecclesiastical commissioners state, that the archbishops and bishops, in addition to the payment of fees, first-fruits, and other charges incident to the taking possession of their preferments, are subject to heavy expenses for the support and reparation of their houses of residence; that on the archdeacons, the supervision of their archdeaconries—sometimes extending over a very large territory—entails, in many cases, an expenditure, exceeding the whole emoluments of their office; and that their costs and charges for first-fruits and fees of admission generally exceed the amount of their receipts for the first two or three years after their entering into office.

Ecclesiastical Statistics.—The number of places of religious worship, not belonging to the Established church, registered for the solemnization of marriages, in England and Wales, before January, 1839, was 1,333; in the year 1839, there have been registered 246: making a total of 1,578. The number of Dissenting, Wesleyan, and Catholic chapels in England and Wales is about 8,000. The following is a table of the Ecclesiastical statistics of England and Wales, at the close of the year 1829:—

COUNTIES.	ECCLIASTICAL JURISDICTION.	CHURCH PATRONAGE.										DISSENTING CONGREGATIONS.										SCHOOLS.
	Dioceses.	Cathedral Dignitaries.	Living in the gift of Government.	Ditto The Church.	Ditto The Universities.	Ditto Public Bodies.	Ditto Nobility and Gentry.	Ditto Inhabitants.	Total in each County.	Roman Catholics.	Presbyterians.	Independents.	Particular Baptists.	General Baptists.	Quakers.	Wesleyan Methodists.	Calvinistic Methodists.	Other Methodists.	Home Missionary and other Societies.	Total Number of Dissenting Congregations in each County.	National in Union.	British and Foreign.	Sabbath in Union.	Annual Rental and Dividends of endowed Public Charities.
Bedfordshire	Lincoln	12	16	11	18	8	64	110	110	—	—	—	—	—	—	35	—	—	—	71	863	775	3,646	10,118
Berkshire	Salisbury	12	16	11	18	8	64	110	110	—	—	—	—	—	—	35	—	—	—	71	863	775	3,646	10,118
Buckinghamshire	Salisbury	12	16	11	18	8	64	110	110	—	—	—	—	—	—	35	—	—	—	71	863	775	3,646	10,118
Burton	Salisbury	12	16	11	18	8	64	110	110	—	—	—	—	—	—	35	—	—	—	71	863	775	3,646	10,118
Cambridgeshire	Exeter	11	15	10	17	7	56	93	93	—	—	—	—	—	—	30	—	—	—	66	799	701	3,011	11,998
Canterbury	Exeter	11	15	10	17	7	56	93	93	—	—	—	—	—	—	30	—	—	—	66	799	701	3,011	11,998
Cheshire	Exeter	11	15	10	17	7	56	93	93	—	—	—	—	—	—	30	—	—	—	66	799	701	3,011	11,998
Derbyshire	Exeter	11	15	10	17	7	56	93	93	—	—	—	—	—	—	30	—	—	—	66	799	701	3,011	11,998
Devonshire	Exeter	11	15	10	17	7	56	93	93	—	—	—	—	—	—	30	—	—	—	66	799	701	3,011	11,998
Dorsetshire	Exeter	11	15	10	17	7	56	93	93	—	—	—	—	—	—	30	—	—	—	66	799	701	3,011	11,998
Gloucestershire	Gloucester and Bristol	15	20	14	22	10	80	125	125	—	—	—	—	—	—	40	—	—	—	86	1,038	941	3,830	12,320
Herefordshire	Hereford	11	15	10	17	7	56	93	93	—	—	—	—	—	—	30	—	—	—	66	799	701	3,011	11,998
Hampshire	Salisbury	12	16	11	18	8	64	110	110	—	—	—	—	—	—	35	—	—	—	71	863	775	3,646	10,118
Hants	Salisbury	12	16	11	18	8	64	110	110	—	—	—	—	—	—	35	—	—	—	71	863	775	3,646	10,118
Hertfordshire	London and Lincoln	11	15	10	17	7	56	93	93	—	—	—	—	—	—	30	—	—	—	66	799	701	3,011	11,998
Huntingdonshire	London and Lincoln	11	15	10	17	7	56	93	93	—	—	—	—	—	—	30	—	—	—	66	799	701	3,011	11,998
Leicestershire	Leicester	11	15	10	17	7	56	93	93	—	—	—	—	—	—	30	—	—	—	66	799	701	3,011	11,998
Lincolnshire	Lincoln	11	15	10	17	7	56	93	93	—	—	—	—	—	—	30	—	—	—	66	799	701	3,011	11,998
London	London	11	15	10	17	7	56	93	93	—	—	—	—	—	—	30	—	—	—	66	799	701	3,011	11,998
Middlesex	London	11	15	10	17	7	56	93	93	—	—	—	—	—	—	30	—	—	—	66	799	701	3,011	11,998
Monmouthshire	London	11	15	10	17	7	56	93	93	—	—	—	—	—	—	30	—	—	—	66	799	701	3,011	11,998
Northamptonshire	London	11	15	10	17	7	56	93	93	—	—	—	—	—	—	30	—	—	—	66	799	701	3,011	11,998
Northumberland	London	11	15	10	17	7	56	93	93	—	—	—	—	—	—	30	—	—	—	66	799	701	3,011	11,998
Nottinghamshire	London	11	15	10	17	7	56	93	93	—	—	—	—	—	—	30	—	—	—	66	799	701	3,011	11,998
Derbyshire	London	11	15	10	17	7	56	93	93	—	—	—	—	—	—	30	—	—	—	66	799	701	3,011	11,998
Shropshire	London	11	15	10	17	7	56	93	93	—	—	—	—	—	—	30	—	—	—	66	799	701	3,011	11,998
Staffordshire	London	11	15	10	17	7	56	93	93	—	—	—	—	—	—	30	—	—	—	66	799	701	3,011	11,998
Suffolk	London	11	15	10	17	7	56	93	93	—	—	—	—	—	—	30	—	—	—	66	799	701	3,011	11,998
Surrey	London	11	15	10	17	7	56	93	93	—	—	—	—	—	—	30	—	—	—	66	799	701	3,011	11,998
Warwickshire	London	11	15	10	17	7	56	93	93	—	—	—	—	—	—	30	—	—	—	66	799	701	3,011	11,998
Wiltshire	Salisbury	12	16	11	18	8	64	110	110	—	—	—	—	—	—	35	—	—	—	71	863	775	3,646	10,118
Worcestershire	Salisbury	12	16	11	18	8	64	110	110	—	—	—	—	—	—	35	—	—	—	71	863	775	3,646	10,118
Worcestershire	Salisbury	12	16	11	18	8	64	110	110	—	—	—	—	—	—	35	—	—	—	71	863	775	3,646	10,118
Worcestershire	Salisbury	12	16	11	18	8	64	110	110	—	—	—	—	—	—	35	—	—	—	71	863	775	3,646	10,118
Worcestershire	Salisbury	12	16	11	18	8	64	110	110	—	—	—	—	—	—	35	—	—	—	71	863	775	3,646	10,118
Worcestershire	Salisbury	12	16	11	18	8	64	110	110	—	—	—	—	—	—	35	—	—	—	71	863	775	3,646	10,118
Worcestershire	Salisbury	12	16	11	18	8	64	110	110	—	—	—	—	—	—	35	—	—	—	71	863	775	3,646	10,118
Worcestershire	Salisbury	12	16	11	18	8	64	110	110	—	—	—	—	—	—	35	—	—	—	71	863	775	3,646	10,118
Worcestershire	Salisbury	12	16	11	18	8	64	110	110	—	—	—	—	—	—	35	—	—	—	71	863	775	3,646	10,118
Worcestershire	Salisbury	12	16	11	18	8	64	110	110	—	—	—	—	—	—	35	—	—	—	71	863	775	3,646	10,118
Worcestershire	Salisbury	12	16	11	18	8	64	110	110	—	—	—	—	—	—	35	—	—	—	71	863	775	3,646	10,118
Worcestershire	Salisbury	12	16	11	18	8	64	110	110	—	—	—	—	—	—	35	—	—	—	71	863	775	3,646	10,118
Worcestershire	Salisbury	12	16	11	18	8	64	110	110	—	—	—	—	—	—	35	—	—	—	71	863	775	3,646	10,118
Worcestershire	Salisbury	12	16	11	18	8	64	110	110	—	—	—	—	—	—	35	—	—	—	71	863	775	3,646	10,118
Worcestershire	Salisbury	12	16	11	18	8	64	110	110	—	—	—	—	—	—	35	—	—	—	71	863	775	3,646	10,118
Worcestershire	Salisbury	12	16	11	18	8	64	110	110	—	—	—	—	—	—	35	—	—	—	71	863	775	3,646	10,118
Worcestershire	Salisbury	12	16	11	18	8	64	110	110	—	—	—	—	—	—	35	—	—	—	71	863	775	3,646	10,118
Worcestershire	Salisbury	12	16	11	18	8	64	110	110	—	—	—	—	—	—	35	—	—	—	71	863	775	3,646	10,118
Worcestershire	Salisbury	12	16	11	18	8	64	110	110	—	—	—	—	—	—	35	—	—	—	71	863	775	3,646	10,118
Worcestershire	Salisbury	12	16	11	18	8	64	110	110	—	—	—	—	—	—	35	—	—	—	71	863	775	3,646	10,118
Worcestershire	Salisbury	12	16	11	18	8	64	110	110	—	—	—	—	—	—	35	—	—	—	71	863	775	3,646	10,118
Worcestershire	Salisbury	12	16	11	18	8	64	110	110	—	—	—	—	—	—	35	—	—	—	71	863	775	3,646	10,118
Worcestershire	Salisbury	12	16	11	18	8	64	110	110	—	—	—	—	—	—	35	—	—	—	71	863	775	3,646	10,118
Worcestershire	Salisbury	12	16	11	18	8	64	110	110	—	—	—	—	—	—	35	—	—	—	71	863	775	3,646	10,118
Worcestershire	Salisbury	12	16	11	18	8	64	110	110	—	—	—	—	—	—	35	—	—	—	71	863	775	3,646	10,118
Worcestershire	Salisbury	12	16	11	18	8	64	110	110	—	—	—	—	—	—	35	—	—	—	71	863	775	3,646	10,118
Worcestershire	Salisbury	12	16	11	18	8	64	110	110	—	—	—	—	—	—	35	—	—	—	71	863	775	3,646	10,118
Worcestershire	Salisbury	12	16	11	18	8	64	110	110	—	—	—	—	—	—	35	—	—	—	71	863	775	3,646	10,118
Worcestershire	Salisbury	12	16	11	18	8	64	110	110	—	—	—	—	—	—	35	—	—	—	71	863	775	3,646	10,118
Worcestershire	Salisbury	12	16	11	18	8	64	110	110	—	—	—	—	—	—	35	—	—	—	71	863	775	3,646	10,118
Worcestershire	Salisbury	12	16	11	18	8	64	110	110	—	—	—	—	—	—	35	—	—	—	71	863	775	3,646	10,118
Worcestershire	Salisbury	12	16	11	18	8	64	110	110	—	—	—	—	—	—	35	—	—	—	71	86

Ecclesiastical Courts.—The ordinary ecclesiastical courts are; the provincial courts; being, in the province of Canterbury, the court of arches, or supreme court of appeal, the prerogative, or testamentary, court, and the court of peculiars; and in the province of York, the prerogative, or testamentary, court, and the chancery court;—the diocesan courts, being the consistorial court of each diocese, exercising general jurisdiction;—the court or courts of one or more commissaries appointed by the bishop in certain dioceses, to exercise general jurisdiction within prescribed limits;—and the court or courts of one or more archdeacons, or their officials, exercising general or limited jurisdiction, according to the terms of their patents, or to local custom;—there are also peculiars of various descriptions in most dioceses, and in some they are very numerous: royal, archiepiscopal, episcopal, decanal, sub-decanal, prebendal, rectorial and vicarial; and there are also some manorial courts.

The provincial courts of the archbishop of Canterbury and the archbishop of York are independent of each other; the process of one province not running into the other, but being sent, by a requisition, to the local authority, for execution. The appeal from each of the provincial courts lies to the king, and a commission issues under the great seal, in each individual case of appeal, to certain persons or delegates, to hear and determine the matter in contest.

Of the three principal archiepiscopal courts of Canterbury, the arches court is the first. This court exercises the appellate jurisdiction from each of the diocesan, and most of the peculiar, courts within the province. It may also take original cognizance of causes, by letters of request from each of those courts; and it has original jurisdiction, on subtraction of legacy given by wills proved in the prerogative court of Canterbury. The prerogative court has jurisdiction of all wills and administrations of personal property left by persons having bona notabilia, or effects of a certain value, in divers jurisdictions within the province. A very large proportion, not less than four-fifths of the whole contentious business, and a very much larger part of the uncontested, or as it is termed common form business, is despatched by this court. Its authority is necessary to the administration of the effects of all persons dying possessed of personal property to the specified amount within the province, whether leaving a will or dying intestate; and from the very great increase of personal property, arising from the public funds and the extension of the commercial capital of the country, the business of this jurisdiction, both as deciding upon all the contested rights, and as registering all instruments and proofs in respect of the succession to such property, is become of very high public importance. The court of peculiars, which is the third archiepiscopal court of Canterbury, takes cognizance of all matters arising in certain deaneries; one of these deaneries is in the diocese of London, another in the diocese of Rochester, another in the diocese of Winchester, each comprising several parishes; and some others, over which the archbishop exercises ordinary jurisdiction, and which are exempt from, and independent of, the several bishops within whose dioceses they are locally situate.

The province of Canterbury includes twenty-two dioceses; and therein the diocese of Canterbury itself, where the ordinary episcopal jurisdiction is exercised by a commissary, in the same manner as in other dioceses. The province of York includes four dioceses, besides that of Sodor and Man; and the archiepiscopal jurisdiction is exercised therein much in the same manner as in the province of Canterbury.

The diocesan courts take cognizance of all matters arising locally within their respective limits, with the exception of places subject to peculiar jurisdiction. They may decide all matters of spiritual discipline; they may suspend or deprive clergymen, declare marriages void, pronounce sentence of separation à mens et thoro, try the right of succession to personal property, and administer the other branches of ecclesiastical law. The archdeacon's court is generally subordinate, with an appeal to the bishop's court; though in some instances it is independent and co-ordinate. The archdeacon's courts, and the various peculiars already enumerated, in some instances take cognizance of all ecclesiastical matters arising within their own limits, though the jurisdiction of many of the peculiar courts extends only to a single parish; the authority of some of them is limited to a part only of the matters usually the subject of ecclesiastical cognizance; several of the peculiars possess voluntary, but not contentious, jurisdiction.*

Writers on Ecclesiastical Topography.—Stukeley's 'History of Churches in England,

* Extracted from Report of Ecclesiastical Commissioners 1832.

8vo, 1712, is a useful work. The author merits the reputation of a diligent, judicious, and faithful antiquary.—Godwin, bishop of Llandaff, in the beginning of the 17th century, collected a catalogue of English prelates, which was first published in 1601. Dr Richardson republished this work in 1743, in folio.—Wharton's 'Anglia Sacra' was published in London in 1691, in two volumes folio. It contains the histories and lives of our most celebrated prelates to 1540.—Allan laid the foundation of a 'Notitia Ecclesiæ Anglicanæ,' which was continued in Le Neve's 'Fasti,' and Willis's 'Survey.'—The first catalogue of Religious Houses in England was drawn up by Burton or Leland, and published in Speed's 'History.'—Dodsworth's 'Monasticon Anglicanum' is a noble work. Dugdale, though he did little more for it than correcting the press and compiling the indexes, has gained the credit of it. The first volume was published in folio, in 1655. It is entitled 'Monasticon Anglicanum, sive Pandectæ cœnobiorum Benedictinorum, Cluniacensium, Cisterciensium, Carthusianorum, a primordiis ad eorum usque dissolutionem.' The second volume treats of the canons regular of St Austin, and was published in 1661. The third volume is made up of additions to the two former, with the foundations and endowments of divers cathedral and collegiate churches, 1673. The whole was abridged in 1695 by James Wright. Another epitome by an anonymous hand appeared in 1718.—Great additions were made to the Monasticon in 'The History of the ancient abbeys, monasteries, hospitals, cathedral and collegiate churches, by John Stevens, gent.,' 1722-3. Bishop Tanner drew up and published an excellent compendium of the Religious Houses, under the title of 'Notitia Monastica,' Oxford, 1695. Tanner, vicar of Lowestoff, published an enlarged edition of this work, in folio, in 1754. The early valuations of the ecclesiastical benefices which are given in the body of our work are taken from Bacon's 'Liber Regis,' Ecton's 'Thesaurus Rerum Ecclesiasticarum,' and the parliamentary returns of livings amounting to £150 per annum, supplied with a view to regulate increase of stipend under the act of augmentation. The gross income of each living is taken from the report published by the ecclesiastical commissioners in 1835. It has not been thought expedient to swell the bulk of our work by introducing notices of the augmentations of livings under Queen Anne's bounty act. These are sufficiently accessible in Mr Hodgson's digest published in 1826.

CHAP. XII.—OF MONASTERIES AND RELIGIOUS ORDERS.

THE frequent reference which is made in the body of our work to the ancient monastical institutions of England and Wales, renders it necessary that we should say a few words regarding these now extinct foundations:—

Of the Abbot and Abbey.—When in any society of religious persons, whether male or female, one abbot or abbess presided, it was styled an abbey. This governor had the sole power over the convent, could appoint or remove any officer at pleasure, and prescribe what rules the monks or nuns should be obliged to observe. The word abbot, which is derived from the Hebrew abba, was an appellation originally given to every aged monk; but has been used since the 8th century to denote only the head of a monastery. Since the second council of Nice, in 787, abbots have enjoyed the power of conferring the lower orders of priesthood; but in the essential points of jurisdiction, they were everywhere subject to the diocesan bishop, and independent of each other, till the 11th century. The consequence of the abbots grew with the wealth of their monasteries; several received episcopal tithes and privileges; all held a rank next to that of bishop, and had a vote in the ecclesiastical councils. Equal privileges and rights appertained to the abbesses as the superiors of the nunneries, except that they were seldom allowed to vote in synods; and the power of ordaining, the administration of the sacraments, and other sacerdotal offices, were expressly forbidden them in the 9th century. About this time, several abbeyes fell into the hands of the laity. What avaricious barons had extorted from single convents in the 8th century, the weakness of the Carlovingians accorded to their partisans, as a reward of fidelity and military merit; since the kings possessed the right of patronage over all abbeyes established on their own crown-lands or family-estates, and generally over all which derived their origin from the royal bounty. Thus, in the 10th century, a number of the most considerable convents in the territory of the Roman church had lay-abbots, or abbot-counts, (abbates milites, abba-comites,) who appropriated to their own use the income of these institutions. These were called commendatory abbots, because the form of the presentation was a recommendation of the convent to their protection. In cloisters fallen to such worldly masters, the spiritual supervision was discharged by inferior abbots, deans, or priors. To the princes and princesses of the royal family, abbey were frequently presented to defray the expenses of their tables; even nunneries were sometimes assigned to men, and monasteries to distinguished females. But this abuse rarely survived the laymen who had received the gifts. The zeal, which, in the beginning of the 10th century, urged a reform in monastic discipline, gradually succeeded in abolishing such donatives to the laity; and military abbots were now rarely seen discharging, in person, the duties of a soldier; though the convents under royal patronage were for a long time retained, to reward the services of the crown-vassals in war, by contributions of money and peasants. The superiors of the military clergy bore, in the camp, the name of field-abbots, as the name of abbot was, in the middle ages, frequently used to denote not only magistrates, (as abbas populi, the prætor at Genoa,) and secular ecclesiastical dignitaries, but also the chiefs of religious and jovial fraternities, e. g. abbas cornardorum, stultorum, 'the abbot of misrule.' In consequence of the reform commenced at Cluny, there arose new monasteries without abbots, over which the abbot of the convent of reformed Benedictines, at that place, appointed priors or pro-abbots, or even ex-abbots, who remained dependent on him. Besides the Benedictines, the grey monks of Vallombrosa, the Cistercians, Bernardines, Feuillans, Trappists, Grandmontani, Præmonstratenses, and some bodies of regular choristers, denominate their superiors abbots. Besides the female-branches of the above orders, the nuns of Fontevrand, and the female secular choristers have abbesses. These have always remained under the jurisdiction of their diocesan bishops; the abbots of many other convents, on the contrary, shook off the authority of the bishops, and acknowledged no master but the pope. The mitred abbots enjoyed the right—frequently conferred on the Benedictines in the middle ages by the papal legate—of adopting the episcopal title and insignia; only a few, however, possessed the episcopal power with dioceses of their own. In the time of Henry II., some of the richest English abbays began to claim exemption from the jurisdiction of their bishops; and bulls to this effect were subsequently issued by the court of Rome in considerable numbers.

The principal building of an abbey was the church, which differed little from one of the cathedrals of the present day. Attached to one side of the nave—commonly the southern,—was the great cloister, which had two entrances to the church, at the eastern and western ends of the aisle of the nave, for the greater solemnity of processions. Over the western side of the cloister, was the dormitory of the monks,—a long room, divided into separate cells, each containing a bed, with a mat, blanket, and rug, together with a desk and stool, and occupied by one monk. This apartment had a door, which opened immediately into the church, on account of midnight-offices. Attached to the side of the cloister, opposite to the church, was the refectory, where the monks dined; near to which, was the locutorium, or parlour,—an apartment answering to the common room of a college, where, in the intervals of prayer and study, the monks sat and conversed. Beyond, was the kitchen and its offices; and adjoining to it, the buttery, &c. On the eastern side of the cloisters, in the centre, was the chapter-house, where the business of the abbey was transacted; and near it, the library, and scriptorium, where the monks employed themselves in copying books; on this side, also, was the treasury, where the costly plate and church-ornaments were kept. The abbot and principal officers of the convent had all separate houses to the eastward of the cloister, in which part of the building were usually the hostery and question-hallrooms for the entertainment of strangers; and also the apartment for novices. Westward of the cloister, was an outward court, surrounding which was the monks' infirmary, and the almshouse; an embattled gatehouse led to this court, which was the principal entrance of the abbey. The whole was surrounded by a high wall, including in its precincts, gardens, stables, granary, &c. Some of the great abbays—as Glastonbury and Furness—covered many acres of ground. The situation chosen for the site of an abbey was as different from that of the castle as the purpose to which it was applied. The one, meant for defence, stands boldly on the hill; the other, intended for meditation, is hid in the sequestered valley.

A Priory.—When the chief person in the monastery bore the name of prior, it was styled a priory. These kind of religious houses were of two sorts,—either they were such whose prior was independent, and as absolute a chief as an abbot could be,—or they were such as depended upon some great abbey, from which they received their prior, and to which they were often obliged to pay a small pension, or annual acknowledgment. And whensoever the convent, to which any priory belonged, was beyond the seas, then it was styled an alien-priory. These last transmitted their revenues to their foreign superior, for which reason their estates were generally seized to carry on the wars between England and France. Their whole number is not exactly ascertained. The Monasticon has given a list of 100. Weever estimates them at 110. The alien-priories were all dissolved by act of parliament in 2^o Henry V. and their estates vested in the Crown.

A Preceptory.—Whensoever the knights, templars, or hospitallers had any considerable manors or farms, they erected churches for the service of God, and built a convenient house for habitation, to which they sent out their fraternity under the command of a preceptor. These houses were called preceptories, or commanderies.

Of Monks and Monasteries.—When the society of religious persons consisted of men, it was called a monastery. The monks of the middle ages speak of monasteries built in England in the days of King Lucius. There is reason to believe that there were monks and monasteries in Britain before the end of the 4th century; in the course of the 7th century many monasteries were founded in all parts of England. These monasteries were designed, in some places, for the seats of bishops and their clergy; in others, for the residence of secular priests who preached and administered sacraments over the neighbouring country; and in all places, they were seminaries of learning for the education of youth. When the society of religious persons consisted of women, it was styled a nunnery.

A Cell, &c.—When any monastery or nunnery was subject to another, it was called a cell; and some have imagined that the revenue of the cell was included in that of the mother-abbey. The great English abbeys had many such cells in distant places. Chauntries were chapels erected and endowed for the singing of masses for the souls of the deceased. Chauntry-rents are still paid to the Crown by the purchasers of these lands. Hospitals were small convents, occupied by a few monks, and founded for the entertainment of all who went any pilgrimage on religious pretence. Their Latin term is hospitium. Gilds were societies of lay-brethren, who lived together like monks, but were professed of no order.

Dissolution of Religious Houses.—The dissolution of religious houses in England began so early as the year 1312, when the Templars were suppressed; and in 1323 their lands, churches, advowsons, and liberties, in England, were given, by 17^o Edw. II. c. 3. to the prior and brethren of the hospital of St John at Jerusalem. In the years 1390, 1437, 1441, 1459, 1497, 1502, 1508, and 1515, several other houses were dissolved, and their revenues settled on different colleges in Oxford and Cambridge. Soon after the last period, Cardinal Wolsey, by license of the king and pope, obtained a dissolution of above 30 religious houses for the founding and endowing his colleges at Oxford and Ipswich. About the same time a bull was granted to Wolsey, to suppress monasteries, in which there were not above six monks, to the value of 8,000 ducats a-year, for endowing Windsor and King's college in Cambridge. Two other bulls were granted to Cardinal Wolsey and Campegius, to suppress foundations in which there were less than twelve monks, and to annex them to the greater monasteries; and another bull to inquire about abbeys to be suppressed, in order to be made cathedrals. Nothing appears to have been done in consequence of these bulls; the motive which induced Wolsey and many others, to suppress these houses, was the desire of promoting learning; and Archbishop Cranmer engaged in it with a view to carrying on the Reformation. But there were other causes that concurred to bring on their ruin: many of the religious were loose and vicious,—the monks were generally thought to be attached to the pope's supremacy,—their revenues were not employed according to the intent of the donors,—many feigned miracles, and counterfeit relics, had been discovered, which had brought the monks into disgrace,—the observant friars had opposed the king's divorce from Queen Catherine,—these circumstances operated, in concurrence with the king's want of a supply, and the people's desire to save their money, to forward a motion in parliament, that, in order to support the king's state, and supply his wants, all the religious houses which had not above £200 a-year, might be conferred upon the Crown; and an act was passed for that purpose, 27^o Henry VIII. c. 28. By this act 374 houses were dissolved, and a revenue of about £32,000 a-year came to the Crown; besides about £100,000 in plate and jewels. The suppression of these houses, and the consequent dispersion of above 10,000 monks and nuns, occasioned much discontent, and at length led to an open rebellion. When this was appeased, the king resolved to suppress all the rest of the monasteries, and appointed a new visitation, which led to the surrender of the greater abbeys; and it was enacted by 31^o Henry VIII. c. 13. that all monasteries, &c., which had been surrendered since the 4th of February, in the 27th year of his majesty's reign, and which thereafter should be surrendered, should be vested in the king. The knights of St John of Jerusalem also were suppressed by 32^o Henry VIII. c. 24. The suppression of the greater houses, by these two acts, produced a revenue to the king of above £100,000 a-year, besides a large sum in plate and jewels. The last act of dissolution in this king's reign was the act of 37^o Henry VIII. c. 4. for dissolving colleges, free chapels, chauntries, &c., which act was further enforced by 1^o Edw. VI. c. 14. By this act 90 colleges, 110 hospitals, and 2374 chauntries and free chapels were suppressed. The number of houses and places suppressed from first to last, so far as any calculations appear to have been made, seems to be as follows:—

Of lesser monasteries of which we have the valuation	374
Of greater monasteries	186
Belonging to the hospitallers	48
Colleges	90
Hospitals	110
Chauntries and free chapels	2,374
Total	3,182

besides the friars' houses, and those suppressed by Wolsey, and many small houses of which we have no particular account. The sum total of the clear yearly revenue of the several houses at the time of their dissolution, of which we have any account, seems to have been as follows:—

Of the greater monasteries	£104,919 13 3½
Of those lesser monasteries of which we have the valuation	29,702 1 10½
Knights-hospitallers' head-house in London	2,385 12 8
We have the valuation of only 28 of their houses in the country	3,026 9 5
Friars' houses, of which we have the valuation	751 2 0½
Total	£140,784 19 3

If proper allowance is made for the lesser monasteries, and houses not included in this estimate, and for the plate, &c., which came into the hands of the king by the dissolution, and likewise for the value of money at that time—which was at least six times as much as at present—we must conclude their whole revenues to have been immense.

It does not appear that any computation has been made of the number of persons contained in the religious houses:—

Those of the lesser monasteries dissolved by 27 ^o Henry VIII. were reckoned at about	10,000
If we suppose the colleges and hospitals to have contained a proportionable number, these will make about	5,347
If we reckon the number in the great monasteries according to the proportion of their revenues, they will be about 35,000, but as probably they had larger allowances in proportion to their number than those of the lesser monasteries, if we abate upon that account 5,000, they will then be	30,000
One for each chauntry and free chapel	2,374
Total	47,721

But as there were probably more than one person to officiate in several of the free chapels, and there were other houses which are not included within this calculation, perhaps they may be computed in one general estimate at about 50,000.

CHAP. XIII.—ECCLESIASTICAL ARCHITECTURE.

THE very frequent notices which occur in the body of our work of the style of architecture observed in the churches, castles, and other principal buildings in England, renders it necessary for us to devote a chapter of this general introductory article to a brief explanation of the different styles of architecture which occur in this country, for which we are mainly indebted to a very neat and perspicuous article in an early number of the Magazine of the Society for the promotion of Christian knowledge. The curious reader will do well to consult Milner's 'Ecclesiastical Architecture' on the subject.*

* London, 8vo, 1811, and 1831.

The Gothic.—The doors and windows of old English churches, generally, have pointed arches; and, from the shape of these arches, principally—though there are other minor distinctions—the age of the building may be most accurately inferred, as they have varied in height and width from age to age. Buildings constructed with arches of this description are usually denominated Gothic, an appellation given to them originally as a term of reproach, by the Italian restorers of Grecian art; because they were supposed to be the remains of the architectural taste of the Goths, and considered very inferior to the productions of Greece or Rome. It has been keenly contended by some architects that a more correct term—though one not so frequently employed—would be the English style, because buildings of this kind were first introduced in England; because no other country can boast finer specimens than are still remaining here; and because the national traditions of other countries ascribe their most beautiful Gothic churches to English artists. However this may be, the most striking characteristics of this style of building are, its pointed arches, its pinnacles and spires, its large buttresses, clustered pillars, vaulted roof, profusion of ornaments, the general predominance of the perpendicular over the horizontal, and, in the whole, its lofty, bold, spirit.

Saxon and Norman style.—Before the introduction of the English, or pointed arch, the circular or rounded arch was in use; and a very few beautiful examples of this kind of building still remain in different parts of the country. It is usually called Saxon, or sometimes Norman, from its having prevailed during the reign of the Saxon or Norman kings in England. It commenced at the establishment of Christianity among the Saxons, in the 6th century, and continued to about the year 1135, in the reign of King Stephen. The entrance to the Temple church, London; the Abbey-gate, Bristol; and the church of Romsey in Hampshire, are in this style of architecture. The doors in this style are sometimes quite plain, and sometimes very richly carved. The Norman differs very little from the Saxon style—if there be indeed a difference—except in the magnitude and expense of the buildings.

Semi-Norman style.—Between the reign of Stephen and that of Henry III., the circular arch began to disappear, and, before the death of the latter monarch, gave way to the pointed arch, of which style Salisbury cathedral may be adduced as an almost inimitable example. At first the two arches were intermixed; and the style was then called, Semi- or Half-Norman. Some suppose that the pointed arch was introduced from the Saracens, by the crusaders to the Holy Land, and from this circumstance, they call it the Saracenic arch: but the greater number of persons imagine it to have arisen from the accidental intersection of several rounded arches with each other. That this will produce pointed arches of different widths and heights, according to the points of intersection, may be easily shown by placing two hoops or rings across each other, allowing one point of the hoops or rings to rest upon a floor or table. The crossings of the boughs of trees in an avenue also afford a familiar illustration of the same fact. In the Temple-church the two arches may be found united, and other specimens may be seen in the church of St Cross near Winchester; the ruins of Buildwas abbey, Shropshire; Fountains abbey, Rievaul abbey, and Roche abbey, in Yorkshire. The first pointed style, or acute arch, began in the 12th century; the second style, or perfect equilateral arch, in the end of the 13th; and the low arch did not appear till the middle of the 15th century.

Early English style.—When the circular arch totally disappeared in 1220, the Early English style—as it has been called by Mr Rickman—commenced. The windows of this style were at first very narrow in comparison with their height: they were called lancet-shaped, and were considered very elegant: two or three were frequently seen together, connected by chipstones. In a short time, however, the windows became wider, and divisions and ornaments were introduced. Sometimes the same window was divided into several lights, and frequently finished at the top by a light in the form of a lozenge, circle, trefoil, or other ornament. A specimen of this kind may be seen in the beautiful church of St Saviour's, Southwark, which has lately been thrown open to view by the improvements connected with the erection of the New London bridge. The door of St Mary's, Lincoln, is also in this style. But the most striking specimens are Salisbury cathedral (A. D. 1220), and Westminster Abbey (A. D. 1245); the polygonal east apse of the latter building, with the parts of the choir adjacent to it, may be said, perhaps, to exhibit the Early English in its fullest perfection.

Decorated English style.—Between the years 1270 and 1300, the architecture became more ornamental, and from this circumstance received the name of the Decorated English style, which is considered the most beautiful and perfect for ecclesiastical buildings. "The first feature of this style," says Dr Milner, "was the general adoption of the well-proportioned and well-formed aspiring arch. The pointed arches, which had hitherto been constructed, though sometimes accidentally graceful and perfect, were almost always too narrow, too sharp in the point, and ungracefully turned, as appears, amongst other instances, in the windows of the nave of Worcester, and in the old parts of Lichfield cathedral. But those of the present period were universally well turned, and duly proportioned.* They were also invariably adorned with one or more cusps on each side of the head, so as to form trefoils, cinquefoils, &c., as also with new-invented and highly-finished mouldings. The pediments raised over these and other arches were universally purfled, that is to say, adorned with the representation of foliage along the jambs, called crockets.† Pinnacles, which had hitherto been rare and quite plain, were now placed at the sides of almost every arch, and at the top of every buttress, being invariably purfled and surmounted with an elegant flower, called a finial. A pinnacle of a larger size being placed on the square tower of former times, as was the case at Salisbury, and elsewhere, became a broach or spire. Nay, so fond were the people of this novel ornament, that we read of a new built tower being taken down, because it was not fit to sustain one, when another tower, with a spire to it, was built, equal in height with the whole length of the church. That bold feature of this style, the flying buttress, for supporting the upper walls of the nave, which had hitherto, for the most part, been concealed in the roof of the side-aisles, was now brought to view with suitable dressings, as an ornament. The window no longer consisted of an arch divided by a mullion into two, and surmounted with a single or triple circle, or quatrefoil, but was now portioned out by mullions and transoms, or cross bars, into four, five, six, and sometimes into nine, bays, or days, as the separate lights of a window were called; and their heads were diversified by tracery-work into a variety of architectural designs, and particularly into the form of flowers. The circumstance which had favoured the introduction of large west windows, was the abrogation of canonical penances, in consequence of the frequent crusades which, in its consequence, rendered the Galilee, or penitential porch, at that end of the church unnecessary.‡ The plain niches of the thirteenth century early in the fourteenth became gorgeous tabernacles, in which as much architectural skill and industry was often bestowed as in building the whole church. These tabernacles, as well as various other parts of the sacred edifice, were filled with statuary, which frequently exhibited equal spirit in the design, and art in the execution. Finally, the ribs, supporting the groined ceilings, were no longer simple intersecting arches, but they branched out in tracery-work of various devices, still more rich and elegant than that in the large windows; and wherever these ribs met, they were tied together by an architectural knot, called a boss, or orb, which generally exhibited some instructive device.§ We have proofs of these improvements, or rather of this new order of pointed architecture, in the three remaining grand crosses erected in memory of Eleanor, wife of Edward I., at Northampton, Geddington, and Waltham. She died in 1290. We have other proofs in the magnificent tomb, in Westminster abbey, of Edmund Crouchback, brother of King Edward I., who died in 1296. But the most perfect specimen of the whole detail of these improvements is to be met with in York Minster, the nave of which was built between the years 1290 and 1330, and the choir some thirty years afterwards. If any similar erection, on a smaller scale, could, in its time,

* The best proportion of the head of a pointed arch is allowed to be when an equilateral triangle can be inscribed within its crown and its imposts or springing.

† These terminations of the canopy, pediment, or sweeping cornice, as Mr Carter terms it, were now made to descend as low as the springing of the arch, and rested on the busts of bishops, kings, or other founders, or benefactors of the building.

‡ There were formerly such porches at the western extremity of all large churches. In these, public penitents were stationed; dead bodies were sometimes deposited, previously to their interment, and females were allowed to see the monks of the convent who were their relatives. We may gather from a passage in Gervase, that, upon a woman's applying for leave to see a monk, her relation, she was answered, in the words of scripture: "He goeth before you into Galilee, there you shall see him." Hence the term Galilee, which is still retained for the western porches of Durham and Ely cathedrals, and which has puzzled all antiquaries. It is well known that at Durham cathedral, women were not even allowed to attend divine service, except in the Galilee.

§ It is proper to observe that the pediments, or canopies, which, during the reign of the two first Edwards, and the early part of Edward the Third's reign, rose straight upwards, like the sides of an equilateral triangle, towards the latter end of the reign of Edward III., began to humour the sweeping curve of the arches they covered, which reduced their excessive height, and added to their gratefulness.

have vied with this in beauty and grandeur, it was St Stephen's chapel, Westminster, which was begun by Edward III., in 1348. But of the inimitable beauties of this chapel, only a few scattered vestiges remain. There are few indeed, if any, of our cathedrals which were not rebuilt or repaired in some or other of their parts in the newly-improved manner. Before 1321 Bishop Langton had added the Lady chapel to his cathedral of Lichfield, had groined the whole, and had erected the beautiful western façade. About the same time the chief part of the nave of Westminster abbey was in building. Between the years 1327 and 1370, Exeter cathedral was groined, and its heavy Norman work changed into the light and elegant pointed architecture of that period, by its munificent prelate, Grandison. During the pontificate of Courtney, which commenced in 1381, and that of his successor, Arundel, the nave of Canterbury cathedral was rebuilt. About the same period that great prelate and architect, Bishop William de Wykeham, was employed in performing the same difficult work in Winchester cathedral, which had taken place in that of Exeter and others."

Perpendicular style.—The transition from the decorated to the florid or perpendicular style, was very gradual. Ornament after ornament was added, till simplicity disappeared beneath the extravagant additions; and about the year 1380, the architecture became so overloaded and profuse, that it obtained the title of florid, which by some persons is called the Perpendicular, because the lines of division run in upright or perpendicular lines from top to bottom, which is not the case in any other style. King's college chapel, Cambridge, begun in the reign of Henry VI., though not finished till some time after; Gloucester cathedral; Henry VIIIth's chapel at Westminster; St George's chapel at Windsor; Wrexham church, Denbighshire; and the chapel on the bridge at Wakefield, Yorkshire, are all of this character. Many small country churches are built in this style; and their size not admitting of much ornament, they are distinguished from structures of a later date, by mouldings running round their arches, and generally by a square head over the obtuse-pointed arch of the door. A peculiar ornament of this style is a flower of four leaves, called, from the family reigning at that period, the Tudor flower.

Debased style.—From 1380, English architecture became less pure in style, though in some cases very elaborate in its ornaments. An intermixture of styles was introduced, and hence the appellation of the Debased style, the character of the architecture being inferior to that of preceding ages, and yearly becoming less worthy of admiration. Italian architecture was mixed with the different orders of English, and the latter were almost entirely lost sight of before the reign of Charles I. Of what is called the Debased style, there are many specimens in the colleges both of Oxford and Cambridge, as well as in many country churches, built about the same period. There are many other characteristics by which a building of one period may be distinguished from that of another, even by a very casual observer; but in a hasty glance, the traveller will hardly perhaps have time to cast his eye upon more than one particular part of the structure. The arches of the doors and windows are prominent objects, and are readily seized upon by the eye.

Architectural terms.—In explanation of the references occasionally made in our work to the plan and construction of ecclesiastical edifices and other buildings, we may here add a few definitions of terms. A church or cathedral is commonly built in the form of a cross, having a tower, lantern, or spire, erected at the place of intersection. The part of the cross situated towards the west is called the nave. The opposite or eastern part is called the choir, and within this is the chancel. The transverse portion, forming the arms of the cross, is called the transept. Any high building erected above the roof is called a steeple; if square-topped, it is a tower; if long and acute, a spire; and if short and light, a lantern. Towers of great height in proportion to their diameter, are called turrets. The walls of Gothic churches are supported on the outside by lateral projections, extending from top to bottom, at the corners, and between the windows. These are called buttresses, and they are necessary to prevent the walls from spreading under the enormous weight of the roofs. On the tops of the buttresses, and elsewhere, are slender pyramidal structures or spires, called pinnacles. These are ornamented on their sides with rows of projections, appearing like leaves or buds, which are named crochets. The summit, or upper edge of a wall, if straight, is called a parapet; if indented, a battlement. Gothic windows were commonly crowned with an acute arch. They were long and narrow, or, if wide, were divided into perpendicular lights by mullions. The lateral spaces on the upper and outside of the arch are called spandrells; and the ornaments on the top, collectively taken, are the tracery. An oriel, or bay window, is a projecting window. A wheel, or rose window, is large and circular. A corbel is a bracket, or short projection from a wall, serving to sustain a statue, or the springing of an arch. Gothic pillars or columns are usually clustered; appearing as if a number were bound together. The single shafts, thus connected, are called bolts. They are confined chiefly to the inside of buildings, and never support any thing like an entablature. Their use is to aid in sustaining the vaults under the roof, which rest upon them at springing points. Gothic vaults intersect each other, forming angles called groins. The parts which are thrown out of the perpendicular, to assist in forming them, are the pedentives. The ornamented edge of the groined vaults, extending diagonally, like an arch, from one support to another, is called the ogee. The Gothic term gable indicates the erect end of a roof, and answers to the Grecian pediment, but is more acute. The Gothic style of building is more imposing, admits of richer ornaments, and is more difficult to execute, than the Grecian. This is because the weight of its vaults and roofs is upheld, at a great height, by supporters acting at single points, and apparently but barely sufficient to effect their object. Great mechanical skill is necessary to balancing and sustaining the pressures; and architects, at the present day, find it often difficult to accomplish what was achieved by the builders of the middle ages. In edifices erected at the present day, the Grecian and Gothic outlines are commonly employed to the exclusion of the rest. In choosing between them, the fancy of the buikder, more than any positive rule of fitness, must direct the decision. "If," says a writer in 'the Graphic Illustrator,' "the highest display of elegant combination be not found in the ever-varying designs of the old English windows,—in the diversified exuberance of the appropriate foliage, bosses, and crockets of the cornices, ceilings, and pinnacles,—in the undulating forms and appropriate character of mouldings,—in the clustered richness of the tall column or the sweeping arch,—in the luxuriant tracery or branching ribs of the vaulted ceilings,—or in the elaborate varieties of screen, niche, canopy, altar, and stall,—it is to be found nowhere. Nor is the excellence of this style less in the command which it has of the picturesque in the external distribution of its masses, its shadowy or its flying buttresses, its dignified porches, its rising gables, its varying outlines of plan, broken only to enhance the interest, and its elegant and airy finishings, of battlements, pinnacle and tower, by which the eye is carried off into the clouds. But of all the combinations in which this great style displays its master-power, there is none so impressive as the effect of a well-composed interior. The Greek interiors were of no account; and even the finest efforts of Rome never made the slightest approximation to that overpowering grandeur of effect displayed in York Minster, or in King's college chapel, those monuments of the artificial sublime. But we may also notice an additional advantage in the pointed style, as resulting from the completeness of all its collateral decorations. In the treatment of this style we have not, as in the case of Grecian art, to look abroad for windows, ceilings, pavements, &c., unknown to the inventors of that system; but we have in this a prototype for all the principal accessories sufficient for our direction in similar compositions."

CHAP. XIV.—ENGLISH LANGUAGE, AND COMPOSITION OF LOCAL NAMES.

THE Saxon—or Anglo-Saxon language as it is more frequently called—is the basis of the English; it has, however, retained many words of the ancient language spoken by the Britons, before the arrival of the Saxons among them. After the conquest of England by the Angles and Saxons, the Saxon became the prevalent tongue of that country, borrowing words, indeed, from the aborigines, and from the Roman conquerors, but these were only single and detached parts, and did not constitute an integral portion of the language. From this time to the conquest of the Normans, the Saxon idiom made very considerable advances, as appears from the relics of the Saxon literature. The Saxon language of that time, moreover, seems to have been more sonorous and finer-sounding, than its remains in the present English tongue, in the same manner as the modern German is of less open sound, and is poorer in vowels, than the ancient was. After the conquest by the Normans, the English language exhibits the peculiar case, where languages of two different stocks are blended into one idiom, which, by the cultivation of a free and active nation and highly-gifted minds, has grown to a powerful, organized whole. If we consider the Saxon stock in the present English idiom, the following circumstances appear the most striking:—

1. By far the greater part of the language is of Saxon, or (to include the Danish) of Teutonic origin; almost all the verbs, particles, and other words, which form the frame of our speech, being of Teutonic descent. Mr Turner has shown this very strikingly at the end of his history of the Anglo-Saxons, where he gives many passages of the most eminent writers, both in poetry and prose, of different ages, with the words of Saxon origin printed in italics. Mr Duponceau, in the article Anglo-Saxon, in the American edition of the Edinburgh Encyclopedia, says, "So far as we are able to judge from a superficial investigation of the subject, we are apt to believe that the English words of northern derivation are to those derived from the ancient, as well as the modern languages of southern Europe, in the proportion of something more than three, but not quite so much as four to one." 2. The structure of the verb, and the greater part of the grammar, is, fundamentally, Saxon. 3. A large quantity of Saxon words have disappeared which were used before the Norman conquest. Mr Turner says—"I found in three pages of Alfred's Orosius, 78 words which have become obsolete, out of 548, or about one-seventh. In three pages of his Bede, I found 230 obsolete, out of 969, or about one-fifth." 4. In many cases, the Saxon word denotes the raw material, or the thing before it is changed by human art; e. g., ox, swine, sheep: the English word, of Latin or French origin, signifies the same thing after changes have been made in it by human labour, e. g., beef, pork, mutton. 5. If there exists two synonymous words, one of Saxon, the other of Latin origin, the former, on account of its greater antiquity (as far as regards the English language) is, generally, more expressive and poetical, though the latter is frequently considered more elegant; e. g., fatherly and paternal, motherly and maternal, happiness and felicity, kindred and relations, bereave and deprive, to dwell and to lodge, &c. 6. In the English Bible, the Saxon stock prevails more than in any other English work, not only in respect to the words (many a long passage being composed only of Saxon words) but also in respect to the construction. "The peculiar structure of the English language," Mr Duponceau says, "is far from having been investigated as yet with that degree of attention and accuracy that it deserves. Among other things, we do not find that any grammarian has been at the pains to take a full comparative view of its two great component parts; by which we mean, on the one hand, those words that are derived from the Saxon, Danish, and other northern languages, and, on the other hand, those from the Greek, Latin, French, Spanish, and other idioms of the south of Europe. These two sets of vocables are so dissimilar from each other, that they appear at first view incapable of being amalgamated together, so as to form a harmonious whole; yet who is there that can read, feel, and understand, and does not admire the sublime harmony which Milton, Dryden, Pope, Shakspeare, Bolingbroke, and the other immortal poets and prose writers of Great Britain, have produced out of these discordant elements? To analyze, therefore, those elements, from which have resulted such inconceivable effects, is well worth the trouble of the grammarian and philologer; and the interesting discoveries to which such an inquiry will lead, will amply repay their learned labours."

In the lowlands of Scotland, and throughout almost all England, the names of places are generally of Saxon origin. The following are the prefixes and affixes most commonly found in such names;—

Ac, Ack, an oak-tree.
Ald, Alder, old, older
Ash, Esc, Esh, an ash-tree.
Beau, Bel, beautiful.
Beck, a brook or rivulet.
Borough, Brig, Burgh, Bury, a walled town.
Bourn, a boundary or limit.
Brom, Brome, broom.
Burn, a running stream.
Caster, Cester, Chester, a castle.
Clipping, a market.
Clare, noble.
Croft, a dwelling.
Ding, Thing, Ting, a place of judgment.
Dene, Dean, a hollow.
Don, Dun, a hill or mount.
Ea, Ay, Ey, an island.
Ford, a passage over a river.
Full, Fowl, dirty, muddy.

Gate, a thoroughfare, an opening.
Holt, an open place.
Hurst, a wood, a thicket.
Kirk, a church.
Lyn, Lin, a lake.
Minster, a monastery.
Ness, a headland or promontory.
Pool, a lake, pond, or bay.
Port, a harbour.
Strat, Stret, a street, or road applied to places standing near the great Roman roads.
Thorp, a wood.
Thur, a door or passage.
War, Ward, Wark, a fortification.
Wick, a salt spring.
Wick, Vicus, a street.
Word, Worth, a residence.
Wold, a high open country.

CHAP. XV.—WELSH LANGUAGE, AND COMPOSITION OF LOCAL NAMES.

THE Welsh language is radically independent of both European and oriental dialects, though several modern languages are intermixed with it. Nennius, who wrote in the 9th century, mentions the bards Talhaian, Tatangun, Nuevin, Bluchbar, and Cian, as renowned for their skill in poetry, and Aneurim, Taliesin, and Llywarch the aged, as professors of the same art, so early as the 6th century. The oldest indisputably genuine work in Welsh is Howel Dha's Laws, a work of the 10th century. An English student of the Welsh tongue is certainly liable to be perplexed by a preposterous application of letters, with which he is familiar, to the expression of sounds very different from those which he has been accustomed to assign to them. Still it is to be regretted that so little attention has been paid by British scholars to the acquisition of the ancient British dialects. The number of scholars who have some knowledge of Latin, Greek, or French, in proportion to those who know any thing of the Welsh language, is probably at least as 500 to one. The Denbigh Eisteddfod, or Bardic session and annual musical festival, will, it is to be hoped, do much to preserve the purity of the Welsh language, and to cultivate its poetry and music. Dictionaries of the Welsh language have been published by W. Owen, W. Evans, Walters, and Richards.

The following glossary appended to the population-returns of Wales, for 1831, will be of much service to the English reader, in consulting the body of our work:—

I.—PRONUNCIATION OF THE LETTERS.

C as K English; never as S.
Ch never as K, but as Ch in Chief.
D as D English; but Dd as Th English.
F as V English; but Ff as F English.
G as G English in Gain; never as in Giles.
L as L English; but Ll is pronounced Llh, a peculiar aspirate.
Q English is expressed by Cw.
R English is always Rh.
S is Sh English.
W as W English: but if used as a vowel, the w becomes oo.
B and P, C and G, F and M, are mutable, one for the other.

II.—PARTICLES.

Am bye, about, encompassing
Ar upon.
Ach, Uch, Uwch upper, above, higher.
Uchaf highest.
Is, Ya, Dis lower.
Isaf lowest.
Allt, Alt, Galt high, (a cliff.)
Mawr (Major) great, large.
Bach (Beg, in Gaelic)
Bychan, Fechan little, small.
Traws (Trans) across.
Y of, on.
Ym in, or by.
Yn, Yng in, at.
Yr the.

III.—APPELLATIVES.

Aber Confluence of Rivers, Mouth of River.
Aml many Barry, Parry (Ap-Harry) Harrison.
Bedw Birch Trees.
Beirdd, Bardd a Bard.
Bode A hole, Home.
Brae a Crow.
Bron, Bryn a Slope, Hill-side.
Caer, Gaer (Castrum) a Castle, Fortification.
Capel a Chapel.
Carrig, Cerrig, Graig (Craig) a Rock, a large Stone.
Cefn the Back, a Ridge.
Cemmin a Leek.
Cil, (Cella, Adytum) a small Church, a Hermitage.
 [Kil, in Scotland, is the usual appellation of a Church-Village.]
Clawdd a Ditch, a Fence.
Coed, Goed a Wood.
Cor, Gor a Choir.
Croes, Crwys, Gros a Cross.
Cwm (Coomb, Comp-ton) a narrow Valley, a Dingle.

Cyn Former, First.
Dewi Davy, David.
Dol Dale, Valley, Meadow
Dwfr, Dwr, Dr Water.
Duffryn a wide Valley.
Escob, Escop, Tyr-Escob Bishop's Tower.
Eglws (Ecclesia) a Church.
Fa, Fan, Man a Place.
Fab Father.
Fair, Mair The Virgin Mary.
Ffynnon a Well.
Garth a Promontory.
Gelli Hazel.
Geneur a Mouth, a Mountain-pass
Glas a blue Colour.
Gof a Smith.
Gwy a Stream, the Wye River.
Havod Summer-hut, Shealing.
Heli Salt.
Hen Old.
Llan a spot cleared for public Meetings or Conference; an Inclosure; a Church-yard; a Church.
Llan-badrig Church of St Patrick.
Llan-bedr St Peter.
Llan-daniel St Daniel

Llan-dewi	. Church of St David.
Llan-stephan	. ——— St Stephen.
Llan-dew-saint	. ——— Two Saints.
Llan-tris-saint	. ——— Three.
Llan-fawr	. ——— Four.
Llan-pum-saint	. ——— Five.
Lloyd	. Grey, Hoary.
Llyn	. a Pond, a Pool, a Lake.
Llys	. a Palace, a Court-house.
Maen, Main	. a large Stone.
Maes	. Heath.
Mel (Mel)	. Honey.
Melin	. a Mill.
Mih-Angel	. Michael, the Archangel.
Monach (Monachus)	. a Monk.
Moch	. a Hog.
Nant	. a Brook.
Pab-Joan	. Pope John.
Pen, Ben	. the Head.
Pistill	. a Water-fall.
Plack	. a flat Piece.

Pont (Pons) Bont	. a Bridge.
Porth (Portus)	. an Entrance, a Haven.
Poll	. a Pool, a Pond, a Lake.
Rhaydr	. a Cataract.
Rhôs, Cors	. a Marsh, a Bog.
Rhyd	. a Ford.
Scybor	. a Barn.
Spytid	. an Hospital.
Towyn	. a Sandy Marsh.
Traeth, Draeth	. an Estuary.
Tre, Tref	. House, Village.
Try	. Through.
Ty	. a House.
Tudyr	. Theodore.
Tyr (Turris)	. a Tower, a Castle.
Tŷr (Terra)	. Land.
Wrac	. an old Woman.
Yewen	. Yew-tree.
Ynys	. an Island.
Ystrad (strata)	. a paved Road, a Street.

G A Z E T T E E R
OF
E N G L A N D A N D W A L E S.

THE PARLIAMENTARY GAZETTEER OF ENGLAND AND WALES.

ABB

ABBAS-COMBE. See COMBE-ABBAS.
ABBAS-COMPTON. See COMPTON-ABBAS.
ABBENHALL. See ABINGHALL.
ABBERBURY. See ALBERBURY.
ABBERFORD. See ABERFORD.
ABBERLEY, a parish and village in the lower division of the hundred of Doddingtree, poor-law union of Martley, Worcestershire; 6 miles south-west of Bewdley; and a little to the north of the post-road from Worcester to Tenbury.—Living, a rectory in the archdeaconry of Salop, and diocese of Hereford; rated in the king's books at £11 10s. 2½d.; average gross income, in 1831, £250. Patron, in 1835, H. Bromley, Esq. A free school, at which 10 boys are educated, was established here in 1717. William Walsh, M.P., a poet of some reputation, was born at the manor-house, the seat of his ancestors, in 1663; and was buried in Abberley-church, in 1708.—The population of this parish, in 1801, was 495; in 1831, 590. Inhabited houses, in 1831, 115. Acres 2,390. Assessed property, in 1815, £3,078. Sum levied for the poor, in the year ending 25th March, 1837, £250.—There is a range of hills to the south of this village, rising to the height of about 800 feet, and extending towards the river Teame.
ABBERTON, a parish in the hund. of Winstree, union of Lexden and Winstree, Essex; 4½ miles south of Colchester, and 55 of London.—Living, a rectory in the archd. of Colchester and dio. of London; rated at £14 7s. 8½d.; gross income £295. Patron, the lord-chancellor. The church is a small plain building. There is a National school here. Pop., in 1801, 150; in 1831, 202. Houses 35. Acres 1,030. A. P. £1,267. Poor rates, in 1837, £190.
ABBERTON, a parish in the upper division of the hund. and union of Pershore, Worcestershire; 6 miles north-east of Pershore; on a branch of the Avon.—Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. and dio. of Worcester; rated at £5 8s. 1½d.; gross income £161. Patrons, in 1835, the Sheldon family, who have long held the manor. Pop., in 1801, 86; in 1831, 90. Houses 17. Acres 1,050. A. P. £1,407. Poor rates, in 1837, £68.
ABBERWICK, a township in the parish of Edlingham, northern division of Coquetdale ward, Northumberland; 4 miles north-west of Alnwick. Pop., in 1801, 99; in 1831, 135. Houses 26. Poor rates, in 1837, £45.
ABBEY-CWM-HIR, a chapelry to the vicarage of Llanbister, Radnor; 6 miles north-east of Rhayader.—Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. of

ABB

Brecon, and dio. of St. David's; of the certified value of £4 13s.; gross income £61. Patron, the vicar of Llanbister. The chapel is termed the Abbey-chapel, from its vicinity to the venerable ruin of Cwm-Hir, a Cistercian monastery, founded, according to Leland, by Cadwathelan ap Madoc, in 1143. It is romantically situated upon the Clewedog, in a valley sprinkled with oak trees, and surrounded by hills and precipices. Pop., in 1831, 509. Poor rates, in 1837, £260.
ABBEY. See DOGMEL'S (ST.).
ABBEY-DORE. See DORE-ABBEY.
ABBEY-HOLME. See HOLME-CULTRAM.
ABBEY-MILTON. See MILTON-ABBAS.
ABBORN. See AUBURN.
ABBOT-DUNSBORN. See DUNSBORN-ABBOT.
ABBOTS, the name of numerous manors and hamlets throughout England, and in most instances, indicative of their having once been church-property.
ABBOTS-ANNE, a parish, partly in the hund. of Andover, partly in that of Wherwell, Andover division and union, Southamptonshire; 2 miles south-west of Andover.—Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Winchester; rated at £42 17s. 6d.; gross income £650. Patron, in 1835, Sir J. Borough. Pop., in 1801, 457; in 1831, 562. Houses 95. Acres 3,100. A. P. £3,157. Poor rates, in 1837, £408.—The tything of Little Anne is included in this parish.
ABBOTS-BICKINGTON, or BICKINGTON-ABBOTS, a parish in the hund. of Black Torrington, Devonshire; 9 miles south-west of Great Torrington.—Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. of Totness and dio. of Exeter; of the certified value of £14; gross income £96. Patron, in 1835, Lord Rolle. This was anciently a cell to Hartland abbey. Pop., in 1801, 68; in 1831, 77. Houses 13. Acres 1,510. A. P. £424. Poor rates, in 1837, £26.—A kind of blue-stone, used for building, and marble and limestone, are found here.
ABBOTS-BROMLEY. See BROMLEY-ABBOTS.
ABBOTSBURY, a parish—formerly a market-town—in the hund. of Uggescombe, union of Weymouth, Dorsetshire; 8 miles south-west of Dorchester, and 132 south-west by west of London. It includes the hamlets of Roddon and Look.—Living, a discharged vicarage, formerly in the archd. of Dorset and dio. of Bristol, now in the dio. of Salisbury; rated at £10; gross income £140. The earl of Ilchester was patron in 1835. Pop., in 1801, 788; in 1831, 874. Houses 172. Acres 4,050. A. P. £5,324. Poor rates, in 1837, £376.—The town is situated in a valley near the coast, surrounded by bold hills. In the fishing-season most of the inhabitants are employed in fishing. An annual sheep-fair is held here on the 10th of July. A free school for educating 30 boys was founded here in 1758. The master's annuity is £20, with house, school-room, and garden. There are, besides, a National school, and several small charities. Abbotsbury derives its name from its vicinity to an ancient Benedictine monastery, founded in the reign of Canute, of which there are still some remains, consisting of a gateway, and a few portions of the walls. Tanner, in his 'Notitia Monastica,' says: "Orcius, or Orking, steward to King Canute, about the year 1026, instituted a society of sacred canons here, who were by him, or his widow, named Tola, changed into a monastery of the Benedictine order, and dedicated to St Peter. By the bounty of its founders, and succeeding benefactors, the yearly revenues of this abbey were increased to £390 19s. 12d. Dugd., and £485 3s. 5d. Speed. The site was granted, 35° Henry VIII., to Sir Giles Strangwaies." Sir Giles also obtained a gift of the noble swannery belonging to the abbey, which still exists on the property of the earl of Ilchester, and where about 600 swans are at present kept. They are said to have amounted, at one time, to 7,000 or 8,000.—About half-a-mile from the town, between it and the sea, are the ruins of St Catherine's chapel, founded in the reign of Edward IV. They form a conspicuous object to mariners.—About 1½ mile to the west is an ancient entrenchment, enclosing an area of about 27 acres, and known by the name of Abbotsbury castle; and to the east of the town is a large cromlech.

ABBOTS-CHARLTON. See CHARLTON-ABBOTS.

ABBOTSHAM, a parish in the hund. of Shebbear, union of Bideford, Devonshire; 2 miles west from Bideford. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Barnstaple and dio. of Exeter, rated at £16 4s. 7d.; gross income £170. Patron, the crown. There is a National school here. Pop., in 1801, 313; in 1831, 387. Houses 75. Acres 2,090. A. P. £2,481. Poor rates, in 1837, £106.

ABBOTSIDE (HIGH), a township in the parish of Aysgarth, north riding of Yorkshire; 1½ mile north-west from Hayes. In 1801, it contained, with the hamlets of Cotterdale, Hardraw, Litherskew, Lunds, Sedbusk, and Simonstone, 559 inhabitants; and in 1831, 589. Houses 113. Acres 13,740. A. P. £3,047. Poor rates, in 1837, £166. The river Ure rises in this township.—The sum of £4 being the yearly rent of an acre of ground in this neighbourhood, is distributed among the poor inhabitants of Sedbusk.—Here is a remarkable waterfall, called Hardraw force, or Hardraw scarr, 99 feet in height. The ravine below the fall is about 300 yards in length; and is bounded on both sides by immense masses of rock.

ABBOTSIDE (LOW), a township in the same parish, separated from High Abbotside by Whitfield gill, in which, about 5 miles lower down the dale than Hardraw force, mentioned in the preceding article, is the picturesque waterfall called Whitfield force. Pop., in 1801, 235; in 1831, 173. Houses 40. Acres 4,360. A. P. £1,294. Poor rates, in 1837, £188.—Here is an alms-house for six poor women, inhabitants of the townships of Askrigg and Low Abbotside, who receive a stipend of £10 per annum each.—Not far from this place, and close to Meerbeck, Dr Whitaker informs us, is the original site of Jervaulx abbey.

ABBOTS-ISLE. See ISLE-ABBOTS.

ABBOTS-KERSWELL, a parish in the hund. of Haytor, union of Newton-Abbots, Devonshire; 1½ mile south from Newton-Abbots. Living, a vicarage in the archd. of Totness and dio. of Exeter; rated at £11 1s. 3d.; gross income £278. Patron, the crown. Pop., in 1801, 389; in 1831, 442. Houses 93. Acres 1,670. A. P. £2,902. Poor rates, in 1837, £160.—"A small monastery of Cluniac monks, for which reason it has been sometimes reckoned among the alien priories, but it was only a cell to Montacute in Somersetshire, a house of that order, and as parcel of its possessions, was granted to John Etherege, 38° Henry VIII."—Tanner's 'Notitia Monastica.'

ABBOTS-LANGLEY, a parish within the liberty of St Albans, hund. of Cashio, Watford union, Hertfordshire; 2 miles south-east from King's Langley, and ¾ from Watford station, on the London and Birmingham railway. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of St Albans and dio. of London; rated at £15; gross income £315. Patron, in 1835, Sir J. Filmer. The church, which has been recently enlarged, contains some handsome monuments. There is a National daily and Sunday school here. Pop., in 1801, 1,205; in 1831, 1,980. The increase of population in this parish is ascribed to the establishment of paper-mills. Houses 371. Acres 5,100. A. P. £8,290. Poor rates, in 1837, £631.—This parish is crossed by the Grand Junction canal, and the London and Birmingham railway. It was the birth-place of Nicholas de Breakpear, who was raised to the papal throne, under the title of Adrian IV.

ABBOTS-LEIGH, a parish in the hund. of Portbury, union of Bedminster, Somersetshire. Living, a curacy not in charge, annexed to the vicarage of Bedminster, in the archd. of Bath and dio. of Bath and Wells; gross income £78. Patrons, the dean and chapter of Sarum. Pop., in 1801, 292; in 1831, 360. Houses 44. Acres 2,150. A. P. £4,170. Poor rates, in 1837, £115.—In the church-yard are the remains of an ancient stone-cross. The prefix to the name is derived from the circumstance of the manor having formerly been the property of the abbot of St Augustine in Bristol. The manor-house gave shelter to Charles II. after the battle of Worcester. On the same site has been erected Leigh-house, an elegant structure, commanding beautiful views, and containing a superb collection of paintings.

ABBOTSLEY, or ABBOTS-LEIGH, a parish in the hund. of Toseland, St Neot's union, Huntingdonshire; 4½ miles south-east from St Neots. Living, a discharged vicarage, formerly in the archd. of Huntingdon, and dio. of Lincoln, now in the dio. of Ely; rated at £8 17s.; gross income, £85. Patrons, the master and fellows of Baliol College, Oxford. Pop. in 1801, 287; in 1831, 369. Houses, 82. Acres, 2,110. A. P. £1,686. Poor rates, in 1837, £291.

ABBOTS-MORTON, a parish in the lower division of Blackenhurst hund., Alcester union, Worcestershire; 10 miles east from Worcester, and 6 from the Birmingham and Gloucester railway. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Worcester; rated at £8; gross income, £155. Patron, in 1835, Thomas Eades, Esq. Pop. in 1801, 191; in 1831, 233. Houses 52. Acres 1,420. A. P. £1,563. Poor rates, in 1837, £75.

ABBOTS-NEWTON. See NEWTON-ABBOT'S.

ABBOTS-NORTON. See NORTON-ABBOTS.

ABBOTS-STOCK. See STONE-ABBAS.

ABBOTSTON. See ABBON.

ABBOTSTONE, a parish in the Winchester division of the hund. of Bountisborough, Alresford union, Southamptonshire; 2½ miles north-west from New Alresford. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Winchester, united with the vicarage of Itchin-Stoke. Patron, in 1835, A. Baring, Esq. The population returned with Itchin-Stoke.

ABDASTON, or ADBASTON, a parish and township in the northern division of the hund. of Pirehill, Newport union, county of Stafford; $4\frac{1}{2}$ miles west by south from Eccleshall, and 2 miles north of the Birmingham and Liverpool junction canal. Living, a perpetual curacy in the peculiar jurisdiction of the Bishop of Lichfield; gross income, £100. Patron, the dean of Lichfield. Pop., including that of the townships of Bishop's Offlow, Flashbrook, with Batchacre and Tunstall, in 1801, 407; in 1831, 601. Houses 112. Acres 5,330. A. P. £3,819. Poor rates, in 1837, £315.

ABDON, a parish in the hund. of Munslow, Ludlow union, county of Salop; 10 miles north-east from Ludlow, and 2 south-east from Tugford. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. of Salop, and dio. of Hereford; rated at £3 6s. 8d.; gross income, £147. Patron, in 1835, Hon. S. Herbert. Pop. in 1801, 134; in 1831, 170. Houses 35. Acres 710. A. P. £609. Poor rates, in 1837, £72.

ABENBURY-FECHAN, a township in that part of the parish of Wrexham, which is in Flintshire. The post town is Wrexham. Pop. in 1801, 110; in 1831, 113. Houses 25. A. P. £472. Poor rates, in 1837, £44.

ABENBURY-VAWR, a township in the same parish, but in that larger portion of it which is situated in Denbighshire. Both townships are in the Wrexham union. Pop. in 1801, 121; in 1831, 214. Poor rates, in 1837, £76.

ABER,* a parish and village in the hund. of Uchaf, Bangor and Beaumaris union, Carnarvonshire; $4\frac{1}{2}$ miles east from Bangor, the post town, and on the road betwixt that place and Aberconway. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Bangor; rated at £14 7s. 3 $\frac{1}{2}$ d.; gross income £412. Patron, in 1835, R. B. Bulkeley, Esq. Pop. in 1801, 501; in 1831, 552. Houses 102. A. P. £1,351. Poor rates, in 1837, £176. This parish has experienced a decrease of 69 persons in its population, since the census of 1821, which is attributed to emigration to America. There is a free-school here, founded by Dr Jones, dean of Bangor, about 1719; and a commodious school-house has recently been erected by the parish. There is also a daily and Sunday National school. The pleasing little village of Aber is situated at the mouth of the river Gwynnreglin, which here discharges itself into the Irish sea; and here is one of the ferries to Anglesea. When the tide is out, the Lavan sands are dry for 4 miles, over which the passenger has to walk to the channel where the ferry-boat plies. The farms here are very small, and are chiefly cultivated by the tenants and their families.—The mountain, Penmaen Mawr, (altitude 1,540 feet,) is situated about 3 miles east from Aber; and the Rhayader Mawr, a celebrated cataract, is also in this neighbourhood.—The palace or castle of Llewelyn ap Gryffydd, Prince of Wales, who died in 1240, stood in the neighbourhood of this village. Vestiges of the castle-moat still remain.

ABERAERON, or ABERAYRON, a small post town and port in the parish of Llan-dde-wi-aber-arth, hund. of Iar, Aberaeron union, Cardiganshire. It is pleasantly situated on Cardigan bay, at the mouth of the Aeron, or Ayron, a small stream about 12 miles in length, 15 miles south-west from Aberystwith, and 12 $\frac{1}{2}$ north-west from Lampeter. The trade of the port consists in the exportation of oats, butter, and lead-ore, and importation of lime-stone and coal. Court-leets are held here in May and October; and petty sessions for the lower division of the hundred of Iar. A statute-fair is held annually on the 13th of November. The Aberaeron poor-law union embraces a district containing a population, returned in 1831 at 12,308. An Independent church was formed here in 1822. The population is returned with the parish: it amounts to about 300. In the neighbourhood are the ruins of castle Cadwgan, an ancient fortress.

ABERARTH. See LLAN-DDEWI.

ABERAVON, a borough and parish in the hund. and union of Neath, county of Glamorgan, situated at the mouth of the Avon, on the east side of Swansea bay, 18 miles north-west from Cowbridge, and 5 south-east from Neath. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Llandaff; rated at £9 4s. 9 $\frac{1}{2}$ d.; gross income £184. Patron, in 1835, J. Richards, Esq. There is a National school here. Pop. in 1801, 275; in 1831, 573. Houses 125. The rapid increase of population is attributed to the iron-works in the neighbourhood. Assessed taxes, in 1830, £19. Parochial assessment, in 1829, £82 9s. Poor rates, in 1837, £104.

The borough of Aberavon is one of the Swansea district of boroughs, which jointly return one member to parliament. The number of electors registered in 1836, was 97. The corporation consists of a portreeve, alderman, and burgesses. There are, belonging to this borough, 99 acres of inclosed land, which, by an old ordinance, are divided amongst the thirty-three oldest burgesses, three acres being allotted to each, which they hold for their lives; and on their deaths, their allotment goes to their widows during widowhood. The imports to Aberavon are chiefly copper ore and tin from Cornwall; the exports, copper in bars and sheets, tin-plates, and coals. The amount of exports has increased considerably. Average revenue of the borough £40, and some small tolls taken by the portreeve. There is an annual fair held here on the 12th November. The hills in the neighbourhood are rich in coals and iron, and some important manufactories have, in consequence, sprung up. The principal are two tin-plate works, and the British copper companies at Tai-bach, about three-quarters of a mile off. A harbour and railway are projected in the neighbourhood, and the importance of the place is rapidly increasing.

ABERBAIDAN, a hamlet in the parish of Llanelly, Breconshire, 5 miles west from Abergavenny. Pop. in 1801, 608; in 1831, 1,781; returned with the parish in 1831. A. P. £1,804.

ABERCWHILER, a township in the parish of Bod-fary, Denbighshire, situated at the union of the streams Chwiler and Clwyd, $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles north-east from Denbigh. The Calvinistic Methodists have a chapel here. Pop. in 1831, 486. Houses 96. A. P. £3,588. Poor rates, in 1837, £403.

ABERCONWAY. See CONWAY.

ABERDARE, a parish in the hund. of Miskin, Merthyr-Tydvil union, Glamorganshire; 4 miles south-west from Merthyr-Tydvil, 21 south from Brecknock, and 179 from London. It includes the hamlets of Cefnpennar, Cwmdare, Forehaman, and Llwydod. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. and dio. of Llandaff, valued in the parliamentary returns at £89 per annum; gross income £184. Patron, the vicar of Llantrissant. A Baptist church was formed here in 1810, and an Independent church in 1837. There are also two National schools. Pop. in 1801, 1,486; in 1831, 3,961. Houses 809. The increase of population is attributed to the enlargement of the extensive iron-works in this parish, which employ upwards of 500 men, and were in a very flourishing condition a few years since. It is, however, stated, that, owing to a partial decline, the population in 1831 was

* The word aber, or abera, signifies the mouth of a river; and, in British topography, will generally be found indicative of this feature in the locality of places.

1,039 persons less than in 1828. Fairs are held here on the 1st and 16th April, 10th August, 13th November, and 7th December. A. P. £5,370. Poor rates, in 1837, £784.—This place gave birth to Jeuan Dhu ab Dafydd ab Owain, a Welsh poet of the 15th century; also to the Rev. Edward Evans, an eminent dissenting divine and poet. The Cynon, a tributary of the Taff, waters the beautiful vale of Aberdare. The Aberdare canal joins the Cardiff and Merthyr-Tydvil canal at the junction of the Cynon and Taff.

ABERDARON, a parish in the hund. of Comytmaen, Pwllheli union, Carnarvonshire, situated at the fall of the Daron into Carnarvon bay, 20 miles south-west from Pwllheli. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Bangor; rated at £3 9s. 4½d., and in the parliamentary return at £97 10s. per annum; gross income, £82. Patron, in 1835, the Bishop of Bangor. The church was formerly much frequented as a sanctuary. There are three Calvinistic Methodist churches here: founded respectively in 1768, 1770, and 1800; also a National school. Pop. in 1801, 1,141; in 1831, 1,389. Houses 268. The inhabitants are almost entirely employed in agriculture. A. P. £3,720. Poor rates, in 1837, £575.

ABERDDAW, a hamlet and port in the parish of St Athan, Glamorganshire. There is another hamlet of the same name, a little to the east.

ABERDYFI, a township in the parish of Penalt, hund. of Estimaner, Merionethshire. It is situated on the northern side of the estuary of the Dyfi, 9 miles north from Aberystwith, and has a pretty good harbour. The petty sessions for the division are held here.

ABEREDOW, a parish in the hund. of Colwyn, Radnorshire, 14 miles south-west from New Radnor, and 4 miles south-east from Builth, in Breconshire, and included in the Builth union. Living, a rectory with that of Llanvareth, in the archd. of Brecon and dio. of St David's; rated at £12 13s. 4d.; gross income, £417. Patron, the bishop of St David's. It is situated upon the river Edw, at the union of which stream with the Wye, in this parish, are the remains of Llewelyn-ap-Griffith's castle. Pop. in 1801, 333; in 1831, 344. Houses 65. A. P. £1,201. Poor rates, in 1837, £304. The neighbourhood abounds in beautiful and romantic scenery.

ABERERCH, a parish in the hund. of Dinlaen, 2 miles north-east of Pwllheli, Pwllheli union, Carnarvonshire; near the mouth of the Erch, which discharges itself into Cardigan bay. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. and dio. of Bangor, having Penrhos chapelry annexed to it; rated at £6, and in the parliamentary returns at £105 per annum; gross income £96. Patron, the crown. There is a National school here. Pop. in 1801, 1129; in 1831, 1365. Houses 270. A. P. £2,275. Poor rates, in 1837, £572.

ABERFFRAW, a seaport and parish, partly in the hund. of Mallaeth, and partly in that of Menai, Anglesey union, island of Anglesey; 18 miles west-south-west of Bangor, and 6 north-west of Newborough. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Anglesey and dio. of Bangor; rated at £20 15s. 10d.; gross income £967. Patron, the crown. The church is said to have been originally built in 616; the present structure was founded in 1729. A Calvinistic Methodist church was formed here in 1780. There is a free school in this parish, founded in 1735 by Sir Arthur Owen of Orieltown. Number of free scholars 30. There is also a daily and Sunday National school. The harbour at the mouth of the Ffraw, which here falls into a small bay in St George's channel, is convenient for small vessels. The principal trade is fishing. Cattle fairs are held here on the 7th of March, Tuesday before Easter, Wednesday after Trinity, the 11th of August, 23d of October, and 11th of December. Pop. in 1801, 936; in 1831, 1367. Houses 266. A. P. £3,976. Poor rates, £656.—At Dindryfal, in this parish, are the ruins of Cappel-Mair, or St Mary's chapel, formerly the residence of the princess of North Wales, and one of the places at which the Eisteddfodd, or assembly of the bards, used to be held.

ABERFORD, a parish in the lower division of the wapentake of Skyrack, west riding of Yorkshire; comprising the greater part of the township of Aberford, and the townships of Parlington and Sturton-grange. Living, a discharged vicarage, formerly in the archd. and dio. of York, now in the archd. of Craven and dio. of Ripon; rated at £6 1s. 8d.; gross income, £305; and in the patronage of Oriel college, Oxford. Two portions of the township of Aberford are detached from the parish: one being in the liberty of St Peter, York, and the other in the parish of Sherburn. The village consists of a long straggling street, built on a gentle acclivity of limestone rock, near the small river Cock, on the Great North road, about 3 miles north of the Leeds and Selby railroad, 5½ miles south-west from Tadcaster, and 186 north-west from London. The church is an ancient structure of mixed architecture. There is a Catholic chapel here, and also a Methodist chapel. In 1738, Lady Elizabeth Hastings founded a small charity school here, which has been converted into a National one on Bell's plan. In the days of Camden this town was celebrated for the manufacture of pins; but this branch of trade no longer exists. Fairs for cattle, sheep, and pedlary, are held here on the last Mondays in April and May, the first Monday in October, Monday after the 18th of October, and Monday after the 2d of November. Coal and limestone, and a fine white building stone, are plentiful in the neighbourhood. The town is under the jurisdiction of the county-magistrates; and petty sessions for the lower division of the wapentake of Skyrack, and the upper division of Barkstone-Ash, are held here. In 1837, Aberford was named one of the polling-districts for the west riding of Yorkshire. Pop. of the parish, in 1801, 894; in 1831, 925. Houses 194. Acres 3,820. A. P. £6,456. Pop. of the township, in 1801, 650; in 1831, 644. Houses 138. Acres 1,490. A. P. £1,516. Poor rates, in 1837, £159.—This parish is in the line of the Roman road; and in the neighbourhood is Huddleston-hall, a building of great antiquity.

ABERGAVENNY HUNDRED, Monmouthshire, is bounded on the north by Herefordshire; on the east by the hund. of Skenfreth, Ragland, and Usk; on the south and south-west by the hund. of Went Lloog; and on the west by Breconshire. It is divided into the Upper and the Lower divisions. The former contains 45,300 statute acres, and a population, in 1831, of 23,651; the latter 32,990 acres, and a population of 7,167.

ABERGAVENNY, a parish partly in the upper, but chiefly in the lower division of the hund. and union of the same name, Monmouthshire; 13½ miles west of Monmouth, and 156 distant from London. It comprises the market-town of Abergavenny, and the hamlets of Hardwicke and Lloyndd.

Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Llandaff; rated at £15 3s. 11½d.; gross income £461. Patron, in 1835, C. R. Tynte. The church has recently been rebuilt. It is a spacious structure, and contains several very ancient monuments. Its choir remains in its original state, with rudely carved oaken stalls. The Independent church in Castle street was formed in 1700; the Baptist church in Frogmore street, in 1807; the Wesleyan Methodist church, in 1812; and the second Baptist church, in 1828. There is also a Roman Catholic chapel here. The free grammar-school, founded by Henry VIII., has 18 scholars on its foundation, and is under the patronage of Jesus' college, Oxford. There are also a Lancasterian school, a National school, and several Sunday schools.

The town—supposed, and with considerable certainty since the recent discovery of various Roman remains near the castle, to be the Gobanium of Antoninus—is finely situated near the conflux of the Gavenny and Usk, over the latter of which streams a bridge of 15 arches is thrown, a little to the west of the town. It is built in rather an irregular manner, and pleasantly interspersed with trees. On an eminence near the south end are the ruins of the castle, which confers, by tenure, the title of earl on the family of Neville, and was built soon after the Conquest, by Hameline de Balun, or Baladon, one of whose descendants founded a priory for Benedictine monks, of which some vestiges also exist here. Abergavenny is described by Leland as “a faire walled-towne, meatly well-inhabited.” Some parts of the ancient wall still remain. Previous to the Revolution, it was a corporate town of great trade, governed by a bailiff, recorder, and 27 councillors; but forfeited its charter in the reign of William III., by refusing to take the necessary oaths. The petty sessions for the lower division of the hundred are held here; it is one of the polling-places for the county, and the centre of a poor-law union, embracing 126 square miles, with a pop., in 1831, of 30,427. The average annual expenditure for the poor in the district thus embraced, during the three years preceding the union, was £6,817; in 1838, it was reduced to £3,442. Abergavenny is on the high road from Brecon to Monmouth, and is the thoroughfare from the western parts of Wales to Bath, Bristol, and Gloucester; the Monmouthshire and Brecon canal—which passes within a mile to the west of the town—adds greatly to its trade. The railway, also, which joins this canal to Llanfihangel-cruorney-Court, and afterwards proceeds to the town of Hereford, passes within half-a-mile of Abergavenny. The market-days are Tuesday and Saturday; the latter principally for grain. Fairs are held on the 14th of May for lean cattle and sheep; on the 25th of September for horses, hogs, and flannel; and on the 19th of November. The principal trade is in wool. Large quantities of the far-famed Welsh flannel were, about the beginning of last century, manufactured in the vicinity, the sheep on the neighbouring hills supplying a very fine wool, and the water being peculiarly calculated to render it soft and delicate. One factory was at Llanover, one at Llangrwyney, one at Llandilo, and it is probable that another was established near the Priory. Abergavenny was also celebrated for its manufacture of periwigs made of goats' hair, with which the men of fashion of the day decorated their heads. These wigs were valued according to their extreme whiteness, and would oftentimes fetch 40 guineas. Towards the middle of last century, from various unfavourable circumstances, Abergavenny was falling fast into decay; but about 1755 the town again became a place of considerable notoriety. The newly-constructed turnpike-roads, while they opened other channels for the transit trade, induced many wealthy English families to visit Wales; and the benefit which consumptive invalids were supposed to derive from drinking goats' whey now rendered Abergavenny a place of fashionable resort. There is, however, a fashion in medicine as well as in dress; men of fashion began to decline wearing goats' hair, and physicians to prescribe goats' whey, and so Abergavenny was once more destined to sink into insignificance. It has, however, again revived, and is becoming a place of trade. The Abergavenny Cymreigyddion society is of some importance in the principality. There are two provincial banks in the town: viz. the Monmouth and Glamorganshire Banking company; and the Monmouthshire Agricultural and Commercial Bank. There is a cross mail to Merthyr, 20 miles; and to Newport, 22 miles. Also a penny-post to Pontypool. Pop., in 1801, 2,573; in 1831, 4,230. Houses 830. Acres 4,290. A. P. £11,075. Poor rates, in 1837, £910.—About 3½ miles north-north-east from Abergavenny, is the Sugar-loaf mountain, 1,800 feet above the level of the sea.

ABERGELEY, a sea-port, market-town, and parish, in the hund. of Isdulas, union of St. Asaph, county of Denbigh; 7 miles north-west from St. Asaph, by the post-road to Aberconway. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. and dio. of St. Asaph and Bangor; rated at £12 9s. 9d.: gross income £400. Patron, the Bishop of St. Asaph and Bangor. There are also chapels of the Wesleyan and the Calvinistic Methodists, and Independents; and a National school. The sum of £190 has been bequeathed in various sums to the poor of this parish. By the bequest of Bishop Fleetwood and Edward Hughes, a number of poor children here receive the elements of education. The petty sessions for the hundred are held here. Abergeley is within half-a-mile of the sea, and being now much resorted to for bathing, has increased considerably in size of late years. The scenery of the neighbourhood is singularly beautiful; near the town is a remarkable cave, said to extend several miles in length. Cattle-fairs, large, and well-attended, are held here on the second of April, the day before Holy Thursday, the 20th of August, and the 9th of October. Pop., in 1801, 1,748; in 1831, 2,506. Houses 493. A. P. £9,232. Poor rates, in 1837, £1,722.

ABERGORLECH, a chapelry to the vicarage of Llanybyther, Carmarthenshire; 7 miles south by east from Llanybyther. Patron, the vicar of Llanybyther.

ABERGWAIN. See FISHGUARD.

ABERG WILLY, a village and parish in the hund. of Elvet, Carmarthenshire, including the hamlets of Crug-Glass, Fyneu, Glann-Tywi, Hengil, and Ystym-Gwill. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Carmarthen and dio. of St. David's; rated at £3 6s. 8d., and in the diocesan report at £110 17s. 10d. per annum; gross income £104. Patron, the bishop of St. David's. The church was made collegiate in 1297 by Beck, bishop of St. David's; but, in 1531, was annexed to the college at Brecknock. Its revenue at the dissolution was valued at £42 per annum. The Calvinistic Methodists have two churches here; one formed in 1766, and the other in 1799. Abergwilly is situated on the Gwili, a tributary of the Tywi, 2 miles east by north from Carmarthen. It is governed by a portreeve, chosen annually at a court-leet holden for the bishop of St. David's as lord of the manor of Fyneu. There is a free school here for 12 children; and a daily and Sunday National school. Fairs for cattle, horses, and pedlery, are holden on the 2d and 27th of October. Pop., in 1801, 1,617; in 1831, 2,675. A. P. £8,831. Poor rates, in 1837, £1,629.—There were formerly several chapels in this parish, of which that of Llanfihangel-Wchwilw remains, and the ruins of another called Chapel-Bach.—The palace of the bishop of St. David's is situated near this village.

ABERHAFESP, a parish in the hund. of Newtown, Newtown and Llandiloes union, Montgomeryshire; 3 miles west by north from Newtown. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. and dio. of St. Asaph; rated at £9 6s. 8d.; gross income £304. Patron, the bishop of St. Asaph and Bangor. Pop., in 1801, 475; in 1831, 535. Houses 398. A. P. £2,179. Poor rates, in 1837, £421. The population is chiefly agricultural; the remainder of the inhabitants are employed as fishermen and in quarries.

ABERLLUNVEY, formerly a parish, but now a hamlet, in the parish of Glasbury, Brecknockshire. Pop., in 1821, 100; in 1831, 125. Poor rates, £76.

ABERMAW. See BARMOUTH.

ABERNANT, a parish and township in the hund. of Elvet, county and union of Carmarthen, intersected by the river Cywyn, and including the chapelry of Convil-in-Elvet. It is $4\frac{1}{2}$ miles west by north from Carmarthen.—Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Carmarthen and dio. of St. David's; rated at £7 13s. 4d., and in the parliamentary return at £61 10s.; gross income £104. Patron, in 1835, the Duke of Leeds.—Pop. of the parish, in 1801, 1,326; in 1831, 2,230. Houses 392. A. P., in 1815, £4,758. Poor rates, in 1837, £254.

ABER-PERGWIN, a chapelry to the vicarage of Cadoxton, Glamorganshire; 9 miles north-east from Neath. Pop., in 1831, 1,073. The Neath canal passes in the immediate neighbourhood of the town.

ABER-PORTH, a parish in the hund. of Troedyraur, union and county of Cardigan. It is pleasantly situated on Cardigan bay; 7 miles north-north-east of Cardigan.—Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. of Cardigan and dio. of St. David's; rated at £5 13s. 9d., and in the parliamentary returns at £74 2s. 6d.; gross income £110. Patron, the bishop of St. David's. The Calvinistic Methodists have a church here, founded in 1795.—A number of small craft belong to the place, some of which are employed in the herring-fishery, but the larger proportion trade between Liverpool, Milford, and the intermediate ports. Pop., in 1801, 345; in 1831, 485. Houses 104. A. P. £704. Poor rates, in 1837, £180.

ABER-RHIW. See BERRIEW.

ABERYSKIR, a parish in the hund. of Merthyr, Brecknock union, Brecknockshire; $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles north-west by west from Brecknock, on the post-road to Llandovery.—Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of St. David's; rated at £3 6s. 3d.; in the parliamentary return at £135; gross income £150. Patron, in 1835, David Jones, Esq.—Pop., in 1801, 160; in 1831, 110. Houses 19. A. P. £934. Poor rates, in 1837, £95.

ABERYSTWITH, a market-town, borough, seaport, and chapelry, in the parish of Llanbadarn-Fawr, union of Aberystwith, hund. of Gneuer-Glynn, Cardiganshire; 207 miles from London, and 39 north-east of Cardigan; on the river Rheidol, which passes through the town, and joins the Ystwith within a quarter of a mile of the sea. Aberystwith Proper lies on the right bank of the Rheidol; the part of the town on the left bank is called Trefechan.

Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. of Cardigan and dio. of St. David's; valued in the diocesan report of 1809 at £86 2s.; gross income £139. The chapelry contains about 400 acres of land, and the borough is co-extensive with it. There is a tradition that it was once an independent parish. A new chapel has recently been erected under the auspices of the incorporated society for building churches and chapels. Patron, the vicar of Llanbadarn-Fawr. The parish-church is about a mile distant from Aberystwith. See LLANBADARN-FAWR. A Baptist church was formed here in 1788; an Independent church in 1819; a Wesleyan Methodist in 1814; and a Calvinistic Methodist in 1785. There are 2 National schools.

The situation of the town of Aberystwith, on the bay of Cardigan, is very pleasant. The streets are steep and uneven, but some of them are broad, and contain respectable houses and shops; the houses are mostly built of a dark-coloured slate-stone. The marine terrace, consisting of a broad parade fronting the sea, presents some excellent houses, and good buildings are rising in various directions, especially along the beach to the north, and on the rising ground on the north-east. The town was incorporated by Edward I., but has no charter; it was governed by a mayor, recorder, and common council. It has now, under the 5th and 6th William IV. c. 76, a commission of the peace, and a municipal body consisting of a mayor, 4 aldermen, and 12 councillors; and, in conjunction with Cardigan, Lampeter, and Adpar, sends a member to parliament. The parliamentary boundary includes the chapelry of Aberystwith, and the townships of Issa-yn-dref, and Vainor-Issa: containing 576 houses in 1836. The number of parliamentary electors registered in 1832, was 357; of municipal electors in 1837, 286. The petty-sessions for the lower division of the hund. are held here. The average annual revenue of the town is about £80; but this will be much increased by the falling-in of certain current leases. The amount of assessed taxes levied in 1831, was £925 5s. 8d.—The Aberystwith poor-law union comprehends 30 parishes, containing a population, estimated, in 1831, at 20,026. Amount expended for the poor of this district, during the three years preceding the union, £4,914. Poor rates, in 1837, £914. Fairs are held on the Monday before the 5th January, Palm-Monday, Whit-Monday, and the first Monday after the 11th November. The National and Provincial bank of England, and the North and South Wales bank, have branches here. Pop. of the borough or chapelry, in 1801, 1,758; in 1831, 4,128. The census of 1831 did not include such of the inhabitants as were on board vessels: these were estimated at above 400. Houses 712. Assessed property, in 1815, £4,861. Assessed taxes, in 1830, £925. There is a cross-mill from Cheltenham to Aberystwith.—The port of Aberystwith extends as far as Llan-St.-Fraid southward, and the river Diswyning northward. The customs, in 1837, amounted to £1,637. In 1835, 129 vessels, of the aggregate burthen of 6,737 tons, belonged to the port. The exports are lead-ore, from Cardiganshire, pig-lead, which is smelted at the Devil's bridge, oak-bark, corn, and butter. The quantity of the last two articles exported is less than formerly; the consumption of the town being now more nearly equal to the production of the neighbouring country. The imports are coal, culm, and lime, from North and South Wales, groceries, shop-goods in general, and American timber direct. The commerce has lately increased very much; the entrance to the harbour was very dangerous, scarcely admitting vessels of 250 tons, but has recently been deepened 3 feet 6 inches.

Aberystwith is at present in a flourishing condition, and its increase has been exceedingly rapid. Forty or fifty years ago there were few besides thatched houses in the town; it is now one of the most fashionable watering-places on the Welsh coast. It is calculated that, in the months of August, September, and October, upwards of 1,500 persons come to reside in the town, and that the casual visitors during that period amount to several thousands. Races are held in August. Agriculture in the neighbourhood of Aberystwith has undergone great improvement within the last few years. The first person who raised wheat in the county is said to have died only a few years ago. The land for pasture and hay is let at about £4 per acre in the neighbourhood of the town: during the war, £14 or £15 per acre were sometimes given. Apart from the town, the usual rent is £1 5s. per acre.—The principal mines in the neighbourhood are those of Cwmystwith, Cluernog, and Cwmsumlog, from the last of which Sir Hugh Middleton, who conducted the new river to London, is said to have derived his wealth.—About 7 miles north of Aberystwith a great extent of fen-land on the sea-coast has been recovered by drainage and embanking.—In the neighbourhood of the town is a monument said to be that of the poet Taliessin, who flourished A. D. 540.

ABERYSTWITH, a chapelry in the upper division of the hund. and in the union of Abergavenny, Monmouthshire, 9 miles south-west by west of Abergavenny. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. and dio. of Llandaff; gross income £265. Patron, in 1835, the Earl of Abergavenny. The chapel has recently been enlarged. Pop., in 1801, 805; in 1831, 5,992. The extraordinary increase on these returns is attributable to the extensive opening of collieries and of forges in the vicinity. Houses 1,008. Acres 10,930. A. P. £5,463. Poor rates, in 1837, £580.

ABINGDON,

A burgh and market-town, having separate jurisdiction, in the hund. of Hormer, union of Abingdon, county of Berks; 55½ miles west-north-west of London; 25 north-west of Reading; 6 from Oxford; and 14 by water from Wallingford. It is 4 miles north of the Great Western railway, and on the post-road from Henley-on-Thames to Faringdon.

Ecclesiastical affairs.—Abingdon is divided into the two parishes of St. Nicholas and St. Helen. The latter includes the townships of Northcourt, Sandford, Barton, and Shippon, which are without the limits of the burgh. The former is a sinecure rectory; rated at £7, and in the parliamentary returns at £18 18s. 6d.; gross income £30. Patron, the Crown. The living of St. Helen is a discharged vicarage, formerly in the archd. of Berks and dio. of Salisbury, now in the dio. of Oxford; rated at £29 15s. 3d.; gross income £225. Patron, the Crown. The church of St. Nicholas is a very ancient structure. According to Leland, it was “of old tyme, the chefe parochie-churche of Abingdon, but (when he wrote) the gretyst resort of all the towne was to St. Helens.” The Baptists, Quakers, Congregationalists, and Wesleyan Methodists, have chapels in this town. Of these, the Baptist church in Oak street was founded in 1640.—The free grammar-school was founded in 1563 by John Royse, citizen and mercer of London, for the educating of 63 children, natives of Abingdon. It is entitled to four exhibitions at Pembroke college, Oxford, and has received further donations, especially from Thomas Tesdale, Esq., which render its entire annual revenue £322 11s. 3d. The master has a house and salary of about £74 a-year.—In 1676, Robert Mayott bequeathed property to the corporation, now let at £120 per annum, in trust, for educating poor children in this borough. Several other mortifications for a like purpose were made in the course of the last and preceding century. There are one National and one British school attended by about 400 children. A horticultural and a philanthropic society have recently been formed here.

“An abbey of five hundred monks,” says Tanner in his ‘Notitia Monastica,’ “is said to have been here in the time of the Britons, or Romans, where-in Constantine the Great had his education; but it is more certain, that pretty early in the Saxon times, a small monastery was founded in Bagleywood, upon a hill called Abendune, 4 miles nearer Oxford than the present town of that name. Not prospering there, it was removed to a place lower down upon the river Thames, then named Sevelsham, since Abingdon. This religious house being destroyed in the Danish wars, was, A. D. 955, restored by the care of Ethelwald, its abbot, afterwards bishop of Winchester. The monks were of the order of St. Benedict; numerous benefactions contributed to raise it to the highest rank among the monastic institutions of the kingdom; it became one of the mitred abbeys, and the landed property belonging to the abbot and convent was so extensive that, so early as the time of the Norman survey, they possessed above 30 manors in the county of Berks, besides others which they held as lords of the see; and their revenues were valued, 26^o Henry VIII., at £1,876 10s. 9d. per annum, according to the clear valuation printed by Sir William Dugdale, at the end of the first volume of the ‘Monasticon,’ but, according to the gross valuation in Mr. Speed, at £2,042 2s. 8d. ob. q. per annum.” According to Godwin, Geoffrey of Monmouth, the monkish historian, was abbot of Abingdon; and his remains are said to have been entombed in the abbey here, whence they were translated to St. Helen’s church. He died in 1417. Scarcely any remains of the abbey are now observable. Leland, however, describes it as being, in his times, a very magnificent building, and even when Camden wrote it exhibited obvious marks of its ancient grandeur. Richard Symons, who visited Abingdon in 1644, and whose manuscripts are in the Harleian collection, says: “Farther eastward, and near adjoining to the church (St. Nicholas) still remaine part of the abbey, and much of the ruynes towards the river.” The site of this abbey was granted, 1^o Edward VI., to Sir Thomas Scimoc; and 5^o Edward VI., to Sir Thomas Wroth. The hospital of St. Helen here, was founded by Geoffrey Barbour and Sir John de St. Helena, in the reign of Henry V.—Sir John Mason, one of the masters of requests, and a native of this place, obtained the lands of this hospital, and therewith founded the present hospital, called Christ’s hospital, on the 19th of May, 1553, for the maintenance of 13 poor men and women. Christ’s hospital consists of a long range of apartments, with cloisters in front, and a turret and dome in the centre.—Geoffrey Barbour bequeathed 50 marks for the marriage-portions of 10 poor women, all his wood and coals to be divided among his poor neighbours, and the rest of his estate for the relief of the poor and the repair of highways.—Sir Peter Besila, who flourished about the same time, bequeathed money and divers fair manors and lordships as portions to marry maidens. He founded also a college of White monks at Oxford, and gave £600 to repair any wrong that he or any of his ancestors had done to any one; and what was not claimed on that score he gifted to the poor.—The hospital of St. John the Baptist, without the abbey-gate, over against St. Nicholas’ church, is said by Leland to have been founded by one of the abbots. It is yet in being, under the government of the mayor and aldermen, who maintain therein six poor people. The hospital of St. John was rebuilt by the corporation in 1801, in the Vineyard; and in 1826, E. Beasley added £600 to its endowments.—A third hospital was erected here in 1707, by Charles Twitty, and farther endowed with £600, in 1825, by E. Beasley, and by J. Bedwell and Samuel Cripp, for the maintenance of 3 men and 3 women; a fourth in 1781, for 3 men and 15 women, with the surplus funds of Christ’s hospital; and, in 1823, F. Klein bequeathed £1,000 for behoof of the poor in Abingdon. Besides these, there is a range of handsome alms-houses in Oak street, built by the late B. Tomkins, Esq., for dissenters.

Town, trade, &c.—The town of Abingdon is pleasantly situated at the influx of the Ock into the Thames; and consists of several large streets diverging from the market-place. The market-house is a spacious and elegant building, erected in 1678, with a commodious county-hall, in which the Nisi Prius court is held at the summer-assizes. The county-bridewell is a handsome stone edifice in the parish of St. Helen, erected in 1811-12, at an expense of £26,000. Number of cells 84. Total expense in 1836, £849. It includes a chapel and a court-house, in which the summer-assizes and county-sessions are held. The assizes are held alternately at Reading and Abingdon, and the prisoners for trial are conveyed from the one place to the other, as it happens. The petty-sessions are held at Abingdon for the division of Abingdon. The town of Abingdon received a charter in 3^o and 4^o Philip and Mary, 1557. The old corporation consisted of a mayor, 12 principal burgesses, and 16 secondary burgesses. The mayor had a salary of £150. Under the 5^o and 6^o William IV. c. 76, a commission of the peace has been granted to Abingdon, and a court of quarter-sessions appointed. The style of the corporate body—which now consists of a mayor, 4 aldermen, and 12 councillors—is, 'The mayor, bailiffs, and burgesses of the borough of Abingdon.' The town sends one member to parliament, who is chosen by all the inhabitants paying scot and lot; the mayor is the returning officer. The number of parliamentary electors, on the register in 1837, was 324; of municipal electors, 275; and the borough has usually been considered as an open and unshackled one. Amount of assessed taxes, in 1830, £1,356 5s. 9d. Average annual revenue of the borough, £750; expenditure £600. The corporation has no debt. The principal trades now carried on in Abingdon, are those of malting and carpeting. Leland refers to a considerable manufactory of clothing as carried on at Abingdon, and indeed says expressly that the town "standeth by clothing;" but this had declined even before the time of Queen Mary. During the late war, it was a place of considerable trade in sail-cloth and sackings; but owing to the competition of the establishments in the north of England and in Scotland, this source of employment has materially diminished. The sacking manufactory, however, is again on the increase, the poor rates of the burgh are decreasing, and the general prospects of the town are improving. The market-days are Monday, chiefly for corn, and Friday, which latter, however, is rather a nominal market-day, or the day when corn sold on the Monday is delivered. Fairs for horses and horned cattle are held on the first Monday in Lent, the 6th of May, 20th June, 5th August, 19th September, Monday before old Michaelmas, statute, and the 11th December. Races are held here in September.—From its connection, by canal navigation, with Bath, London, and Bristol, this town is well-calculated for inland traffic. A branch railway is contemplated betwixt this place and the Great Western railway, which it will join in the parish of Didcott. Pop., in 1801, 4,356; in 1831, 5,259. Houses 1,206. Acres 3,930. A. P. £9,023. Poor rates, in 1837, £1,911.—The Abingdon poor-law union embraces a district of 77 square miles, containing 38 parishes, with a population, in 1831, of 16,674. The average annual expenditure for the poor in this district during the three years preceding the union, was £14,467; expenditure, in 1838, £8,335. A work-house has lately been erected at Abingdon for this union, at an expense of about £3,500.

History.—Abingdon was a city of considerable importance in the time of the Britons, and distinguished as a royal residence. By the Saxons it was called Scheovesham; and the learned annotator on Camden supposes it to be the place called, in the Saxon Chronicle, Cloveshoo, where two synods were held in 742 and 822. The 'old book of Abendon,' a manuscript in the Cottonian library, says, that

"Shovesham was, in ancient times, a famous city, goodly to behold, full of riches, encompassed with very fruitful fields, green meadows, spacious pastures, and flocks of cattle abounding with milk: that the king kept his court here; and hither people resorted whilst consultations were depending about the greatest and most weighty affairs of the kingdom." During the civil wars it was garrisoned by the king till the retreat of the royal forces to Oxford in 1644, when Waller's army entered it, and committed many excesses. It gives the title of earl to the family of Bertie. It was the birth-place of Sir John Mason, ambassador at the court of France, and of the late Lord Colchester.

ABINGER, anciently called Abingworth, a parish in the hund. of Wotton, union of Dorking, Surrey; 4½ miles south-west of Dorking. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Surrey and dio. of Winchester; rated at £12 8s. 1½d.; gross income £650. Patron, in 1835, Sir J. Evelyn, Bart. The church contains some ancient monuments. Charity bequeathed to the poor of this parish, by Lady Evelyn, amounts to the annual sum of £8 19s. 7d. The annual sum of £9 is also given, partly for the same purpose, and partly for the apprenticing of children, by the bequest of Henry Smith, in 1627. Pop., in 1801, 632; in 1831, 767. Houses 105. Acres 9,780. A. P. £3,152. Poor rates, in 1837, £499.

ABINGHALL, a parish in the hund. of St. Briavell, union of Westbury, Gloucestershire; 5 miles north-north-west of Newnham; and 3½ miles south of the post-road from Gloucester to Ross. Living, a discharged rectory, formerly in the archd. of Hereford, now in the archd. of Gloucester and dio. of Gloucester and Bristol; rated at £6 6s. 8d., and in the parliamentary returns at £118 5s. 9d. per annum; gross income £142. Patron, in 1835, the Rev. J. Probyn, archdeacon of Llandaff. Pop., in 1801, 185; in 1831, 235. Houses 43. Acres 860. A. P. £1,132. Poor rates, in 1837, £117.

ABINGTON, a parish in the hund. of Spelhoe, union and county of Northampton; 1½ mile east-north-east of Northampton. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Northampton and dio. of Peterborough; rated at £20; gross income £200. Patron, in 1835, J. H. Thursby, Esq. The rent of church-lands in this parish amounts to £16. There are two small charities to the poor. Pop., in 1801, 170; in 1831, 155. Houses 22. Acres 1,190. A. P. £2,401. Poor rates, in 1837, £111.

ABINGTON (GREAT), a parish in the hund. of Chilford, union of Linton, Cambridgeshire; 2½ miles north-west by west of Linton, and 1 mile to the east of the post-road from Newmarket to Bishop Stortford. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Ely; rated at £7 16s. 3d., and in the parliamentary returns at £118; gross income £82. Patron, in 1835, T. Mortlock, Esq. Anciently, a market was held here on Fridays. Tithes commuted in 1801. Pop., in 1801, 273; in 1831, 382. Houses 68. Acres 1,500. A. P. £1,881. Poor rates, in 1837, £210.

ABINGTON (LITTLE), a parish in the same hund. and union, 2½ miles north-west from Linton, and immediately to the north of the above parish. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Ely; rated at £7 6s. 5½d., and in the parliamentary returns at £95; gross income £87. Patroness, in 1835, Mrs. Pern. The following notice of this parish appears in Cole's MSS., No. 5802: "In this parish is an estate or two belonging to Clare Hall in Cambridge, one of which was given to that college by John of Bolton, with this condition, that every first Sunday in Lent, one of the college, who was in orders, should perform divine service there: which is still observed, and one of the fellows goes upon that day and preaches a sermon, for which the vicar is paid for the use of his pulpit 6s. 8d., and the same to the poor of the parish, which is called Bolton's dole. This is my native parish; and in the church and churchyard lie several of my relations." Pop. in 1801, 185; in 1831, 253. Houses 58. Acres 1,120. A. P. £1,515. Poor rates, in 1837, £147.

ABINGTON-IN-THE-CLAY, or ABINGTON-PICOTTS, a parish in the hund. of Armington, Royston union, county of Cambridge; 5½ miles west-north-west from Royston, and 2 miles west of the post-road from Rutford to Huntingdon. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Ely; rated at £16 2s. 3½d.; gross income £330. Patron, in 1835, M. G. F. Pigott, Esq. Church dedicated to St Michael. Here was anciently a market on Fridays. The parish was inclosed pursuant to an act passed in 1770. Pop. in 1801, 177; in 1831, 259. Houses 38. Acres 1,260. A. P. £1,575. Poor rates, in 1837, £163.

AB-KETTLEBY, a parish in the hund. of Framland, Melton-Mowbray union, county of Leicester; 3½ miles north-west by north from Melton-Mowbray, and on the post road from that town to Nottingham. It contains the townships of Ab-Kettleby and Holwell. Living, a vicarage in the archd. of Leicester and dio. of Lincoln; rated at £15 10s. 5d. Patron, in 1829, the Rev. T. Bingham. Pop. in 1801, 254; in 1831, 331. Houses 70. Acres 2,920. A. P. £1,678. Poor rates, in 1837, £127.

ABLINGTON, a tything in the parish of Bibury, Gloucestershire; 5½ miles north-north-west from Fairford, and 1½ from Bibury. Pop., in 1801, 118; in 1831, 103.

ABNEY, a hamlet in the parish of Hope, Derbyshire; 4½ miles north-east from Tideswell. Pop. in 1801, 145; in 1831, 112. Houses 23. A. P. £991.

ABRAM, a township in the parish of Wigan, county-palatine of Lancaster; 4½ miles north-north-east from Newton-in-Makerfield, on the Newton and Wigan railroad. A church has recently been built here. Pop. in 1801, 475; in 1831, 511. Houses 84. Acres 1,790. A. P. £3,339.

ABRIDGE, a hamlet in the parish of Lambourne, county of Essex; 4½ miles south from Epping, on the road from Chipping-Ongar to Walthamstow. A fair is held here, June 2d.

ABSON, ABSTON, or ABBOTSTON, a chapelry in the parish and hund. of Pucklechurch, Chipping-Sodbury union, county of Gloucester; 7 miles east by north from Bristol. It includes the hamlets of Wick, Berdwick, Church-Eight, and Holybrook. Living, a curacy united to the vicarage of Pucklechurch, in the archd. of Gloucester and dio. of Gloucester and Bristol. The manor of Abson anciently belonged to the abbey of Glastonbury; it was afterwards annexed to the see of Bath and Wells, but purchased by Henry VIII. Pop., in 1801, 571; in 1831, 824. Houses 159. Acres 2,170. A. P. £5,219. Poor rates, in 1837, £283.—Above the village of Abson, rises a rocky perpendicular hill to the height of above 200 feet, consisting of alternate strata of limestone and petrosilex. In the vicinity are vestiges of an ancient camp.—At Toghil, in this parish, Sir Ralph Hopton defeated the parliamentary forces in 1643. The battle lasted nearly twelve hours.

ABTHORPE, a parish and village in the hund. and union of Towcester, county of Northampton; 3 miles west-south-west from Towcester. It comprehends the hamlets of Charlock and Foscoate. Living, a vicarage in the archd. of Northampton and dio. of Peterborough; rated in the parliamentary return at £60 per annum; gross income £241. Patron, in 1835, the bishop of Lichfield and Coventry. Silk stockings were formerly manufactured here to a considerable extent; but the trade has greatly declined of late years. Pop. in 1801, 393; in 1831, 477. Houses 88. Acres 1,960. A. P. £2,327. Poor rates, in 1837, £349.

ABURY. See AVEBURY.

ABY, a parish, united to Belleau in 1732, in the marsh division of Calceworth hund., parts of Lindsey, and union of Louth, Lincolnshire; 2½ miles north-west from Alford. Living, a discharged vicarage, with the rectory of Belleau, in the archd. and dio. of Lincoln; rated at £6 3s. 6d. Patron, in 1835, Lord Willoughby d'Eresby. In 1801, including the hamlet of Greenfield, it contained a pop. of 122; in 1831, 204. Houses 42. Acres 1,560. A. P. £1,184. Poor rates, in 1837, £174.

ACASTER-MALBIS, or OVER-ACASTER, a parish, including a township of the same name, partly in the wapentake of Ouse and Derwent, east riding of York, and partly in the ainsty of the city of York, union of York; 3½ miles south of York, and about 1½ mile west of the line of the Northern and Eastern railway. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. and dio. of York; rated at £5 6s. 5½d., and in the parliamentary return of 1810 at £32 per annum; gross income £56. The windows of the chancel contain some curious stained glass figures. Patron, in 1835, F. Lawley, Esq. A college, with a provost and two or three fellows, was founded here by Robert Stillington, and dedicated to St Andrew, valued at £27 13s. 4d. per annum, nett. By the bequest of John Knowles, in 1603, the sum of £35 is yearly given, partly for the instruction of 14 poor children, and partly to the poor of the parish. The town derives its name from the Malbisse family, which flourished here for several centuries after the Norman conquest. Pop. in 1831, 707. Acres 4,500. A. P. £2,476. Poor rates, in 1837, £135.

ACASTER-SELBY, or NETHER-ACASTER, a township on the river Ouse, in that part of the parish of Stillington which lies within the ainsty of the city of York. It is about 3 miles south of Over-Acaster, and 7 north-north-west from Selby, to the abbots of which place it belonged: hence its name. Tanner says: "A college for a provost and two or three fellows, one of whom was to teach school, was founded here by Robert Stillington. It was dedicated to St Andrew; valued, 26th Henry VIII., at £33 10s. 4d. in the whole, and at £27 13s. 4d. per annum clearly; and the next year at £33 8s. 11d. d. clearly; and was granted 2^o Edward VI., to John Hulse and William Pendred." There is a free-school here, with an endowment of £77s. per annum. The Northern and Eastern railway passes within 11 chains of the town. Pop. in 1801, 178; in 1831, 201. Houses 32. Acres 1,360. A. P. £2,017. Poor rates, in 1837, £175.

ACCONBURY, or ACORNBURY, a parish in the upper division of the hund. of Wormelow, union and county of Hereford; 4½ miles south from Hereford. Living, a perpetual curacy in the dio. of Hereford, and a peculiar of that see; rated at £6 6s. 8d., and in the parliamentary return at £80; gross income £259: the vicarage of Dewshall and the curacy of Callow, being included in these estimates. Patrons, the governors of Guy's hospital, London. Pop. in 1801, 113; in 1831, 163. Houses 31. Acres 1,470. A. P. £1,058. Poor rates, in 1837, £45. The following is from Tanner's 'Notitia':—"King John gave the forest of Acornbury to Margery, the wife of Walter de Lacy, that she might therein found a nunnery, which she did, about 3 miles south of Hereford, to the honour of the Holy Cross. This priory, or hospital, consisted of a prioress and seven nuns, of the order of St Austin, and was endowed, 26th Henry VIII., with £67 13s. 2d. per annum, Dugd.; £75 7s. 5d., d. Speed. It was granted 33rd Henry VIII., to Hugh-ap-Harry." From Sir John Bridges, the manor of Acconbury came to his son Lord Chandos, and was sold with other estates of the family in the last century. The remains of the nunnery have been converted into a farm-house.—There are traces of a Roman camp on the summit of Acconbury hill, which lies to the south of the village.

ACCRINGTON (NEW), a township in the parish of Whalley, hund. of Blackburn, union of Haslingden, county-palatine of Lancaster; 4 miles east from Blackburn, on the road to Burnley, and 224 from London. A National school was established here in 1806; and a new church in the early English style, with tower and spire, and capable of seating 1,600 persons, was built in 1838. There are also places of worship for Baptists, Wesleyan Methodists, and Swedenborgians. Pop., in 1801, 2,246; in 1831, 4,960. The increase in population is attributed to the extension of cotton manufactories. The Leeds and Liverpool canal passes on the north within a mile of the town. Houses 861. Acres 2,480. A. P. £4,097. Poor rates, in 1837, £599.

ACCRINGTON (OLD), a parochial chapelry usually included with New Accrington, under the general denomination of Accrington. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. and dio. of Chester; of the certified value of 15s., but returned to parliament at £120; gross income £178. Patron, the vicar of Whalley. The town is governed by a resident magistrate and two constables. It is chiefly inhabited by persons employed in the different spinning and calico-printing establishments. Pop., in 1801, 831; in 1831, 1,323. Houses 252. Acres 740. A. P. £1,511. Poor rates, in 1837, £170.

ACHURCH. See THORPE-ACHURCH.

ACKLAM (EAST), a parish, including a township of the same name, and another called Barthorpe-Leavening, partly in the liberty of St Peter's, partly in the west division of Langbaugh liberty, in the north riding, but chiefly in the wapentake of Buckrose, union of Malton, east riding of Yorkshire; 7 miles south from New Malton. Living, a discharged vicarage, a peculiar of the dean and chapter of York; rated at £5, and in the parliamentary returns at £130 per annum; gross income £114. Patron, the chancellor of York cathedral. It contains, also, two dissenting chapels, one for Wesleyan, the other for Primitive Methodists. Pop. of the township, in 1801, 255; in 1831, of the township, 371, and of the parish, 827. Houses 173. Acres 4,130. A. P. £3,440. Poor rates, in 1837, £110.—The view from Acklam wold is one of the most extensive in the east riding of Yorkshire.—The neighbourhood contains some ancient entrenchments and other British or Roman remains.

ACKLAM (WEST), a parish in the liberty of Langbaugh, north riding of Yorkshire; 5½ miles north-east from Yarm. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. of Cleveland and dio. of York, of the certified value of £17 3s. 4d.; rated at £5, and returned to parliament at £120; gross income, £48. Patron, the archbishop of York. The extended line of the Stockton and Darlington railway passes through this parish. Pop., in 1801, 98; in 1831, 102. Houses 21. Acres 1,160. A. P. £1,469. Poor rates, in 1837, £53.

ACKLINGTON, a township in the parish of Warkworth, Northumberland; 8½ miles south-south-east from Alnwick; on the Coquet river. Pop., in 1801, 257; in 1831, 285. Houses, 53. Poor rates, in 1837, £97.

ACKLINGTON-PARK, a township adjoining the above, in the same parish. Pop., in 1801, 108; in 1831, 107. Houses 13. Poor rates, in 1837, £37.

ACKWORTH, a parish and township in the upper division of Osgoldcross wapentake, west riding of Yorkshire, nominally divided into Upper and Lower Ackworth. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of York; rated at £22 1s. 0½d.; gross income £425. Patron, the crown. Ackworth is 3½ miles south-south-west from Pontefract, near the high road to Doncaster. It is celebrated for the school belonging to the Society of Friends, some of whom, and among the rest Dr John Fothergill, in 1777, purchased the premises belonging to a founding hospital in this place, with 85 acres of ground adjoining, and established a seminary for the education of 180 boys and 120 girls. There is also a school for the education of 20 children, and an hospital for 6 women, both endowed by Mrs Mary Lowther in 1741. The annual income of this charity is £81 19s. Other charities connected with this parish produce about £65 yearly. A British school has recently been established, and a handsome suite of public rooms erected. Dr. Bradley, chaplain of Charles I., and who attended that monarch on the scaffold, was rector of this parish. Ackworth is said to be one of the most healthy spots in the kingdom. Pop., in 1801, 1,432; in 1831, 1,660. Houses 263. Acres 2,270. A. P. £6,686. Poor rates, in 1837, £559.

ACLE, a parish and village in the hund. of Walsingham, county of Norfolk; 11 miles east from Norwich, and 127 from London. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Norfolk and dio. of Norwich; rated at £20; gross income £624. Patron, in 1835, Lord Calthorpe. There are two National schools here. A fair is held here on Midsummer day. Pop., in 1801, 600; in 1831, 820. Houses 159. Acres 4,360. A. P. £4,073. Poor rates, in 1837, £266.

ACLEY. See OCLE-LIVERS.

ACOMB, or AKEHAM, a parish in the ainsty of the city of York; 2¼ miles west from York, comprising the townships of Acomb and Knapton. Living, a discharged vicarage and a peculiar of the dean and chapter of York; rated at £3 9s. 2d., and in the parliamentary return at £80; gross income £109. The patronage belonged, in 1835, to T. Tyreman, Esq. There is also a Wesleyan Methodist chapel in the village. The sum of £5 from Lady Hewley's charity for education, was applied to the education of ten poor children in this parish. Pop. of the township of Acomb, in 1801, 587; in 1831, 762; of the parish, in 1831, 882. Houses 186. Acres 7,330. A. P. £4,930. Poor rates, in 1837, £244. The great North of England railway intersects this parish.—In the neighbourhood is an eminence called Sivers' hill, from a tradition that the body of the emperor Severus was brought from York, where he died, and here consumed to ashes; the remains being collected in a golden urn, or vessel of porphyry stone, and sent to Rome.

ACOMB (EAST), a township in the parish of Bywell St Peter, Northumberland; 2 miles from Corbridge. Pop., in 1801, 23; in 1831, 36. Houses 7. Poor rates £9.

ACOMB (WEST), a township in the parish of St John Lee; 1½ miles north-east from Hexham. The Newcastle and Carlisle railway passes in the immediate neighbourhood of this township. Pop., in 1801, 532; in 1831, 523. Poor rates, in 1837, £57.

ACORNBURY. See ACONBURY.

ACRISE, a parish, partly in the hund. of Folkstone, and partly in that of Loninborough, lathe of Shepway, union of Elham, Kent; 5 miles north-north-west from Folkstone. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Canterbury; rated at £7; gross income £220. Patron, the crown. Pop., in 1801, 160; in 1831, 194. Houses 24. Acres 4,170. A. P. £1,026. Poor rates, in 1837, £110.

ACTON,* a township in the parish of Weaverham, county-palatine of Chester; 4½ miles west-north-west from Northwich, 29½ by railway from Liverpool, and 68 from Birmingham. Pop., in 1801, 210; in 1831, 335. Houses 63. Acres 1,300. A. P. £1,847. Poor rates, in 1837, £132.

ACTON, a parish in the hund. and union of Nantwich, county-palatine of Chester; comprising the townships of Acton, Aston-juxta-Mondrum, Austeron, Baddington, Brindley, Burland, Cholmondstone, Cool-Pilate, Eddleston, Faddiley, Hinnull, Hurleston, Newhall, Poole, Stoke, and Worleston. Living, a vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Chester; rated at £19 9s. 7d.; gross income £406. The church has some curious windows. Patron, in 1835, Admiral Tollemache. There is a free school here, endowed with £20 per annum; and two National schools. About £17, bequeathed by various testators, is yearly distributed among the poor of the parish; about £12 a-year is appropriated, by the bequest of two members of the Wilbraham family, to apprenticing poor boys of the parish, and from Huxley's charity, £40 is distributed yearly in sums of £5 each to four poor women, and the remainder appropriated to the apprenticing of poor girls. During the civil war, Acton church and Dorfold hall were successively garrisoned by the king's and the parliamentary forces. Dorfold hall, in this parish, built in 1616, is a fine remain of the architecture of the early part of the 17th century. It is built of dark brick, with massy chimneys and large bay windows. The great hall contains some rich plaster ornaments in a fine state of preservation, and is still allowed to remain in its original condition. The Nantwich branch of the Chester canal passes through this parish, and the line of the proposed railway to St George's harbour, Denbighshire. Pop. of the parish, in 1821, 3,777; in 1831, 3,928. Houses 710. Acres 7,200. A. P. £25,288. Pop. of the township of Acton, in 1831, 309. Houses 62. Acres 1,230. A. P. £1,285. Poor rates, in 1837, £220.

ACTON, a village and parish in the Kensington division of the hund. of Ossulstone, union of Brentford, Middlesex; 8½ miles west from St Paul's, London, and 1 south of the Great Western railway. It includes the hamlets of East Acton and Friar's Place. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Middlesex and dio. of London; rated at £14; gross income £1,018. Patron, the bishop of London. It was enlarged and repaired in 1825. An Independent chapel was erected here in 1815, and there is a Roman Catholic place of worship. The village is pleasantly situated on the declivity of a gently sloping eminence. It chiefly consists of one long street. The houses are in general old, but some of the wealthier inhabitants of the metropolis have their country-residences here. The goldsmiths' company have an alms-house in Acton for the maintenance of ten men and ten women. There is also a public school for the orphan sons of the clergy here. By the bequest of Edward Dickinson, Esq., in 1791, the third part of the interest of £5,000 is annually distributed among three poor and industrious couples married in Acton church during the preceding year; £10 per annum for the education of poor children was bequeathed by Lady Conway; a charity school, supported by voluntary subscription, was established in 1806; £73 are annually appropriated to the clothing of poor people belonging to the parish; and several smaller sums are given for other charitable purposes. Acton is governed by a chief magistrate, two head-boroughs, and a constable. There are some aperient springs here, which were in much repute about the middle of last century. It is proposed to carry a branch line from this place to Paddington canal basin, the length of which will be 4 miles, 44 chains.

—The village of East Acton is agreeably situated about 1½ mile from Acton. Richard Baxter, the celebrated nonconformist divine, and Sir Matthew Hale, resided for many years in this village; the former in a house near the church. Pop., in 1801, 1,425; in 1831, 2,453. Houses 428. Acres 2,260. A. P. £11,321. Poor rates, in 1837, £1,161.

ACTON, a township in the parish of Felton, Northumberland; 7½ miles south from Alnwick; containing, with the hamlet of Old Felton, a population of 113 in 1801; and of 101 in 1831. Houses 22. Poor rates, in 1837, £58.

ACTON, a township in the parish of Featherstone, west riding of Yorkshire; 3½ miles west from Pontefract. Pop., in 1801, 86; in 1831, 51. Houses 12. Acres 1,090. A. P. £1,199. Poor rates, in 1837, £89.

ACTON, or AKETON, a parish in the hund. of Babergh, union of Sudbury, county of Suffolk; 3 miles north-east by north from Sudbury. Living, a vicarage formerly in the archd. of Sudbury and dio. of Norwich, now in the dio. of Ely; rated at £9 6s. 8d.; gross income £255. Patron, in 1835, Earl Howe. There is a National school here. A fair is held here on July 6th. Pop., in 1801, 461; in 1831, 565. Houses 22. A. P. £3,035. Poor rates, in 1837, £467.

ACTON-BEAUCHAMP, a parish in the Worcester division of the hund. of Doddingtree, union of Bromyard, county of Worcester; 3 miles south-east from Bromyard, and 1½ east of the post-road from Bromyard to Ledbury. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. and dio. of Worcester; rated at £4; gross income £377. Patron, in 1835, Mrs Cowpland. Pop., in 1801, 214; in 1831, 239. Houses 43. Acres 1,600; of which 130 were under hops in 1837. A. P. £1,615. Poor rates, in 1837, £217.

ACTON-BURNELL, a parish and township in the hund. of Condevor, union of Atcham, Shropshire; 7½ miles south of Shrewsbury. It includes the chapelries of Acton-Pigott, and Ruckley with Langley. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Salop and dio. of Lichfield; rated at £6 10s.; gross income £350. Patron, in 1835, Sir Edward Smythe. There is a National school here. Here are the remains of an ancient castle, built in the 13th century, which belonged to the family of Burnell. The walls are very thick, and adorned with five battlements and rows of curiously carved windows. A parliament was held here by Edward I. in 1283, on which occasion the lords sat in the castle, and the commons in a barn, which was in existence lately. The hall of the castle, where the lords sat, was 183 feet long by 41 broad. It was in this parliament that the statute, known by the name of the statute of Acton-Burnell, was made for the purpose of enforcing the statutum de mercatoribus. It appoints the mode in which a statute-merchant is to be made, and by whom; fixes the manner of seizing and valuing goods for the payment of debts; in what cases the debtor shall be imprisoned, and how maintained in prison; when sureties shall be compelled to pay the debts of their principals, and when they are to be exempted, &c. Pop., in 1801, 272; in 1831, 381. Houses 61. Acres 2,650. A. P. £1,824. Poor rates, in 1837, £179.

ACTON-GRANGE, a township in the parish of Runcorn, county-palatine of Chester; 2½ miles south-west from Warrington, on the Birmingham railway.

* This name is traced by some to the Saxon word, ac, signifying an oak; and is supposed to designate places which in former times, abounded with timber of this species. See ACKWORTH.

Pop., in 1801, 139; in 1831, 149. Houses 24. Acres 780. A. P. £1,826. Poor rates, in 1837, £148.

ACTON IRON. See IRON ACTON.

ACTON-PIGOTT. See ACTON-BURNELL.

ACTON-REYNOLD, a township in the parish of Shawbury, Shropshire; $6\frac{1}{2}$ miles north-east from Shrewsbury, on the road to Whitchurch. Pop., in 1801, 177; in 1831, 173. Houses 30. Acres 690. A. P. £1,442.

ACTON-ROUND, a parish in the hund. of Stottesden, union of Bridgnorth, Shropshire; 3 miles south from Much-Wenlock. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. of Salop and dio. of Hereford; valued in the parliamentary return at £59; gross income £74. Patron, in 1835, Sir R. Acton. Pop., in 1801, 200; in 1831, 203. Houses 37. Acres 3,040. A. P. £1,110. Poor rates, in 1837, £81.

ACTON-SCOTT, a parish in the hund. of Munslow, union of Church-Stretton, Shropshire; 3 miles south from Church-Stretton, near a branch of the Teme. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. of Salop and dio. of Hereford; rated at £5 10s. Patron, in 1835, Mrs S. Stackhouse. Pop., in 1801, 164; in 1831, 204. Houses 33. Acres 930. A. P. £1,397. Poor rates, in 1837, £125.

ACTON-TRUSSELL, a township and parochial chapelry in the parish of Baswick, county of Stafford; 3 miles north-north-east from Penkridge. Living, a perpetual curacy with that of Bednall united, and a peculiar of the dean of Lichfield; of the certified value of £14, and valued in the parliamentary return at £95; gross income £247. Patron, in 1835, G. Molineux, Esq. The Stafford and Worcester-shire canal and river Trent pass through this township. Pop., in 1801, 291; in 1831, with the township of Bednall, 551. Houses 108. Acres 1,400. A. P. £2,698. Poor rates, in 1837, £155.

ACTON-TURVILLE, a chapelry in the parish of Tormarton, Gloucestershire; 6 miles east of Chipping-Sudbury, on the road from Bristol to Malmesbury. Living, a curacy in the archd. of Gloucester and dio. of Gloucester and Bristol, subordinate to the rectory of Tormarton. Patron, the vicar of Tormarton. A stone-building, dedicated to the Virgin, in the centre of the town, was formerly used as a sanctuary. There is a foot-post to Luckington. Pop., in 1801, 156; in 1831, 236. Houses 48. Acres 940. A. P. £1,264. Poor rates, in 1837, £61.

ADBASTON. See ADBASTON.

ADBEER, a hamlet in the parish of Trent, county of Somerset; 4 miles north-east by north from Yeovil. A chapel here was demolished during the Civil war.

ADBOLTON, formerly a parish, now a hamlet, in the parish of Holme-Pierrepont, Nottinghamshire; $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles east-south-east from Nottingham, near the Grantham canal. The living was a rectory, rated at £2 13s. 9d.

ADDERBURY (EAST), a parish in the hund. of Bloxham, union of Banbury, county of Oxford; $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles north by east from Deddington, and 78 from London, on the post-road from Bicester to Banbury. It comprises the chapelries of Little Barford, or Barford-St-John, and Badicott, the townships of East and West Adderbury, and the hamlet of Milton. Living, a vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Oxford; rated at £21 4s. 9 $\frac{1}{2}$ d.; gross income £321; and in the patronage of New College, Oxford. The impropriate and vicarial tithes, the property of New College, Oxford, and the vicar, were commuted in 1766; those of Little Barford in 1793. The church is a fine Gothic structure, with a lofty steeple. There are also three dissenting chapels. There is a school here, founded in 1589. About £215 are appropriated from the rents of the feoffees lands, to the relief of the poor. The Oxford canal, and the Cher-well, pass through this parish. Pop., in 1821, 2,277 in 1831, 2,473. Houses 491. Acres 6,380. A. P. £4,705. Poor rates, in 1837, £458.—In the reign of Charles I., Adderbury gave the title of baron to Wilmot, earl of Rochester.

ADDERBURY (WEST), a township in the above parish; 2 miles north from Deddington. Pop., in 1801, 326; in 1831, 397. Houses 95. A. P. £2,748. Poor rates, in 1837, £216.

ADDERLEY, a parish in the Drayton division of the hund. of Bradford North, union of Drayton, Shropshire; 4 miles north of Market-Drayton. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Salop and dio. of Lichfield; rated at £11 6s. 0 $\frac{1}{2}$ d. Patron, in 1829, H. C. Cotton, Esq. There is a small foundation in this parish for the education of poor children. The Birmingham and Liverpool Junction canal runs through this parish. Pop., in 1801, 365; in 1831, 468. Houses 73. Acres 2,260. A. P. £5,603. Poor rates, in 1837, £236.

ADDERMINTON. See ADMINOTON.

ADDERSTONE, a township in the chapelry of Bambrough, Northumberland; 3 miles south-east by south from Belford; on the post-road from Berwick to Alnwick. Pop., in 1801, 300; in 1831, 322. Houses 55. Poor rates, in 1837, £178.

ADDETON. See ADWALTON.

ADDINGHAM, a parish in Leath ward, union of Penrith, Cumberland; $6\frac{1}{2}$ miles north-east of Penrith; containing the townships of Gamblesby, Glassonby, Hunsonby with Winkisle, and Little Salkeld. Living, a vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Carlisle; rated at £9 4s. 7d.; gross income £263. Patrons, the dean and chapter of Carlisle. It was held by the celebrated Dr Paley from 1792 to 1795. There is an endowed school here, which is free to the whole parish. In 1821 it was attended by from 40 to 60 children. The endowment amounts to £70 a-year. About £13 are yearly distributed to the poor, from the rent of land, and the interest of another small charity. Pop., in 1801, 602; in 1831, 719. Houses 132. Acres 9,520.—The Maiden way, as it is called, an ancient Roman road, runs through this parish; also the river Eden.—At Little Salkeld there is a Druidical monument, commonly called Long Meg and her daughters, consisting of 67 stones arranged in a circle of 350 feet diameter.

ADDINGHAM, a parish and township, partly in the wapentake of Claro, and partly in that of Staincliffe, Skipton union, west riding of Yorkshire; 6 miles east by south of Ripton. The parish includes part of the township of Beamsley. Living, a discharged rectory, formerly in the archd. and dio. of York, now in the dio. of Ripon; rated at £9 7s. 8d., in the parliamentary return at £122 18s. 10d.; gross income £133. The church is much admired for its fine situation. Patroness, in 1835, Mrs Mary Cunliffe. There are here a Methodist chapel, and a Quaker meeting-house; also two National schools. The village of Addingham, in 1838, contained two worsted, one woollen, and two cotton-mills, employing 472 hands. The river Wharfe flows through this parish. Pop. of the township, in 1801, 1,157; in 1831, 2,179, and of the parish, 2,251. Houses 446. Acres 4,310. A. P. £8,117. Poor rates, in 1837, £410.

ADDINGRAVE, a hamlet in the parish of Oakley, Buckinghamshire. It had formerly a chapel-of-ease, which is now in ruins.

ADDINGTON, a parish in the hund., union and county of Buckingham; $1\frac{1}{2}$ miles west-north-west from Winslow. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Bucks and dio. of Lincoln; rated at £9 9s. 7d.; gross income £200. There is a small benefaction of land for the repairs of the church. Patron, in 1835,

J. Poulet, Esq. The sum of £19 ls. 8d. is yearly applied to the purposes of educating and apprenticing poor boys belonging to the parish. The Gallows gap in this parish marks the site of the gallows erected by one of the family of Molines, who, as lord of the barony, possessed power over the life and limb of culprits. Pop., in 1801, 93; in 1831, 72. Houses 14. Acres 1,320. A. P. £3,101. Poor rates, in 1837, £70.

ADDINGTON, a parish and township in the hund. of Larkfield, lathe of Aylesford, Malling union, Kent; $5\frac{1}{2}$ miles north-west from Maidstone. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Rochester; rated at £6 6s. 8d.; gross income £305. Patron, in 1835, the Hon. J. W. Stratford. Pop., in 1801, 159; in 1831, 206. Houses 43. Acres 920. A. P. £1,236. Poor rates, in 1837, £161.—There is a Druidical monument in the parish.—There is a singular land-spring in this parish, which breaks out with great impetuosity every seven or eight years.

ADDINGTON, a parish in the first division of the hund. of Wallington, Croydon union, county of Surrey; $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles east-south-east from Croydon. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Surrey and dio. of Winchester; rated at £4 16s. 5d.; gross income £206. Patron, in 1835, the archbishop of Canterbury, who has a seat, called Addington, in the vicinity, which was purchased in 1807 by Dr Sutton, then archbishop of Canterbury, with the funds arising from the sale of the archiepiscopal palace at Croydon. There is a daily and Sunday National school here. Pop., in 1801, 178; in 1831, 463. Houses 73. Acres 3,210. A. P. £4,118. Poor rates, in 1837, £220. The manor of Addington is held by the singular tenor of making and presenting to the king, at his coronation, a mess of pottage. It originated in a grant to Tezelin, cook to William the Conqueror. The archbishop of Canterbury is now the claimant of this service. The Croydon railway passes about 2 miles to the west of the township.—In the neighbourhood of the town there are a number of low tumuli clustered together. The largest is about 40 feet in diameter.

ADDINGTON (GREAT), a parish and township in the hund. of Huxloe, Thrapston union, county of Northampton; $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles south-west from Thrapston. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Northampton and dio. of Peterborough; rated at £10 12s. 8d.; gross income £330. Tithes commuted in 1803. Patron, in 1835, the Rev. James Tyley. The Northampton canal passes through this parish. Pop., in 1801, 200; in 1831, 282. Houses 58. Acres 1,230. A. P. £1,590. Poor rates, in 1837, £130.

ADDINGTON (LITTLE), a parish and township, in the same hund. and union; lying to the south of the above, and within a mile of the post-road from Bedford to Kettering, Higham-Ferrers. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Northampton and dio. of Peterborough; rated at £7 12s., and in the parliamentary return at £50; gross income £260. Tithes commuted. Patron, in 1835, T. Sanderson, Esq. There is a free school with a small endowment here. Pop., in 1801, 212; in 1831, 264. Houses 59. Acres 1,170. A. P. £999. Poor rates, in 1837, £195.

ADDLE, a parish in the wapentake of Skyrack, west riding of Yorkshire, comprising the townships of Addle-cum-Eccup and Arthington, and the hamlets of Breary and Cookridge. It is 4 miles north-west from Leeds, and within the parliamentary borough-boundaries of that town. Living, a rectory, formerly in the archd. and dio. of York, now in the dio. of Ripon; rated at £16 3s. 4d.; gross income £658. The church is thought to be one of the finest specimens of Norman architecture extant. Patron, in 1835, Major General Davy. There is a free school here with a small endowment, and a National school. By the bequest of Thomas Kirk in 1701, the sum of £73 10s. is annually distributed to the poor of the parish. There are also two other inconsiderable charities. There is a small flax-mill. Pop., in 1801, 1,028; in 1831, 1,063. Houses 189. Acres 6,350. A. P. £7,370. Poor rates of Addle-cum-Eccup, in 1837, £275.—The remains of a Roman town were discovered in the adjacent moor in 1702, and a vast number of antiquities have since been discovered. It is supposed to be the ancient Burgodunum.

ADDLETHORPE, a parish and township in the marsh division of the wapentake of Candleshoe, parts of Lindsay, Spilaby union, county of Lincoln; $7\frac{1}{2}$ miles east-south-east of Alford, and 4 north-east of Burgh. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. and dio. of Lincoln; rated at £9 12s. 2d., and in the parliamentary return at £63; gross income £85. Patron, in 1835, the crown. There is a daily and Sunday National school here. Pop., in 1801, 190; in 1831, 175. Houses 37. Acres 1,170. A. P. £3,279. Poor rates, in 1837, £239.

ADFORTON, a township in the parish of Leintwardine, union of Knighton, Herefordshire; $8\frac{1}{2}$ miles west-south-west from Ludlow, and 2 north-west of Wigmore. In 1801, it contained, including the hamlets of Payton and Grange, a pop. of 214; in 1831, 218. Houses 47. Poor rates, in 1837, £123.

ADISHAM, a parish in the hund. of Downshamford, lathe of St Augustine, Bridge union, Kent; $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles south-west by south from Wingham. Living, a rectory, with the perpetual curacy of Staple, in the dio. of Canterbury, and exempt from the jurisdiction of the archdeacon; rated at £28 3s. 1d.; gross income £1,000. Patron, in 1835, the archbishop of Canterbury. The church is a large cruciform edifice, in the early style of English architecture. By the will of the Rev. John Palmer in 1817, half the interest of £400 is distributed to the poor of this parish. Pop., in 1801, 271; in 1831, 390. Houses 53. Acres 1,810. A. P. £1,903. Poor rates, in 1837, £384.

ADLESTROP, a parochial chapelry in the upper division of Slaughter hund., Stow-in-the-Wold union, Gloucestershire; $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles east by north from Stow-in-the-Wold. Living, a curacy to the rectory of Broadwell, in the archd. of Gloucester and dio. of Gloucester and Bristol. Tithes commuted in 1775. There are two daily and Sunday National schools here. Pop., in 1801, 225; in 1831, 196. Houses 40. Acres 1,320. A. P. £2,199. Poor rates, in 1837, £64.

ADLINGFLEET, a parish in the lower division of the wapentake of Osgoldcross, Goole union, west riding of Yorkshire; 9 miles south-east of Howden, and near the junction of the Ouse and Trent; comprising the townships of Adlingfleet, Fockerby, Hal-denby, and Eastoft. Living, a vicarage in the archd. and dio. of York; rated at £9 12s. 11d.; gross income £284. Tithes commuted in 1767. Patron, in 1835, the crown. In 1743, Mary Ramsden bequeathed £200 for the purpose of apprenticing boys and educating girls in this parish. There is also a National school here. Pop. of the village, in 1801, 203; in 1831, 218. Houses 45. Acres 1,680. A. P. £1,773. Poor rates, in 1837, £68. Pop. of the parish, in 1821, 431; in 1831, 478. Houses 92. Acres 4,580. A. P. £5,986. Poor rates, in 1837, £207.

ADLINGTON, a township in the parish of Prestbury, Macclesfield union, county-palatine of Chester; 5 miles north-west from Macclesfield. A considerable portion of the inhabitants are silk-weavers. Pop., in 1801, 847; in 1831, 1,066. Houses 197. Acres 3,350. A. P. £5,731. Poor rates, in 1837, £548.—There are valuable mines of coal and flagstone in the neighbourhood.—Addington hall withstood the parliamentary forces 14 days in 1645. Near it is a domestic chapel of the family of Leigh.

ADLINGTON, a township in the parish of Stan-dish, co.-palatine of Lancaster; 4 miles north from Wigan, 1 east of the Wigan and Preston railway. Pop., in 1801, 470; in 1831, 1,082. Houses 208. Acres 990. A. P. £2,586. Poor rates, in 1837, £200. A new church has been erected here by the parliamentary commissioners.

ADMARSH, a chapelry in the parish of Lancaster. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. of Richmond and dio. of Chester; returned to parliament at £32 13s. 4d.; gross income £47. Patron, in 1835, the vicar of Lancaster. The church has recently been enlarged. There is a National school here.

ADMINGTON, or ADDERMINTON, a hamlet in the parish of Queinton, Gloucestershire; 6½ miles north-east from Chipping-Camden. Pop., in 1801, 147; in 1831, 177. Houses 39.

ADMISTON, or ATHELHAMPTON, a parish in the hund. of Piddletown, Dorchester division, union of Dorchester, county of Dorset; 6½ miles east-north-east from Dorchester. Living, a rectory united to that of Burleston, formerly in the archd. of Dorset and dio. of Bristol, now in the dio. of Salisbury; rated at £2, and returned to parliament at £150; gross income £200. Patron, in 1835, the Hon. W. T. L. P. Wellesley. This place is said to have been at one period the principal residence of the kings of Wessex. The Piddle flows through this parish. Pop., in 1801, 62; in 1831, 67. Houses 14. Acres 290. A. P. £1,773. Poor rates, in 1837, £21.

ADPAR, a town and borough in the parish of Llandyfriog, hund. of Troedysaur, Cardiganshire; 10 miles east by south of Cardigan, and 15 north-west of Carmarthen. It is situated on the river Teifi, opposite the town of Newcastle Emlyn, in the parish of Cennarth, Carmarthenshire, with which it is connected by a bridge. The two towns have a common post-office and market, and are separated merely by the county and parochial divisions. Adpar with Emlyn contributes with Cardigan, Aberystwith, Lampeter, and Tregaron, to return one member to parliament. It is stated by Lord Glenbervie to have been a borough by prescription. The petty-sessions are held here for Adpar-Emlyn, and also for Newcastle district. The town has no trade of any consequence; but it forms a very important central point for the sale of cattle for the English market. Eleven cattle-fairs are held in the year. In the spring, the sea-side barley of Cardiganshire, which is of high repute, is sold here for seed; and the town forms a sort of petty metropolis which supplies the surrounding district with groceries, draperies, and other shop-goods. The inhabitants are principally tradesmen, shopkeepers, mechanics, and a few farmers. The average rent of land, in the neighbourhood of the town, is £3 per acre; apart from the town it is about 15s. per acre. Labourers' wages are low, being from 4s. 6d. to 6s. per week in summer; the labourers finding their own food. Pop. estimated, in 1831, at 533. Amount of assessed taxes, in 1831, £49.

ADSTOCK, a parish in the hund., union, and county of Buckingham; 3 miles north from Winslow, on the road to Buckingham. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Buckingham and dio. of Lincoln; rated at £13 16s. 3d.; gross income £260. Tithes commuted in 1797. Patron, in 1835, the bishop of Lincoln. There is a tradition, that in the time of the plague, Buckingham and Winslow being much infested by it, a market was kept here for some time. Pop., in 1801, 280; in 1831, 445. Houses 90. Acres 1,130. A. P. £1,882. Poor rates, in 1837, £293.

ADSTONE, a chapelry in the parish of Canons-Ashby, Northamptonshire; 6½ miles west-north-west from Towcester. Living, a curacy not in charge, in the archd. of Northampton and dio. of Peterborough, returned to parliament at £50. Here is a free school for boys. Pop., in 1801, 161; in 1831, 166. Houses 40. Acres 1,190. A. P. £1,878. Poor rates, in 1837, £90.

ADUR (THE), a river in Sussex, rising to the south-west of Horsham, passing Bramber, and falling into Shoreham bay, after a southerly course of about 25 miles. It is navigable to Binesbridge. A new harbour is projected near its mouth.

ADVENT, or ST ADVEN, formerly a chapelry in the parish of Lanteglos, now a distinct parish in the hund. of Lesnewth, Camelford union, Cornwall; 2 miles south from Camelford. Living, subordinate to the rectory of Lanteglos, in the archd. of Cornwall and dio. of Exeter. A copper-mine is wrought here. Pop., in 1801, 170; in 1831, 244. Houses 50. Acres 4,020. A. P. £1,396. Poor rates, in 1837, £110.

ADWALTON, or ADDEBTON, a hamlet in the township of Drighlington, parish of Birstall, west riding of Yorkshire; 4 miles south-east by south from Bradford. A market was formerly held here, but it is now disused. Fairs, however, are held here on the 26th of January, 26th of February, Thursday in Easter-week, Thursday fortnight after Easter, Thursday month after Easter, Whit-Thursdays, and every alternate Thursday thence to Michaelmas, for horses, sheep, pedlary, and tin-ware.—A battle was fought on Adwalton moor in 1642, between the earl of Newcastle and the parliamentary forces under Fairfax, in which the latter were defeated.

ADWELL, a parish in the hund. of Lewknor, Thame union, county of Oxford; 2 miles south-east from Tetesworth, and 14 from Oxford. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. and dio. of Oxford; rated at £4 13s. 4d., and in the parliamentary return at £70; gross income £105. Patron, in 1835, Mrs F. Webb. Pop., in 1801, 40; in 1831, 48. Houses 11. Acres 500. A. P. £795. Poor rates, in 1837, £31.—Adwell-Cop, in this neighbourhood, is an ancient entrenchment supposed to have been constructed by the Danes when they burnt Oxford in 1010.

ADWICK-UPON-DEARNE, a parochial chapelry in the wapentake of Tickhill, union of Doncaster, west riding of Yorkshire; 6½ miles north-north-east from Rotherham, on the river Dearne, and within about a mile of the spot where the North Midland railway crosses the Dearne and Dove canal. Living, a curacy in the archd. and dio. of York, subordinate to the vicarage of Wath; rated at £20 5s., and in the parliamentary return at £40. The church is of considerable antiquity. Pop., in 1801, 142; in 1831, 145. Houses 30. Acres 1,130. A. P. £1,375. Poor rates, in 1837, £144.

ADWICK-LE-STREET, a parish in the same wapentake and union; 4 miles north-west of Doncaster, on the post-road to Pontefract, comprising the townships of Adwick-le-Street, Hamphall, and Stubbs. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of York; rated at £4 13s. 4d.; gross income £364. Patron, in 1835, J. Fullerton, Esq. The adjunct to the name of this place is derived from its situation on a Roman road. There are two National schools here. The sum of £16 10s. is annually given for the education of ten poor children of this parish, by the bequest of the Rev. W. Hedges in 1811. Pop. of the township, in 1831, 382. Houses 79. Pop. of the parish in 1801, 284; in 1831, 536. Houses 101. Acres 2,950. A. P. £4,456. Poor rates, in 1837, £84.

AERON (THE). See ABERAEON.

AFF-PUDDLE, or AFFONDELL, a parish and township in the south division of Blandford, hund.

of Hundred's-Barrow, Wareham union, county of Dorset; 8 miles east by north from Dorchester. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Dorset, formerly in the dio. of Bristol, and now in the dio. of Salisbury; rated at £8 14s. 9d., and in the parliamentary return at £55 11s. 5d.; gross income £64. Patron, in 1835, J. Frampton, Esq. The hamlets and farms in this parish—which is intersected by the Piddle—are Pallington, Briants Puddle, Okers Wood, Rogers Hill, Trope, and Waddock. There is a free school here with a small endowment, and a Sunday National school. Pop., in 1801, 344; in 1831, 442. Houses 82. Acres 4,940. A. P. £2,000. Poor rates, in 1837, £135.

AGDEN, a township in the parish of Malpas, co. palatine of Chester; 2 miles south-east of Malpas, on the road to Whitechurch. Pop., in 1801, 90; in 1831, 104. Houses 16. Acres 670. A. P. £619. Poor rates, in 1837, £30.

AGDEN, a township partly in the parish of Rosethorn, but chiefly in that of Bowdon, co. palatine of Chester; 2½ miles south-west of Altrincham. Pop., in 1801, 85; in 1831, 99. Houses 12. Acres 670. A. P. £1,026. Poor rates, in 1837, £72.

AGEL-THORPE, or AYLETHORPE, a township in the parish of Coverham, north riding of Yorkshire; 2 miles west of Middleham. Pop., in 1801, 156; in 1831, 188. Houses 20. Acres 1,090. A. P. £1,946.

AGLIONBY, a township in the parish of Warwick, Cumberland; 2½ miles east of Carlisle, and about 1 north of the Carlisle and Newcastle railway. Pop., in 1801, 92; in 1831, 107. Houses 20.

AGMONDESHAM. See AMERSHAM.

AGNES (St), a parochial chapelry and market-town, situated on the Bristol channel, in the hund. of Pyder, union of Truro, western division of the county of Cornwall; 9 miles north-west of Truro. Living, a curacy subordinate to the vicarage of Perran in Sabulo, in the archd. of Cornwall and dio. of Exeter; rated at £33. Patron, the dean and chapter of Exeter. Church dedicated to St Agnes, and built about 1482. There is a free school here; also a British school with 500 scholars, and places of worship for the Congregationalists, and Wesleyan and Primitive Methodists. The town is within the jurisdiction of the county-magistrates; and courts for the duchy are annually held here. The market-day is Thursday; a fair is annually held on the 30th of April. The harbour can only be entered at high water, but is capable of receiving a few vessels of 100 tons burthen. A considerable trade in coal, lime, and slate, is conducted with Ireland and Wales. The inhabitants are chiefly miners, the town being situated in a rich mining district for tin and copper. In the Wheal-Fowan, the principal copper-mine, above 800 men are employed. Opie, the celebrated painter, was born at St Agnes in 1761. Pop., in 1801, 4,061; in 1831, 6,642. Houses 1,091. The increase in the population of this parish is attributed to the number and magnitude of the mines now worked here: 944 labourers, 20 years old, are returned as employed in the mines. Acres 8,660. A. P. £9,929. Poor rates, in 1837, £1,210.—St Agnes' beacon, in this neighbourhood, rises to the height of 664, or according to the Trigonometrical survey, 621 feet above the level of the sea.—St. Agnes' well is situated near the site of an ancient chapel in a small vale, called Chapel-Comb.—This parish also contains a vast entrenchment constructed with great skill and labour. It seems to be of British origin, and was probably intended as a defence of St Agnes' beacon and the mines of the neighbourhood.

AGNES (St). See SCILLY ISLANDS.

AIGHTON, a township in the parish of Mitton, co. palatine of Lancaster; 6 miles west-south-west of Clitheroe. There is an alms-house and free school here; and the Roman Catholic college of Stoneyhurst is in the immediate neighbourhood. Pop., in 1801, including that of the hamlets of Bailey and Chaigley, 810; in 1831, 1,980; the large increase being chiefly attributable to the extension of the cotton-factories here. Houses 286. Acres 5,780. A. P. £5,084. Poor rates, in 1837, £408.

AIKBAR, a township in the parish of Finghall, north riding of York; 5 miles north-east of Middleham. Pop., in 1801, 29; in 1831, 53. Houses 5. Acres 750. Poor rates, in 1837, £32.

AIKE, a township, partly in the parish of Lockington, and partly in that of St John, Beverley, east riding of York; 6 miles north by east from Beverley, on the Beverley and Barmston Drain. Pop., in 1801, 47; in 1831, 86. Houses 17. Acres 630. A. P. £648. Poor rates, in 1837, £40.

AIKTON, a parish in the ward and county of Cumberland; 8 miles south-west of Carlisle; it is in the union of Wigton, and comprises the townships of Aikton, Biglands, Gamelsby, Wampool, and Wiggonby. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Carlisle; rated at £14 13s. 1½d.; gross income £550. Patron, in 1835, the earl of Lonsdale. There is a school here endowed by Margaret Hodgson in 1792, in which poor children are instructed in reading, writing, and accounts. The annual revenue amounts to £175 15s., and the expenditure to about £95. The schoolmaster's salary is £40. Pop. of the township of Aikton, in 1801, 185; in 1831, 261. Houses 53. Pop. of the parish, in 1831, 755. Houses 150. Acres 5,270. A. P. £5,174. Poor rates, in 1837, £362.

AILESBUURY. See AYLESBURY.

AILESWORTH, a hamlet in the parish of Castor, Northamptonshire; 4½ miles west of Peterborough, near the Nen river. Pop., in 1831, 289. Houses 56. A. P. £1,000. Poor rates, in 1837, £80.

AINDERBY-MYERS, or AINDERBY-IN-THE-MIRE, a joint township with Holby, in the parish of Hornby, north riding of York; 3½ miles south by east from Catterick; on the post-road from Richmond to Boroughbridge. Pop., in 1801, 69; in 1831, 90. Houses 15. A. P. £1,222. Poor rates, in 1837, £66.

AINDERBY-QUERNHOW, a township in the parish of Pickhill, north riding of Yorkshire; 9 miles north-west of Boroughbridge, on the post-road to Richmond. Houses 24. Acres 330. A. P. £948. Poor rates, in 1837, £65.

AINDERBY-STEEPLE, a parish in the wapentake of East Gilling, union of Northallerton, north riding of Yorkshire; 3 miles east of Northallerton, and about 2 west of the Great North of England railroad; comprising the townships of Ainderby-Steeple, Morton-upon-Swale, Thirtoft, and Warlaby. Living, a discharged vicarage, formerly in the archd. of Richmond and dio. of Chester, now in the dio. of Ripon; rated at £13 6s. 8d., and in the parliamentary return at £142 6s. 8d.; gross income £200. Patron, the crown. Pop. of the township, in 1801, 78; in 1831, 302; of the parish, in 1821, 768; in 1831, 806. Houses 173. Acres 4,300. A. P. £8,665. Poor rates, in 1837, £98.

AINSTABLE, a parish in Leath ward, union of Penrith, Cumberland; 11 miles north-east of Penrith, and about 4 east of the post-road from Carlisle to Penrith. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Carlisle; rated at £8 8s. 2½d., and in the parliamentary return at £127 1s.; gross income £225. Vicarial tithes commuted in 1818. Patron, in 1835, R. L. Ross, Esq. There is a small endowed school at Ainstable. The endowment consists of a piece of land, let, in 1820, at £7 10s., and the interest of £15. Dr John Leake, founder of the Westminster lying-in-hospital, was a native of this parish. There is also a subscription-school here. The pop., including that of the hamlet of Rushcroft, in 1801, was 444; in 1831, 569. Houses 117. Acres 4,119. A. P. £3,668. Poor rates, in 1837, £160. —There was formerly in this parish a convent of Benedictine nuns, at a place called Armathwaite, now Nunnery. It was founded by William Rufus. The grounds around it are celebrated for their picturesque scenery.

AINSTY, a large district of the west riding of Yorkshire, on the south-west of the city of York, annexed to the same in the 27^o of Henry VI., and subject to the lord-mayor and corporation, under the name of the county of the City of York. See YORK. —It is bounded by the rivers Ure, Ouse, and Wharfe; and intersected by the post-road from York to Tadcaster, and the Great Northern railroad.

AINSWORTH, or COCHERY IN MIDDLETON, a chapelry in the parish of Middleton, co.-palatine of Lancaster; 9 miles from Manchester. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. and dio. of Chester; gross income £136. Patron, the rector of Middleton. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the cotton manufacture. Pop., in 1801, 1,240; in 1831, 1,584. Houses 258. Acres 1,090. A. P. £2,213. Poor rates, in 1837, £345.

AINTHORN, or ANTHORN, a township in the parish of Bowness, Cumberland; 11 miles north-west of Wighton, on a small lake communicating with Morecombe bay. Pop., in 1801, 170; in 1831, 230. Houses 39. A. P. £631.

AINTREE, a township in the parish of Sephton, co.-palatine of Lancaster; 6 miles north-north-east from Liverpool. Pop., in 1801, 260; in 1831, 247. Houses 42. In 1801 it was returned with that of the township of Ford, Litherland, and Orrell, at 588. Acres 840. A. P. £1,222. Poor rates, in 1837, £170.

AIRE (THE), a river which takes its rise in some wild moors near Malham, in the north-west quarter of the west riding of Yorkshire. It runs about a mile under ground to Malham cove, and then reappearing, runs east-south-east, past Skipton and Bingley to Leeds; 12 miles below which it receives the Calder. It then assumes a more easterly direction, till below Snaith, when it turns to the north-east, and joins the Ouse, 3 miles south-west of Howden, a little below Armin. It is navigable to Leeds, where it forms a junction with the Leeds and Liverpool canal, which runs alongside of it from Gargrave to this point.

AIRTON, a township in the parish of Kirkby, in Malham dale, west riding of Yorkshire. It is on the Aire; 5 miles south-east of Settle. There is a free school here with a small endowment. Pop., in 1801, 139; in 1831, 179. Houses 32. Acres 2,790. A. P. £2,056. Poor rates, in 1837, £59.

AIRYHOLME, a township in the parish of Hovingham, north riding of Yorkshire; 6½ miles west from New Malton. Pop., with that of Hawthorpe, in 1801, 31; in 1831, 42. Houses 4. Acres 690. A. P. £454. Poor rates, in 1837, £21.

AISENBY, or AYSTENBY, a township in the parish of Topcliffe, north riding of Yorkshire. Pop., in 1801, 215; in 1831, 238. Houses 49. Acres 800. A. P. £1,481. Poor rates, in 1837, £78.

AISHOLT. See ASHOLT.

AISKEW, a township in the parish of Bedale, north riding of Yorkshire; ½ mile north-east from Bedale. Here is a small endowment for the education of eight children. The sum of £17 is annually distributed to the poor of this township. Pop., in 1801, 500; in 1831, 586. A. P. £3,289. Poor rates, in 1837, £230.

AISSLABY, or AYSLEBY, a township in the parish of Eaglescliffe, co.-palatine of Durham; 1½ mile west by north from Yarm, on the Tees river, and a little to the south of the Stockton and Darlington railway. Pop., in 1801, 116; in 1831, 143. Houses 123. Acres 1,660. A. P. £3,466. Poor rates, in 1837, £175.

AISSLABY, or AYSLEBY, a township and chapelry in the parish of Whitby, north riding of Yorkshire. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. of Cleveland and dio. of York, not in charge, but returned to parliament at £45; gross income £87. Patroness, in 1835, Mrs R. Boulby. There is a National school here. Pop., in 1801, 211; in 1831, 276. Houses 62. Acres 1,080. A. P. £1,251. Poor rates, in 1837, £42.

AISSLABY, a township, partly in the parish of Whitby, partly in that of Middleton, north riding of Yorkshire; 2 miles west-north-west of Pickering, on the road to Kirby-Ironside. Pop., in 1801, 374; in 1831, 402. Houses 90. Acres 2,190. A. P. £2,333. Poor rates, in 1837, £75.

AISMUNDERBY, a township in the chapelry of Ripon, west riding of Yorkshire. Pop., in 1801, including the townships of Bondgate and Markingfield, 496; in 1831, 655. Houses 142. Acres 2,830. A. P. £2,916. Poor rates, in 1837, £263.

AISTHORPE, or EAST THORPE, a parish in the wapentake of Lawress, parts of Lindsey, union and county of Lincoln; 6½ miles north-west of Lincoln. Living, a discharged rectory, with the vicarage of Thorpe-le-Fallows, in the archd. of Stow and dio. of Lincoln; rated at £4 10s.; gross income £289. Patron, in 1835, J. Milnes. Pop., in 1801, 71; in 1831, 89. Houses 17. Acres 1,150. A. P. £1,088. Poor rates, in 1837, £45.

AITS (THE), or OSIER ISLANDS, picturesque islets on the Thames, near Richmond.

AKA. See ROCK, Northumberland.

AKEBAR. See AIKBAR.

AKELD, a township in the parish of Kirk-Newton, Northumberland; 2 miles north-west of Wooler, on the road to Kelso. Pop., in 1801, 153; in 1831, 171. Houses 35. A. P. £1,503. Poor rates, in 1837, £130.

AKELY, or OAKLEY-CUM-STOCKHOLT, a parish and township in the hund., union, and county of Buckingham; 2½ miles north-east of Buckingham. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Buckingham and dio. of Lincoln; rated at £6 2s. 11d., and returned to parliament at £142 8s. 2d.; gross income £245. Tithes commuted in 1794. The patronage belongs to New college, Oxford. Seven acres of land in this parish are divided among poor families and widows. Pop., in 1801, 245; in 1831, 291. Houses 68. Acres 1,080. A. P. £1,354. Poor rates, in 1837, £146.

AKENHAM, a parish in the hund. and union of Bosmere and Claydon, county of Suffolk; 3¼ miles north by west of Ipswich. Living, a discharged rectory united with Claydon, in the archd. of Suffolk and dio. of Norwich; rated at £9 11s. 5½d. Pop., in 1801, 105; in 1831, 119. Houses 22. Acres 1,060. A. P. £1,052. Poor rates, in 1837, £102.

ALAN (THE), or CAMEL, a river of Cornwall, which rises a few miles north of Camelford, flows through that town, and south to near Bodmin; then turns to the north-east, and falls into the Bristol channel at Padstow; its mouth or estuary forming Padstow harbour.

ALBAN'S (ST), a borough and market-town, having separate jurisdiction, in the liberty and union of St Alban's, county of Hertford; 12½ miles west by south of Hertford, 21 north-west of London, and 6½ north-east of Watford station, on the London and Birmingham railway. It is situated chiefly off the summit and northern declivity of a hill rising from the Ver, a branch of the Coln; and consists principally of three streets. Many of the houses are ancient, but others, particularly on the new line of road to the southward of the town, are of modern erection.

The town comprises three parishes, all of which are in the archd. of St. Albans and dio. of London. The living of St. Albans is a discharged rectory in the patronage of the Corporation; valued at £10; gross income £111. That of St. Peter's is a vicarage; valued at £9 Os. 10d.; gross income £345. Patron, in 1835, the Bishop of Ely. St. Michael's is a discharged vicarage; valued at £10 1s. 8d.; gross income £320. Patron, in 1835, Lord Verulam.—Tanner says:—"At a place called Holmhurst, near the ancient Roman city of Verulam, known after, in the Saxon times, by the name of Verlamceaster, or Watlingceaster. King Offa, A. D. 793, founded a noble abbey for 100 Benedictine monks to the honour of St. Alban, the protomartyr. This monastery had very great privileges and exemptions, and also revenues valued, 26th Henry VIII., at £2,105 7s. 1d. ob. q. Dugd. The church, since made use of as parochial, and great part of the site, were granted, 7th Edward VI., to the mayor and burgesses." Of this magnificent, mitred, parliamentary abbey, "nothing," says Lady Morgan, "now remains but its portal or gateway, with its beautiful pointed arch above, and paved court beneath,—so often trod by the pilgrim feet of votarists of all nations,—so often filled with the gorgeous trains of royal guests, and of princely confraternites. The conventual church, however, though but a fragment of the once magnificent pile, attests the grandeur of the whole, and the perfection of ecclesiastical architecture in England during the middle ages. There is still extant, in the interior, specimens of genuine Saxon architecture, a part of the original building, the rounded arch, the massy tower, and enormous pillar, whose rude but noble simplicity is forcibly contrasted to the elaborated elegance of the Gothic style. Screens of the most minute tabernacle-work, pointed arches, feathery shafts, and a profusion of richly-sculptured tracery, display all the characteristic beauty of that most picturesque and fanciful epoch of the art. The high altar, the after-part of the choir, the chapel of Abbot Rambridge, and that of St. Alban, are the most remarkable. There are also existing beneath the fretted roof of this beautiful abbey church, monuments and tombs well-suited to revive remote associations with great events, and to awaken a poetic nationality in the most phlegmatic temperament. Of these, the tomb of the Protector, Duke of Gloucester, familiarly called the good Duke Humphry, stands on the southern side." The whole church, from east to west, is 600 feet in length. From the west door to the high altar is 411 feet; from thence, including the chapel of the shrine, to the east end of the Lady-chapel, is 189 feet. The breadth of the transept is nearly 32 feet; its extreme length 174; the length of the nave with its aisles, is 74½ feet; height of the nave 65 feet; of the tower 144. The church consists of a nave with two aisles, two transepts, an anti-choir or baptistry separated from the former by a rich screen, and a choir with two aisles opening by two lofty pointed arches into a chapel and presbytery; beyond which, eastward, is the Lady-chapel, built in 1308, and now converted into a school-house. "It has been the privilege of the abbey of St. Albans, and of its historical neighbourhood," says Lady Morgan, "to have fascinated the imaginative, and to have lured to its scenes and time-honoured site, the high-minded, and the intelligent of all ages. There was a spell hovering over the ruined fragments of ancient Verulam, which led the poetical and the philosophical alike to wander over its site, and to repose within its view. Spenser assumed the character of its presiding genius, to sing its grandeur and melancholy glory:—

I was that city, which the garland wore
Of Britain's pride, delivered unto me
By Roman victory, which it wore of yore,
Though nought at all but ruins now I be,
And lie in my own ashes, as ye see.
Verlame I was: what boots it that I was,
Sith now I am but weeds and wasteful grass.

Ruins of Time.

The wish of Sir Thomas More was to live and die in its neighbourhood; and Bacon chose its little church of St. Michael for his grave, because the ancient pile arose within the precincts of the walls of Verulam. The south wall of the great nave fell lately; and it is estimated that it will require £14,000 to make the repairs necessary to preserve it from total ruin. The Society of Antiquaries has published very splendid illustrative plans, elevations, and sections of the abbey-church of St. Albans.

There are here places of worship for Baptists, Congregationalists, Quakers, Methodists, and Unitarians. The Baptist church in Dagnall-lane was founded in 1675; the Presbyterian, now Unitarian, church, in 1697; the Spier-street Independent church, in 1799. The Society of Friends also have a meeting here. The free grammar-school was chartered by Edward VI. in 1553, and still further endowed by Queen Elizabeth and James I. It would appear, however, that a celebrated school existed here in very early times. Salmon says that Garine, the 20th abbot of St. Albans, and his brother, built a school here, "which had the greatest number of scholars of any in England." The school itself was formerly part of the abbey church; and is said to have been the place of interment of the nobles who fell in the first battle of St. Albans. The annual income of the school, in 1832, was £157. Master's salary £60; number of free scholars 12.—In the Blue-coat school, 35 boys are clothed and educated.—There are three daily and Sunday National schools here; and there are almshouses, called Marlborough buildings, in which 36 decayed men and women are supported, each of whom receives a pension of £10 per annum, founded and endowed by the celebrated Sarah, duchess of Marlborough.—There are twenty-one other almshouses, and numerous charities to the poor.—At a short distance from the town are the remains of the nunnery of Sopwell, founded in 1140 by Abbot Gorham.

This town was incorporated in the 7th of Edward VI. in 1554, by whose charter, and a subsequent one of Charles II., the common council, and governing body of the corporation, consisted of a mayor and 12 aldermen; the other members and officers of the corporation, were a high steward, recorder, town-clerk, chamberlain, and coroner, 24 assistants, with an indefinite number of freemen. St. Albans possesses a liberty or district, which, both in civil and ecclesiastical matters, exercises a jurisdiction peculiar to itself; it includes the parishes of Abbots Langley, Aldenham, Barnet, Sandridge, Redbourne, Codicote, Shephall, Brantfield, Elstree, Sarratt, Hexton, Norton, Ridge, St. Paul's Walden, Northam, Newnham, Brantfield, St. Stephen's, Rickmansworth, and Watford. The principal courts held within the borough are the quarter-sessions, petty-sessions for the liberty, court of record, and court of requests. St. Albans has been represented in parliament from a very early period. Its elective franchise was suspended from the 5th of Edward III. till the 1st of Edward VI., since which time it has returned, and still returns, two members to parliament. The number of electors on the register for 1832, was 657; for 1833, 574. The paramount influence in the borough was long shared by Earls Spencer and Verulam; but of late years the electors have been left very much to themselves.—The St. Alban's poor-law union comprehends a district of 54 square miles, containing a population, in 1831, of 15,843. The average annual expenditure for the relief of the poor in this district, during the three years preceding the formation of the union, was £8,868; in 1838, it was only £4,041. With the exception of straw-plat, the only manufactures of St. Albans are carried on in one silk-mill, employing 100 hands. The market-day is Saturday; and there are fairs on March the 25th and 26th, and on the 10th and the 11th of October for servants, horses, cows, and sheep. According to the most recent accounts the town is now stationary, and has little prospect of advancing in wealth or consequence. The nett income of the town, in 1834, was £188 14s. 9d. Assessed taxes for 1831, £1,964. Pop. of the old borough, in 1801, 3,038; in 1831, 4,772. Houses 800. Acres 320. A. P. £20,881. Poor rates, in 1837, £2,880. Pop. of the extended borough, in 1831, 5,771. Houses 996. The liberty of St. Albans does not contribute to the county-rate.

The borough of St. Albans is built near the site of the ancient town of Verulamium, or Verulamium, the Orolanion of Ptolemy, which, according to the Roman historians, was founded by the Britons at an earlier period than London. According to Camden, it is the city or fortress of Cassibelaun, or Cassivellaunus, which was forced by Caesar. Milton calls St. Albans "jugera Cassibelauni." In Nero's reign it ranked as a municipium, or free city, enjoying the privileges of Roman citizenship. Boadicea, queen of the Iceni, surprised it in the reign of Claudius, and put the chief part of the inhabitants to the sword; but it soon recovered from this calamity. In A. D. 293, Albanus, a citizen of Verulam, who had embraced the Christian faith, was beheaded on a hill in the neighbourhood. In 429, Germanus, bishop of Auxerre, and Lupus, bishop of Troyes, held a synod here, to confute the Pelagian heresy. Verulam fell not long after into the hands of the Saxons, but was retaken by the Britons, and again reverted to the Saxons. While yet in ruins after these successive contests, Offa—as already mentioned—founded a monastery or abbey here in honour of St. Alban, whose remains had just been discovered on the spot of his martyrdom. Matthew Paris—who was himself a monk in the abbey of St. Albans—says that Alsinus, the 6th abbot, about 950, built a church on each of the three principal roads leading from the monastery, and that around these the present town of St. Albans gradually arose. Pope Adrian IV. constituted the abbot of St. Albans first abbot in England in order and dignity; and Pope Honorius, in 1218, exempted the abbot from the jurisdiction of the bishop of Lincoln, his diocesan. A sanguinary battle was fought here in 1455, between Henry VI. and the duke of York, in which the Lancastrians were defeated. Money is said by Camden to have been coined here in the time of the Romans. On the introduction of printing into England, a press was put up in the abbey of St. Albans, from which issued some of the earliest English specimens of the art. Alexander Neckham, a poet and divine, the celebrated Sir John Mandeville, and Sir John King, and Sir Francis Pemberton, two eminent lawyers, were natives of St. Albans.—The noble family of Grimstone takes the title of Earl from Verulam; as does that of Beauclerc the title of duke from St. Albans.

ALBAN'S HEAD (St.), a remarkable sea-mark, or promontory, on the coast of Dorsetshire, in the parish of Worth-Matavers. On the cliff near the summit, which is 441 feet above sea-mark, are the remains of a chapel, probably of the 12th century.

This place is sometimes called ST. ADHELM'S or ADHELM'S HEAD.

ALBERBURY, or ABBERBURY, a parish comprising the townships of Cruggion, Middleton, and Uppington, in the hund. of Cawrse, and the township of Bausley in the hund. of Deythur, county of Montgomery; and the townships of Alderbury, Benthall with Shrawardine, Eyton, Rowton with Amaston, and Wollaston, in the hund. of Ford, county of Salop. The parish is in the union of Atcham, and 8½ miles west by north of Shrewsbury, on the road to Llanfyllin. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Salop and dio. of Hereford; rated at £5 10s., and in the parliamentary returns at £136; gross income £187. It is in the patronage of All Souls' college, Oxford. Bequests to the amount of about £14 yearly have been left to the poor of this parish. Pop. of the parish, in 1801, 1,204; in 1831, 1,799. Houses 472. That portion of the parish, which is in the county of Salop, comprehends 6,040 acres. A. P. £12,562. Poor rates, in 1837, £319. Tanner says: "Warine, the sheriff of Shropshire, and a great warrior against the Welsh, founded near this place the New Abbey for Black monks of the order of Grandmorst in Limosin, temp. Hen. I. It was suppressed among the alien priories, and bestowed by King Henry VI., ann. reg. 19. at the request of Henry Chichele, archbishop of Canterbury, on All Souls' college in Oxford." Some vestiges of this building may still be traced.—Glyn, a hamlet in this parish, was the birth-place of old Parr. His cottage is still standing, and has undergone little alteration since the time he lived in it.

ALBORNE, or ALNKSBN, a depopulated hamlet in the hund. of Colneis, Suffolk. "Here," says Tanner, "was a small priory of Austin canons, dedicated to the Blessed Virgin, which seems to have been about 1406, or, however, some time before the general suppression, joined and appropriated to the monastery of Woodbridge."

ALBOURN, a parish in Tipnook hund., rape of Bramber, union of Cuckfield, Sussex; 2½ miles north-west from Hurst-Pierpoint. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Lewes and dio. of Chichester; rated at £7 14s. 2d.; gross income £271. Patron, in 1835, John Goring, Esq. Pop., in 1801, 253; in 1831, 362. Houses 52. Acres 1,280. A. P. £1,647. Poor rates, in 1837, £294.

ALBRIGHTON, a parish, formerly a market-town, in the Shiffnall division of the hund. of Brimstree, union of Shiffnall, Shropshire; 5 miles south-east by east from Shiffnall. Living, a vicarage in the archd. of Salop and dio. of Lichfield; in the peculiar jurisdiction of the dean of Lichfield; rated at £5 10s.; gross income £851. Alternate patrons, the Company of Haberdashers and the governors of Christ's hospital, London. Fairs for cattle, sheep, and swine, are held here on the first Monday in March, 23d May, and last Monday in June. Charities of about £64 yearly, are distributed to the poor of this parish. Pop., in 1801, 901; in 1831, 1,054. Houses 211. Acres 2,970. A. P. £6,357. Poor rates, in 1837, £289.

ALBRIGHTON, a township and chapelry in the parish of St. Mary, Shrewsbury, Shropshire; 3½ miles north of Shrewsbury. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. of Salop and dio. of Lichfield, and a peculiar of the dean of Lichfield; gross income £52. It is endowed with £800 royal bounty. Patrons, in 1829, the mayor and chief schoolmaster of Shrewsbury. Pop., in 1801, 58; in 1831, 96. Houses 9. A. P. £883. Poor rates, in 1837, £23.

ALBURGH, a parish in the hund. of Earsham, union of Depwade, county of Norfolk; 4 miles east by north from Harleston. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Norfolk and dio. of Norwich; rated at £12; gross income £405. All expenses attending the church and other town charges are paid from the rents received for the town estate, which amount to £180 18s. yearly, the balance being applied in aid of the poor rates. The sum of £19 is also laid out every year for the purchase of coals for the poor. Patron, in 1841, the Duke of Norfolk. Pop., in 1801, 218; in 1831, 586. Houses 113. Acres 1,430. A. P. £2,393. Poor rates, in 1837, £228.

ALBURY, a parish in the hund. of Edwinstree, union of Bishop-Stortford, county of Hertford; 4½ miles north-west from Bishop-Stortford. Living, a vicarage, a peculiar of the dean and chapter of St Paul's; rated at £7 9s. 7d.; gross income £264. Patron, the treasurer of St Paul's. Charities to the poor amount to about £18 yearly. Pop., in 1801, 557; in 1831, 631. Houses 132. Acres 3,200. A. P. £3,652. Poor rates, in 1837, £386.

ALBURY, or ALDBURY, a parish and township in the hund. of Bullington, union of Thame, county of Oxford; 3 miles north-west of Tetworth. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Oxford; rated at £9 2s. 8½d.; gross income £281. Patron, in 1835, the earl of Abingdon. There is a school in this parish, the master of which receives £10 yearly for instructing 12 poor boys. Pop., in 1801, 177; in 1831, 239. Houses 32. Acres 1,250. A. P. £2,453. Poor rates, in 1837, £87.

ALBURY, or ALDBURY, a parish in the hund. of Blackheath, union of Guildford, county of Surrey; 5 miles south-east of Guildford. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Surrey and dio. of Winchester; rated at £17 12s. 8½d.; gross income £430. Patron, in 1835, H. Drummond, Esq. There are also two National schools here. The sum of £17 has been bequeathed by various individuals to the poor of this parish; £5 are given for the education of 12 poor children, and £15 are employed in apprenticing the children of poor people. Pop., in 1801, 510; in 1831, 929. Houses 163. Acres 4,920. A. P. £3,241. Poor rates, in 1837, £607.

ALBY, a parish in the hund. of South Erpingham, union of Aylsham, county of Norfolk; 5 miles north by east of Aylsham. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. and dio. of Norwich; rated at £7 11s. 8½d., and returned at £115 8s. 7d.; gross income £140. Patron, in 1835, the earl of Orford. Pop., in 1801, 217; in 1831, 346. Houses 73. Acres 840. A. P. £839. Poor rates, in 1837, £228.

ALCESTER, a liberty in the parish of St James, Shaftesbury, Dorset, partly within that borough. "This liberty contains the manors and farms of Ankettplace, Blintisfield, Glydeford, Le Gore, and that of the dean of Sarum."—Hutchins' Dorset, II. 31.

ALCESTER, a parish and market-town in the Alcester division of the hund. of Barlichway, union of Alcester, county of Warwick; 16 miles west-south-west of Warwick, and 103 north-west of London. It is situated in a fine valley, on the western bank of the Aine, at its confluence with the Arrow; and consists of one principal street, with several small diverging ones. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. and dio. of Worcester; rated at £14 2s. 10d.; gross income £260. The church, a fine structure, was rebuilt in 1792. Patron, in 1835, the marquis of Hertford, who is lord of the manor, and holds his courts in the market-hall. There are also chapels of the Baptists, Old Presbyterians, Wesleyan Methodists, and Quakers, in this town. The Baptist church has existed since 1655. The free grammar-school was founded by Walter Newport in 1532. In 1780, Brook Bridges endowed a school here for 12 boys and 12 girls, with £20 per annum. There is also an alms-house for 4 men and 4 women. The yearly amount of these and the other charities, connected with this parish, is £279 4s. Tanner says: "Ralph Pincerna, or Le Botelre, of Oversley, built, A. D. 1140, upon an island about half-a-mile north of this town, an abbey of Benedictine monks, which he dedicated to the Blessed Virgin Mary and St John the Baptist. But this house, being much decayed, was, about A. D. 1467, united and made a cell to the abbey of Evesham. Its revenues were valued, 26th Henry VIII., at £65 7s. 11d. per annum, Dugd.; £101 14s., Speed; and were granted first to Thomas Cromwell, earl of Essex; after his attainder to Foulk Grevill; and 36th Henry VIII., to William and John Stwster." Traces of this abbey are still visible. Alcester was made a free borough in the reign of Henry I., and was of some note in the 16th and 17th centuries. It afterwards became the property of the Beauchamps, and subsequently of the Grevilles. It is now within the jurisdiction of the county-magistrates for the Alcester division of the hundred, who hold petty-sessions at Alcester. The Alcester poor-law union comprehends a district of 74 square miles, containing 22 parishes; and a pop. returned, in 1831, at 15,933. The average annual expenditure on the poor of this district, during the three years preceding the formation of the union, was £6,598; expenditure, in 1838, £4,410. The Gloucestershire Banking Company has a branch here. The principal manufacture is that of needles; there are also several malt-kilns and corn-mills. The market is held on Tuesday, and is well supplied with corn. Fairs are held on the Tuesday before the 25th of March, 18th May, 2d Tuesday in July, and 17th October, principally for horses and cheese. Alcester is supposed to have been a Roman station. The Roman way called Icknild Street passed through it, and may still be traced in the vicinity. Some antiquaries identify Alcester with the Alana of Richard of Cirencester. In Saxon times it was a place of great importance; and, at the period of the Conquest, was a royal residence. Pop., in 1801, 1,625; in 1831, 2,405. Houses 491. Acres 1,530. A. P. £6,354. Poor rates, in 1837, £714—Beauchamp court, in the neighbourhood of Alcester, was the seat of Fulke Greville, Sir Philip Sidney's beloved friend.

ALCISTON, a hilly parish in the hund. of the same name, union of West Fife, rape of Pevensey, Sussex; 4½ miles north-east of Seaford. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Lewes and dio. of Chichester; rated at £6, and returned to parliament at £60; gross income £60. Patrons, the dean and chapter of Chichester. Pop., in 1801, 186; in 1831, 266. Houses 28. Acres 1,620. A. P. £1,606. Poor rates, in 1837, £370.

ALCONBURY, or ALKMUNDBURY, a parish in the hund. of Leightonstone, union and county of Huntingdon; 4 miles north-west of Huntingdon; intersected by Alconbury brook, a branch of the Ouse. Living, a discharged vicarage, formerly in the archd. of Hunts and dio. of Lincoln, now in the dio. of Ely; rated at £8 6s. 1d.; gross income £182. Patrons, in 1835, the dean and chapter of Westminster. A fair is held here on June 24th for pedlars' ware. Pop., in 1801, 483; in 1831, 765. Houses 156. Acres 3,700. A. P. £4,622. Poor rates, in 1837, £505.

ALCONBURY-WITH-WESTON, a parish in the hund. of Leightonstone, county of Huntingdon; 6 miles north-west of Huntingdon. Living, a perpetual curacy, annexed to the vicarage of Alconbury, formerly in the archd. of Huntingdon and dio. of Lincoln, now in the dio. of Ely. Not in charge, and patronage with Alconbury vicarage. Tithes commuted in 1791. Pop., in 1801, 281; in 1831, 441. Houses 57. Acres 1,540. A. P. £2,153. Poor rates, in 1837, £206.

ALDE (THE), a river in Suffolk, which rises near Framlingham, runs south-east, and falls into the sea, by a long winding estuary, between which and the sea lie the Lantern marshes, near Aldborough and Orford.

ALDBOROUGH, or ALDEBURGH, a seaport town and parish in the hund. and union of Plomesgate, Suffolk; 22 miles east-north-east of Ipswich, and 94½ north-east of London. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Suffolk and dio. of Norwich; rated at £33 6s. 8d.; gross income £222. The church is an ancient structure of flint and freestone, pleasantly situated on the summit of a hill to the west of the town, and presenting a good landmark to mariners. Patron, in 1835, Vernon Wentworth, Esq. The Baptists, Congregationalists, and Wesleyan Methodists, have also places of worship here. There is a National daily school. The yearly amount of charities connected with this parish in 1829, was £18. Aldborough is pleasantly situated in the vale of Slaughden, having the estuary of the Alde on the south-west, and the German ocean on the east. Above rises a steep hill, commanding a fine prospect. The strand consists of fine firm sand, and slopes gradually towards the sea, which has made great encroachments within the last two centuries. The older houses are mean, and chiefly inhabited by fishermen; but the place having become rather a fashionable resort for bathers, several handsome houses and villas have been built in and near to it. Aldborough was originally incorporated by Henry VIII.; its last charter was granted by Charles I. The corporation consisted of two bailiffs, ten capital and a limited number of inferior burgesses, the bailiffs and capital burgesses being the governing body. The bailiffs are annually elected from the freemen, and are justices of the peace ex officio. They hold a court of session annually in September. The freedom is obtained by servitude or gift. This town first exercised the elective franchise in the 15th of Elizabeth, since which time, until its recent disfranchisement under the Reform bill, it returned two members to parliament, who were elected by all the inhabitants paying scot and lot: the number of electors being about 40. Market-days, Wednesday and Saturday. Fairs are held on the 1st of March, and 3^d of May, for toys. The trade of the port consists chiefly in the exportation of corn and wool, and the importation of coal and timber. About 46 vessels, averaging 52 tons burden, belong to it. The gross amount of customs duty, collected at this port in 1836, was £155 15s. Soles and lobsters are taken in great abundance here; also herrings and sprats, which are dried and exported to Holland; average income of the town is somewhat above £300; amount of assessed taxes, in 1831, £297; parochial assessment, in 1829, £582. Aldborough was the birth-place, in 1754, of Crabbe the poet. Pop., in 1801, 804; in 1831, 1,341. Houses 320. Acres 1,180. A. P. £2,005. Poor rates, in 1837, £760.

ALDBOROUGH, a parish and market-town, in the wapentake of Claro, west riding of Yorkshire. It contains the townships of Aldborough, Borough-bridge, High and Low Dunsforth, and parts of Humberston, Minskep, and Rocliff. Living, a discharged vicarage in the peculiar jurisdiction of the dean and chapter of York; rated at £9 19s. 5d.; gross income £388. Tithes of Low Dunsforth commuted in 1807. Patron, in 1835, the prebendary in cathedral of York. There are two National schools here. Charities to the poor connected with this parish, amount to about £117. Pop. of the parish, in 1831, 2,447. Houses 519. Acres 8,750. A. P. £11,311. The market-town of Aldborough is 20½ miles north-west of London, and 16½ north-west by west of York. The name is derived from the Saxon Eald-burg. It stands on the south bank of the river Ure, on the post-road from Wetherby to Richmond, and line of the northern Watling-street. The town is small and irregularly built. It is governed by a bailiff; and, previous to its disfranchisement by the Reform bill, returned two members to parliament,—a privilege conferred on the inhabitants by Philip and Mary in 1558. The electors under the old system were only about 60 in number. There are about 180 acres of marsh-land belonging to the corporation. Petty-sessions are held here. Here is a parish library. Many remains of antiquity have been discovered here: such as Roman coins, urns, utensils, fragments of tessellated pavements, &c.; and this place is generally believed to have been the metropolis of the Brigantes. It was in a flourishing condition long before York, and was probably the original seat of government. The remains of the ancient walls, which were about four yards in thickness, are yet visible; and in the centre of the town there formerly stood a mount called the Borough-hill, which is believed to have been the site of a Roman temple. The ancient town appears to have been built in the form of a square, and to have contained about sixty acres within the walls. The market-day is Wednesday; and an annual fair is held on the 4th of September. Pop., in 1801, 445; in 1831, 620. Houses 116. Acres 1,890. A. P., in 1815, £3,365. Poor rates, in 1837, £259. Assessed taxes, in 1831, £118 8s. 7d.

ALDBOROUGH, a parish in the northern division of the hund. of Erpingham, union of Erpingham, county of Norfolk; 4 miles north of Aylsham. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. and dio. of Norwich; rated at £8; gross income £173. Patron, in 1835, Lord Suffield. Pop., in 1801, 218; in 1831, 275. Houses 54. Acres 590. A. P. £1,108. Poor rates, in 1837, £193.

ALDBOURNE, or AUBOURNE, a parish in the division of Marlborough and Ramsbury, union of Hungerford, Wiltshire; 6 miles north-east of Marlborough, on the road to Lambourn. Living, a vicarage in the archd. of Wilts and dio. of Salisbury; rated at £26 6s. 3d.; gross income £390. Patron, in 1835, the bishop of Salisbury. The church is a structure laying claim to considerable antiquity. Charities connected with this parish amount to £40. This was formerly a market-town and a place of considerable trade, but has of late years fallen into decay, partly in consequence of a fire in 1760, which destroyed 72 houses and other property, to the amount of £20,000. It anciently gave name to a royal chase granted by Henry VIII. to Edward Seymour, duke of Somerset, which is now enclosed and cultivated. Fustians were formerly manufactured here to a great extent, but at present this branch of trade is nearly extinct. Tuesday was the market-day; but for a long period both markets and fairs have been discontinued. Pop., in 1801, 1,260; in 1831, 1,418. Houses 336. Acres 8,060. A. P. £6,576. Poor rates, in 1837, £735.—In the neighbourhood of this place the parliamentary forces and the royalists had a smart skirmish previously to the battle of Newbury. Part of the residence of the vicar is supposed to be the remains of a hunting-seat of John of Gaunt. Some remains of an ancient British encampment are to be seen near a farm-house called Pierce's lodge. The surrounding country is rich and fertile.

ALDBROUGH, a township in the parish of Stanwick, north riding of Yorkshire; 7 miles east from Richmond, on a tributary of the Tees. Pop., in 1801, 461; in 1831, 522. Houses 112. Acres 1,150. A. P. £2,919. Poor rates, in 1837, £19d.

ALDBROUGH, a parish in the middle division of the wapentake of Holderness, union of Skirlaugh, east riding of Yorkshire; bordering on the Northern sea. It contains the townships of Aldbrough, East and West Newton, and part of Cawden. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of the east riding and dio. of York; rated at £13 15s.; gross income £185. Patron, the Crown. Here are also a chapel for the Wesleyan Methodists, and an hospital for poor widows belonging to Beverley and Aldbrough. The principal charity connected with this parish is that of Robert Towrie, founded in 1653, the yearly produce of which is £200, of which £18 are spent in apprenticing poor children. About 33 boys and girls are educated; about £14 is laid out in buying blankets and coals for the poor in winter, and the balance is distributed among the poor. Pop., in 1801, 781; in 1831, 1,015. Houses 213. Acres 5,240. A. P. £10,913.—The township of Aldbrough is a flourishing village at the distance of 11½ miles north-east by east from Kingston-on-Hull. Pop., in 1801, 555; in 1831, 813. Houses 179. Acres 3,880. A. P. £5,832. Poor rates, in 1837, £574.

ALDBURY, a parish in the hund. of Dacorum, union of Berkhamstead, county of Hertford; 2½ miles north-east of Tring; 1 mile from the Tring station, on the London and Birmingham railroad. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Huntingdon and dio. of Lincoln; rated at £20 6s. 6½d.; gross income £450. Patrons, in 1835, the trustees of the earl of Bridgewater. The church is an ancient structure in the early English style, with a square embattled tower. Charities to the poor of this parish amount to £23. Pop., in 1801, 457; in 1831, 695. Houses 133. Acres 2,020. A. P. £1,942. Poor rates, in 1837, £322.

ALDBURY. See ALBURY, SURREY; ALBURY, HERTS; ALBURY, OXFORD.

ALDBY. See ALBY.

ALDBY. See BOSSALL.

ALDCLIFFE, a hamlet in the parish of Lancaster; 1½ mile south-east of Lancaster, on the estuary of the Lune. Pop., in 1831, 96. Houses 13. Acres 680. A. P. £1,335. Poor rates, in 1837, £117.

ALDEBURGH. See ALDBOROUGH, SUFFOLK.

ALDEBY, or ALDENBURGH, a parish in the hund. of Clavering, union of Loddon and Clavering, Norfolk; 2½ miles north-east of Beccles; bounded on the south by the Waveney river. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. of Norfolk and dio. of Norwich; rated at £20; gross income £64. Patrons, in 1835, the dean and chapter of Norwich. There is a National school here. Tanner remarks:—"Bishop Herbert, or Agnes de Belfo or Bellofago, the wife of Robert de Kia, in the time of Henry I., gave the church of St Mary here to the cathedral-monastery of Norwich; whereupon here were placed a prior and three black monks, as a cell to that house, who continued till the dissolution. This priory, and the impropriate rectory thereunto belonging, were made part of the endowment of the dean and prebendaries of Norwich by King Henry VIII. and King Henry VI." Pop., in 1821, 448; in 1831, 530. Houses 72. Acres 2,600. A. P. £3,867. Poor rates, in 1837, £201.

ALDENHAM, an extensive parish in the hund. of Cashio, union of Watford, county of Hertford; 2½ miles from Watford station, on the London and Birmingham railroad. Living, a vicarage in the archd. of Huntingdon and dio. of Lincoln; rated at £24; gross income £425. The church is an old building, composed of cemented flint-stones. Patrons, in 1835, the trustees of Peter Thellusson, Esq. There are here six almshouses and a free grammar-school, all of which were founded and endowed in 1599 by Richard Platt, citizen and brewer of London. In this school are educated 50 children who are chosen from the poor of Aldenham, and the families of the freemen of the Brewers' company, London; and, failing these, from the neighbouring parishes. The income of these charities amounts to £1,032 2s. per annum; and the whole is under the direction of the master and wardens of the Brewers' company. The master, who is elected by them, must be possessed of the degree of M. A. His salary is £200. There is also a National school. The amount of other charities to the poor of this parish, is £17. Pop., including the hamlet of Theobald's Street, in the hund. of Dacorum, in 1801, 1,103; in 1831, 1,494. Houses 278. Acres 5,830. A. P. £8,962. Poor rates, in 1837, £411.

ALDER (THE), a river in Sussex. See ADUR.

ALDERBURY HUNDRED, in the southern division of the county of Wilts. It is bounded on the north by Amesbury and Underditch hundreds; on the east by Hampshire; south by Downton hundred; and west by Cawden and Cudworth hundreds. In the new arrangement of the county, this hundred forms part of the division of Salisbury and Amesbury. Area in English statute acres, 31,760. Pop., in 1831, 4,469. Houses 862.

ALDERBURY, a parish in the division of Salisbury and Amesbury, union of Alderbury, Wilts, containing the chapelries of Farley and Pitton, and the tything of Alderbury. It is about 3 miles south of Salisbury. Living, a discharged vicarage, a peculiar of the treasurer of Salisbury cathedral; gross income £1,561. Patron, in 1835, the earl of Radnor. Pop. of the parish, in 1831, 1,323. Houses 233. Acres 3,950. A. P. £3,502.—The township of Alderbury stands on a hill, in a good sporting country, in the vicinity of the Salisbury and Southampton canal; and is intersected by the South-western railway, and the proposed Hants and Wilts Union railway. A manufactory of fustians here gives employment to many of the inhabitants. Pop., in 1801, 430; in 1831, 690. Houses 101. Acres 2,100. A. P. £1,689. Poor rates, in 1837, £218.

ALDERFORD, a parish in the hund. of Eynesford, union of St Faith's, Norfolk; 3 miles south-east by south from Reepham. Living, a discharged rectory, with the vicarage of Attlebridge, in the archd. of Norfolk and dio. of Norwich; rated at £4 6s. 8d., and in the parliamentary returns at £150; gross income £219. Patrons, in 1835, the dean and chapter of Norwich. Pop., in 1801, 35; in 1831, 40. Houses 5. Acres 320. A. P. £532. Poor rates, in 1837, £54.

ALDERLEY, a village and parish in the upper division of the hund. of Grumbald's Ash, union of Chipping-Sodbury, county of Gloucester; 2 miles south-south-east of Wotton-under-Edge. It is situated on a hill between two rivulets, which here unite and fall into the Avon. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. of Gloucester and dio. of Gloucester and Bristol; rated at £11 4s. 7d., and in the parliamentary return at £105; gross income £150. Patron, in 1835, R. H. B. Hale, Esq. The celebrated Sir Matthew Hale, lord-chief-justice in the reign of Charles II., was born here on the 1st November, 1609, and was buried in the church, which contains also his monument in marble. In the hill on which the village stands, many curious fossils have been found. The church is a handsome building; and being placed on a hill, forms a prominent and picturesque object. In 1838 there were 2 woollen mills, employing 42 hands, in this parish. This place was formerly the boundary of Kingswood forest. Pop., in 1801, 212; in 1831, 200. Houses 29. Acres 730. A. P. £1,787. Poor rates, in 1837, £181.

ALDERLEY, a parish in the hund. and union or

Macclesfield, co.-palatine of Chester; 4 miles north-west of Macclesfield. It comprises the townships of Superior and Inferior Alderley, and Great Warford. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Chester; rated at £14 18s. 4d.; gross income £635. Patron, in 1841, Lord Stanley. Charities to the poor amount to £11 12s. This parish was formerly included in that of Prestbury. Pop., in 1831, 1,338. Houses 243. Acres 6,240. A. P. £8,826.—Alderley-Edge, a hill in this parish, affords one of the most extensive and beautiful prospects in the county. A fine sandstone of a warm yellow colour is quarried here. The line of the Manchester, Cheshire, and Staffordshire railway, intersects this parish.—The two townships of Alderley are $4\frac{1}{2}$ miles west-north-west from Macclesfield. There are two free schools here now in connexion with the National Society, one of which was founded in 1628 by the Rev. Hugh Shaw, curate of the parish. This was lately rebuilt near the church in Upper Alderley. The other is in Lower Alderley. Pop. of Upper Alderley, in 1801, 408; of Lower Alderley, 483; in 1831, 402 and 587. Poor rates, in 1837, £150 and £236.

ALDERMASTON, a parish and market-town in the hund. of Theale, union of Bradfield, Berks; 8 miles east of Newbury, to the south of the post-road to Reading. It stands on the river Kennet, which is here navigable. Living, formerly in the archd. of Berks and dio. of Salisbury, now in the dio. of Oxford; rated at £12 12s. 8 $\frac{1}{2}$ d. A market is held every Friday; and there are fairs on the 6th May, 7th July, and 11th October, for horses, cattle, and pedlery. Pop., in 1801, 672; in 1831, 636. Houses 128. Acres 2,240. A. P. £3,596. Poor rates, in 1837, £285.—Aldermaston house, the seat of William Congreve, Esq., built in 1536, is remarkable for its fine old painted windows and its noble massive staircase adorned with statues. The hall is very lofty, and surrounded by a spacious gallery.

ALDERMINSTER, a parish, partly in the hund. of Oswaldslow, and partly in the hund. of Pershore, county of Worcester, of which it is an insulated portion, being completely surrounded by Warwickshire. It is in the union of Stratford-on-Avon, and 6 miles south-south-east of the town of that name; on the Moreton and Stratford railroad. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Worcester; rated at £7; in the parliamentary returns at £41 14s. 6d.; gross income £170; and in the patronage of the Crown. The church has the form of a cross, with a low tower. Pop., in 1801, 363; in 1831, 454. Houses 94. Acres 3,480. A. P. £3,831. Poor rates, in 1837, £196.

ALDERNEY, or AURIGNT, a small island belonging to Great Britain, off the coast of Normandy in France, to which duchy it once belonged. It is about $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles long, and 8 in circumference; about 7 miles from Cape La Hogue, 18 north-east by north from Guernsey, and 55 or 60 from Portland Bill, the nearest point of the English coast. With Guernsey, Jersey, and Sark, it forms the only part of the French possessions of William the Conqueror that now remains under the government of England. It is a dependency of Guernsey; and, with Jersey and Guernsey, is ecclesiastically annexed to the see of Winchester. It has but one church. The town, as it is called, is situated in the centre of the island, and bears its name. The air is salubrious, the soil fertile, and much cultivated. The island is celebrated for its breed of milch cows. The French language and manners predominate here. The landed estates belonging to the Crown afforded, in 1832, a revenue amounting to £355 7s. 10d., subject to various outgoings. Four small vessels belong to the island, two of which ply regularly to Guernsey.

Pop., in 1801, 1,154; in 1831, 1,045. The decrease is owing to emigration. Houses 217.—The strait called the Race of Alderney, which separates this island from Cape La Hogue on the French coast, is very dangerous in stormy weather, on account of a range of rocks called the Caskets. It was on these rocks that Prince William, son of Henry I., and his suite, perished in 1119. In 1744, the Victory of 110 guns foundered on this dangerous ledge, when the entire crew of 1,100 men, with Admiral Sir John Balchen, perished. Three light-houses, with revolving lights, are built on the highest of these rocks, in N. lat. $49^{\circ} 42' 17''$, W. long. $2^{\circ} 23' 34''$. They are placed in a triangular form, and exhibit alternately, every 15 seconds, a bright ray of light in every direction.

ALDERSEY, a township in the parish of Codrington, county of Chester; 8 miles south-east by south from Chester, on a small branch of the Dee. There were formerly salt-works here, but they have been abandoned since the middle of the 16th century. Pop., in 1801, 154; in 1831, 153. Houses 23. Acres 840. A. P. £1,178. Poor rates, in 1837, £80.

ALDRSHOLT, or ALDERHOLT, a tything in the parish and hund. of Cranborne, Dorset, containing 280 inhabitants.

ALDRSHOLT, a parish and hamlet in the hund. of Crondall, Basingstoke division of Southamptonshire; 3 miles north-east by north of Farnham, 4 south of the Southampton and London railroad. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. and dio. of Winchester; endowed with £1,800 parliamentary grant. It is a donative, and is rated in the parliamentary returns at £15; gross income £64. Patrons, in 1835, J. Eggar, S. Andrews, J. Alden, and W. Tice, Esqs. There is a National school here. Pop., in 1801, 494; in 1831, 665. Houses 117. Acres 4,070. A. P. £1,864. Poor rates, in 1837, £210.

ALDERTON, a parish in the upper division of the hund. of Tewkesbury, union of Winchcomb, county of Gloucester; 7 miles east of Tewkesbury. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Gloucester and dio. of Gloucester and Bristol; rated at £22 1s. 10d.; gross income £350. Patron, in 1835, T. L. Townsend. Near the village are the remains of a Saxon encampment. Charities to the poor of this parish amount to £11 13s. 6d. yearly. Pop., in 1801, 222; in 1831, 330. Houses 72. Acres 1,750. A. P. £3,108. Poor rates, in 1837, £109.

ALDERTON, or ALDRINGTON, a parish in the hund. of Cleley, union of Potterspury, Northamptonshire; 3 miles south-east of Towcester; between the line of London and Birmingham railway, and the post-road from Dunstable to Towcester. Living, a rectory, in conjunction with Grafton-Regis, in the archd. of Northampton and dio. of Peterborough; rated at £12. Patron, in 1835, the Crown. Tithes commuted in 1819. Pop., in 1801, 183; in 1831, 162. A. P. £1,096. Poor rates, in 1837, £81.

ALDERTON, a parish in the hund. of Wilford, union of Woodbridge, Suffolk; 7 miles south-east by south of Woodbridge, in the peninsula formed by Bawdsey Haven and Hollesley bay. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Suffolk and dio. of Norwich; rated at £14 18s. 4d.; gross income £591. Patron, the bishop of Norwich, and the lords of four neighbouring manors, alternately. There is a National school here. Charities to the poor of this parish amount to £18 yearly. The living of Alderton was held by Giles Fletcher the poet, who died here in 1623. Pop., in 1801, 425; in 1831, 575. Houses 65. Acres 2,680. A. P. £3,418. Poor rates, in 1837, £331.

ALDERTON, a parish in the division and union of Malmesbury, Wilts; 8 miles south-west of Malmesbury. Living, a curacy in the archd. and dio.

of Salisbury, annexed to the vicarage of Sherston Magna. It is not in charge, and is rated in the parliamentary returns at £80. Patrons, the dean and chapter of Gloucester. Pop., in 1801, 103; in 1831, 213. Houses 34. Acres 1,700. A. P. £2,822. Poor rates, in 1837, £91.

ALDERWASLEY, or ALDERWASHLEY, a township and chapelry in the parish of Wirksworth, county of Derby; $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles east by south of Wirksworth, on the Cromford canal. Patron, the dean of Lincoln. Pop., in 1831, 424. Poor rates, in 1837, £161.

ALDFIELD, a chapelry in the parish of Ripon, west riding of Yorkshire; $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles west by south of Ripon, on the road to Pateley Bridge. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. of Richmond and dio. of Ripon; rated in the parliamentary returns at £74; gross income £72. There is a National school here. Patroness, in 1835, Mrs Lawrence. Pop., in 1801, 122; in 1831, 146. Houses 24. Acres 850. A. P. £1,251. Poor rates, in 1837, £53.—In the neighbourhood are some mineral springs situated in a vale beneath the village, not far from the venerable remains of Fountains Abbey.

ALDFORD, a parish in the hund. of Broxton, union of Great Boughton, co.-palatine of Chester. It is on the river Dee, and intersected by a small tributary stream of that river. It comprises the townships of Aldford and Churton, the chapelry of Bruera or Churton-Heath, and the townships of Great Boughton, Buerton, and Ederley. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Chester; rated at £16 17s. 8d.; gross income £350. Patron, the marquis of Westminster. Pop., in 1831, 1,710. Houses 321. Acres 3,760. A. P. £8,271. The township of Aldford is 6 miles south by east of Chester. The name is derived from an old ford over the river at this place. There is here a bridge over the Dee; and in the neighbourhood are some remains of a castle erected in the reign of Henry II. Courts-leet and baron are held at Aldford. Pop., in 1831, 488. Poor rates, in 1837, £147.

ALDHAM, a parish in the Witham division of the hund. of Lexden, union of Lexden and Winstree, county of Essex; $4\frac{1}{2}$ miles east-north-east of Great Coggleshall, and about 1 north of the railroad to Norwich. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Colchester and dio. of London; rated at £12; gross income £357. There is a National school here. Pop., in 1801, 370; in 1831, 407. Houses 50. Acres 2,040. A. P. £2,345. Poor rates, in 1837, £254.

ALDHAM, a parish in the hund. and union of Cosford, county of Suffolk; about 2 miles north-east of Hadleigh. Living, a rectory, formerly in the archd. of Sudbury and dio. of Norwich, now in the dio. of Ely; rated at £10 13s. 4d.; gross income £290. Patron, in 1835, — Lennard, Esq. Charities to the poor of this parish amount to about £22 yearly. The line of the projected Ipswich and St Edmund's Bury railway passes through this parish. Pop., in 1801, 197; in 1831, 318. Houses 32. Acres 2,170. A. P. £1,953. Poor rates, in 1837, £175.

ALDEHLM'S (St). See ST ALBAN'S HEAD.

ALDINGBOURN, a parish in the hund. of Box and Stockbridge, union of Westhamphett, rape of Chichester, Sussex; 4 miles east of Chichester. Living, a vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Chichester; rated at £10 5s. 10d.; gross income £256. Patron, in 1835, the dean of Chichester. Tithes commuted in 1777. Pop. of this parish—which includes the hamlets of Lidey and Westergate—in 1801, 725; in 1831, 833. Houses 112. Acres 3,080. A. P. £4,854. Poor rates, in 1837, £481.

ALDINGHAM (UPPER and LOWER), two united parishes and townships in the hund. of Lonsdale, north of the sands, union of Ulverstone, co.-palatine of Lancaster; $5\frac{1}{2}$ miles south of Ulverstone. The lower division is situated on Morecombe bay. It contains the townships of Upper and Lower Aldingham, Glaston, and Leece. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Richmond and dio. of Chester; rated at £39 19s. 2u.; gross income £1,183. Patron, the Crown. There are charities to the poor, and for educational purposes, in this parish, to the amount of about £16 yearly. Pop., in 1801, 633; in 1831, 884. Houses 155. Acres 4,680. A. P. £4,800. Poor rates, in 1837, £321. Of the two united townships, the pop. of Upper Aldingham, in 1821, was 291; Lower Aldingham, 115.—This parish was formerly of much greater extent. In West's Antiquities of Furness, it is stated that "the encroachments of the sea have been progressive; for great part of the parish of Aldingham has been swept away within these few centuries. There is a tradition in Furness, that the church of Aldingham stood in the centre of the parish; at present it is within reach of a high tide. It is within the memory of man that some parts of the ruins of a village, called Low Scales, was visible on the sands; and the villages of Crinleton and Rose, which the first Sir Michael le Fleming exchanged with the monks of Bardsey, are only known in record."

ALDINGTON, a parish partly within the liberty of Romney-marsh, partly within the franchise and barony of Bircholt, lathe of Shepway, union of East Ashford, county of Kent; 4 miles east of Hythe, and 1 south of the South-eastern railroad. Living, a rectory with the chapel of Smeeth, a peculiar of the archbishop of Canterbury; rated at £38 6s. 8d.; gross income £1,076. In the time of Henry VIII. this living was held by the celebrated Erasmus of Rotterdam; also by Richard Master, who was executed in 1534, for aiding the imposture of Elizabeth Barton, the holy maid of Kent. The latter was a native of this parish. The officers belonging to Romney-marsh and its manor are elected here; and the church is frequented by the inhabitants of St Leonard's Hurst, formerly a distinct parish. Pop., in 1801, 504; in 1831, 732. Houses 89. Acres 3,420, of which 107 were under hops in 1837. A. P. £4,811. Poor rates, in 1837, £497.

ALDINGTON, a hamlet and chapelry in the parish of Badsey, county of Worcester. Living, attached to the curacy of Badsey, in the archd. and dio. of Worcester; about 3 miles east of Evesham. The tithes of this township, the property of the dean and chapter of Christ church, Oxford, the impropiators and the curate, were commuted in 1807. Pop., in 1801, 83; in 1831, 104. Houses 22. A. P. £1,339. Poor rates, in 1837, £56.

ALDMONBURY. See ALMONDBURY.

ALDRIDGE, a parish in the southern division of the hund. of Offlow, union of Walsall, county of Stafford. It contains the township of Aldridge and the chapelry of Great Barr. Living, a vicarage in the archd. of Stafford and dio. of Lichfield; rated at £8 1s. 3d.; gross income £1,100. Patron, in 1835, Sir E. D. Scott, Bart. Pop., in 1831, 1,700. Houses 303. Acres 7,960. A. P. £11,773.—In this parish there is a noted pool called Druidmeer, the occasional overflow of which is supposed by the inhabitants to indicate an approaching dearth. A height in this parish, known by the name of Barr-Beacon, is said to have been the place from which the Druids gave notice of their sacrifices. The Wyrley and Essington canal passes through the parish. The township of Aldridge is 3 miles east-north-east from Walsall. There are two free schools here. One of these is a school for the education of eight poor girls, with an endowment of £12 per annum; the other, for the education of thirty or forty scholars, has a yearly income of £117 10s. 1d. There is also a National school. The annual produce of other charities connected with this parish, is £54 2s., exclusive of those in the chapelry and township of Great Barr; which see. Once in two years a court-leet is held here. There is an extensive distillery here; and in the neighbourhood a fine kind of clay is found, from which pottery, tiles, &c., are made. Pop., in 1801, 736; in 1831, 841. Houses 157. Acres 2,970. A. P. £5,128. Poor rates, in 1837, 320.

ALDRINGHAM, a parish on the east coast of Suffolk, in the hund. and union of Blything; $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles north by west of Aldborough. Living, a perpetual curacy not in charge, in connection with the chapel of Thorpe. It is in the archd. of Suffolk and dio. of Norwich; gross income £59. There is a Baptist church here. Patron, in 1835, Lord Huntingfield. On St Andrew's day a small fair is held here. There were formerly markets, but they have fallen into disuse. This parish—which includes the hamlet of Thorpe—contained, in 1801, 221 inhabitants; in 1831, 362. Houses 49. Acres 610. A. P. £692. Poor rates, in 1837, £110.

ALDRINGTON, Sussex. See ATHERINGTON and PORTSLADE.

ALDSTONE, or ALSTON-MOOR, a parish in Leath ward, Cumberland. It is situated near the borders of Northumberland, and consists of a narrow valley surrounded by high lands, and inclosed on the west by the Cross, Hartside, and Thackmoor fells. Distance from London, 272 miles; from Brampton, 20, south-south-east.

Living, a discharged vicarage in connection with the chapelry of Garragill, in the archd. of Northumberland and dio. of Durham; rated at £7 13s., and in the parliamentary return at £119; gross income £139. Patrons, in 1835, the commissioners of Greenwich hospital. The church was rebuilt in 1770. The chapel-of-ease is situated at Garragill. The whole tithes of this parish, belonging to the commissioners and governors of Greenwich hospital, were commuted in 1803. The relief of the poor in Aldstone and Garragill, comprehending a district of 55 square miles, is managed by a board of guardians. This parish is about 1,000 feet above sea-level, and remarkably sterile; but the mineral productions are rich and abundant, being of greater importance than any others in Cumberland. The mines are believed to have been first worked by the crown in the reign of Henry III. Their importance, however, does not appear to have been fully ascertained till about 1688, when they were in the possession of the earl of Derwentwater. In 1768, there were no less than 119 lead-mines in the parish, the average produce of which was 167,544 cwt. yearly, valued at £70,000. In 1814 there were still about 102 mines, producing yearly, 91,968 cwt. The ore contains much silver, generally yielding from eight to ten ounces per ton; and from that brought from Yadmoss mine, opened in 1828, not less than 96 ounces per ton are extracted. The present average value of the lead is 20s. per cwt. In the same mines copper has been found. For removing the water from the principal mine, a grand aqueduct level has been cut, called Nent Force. By means of this—which is 5 miles in length from the town to the shaft of the mine—a horizontal approach to the mine is obtained. There is one woollen mill in this parish, which, in 1838, employed 23 hands. In the hills there are extensive caverns, one of which, called Tutman's hole, has been explored to the distance of a mile from the entrance; others, such as that of Dunfell—which is within the limits of Westmoreland—are dangerous, from the number and intricacy of the chambers and passages. These are adorned with spar and pyrites in various forms, and afford many beautiful specimens of minerals.—Of the Roman road, called the Maiden way, traces are distinctly visible crossing this parish, about 1 mile west of the township of Aldstone; and about 3 from the town, on Hall-hill, a little below the bridge over the Tyne, are the remains of Whitley-castle, consisting of earth-works and foundation, surrounded by a moat. Pop., in 1821, 5,699, of which 1,288 were in the chapelry of Garragill, and the remainder in the township of Aldstone; in 1831, 6,858. Houses 1,285. Acres 35,060. A. P. £25,590. Poor rates, in 1837, £1,684.

The township of Aldstone, in the above parish, stands on a declivity near the confluence of the rivers Nent and South Tyne; 29 miles east-south-east of Carlisle. The houses are irregularly built, chiefly of stone, and roofed with slate; a supply of water is brought in pipes from a spring at the distance of half-a-mile. Besides the parish-church, there are places of worship belonging to the Independents, Wesleyan Methodists, and Society of Friends. The first independent church was formed in 1754; the second in 1804; the Wesleyan Methodist church in 1800. There is a grammar-school endowed with £26 per annum, erected in 1828 by subscription; a Lancasterian school for 200 children has recently been instituted. The yearly revenue of other charities connected with this parish is £70 12s. There is a subscription-library, which was founded in 1821. The Newcastle Union Bank have a branch here. The market-day is Saturday; and fairs are held on the last Thursday in May, the Friday before September 27th, and the first Thursday in November for cattle, horses, linen and woollen cloth. There are also races on Easter Monday and Tuesday. The town is within the jurisdiction of the county-magistrates, who hold petty-sessions every month at the Swan inn. Courts leet and baron are also held in the months after Easter and Michaelmas. The inhabitants are chiefly miners; but the town contains also manufactories of shot, sewing thread and flannel, besides a large brewery. Pop., in 1801, 3,626; in 1831, 5,244. Houses 1,006.—The neighbourhood is the most picturesque and romantic part of Cumberland.

ALDSWORTH, a parish in the hund. of Brightwell's Barrow, union of Northleach, county of Gloucester; $4\frac{1}{2}$ miles south-east of Northleach, on the road from Barnsley to Burford. Living, a perpetual curacy united with Turkdean, in the archd. of Gloucester and dio. of Gloucester and Bristol, of the certified value of £23 10s.; rated in the parliamentary return at £60. Patrons, the dean and chapter of Christ church, Oxford. The church is a picturesque object, being built on a hill, and visible many miles round. The great and small tithes of this parish were commuted in 1793. This parish is intersected by the Cheltenham, Oxford, and London Union railway. Pop., in 1801, 288; in 1831, 353. Houses 74. Acres 3,460. A. P. £2,735. Poor rates, in 1837, £70.

ALDWARD, or ALDWARKE, a township in the parish of Ecclesfield, west riding of Yorkshire; 2 miles north-east from Rotherham. It is separated from the parish to which it belongs, being completely surrounded by other parishes. It consists chiefly of Aldwarke-hall, once a seat of the Fitzwilliam family, and a farm-house. Pop., in 1821, 35. Acres 290.

ALDWARK, a hamlet in the parish of Bradborne, hund. of Wirksworth, Derbyshire; $4\frac{1}{2}$ miles north-west of Wirksworth. This township is in the honour of Tutbury, duchy of Lancaster. The Peak railway runs along its southern boundary. Pop., in 1801, 68; in 1831, 97. Houses 16. Poor rates, in 1837, £50.

ALDWART, a township in the parish of Alne, north riding of the county of York, on the Ure, which is here navigable. Pop., in 1801, 173; in 1831, 190. Houses 34. Acres 2,220. A. P. £2,031. Poor rates, in 1837, £21.

ALDWINKLE, ALL SAINTS, a parish in the hund. of Huxloe, union of Thrapston, county of Northampton; 4 miles north-east of Thrapston. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Northampton and dio. of Peterborough; rated at £12 4s. 2d.; gross income £312. Patron, in 1835, the Rev. R. Roberts, D.D. The church is considered a beautiful specimen of the decorated English style. The great and small tithes of Aldwinkle commons, the property of the clerical rectors, were commuted in 1772. In the parsonage-house here, the poet Dryden was born in 1631. There is a free school belonging to this and the neighbouring parish of St Peter, for the support of which, lands were bequeathed in 1671 by Richard Thorpe. The annual revenue of the land is £16. The remainder of the salary is made up in voluntary subscriptions. Other charities connected with these parishes amount to £34 14s. Pop., in 1801, 349; in 1831, 247. Houses 53. Acres in the two parishes of Aldwinkle, All Saints, and Aldwinkle, St Peters, 2,450. A. P. in both parishes, £2,798. Poor rates in the former, in 1837, £143.

ALDWINKLE, ST PETER'S, a parish in the hund. of Huxloe, union of Thrapston, county of Northampton; 3½ miles north by east of Thrapston. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Northampton and dio. of Peterborough; rated at £11 6s. 3d.; gross income £230. Patron, in 1835, Lord Lilford. The river Nene, which flows through this parish, is navigable to the sea, and communicates with the Northampton canal. On the banks of the Nene is a curious cruciform building, called Liveden, erected by the Tresham family; it is richly decorated with sculpture, and a variety of religious symbols. This parish was the birth-place of Thomas Fuller, author of the 'History of the Worthies of England,' &c. His father was rector of the parish. Pop., in 1821, 166; in 1831, 171. Houses 35. Poor rates, in 1837, £93.

ALDWORTH, a parish in the hund. of Compton, union of Wantage, Berks; 4 miles east by south of East Ilsley. Living, a vicarage formerly in the archd. of Berks and dio. of Salisbury, now in the dio. of Oxford; rated at £8 16s. 0½d.; gross income £472. Patrons, the master and fellows of St John's college, Cambridge. Beach farm, in this parish, is supposed to be the site of an ancient baronial castle and mansion belonging to the family of De la Beche. Pop., in 1801, 273; in 1831, 268. Houses 59. Acres 1,960. A. P. £2,201. Poor rates, in 1837, £155.

ALEMOUTH, AILMOUTH, or ALNEMOUTH, a small township and sea-port in the parish of Lesbury, Northumberland; 4 miles south-east of Alnwick. It derives its name from its situation at the mouth of the river Alne. This, though a small place, has some commerce, chiefly in the export of corn, eggs, pork, and wool, and the importation of wood and other merchandise from Holland. In 1825, 10 vessels of from 50 to 150 tons belonged to this port. The trade has, however, greatly declined. It was formerly a dependent manor on the barony of Alnwick. There was anciently a chapel here on an eminence near the sea; and the churchyard was, until about twenty years ago, used as a place of interment; it has now, however, been almost entirely washed away by the sea. Pop., in 1801, 350; in 1831, 415. Houses 99. A. P. £200. Poor rates, in 1837, £188.

ALESHAM. See HAILSHAM, SUSSEX: AYLESHAM, Norfolk

ALESWORTH, or AILESWORTH, a hamlet in the parish of Castor, county of Northampton. There is a curacy here. Pop., in 1801, 154; in 1831, 289. Houses 56. A. P. £1,000. Poor rates, in 1837, £90.

ALFOLD, or AWFOLD, a parish in the hund. of Blackheath, union of Hambledon, Surrey; 8½ miles south-south-east from Godalming, on the borders of Sussex. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Surrey and dio. of Winchester; rated at £6 11s. 2d.; gross income £232. Patron, in 1835, the Rev. L. W. Eliot. This parish is traversed by the Arun and Wey junction canal. From an ancient inscription found in the churchyard, it appears that several Frenchmen, who took refuge in England after the massacre on St Bartholomew's day, settled here and erected a glass-manufactory. Pop., in 1801, 306; in 1831, 514. Houses 83. Acres 2,610. A. P. £1,225. Poor rates, in 1837, £231.

ALFORD, a parish and township in the Wold division of the hund. of Calceworth, parts of Lindsey, union of Spilsby, county of Lincoln; 24 miles north-north-east of Boston, and 138 from London. A rivulet runs through the town, from a ford over which the name is derived. Living, a discharged vicarage with the chapelry of Rigby, in the archd. and dio. of Lincoln; rated at £10, and in the parliamentary returns at £126; gross income £122. Patron, in 1835, the bishop of Lincoln. The church is an edifice of stone and brick, containing many ancient monuments. The Independent church here was founded in 1780. There is a free grammar-school originally founded and endowed in 1565 by Francis Spanning. Having received considerable accessions of revenue from private benefactions, it was made a royal foundation by charter in 1576, and the management was vested in governors, who form a body corporate, and have a common seal. Two quinquennial fellowships in Magdalene college, Cambridge, are bestowed on scholars from Alford, and a scholarship of £6 8s. 6d. per annum in Jesus' college, Cambridge, is set aside for scholars from Alford, Caistor, or Louth. The revenue of the school estates amounted, in 1811, to £192 15s. There is also a National daily school here, with 170 scholars. In 1668, Sir Robert Christopher Knight erected and endowed alms-houses for six people; the endowment was augmented by Lord Harborough in 1716. The other charities connected with this parish amounted, in 1786, to £43. The market is held on Tuesday; on Whit-Tuesday there is a fair for cattle and sheep, and another on the 8th of November. The Lincoln and Lindsey Banking company have a branch here. There is a canal from the town to Anderby, on the German ocean. Petty-sessions are held here for the wapentake of Calceworth. The title of Viscount Alford is in the family of Brownlow. Pop., in 1801, 1,040; in 1831, 1,784. Houses 353. Acres 1,410. A. P. £3,637. Poor rates, in 1837, £764. —About 2 miles distant are the ruins of Aby abbey.

ALFORD, a parish in the hund. of Catsash, union of Wincanton, county of Somerset; 1½ mile south-west of Castle Cary. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Wells and dio. of Bath and Wells; rated at £9 9s. 9½d.; gross income £188. Patron, in 1835, John G. D. Thring, Esq. The river Brue runs through this parish. At a farm-house, called Alfordwell, about three quarters of a mile from the church, there is a chalybeate spring, formerly much resorted to, but now scarcely ever used. Pop., in 1801, 99; in 1831, 137. Houses 15. Acres 710. A. P. £964. Poor rates, in 1837, £57.

ALFRETON, a market-town and parish in the hund. of Scarsdale, county of Derby; 6 miles north-north-east of Belper; and consisting of the townships of Alfreton and Alfreton Outseats. In King Ethelred's charter to Burton abbey, this place is mentioned under the name of Alfreðingtūne; and it has been variously supposed to have derived its name from King Alfred, or from some Anglo-Saxon proprietor. The site of King Alfred's palace is even pointed out; but although the tradition of the name of the town being derived from Alfred, is referred to by Camden, there appears to be no satisfactory evidence of its truth. Living, a vicarage in the archd. of Derby and dio. of Lichfield; rated at £17 8s. 9d.; gross income £153. Patron, in 1835, W. P. Morewood. The church is an ancient building, apparently constructed at different periods; the oldest portion prior to the reign of Henry II. A new parliamentary church has recently been erected. The Independents and Wesleyan Methodists have also chapels here; and a Baptist church exists here in connexion with Ripley. There is a free school for the instruction of twenty-four boys and sixteen girls, of Swanwick and Green-hill lane, in reading, writing, and arithmetic. For the support of this, a house and farm of forty acres at Swanwick, the rent of which amounts to £50, were left by Mrs Elizabeth Turner. The annual revenue of the other charities connected with this parish amounts to £58 15s. The town is long and straggling, standing on the brow of a hill, and consists of streets intersecting each other at right angles in the market-place. The houses are irregular, and many of them are very old. The town is under the jurisdiction of the county-magistrates, and at the court-leet the lord of the manor appoints the constables and other officers. The only branches of manufacture carried on are those of stockings and brown pottery ware. The market-day is Friday, and on the 31st of July there is a fair for horses and horned cattle; on 8th October, and 22d November, statute fairs. There are extensive collieries in the neighbourhood, which give employment to many; also several iron-works, in which some of the largest iron-bridges have been cast. See BUTTERLY. The town was, in former times, famous for its ale. Pop., in 1801, 2,801; in 1831, 5,691. Houses 1,047. Acres 4,550. A. P. £9,634. Poor rates, in 1837, £903.—The North Midland railway passes within $1\frac{1}{2}$ mile to the west of the town. In Green-hill lane, in the immediate neighbourhood of the town, a quantity of Roman coins were discovered some years ago.

ALFRICK, a hamlet and chapelry in the parish of Suckley, union of Martley, county of Worcester; 8 miles west by south of Worcester; on a branch of the Teme. Living, a curacy in the archd. and dio. of Worcester, but not in charge, being appended to the rectory of Suckley. There is a free school here, with an endowment of £8 per annum. The other charities connected with this chapelry produce the yearly sum of £6 2s. Pop., in 1801, 396; in 1831, 493. Houses 96. Acres 1,790. A. P. £1,790. Poor rates, in 1837, £210.

ALFRINGTON, or ADLINGTON, in the parish of Corfe, county of Dorset. It is thus spoken of in Hutchin's Dorset: "Anciently a manor and hamlet, now a tything and farm-house, in Rowbarrow hund., 1 mile south-east of Corfe, near the foot of the hills.—A market and fair were granted here 54th Henry III. There was anciently a chapel, of which there are no remains. It seems to have been a free chapel. To it belonged a portion of tithes, perhaps the whole tithes of the hamlet; for this farm pays no tithes to the rector of Corfe."

ALFRISTON, a parish in the hund. of Alciston, rape of Pevensey, union of Eastbourne, county of Sussex; 2 miles north of Seaford; on the Cuckmere river. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Lewes and dio. of Chichester; rated at £11 16s.

0 $\frac{1}{2}$ d.; gross income £199. The church is an old building. Patron, in 1835, the Crown. An Independent church was formed here in 1801. In several barrows—which are numerous in the parish—many ancient urns, bones, and implements of warfare have been found. Wheat-ears are caught here in great abundance in August. It is within the liberty of the duchy of Lancaster. Pop., in 1801, 576; in 1831, 694. Houses 122. Acres 2,120. A. P. £2,656. Poor rates, in 1837, £626.

ALGARKIRK, a parish in the wapentake of Kirton, parts of Holland, union of Boston, county of Lincoln; 8 miles north-north-east of Spalding; on the post-road to Boston. Living, a rectory, with the curacy of Fosdyke, in the archd. and dio. of Lincoln; rated at £50 18s. 1 $\frac{1}{2}$ d.; gross income £1,363. Patron, in 1835, the Rev. B. Beridge. In the burying-ground is a statue said to be that of Algar, Earl of Mercia, who, with the assistance of his seneſchals, Wibert and Leofric, obtained a victory over the Danes near this place in 870. He was defeated, however, and slain in an engagement the day after. Pop., in 1801, 517; in 1831, 651. Houses 111. Acres 6,050. A. P. £6,692. Poor rates, in 1837, £479.

ALHAMPTON, a tything in the parish of Ditchet, Somerset. There was anciently a chapel here. There is a daily and Sunday National school here, with about eighty scholars; and a Wesleyan Methodist chapel and school. Distance from Castletary, $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles north-west by west. Returns with the parish.

ALICE HOLT FOREST, in Hampshire, on the borders of Surrey. It comprehends, with Woolmer forest, about 15,500 acres, of which 8,700 acres are Crown lands. The total receipt from these forests, betwixt the years 1802 and 1832 inclusive, was £161,130; the expenditure upon them, £77,512.

ALKERTON, a tything in the parish of Eastington, Gloucestershire; 3 miles west from Stroud. Pop., in 1821, 963; in 1831, 1,055. Houses 218. Here is a Wesleyan Methodist chapel and school; also a Baptist chapel and school.

ALKERTON, or AWKERINGTON, a parish in the hund. of Bloxham, union of Banbury, Oxfordshire; 6 miles west-north-west of Banbury, on the borders of Gloucestershire. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Oxford; rated at £6 3s. 9d., and in the parliamentary returns at £132; gross income £154. Patron, in 1835, the Earl of Jersey. The church contains, in the external courses, some curious figures of acolytes censuring. The learned mathematician and chronologer, Thomas Lydiat, was born here in 1572, and was buried in the church of Alkerton. Pop., in 1801, 135; in 1831, 192. Houses 38. Acres 650. A. P. £1,019. Poor rates, in 1837, £66.

ALKHAM, a parish in the upper half hund. of Folkestone, lathe of Shepway, River union, county of Kent; 4 miles west by north of Dover. Living, a vicarage, with the chapelry of Capel-le-Fern, in the archd. and dio. of Canterbury; rated at £11; and in the parliamentary returns at £130; gross income £154. Patron, the archbishop of Canterbury. The church is an old building. There is an infant and a daily school in this parish; also a Sunday school. "In this parish," says the Magna Britannia, "is an Eylebourn, which, from no appearance of head or spring, sends out such store of water as will carry a vessel of a considerable burden. The inhabitants look upon it to be a fatal presage of death or dearth whenever it happens." Pop., in 1801, 385; in 1831, 542. Houses 84. Acres 3,190. A. P. £2,246. Poor rates, in 1837, £385.

ALKINGTON, a tything in the parish and hund. of Berkeley, Gloucestershire; $1\frac{1}{2}$ mile south-east of Berkeley. It stands on the Severn. Pop., in 1801

816; in 1831, 1,167. Houses 193. A. P. £7,298. Poor rates, in 1837, £638.

ALKINGTON. See WHITTCURCH, Salop.

ALKMONTON, a township in the parish of Longford, Derby; 6 miles south by east of Ashbourn. There was formerly a chapel here built by Walter Blount, Lord Mountjoy; and between this place and Hungry-Bentley in the same parish, there was anciently an hospital, to which Walter Blount, Lord Mountjoy, was a benefactor, in 1474. Its constitution was abolished in 1547. Pop., in 1801, 65; in 1831, 79. Houses 13. A. P. £917. Poor rates, in 1837, £33.

ALKRINGTON, a township in the parish of Oldham-cum-Prestwick, co.-palatine of Lancaster; 4½ miles north by east of Manchester. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the neighbouring cotton-factories. Pop., in 1801, 319; in 1831, 367. Houses 58. Acres 680. A. P. £1,436. Poor rates, in 1837, £123.

ALLARTHORP, or ALLERTHORPE-WITH-SWAINEBY, a township in the parish of Pickhill, north riding of York; 5 miles east by south of Bedale; on the post-road from Boroughbridge to Richmond. Pop., with Swainby, in 1801, 40; in 1831, 27. Mrs Elizabeth Montague, authoress of the 'Letters,' resided for some time at Allarthorp-hall, now a farmhouse in this neighbourhood. A religious house for canons of the Premonstratensian order, was founded here in the reign of Henry II. Its site is still distinguishable.

ALLATHORNE, or ARROWTHORNE, a hamlet in the parishes of Hornby and Brompton-Patrick, north riding of Yorkshire; 5 miles north-west of Bedale. Pop., in 1821, 64; in 1831, 59. Houses 13. Acres 850. Poor rates, in 1837, £17.

ALLCANNINGS, a parish in the hund. of Swanborough, union of Devizes, county of Wilts, comprising the tythings of Allcannings, Allington, and Tullaway; 4 miles east by north from Devizes. Living, a rectory, with the chapel of Etchilhampton, in the archd. of Wilts and dio. of Salisbury; rated at £31 16s. 10½d.; gross income £1,197. Patron, in 1835, Alexander Baring, Esq. The church was partly built in the 17th century. There was formerly a prebend here, rated at £13. Annual income of charities connected with this parish, £19 4s. 8d. Pop., in 1821, 749; in 1831, 811. Houses 149. Acres 4,470. A. P. £5,917. Poor rates, in 1837, £378.

ALLEN (THE), a small river in Cornwall, which, uniting with the Kenwyn, falls into a branch of Falmouth harbour, called the Truro. There is a river of the same name in Flintshire, which disappears for a short distance under ground, near Mold, and finally falls into the Dee, below Caergwrle; also a stream in Dorsetshire, which falls into the Stour, near Blandford; and another in the county of Northumberland, which rises on the borders of Durham, and falls into the South Tyne.

ALLEN (SR), a parish in the western division of the hund. of Powder, union of Truro, Cornwall; 4½ miles north by west of Truro. Living, a vicarage in the archd. of Cornwall and dio. of Exeter; rated at £8 13s., and in the parliamentary returns at £60; gross income £175. Patron, in 1835, the bishop of Exeter. The bishops of Exeter had formerly a castle here. Pop., in 1801, 360; in 1831, 637. Houses 113. Acres 3,610. A. P. £2,468. Poor rates, in 1837, £232.

ALLENDALE, a hilly parish in the southern division of Tindale ward, union of Hexham, Northumberland. Living, a perpetual curacy, formerly in the dio. of York, and peculiar jurisdiction of Hexhamshire, now in the archd. of Northumberland and dio.

of Durham, of the certified value of £26 6s. 8d., and rated in the parliamentary returns at £130. Patrons, in 1829, Col. and Mrs Beaumont. There are three chapels-of-ease in this parish; one of which is at Ninebanks, and two others at East and West Allen. The chapel of Allendale was rebuilt in 1825. Average gross income of the curacy of Allendale £130; of St Peter's, £74; of West Allen, £109. There are also places of worship belonging to the Wesleyan and Primitive Methodists, Congregationalists, and Society of Friends. There is a free grammar-school here, founded in 1700 by Christopher Wilkinson and others, with a salary for the master of above £50 per annum. The average number of the children who attend this school is 160. There are eight other daily schools, and four Sunday schools. The other charities connected with this parish amount to the yearly sum of £18 2s. 6d. In 1831, 574 of the inhabitants were employed in the lead-mines here, which are very extensive, producing upwards of 2,500 tons of lead annually. This parish is intersected by the Allen, which flows through it from south to north. It is of considerable extent, and is subdivided into eight divisions, some of which are called grieveships: viz. Allendale town, Broadside, Catton, High and Low Forest, Keenty, Park, and West Allen: it contains also the townships of Allendale, West Allendale, Broadside with Forest, Catton, and Keenty. Owing to the great extent of this parish, it was, in 1811, divided into four, with as many rectories. There are seven constables. Pop., in 1801, 3,519; in 1831, 5,540. Houses 956. Acres 45,810. A. P. £12,184. Poor rates, in 1837, £1,175.

ALLENDALE, a market-town in the above parish; 9½ miles south-west by west of Hexham. It is on the river Allen; and is one of the polling-places for the southern division of Northumberland. Friday is the market-day. Pop., in 1801, 1,003.

ALLENHEAD, ALLONHEAD, or HEDWALLEN, a hamlet, formerly a distinct parish in the southern division of Tindale ward, Northumberland; 14 miles south-west by south of Hexham. Living, a vicarage, formerly a peculiar of Hexham, but now united to the perpetual curacy of St Peter's in Allendale; rated at £4 8s. 1¼d. Returns included in the parish of Allendale.—In the neighbourhood of this hamlet are several lead-mines, in the working of which the inhabitants are principally engaged. The surrounding country is extremely desolate and mountainous.

ALLENSMORE, a parish in the hund. of Webtree, Herefordshire; 4 miles south-west of Hereford. Living, a discharged vicarage in the peculiar jurisdiction of the dean of Hereford. It is rated at £5 12s. 6d. Charities connected with this parish amount to about £20 annually. There is a day and Sunday school. Pop., in 1801, 383; in 1831, 592. Houses 133. Acres 1,930. A. P. £2,166. Poor rates, in 1837, £238.

ALLENTON, or ALLWINTON, a parish in the western division of Coquetdale-ward, union of Rothbury, Northumberland. It is intersected by the Coquet, and comprises eleven townships: viz., Allenton, Biddleston, Borrowdon, Clennell, Fairhaugh, Farnham, Linbriggs, North and South Netherton, Peala, and Sharperton. Living, a perpetual curacy united with Hallystone, in the archd. of Northumberland and dio. of Durham; rated in the parliamentary returns at £125 7s.; gross income £110. Patron, in 1835, the bishop of Durham, but not in charge. Pop., in 1801, 900; in 1831, 822. Houses 158. Acres 31,940. A. P. £19,966. The township of the same name is 19 miles west by south of Alnwick. There was formerly an hospital here subordinate to the number of Hallystone. There is a free school here, with an endowment of £18 a year. Pop., in 1801, 103; in 1831, 85. Houses 17. Poor rates, in 1837, £45.

ALLER, a parish in the division of Somerton, union of Langport, Somerset; 6 miles west of Somerton. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Wells and dio. of Bath and Wells; rated at £36 15s.; gross income £665. Patrons, in 1835, the master and fellows of Emanuel college, Cambridge. It is said that at this place Godrum, the Danish chief, after his defeat by Alfred at Ethandune, was baptized under the sponsorship of that monarch. Dr Ralph Cudworth, author of the 'Intellectual System of the Universe,' was born here in 1617. Pop., in 1801, 389; in 1831, 490. Houses 98. Acres 4,290. A. P. £8,242. Poor rates, in 1837, £316. —In 1645, a battle was fought on Aller-moor between the royalists and the parliamentary army.

ALLERBY, or ALWARDBY, a township in connection with Outerside, parish of Aspatria, Cumberland; 4 miles north-east of Maryport. The Maryport and Carlisle railroad passes in the immediate vicinity. Pop., in 1831, 381. Houses 66. A. P. £2,259.

ALLERDALE WARD (ABOVE DERWENT), a division of Cumberland, bounded on the north and east by Allerdale ward below Derwent, and by Basenthwaite, Derwent water, Westmoreland, and Lancashire; and on the south and west by the Irish sea. Area in English statute acres, 275,970. Pop., in 1831, 39,918. Houses 7,967.

ALLERDALE WARD (BELOW DERWENT), a division of Cumberland, bounded on the north by Cumberland ward; on the east by Leath ward; on the south by Allerdale ward above Derwent; and on the west by the Irish sea. Area in English statute acres, 170,400. Pop., in 1831, 26,396. Houses 5,031.

ALLERSTON, a parish in the eastern division of the wapentake of Pickering-lythe, union of Pickering, north riding of York; 4 miles east by south of Pickering. Living, a curacy united to the vicarage of Ebberton, in the archd. of Cleveland and dio. of York. There is a National and a daily school here. Patron, in 1835, the dean of York. Pop., in 1801, 319; in 1831, 385. Houses 69. Acres 9,110. A. P. £3,240. Poor rates, in 1837, £172.

ALLERTHORPE. See SWAINBY.

ALLERTHORPE, or ALVERTHORPE, a township with Thornes, and a chapelry in the parish of Wakefield, west riding of York; 1 mile north-east of Wakefield. Living, a curacy, formerly in the archd. and dio. of York, now in the archd. of Craven and dio. of Ripon; gross income £72. Patron, the vicar of Wakefield. Pop., in 1801, 3,105; in 1831, 4,859. Houses 999. Acres 2,930. A. P. £8,129. Poor rates, in 1837, £1,360.

ALLERTHORPE, a parish, partly within the liberty of St Peter of York, partly in the Wilton-beacon division of the wapentake of Harthill, union of Pocklington, east riding of York. It comprises the townships of Allertorpe and Waplington. Living, a curacy annexed to the vicarage of Thornton, not in charge; rated in the parliamentary return at £76 6s. 3d. There is one daily school here. The charities connected with the parish amount to the annual sum of £18, besides five dwellings appropriated to the poor. Pop., in 1821, 151; in 1831, 185. Houses 31. Acres 2,050. A. P. £2,122. The township of Allertorpe is $\frac{1}{2}$ mile south-west by west of Pocklington. Pop., in 1801, 135; in 1831, 167. Houses 23. Acres 1,430. A. P. £1,382. Poor rates, in 1837, £72.

ALLERTON, a township in the parish of Childwall, co.-palatine of Lancaster. Here stands the famous Allerton-oak; and on the same farm is a supposed Druidical monument known by the name of Calder-stones, with some traces of rude characters which have never been deciphered. Pop., in 1801, 178; in 1831, 374. Houses 51. Acres 1,410. A. P. £4,836. Poor rates, in 1837, £165. Allerton-hall—in this neighbourhood—was at one time the seat of Mr Roscoe, author of 'The Life of Lorenzo de Medici.'

ALLERTON, a township in the parish of Bradford, west riding of York; 4 miles west-north-west of Bradford. The numerous factories in the neighbourhood form the chief support of the inhabitants. There is an Independent chapel here; and two Sunday schools, with one daily school. Pop., in 1801, 809; in 1831, 1,733. Houses 306. Acres 1,970. A. P. £2,707. Poor rates, in 1837, £350.

ALLERTON-BY-WATER, a township in the parish of Kippax, west riding of York; 5 miles north of Pontefract, and 1 west of the North Midland railway, near the river Aire. Pop., in 1801, 331; in 1831, 375. Houses 71. Acres 870. A. P. £1,779. Poor rates, in 1837, £160.

ALLERTON-CHAPEL, a parish in the hund. of Bempstone, union of Axbridge, Somerset; $\frac{1}{4}$ miles south-west by south of Axbridge. Living, a discharged rectory, a peculiar of the dean of Wells; rated at £10 8s. 4d.; gross income £250. Patrons, in 1835, the dean and chapter of Wells. It contains the hamlets of Arston and Stone-Allerton. Pop., in 1801, 226; in 1831, 313. Houses 55. Acres 1,490. A. P. £3,076. Poor rates, in 1837, £130.

ALLERTON-CHAPEL, or CHAPEL-ALLERTON, a chapelry within the liberty of Leeds, parish of St Peter, west riding of York; $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles north from Leeds. Living, a perpetual curacy, formerly in the archd. and dio. of York, now in the archd. of Craven and dio. of Ripon; rated at £2 10s.; gross income £361. Patron, the vicar of Leeds. Charities connected with this chapelry yield a yearly revenue of £20 5s. There is a National school here. Pop., in 1801, 1,054; in 1831, 1,934. Houses 408. Acres 3,040. A. P. £6,107. Poor rates, in 1837, £363. —In the neighbouring moors numerous Roman and Saxon remains have been found.

ALLERTON-MAULEVERER, a parochial chapelry in the upper division of the wapentake of Claro, west riding of York. Living, a perpetual curacy formerly in the archd. of Richmond and dio. of Chester, now in the dio. of Ripon; rated at £8, and in the parliamentary returns at £28; gross income £63. There is a National school here. Patron, in 1835, Lord Stourton. It contains the townships of Allerton-Mauleverer with Hoppeton and Claretton. Pop., in 1801, 290; in 1831, 251. Houses 44. Acres 2,300. A. P. £4,745. —The township of Allerton-Mauleverer is 5 miles east by north of Knaresborough; on the great post-road from Pontefract to Richmond. The township and parish derive their names from the ancient family of Mauleverer. "There was formerly here an alien priory to the abbey of Marmouster at Tours in France, to which the church of St Martin was given by Richard Maleverer, and confirmed to them by Henry II. After the dissolution of these foreign cells, Henry VI. gave this to King's college in Cambridge."—Tanner's Not. Mon. There is a Roman Catholic school here. Pop. of the township with Hoppeton, in 1801, 182; in 1831, 231. Houses 42. A. P. £4,265. Poor rates, in 1837, £136. —The family-seat of the Mauleverers, called Thornville-Royal, is in the neighbourhood. In 1786 it was sold by Lord Galway to the duke of York. It afterwards became the property of Colonel Thornton, from whom Lord Stourton purchased it for £163,800. It consists of 4,125 acres, with a superb mansion and park.—Claro bill, a remarkable eminence, from which the wapentake has derived its name, stands on the northern side of the park.

ALLERTON (NORTH). See NORTHALLERTON.
ALLERTONSHIRE, a wapentake in the north riding of York; bounded on the north by the river Tees; on the east by Langborough; on the south by Birdforth; and on the west by East Gilling wapentake. Area in British statute acres, 51,500. Pop., in 1831, 9,820. Houses 1,970.

ALLESLEY, a parish in the Monks Kirby division of the hund. of Knightlow, union of Meriden, county of Warwick; 2 miles north of Coventry, and 94 of London. Living, a rectory formerly in the archd. of Coventry and dio. of Lichfield and Coventry, now in the dio. of Worcester; rated at £17 18s. 9d.; gross income £780. Patron, in 1835, W. T. Bree. There is a free school here, to which a portion of land, and a house for the residence of the schoolmaster, were left in 1705 by Mrs Flint. The yearly revenue of this land amounted, in 1835, to £44 16s. The total income of other charities connected with this parish, amounts to £83 5s. 6d. Pop., in 1801, 752; in 1831, 875. Houses 176. Acres 3,950. A. P. £7,792. Poor rates, in 1837, £463.

ALLESTREE, or ALLESTREY, a parochial chapelry in the hund. of Morleston and Litchurch, union of Belper, county of Derby; 2 miles north-west of Derby. Living, a perpetual curacy united with Mackworth, in the archd. of Derby and dio. of Lichfield; rated at £5. Patron, in 1835, F. Mundy, Esq. There are one infant school, and two daily schools, in this parish. The charities connected with this parish produce yearly £32. Pop., in 1801, 350; in 1831, 501. Houses 96. Acres 990. Poor rates, in 1837, £72.

ALLEXTON, or ALLIXTON, a parish in the hund. of East Goscoat, union of Billesdon, Leicestershire; 14 miles south-east of Leicester. Living, a rectory formerly in the archd. of Leicester and dio. of Lincoln, now in the dio. of Peterborough; rated at £6 18s. 4d., and in the parliamentary returns at £110; gross income £140. Patron, in 1835, Lord Berners. The Eye—a branch of the Welland—separates this parish from Rutlandshire on the east. Pop., in 1801, 88; in 1831, 68. Houses 16. Acres 1,010. A. P. £1,647. Poor rates, in 1837, £71.

ALLHALLOWS, a parish in the hund. of Alledale below Derwent ward, union of Wigton, Cumberland; 6 miles south-west of Wigton, on the road to Cockermouth; 2 miles south of the Maryport and Carlisle railroad. It was formerly called Unckmanby, and was a chapelry in the parish of Aspatria. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. and dio. of Carlisle; rated at £9; in the parliamentary returns at £10; gross income £80. Patron, in 1835, the bishop of Carlisle. All tithes, moduses, &c. the property of the bishop of Carlisle, lay-impropriators, vicars, and perpetual curate, commuted in 1812. It comprises the manors of Baggrey, Harby Brow, Unckmanby, and Whitehall. It is intersected by the river Ellen; and in the vicinity are quarries of free-stone, lime-kilns, and collieries. Pop., in 1801, 173; in 1831, 205. Houses 29. Acres 1,860. A. P. £1,861. Poor rates, in 1837, £77.

ALLHALLOWS, a seaward parish in the hund. and union of Hoo, lathe of Aylesford, Kent; 7½ miles north-east of Rochester. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Rochester; rated at £8 7s. 11d.; gross income £247. Patrons, in 1835, the dean and chapter of Rochester. Pop., in 1801, 166; in 1831, 263. Houses 35. Acres 2,460. A. P. £1,849. Poor rates, in 1837, £155.

ALLINGHAM, Kent. See THORNHAM.

ALLINGTON, a parish in the hund. of Godder Thorne, division and union of Bridport, Dorset; ½ mile north-north-west of Bridport. Living, a perpetual curacy not in charge, formerly in the archd. of Dorset and dio. of Bristol, now in the dio. of Salisbury. It was formerly only a chapelry to Bridport. The endowment consists of £1,200 parliamentary grant; it is rated in the parliamentary returns at £122; gross income £108. Patron, in 1835, Rev. H. Fox. Two closes of land, containing 30 acres, are vested in trustees for the support of poor in the alms-houses of this parish and Charmouth. There are two Sunday National schools here. In 1838 there was a flax mill, employing 36 hands, in this parish. On the first Wednesday of August, a small fair is held here for pedlery and cattle. Pop., in 1801, 716; in 1831, 1,300. Houses 236. Acres 960. A. P. £2,226. Poor rates, in 1837, £446.

ALLINGTON, a parish in the hund. of Larkfield, lathe of Aylesford, union of Malling, Kent, near the river Medway; ½ mile north-north-west of Maidstone. It was formerly a market-town. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. and dio. of Rochester; rated at £6 18s. 8d., and in the parliamentary returns at £114; gross income £149. Patron, in 1835, Earl Romney. Pop., in 1801, 44; in 1831, 37. Houses 6. Acres 530. Poor rates, in 1837, £90.—The castle of Allington is, perhaps, one of the most perfect remains of the feudal age in the county of Kent; although described by Mr Hasted as having "been long in ruin, a very small part being left, now used as a part of the adjoining farmhouse, which seems to have been built out of the ruins of the house erected here by Sir Thomas Wyatt." Many of the towers are but little injured, and the moat has water in it half round the castle. It is believed that this manor was held in Saxon times by Earl Godwin's fourth son, Ulnoth. Queen Elizabeth gave the estate to Sir Jacob Astley, master of her jewel-house, from whose descendants it came to the Marshams. Lord Romney is the present owner. The situation of the castle is romantic, and the approaches rural; the Medway winds round its north-west angle, and the gently rising hills in its vicinity are, for the most part, covered with wood. The entrance is under a low arch with grooves for portcullis, flanked by two circular towers. Sir Thomas Wyatt, the accomplished courtier and poet, was born at this castle in 1503.

ALLINGTON, (formerly ALDINGTON), a parish in the union of Amesbury, division of Salisbury and Amesbury, Wilts; ¾ miles east-south-east of Amesbury, on a branch of the Avon. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Salisbury; rated at £14 13s. 4d.; gross income £250. Patron, in 1835, the earl of Craven. There is a small daily school here, and a Baptist church. Pop., in 1801, 75; in 1831, 80. Houses 11. Acres 460. A. P. £721. Poor rates, in 1837, £72.

ALLINGTON, Suffolk. See ATHELINGTON.
ALLINGTON, a tything in the parish and hund. of Chippenham, Wilts. Pop., in 1821, 110. A. P. £1,259.

ALLINGTON, a township or tything in the parish of All-Cannings, Wilts, on the Kennet and Avon canal. There is a daily school here. Pop., in 1801, 145; in 1831, 162. Houses 32. A. P. £1,259. Poor rates, in 1837, £107.

ALLINGTON (EAST), a parish in the hund. of Stanborough and Coleridge, union of Kingsbridge, Devon; ¾ miles north-east by north of Kingsbridge. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Totness and dio. of Exeter; rated at £32 2s. 1d.; gross income £345. Patron, in 1835, W. Fortescue, Esq. In the church are several monuments of the Fortescue family. There are three daily schools in this parish. Pop., in 1801, 468; in 1831, 677. Houses 119. Acres 4,220. A. P. £4,268. Poor rates, in 1837, £402.

ALLINGTON (WEST), or ALVINGTON, a parish in the hund. of Stanborough and Coleridge, union of Kingsbridge, Devon, including the chapelries of Malborough, South Milton, and South Huish; about 1 mile south-west from Kingsbridge. Living, a vicarage in the archd. of Totness and dio. of Exeter; rated at £62 16s. 10½d.; gross income £830. Patrons, the dean and chapter of Salisbury. There is a daily school here. Pop., in 1801, 655; in 1831, 872. Houses 161. Acres 3,840. A. P. £7,178. Poor rates, in 1837, £486.—The gardens of Garston, in this parish, were famous for orange and lemon-trees trained against the walls, which are said to have produced as fine fruit as any in Portugal. A weekly market at this place was granted to John de Besill in 1270.

ALLINGTON (EAST), a chapelry in the parish of Sedgebrook, Lincolnshire. The chapel belongs to the second mediety of the rectory of Sedgebrook. Pop., in 1831, 275. The other returns are included in the parish of West Allington.

ALLINGTON (WEST), a parish in the wapentake of Winnibriggs and Threo, parts of Kesteven, Lincolnshire; 4 miles north-west of Grantham. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Lincoln; rated at £8 13s. 11½d.; gross income £270. Patron, the Crown. Great and small tithes of the manor commuted in 1793. There is a daily school here, with an endowment of £10 from the dean of Lincoln. Pop. of the intermixed parishes of East and West Allington, in 1801, 243; in 1831, 357. Houses 73. Acres 2,070. A. P. £2,498. Poor rates, in 1837, £178. Pop. of West Allington alone, in 1831, 82.

ALLITHWAITE (UPPER), a township in the parish of Cartmell, Ulverstone union, co.-palatine of Lancaster; 3 miles north-east of Cartmell. There are five daily schools here. Pop., in 1801, 541; in 1831, 759. Houses 137. Acres 3,710. A. P. £3,340. Poor rates, in 1837, £211.

ALLITHWAITE (LOWER), a township in the same parish; 2 miles south-east of Cartmell. Pop., in 1801, 589; in 1831, 838. Houses 164. Acres 2,360. A. P. £1,873. Poor rates, in 1837, £534.

ALLONBY, or ALANBY, a chapelry in the parish of Broomfield, ward of Allerdale below Derwent, union of Wigton, Cumberland; 9 miles north-west of Cockermouth. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. and dio. of Carlisle, not in charge; rated in the parliamentary returns at £47 6s.; gross income £94. Patron, the vicar of Broomfield. The chapel was built in 1744. The Quakers have also a meeting-house in the town; and the most of the inhabitants are said to have at one time belonged to that religious body. There is a free school here with a small endowment, and other two daily schools. The inhabitants are partly occupied in fishing; the herring-fishery here was at one time exceedingly productive; but the returns from this branch of trade are now somewhat uncertain, as the herrings desert the coast frequently for a period of several years. According to Hutchinson, the shoals of herring remain for ten years, and then stay away during the next ten years; and these revolutions are described, he says, as being as regular as those of the flowing of the tides, or the vicissitudes of the seasons. Cod are also taken in considerable quantities during the winter. The village being agreeably situated on Allonby bay, which opens to the Solway frith and Irish sea, many resort hither in summer for the purpose of bathing. Allonby was, in 1741, the birth-place of Captain Joseph Huddart, F.R.S., an eminent naval engineer and hydrographer. Pop., in 1801, including that of the township of West Newton, 727; in 1831, 1,105; of Allonby alone, 783. Houses 176. A. P. £3,343. Poor rates, in 1837, £293.

ALLOSTOCK, a township in the parish of Great

Budworth, union of Northwich, co.-palatine of Chester; 5 miles south by west of Nether Knutsford, on the post-road to Newcastle-under-Lyne. There is a Unitarian chapel here, and two daily schools. All children of parents who rent property under the value of £10 per annum, are free to the school of Lower Peover. Pop., in 1801, 419; in 1831, 448. Houses 87. Acres 2,540. A. P. £3,559. Poor rates, in 1837, £291.

ALLOW (THE EAST), a river in Durham falling into the Tyne near Swallow.

ALLOW (THE WEST), a river in Anglesey which falls into the Irish sea below Llanvorog. Also a river in Northumberland which falls into the Tyne.

ALL SAINTS, a member of the town and port of Dover, in the lower half-hund. of Kingslow, lathe of St Augustine, Kent. Living, a curacy not certified; the church is now demolished, and the parish united to that of St Nicholas at Wade.

ALL SAINTS, SOUTH ELMHAM, a parish in the hund. and union of Wangford, Suffolk; 5 miles north-west by west of Halesworth. Living, a discharged rectory, with the parish of St Nicholas, Elmham, in the archd. of Suffolk and dio. of Norwich; rated at £8 0s. 6d.; gross income £270. Patron, in 1835, A. Adair, Esq. Pop., in 1801, 192; in 1831, 239. Houses 47. Acres 1,150. A. P. £1,548. Poor rates, in 1837, £271.

ALLWINTON. See ALLENTON.

ALMELEY, or ALMERLEY, a parish, partly in the hund. of Wolphy, and partly in that of Stretford, Weobley union, county of Hereford; 5½ miles west of Weobley; containing the townships of Almeley, Hopley's Green, and Logaston. Living, a vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Hereford; rated at £6 17s. 11d.; gross income £260. Patron, the bishop of Hereford. There are three daily schools here. The tram-road between Hay and Kington intersects this parish. Pop., in 1801, 644; in 1831, 670. Houses 152. Acres 3,630. A. P. £3,887. Poor rates, in 1837, £342.

ALMER, a parish in the hund. of Loosebarrow, division of Shaston, union of Blandford, Dorsetshire; 6 miles south-south-east of Blandford, on the road to Wareham. Living, a rectory formerly in the archd. of Dorset and dio. of Bristol, now in the dio. of Salisbury; rated at £13 5s. 5d., and in the parliamentary returns at £148; gross income £284. Patroness, in 1835, Mrs Drax. There is a daily and Sunday National school here. Pop., in 1801, 192; in 1831, 176. Houses 35. Acres 1,520. A. P. £1,560. Poor rates, in 1837, £59.

ALMINGTON, a township in the parish of Drayton-in-Hales, county of Stafford. Pop., in 1831, 340. Houses 50.

ALMINGTON, and STONE-DELPH, a township in the parish and union of Tamworth, county of Warwick; 1½ miles north-east of Tamworth, on the Coventry canal. Pop., in 1831, 264. Houses 58. A. P. £3,969. Poor rates, in 1837, £105.

ALMODINGTON, or ALMANINGTON, a hamlet and curacy in the hund. of Manhood, rape of Chichester, Sussex. This was formerly a parish, but is now consolidated with Earnley, under which the population is returned.

ALMONDBURY, a parish in the upper division of the wapentake of Agbrigg, union of Huddersfield, west riding of York. It includes the townships of Almondbury, Austonley, South Crossland, Farnley-Tyas, Holme, Lingartha, Linthwaite, Lockwood, and Upper Thong, with the chapelries of Honley, Meltham, Marsden, and Nether Thong. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. and dio. of York; rated at £20 7s. 11d.; gross income £255. The patronage is vested in the governors of Clitheroe school. The great and small tithes, and moduses of the manor of Honley, the property of the Clitheroe free grammar-school and the vicar, commuted in 1782. There are churches in Almondbury, Crossland, Holme, Linthwaite, and Nether Thong; the three last built about 1830. Pop., in 1801, 26,963; in 1831, 30,806. Houses 5,545. Acres 30,140. A. P. £26,368. The inhabitants are chiefly occupied in manufactures, and the population has increased by 6,627 persons, in consequence, it is believed, of the extension of these. In 1838, there were 3 cotton-mills employing 767 hands; 67 woollen mills employing 3,158 hands; and 2 silk mills employing 42 hands, within this parish.—The township of Almondbury is $\frac{1}{2}$ mile south-east of Huddersfield. The Wesleyan and New Connexion Methodists have chapels here. There is a free grammar-school here, which was founded by letters patent of James I., and has an endowment of about £100 per annum, derived from lands and rent-charges, bequeathed by Robert Nettleton and others. There is also a fund for the instruction and apprenticing of poor children belonging to the place, derived from lands left by Israel Wormall in 1724. The yearly revenue of this charity amounted, in 1827, to £161 8s. 6d. By the bequest of Robert Nettleton in 1620, some property was left for the behoof of the poor of this township. The rents amount to £137 11s. 6d. The other charities connected with this township amount to £11 10s. There are in all seven daily schools, and nine Sunday schools, in this township. In the opinion of Camden, Almondbury, anciently called Albanbury, was the Campodonum of the Romans; but Dr Whitaker thinks otherwise, and says that it was undoubtedly Saxon, and the seat of the Saxon kings. The town was burnt in the wars between Eden, prince of the country, and Penda, king of Mercia. Pop., in 1801, 3,751; in 1831, 7,086. Houses 1,303. Acres 2,550. A. P. £4,300. Poor rates, in 1837, £879.—There was a castle on a neighbouring eminence, the ruins of which may still be seen.

ALMONDSBURY, a parish partly in the hund. of Berkeley, partly in that of Langley and Swinehead, and partly in that of Thornbury, Thornbury union, county of Gloucester; 6 miles north-east of Bristol. It comprises the tythings of Almondbury, Hempton and Patchway, Over with Lower Tockington, and Gaunt's Earthcote. Living, a discharged vicarage, a peculiar of the bishop of Gloucester and Bristol; rated at £20. The church—a handsome building in the form of a cross, with a tower and spire at the intersection—contains some specimens of Norman architecture. The church-lands in this parish yield a revenue of £235 17s. 10d., part of which is applied to educational purposes, and part given to the poor. There are also some alms-houses, and two small charitable bequests connected with this parish. There are two daily and Sunday National schools here, with about 80 scholars. Pop., in 1801, 1,069; in 1831, 1,492. Houses 239. Acres 6,930. A. P. £13,293. Poor rates, in 1837, £799.—The village of Almondbury is situated near the small stream Boyd, at the foot of a ridge of limestone rocks; $\frac{1}{2}$ miles south by west of Thornbury. From the heights above, the view is very grand and extensive, embracing the estuary of the Severn and the opposite coast of Wales. This village is said to have derived its name from Almond, a West Saxon prince, father of King Egbert, who was buried in the church, and from a fortification in the neighbourhood. There is a daily school here with an endowment of £2 10s. annually. Pop., in 1801, 350; in 1831, 517. Houses 81. Acres 1,900. A. P. £5,045.

ALMPTON. See OXFORD.

ALMSFORD, a parish in the hund. of Catsash, union and division of Wincanton, county of Somerset. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Wells and dio. of Bath and Wells; rated at £7 12s. 1d.; gross income £362. Patron, in 1835, Francis Woodforde, Esq. There is a National school here. Pop., in 1801, 237; in 1831, 304. Houses 62. Acres 920. A. P. £2,512. Poor rates, in 1837, £202.

ALMWYCH. See AMLWCH.

ALNE (THE), a river in Cumberland, which falls into the Tyne near Kirkcubright.—2d. Also a river in Northumberland, which rises to the west of Alnham, flows through the vale of Whittingham, passes Huln abbey, and falls into the sea at Alnmouth. It is a fine fishing stream.—3d. A river of Warwickshire, rising near Beardmore, and joining the Arrow at Alcester. The united streams fall into the Avon at Salford-Priors.

ALNE, a parish in the wapentake of Bulmer, union of Easingwold, north riding of York. It includes the townships of Alne, Aldwork, Flawith, Tholthorpe, Tollerton, and Youton. Living, a discharged vicarage, a peculiar of the dean and chapter of York; rated at £10; gross income £415. Patron, in 1835, Sir C. B. Codrington. The great and small tithes of the townships of Tholthorpe and Flawith, the property of the lay-impropriator and the vicar, commuted in 1799–1800; and those of the township of Tollerton, also the property of the lay-impropriator and the vicar, in 1810. Charities to the poor of this parish produce a yearly income of £47. Pop., in 1801, 1,236; in 1831, 1,132. Houses 301. Acres 10,250. A. P. £9,448.—The township of Alne is partly within the liberties of St Peter, York; 4 miles south-west by south of Easingwold. There are two daily schools here. Pop., in 1801, 342; in 1831, 415. Houses 83. Acres 2,490. A. P. £2,580. Poor rates, in 1837, £118.

ALNE (GREAT), a chapelry and township in the parish of Kinwarton, county of Warwick; 3 miles north-east by east of Alcester. Chapel recently enlarged. Pop., in 1801, 290; in 1831, 343. Houses 59. Acres 1,620. A. P. £2,848.

ALNE (LITTLE), a hamlet in the parish of Aston-Cantlow, Warwickshire, near the junction of the Alne with the Arrow. The returns are made with those of the parish.

ALNEY (ISLE OF), situated in the river Severn; $\frac{1}{2}$ mile from Gloucester. A single combat is, by some historians, said to have been fought by Edmund Ironside and Canute, on this island, in 1016; neither having conquered, a peace was concluded, and the government divided between them. Lambard says: "I find no other thinge of this ile, savinge that Bale writethe that Joannes Olney, a Charterhouse monke, in the reigne of Edw. III., which wrote a few fonde miracles, was borne within the same."

ALNHAM, a parish in the northern division of Coquetdale-ward, union of Rothbury, Northumberland. It comprises the townships of Alnham, Prendick, Screnwood, and Unthank. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Northumberland and dio. of Durham; rated at £3 17s. 1d., and in the parliamentary returns at £70; gross income £74. Patron, the duke of Northumberland. Pop., in 1801, 232; in 1831, 278. Houses 45. Acres 16,360. A. P. £4,424.—The township of Alnham is 12 miles west of Alnwick. Pop., in 1801, 124; in 1831, 146. Houses 21. Poor rates £81. There is a small daily school here.—On a hill, about a mile to the westward of the village, there is a semicircular encampment, 100 yards in diameter, defended by a high double rampart and deep trench, within which there is a range of uncemented stones.

ALNWICK, a market-town and parish, partly in the eastern division of Coquetdale-ward, and partly in the southern division of Bamborough-ward, Northumberland; 308 miles north by west from London, and 34 north by west from Newcastle; on the Great post-road to Berwick. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. of Northumberland and dio. of Durham; rated at £15, and in the parliamentary returns at £106. The endowments are £800 private benefaction, £200 royal bounty, and £2,100 parliamentary grant; gross income, £175. Patron, in 1835, the duke of Northumberland. The church is a large handsome building, containing several monuments. The United Secession, Relief church, Wesleyan and New Connection Methodists, Presbyterians, Roman Catholics, and Unitarians have places of worship here. Of the Presbyterian congregations one is in connection with the kirk of Scotland. There is a free school, supported by the corporation, for instructing the sons of freemen in the classics. The master's salary is £24 10s. a-year. An English school, for the sons of freemen, is also supported by the corporation. The master's salary is £124. A new school-house was built in 1832. A girls' school was established by the borough in 1807, with a salary to the mistress of £30 yearly. A school, in which 200 boys are educated, was founded in 1810 by the duke of Northumberland, in commemoration of the 50th year of the reign of Geo. III. According to a paper read before the British Association in 1838, the number of children then attending superior private schools in Alnwick was 100: the number attending common day schools, 205; free and charity schools, 453; dame schools, 74; those attending Sunday schools, and not in any day school, 142. The entire number of those receiving elementary education was therefore, 974, or about 1 in 8 of the present estimated population, (7,358.) The other charities connected with Alnwick, yield a yearly revenue of about £23. There was here "an abbey for Premonstratensian canons, founded by Eustace Fitz-John, A.D. 1147. It was dedicated to the Blessed Virgin, and valued 26^o Henry VIII at £189 15s. per annum, about which time there were about thirteen canons. The site of the house was granted 4^o Edward VI. to Ralph Sadler and Laurence Winton. The hospital of St Leonard here was of the foundation and in the patronage of the noble family of Percy, and was by Henry Lord Percy, afterwards first earl of Northumberland, annexed to the abbey 50^o Edward III."—Tanner's Not. Mon. Of this abbey the gateway alone remains.

The town stands on a declivity near the banks of the river Alne, from which it derives its name. It is about 5½ miles distant from its mouth. At the northern extremity of the town, a handsome stone bridge of three arches was erected by the duke of Northumberland. The houses are chiefly modern, and in general built of free-stone, many of them of considerable elegance. The streets are well-paved, spacious, and lighted with gas; water is supplied in abundance from cisterns and reservoirs, and raised by pumps erected at the expense of the corporation. An act for lighting, paving, cleansing, watching, and otherwise improving the town, was passed in 1822. Alnwick had formerly four gates, with massive gateway-towers, of which Bondgate alone remains, which is used for a prison. There is a spacious market-place, and a town-hall in which the county courts are held, and the members for the northern division of the county elected. The most important building, however, is the castle, a seat of the duke of Northumberland, to which we shall devote a separate article.

Alnwick claims to be a borough by prescription. The archives do not contain any royal incorporating charter; but an established corporation is recognised by a charter of 42^o Henry III. The officers of the corporation are four chamberlains, twenty-four common council-men, and a chamberlain's clerk. The chamberlains are chosen from their own number, by the members of council; and vacancies in the latter body are filled up, by the same electors, from the freemen, of whom the resident number is about 250. The net revenue of the corporation amounted, in 1835, to £589 1s. 9d.; and the town-common extended over 2,591 acres. Amount of assessed and land-tax paid by the borough and parish, in 1833, £1,794 18s. 9½d. The Alnwick poor law union embraces an area of 146 square miles, containing a population, returned, in 1831, at 17,263. The average annual expenditure during the three years preceding the formation of this union, was £6,688; the expenditure, in 1838, was £6,001. The freedom of the town is held by right of inheritance or acquired by apprenticeship. A very singular and ridiculous ceremony is here gone through in taking up the freedom. Early on the morning of St Mark's day (25th of April), the young freemen assemble in the market-place, with swords at their sides. Here they are joined by the four chamberlains and the castle-bailiff, when they proceed on horseback, accompanied with music, to the Town moor, where they alight, and after being provided with a white dress and cap, rush through a large muddy pool, called the 'Freemen's well.' This is expressly demanded by the terms of the charter, and is said to have been ordered in a humorous mood by King John, who had had occasion to complain of the miry state of the roads in the neighbourhood. The county-magistrates hold a monthly court at Alnwick for the east division of Coquetdale-ward.

There are four bank-agencies, one of them a branch of the Newcastle Union bank, in this town. The trade and manufactures are inconsiderable. Saturday is the market-day. The fairs are the following: Palma Sunday eve, for shoes, hats, and pedlery; May 12th, last Monday of July, first Tuesday in October, and October 28th, for horses and cattle; the Saturday before Christmas day, for shoes, hats, and woollens; and on the first Saturday of November, is a statute fair. The chief exports from this place are corn, pork, and eggs. There are several tanneries, breweries, and brick and tile works. There is a railway from Alnwick to the township of Shilbottle, about 4½ miles south-south-east; and a penny-post to Warkworth. The town, according to a recent report presented to parliament, appears to be thriving, population increasing, buildings extending, and a spirit of improvement in active operation. Pop., in 1801, 4,719; in 1831, 6,788. Houses, in 1831, 940; houses rated at £10 and upwards, in 1833, 383. Acres 16,250. A. P. £22,909. Poor rates, in 1837, £2,434. Average mortality, 1 in 49.

"Aunwyke," saith Lambard, "seameth to some to have received the name from the Saxons, of Alae. the tree, and wick, which in their speache signified a toune: but it is more probable that the name should be deryved of the ryver running thereby, which is called Ale, and so Alaueyc, the town upon Ale." In 1093, Alnwick was besieged by Malcolm III., king of Scotland, who was killed before its walls on the 13th of November, 1093. It was again laid siege to by William of Scotland in 1174; but Ralph de Glanville surprised and took him prisoner to London. In 1220, a meeting of the Scottish bishops was convoked here by Gualo, the pope's legate. In 1328, Robert Bruce's nobles, Douglas and Randolph, besieged it without success. The castle, which is supposed to have been built on the site of a Roman fortress, was embattled in 1411, and the town was surrounded at the same time by a strong wall. Notwithstanding this, the Scots took the town in 1443, and burnt it, in revenge for the burning of Dumfries by the English. After the battle of Hexham, in 1463, the earl of Warwick laid siege to the castle, which was in the interest of the house of Lancaster; the garrison held out till the arrival of Sir George Douglas, with a considerable force, enabled them to retire unmolested.

ALNWICK-CASTLE, one of the principal seats of the great family of Percy, earls of Northumberland, is situated on the south side of the river Alne, on an elevation which gives great dignity to its appearance, and in ancient times rendered it almost an impregnable fortress. It is believed to have been founded in the time of the Romans, although no part of the original structure is now remaining. The zigzag fret-work round the arch that leads into the inner court, is evidently of Saxon architecture; and yet Grose suggests that this was probably not the most ancient entrance. This castle appears to have been a place of great strength immediately after the Norman conquest. The castle and barony came into the possession of the Percy family in the reign of Edward II., having been purchased of the bishop of Durham, to whom they had been bequeathed, in 1297, by Lord William de Vescy. From that period they have been transmitted in lineal succession down to the present duke and duchess of Northumberland. From length of time, and the shocks it had sustained in ancient wars, Alnwick castle was become quite a ruin, when, by the death of Algernon, duke of Northumberland, it devolved, together with all the estates of this great barony, to the family of its present illustrious possessors, "who immediately," says Grose, "set to repair the same, and with the most consummate taste and judgment, restored and embellished it as much as possible, in the true Gothic style; so that it may deservedly be considered as one of the noblest and most magnificent models of a great baronial castle." Alnwick castle contains about five acres within its walls, which are flanked with sixteen towers and turrets, affording a complete set of offices suitable to the magnitude and dignity of this great castle. "Nothing can be more striking than the effect at first entrance within the walls, from the town, when through a dark gloomy gateway of considerable length and depth, the eye suddenly emerges into one of the most splendid scenes that can be imagined; and is presented at once with the great body of the inner castle, surrounded with fair semicircular towers, finely swelling to the eye, and gaily adorned with pinnacles, figures, battlements, &c. The impression is still further heightened by the successive entrance into the second and third courts through great massy towers, till the stranger is landed in the inner court, in the very centre of this great citadel." The staircase is 46 feet long; 35 feet 4 inches wide; and 43 feet 2 inches high. The saloon is 42 feet 8 inches long; 37 feet 2 inches wide; and 19 feet 10 inches high. The drawing-room is of an oval form, 46 feet 7 inches long; 35 feet 4 inches wide; and 22 feet high. The great dining-room is 53 feet 9 inches long; 20 feet 10 inches wide; and 26 feet 9 inches high. The library is 64 feet in length. The chapel fills all the space of the middle ward. The great east window is copied from one of the finest in York minster; the ceiling from that of King's college, Cambridge; the walls are painted after the great church in Milan, and present the genealogical table of the house of Northumberland.

ALOESBRIDGE, a hundred in the lathe of Shepway, Kent. It is bounded on the north by part of the lathe of Scray, and the hundred of Ham in Shepway lathe; on the east by the liberty of Romney marsh; on the south by the English channel; and on the west by Kent ditch, which divided it from Sussex, and by the hundred of Oxney. Pop., in 1831, 596. Houses 97. Acres 3,490.

ALPERTON. See APPERTON, Middlesex.

ALPHAMSTONE, a parish in the hund. of Hineckford, union of Sudbury, Essex; 5 miles north-east by east of Halsted. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Middlesex and dio. of London; rated at £11; gross income £407; in the patronage of the Crown. Charities to the poor of this parish amount to £9 8s. There is a National school here. Pop., in 1801, 237; in 1831, 277. Houses 65. Acres 1,440. A. P. £1,856. Poor rates, in 1837, £144.

ALPHETON, a parish in the hund. of Babergh, union of Sudbury, Suffolk; 6 miles north by east of Sudbury, on the road to Bury St Edmunds. Living, a rectory, formerly in the archd. of Sudbury and dio. of Norwich, now in the dio. of Ely; rated at £10 1s. 8d.; gross income £260. Patron, in 1835, the Rev. T. G. Dickinson. There are three daily schools, and a Sunday school here. Pop., in 1801, 204; in 1831, 309. Houses 68. Acres 2,250. A. P. £1,324. Poor rates, in 1837, £99.

ALPHINGTON, a parish in the hund. of Wondford, union of St Thomas, county of Devon; 2 miles south of Exeter; on the post-road to Totness. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Exeter; rated at £34 6s. 8d.; gross income £979. Patron, in 1835, the Rev. R. Ellicombe, the incumbent. The church contains a circular Norman font with interlaced arches, scroll ornaments, and grotesque figures over the arches. A figure of it is given in the 3d vol. of 'the Antiquarian Repertory.' Charities connected with this parish yield a yearly revenue of £23 13s., together with three or four small cottages and a garden, which are occupied, rent free, by poor persons. There are seven daily, and a Sunday school here. The parish is traversed by the river Exe and the Exeter canal. Fairs are held on the first Thursday in June for horned cattle; and on the 2d of October for horses and cattle. Pop., in 1801, 845; in 1831, 1,236. Houses 237. Acres 2,720. A. P. £6,990. Poor rates, in 1837, £575.

ALPINGTON, a parish in the hund. of Loddon, union of Loddon and Clavering, Norfolk; 6 miles south-east of Norwich. Living, a discharged rectory united to that of Yelverton, in the archd. of Norfolk and dio. of Norwich. Pop., in 1801, 163; in 1831, 197. Houses 41. Acres 630. A. P. £1,794. Poor rates, in 1837, £77.

ALPRAHAM, a township in the parish of Bunbury, union of Nantwich, co.-palatine of Chester; 3½ miles south-east by east of Tarporley. There are two daily schools here, and a Wesleyan Methodist Sunday school. Pop., in 1801, 335; in 1831, 418. Houses 66. Acres 1,800. A. P. £1,731. Poor rates, in 1837, £212.

ALRESFORD, a parish in the hund. and union of Tendring, Essex; 5½ miles south-east by east of Colchester. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. of Colchester and dio. of London; rated at £8; gross income £322. Church in the patronage of Brazen Nose college, Oxford. There is a National school here. Pop., in 1801, 210; in 1831, 297. House 54. Acres 1,640. A. P. £1,556. Poor rates, in 1837, £150.

ALRESFORD (OLD), a parish in the hund. of Fawley, and division of Alton, union of Alresford, Hampshire. Living, a rectory, with the chapelries of New Alresford and Maidstead; rated at £49 12s. 8½d. It is a peculiar, with Maidstead and Alresford chapelry, in the diocese of Winchester. Patron, the bishop of Winchester. The church is a neat structure, rebuilt in 1753. Pop., in 1801, 370; in 1831, 459. Houses 70. Acres 3,660. A. P. £2,648. Poor rates, in 1837, £604.

ALRESFORD (New), a market-town and parish in the division of Alton, Hampshire; 6½ miles north-east by east of Winchester, on the post-road to London, and immediately to the south of Old Alresford. Living, a perpetual curacy, a peculiar of the bishop of Winchester in connexion with the rectory of Old Alresford. There is here a place of worship belonging to the Independents, founded in 1825. A school for 19 boys in Alresford, Bishop's-Sutton, and Cheriton, was founded by Henry Perin in 1698; the endowment consists of a house for the master, and about 52 acres of land, which, in 1824, produced £148 10s. per annum; and, in 1833, was attended by 42 scholars. There are seven other daily, besides several Sunday schools. The other charities connected with this parish yield a yearly revenue of £17 16s. Alresford was incorporated at an early period, and is said to have sent one member to parliament in the 23^d Edward I. The town is governed by a bailiff and eight burgesses; and petty sessions are held here by the county-magistrates. The Alresford poor-law union embraces a district of 57 square miles; containing a population, returned in 1831, at 7,428. The average annual expenditure for the poor in this district, during the three years preceding the union, was £6,056. Expenditure, in 1838, £4,423. There are few manufactures; the only one of any importance is that of linseys. The market-day is Thursday; and fairs are held, chiefly for sheep, on Holy Thursday, the last Thursday in July, and the 17th of October. On May-day, 1690, a fire occurred which destroyed a great part of the town; a similar calamity occurred again in 1710; and in 1736 another extensive fire took place here. Pop., in 1801, 1,132; in 1831, 1,437. The number of inhabitants was anciently greater, the river Itchin having been navigable from Southampton to this place; but it has declined since the navigation was restricted to Winchester. Houses 258. Acres 1,250. A. P. £2,921. Poor rates, in 1837, £459.—There is a fine pond here called Alresford pond, covering nearly 200 acres, which formerly extended to Bishop's-Sutton, 1½ mile distant. It forms the course of the river Itchin. The northern embankment is a causeway, said to be Roman, nearly 500 yards in length, which was finished under a grant from King John, by Bishop Godfrey de Lucy. The object was to improve the navigation of the river; and as a recompense, the bishop obtained for himself and his successors the entire royalty of the river to the sea. The bishop also renewed the market here which had fallen into desuetude, and called the place Newmarket, probably the better to distinguish it from the adjoining village of Old Alresford; but the inhabitants would not comply with the proposed alterations, and so it kept its name.

ALREWAS, or ALDERWAS, a parish in the hund. of North Offlow, union of Lichfield, Staffordshire. It contains the township of Alrewas, with the hamlets of Fradley and Orgreave. Living, a discharged vicarage in the peculiar jurisdiction of the chancellor of Lichfield cathedral; rated at £5 6s. 8d.; gross income £352; in the patronage of the prebendary of Lichfield cathedral. The great and small tithes were commuted in 1802. According to Malmesbury, Alrewas was made a prebend by Athelwald, bishop of Lichfield, in 822. There are several daily and Sunday schools here, two of which are in connexion with the National school society. Charities to the poor of this parish produce the yearly revenue of £21 16s., besides 16 bushels of rye, payable by those who hold the great tithes of the parish. In 1838 there was a worsted mill employing 93 hands, within this parish. Pop., in 1801, 1,312; in 1831, 1,607. Houses 340. Acres 4,350. A. P. £6,973. Poor rates, in 1837, £534.—The township of Alrewas is 5 miles north-east by north of Lichfield. The Wesleyan Methodists and the Primitive Methodists have chapels and schools here. The Grand Trunk canal runs nearly through the centre of the village; and the Birmingham and Derby railway passes at the distance of one mile on the east side. Pop., in 1801, 940; in 1831, 1,102. Houses 231. A. P. £4,418. Poor rates, in 1837, £354.

ALREWAS-HAYES, an extra-parochial liberty in the hund. of North Offlow, Stafford. Pop., in 1801, 12; in 1831, 77. Houses 13. Acres 1,680.

ALSAGER, a chapelry in the parish of Barthomley, union of Congleton, co.-palatine of Chester; 5 miles south-east by south from Sandbach, near the Grand Trunk canal. Living, a donative curacy in the archd. and dio. of Chester. The patron is the lord of the manor; and the value is stated in the parliamentary returns at £135. Mary, Judith, and Margaret Alsager, built and endowed the chapel, and founded a school here at which about 15 children are taught. There is also another daily school. Pop., in 1801, 275; in 1831, 446. Houses 83. Acres 2,860. A. P. £2,793. Poor rates, in 1837, £257.

ALSOPE-LE-DALE, a chapelry in the parish of Ashborne, county of Derby; 6 miles north by west from Ashborne. Living, a perpetual curacy, subordinate to the vicarage of Ashborne, in the archd. of Derby and dio. of Lichfield; gross income £49. Patrons, in 1835, the freeholders of the parish. This chapelry is in the honour of Tutbury. Population returned with Eaton.

ALSTOE, the name of a hundred in the county of Rutland, in the northern division of the county. It is bounded on the north by Leicestershire and Lincolnshire; on the east by a detached portion of Oakham soke, and by East hundred; on the south by East hundred and Martinsley hundred; and on the west by Oakham soke and Leicestershire. Area in British statute acres, 27,900. Houses 821. Pop. 4,275.

ALSTON, a township in the parish of Ribchester, union of Preston, co.-palatine of Lancaster; 6 miles north-east of Preston, at the south-western extremity of Longridge-fell. Pop., (including Hathorall,) in 1801, 664; in 1831, 1,030. Houses 176. Acres 2,790. A. P. £4,357. Pop. of Alston alone, in 1831, 844. Poor rates, in 1837, £230. A railway has been projected from this to Preston. The Roman Catholics have a chapel here.

ALSTON. See ALDSTONE.

ALSTONE, a chapelry in the parish of Overbury, union of Winchcomb, Worcestershire; 5 miles east by south from Tewkesbury. Pop., in 1801, 83; in 1831, 78. Houses 18. A. P. £892. Poor rates, in 1837, £56.

ALSTONEFIELD, a parish in the North hund. of Totmonslow, county of Stafford. It comprises the chapelries of Longnor, Quarnford, and Warslow, with the townships of Alstonefield, Upper and Lower Elkstone, Fairfield-head, Heathy-Lee, and Hollingsclough. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Stafford and dio. of Lichfield; rated at £8 11s. 4d.; gross income £126. Patron, in 1835, Sir G. Crewe. The great and small tithes, moduses, &c., were commuted in 4^o and 5^o William IV. Charities connected with this parish yield a yearly revenue of £25. There are several daily and Sunday schools in this parish. Pop., in 1821, 5,169; in 1831, 4,827. Houses 961. Acres 21,860. A. P. £9,626.—In 1838 there was a silk mill, employing 64 hands, in this parish. There are some lead, copper, and coal-mines, in which about 100 of the inhabitants are engaged; and many of the women and children are employed in the Florentine button-factories at Fairfield-head and Heathy-Lee.—The township of Alstonefield is $5\frac{1}{2}$ miles north-north-west of Ashborne. It stands on the river Dove, on the confines of Derbyshire. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in agriculture. Pop., in 1801, 573; in 1831, 649. Houses 118. Acres 2,700. A. P. £2,538. Poor rates, in 1837, £175.

ALT (THE), a small river of Lancashire, falling into the Irish sea, 7 miles west from Ormskirk, after a course of about 12 miles.

ALTCAR, a parish in the hund. of West Derby, union of Ormskirk, Lancashire. It is intersected by the Alt. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. and dio. of Chester; rated at £11 10s., and in the parliamentary returns at £37 10s.; gross income £95. Patron, in 1835, the earl of Sefton. There is a school with an endowment of £24 per annum, at which about 60 children are educated. Pop., in 1801, 271; in 1831, 505. Houses 69. Acres 3,580. A. P. £3,893. Poor rates, in 1837, £509. The village of Altcar is $6\frac{1}{2}$ miles west by south from Ormskirk.

ALTEKNON, a parish in the hund. of Leanewth, union of Launceston, Cornwall; $7\frac{1}{2}$ miles west-south-west of Launceston. Living, a vicarage in the archd. of Cornwall and dio. of Exeter; rated at £18 5s.; gross income £363. The church-tower is said to be the highest in the county with the exception of that of Probus. Patrons, in 1835, the dean and chapter of Exeter. There are six daily schools here. The projected Exeter and Falmouth railway line passes through this parish. Pop., in 1801, 679; in 1831, 1,069. Houses 203. Acres 13,840. A. P. £6,147. Poor rates, in 1837, £394.—The Lynher rises in this parish.

ALTHAM, a chapelry in the parish of Whalley, union of Burnley, co.-palatine of Lancaster; 5 miles west of Burnley. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. and dio. of Chester; rated at £11 15s. 8d.; gross income £117. Patron, in 1835, R. T. W. Walton. There are a daily and a Sunday school here. Pop., in 1801, 328; in 1831, 418. Houses 67. Acres 1,160. A. P. £2,975. Poor rates, in 1837, £110.

ALTHORNE, a parish in the hund. of Dengie, union of Maldon, Essex; 4 miles north-west of Burnham. Living, a discharged vicarage, united with Crixeth, in the archd. of Essex and dio. of London; rated at £14, and in the parliamentary returns at £134. Patron, in 1835, J. Robinson, Esq. There is a National school here. The estuary of the river Crouch is in this parish; and to protect the low lands from inundation, extensive embankments were constructed by labourers from Holland, whose descendants still remain here. Pop., in 1801, 286; in 1831, 352. Houses 46. Acres 2,000. A. P. £3,560. Poor rates, in 1837, £192.

ALTHORP, or OLDTHORPE, formerly a hamlet, now a manor, in the parish of Great Brington, Northamptonshire, from which Earl Spencer derives the title of Viscount. In 1603, Queen Anne, consort to James I., with the prince her son, rested here for some days, on their journey from Scotland to London. During their stay, a mask, composed by Ben Jonson, was exhibited for their entertainment. "The domain of Althorp," says Dibdin, "has been possessed by the Spencer family upwards of three centuries; but the exact period of the erection of the house seems to be unknown. There is, however, no question of its having received its principal improvements during the time of the first earl of Sunderland, (1636-1643), who was the son of the second Baron Spencer. The lady of this earl (daughter of Robert Sidney, second earl of Leicester, and better known as the Sacharissa of Waller the poet,) erected and covered in the great staircase, which had been formerly an interior court-yard, in the fashion of the times. From that period to the present, both the house and park have continued to receive improvements. The family of the Spencers became possessed of the park at Althorp, about the year 1512. This originated in a license from the king to John Spencer, afterwards Sir John Spencer. At that time the park is described as containing 300 acres of land, 100 acres of wood, and 40 acres of water in 'Oldthorpe,' but this seems to have been only an extension of some property previously acquired there, for it is certain that Althorp, so called, was purchased by this Sir John Spencer as early as the year 1508." The great attraction of Althorp House is its noble library, which Dibdin says is the finest collection of books perhaps in Europe. "It occupies a suite of rooms, four in number, and measuring in the whole about 170 feet in length. These are garnished from top to toe with the choicest copies of the choicest editions of the choicest authors in the choicest bindings."

ALTHORPE, a parish in the western division of the wapentake of Manley, parts of Lindsey, county of Lincoln. It comprises the townships of Althorpe, Amcotts, and Keadby; and is intersected by the river Trent, which is here joined by the Stamford and Keadby canal. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Stow and dio. of Lincoln; rated at £25; gross income £440. Patron, the Crown. The great and small tithes of the townships of Althorpe and Amcotts, and of the hamlet of Deddithorpe, or Derrythorpe, all the property of the clerical rector, were commuted respectively in 1794, 1779, and 1831. There are three daily schools in this parish. Pop., in 1801, 603; in 1831, 981. Houses 183. Acres 5,460. A. P. £5,921.—The township of Althorpe is 6 miles south-west from Burton-upon-Stather, and 4 south-east from Crowle. Pop., in 1801, 208; in 1831, 313. Houses 68. A. P. £1,219. Poor rates, in 1837, £146.

ALTHORPE, or ALETHORPE, a hamlet in the parish of Fakenham, Norfolk. In 1419 there was a chapel here. Pop., in 1831, 8. Acres 280.

ALTMAUR, a chapelry to the vicarage of Llanafan-fawr, hund. and union of Builth, Breconshire, South Wales. It stands on the Wye, 4 miles south-east of Builth. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. of Brecon and dio. of St David's; rated at £2 17s., and in the parliamentary returns at £55 11s. 6d.; gross income £48. Patron, the vicar of Llanafan-fawr. Pop., in 1801, 39; in 1831, 43. Houses 5. A. P. £272. Poor rates, in 1837, £16.

ALTOFTS, a township in the parish of Normanston, west riding of Yorkshire; on the river Calder; 4 miles north-east from Wakefield. The North Midland railway intersects this township, and is carried by a viaduct over the Calder, and the Aire and Calder canal. Pop., in 1801, 334; in 1831, 502. Houses 87. Acres 1,730. A. P. £2,539. Poor rates, in 1837, £220.

ALTON, a parish and market-town in the Alton division of the hund. and union of Alton, county of Southampton. The parish includes the hamlets of Anstey, Thyding and Willhall, with the chapelries of Holybourne, Binsted, and Kingsley, and the market-town of Alton. The town stands in an agreeable situation near the Wey; 10 miles north-east of New Alresford, on the great post-road from Winchester to London. It consists of three principal streets, and contains some handsome houses. Living, a vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Winchester; in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Winchester; rated at £15; gross income £778. The church is a spacious building, having a square embattled tower and spire, supported upon four arches springing from Saxon columns. The Independents, Baptists, Presbyterians, and Society of Friends, have places of worship here. The Independent church in Normandy Street was formed in 1696. There are an infant and five daily schools here, one of which is in connexion with the National society, and another with the British and Foreign school society. The free school was founded by John Eggar in 1640. The yearly income amounted, in 1824, to £74 10s. There is a National school where 200 children of both sexes are educated, and a house of industry. At Holybourne there is a charity school, to which this parish enjoys the privilege of sending twelve children. Other charities connected with this parish yield a yearly income of £37 7s. 6d. A society for literary improvement was established here in 1826. There was once a considerable manufactory of bombazines here, but it has decayed; there are manufactories of silk, druggets, serges, and other worsted fabrics, and some breweries. The town is under the jurisdiction of the county-magistrates; and the petty-sessions for the division of North Alton are held here. It is one of the polling-places for the county. The market-day is Saturday; fairs are held on the 29th of April for sheep and lambs, and on the 29th of September for cattle and toys. The Alton poor-law union comprehends a district of 68 square miles, with a population, in 1831, of 10,342. The average expenditure on the poor of this district, during the three years preceding the union, was £12,680. Expenditure, in 1838, £4,629. The town derives its name from its antiquity, having been a royal demesne in the reign of Alfred. It sent a member to parliament in the 23^d of Edward I. In 1643, a detachment of the royal army, under the command of Sir Ralph Hopton, occupied the town, but were driven out by Sir William Waller. Pop., in 1801, 2,026; in 1831, 2,742. Houses 472. Acres 3,910. A. P. £7,458. Poor rates, in 1837, £1,133. —There are penny posts to Droxford, Warnford, and Westmeon.

ALTON, a division in the county of Southampton, bounded on the north by the divisions of Basingstoke and Odiham; on the east by the county of Surrey; on the south by Petersfield and Droxford divisions; and on the west by Winchester division. Pop., in 1831, 22,451. Houses 3,639. Acres 118,480.

ALTON, a hamlet in the parish of Rock, county of Worcester, noted for its hop plantations.

ALTON-BARNES, or ALTON-BERNERS, a parish in the division and union of Devizes, Wiltshire; 4½ miles west by north from Pewsey. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Wilts and dio. of Salisbury; rated at £6 18s. 11½d.; gross income £311. In the patronage of New College, Oxford. There is a small daily school here. Pop., in 1801, 83; in 1831, 138. Houses 25. Acres 250. A. P. £959. Poor rates, in 1837, £40.—This parish is intersected by the Avon canal.

ALTON-PANCRAS, a parish in the liberty of Alton-Pancras, subdivision and union of Cerne, Dorset; 2 miles east from Cerne-Abbas. Living, a discharged vicarage in the patronage, and a peculiar of the dean and chapter of Salisbury; rated at £9; in the parliamentary returns at £113; gross income £25. There is a Sunday National school here. Pop., in 1801, 184; in 1831, 210. Houses 44. Acres 1,370. A. P. £1,576. Poor rates, in 1837, £75.

ALTON-PRIORS, a chapelry in the parish of Overton division of Everley and Pewsey, union of Pewsey, Wiltshire; 1 mile south of Alton-Barnes. Living, a curacy in the patronage of the vicar of Overton. Pop., in 1801, including the tything of Stowell, 178; in 1831, 923. Houses 40. Acres 2,630. A. P. £1,853. Poor rates, in 1837, £89.

ALTON. See ALVETON, Stafford.

ALTRINCHAM, or ALTRINGHAM, a chapelry and market-town in the parish of Bowdon, hund. of Bucklow, union of Altrincham, co.-palatine of Chester. It is situated on Bowdon-Downs; and on account of the salubrity of the air, is often resorted to by invalids from Manchester, from which it is distant 8 miles south-west. It is 12 miles from the Warrington railway station. Living, a perpetual curacy not in charge, being merely a chapelry to Bowdon, in the archd. and dio. of Chester; rated in the parliamentary returns at £102, and endowed with £1,000 parliamentary grant; gross income £139. Patron, in 1835, the earl of Stamford and Warrington. The Unitarians and Wesleyan Methodists, both of the old and new connexion, have places of worship here. There are one infant school, ten daily schools, and two boarding schools in this chapelry; besides four Sunday schools. Charities connected with this township produce £66 10s. yearly. The principal trade consists in the spinning of yarn and thread, the making of bobbins, and the weaving of cotton by hand-loom. These are sent to Manchester by the duke of Bridgewater's canal, which passes near the town. It has recently been proposed to carry a branch from this canal to the Trent and Mersey canal at Middlewick, by a line nearly straight, approaching within 2 miles of Knutsford. This canal will be 16 miles in length, and will complete the best and most direct canal route from Manchester to the Staffordshire iron and coal district, and to Birmingham, and the mines, iron-works, and agricultural districts of Shropshire and North Wales. The town of Manchester is supplied, to a considerable extent, with fruit and vegetables from this neighbourhood, the cultivation of which employs a number of hands. The market-day is Tuesday; and fairs for cattle and drapery are held on the 29th of April, 5th of August, and 22d of November. "Altringham is of the ancient fee of the barons of Dunham-Massy. In the reign of Edward I. Hamon de Massy, lord of Dunham-Massy, instituted burgesses in this town, and granted them a Gild-mercatory here, that is, a society for free traffic and merchandise, about the year of Christ 1290." Leycester's Hist. Antiq. of Chester. The Altrincham poor-law union comprehends a district of 102 square miles, containing a population, returned, in 1831, at 27,909. The average expenditure for the relief of the poor of this district, in the three years preceding the union, was £9,385. Expenditure, in 1838, £7,634. Pop., in 1801, 1,692; in 1831, 2,708. Houses 537. Acres 520. A. P. £4,547. Poor rates, in 1837, £338.

ALVANLEY, a chapelry in the parish of Frodsham, union of Runcorn, co.-palatine of Chester; 3 miles south-south-west from Frodsham. Living, a donative curacy in the archd. and dio. of Chester; rated at £5 10s.; gross income £47. Patron, in 1835, Lord Alvanley. There is a National daily and Sunday school here. The village stands on the borders of Delamere forest, and gives the title of baron to the Arden family. Pop., in 1801, 314; in 1831, 346. Houses 62. Acres £1,460. A. P. £1,156. Poor rates, in 1837, £165.

ALVASTON, a township in the parish of Nantwich, co.-palatine of Chester. Pop., in 1801, 11; in 1831, 41. Houses 6. Acres 610.

ALVASTON, a township and chapelry in the parish of St Michael, union of Shardlow, county of Derby; 3 miles south-east by east from Derby. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. of Derby and dio. of Lichfield; in the patronage of the parishioners. It is rated at £5, in the parliamentary returns at £120; gross income £116. The great and small tithes, moduses, &c., the property of the lay-impropriator and perpetual curate, were commuted in 1802. There are three daily and two Sunday schools. The only charity connected with this chapelry yields a yearly revenue of £61. The village is situated on the Derwent, near the Derby canal. Pop., in 1801, 303; in 1831, 439. Houses 91. Acres 870. A. P. £3,744. Poor rates, in 1837, £142.

ALVECHURCH, a parish in the division of Northfield, and hund. of Oswaldslow, union of Bromsgrove, Worcestershire; $4\frac{1}{2}$ miles east-north-east from Bromsgrove, and 2 west of the Birmingham and Gloucester railway. Living, a rectory, a peculiar of the see of Worcester, and in the patronage of the bishop; rated at £24 16s. 8d.; gross income, in 1822, £1,027. There is a work-house here founded in 1816. The revenue of this charity is £36 a-year. An hospital for nine persons was founded by Nicholas Lewknor of Hadzor, in 1580, and incorporated by Queen Elizabeth. The yearly income of the charity is £33 6s. 8d., which is distributed among the inmates of the hospital. The other charities connected with the parish produce £12 7s. per annum. There are seven daily and three Sunday schools. The Worcester and Birmingham canal passes through this parish. Alvechurch was formerly a borough, but has fallen greatly into decay. The bishops of Worcester had a palace here. Pop., in 1801, 1,228; in 1831, 1,548. Houses 307. Acres 6,820. A. P. £10,176. Poor rates, in 1837, £599.

ALVEDISTON, or ALVESDISTON, a parish in the division of Hindon, union of Tisbury, county of Wilts. Living, a vicarage not in charge, subordinate to the rectory of Broad Chalk, in the archd. and dio. of Salisbury. Pop., in 1801, 217; in 1831, 239. Houses 52. Acres 2,400. A. P. £2,334. Poor rates, in 1837, £90.

ALVELEY, a parish and township, partly in the hund. of Stottesden, and partly in the borough of Bridgenorth, union of Bridgenorth, county of Salop; on the eastern bank of the Severn; 6 miles south-east of Bridgenorth. It includes the liberty of Romsley, and the township of Nordley-Regis. Living, a perpetual curacy under the jurisdiction of the peculiar court of Bridgenorth; rated at £65 per annum in the parliamentary returns; gross income £82. Patron, in 1835, John Wingfield, Esq., who appoints an official and registrar. There are three daily schools here: one a free school, endowed by John Grove in 1615; master's salary £22 12s. John Grove also bequeathed yearly stipends to five old men of the parish. The entire income of both these churches is £73. The other charities connected with the parish yield £56 yearly. Pop., in 1801, 791; in 1831, 949. Houses 193. Acres 7,640. A. P. £5,618. Poor rates of the township, in 1837, £485.

ALVERSCOTT, or ALSCOT, a parish in the hund. of Fremington, union of Torrington, and division of Braunton, Devonshire; 5 miles south-east of Bideford. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Barnstaple and dio. of Exeter; rated at £13 3s. 11 $\frac{1}{4}$ d.; gross income £168. Patron, in 1835, — Brown, Esq. There is a small daily school here. Pop., in 1801, 278; in 1831, 339. Houses 67. Acres 1,390. A. P. £1,431. Poor rates, in 1837, £125.

ALVERSTOKE, a parish in the liberties of Alverstoke and Gosport, Portsdown hund. in Fareham division, Southamptonshire. Living, a rectory, a peculiar of the see of Winchester; rated at £21 6s. 0 $\frac{1}{4}$ d.; gross income £1,310. Patron, the bishop of Winchester. A new church was erected here in 1829–30 by the parliamentary commissioners, at an expense of £3,965. It is in the Gothic style, with accommodation for 1169. The living is a curacy; gross income £139. Patron, the rector of Alverstoke. Charities connected with this parish yield a yearly revenue of £17. There are 2 infant schools, 14 daily schools, 5 day and boarding schools, and 6 Sunday schools, in this parish. Of these, one is a Roman Catholic school, supported by the Catholic incumbent at Gosport; and two are in connection with the National school society. Pop., with Gosport chapelry, in 1801, 11,295; in 1831, 12,637. Houses 2,338. Acres 4,010. A. P. £41,440. Poor rates, in 1837, £3,290.

ALVERSTON, a chapelry in the parish of Brading, Isle of Wight; $5\frac{1}{2}$ miles east-south-east of Newport. The living is rated at £2 0s. 8d. The chapel is now in ruins. Population with Brading.

ALVERTHORPE. See ALLERTHORPE.

ALVESCOTT, a parish in the hund. of Bampton, union of Witney, county of Oxford; 5 miles south by east from Burford. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Oxford; rated at £8 16s. 8d.; gross income £400. Patron, in 1835, T. Neate, Esq. All tithes, the property of the clerical rector, lay-impropriator and vicar, were commuted in 1796. A rent of £10 per annum was left in 1723 by Goddard Carter, Esq., for educating and apprenticing poor children; there are two other daily schools. The income of other charities to the poor connected with this parish, is £12 10s. Pop., in 1801, 339; in 1831, 361. Houses 70. Acres 2,690. A. P. £3,323. Poor rates, in 1837, £187.

ALVEDISTON. See ALVEDISTON.

ALVESTON, a parish partly in the upper and partly in the lower division of the hund. of Langley and Swineshead, union of Thornbury, Gloucestershire; 9 miles north by east of Bristol; on the post-road to Thornbury. It includes the hamlets of Grovening and Urcot. Living, a curacy annexed to Olveston, in the archd. of Gloucester and dio. of Gloucester and Bristol. There are two daily and Sunday schools here, with about 90 scholars. In this parish there are vestiges of two Roman camps, the one on the top of Oldbury-hill, near the Severn, the other on Castle-hill. Pop., in 1801, 412; in 1831, 800. Houses 137. Acres 2,470. A. P. £4,173. Poor rates, in 1837, £237.

ALVESTON—formerly called Aulston—a parish in the Snitterfield division of the hund. of Barlchway, Stratford-on-Avon union, Warwickshire; 2 miles north-east from Stratford-on-Avon. Living, a vicarage in the dio. of Worcester, exempt from the visitation of the archdeacon; rated at £6, and in the parliamentary returns at £130; gross income £223. The church contains some fine monuments of the Lucy family. Patron, the rector of Hampton-Lucy. The great and small tithes were commuted in 1771. There is a small daily school here. Charities connected with this parish yield a yearly revenue of £47. The village stands in an agreeable neighbourhood, and finely wooded country, near the Avon; and has been called from the salubrity of its air, the Montpellier of England. A new church has been built here. Pop., in 1801, 465; in 1831, 650. Houses 135. Acres 4,300. A. P. £6,561. Poor rates, in 1837, £431.—To the westward of Alveston rise the Welcombe hills.

ALVETON, or ALTON, a parish in the hund. of Totmonslow South, union of Cheadle, Staffordshire. It contains the townships of Alveton, Cotton, Denston, and Farley; and a part of Oakmoor. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Stafford and dio. of Lichfield; rated at £5 16s. 5 $\frac{1}{4}$ d.; gross income £151. Patron, in 1835, the earl of Shrewsbury. Here are six daily schools, and a very handsome Catholic chapel. Two Roman Catholic schools are supported by the earl of Shrewsbury. Pop., in 1801, 1,633; in 1831, 2,391. Houses 430. Acres 7,470. A. P. £8,726. Poor rates, in 1837, £769.—The township of Alveton is 4 miles east by south from Cheadle. It stands on the Churnet, a branch of the Dove, in a romantic district, and is traversed by the Uttoxeter canal. Here are places of worship belonging to the Independents and Methodists. A school for the education of poor children was founded and endowed here in 1721 by Anthony Wall. Other charities connected with the parish yield an annual revenue of £14 6s. Pop., in 1801, 818; in 1831, 1,220. Houses 222. A. P. £3,410. Poor rates, in 1837, £300.—The ruins of Alveton, or Alton-castle, stand on the summit of a rock, 300 feet above the river: In the reign of Henry II. this castle belonged to the family of De Verdon; it now belongs to the earl of Shrewsbury.

ALVINGHAM, a parochial chapelry in the Marsh division of the hund. of Louth Eske, parts of Lindsey, union of Louth, Lincolnshire. It is on the Louth navigation canal, $\frac{3}{4}$ miles to the north-east of Louth. Living, a perpetual curacy in connection with Cockerington-St-Mary, in the archd. and dio. of Lincoln; rated at £2, and in the parliamentary returns at £80; gross income £58. Patron, in 1835, the bishop of Lincoln. The great and small tithes were commuted in 1819. "Here was a priory of Gilbertine nuns and canons, dedicated to the blessed Virgin St Mary and St Adelwold, in the time of Robert Cheiney, bishop of Lincoln, in the latter end of the reign of King Stephen, or the beginning of that of King Henry II.; but by whom founded, it does not certainly yet appear, whether by William de Friston, Hugh de Scoteni, Hameline the dean, or some other. It was valued, a little before the suppression, at £128 14s. 2d. per annum, Dugd.; £141 15s.; Speed: and was granted to Edward Lord Clinton, 5th Edward VI.—Tanner's Not. Mon. Pop., in 1801, 214; in 1831, 292. Houses 60. Acres 1,940. A. P. £2,162. Poor rates, in 1837, £159.

ALVINGTON, a hamlet and chapelry to the parish of Woolaston, Gloucestershire; $\frac{9}{10}$ miles south-west of Newnam, on the road to Chepstow. Living, a curacy not in charge, subordinate to Woolaston. All tithes, moduses, &c., commuted in 1810. Pop., in 1801, 211; in 1831, 281. Houses 60. Acres 1,550. A. P. £1,787. Poor rates, in 1837, £109.

ALVINGTON. See ALLINGTON, Devon.

ALWALTON, or ALLERTON, a parish in the hund. of Norman Cross, union of Peterborough, county of Huntingdon; $\frac{4}{5}$ miles south-west of Peterborough, on the road to Elton; bounded on the north by the river Nen. Living, a rectory formerly in the archd. of Huntingdon and dio. of Lincoln, now in the dio. of Ely; rated at £9 5s. 10d.; gross income £200. Patrons, the dean and chapter of Peterborough, to whom it was given by Henry VIII. in 1541. The great and small tithes commuted in 1805. There is a daily school here attended by about 50 children. Charities to the poor of this parish produce £4 10s. yearly. Pop., in 1801, 218; in 1831, 294. Houses 59. Acres 1,040. A. P. £1,543. Poor rates, in 1837, £74.

ALWEN (THE), a stream in North Wales, which rises in Llyn Alwen, Denbighshire, about 8 miles west of Ruthin, and flows south-east into the Dee near Llanar, after a course of about 13 miles.

ALWINGTON, a parish in the hund. of Shebbear, union of Bideford, county of Devon; including the small villages of Fairy Cross and Woodtown. It is 4 miles south-west by west from Bideford. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Barnstaple and dio. of Exeter; rated at 17 4s. 2½d.; gross income £282. Patron, in 1835, R. P. Coffin, Esq.

There are alms-houses here for three poor persons, founded and endowed, in 1696, by Robert Coffin. The annual revenue of this, and other charities connected with the parish, is £16 8s. yearly. There are three daily schools, and a Sunday school, in this parish. The ancient family of Coffin have held the manor of Alwington since the Conquest. At Yeo vale, in this parish, are the remains of an ancient chapel. Pop., in 1801, 310; in 1831, 486. Houses 85. Acres 5,330. A. P. £2,203. Poor rates, in 1837, £153.

ALWARDDBY. See ALLERBY.

ALWINTON. See ALLENTON, Northumberland.

ALWOODLEY, a township in the parish of Harewood, west riding of Yorkshire; 5 miles north from Leeds. Pop., in 1801, 143; in 1831, 142. Houses 27. Acres 1,120. A. P. £575. Poor rates, in 1837, £51.

AMBERLEY, a chapelry in the parish of Marden, Herefordshire; 7 miles north-east from Hereford. Pop., in 1801, 49; in 1831, 25. Houses 5. Acres 330. A. P. £387.

AMBERLEY, a parish in the hund. of West Esawith, rape of Arundel, Sussex; $\frac{4}{5}$ miles north-east of Arundel; including the hamlet of Rockham. Living, a vicarage united with Houghton, in the archd. and dio. of Chichester; rated at £7 5s. 7½d., and in the parliamentary returns at £114; gross income, in 1832, £180. Patron, in 1835, the bishop of Chichester. The church-lands in this parish produce a yearly rent of £12 12s. The tithes of Amberley manor, the property of the vicar, were commuted in 1813. There are two daily schools here. On the banks of the Arun, which runs through this parish, are extensive ruins of a palace or castle, built by William Rede, bishop of Chichester, who died in 1385. It appears to have been of light and elegant architecture. One of the apartments contains the portraits of ten ancient monarchs and their queens, and the wooden ceiling is carved with representations of six warriors. Pop., in 1801, 346; in 1831, 637. Houses 83. Acres 3,030. A. P. £1,513. Poor rates, in 1837, £114.

AMBERSHAM (NORTH and SOUTH), tythings in the parish of Steep, Southamptonshire, but locally in the union of Midhurst, Sussex; $\frac{2}{5}$ miles east-north-east of Midhurst. Pop., in 1801, 263; in 1831, 304. Houses 46. Acres 2,590. A. P. £1,962. Poor rates, in 1837, £304.—There is a small daily school at South Ambersham.

AMBLE, a township in the parish of Warkworth, Northumberland; 9 miles south-east from Alnwick; at the mouth of the Coquet. From the British and Roman remains which have been found in the neighbourhood, it appears to have been a place of some consequence in early times. There was formerly a monastery here, subordinate to the priory of Tynemouth. Its ruins, along with those of the chapel connected with it, are still visible. Pop., in 1801, 152; in 1831, 247. Houses 48.—There is a small daily school here.

AMBLECOAT, a hamlet in that part of the parish of Old Swinford, which is in Staffordshire, in the union of Stourbridge; $\frac{1}{2}$ mile north of Stourbridge. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the collieries, and earthenware, and iron-works, in the vicinity. Pop., in 1801, 1,002; in 1831, 1,236. Houses 244. Acres 570. A. P. £3,186. Poor rates, in 1837, £679.—There are an infant-school, and four daily schools, here.

AMBLESIDE, a market-town and chapelry, partly in the parish of Windermere, and partly in that of Grasmere, Kendal ward and union, Westmoreland; $12\frac{1}{2}$ miles north-west from Kendal. The name was written Amelsate in 1273, and afterwards

Hamleside. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. of Richmond and dio. of Chester; rated at £10, and in the parliamentary returns at £79; gross income, in 1832, £80. Patron, in 1835, Lady le Fleming. The chapel, which was endowed by the inhabitants and made parochial in 1675, was handsomely rebuilt in 1812. There are seven daily, and two Sunday-schools here. A free grammar-school was founded here, and endowed, in 1721, by John Kelsick; the annual revenue, at the time of the inquiry, in 1821, was about £133, of which the master, who had also a free house, received about £112. Other charities connected with this town produced £11 10s. yearly. Ambleside is under the jurisdiction of the county-magistrates, who hold petty-sessions here. It is also one of the polling-places for the county. Woollen cloth is manufactured here, and principally sent to Kendal. There is a large slate quarry at Whitemoss, between Ambleside and Rydal; and the adjoining mountains contain lead and copper mines, which, however, are not very productive. The market-day is Wednesday; fairs for horned cattle and sheep are held on the Wednesday after Whitsunday, and October 29th. Pop., in 1801, 538; in 1831, 1,095. Houses 180. A. P. £2,842. Poor rates, in 1837, £335.—Ambleside stands, says Baines, in his 'Companion to the Lakes,' "on the side of a steep hill, the higher parts of which are called Kirkstone moor, and at the mouth of a narrow glen down which rushes the brook, or *gill named Stockgill. Opposite the town are the craggy heights of Loughrigg fell, [1050 feet,] the lower parts of which are begirt with wood. The valley is nearly three miles in length, and at its upper extremity it seems to be blocked up by Fairfield, a huge mountain which rises to the height of 2,950 feet above the sea; but, though this is the appearance, the valley does not end there, but turns off abruptly to the left, and afterwards opens out so as to form the bed for the small lakes of Rydal and Grassmere. The town is very ancient, and irregularly built; but at either extremity, and above it, there are several neat and handsome houses, surrounded by gardens well filled with fruit and flowers. Beneath the town is a valley, whose verdure is always kept fresh and brilliant by the streamlets which flow down the sides of the hills, and by the winding Rothay. The woods of Rydal hall, and of the different glens which diverge from the valley, adorn the prospect from Ambleside, whilst, in contrast to the towering and bulky form of Fairfield at one extremity of the valley, the sheet of Windermere opens out in sweet repose at the other."—Rydal Mount, which has long been the residence of the poet Wordsworth, is in the immediate neighbourhood of this town.

AMBLESTON, a parish in the hund. of Dun-gledly, Haverford-West union, county of Pembroke, South Wales; 8 miles north by east from Haverford-West. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. and dio. of St David's; rated at £7, and in the parliamentary returns at £54; gross income £189. Patron, the king, as prince of Wales. The Welsh Calvinistic Methodists have a chapel here. Pop., in 1801, 421; in 1831, 574. Houses 115. A. P. £1,623. Poor rates, in 1837, £210.—There are remains of a Roman station about a mile to the north-east of the church; supposed, by some, to be the Advicesimum of Richard of Cirencester.

AMBRESBURY. See AMBESBURY.

AMBROSDEN, a parish in the hund. of Bullington, union of Bicester, Oxfordshire. It comprises the chapelrys of Arncliffe and Blackthorne, with the hamlet of Ambrosden. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Oxford; rated at £11 17s.; endowed with £200 royal bounty, and £200 private benefaction; gross income £234. Patron, in 1835, Sir G. O. P. Turner. There are two daily schools here. The church lands connected with this parish yield a yearly rent of £32. Pop., in 1801, 625; in 1831, 914. Houses 172. Acres 5,210. A. P. £4,191.—The hamlet of Ambrosden is $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles south-east by south from Bicester. The name is supposed by Bishop Kennet—who formerly held the vicarage—to be derived from Ambrosius Aurelius, the celebrated British chief, who encamped here during the siege of Alchester by the Saxons. Pop., in 1801, 111; in 1831, 183. Houses 32. Acres 920. A. P. £773. Poor rates, in 1837, £102.

AMCOTTS, a township in the parish of Althorp, county of Lincoln; 4 miles east of Crowle, 2 miles north-east of Althorp; on the river Trent. It is a chapelry to Althorp. Pop., in 1801, 227; in 1831, 359. Houses 68. A. P. £3,567. Poor rates, in 1837, £88.

AMERDALE, in the parish of Arncliffe, west riding of Yorkshire. "The upper end of Amerdale, stretching to the confines of Longstrothdale on the north and east, was a distinct manor under the Percy fee, as well as a forest. Though principally inclosed, it is for the most part a cold valley with very little wood. The Skirfare, in its course along a rocky bed, in dry seasons alternately merges and reappears." Whitaker's Hist. of Craven.

AMERSHAM, or ACMONDE'SHAM, an ancient borough, market-town, and parish, in the archd. of Burnham, union of Amersham, Buckinghamshire; 27 miles south-east from Buckingham; 3 miles south-west from Chesham; 5 north-east from Beaconsfield, and 26 north-west from London; on the road from Wendover to Uxbridge. It stands in a pleasant valley near the Misbourn, a tributary of the river Colne, surrounded by wood-crowned hills; and consists of a long street crossed by a shorter one. The streets are well-paved but not lighted, and the supply of water is plentiful. The town-house was erected by Sir William Drake, in 1682. It is a handsome brick edifice resting on pillars, and surmounted by a lantern and clock. The lower part is used for the market; in the upper, public business is managed. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Buckingham and dio. of Lincoln; rated at £48 16s. 1½d; gross income, in 1832, £1,331. Patron, in 1835, T. T. Drake, Esq. The church, which stands near the intersection of the two streets, is a Gothic edifice, constructed of brick coated with stucco; the chancel and an adjoining mausoleum contain some monuments to the Bent and Drake families. The Society of Friends have a meeting-house here; and there are also two chapels for the Baptists.—The first Baptist congregation, was formed in 1713, the other in 1823. The free school was founded in 1620, by Robert Challoner, rector of the parish. Three boys from this school, or from that of Knaresborough or Goldsborough in Yorkshire, are entitled to exhibitions in Corpus Christi college, Oxford, founded in 1620 by Dr. Challoner. The annual income of this charity is £116 10s. 6d., of which about £85 is generally paid to the master, and £10 10s. to the poor of the parish. There is also a school for writing and arithmetic, endowed by Lord Cheyne, Viscount Newhaven, in 1699, with £20 per annum. There are two Sunday schools endowed by William Drake, jun. Esq.; and an alms-house for six widows, founded in 1667, by Sir William Drake, with an annual income of £149 13s. 4d. The other charities connected with the parish produce upwards of £182 yearly. In 1833 there were 34 daily schools in this parish, attended by 475 scholars.—The town is under the jurisdiction of the county-magistrates; for its internal management, a constable and other officers are elected at the court-leet of the lord of the manor. It formerly sent two members to parliament; but in the reformed state of the representation has ceased to return. The elective franchise, on the old system, belonged to the inhabitants paying scot and lot; but the influence of the lord of the manor was always predominant. The Amersham poor-law union comprehends a district of 111 square miles, containing a population, returned in 1831, at 15,331. The average annual expenditure for the relief of the poor during the three years preceding the union, was £10,893. Expenditure in 1838, £6,090. The amount of assessed taxes for the town, in 1831, was £429 9s. 4d. The principal manufacture is that of cotton and black lace; many females are employed in plaiting straw; and wooden chairs are made for exportation. The market is on Tuesday, and is well-attended; fairs for sheep are held on Whitmonday, and the 19th of September. In the reign of Henry V., several of the inhabitants of this town were burnt at the stake, for professing the tenets of the Lollards; and in that of Mary, the same scenes were renewed. This borough was twice represented by the poet Waller, in Charles I.'s reign; and in 1679, by Algernon Sydney. Colehill, a manor in this parish, formerly belonged to the family of the Wallers; and here Edward Waller the poet was born, in 1605. Pop., in 1801, 2,130; in 1831, 2,816. Houses 528. Acres 5,420. A. P. £7,305. Poor rates, in 1837, £967. Shardeloes, the seat of the lord of the manor, about a mile north-west of the town, is a fine building designed by Adams.

* Gill, or ghyll, is a mountain torrent with steep banks.

AMESBURY, a division of Wilts, at the eastern extremity of Salisbury plain; bounded on the north by the divisions of Devizes and Everley; on the east and south by Hampshire and Dorsetshire; and on the west by the divisions of Hindon and Warminster. The area of the old hundred of Amesbury was 42,620 statute acres. Pop., in 1831, 6,611. Houses 1,285. The present division of Amesbury, as established at the Quarter-sessions in 1830, is much more extensive.

AMESBURY, formerly AMBROSBURY, or AMBRESBURY, and in Domesday-book, AMBLESBERIE, a market-town and parish in the division and union of the same name, county of Wilts; $7\frac{1}{4}$ miles north from Salisbury, and 78 west-south-west from London. It stands in a valley on the river Avon. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. of Wilts and dio. of Salisbury, in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Windsor; rated at £40; in the parliamentary returns at £80; gross income £141. The Wesleyan Methodists have a meeting-house here. There is a National school supported by subscription; and three charity schools: one endowed by H. Spratt in 1708, for teaching an indefinite number of children to read; another for 20 boys, founded and endowed in 1677 by Mr John Rose; and a third established in 1819, out of funds left by the same John Rose, in 1677. The annual income of the first varies from £44 to £50; of the two latter, the yearly revenue is £54 5s. The only other charity connected with the parish is that of Richard Harrison, for apprenticing poor boys. Its annual income is £42. The town of Amesbury is of great antiquity. In the reign of King Edgar, a synod was convened here to settle disputes between the regular and secular clergy. According to Domesday-book, Amesbury was never assessed, nor divided into hides. There is little trade; even the market, which used to be held on Friday, has been discontinued. Fairs for horses, sheep, pigs, and horned cattle, are held on May 17th, June 22d, October 6th, and December 18th. The town is within the jurisdiction of the county-magistrates; constables, who are the only municipal officers, are appointed annually at the court-leet of the lord of the manor. The Amesbury poor-law union comprehends a district of 99 square miles, with a population returned, in 1831, at 7,064. The average expenditure on the poor of this district, during the three years preceding the union, was £4,445. Expenditure in 1838, £3,641. Pop., in 1801, 721; in 1831, 944. Houses 198. Acres 6,060. A. P. £5,710. Poor rates, in 1837, £621.—It has been proposed to construct a new road from Amesbury to Kennet, which will form a connecting link between the Great Western and the Southampton and Salisbury railways. The best tobacco-pipe-clay in England is dug in the neighbourhood of the town; and the streamlets of the vicinity are famed for loaches. The surrounding country is fertile and well-cultivated. On the western side of the river there are traces of an ancient encampment, with a vallum and deep fosse, inclosing a space of 39 acres: this has been attributed to Vespasian, but is more generally supposed to be of British origin. "Here is said to have been an ancient British monastery for 300 monks, founded, as some say, by Ambrius an abbot; and others, by the famous Prince Ambrosius, who was therein buried, and destroyed by that cruel pagan, Gurmundus, (Gurthurn) who over-ran all this country in the 6th century. It has been thought that here was one of the two monasteries which were given to the learned Asserius by King Alfred. But it is more certain, that about the year 960, Alfrida or Ethelfrida, the queen-dowager of King Kdward, erected here a monastery for nuns, and commended it to the patronage of St Mary and St Melorius, a Cornish saint, whose relics were preserved here. It was of the Benedictine order; but, A.D. 1177, the abbess and about 30 nuns were expelled for their ill lives; and then King Henry II. placed here a prioress and 24 nuns, from Font Ebrald in Normandy, to which monastery this house was for some time subject, but at length was made denizen, and became again an abbey, endowed 26th Henry VIII. with £495 15s. 2d., Dugd.; £556 10s. 2d., Speed. This nunnery was surrendered, December, 1540, or 32nd Henry VIII., by the abbess and 34 nuns, and granted in April following to Edward, earl of Hertford."—Tanner's Not. Mon.—Amesbury abbey was one of the richest and most celebrated of the non-mitred abbeys in England, and many distinguished females took the veil here at different times. A society of nuns, of the order of St Augustine, from Louvain in Flanders, took up their residence at a house which occupies a part of the side of the ancient nunnery, probably attracted by a notion of the sanctity of the place; but they afterwards removed into Dorsetshire.—Amesbury was the birth-place of Addison.—Near the town is Amesbury-house, the once celebrated seat of the Dukes of Queensbury, built by Webb, from the designs of Inigo Jones, and subsequently improved by the Earl of Burlington.—About 2 miles west from the town is the well-known Druidical structure, called STONEHENGE: which see. There is a penny-post to Netheravon.

AMLWCH, a parish in the hund. of Twercllyn, union and island of Anglesey, North Wales. The name is probably derived from am about, and lluch, a sandy beach. Living, a perpetual curacy, in connection with the chapelry of Llanwenllwyfo, in the archd. of Anglesey and dio. of Bangor; rated at £20 15s.; in the parliamentary returns at £90; gross income, in 1832, £222. The great tithes belong to the see of Bangor. Patron, in 1835, the bishop. The church was erected at the expense of the Parys mine company, and consecrated in 1801. There are also several dissenting chapels in this parish. Carmel Independent chapel was founded in 1785; the Calvinistic Methodist chapel, in 1777. There are two National schools attended by 270 children; and seven other daily schools. The parish derives its importance from the great copper-mines called the Parys and Mona mines. As a source of the metal, this place is thought to have been known to the Romans; but the modern workings commenced only in 1762, when the value of the property was discovered by the lessees of Sir Nicholas Bayley, afterwards earl of Uxbridge. The works formerly yielded from 60,000 to 80,000 tons of ore annually, or about 3,000 tons of copper; but they have not been so flourishing of late. The produce, in 1827, was only 735 tons of copper, or about 1-18th part of the copper obtained in the united kingdom. Coal is not found in the neighbourhood, which renders the expense of smelting so great that much ore is shipped for Stanley, near Liverpool, and Swansea. Lead and zinc are also found here.

AMLWCH, a sea-port town in the above parish, on the coast of Anglesey; in N. lat. 53° 25', W. long. 4° 20'. In consequence of the discovery of the rich mines in the Parys mountain, Amlwch has risen from a small fishing-village to a considerable town. The inhabitants are chiefly miners. A fair is held on November 12th for cattle. The North and South Wales bank has a branch here. The port of Amlwch is now capable of admitting 30 vessels of 200 tons burden; but is dangerous of access in high northerly winds, and dry at low water. Off the port there is a number of small islets or rocks, one of which serves as a sea-mark in taking the harbour. A white light is also shown on the north pier, which is visible in clear weather to the distance of 8 miles. Here is a free school, endowed by Eleanor Kynier with £15 per annum; now in connection with the National school society; at which about 260 children receive instruction at the yearly cost of £120. Pop., in 1801, 4,977; in 1831, 6,265. Houses 1,264. A. P. £6,070. Poor rates, in 1837, £1,240.—The district to the north-west of Amlwch consists principally of an extensive sandy plain, which, from a few instances of the effect of cultivation, exhibits marks of great fertility. Amlwch, Beaumaris, &c., return one member to parliament.

AMMINGTON. See ALMINGTON.

AMMINGTON. See EMMINGTON, Oxford.

AMNEY. See AMPNEY.

AMOND (THE), a river of Wales, rising in the Black mountains, and falling into the Lougher, near Bettws, Caermarthenshire.

AMOTHERBY, a township in the parish of Appleton-le-Street, north riding of Yorkshire; 3½ miles north-west from New Malton. It is a chapelry to Rysdale, in the archd. of Cleveland and dio. of York. The impropriate and vicarial tithes of this township were commuted in 1776. There is a free school with an endowment of £20 per annum, on which six scholars are educated. Pop., in 1801, 285; in 1831, 246. Houses 48. Acres 1,580. A. P. £1,662.

AMOUNDERNESS, a hundred in Lancashire; bounded on the north by the hundred of Lonsdale; on the south by those of Blackburn and Leyland; on the east by Yorkshire; and on the west by the Irish sea. Pop., in 1831, 69,987. Houses 12,847. Acres 145,110.

AMPLEFORD, or AMPELFORTH, a parish, partly in the liberty of St Peter, York; partly in the wapentake of Birdford; and partly in that of Ryedale, in the union of Helmsley-Blackmoor, north riding of Yorkshire. It includes the townships of Ampleford, and Oswald-Kirk Quarter. Living, a discharged vicarage, a peculiar of the dean and chapter of York, and in the patronage of the prebendary of Ampleford, in the cathedral of York; rated at £4 6s. 5½d.; gross income £281. A Catholic college was established here in 1802. It has a prior, two prefects of studies, and two professors. There are two National schools here. Charities connected with this parish yield about £15 per annum. Pop., in 1801, 438; in 1831, 623. Houses 60. Acres 2,270. A. P. £1,530. Poor rates, in 1837, £190.—The township of Ampleford is 4 miles south-west by south from Helmsley. The great and small tithes, &c. of this township, were commuted in 1804 and 1806. Pop., in 1831, 207. Houses 36. Poor rates, in 1837, £53.

AMPNEY, or AMPNEY-CRUCIS, a parish in the hund. of Crowthorne and Minety, union of Cirencester, Gloucestershire. Living, a discharged vicarage, formerly in the archd. of Gloucester, now in that of Bristol, and in the dio. of Gloucester and Bristol; rated at £6 9s. 0½d.; gross income £84. Patron, the Grown. All tithes, moduses, &c. of Ampney-Crucis and Ampney St Mary, the property of the lord of the manor, vicar, and curate, were commuted in 1769. Here are two daily schools, one of which is a free school, founded and endowed by Sir Robert Pleydell in 1722. The yearly revenue is £80. Pop., in 1801, 514; in 1831, 599. Houses 113. Acres 2,660. Poor rates, in 1837, £284.

AMPNEY-DOWN, a parish in the hund. of Crowthorne and Minety, union of Cirencester, Gloucestershire; 5 miles south-east from Cirencester; a little to the north of the Thames and Severn canal. Living, a discharged vicarage, formerly in the archd. of Gloucester, now in that of Bristol, and in the dio. of Gloucester and Bristol; rated at £10 5s. 8d., in the parliamentary returns at £120; gross income £118. Patrons, in 1835, the dean and chapter of Christ-church, Oxford. The church is an ancient building. There is an infant school in this parish, also a small day school. An ancient mansion-house, built by Sir Anthony Hungerford, in the reign of Henry VIII., still exists, though much altered by modern additions. Pop., in 1801, 279; in 1831, 463. Houses 79. Acres 2,470. A. P., including that of Ampney-Crucis, £3,610. Poor rates, in 1837, £187.

AMPNEY (ST MARY), or ASHBROOKE, a parish in the same hund. and union; 4 miles east by south from Cirencester; on the post-road to Fairford. Living, a perpetual curacy, formerly in the archd. of Gloucester, now in that of Bristol, and in the dio. of Gloucester and Bristol; rated at £5 3s., in the parliamentary returns at £56; gross income £71. The chapel is an old building in the early English style. For commutation of tithes, see AMPNEY-CRUCIS. Pop., in 1801, 176; in 1831, 115. Houses 27. Acres 1,170. A. P. £1,672. Poor rates, in 1837, £74.

AMPNEY (ST PETER), or EASINGTON, a parish in the same union and hundred as the above, situated to the south of Ampney St Mary. Living, a perpetual curacy, formerly in the archd. of Gloucester, now in that of Bristol, and in the dio. of Gloucester and Bristol; rated at £4 3s. 4d., in the parliamentary returns at £25; endowed with £1,600 royal bounty; gross income £60. There is a small daily school here. Pop., in 1801, 162; in 1831, 180. Houses 43. Acres 860. A. P. £948. Poor rates, in 1837, £60.

AMPORT, a parish in the division, hundred, and union of Andover, Southamptonshire; 4 miles west by south from Andover. Living, a vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Winchester; rated at £25 7s. 11d.; gross income £936. Patrons, in 1835, the dean and chapter of Chichester. There is a National schoolhouse here, with an endowment of £20 per annum for the education of poor children, bequeathed by the Rev. Thomas Sheppard, D.D.; also an almshouse for six poor persons. The income of both these charities is about £150 a-year. There are also two day and boarding schools, and a Sunday school. Pop., including the tythings of Cholderton and Sarson, in 1801, 520; in 1831, 713. Houses 124. Acres 3,460. A. P. £1,655. Poor rates, in 1837, £391.

AMPTHILL, a market-town and parish in the hund. of Redbornstoke, union of Ampthill, county of Bedford; 8 miles south-west of Bedford; 12 from the Leighton station on the London and Birmingham railway. It is pleasantly situated, and is a neat and regular town, with a handsome market-house. Living, a discharged rectory, formerly in the archd. of Bedford and dio. of Lincoln, now in the dio. of Ely; rated at £10 6s. 8d.; gross income £355. Patron, in 1835, Lord Holland. The church exhibits a mixture of the later and decorated English style of architecture, with a tower in the centre. The Wesleyan Methodists, Baptists, and Society of Friends, have places of worship here. Near the town is an hospital, founded in 1690 by John Cross, for twelve poor men, a reader, and four poor women, who must be all unmarried; the salary of the reader is £15 per annum; of the others, £10. The vice-chancellor of the university, and the bishop of Oxford, are the visitors. There is a charity school for 10 boys and 14 girls, endowed, in 1691, with lands, now producing £30 per annum; and an endowment of £5 per annum, given, in 1740, for instructing 16 poor children. There are also a British school attended by about 300 children; several infant schools; and two day and boarding schools. Other charities connected with this parish produce upwards of £130 yearly. Most of the inhabitants are employed in agriculture; but there is some trade, an extensive brewery, and a large establishment for breeding rabbits for the London market. The market, principally for corn, is held on Thursday; and cattle-fairs are held on the 4th of May and 30th of November. Ampthill is under the jurisdiction of the magistrates of the county, who hold petty sessions here for the Ampthill division of the county, and the lord-high-steward holds a court for the honour of Ampthill, at which constables and other officers are appointed. The Ampthill poor-law union embraces a district of 59 square miles, containing a population returned, in 1831, at 14,357. The average expenditure on the poor of this district during the three years preceeding the union, was £14,607. Expenditure in 1838, £5,959. In the reign of Henry VI. a castle was built on the manor of Ampthill by Sir John Cornwall, afterwards Lord Fanhope. Catharine of Arragon resided here during the process instituted against her by Henry VIII., and here received the summons to attend the commissioners at Dunstable, which she refused to obey. A column, erected in 1770 by the earl of Ossory, then proprietor of Ampthill park, commemorates the circumstance. The inscription is from the pen of Horace Walpole, earl of Orford. The estate of Ampthill park was constituted a royal domain by Henry VIII., who named the annexed estates the 'Honour of Ampthill.' The park, to which that of Houghton is now united, is spacious, and is ornamented with a large number of ancient oaks. It is the seat of Lord Holland. The present mansion stands on lower ground than the old castle, and is a magnificent edifice, containing a fine collection of paintings. At the entrance to the park from the town is the celebrated pear-tree under which Sir Philip Sydney is said to have written part of his Arcadia. Pop., in 1801, 1,234; in 1831,

1,688. Houses 332. Acres 1,928. A. P. £4,579. Poor rates, in 1837, £400.

AMPTON, a parish in the hund. of Thedwestrey, union of Thingoe, Suffolk; 4 miles north from Bury St Edmund's; on the post-road to Thetford. Living, a discharged rectory, formerly in the archd. of Sudbury and dio. of Norwich, now in the diocese of Ely; rated at £5 2s. 1d., and in the parliamentary returns at £121 12s. 6d.; gross income £175. Patron, in 1835, Lord Calthorpe. There is an hospital here for the maintenance and education, during seven years, of six boys, supported by lands, bequeathed in 1692 by James Calthorpe; yearly income £415. It is now connected with a daily school. An infant-school was begun here in 1825. There is also an almshouse for four poor women, erected and endowed with £25 a-year by a female member of the Calthorpe family, in 1693. In this parish there is a fine seat, called Ampton-hall, the property of Lord Calthorpe. Pop., in 1801, 75; in 1831, 110. Houses 23. Acres £870. A. P. £845. Poor rates, in 1837, £55.

AMROTH, or AMBROTH, a parish in the hund. and union of Narberth, county of Pembroke, South Wales; 7 miles south-east of Narberth; on the coast of Caermarthen bay. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. and dio. of St David's; rated at £3 18s. 6d., in the parliamentary returns at £81 3s.; gross income £120. Patron, in 1835, Charles Callen. David Rees, in 1789, bequeathed £5 per annum to the poor, and £15 per annum for the education of children in this parish. Pop., in 1801, 684; in 1831, 636. Houses 129. A. P. £1,877. Poor rates, in 1837, £302.

AMSTEY. See ANSTEY, Hertford.

AMWELL (GREAT), a parish in the union of Ware, hund. and county of Hertford; 1½ mile south-east by south from Ware. The name is supposed to be derived from Emma's well, a fountain which forms one of the sources of the New river. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Middlesex and dio. of London; rated at £6, and in the parliamentary returns at £138; gross income £208. Patron, in 1835, R. C. Elwes, Esq. The church stands on an eminence, the picturesque beauty of which has been celebrated by the poet Scott of Amwell. There is a daily female school in this parish; and two boarding schools. Charities to the poor of this parish produce about £20 yearly. On an islet formed by the New river, stands a monument, erected by Mr Milne the architect, to the memory of Sir Hugh Middleton, who impoverished himself by the formation of that work, to which London owes a large supply of water. This artificial river is 36 miles in length, having 43 sluices and 218 bridges. It was begun in 1606, and completed in six years. In the church, the poet Warner, author of 'Albion's England,' lies interred. Pop., in 1801, 772; in 1831, 1,321. Houses 265. Acres 2,510. A. P. £5,061. Poor rates, in 1837, £634.

AMWELL (LITTLE), a liberty in the parish of All Saints, union, hund., and county of Hertford; 1½ mile south-east by south from Ware. Pop., in 1801, 403; in 1831, 368. Houses 68. Acres 480. A. P. £1,465. Poor rates, in 1837, £128.

ANCASTER, a parish in the wapentake of Loveden, parts of Kesteven, union of Grantham, county of Lincoln; 6 miles north-east of Grantham; and including the townships of West Willoughby and Sudbrook. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Lincoln; rated at £6 13s. 4d., in the parliamentary returns at £128; gross income £151. Patron, in 1835, the Rev. J. Jowett. The church has a tower and spire, and displays a mixture of styles of architecture. There are two small daily schools here. Ancaster formerly gave the title of duke to the head of the family of Bertie, but this title is extinct. By some antiquaries this place is regarded as the Causennæ of Antoninus. Others identify it with the Roman Crocolana.—Pop., in 1801, 336; in 1831, 491. Houses 88. Acres 2,800. A. P. £2,866. Poor rates, in 1837, £216.

ANCHOLME (THE), a river of Lincolnshire, rising near Fillingham, flowing past Brigg, and falling into the Humber. It is now navigable from Brigg to the Humber.

ANCLIFF, a small hamlet in the parish of Wigan, co.-palatine of Lancaster; 2 miles from Wigan. There is a curious well here called the Burning well, from the surface of which rises a vapour, which will take fire on the application of a light, and burn for some hours if not disturbed.

ANCROFT, a parochial chapelry to the vicarage of Holy Island, union of Berwick-on-Tweed, in that detached portion of the county of Durham which lies on the border of Scotland. It is 6 miles south of Berwick, and 10 north of Belford.—Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. and dio. of Durham; gross income £133. Patron, in 1835, the dean and chapter of Durham. The church is an ancient edifice with a square tower, in which a large ash tree grows, which gives a singular appearance to the building. There are a daily and Sunday National school here, attended by above 100 children; also 4 daily schools. Pop., in 1801, 1,144; in 1831, 1,384. Houses 252. Acres 9,570. A. P. £11,786. Poor rates, in 1837, £678.

ANDERBEY. See ANDERBY, Yorkshire.

ANDERBY, a parish in the marsh division of the hund. of Calceworth, parts of Lindsey, union of Spilsby, Lincolnshire.—Living, a discharged rectory united in 1733 to Cumberworth, in the archd. and dio. of Lincoln; rated at £13 2s. 10½d.; gross income £548. The patronage belongs to Magdalene college, Cambridge. The great and small tithes were commuted in 1805. There are a small daily and a Sunday school here. Pop., in 1801, 167; in 1831, 217. Houses 40. Acres 1,080. A. P. £1,587. Poor rates, in 1837, £136.—The village of Anderby is about 5 miles east of Alford, and within a mile of the coast. It is situated on a stream, the mouth of which forms a small harbour, which is connected by a canal with Alford. This canal was executed in 1828, under an act of the 7^o Geo. IV., at an expense of £37,000.

ANDERSFIELD HUNDRED, in the Fauntun division of Somersetshire, is bounded on the north by the hundred of North Petherton; on the north-east by that of Whitley; on the south and south-east by North Curry; and on the west by Taunton and West Monkton hundreds. Pop., in 1831, 2,764. Houses 501. Acres 10,950.

ANDERSON, or ANDERSTONE-WINTERBORNE, a parish in the hund. of Coombs-ditch, division and union of Blandford, Dorset; 7 miles south-west of Blandford. Living, a discharged rectory, a peculiar of the dean of Salisbury; formerly in the archd. of Dorset, dio. of Bristol, now in the dio. of Salisbury; rated at £6 19s. 1d.; gross income £150. Patron, in 1835, D. B. Tregonwell, Esq. Pop., in 1801, 97; in 1831, 54. Houses 7. Acres 750. A. P. £1,323. Poor rates, in 1837, £54.—This parish is intersected by a branch of the Stour.

ANDERTON, a township in the parish of Great Budworth, co.-palatine of Chester; 2 miles north-west of Northwich. It is intersected by the Grand Trunk canal; and is about 1½ mile to the west of the railroad to Birmingham. Pop., in 1801, 191; in 1831, 327. Houses 53. Acres 490. A. P. £2,537. Poor rates, in 1837, £388.

ANDERTON, a township in the parish of Standish, union of Chorley, co.-palatine of Lancaster; 7½ miles north-west of Bolton, on the post-road to Chorley. Pop., in 1801, 354; in 1831, 343. Houses 57. Acres 1,110. A. P. £2,320. Poor rates, in 1837, £154.—It is intersected by the Bolton railroad.

ANDOVER, a subdivision in the Northern division of Hampshire. It is bounded on the north by Wiltshire, and Kingsclere division; on the east by Kingsclere and Winchester divisions; on the south by Winchester and Romsey divisions; and on the west by Wiltshire. Pop., in 1831, 27,465. Houses 5,283. Acres 130,210.

ANDOVER HUNDRED, in the above subdivision, is bounded on the north by the hundred of Pastrow; on the east by the hundreds of Wherwell and Evingar; on the south by that of Thorngate; and on the west by the hundred of Thorngate, and the county of Wilts. Pop., in 1831, 9,454. Houses 1,787. Acres 33,820.

ANDOVER,

Or ANDEVOR, a borough, market-town, and parish, in the division and union of Andover, county of Southampton; 25 miles north by west from Southampton, 12 north-west of Winchester, and 63 south-west of London.

The parish contains 7,670 acres, and is upwards of 22 miles in circumference; but within this circuit is also comprised the parish of Knight's Enham, containing 2,490 acres, and entirely surrounded by the liberties of Andover. See KNIGHT'S ENHAM. The parish comprises six tithings, Alderman-le-Grand, Winchester-street, Priory, Charlton, Hatherden, and Enham Regis, forming together what is called the In-hundred of Andover. Knight's Enham, Foxcote, and ten other adjacent tithings, form the Out-hundred. Of the six tithings of the parish or In-hundred, Alderman-le-Grand, Winchester-street and Priory tithings are peculiarly styled 'The Borough,' while Charlton, Hatherden, and Enham Regis are known by the name of the Out In-Hundred.—Living, a vicarage, with the chapelry of Foxcote annexed, in the archd. and dio. of Winchester; rated at £17 4s. 3½d.; gross income, in 1832, £445; in the patronage of Winchester college. The church existed in the time of William the Conqueror. It is a Gothic building, consisting of a nave, side-aisles, and chancel, with a transept on the north, and a low tower rising from the centre; at the west end is a fine arched door-way. The Baptists, Independents, Wesleyan Methodists, and Society of Friends, have places of worship here. East-street Independent church was formed about two centuries ago.—The grammar-school was founded and endowed, in 1569, by John Hanson, Esq. The salary of the master is £20 per annum. It is under the management of the corporation, and attended by about 20 children. There is also a school for the education of 20 poor children, which John Pollen, Esq., endowed in 1718 with £10 per annum. There are also here a National school, in which above 250 children are educated; a British school, with about 460 children; 3 boarding-schools, 4 infant-schools, and several small daily schools. Mr. Pollen also founded an hospital for eight poor men. There are eight alms-houses for poor women; and other charities connected with Andover amount to £101 15s. per annum.—The Andover poor-law union embraces a district of 119 square miles, containing a population, returned in 1831, at 16,481. The average expenditure for the relief of the poor of this district, during the three years preceding the union, was £12,715. Expenditure, in 1838, £9,177. The amount of assessed taxes, in 1831, was £1,930.

The town of Andover is compactly built, and extends on either side about a third of a mile from the market-place. It stands on the eastern bank of the small river Ande, and is in a thriving condition. Its principal support is derived from its being a place of considerable thoroughfare, and also the only market for the surrounding country to a distance of 7 miles. There is a small silk manufactory in the town. Saturday is the market-day. Fairs are held on the Friday and Saturday after Mid-Lent, for cheese, horses, and leather; on 13th May for leather and millinery goods; and on the 17th and 18th of Nov. for sheep, horses, leather, and cheese. There is a considerable trade in corn, malt, and timber, which has been much improved since the canal through Stockbridge and Romsey to Redbridge on Southampton water was opened. The town is also considerably benefitted by the vicinity of WEYHILL (which see), where an annual fair of six days is held at Michaelmas. In the reign of Edward I. this town sent representatives to parliament; but from the first of Edward II. to the 27th of Elizabeth, no return was made. The right was resumed, however, in the latter year, and two members have been returned ever since; but the tithing of Foxcote, and the parish of Enham-Knight's, are now united with Andover, for the purpose of parliamentary representation. The right of election was at one time possessed by the inhabitants at large; but in 1689 it was limited by parliament to the bailiff-corporation, which, at the passing of the Reform bill, consisted of only 24 persons. The town was incorporated under King John; but the charter, under which it was governed before the recent municipal reforms, was granted in the 41st of Elizabeth. The number of voters registered, in 1837, was 257. The old corporation consisted of a bailiff, a high steward, a deputy-steward who was also town-clerk, a town-clerk, 10 approved men, and 12 capital burgesses, and other officers. By the New Municipal act, it consists of a bailiff, or mayor, 4 aldermen, and 12 councillors. A commission of the peace has been granted to Andover, and a court of quarter-sessions, and recorder. The limits of the borough are co-extensive with the parish; both are under the jurisdiction of the same magistrates, and have their affairs administered by the same officers. Petty-sessions for the neighbouring district are held here every Saturday, at which the bailiff presides; and courts leet at Easter and Michaelmas. A court of record, formerly held here, has fallen into desuetude. The average revenue of the borough, previous to 1835, was £385; in 1837 it amounted to £904, of which £625 was raised by borough-rates. The annual value of the corporation property is about £300. Andover claims exemption from the county-rates. Pop. in 1801, 3,304; in 1831, 4,843. Houses 923. Acres 8,290. A. P. £8,975. Poor rates of the borough, in 1837, £2,217.—The Earl of Suffolk takes the title of Viscount from Andover.—Charlton, the only village in the parish, is about a mile north-west of the town.

ANDOVERSFORD, a post-town in the parish of Dodeswell, Gloucester; 97 miles from London. Pop. returned with the parish. The Cheltenham, Oxford, and London union railway here crosses the road from Cheltenham to Oxford, and the proposed Ireland and London junction railway passes 2 chains to the left. Petty-sessions are held here for the district of Andoversford.

ANDREAS, a parish in the Isle of Man; 3 miles north-west of Ramsay. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Man and dio. of Sodor and Man; gross income £1,000. Patron, in 1835, the Crown. The church, formerly the most ancient in the island, has been demolished, and another erected. Pop., in 1821, 2,229; in 1831, 2,217. Houses 395.

ANDREW (St.), a parish in the hund. of Dinas-Powis, union of Cardiff, Glamorganshire, South Wales; 5 miles south-west of Cardiff. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Llandaff; rated at £14 13s. 1½d.; gross income £400. Patron, the Crown. There is a small daily school here. The village is called Dinas-Powis, and stands on a small river. The remains of the castle of Dinas-Powis are still to be seen. Pop., in 1801, 420; in 1831, 474. Houses 102. A. P. £2,806. Poor rates, in 1837, £267.

ANDREW (St.), ILKETSHALL, a parish in the hund. and union of Wangford, Suffolk; 3 miles south-east of Bungay. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Suffolk and dio. of Norwich; rated at £5 13s. 6d., and in the parliamentary returns at £140; gross income £400. Patron, the Crown. The town-estate yields a yearly income of £21 10s., applied to the repair of the church and other public expenses of the parish. Pop., in 1801, 368; in 1831, 512. Houses 102. A. P. £1,631. Poor rates, in 1837, £413.

ANDREW'S (St.) MINOR, a parish in the hund. of Ogmere, Glamorganshire, South Wales. The church is in ruins, and the living is a sinecure rectory of the returned value of £5, charged on the estate of Clemenston. Pop., in 1801, 8; in 1831, 16.

ANDREW (St.), a parish in the island of Guernsey. Pop., in 1831, 1,011. Houses 169.

ANDREW (St.) There are parishes of this name in the town of Plymouth, in the cities of Canterbury, Norwich, Wells, Chichester, York, and Middlesex, in the town of Pershore, and in the boroughs of Droitwich, Cambridge, and Hertford.

ANGERSLEIGH, or LEIGH MILITIS, a parish in the hund. of Taunton and Taunton-Dean, union of Taunton, Somersetshire; 4 miles south-west of Taunton. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. of Taunton and dio. of Bath and Wells; rated at £4 19s. 4½d., and in the parliamentary returns at £80; gross income £121. Patron, in 1835, — Mattock, Esq. Pop., in 1801, 62; in 1831, 54. A. P. £817. Poor rates, none.

ANGERTON (Hill), a township in the parish of Hartburn, union of Morpeth, Northumberland; 3½ miles west of Morpeth, at the junction of the Hartburn and Wansbeck. Pop., in 1801, 111; in 1831, 64. Houses 12. Poor rates, in 1837, £39.

ANGERTON (Low), a township in the same parish, union and county; 4 miles west of Morpeth. Pop., in 1801, 88; in 1831, 55. Houses 11. Poor rates, in 1837, £82.

ANGLE, or NANGLE, a parish and village in the hund. of Castle-Martin, union and county of Pembroke, South Wales. It lies on the right of the entrance to Milford haven; and the village is so called from being, as it were, in angulo, in a nook. The living is in the archd. and dio. of St. David's, and consists of a sinecure rectory; rated at £10 10s.; gross income £157; in the patronage of the Crown; and a discharged vicarage, rated at £3 19s. 2d.; gross income £72; in the patronage of the bishop of St. David's. There is a National school here with about 60, and a daily school with 50 scholars. Pop., in 1801, 328; in 1831, 458. Houses 76. A. P. £2,219. Poor rates, in 1837, £305.—The village is large, and bears marks of having been a place of more importance in former ages.

ANGLESEY, in the parish of Bassingbourn, county of Cambridge. Henry I. founded here a priory of Black canons. It was valued, 26th Henry VIII., at £124 19s. per annum; about which time there were eleven canons in the monastery, the site whereof, and part of the lands, was granted to John Hynde. Lysons says that there are some remains of this priory still to be traced in an old mansion-house.

ANGLESEY, an island and county of North Wales, lying in the Irish sea, and separated from Caernarvonshire by a narrow strait called Menai, from a half to three quarters of a mile broad. In general form it is triangular; but the shores are irregular, being indented with numerous small bays and creeks. In length it extends about 20 miles from north-west to south-east; its breadth is about 17 miles; and its superficial area is estimated at 402 square miles, or 173,440 acres. This county was originally divided into three cantrefs; but since the junction with England, the division into hundreds has been adopted. These are six in number, Llyfyn, Maltraeth, Menai, Talybolion, Twerceilyn, and Tyn-daeithway. These are subdivided into 73 parishes. The population in 1700 was 22,800; in 1801, 33,806; in 1811, 37,045; in 1821, 45,063; and in 1831, 48,325; the increase, in 1811, having been at the rate of 10 per cent; in 1821, 21 per cent; and in 1831, 7 per cent. The number of inhabited houses, in 1831, was 9,683; of families, 10,128, of which 5,314 were chiefly employed in agriculture, and 2,141 in trade, manufacture, and handicraft. The annual value of assessed property, in 1815, was £92,581. The county-rates, in 1792, amounted to £101; in 1832, to £1,505; in 1834, to £1,986. The amount of poor rates, levied in 1803, was £6,167; in 1827, £15,285; in 1837, £18,270. The number of criminal offenders, convicted in 1834, was 4; in 1836, 14; and in 1837, 6. The towns are Beaumaris, a seaport and borough, with the market-towns of Llan-gfni, Newborough, Llanerchymedd, Holyhead, Aberfraw, and Amlwch. There are several ports, as Beaumaris, Amlwch, Cemalyn, Dulas, Red Wharf, Maltraeth, and Holyhead.—The county returns one member to parliament, who is polled for at Beaumaris, Holyhead, and Llangefni.

Anglesey forms an archdeaconry, and is in the diocese of Bangor, and circuit of North Wales. The number of daily schools in the county, in 1831, was 74, attended by 3,303 children; of Sunday schools, 149, attended by 15,228. Of these: 8 daily schools, with 295 children, and 113 Sunday schools, with 11,615 children, belong to Dissenters. In 1838, there were 31 Sunday and daily schools in connection with the National school society, attended by 2,215 children, in this county. The climate of Anglesey is mild, but the vicinity of the sea renders it liable to fogs in autumn, when intermittent fevers are not uncommon. The general aspect of the country is uninteresting; it does not, like the other parts of Wales, possess any lofty mountains or deep valleys; it is not even much diversified with hill and dale. The greater part of the land is uninclosed, and the inclosures which exist have seldom quick-set hedges; the scarcity of fuel, besides, has caused all the wood in the interior to disappear, so that the country has rather a dreary aspect. The only exception to this is the shore of the Menai strait, which is picturesque, and well-wooded. A number of small streams descend from the higher grounds, the most important of which are the Cefni, Alau, Fraw, and Dulas. The land, in an agricultural point of view, is in general good. There are three kinds of soil: one a sandy loam; the second a stiff reddish earth; and the third, a black soil productive of good turf. Turf is much used by the labouring classes for fuel. The tillage and pasture are, for the most part, under good management; and have, of late years, made considerable progress. About twenty years ago, it was common to take five white crops in succession, most of which were so poor as hardly to pay expenses; this system, however, is now gradually improving. The products are corn and black cattle; of the former—chiefly barley, rye, and oats—large quantities are sent to Liverpool. Anglesey has long been celebrated for its black cattle, which are much prized for their flavour and tenderness. About 160 years ago, 4,000 head were annually sent to the English markets; 40 years since, the number had increased to 15,000; the average number sent across the Menai bridge in the three years ending with 1833, was 5,861. In this, however, were included about 500 Irish cattle landed at Holyhead. There is a considerable trade in butter, cheese, hides, tallow, wax, and honey; but there are scarcely any manufactures except that of weaving the woollen yarn produced by domestic industry, in which occupation about 120 males were employed in 1831. The most important productions of the island, next to the agricultural, are minerals. The rich copper and lead veins in the Parys mountain have been a source of increasing wealth and prosperity to the island, giving employment to a large number of miners. For an account of this mine, see article AMLWCH. Little coal is wrought, so that fuel is dear, and the expense of working the mines considerable. A sort of green marble is found resembling the verde antica of the ancients. Besides lead and copper, silver, calamine, sulphur, zinc, and alum, are among the mineral productions. In addition to the above-mentioned sources of occupation, many persons are employed in fisheries on the coast, and in catching wild fowl. The herring-fishery is lucrative, though uncertain: among other fishes, the cod, turbot, sole, plaice, and whiting, are abundant. Many plants, considered rare by botanists, are found in Anglesey. Anglesey lies on the great line of communication between London and Dublin. The packets for the latter place start from Holyhead. The ferry over the Menai strait was often found to be a serious impediment to travellers; and in 1820, plans for the amelioration of the communication were proposed to a parliamentary committee, and resulted in the erection of a magnificent suspension-bridge over the strait at Bangor-ferry, and a new line of road from thence to Holyhead. For a further account of this bridge, see article MENAI.

The following measures and weights are in use in Anglesey: the erw, or true acre, containing 4,320 square yards; the stang, or customary acre, containing 3,240 square yards; the llath, containing 30 perches of 13½ feet square, and 5½ lathen making a stang; the stored = 2 bushels; the hobod = 4 bushels; the yard = 40 inches.

The ancient name of this island was Ynys Fon, or Mon, signifying remote, from, which the Romans gave it the name of Mona. Its present name was given by the Saxons, and signifies the Englishman's island. Lambard says: "Some, as Polydore, will have Mona, or Monia, to be the Isle of Man, which others call Menania, or Eubonia, reputing Monia to be that which at this day is called Anglesey, amongst whom is Lelande. Of whose opinion I am for two causes, thone for that it continueth the name of Mon to this day in the Brytische or Welshe speche, as by their common proverbe, expressing the fruitfulness therof, may appeare, Terr non mam Kymbry, i. e. Anglesey is the mother or nurse of Wales. Thother, for that Sylvester Gyraldus, in his booke called Itinerarium Wallie, sayeth, that Caerarvon is soe called bycause it is a cytie standinge over-against Mon. This Gyraldus was a Welshman, learned in the antiquities of his countrey, and lived in the II. tyme, and before. Of the same mynd as is he that wrote 'Additamenta Prosperi Aquit.'"

This is generally believed to have been the chief seat of the Druids; and, so far as we know any thing of the Druids, there is some probability in the supposition, especially considering the number of cromlechs, or altars, which have been found in the island. In A. D. 61, Anglesey was invaded by the Romans under Suetonius Paulinus, who cut down the groves—"sævis superstitionibus sacri," and suppressed the order of Druids. Their complete extirpation, however, was not effected till some years after by Julius Agricola. At this period, says Lambard, it "was to be waded over on foote betwene that and the mayne land, wherby that seamethe the more likely, which Paulus Jovius writethe of it, saying, that it was somtyme part of the continent, and was by rage of sea (like to Scicile) rent therfro, as by a bridge which dothe yet sometyme appeare, dothe seme manifest." Traces of a natural isthmus are still visible at Portaethwy, where a line of rocks juts out nearly across the channel. It is, perhaps, to this that Lambard alludes in the preceding extract. From that period, Anglesey remained under the dominion of the Romans till they withdrew from Britain. A sovereignty was established here in 450 by Caswallon Llawhir, a British prince, who was sent hither to expel invaders. Aberfraw was the royal residence; and Cadwallader, the last king of the Britons, is said to have been a descendant of this family. In the reign of William Rufus, Hugh, earl of Chester, and Hugh, earl of Shrewsbury, are said to have assisted the inhabitants to repel an invasion of Griffith-ap-Conen, prince of Wales; and about the same time the island was invaded by Magnus, king of Norway. From this period it became a part of the kingdom of Wales, and was even regarded as the seat of government, till the final extinction of Welsh independence by Edward I. After the subjugation of the island by Edward I., he built a castle at Beaumaris to intimidate the inhabitants, and fortified the town with a wall. "Ever sythens," says Lambard, "they hav lyved in better quiet." Anglesey was afterwards incorporated with England; and in the reign of Henry VIII. was constituted a county, sending two representatives to parliament. Since that time one member has been returned for the county, and one for the town of Beaumaris: which arrangement—with the addition of certain places to Beaumaris—is still adhered to. The place of nomination for the county-member is Beaumaris; the places of polling, Beaumaris, Holyhead, and Llangefni.

There are some small islands on the coast, but they are generally insignificant. See THE SKERRIES, and PRIESTHOLME. Carnel's point, its north-west extremity, is in N. lat. 53° 24'; W. long. 4° 33'. Anglesey gives the title of marquis to the representative of the Paget family.

ANGLESEYVILLE, a watering-place of modern date, situated near the village of Alverstoke in Hampshire; 2 miles from Gosport. The first stone of this elegant village was laid on the 19th September, 1826, by the marquis of Anglesey. A large hotel, reading-room, with baths; a terrace, crescent, public gardens, and marine villas, have been erected. The situation of the town is elevated, and the surrounding scenery is remarkable for its variety and beauty.

ANGLEZARK, a township in the parish of Bolton-le-Moor, union of Chorley, co.-palatine of Lancaster; 2 miles east of Chorley. There were lead-mines at one time in this neighbourhood, also extensive stone-quarries. Pop., in 1801, 162; in 1831, 168. Houses 32. Acres 2,570. A. P. £975. Poor rates, in 1837, £86.

ANGMERING, a parish in the hund. of Poling, rape of Arundel, county of Sussex; 3 miles east-north-east of Little Hampton. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Chichester; rated at £15 9s. 8d., with the vicarage of West Angmering annexed, rated at £6; gross income £277. It was, in 1835, in the patronage of the family of the late Lord Zouche. Church recently repaired. East and West Angmering formerly formed two parishes. There is a charity school here, founded and endowed with about 33 acres of land, by William Older, in 1679. Sixty poor children are taught in this school, and the yearly income is upwards of £100. Pop., in 1801, 708; in 1831, 928. Houses 179. Acres 3,640. A. P. £4,824. Poor rates, in 1837, £452.

ANGRAM, a township in the parish of Long-Marston, ainsty of the city of York; 4 miles north-east of Tadcaster. Pop., in 1801, included in the return from Hutton-Wandelsby; in 1831, 67. Houses 16. Acres 470. Poor rates, in 1837, £42.

ANGRAM-GRANGE, a township in the parish of Coxwold, union of Easingwold, north riding of Yorkshire; 5 miles north of Easingwold. Pop., in 1801, 22; in 1831, 28. Houses 4. Acres 380. There are no poor in this parish.

ANICK, a township in the parish of St John Lee, Northumberland; 2 miles north-east by east of Hexham. Pop., in 1801, 161; in 1831, 163. Houses 34. Poor rates, in 1837, £13. There is a small daily school here.

ANICK-GRANGE, a township in the same parish. Pop., in 1801, 30; in 1831, 36. Houses 6.

ANKERDEN. See ANCHREDHAM.

ANKER (THE), a stream in Warwickshire, which rises a little to the east of Foleshill, flows north to Nuneaton, and thence north-west, past Atherton and Polesworth, and joins the Tame near Tamworth.

ANKERWYKE, in the parish of Wyrardisbury, county of Buckingham. Tanner says: Sir Gilbert de Montfichet, and Richard his son, built a nunnery of the Benedictine order here, temp. Hen. II., in which, about the time of the dissolution, were maintained five religious. There are no remains of the conventual buildings.

ANLABY, a township, partly in the parish of Hessele, and partly in that of Kirk-Ella, union of Sculcoates, east riding of Yorkshire; 4 miles west of Hull. Pop., in 1801, 226; in 1831, 398. Houses 81. Acres 2,020. A. P. £3,985. Poor rates, in 1837, £216.—There is a daily and Sunday school here.

ANMER, a parish in the hund. of Freebridgelinn, county of Norfolk; 6 miles north-east by east of Castle-Rising, near the Peddar way. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. and dio. of Norwich; rated at £9 0s. 1d.; gross income £222. Patron, in 1835, H. Coldham, Esq. There is a National school here. Pop., in 1801, 125; in 1831, 132. Houses 25. Acres 1,420. A. P. £1,200. Poor rates, in 1837, £23.—The mansion of Houghton-hall is 3 miles east from this village.

ANN-ABBOTS. See ABBOTS-ANN.

ANNE'S (ST), in THE GROVE, or BADER'S CHAPEL, a chapelry in the parish of Halifax, west riding of Yorkshire. Living, a perpetual curacy, of the certified value of £3; gross income £115. Patron, in 1835, the vicar of Halifax. Pop. returned with Halifax.

ANNESLEY, a parish including the township of Felly, in the northern division of the hund. of Brompton, union of Barford, Nottinghamshire; 6½ miles south-south-west of Mansfield; near the line of the Mansfield and Pinxton railway. It lies on the border of Sherwood forest. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. of Nottingham, and formerly in the dio. of York, now in that of Lincoln; rated at £20; gross income £52. Patron, in 1835, J. Musters Esq. The great and small tithes, moduses, &c., the property of the lay-impropriator, were commuted in 1808. The only charity connected with this parish is that of William Booth, founded in 1818, which produces a yearly income of £46 8s. The family of Annesley, sometime earl of Anglesey, took its name from this manor. Pop., in 1801, 392; in 1831, 402. Houses 62. Acres 3,360. A. P. £2,460. Poor rates, in 1837, £220.

ANSLEY, a parish in the Atherstone division of the hund. of Hemlingford, union of Atherstone, county of Warwick; 5 miles west by north from Nuneaton, on the head-source of the Bourne. Living, a discharged vicarage, formerly in the archd. of Coventry and dio. of Lichfield and Coventry, now in the dio. of Worcester; rated at £6 6s. 8d.; in the parliamentary returns at £127 18s.; gross income, in 1832, £134. Patron, in 1835, the Crown. Here is a free school, with a small endowment, now connected with the National society, at which about 50 children are educated. There are an Independent chapel and school here. The yearly income of charities connected with this parish is £47 14s. 8d. There are some vestiges of Ansley castle. The church exhibits some portions in the early Norman style, and has at the west end a square tower of considerable beauty. Pop., in 1801, 544; in 1831, 773. Houses 166. Acres 3,580. A. P. £3,275. Poor rates, in 1837, £317.

ANSLOW, or ANNESLEY (anciently ANSEDELEY), a township in the parish of Rolleston, union of Burton-upon-Trent, county of Stafford; 3½ miles north-west from Burton-on-Trent; near the line of the Grand Trunk canal. Pop., in 1801, 200; in 1831, 302. Houses 60. Acres 1,920. A. P. £1,563. Poor rates, in 1837, £110.

ANSTEY, or AMSTEY, a parish in the hund. of Edwinstree, union of Buntingford, county of Hertford; 3 miles south from Barkway. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Middlesex and dio. of London; rated at £21 13s. 4d.; gross income £517; in the patronage of Christ's college, Cambridge. The great and small tithes, the property of the clerical rector, were commuted in 1827. Charities connected with this parish produce £7 16s. 8d. yearly. There was formerly a castle here upon a high round hill, said to have been erected soon after the conquest, by Eustace, earl of Boulogne. It was demolished in the reign of Henry III., "because it had been a nest of rebels." The church has the form of a cross, with a central tower. It was built out of the ruins of the castle. The Roman road called Ermine-street passes through the village. Pop., in 1801, 387; in 1831, 417. Houses 82. Acres 2,170. A. P. £2,559. Poor rates, in 1837, £202. Dr James Fleetwood, Bishop of Worcester, was rector of this parish.

ANSTEY, a chapelry in the parish of Thurcaston, union of Barrow-upon-Soar, county of Leicester; 4 miles north-west from Leicester. Living annexed to the rectory of Thurcaston. The great and small tithes of the fields of Anstey, the property of the clerical rector, the lay-impropriator, and the vicar, were commuted in 1761. There are here a Wesleyan Methodist chapel; two National schools; and three infant schools. Twelve children from this chapelry are educated in Thurcaston free school. The village stands on the banks of a branch of the Soar. Pop., including the extra-parochial tything of Anstey-pastures, in 1801, 660; in 1831, 850. Houses 169. Acres 1,400. A. P. £3,031. Poor rates, in 1837, £309.

ANSTEY, a parish in the liberty of the city of Coventry, union of Foleshill, Warwickshire; 4½ miles north-east from Coventry. Living, a vicarage, not in charge, formerly in the archd. of Coventry, and

dio. of Lichfield and Coventry, now in the dio. of Worcester; rated in the parliamentary returns at £12 4s.; gross income £79. In the patronage of the Crown. There is a daily school here. In 1719, the Rev. John Million left property for building a school for poor children of Anstey and Shilton. The number of children attending the school is about 40. The Oxford canal passes through this parish; and the Birmingham and Derby Junction railway. Pop., in 1801, 189; in 1831, 268. Houses 57. Acres 990. A. P. £1,708. Poor rates, in 1837, £209.

ANSTEY, or ANSTY, a parish in the hund. o. Hindon, union of Tisbury, Wiltshire; 5 miles south-east from Hindon. Living, a donative curacy, not in charge, in the archd. and dio. of Salisbury; gross income £22. Patron, in 1835, Lord Arundell. The chapel is supposed to be the oldest in the diocese. The hospitalers had a preceptory here, founded in the reign of King John. At the dissolution, its revenues were £81 8s. 5d. Dr Richard Zouch, judge of the court of admiralty in the reign of Charles I., was a native of Anstey. Pop., in 1801, 242; in 1831, 348. Houses 67. Acres 840. A. P. £1,840. Poor rates, in 1837, £134.

ANSTEY (EAST), a hilly parish in the hund. and union of South Molton, county of Devon; 3 miles west from Dulverton. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Barnstaple and dio. of Exeter; rated at £11; gross income £180. Patron, in 1835, Rev. — Loyde. Pop., in 1801, 165; in 1831, 166. Houses 31. Acres 2,170. A. P. £1,209. Poor rates, in 1837, £69.

ANSTEY (WEST), a parish immediately to the north of the above. Living, a discharged vicarage; rated at £10 6s. 8d., and in the parliamentary returns at £135; gross income £133. Patrons, the dean and chapter of Exeter. There is a daily school here. Pop., in 1801, 215; in 1831, 226. Houses 39. Acres 2,820. A. P. £1,454. Poor rates, in 1837, £101.

ANSTEY-PASTURES, an extra-parochial liberty in the western division of the hund. of Goscote, Leicestershire. Pop., in 1831, 19. Houses 2.

ANSTON, a parish and township consisting of North and South Anston, in the southern division of the wapentake of Strafforth and Tickhill, union of Worksop, west riding of Yorkshire; 12 miles south-east of Sheffield. Living, a perpetual curacy, in the archd. and dio. of York; rated at £10, and in the parliamentary returns at £33; gross income £79. Patron, in 1835, the prebendary of the cathedral of York. All tithes of the manors of North Anston and Todwick, the property of the prebend of Laughton and clerical rector, were commuted in 1767. There are a day and a Sunday school here. Pop., in 1801, 625; in 1831, 840. Houses 169. Acres 3,110. A. P. £2,961. Poor rates, in 1837, £262. The Chesterfield canal runs through the township of South Anston.

ANTHONY (ST), IN MENEAGE, a parish in the hund. of Kerrier, union of Kerrier, county of Cornwall; 5½ miles south by west from Falmouth, on the southern shore of the estuary of the Helford. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Cornwall and dio. of Exeter; rated at £4 15s. 10d., and in the parliamentary returns at £50; gross income £101. The patronage belongs to the Crown. There are two daily schools here; one of which is endowed with £14 per annum. Here are two ancient entrenchments, the Great and Little Dinas. "Here," says Tanner, "was a cell of Black monks of Angiers, belonging to Trewardreth priory, and being mentioned in Ger-vase of Canterbury's catalogue, must be as early as Richard the First's time. The rectory here, as part of the possessions of Tywardreth, was granted, 6° Elizabeth, to William and John Killigrew." Pop., in 1801, 261; in 1831, 300. Houses 60. Acres 1,410. A. P. £2,095. Poor rates, in 1837, £130.

ANTHONY (ST), IN ROSELAND, a parish in the western division of the hund. of Powder, union of Truro, county of Cornwall; 8 miles south-west from Treigny, on the southern side of the bay on which St Mawes is situated. Living, a donative curacy, a peculiar of the see of Exeter; valued in the parliamentary returns at £50. Patron, in 1829, the earl of Falmouth. There are two daily schools here. Here was a small priory of two Austin canons, subordinate to Plympton, and, as parcel of the same, granted, 38° Henry VIII., to Thomas Goodwin. Pop., in 1801, 163; in 1831, 144. Houses 30. Acres 710. A. P. £1,050. Poor rates, in 1837, £76.

ANTHONY (ST JACOB), a parish in the southern division of the hund. of East, union of St Germans, county of Cornwall; 4 miles south-east from St Germans; and bounded on the north, east, and south, by the Hamoaze. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Cornwall and dio. of Exeter; rated at £12 17s. 8½d.; gross income £285. Patron, in 1835, the Right Hon. R. P. Carew. Here is an endowed charity school, founded in 1766 by Sir — Carew, for 10 poor children. There are eight other daily schools, an infant school, a National school attended by 130 children, and several Sunday schools. The vicinity of this place to Plymouth and Devonport has made it the residence of many officers and others connected with the navy and dockyards,—a circumstance which has added considerably to the number of its inhabitants. Pop., in 1801, 1,795; in 1831, 3,099. Houses 458. Acres 2,860. A. P. £6,361. Poor rates, in 1837, £740.

ANTHORN, a township in the parish of Bowness, Cumberland; on the north bank of the estuary of the Wampool. Pop., in 1801, 170; in 1831, 230. Houses 39. A. P. £631. There are two daily schools here.

ANTINGHAM, a parish in the hund. of North Erpingham, union of Erpingham, Norfolk; 3 miles south-west from North Walsham. Livings, the rectories of St Mary and St Margaret, the latter being united with North Walsham, in the archd. of Norfolk and dio. of Norwich; rated at £6 3s. 1½d., and £5 6s. 8d.; gross income of St Mary's, £304. Patrons, in 1835, Lord Suffield, and — Windham, Esq. Part of the tower of St Margaret's church alone remains. There is a daily school here attended by about 120 children, and chiefly supported by Lord Suffield. Pop., in 1801, 201; in 1831, 248. Houses 50. Acres 1,530. A. P. £1,417. Poor rates, in 1837, £160.

ANTON (THE), a stream in Hampshire, rising near Overton, and, after being joined by the Test, falling into the north-west extremity of Southampton water. The Andover canal runs parallel with it from Andover to its mouth.

ANTROBUS, a township in the parish of Great Budworth, co.-palatine of Chester; 5 miles north-north-west from Northwich. Pop., in 1801, 351; in 1831, 476. Houses 91. Acres 2,560. A. P. £2,988. Poor rates, in 1837, £230. There is a daily school here.

ANWICK, a parish in the wapentake of Flaxwell, parts of Kesteven, union of Sleaford, Lincolnshire; 5 miles east-north-east from Sleaford. Living, a discharged vicarage united to Branswell, in the archd. and dio. of Lincoln; rated at £5 3s. 1½d. Patron, in 1835, the marquis of Bristol. There is a small daily school here. The Northern and Eastern railway intersects this parish. Pop., in 1801, 209; in 1831, 235. Houses 51. Acres 1,820. A. P. £2,084. Poor rates, in 1837, £92.

APETHORPE, a chapelry in the parish of Nasington, union of Oundle, Northamptonshire; 4 miles north-west from Wandsford; on a branch of the Nen. Living, a perpetual curacy in the dio. of Lincoln, and exempt from the jurisdiction of the archdeaconry; rated in the parliamentary returns at £45; gross income £61; in the patronage of the prebendary of the cathedral of Lincoln. Pop., in 1801, 231; in 1831, 297. Houses 40. Acres 2,630. A. P. £2,312. Poor rates, in 1837, £67.

APESTHORPE. See APPLESTHORPE.

APETON, a township in the parish of Gnosall, county of Stafford. Pop., in 1821, 59.

APEWOOD. See ARBOT'S-CASTLE.

APLEY, a parish in the wapentake of Wraggoc, parts of Lindsey, union and county of Lincoln; 2 miles south-west from Wragby. Living, a perpetual curacy not in charge, in the archd. and dio. of Lincoln; rated at £6; gross income £20. Patron, in 1835, T. T. Drake, Esq. Pop., in 1801, 121; in 1831, 152. Houses 30. Acres 1,240. A. P. £2,041. Poor rates, in 1837, £98.

APPERLEY, a hamlet in the parish of Deerhurst, Gloucestershire; 4 miles south-west from Tewkesbury; near the Severn. Pop., including Whitfield, in 1831, 401.

APPERLEY BRIDGE, a township in the parish of Calverley; 3 miles north from Bradford, on the line of the Leeds and Bradford railway. There is here a large establishment for educating the sons of Methodist ministers. It was founded in 1812.

APPLEBY, a parish in the northern division of the wapentake of Manley, parts of Lindsey, union of Glandford-Brigg, Lincolnshire; 6 miles north-west from Glandford-Brigg. It stands on the western bank of the river Ancholme, which has been made navigable to the Humber. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Stow and dio. of Lincoln; rated at £10 4s.; gross income £150. Patron, in 1835, Charles Winn, Esq. All tithes, &c. of East Santon, in this parish, the property of the lord of the manor and the vicar, were commuted in 1825. There are three daily schools here and a Sunday school. The Roman road from Stamford to Lincoln passes through the village; it is in some places seven yards broad, and cast up to a great height. Pop., in 1801, 394; in 1831, 517. Houses 91. Acres 5,180. A. P. £3,897. Poor rates, in 1837, £227.

APPLEBY (GREAT AND LITTLE), a parish partly in the hund. of Repton and Gressley, union of Ashby-de-la-Zouch, in the county of Derby, and partly and chiefly in that of Sparkenhoe, in the county of Leicester. The village connects the four counties of Leicester, Derby, Stafford, and Warwick; 5 miles south-south-west from Ashby-de-la-Zouch. Living, a rectory, formerly in the archd. of Leicester and dio. of Lincoln, now in the dio. of Peterborough; rated at £20 9s. 4½d.; gross income £800. Patron, in 1835, E. Dawson, Esq. Tithes, the property of the clerical rector, were commuted in 1771. There is a free grammar-school here, founded in 1697 by Sir John Moore, lord-mayor of London; and attended, in 1833, by 34 boys. There are also two day and Sunday schools in this parish. Pop., in 1801, 935; in 1831, 1,150. Houses 232. Acres 2,020. A. P., £4,756. Poor rates, in 1837, £501.

APPLEBY, a borough, market-town, and parish in East ward, union of East ward, Westmoreland. It stands on a branch of the river Eden; 13 miles south-east of Penrith; and 7 north-west of Brough; and is supposed by antiquaries to occupy the site of the Roman station Aballaba. The town consists of one broad street, intersected by three smaller, situated on the slope of a hill, and terminated at the upper end by the castle, and at the lower by the church of St Lawrence. The suburb of Bondgate, sometimes called Old Appleby, is on the other or eastern side of the river, and is connected with the town by an ancient stone bridge of two arches. The town is well-lighted, and the supply of water is good; it is irregularly built, but many of the houses are respectable. The town-hall is a large ancient building in the principal street. The ancient cloisters, or market-houses, were pulled down in 1811, and a handsome Gothic edifice, after a design by Smirke, erected in their stead. The shire-hall, erected in Bondgate in 1771, adjoins the gaol, which is an irregular mass of buildings, ill-arranged, and insecure. The castle stands on a steep and richly wooded eminence, rising from the river. It is chiefly of early Norman, if not of Saxon origin; and is said to be built on the site of a Roman fortress, of which only a small portion, called Caesar's tower, now remains. It suffered much in the wars with Scotland, particularly in the reigns of Richard II. and Henry IV. The greater part of it was rebuilt by Lord Clifford, in the reign of Henry VI. The earl of Thanet is now proprietor of this castle, and it is occupied by his steward. From time immemorial, the judges travelling the northern circuit have resided here, and been entertained at the expense of the proprietor.

The town of Appleby lies within the parishes of St Lawrence and St Michael. The parish of St Lawrence comprises the townships of Appleby, Burral, Colby, Drybeck, Hoff and Row, and Scalergate. Pop., in 1831, 1,459. The parish of St Michael, sometimes called Bondgate, comprises the townships of Bondgate and Langton, Crackenthorpe, Hilton, and Murton. Pop. 1,264. Both these livings are vicarages, in the archd. and dio. of Carlisle. That of St Lawrence is rated at £9 5s. 2½d.; and the gross income at £352. It is in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Carlisle. The living of St Michael, in Bondgate, is rated at £20 13s. 9d.; gross income, in 1832, £181. Patron, the bishop of Carlisle. The great and small tithes, the property of the dean of Carlisle and the vicar, were commuted in 1772. The vicarial tithes, &c., of the townships of Hoff and Hoff Row, in the parish of St Lawrence, were commuted in 1823. The church of St Lawrence is partly in the decorated and partly in the later style of English architecture. It was in a great measure built by the celebrated Anne, countess of Pembroke, who lies interred in it, and to whom, and to her mother, the countess of Cumberland, there are marble monuments. The Wesleyan Methodists have a chapel here, founded in 1823. There are in all seven daily and two Sunday schools in this parish. There is a free grammar-school in Appleby, in the parish of St Lawrence, which existed long previous to the dissolution of the religious houses. It was founded by the burghers, and afterwards incorporated by letters patent, in 1574, when ten governors were appointed, with the right of a corporate body. The endowment amounts to £216 per annum; the number of scholars in 1833 was 50, of whom only 6 were on the foundation. The children of the town are instructed on payment of 2s. 6d. per quarter to the master. It possesses five scholarships of £8 per annum, founded at Queen's college, Oxford, by Thomas, earl of Thanet, in 1720; and is entitled to send candidates for the five exhibitions of £60 per annum in the same college, founded by Lady Elizabeth Hastings. In this school was educated Bedal, bishop of Kilmore; Barlow, bishop of Lincoln; Addison, dean of Lichfield; and Dr John Langhorne, and his brother William, the translators of Plutarch. —St Anne's hospital, for thirteen aged widows, was founded and endowed in 1654 by Anne, countess of Pembroke. Its revenue, in 1823, was £511 12s. 6d.; the earl of Thanet, as heir of the countess, is patron. The building is quadrangular, comprising a chapel and thirteen distinct habitations. The same lady left lands, now producing £70 a-year, at Temple-Sowerby, in this parish, together with £52 14s. 9d., the annual produce of money in the public funds, for the purpose of keeping the church, school-house, town-hall, and bridge in repair.—Other charities connected with this borough, produce £59 4s. 10d. per annum. "Here," says Tanner, "was a small hospital dedicated to St Nicholas, which was given by John de Veteripont to the abbey of Shapp; this donation was confirmed by Walter, bishop of Carlisle, upon condition that they should maintain here three lepers for ever. It was granted 36° Henry VIII., to Thomas, Lord Wharton. In this town was an house of White Friars, said to have been founded by Lord Vessey, Lord Percy, and Lord Clifford, A. D. 1281. After the dissolution it was granted to Christopher Crakenhorpe, 36° Henry VIII." There is also a small endowment, in the hands of the corporation, for apprenticing poor children. There are in all three daily and two Sunday schools in the parish of St Michael.

Appleby was anciently a place of much greater magnitude than at present; old foundations have been discovered at the distance of two miles; and a township, at the distance of about a mile, is still called the Burral, which some antiquaries suppose means here, as at Bath, Borough walls. The origin of the name of Appleby is unknown. It was long a place of considerable importance, having privileges equal to those of the city of York; and continued so from the time of the Romans till 1176, when William, king of Scotland, surprised the castle and destroyed the town. From this calamity it had so far recovered in the succeeding reign, that a court of exchequer was established; but in 1388, it was again devastated and burnt by the Scots; so that it was found necessary in the reign of Philip and Mary, to lower the ancient annual fee-farm rent, due to the Crown, from 20 to 2 marks. It was still further reduced, in 1598, by the plague. The castle, built in 1686, held out for a time against the parliamentary army, under the direction of Anne, countess of Pembroke; but in 1643, it was constrained to yield. The heroic countess, however, lived to witness the restoration, and to take part in the festivities of this royal town on the occasion. Appleby was the birth-place of Thomas de Appleby, bishop of Carlisle; Roger de Appleby, bishop of Ossory; Dr Bambridge, archbishop of York; and Dr Christopher Potter, successively dean of Worcester and of Durham, and provost of Queen's college, Oxford.

A confirmation charter of Shap abbey, quoted by Brompton, makes mention of a sheriff of Applebyshire, from which it is concluded that the town gave name to one of those districts into which Edward the Confessor divided the earldom of Northumberland. The corporation received charters from Henry II., John, and Henry III., all of which were given up to James II.; since which period it has subsisted as a borough by prescription. The corporation consists of a mayor, a recorder, town clerk, twelve aldermen, and sixteen capital burgesses, sword-bearer, sergeant-at-mace, two chamberlains, and two bailiffs. The mayor is a justice of peace, elected annually by the common council-men, and has precedence, by custom, of the judges of assize. Since the time of Edward I., up to its recent disfranchisement by the Reform bill, the borough returned two members to parliament. The right of election was vested in the holders of about 100-burage tenures, all of which were on the property of the earls of Thanet and Lonsdale. It is now the place of nomination for the county-members, and one of the polling-places. The assizes for the summer, and the sessions for the east and west wards, are held in the shire-hall here. There are petty sessions held by the county-magistrates, within the limits of the borough, every Saturday. Upon an average of six years, the yearly income of the incorporation amounts to £360. This chiefly arises from a toll of corn exhibited for sale in the market by non-freemen. The state and prospects of Appleby are said not to be improving. There is no increase of buildings, and the trade is languishing. This is attributed greatly to the tolls.

The market is held on Saturday; and fairs are held on Whitsun eve for horned cattle; on Whit-Monday, for linen cloth, and merchandise; on June 10, for cattle and sheep; and on August 10, for horses, sheep, and linen cloth. There is little trade, and no manufacture of importance. Pop., in 1801, 1,619; in 1831, 2,723. Houses 481. Acres 19,900. A. P. £8,232. Poor rates, in 1837, £929, (the parish of St Lawrence being £490, and St Michael, £430.) There is a penny post to Temple-Sowerby.

APPLEDORE, a hamlet in the parish of Northam, Devonshire, on the coast of Barnstaple bay, at the mouths of the rivers Torridge and Taw; 2½ miles north of Bideford. It is the first harbour within the bar of Barnstaple, to which port it is subordinate. The scenery in the vicinity is pleasing, the beach fine and of great extent, and the accommodation for strangers good, so that it is becoming fashionable as a bathing-place. A chapel of ease has recently been built here, and there is an Independent chapel. In the reign of Alfred the Great, Hubba, the Dane, landed here, but was taken and beheaded on a hill in the neighbourhood. Pop. returned with the parish.

APPLEDORE, a parish and market-town in the hund. of Blackburn, lathe of Scray, union of Tenderden, county of Kent; 6 miles south-east by south from Tenterden; on the road to New Romney. Living, a vicarage, with the chapelry of Ebony annexed, in the archd. and dio. of Canterbury; rated at £21; gross income £213. Patron, the archbishop of Canterbury. There are three daily schools in this parish. The market-day is Tuesday; and fairs are held on the 11th of January, and 4th Monday in June, for cattle and pedlery. The town stands on the river Rother, and was anciently of some maritime importance, till the harbour was destroyed by the French in the reign of Richard II. The royal military canal from Hythe to Rye runs through the town. Pop., in 1801, 384; in 1831, 568. Houses 103. Acres 2,760. A. P. £4,176. Poor rates, in 1837, £509.

APPLEDRAM, a parish in the rape of Chichester, hund. of Box and Stockbridge, union of West Hamnett, Sussex; 2 miles south-west from Chichester. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. and dio. of Chichester; rated at £14, in the parliamentary returns at £39; gross income £34; in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Chichester. The church is built in the early English style of architecture. The village of Appledram is one mile north of the point where the Arundel and Portsmouth canal flows into Chichester harbour. Pop., in 1801, 136; in 1831, 118. Houses 34. Acres 1,070. A. P. £2,354. Poor rates, in 1837, £36.

APPLEDURWELL, or APPULDURCOMBE, that is, 'the pool of the valley,' a hamlet in the parish of Godshill, isle of Wight; 7 miles from Newport. Living, a curacy, not in charge; rated at £4; the chapel is in ruins. "This manor being given," says Tanner, "about the latter end of the reign of Henry III., to the abbey of St Mary de Montisburg in Normandy, by Isabella de Fortibus, it became a cell of Benedictine monks to that monastery, and had the same fate with other alien priories, of having its lands seized during the wars with France, and of being dissolved, 2d Henry V., after which, in 20th Henry VI., it was given to the minorcresses without Aldgate, and confirmed to them, 1st Edward IV." On the site of this priory now stands a very elegant mansion having four regular fronts of the Corinthian order; the grand entrance in the east front being by a spacious hall adorned with eight Ionic columns. It was begun in 1710, by Sir Richard Worsley, who died in 1805, before it was finished. There is a fine collection of paintings and of antiquities here, described in the 'Museum Worsleyanum.' On the summit of the park stands an obelisk of granite, 70 feet high, in memory of Sir Robert.

APPLEFORD, a chapelry to the vicarage of Sutton-Courtney, union of Abingdon, Berks; 3½ miles south-east from Abingdon; bounded on the north by the river Thames. Living, a curacy annexed to Sutton-Courtney. There is a free school here, founded and endowed by Edmund Bradstock, at which 20 poor children are educated, 13 of whom belong to the chapelry of Appleford. Pop., in 1801, 200; in 1831, 179. Houses 35. Acres 760. A. P. £1,398. Poor rates, in 1837, £98.

APPLESHAW, a parish and village; on the road to Andover, in the hund. and division of Andover, Southamptonshire; 3 miles east-south-east from Ludgershall. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Winchester. Patrons, the dean and chapter of Chichester. Fairs, on the 23d of May, the Friday and Saturday before Weyhill fair, and on November 4th and 5th, all for sheep; the last is a great sheep-show. There is here a school, endowed, in 1761, by Frances Offley, with £2 5s. per annum. It is now connected with the National school society. There is also a boarding school. Pop., in 1801, 245; in 1831, 356. Houses 62. Acres 850. A. P. £1,433. Poor rates, in 1837, £120.

APPLESTHORPE, or APESTHORPE, a parochial chapelry in the North clay division of the wapentake of Bassetlaw, Nottinghamshire; immediately adjoining on the east to North Leverton. Living, a vicarage, a peculiar of the dean and chapter of York, in the patronage of the prebendary of Apesthorpe, in York cathedral; rated at £19 11s. 8d., in the parliamentary return at £70. The great and small tithes, moduses, &c. of North Leverton and Applesthorpe, the property of the prebends of North Leverton and Applesthorpe, and the vicar, were commuted in 1795.

APPLETHWAITE, a township in the parish of Windermere, union of Kendal, Westmoreland; 6 miles south-south-east from Ambleside; at the end of a deep and wild ravine. The fisheries on Kentmere belong to the inhabitants, who pay a tithe of the fish to the rector of Windermere. The inhabitants are entitled to the advantages of the charity school in Bowness. Pop., in 1801, including the township of Orresthead, 343; in 1831, 429. Houses 77. A. P. £2,821. Poor rates, in 1837, £238.

APPLETON, a parish and township in the hund. of Ock, union of Abingdon, Berks; 5 miles north-west from Abingdon; bounded by the Thames on the west. Living, a rectory, formerly in the archd. of Berks and dio. of Salisbury, now in the dio. of Oxford; rated at £13 5s. The patronage belongs to the president and fellows of Magdalene college, Oxford. A free school was endowed here, in 1604, by Sir R. Fettiplace. The entire annual income of the charity is £16 6s. 8d. There is another daily school attended by about 20 children. The other charities connected with this parish produce £50 4s. 8d.

per annum. Pop., in 1801, of the parish, which includes the township of Eaton, 341; in 1831, 441. Houses 88. Acres 2,300. A. P. £2,149. Poor rates, in 1837, £245.—Pop. of the township 332. Houses 69.

APPLETON, a township in the parish of Great Budworth, co.-palatine of Chester; 4 miles south-east of Warrington. Pop. with Hull.

APPLETON, a township in the chapelry of Prescott, co.-palatine of Lancaster; 6 miles south-west of Warrington, and 1 north of Runcorn Gap. Pop. with Widnes. There is a Catholic chapel here.

APPLETON, in the hund. of Freebridge Lynn, Norfolk; 3 miles north-north-east of Castle-Rising. Living, a discharged vicarage, formerly in the archd. and dio. of Norwich, now in the dio. of Ely; rated at £8; gross income £8. Patron, in 1835, Sir H. Bedingfield. The church has been desecrated, and the living sequestered.

APPLETON, a township in the parish of Catterick, north-riding of Yorkshire; 2 miles south-west from Catterick. There is a National school here. Pop., in 1801, 95; in 1831, 83. Houses 16. Acres 1,480. A. P. £2,666. Poor rates, in 1837, £79.

APPLETON-LE-MOORS, a township in the parish of Lastingham, north riding of Yorkshire; 6 miles north-west of Pickering; on the Severn, a branch of the Rye. Pop., in 1801, 254; in 1831, 269. Houses 59. Acres 2,570. A. P., £1,063. Poor rates, in 1837, £76.—There is a small daily school here.

APPLETON-NUN, in the parish of Bolton-Percy, lower division of the ainsty of the city of York. A Cistercian nunnery was founded here by Alice de S. Quintino, in the latter part of the reign of Stephen. Its lands and rents were rated, 36th Henry VIII., at £83 5s. 9d.

APPLETON-ROEBUCK, a township in the parish of Bolton-Percy, ainsty of the city of York; 9 miles south-south-west of York, and 1 west of the Great Northern railroad. Pop., in 1801, 406; in 1831, 538. Houses 117. Acres 2,780. A. P. £3,529. Poor rates, in 1837, £287.—There is a day and Sunday school here, attended by about 120 children.

APPLETON-LE-STREET, a parish in the wapentake of Ryedale, union of Malton, north riding of York. It comprises the townships of Amotherby, Appleton-le-Street, Broughton, Hildenley, and Swinton. Living, a vicarage in the archd. of Cleveland and dio. of York; rated at £7 8s. 6thd.; gross income £516. Patron, in 1835, the Rev. J. J. Cleaver. Pop., in 1801, 724; in 1831, 860. Houses 175. Acres 4,780. A. P. £5,644.—The township of the same name is 4 miles west-north-west of New Malton. Pop., in 1801, 151; in 1831, 158. Houses 28. Acres 1,140. A. P. £1,643. Poor rates, in 1837, £78.

APPLETON-UPON-WISK, a parish in the west division of the liberty of Langbaugh, union of North Allerton, north riding of Yorkshire; 7 miles south-south-west of Yarm. Living, a curacy in the archd. of Cleveland and dio. of York; gross income £200. Patron, in 1835, H. Hewgill, Esq. Pop., in 1801, 451; in 1831, 553. Houses 116. Acres 1,800. A. P. £2,427. Poor rates, in 1837, £206.—There are two daily schools here.

APPLETREE, a hamlet in the parish of Aston-le-Walls, union of Banbury, Northamptonshire; 7 miles north-north-east of Banbury. Pop., in 1831, 240. Houses 16. A. P. £3,050.

APPLETREE-HUNDRED, Derbyshire, is bounded on the north by Wirksworth hundred; on the east by the hundred of Morleston and Litchurch; on the south by that of Repton and Gresley; and on the west by Staffordshire. Area in English statute acres, 108,170. Pop., in 1831, 32,483. Houses 6,143.

APPLETREE-WICK, a township in the parish of Burnhall, union of Skipton, west riding of Yorkshire; 8¹/₂ miles north-east by east of Skipton; on the Wharfe. All tithes of this township were commuted in 1815. There are two daily schools here. There is a fair held here, October 25th. In this village was born of poor parents, William Craven, lord-mayor of London in 1611, and founder of the noble house of Craven. Pop., in 1801, 244; in 1831, 425. Houses 58. Acres 7,740. A. P. £1,932. Poor rates, in 1837, £230.

ARBORFIELD, a parish in the hund. of Sonning, union of Wokingham, Berks; 4 miles west-south-west of Wokingham; on the river Loddon. Living, a rectory, a peculiar of the dean of Salisbury; rated at £7 19s. 8d.; gross income £345. Patron, in 1835, Lord Braybrooke. There is a day and Sunday school here. A fair for cattle is held on October 5th. Edward Standen, Esq. of Arborfield, who died in 1730, was the person alluded to in the well-known ballad of Molly Mogg of the Rose. He was the last heir male of the family of Standen of Arborfield. Pop., in 1801, 171; in 1831, 268. A. P. £2,796. Poor rates, in 1837, £193.

ARBORY. See KIRK-ARBORY.

ARBURY, a township in the parish of Winwick, co.-palatine of Lancaster; 3 miles south from Newton. Pop. with Houghton.

ARCLID, a township in the parish of Sandbach, co.-palatine of Chester; 2 miles east-north-east of Sandbach; on the post-road from Nether Knutsford to Newcastle-under-Lyne. Pop., in 1801, 92; in 1831, 79. Houses 10. Acres 610. A. P. £1,010. Poor rates, in 1837, £31.

ARDEN, a township in the parish of Hawnby, wapentake of Birdforth, union of Helmsley Blackmoor, north riding, county of York; 10 miles north-east of Thirsk. A nunnery of the Benedictine order was erected here by Peter de Hoton, about A.D. 1150. It was granted, 32nd Henry VIII., to Thomas Culpepper. No vestige of the monastic buildings remains. Pop., in 1801, including that of Ardenside, 128; in 1831, 161. Houses 28. Acres 9,090. A. P. £566. Poor rates, in 1837, £84.

ARDINGLEY, or ERTHINGLEY, a parish in the hund. of Buntinghill, rape of Lewes, union of Cuckfield, Sussex; 4 miles north-east of Cuckfield; and on the line of the London and Brighton railroad. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Lewes and dio. of Chichester; rated at £19 5s. 10d.; gross income £500. Patron, in 1835, J. W. Peyton. In the church there is a monument to Nicholas Culpepper, Esq., and his lady, who died in the beginning of the 16th century, with portraits of their ten sons and eight daughters. There is an Independent chapel here; also a daily school, and two Sunday schools. Pop., in 1801, 506; in 1831, 587. Houses 108. Acres 4,780. A. P. £2,292. Poor rates, in 1837, £546.

ARDINGTON, a parish in the hund. and union of Wantage, Berks; 2 miles east from Wantage. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Berks, and formerly in the dio. of Salisbury, now in that of Oxford; rated at £8 7s. 9d., and in the parliamentary returns at £50. Patronage belongs to Christ church college, Oxford. There is a daily school here, with about 25 scholars. The Great Western railway crosses the Wilts and Berks canal in this parish. Pop., in 1801, 344; in 1831, 404. Houses 79. Acres 1,310. A. P. £3,256. Poor rates, in 1837, £93.

ARDLEIGH, a parish in the hund. and union of Tendring, near the river Stour, Essex; 5 miles north-east of Colchester. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Colchester and dio. of London; rated at £11 0s. 10d.; gross income £262. Patronage belongs to the Crown. This parish possesses the privilege of sending children to the free grammar-school at Didham, founded by W. Littlebury in 1571. In 1837, about 12 children came from Ardleigh. There is a National Sunday school here, with about 100 scholars; and five daily schools. Pop., in 1801, 1,145; in 1831, 1,545. Houses 207. Acres 5,100. A. P. £7,135. Poor rates, in 1837, £1,196.—This parish is intersected by the proposed line of railway betwixt Colchester and Harwick.

ARDLEY, or AUDLEY-STRETTON, a parish in the hund. of Ploughley, union of Bicester, county of Oxford; $4\frac{1}{2}$ miles north-west of Bicester; on the road from Middleton to Brackley. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Oxford; rated at £5 12s. 8 $\frac{1}{2}$ d.; gross income £316. Patron, in 1835, the duke of Marlborough. There are an infant and a daily school here. Pop., in 1801, 109; in 1831, 170. Houses 38. Acres 1,440. A. P. £1,583. Poor rates, in 1837, £91.

ARDSLEY, a township in the parish of Darfield, west riding of Yorkshire; $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles east from Barnsley; on the Dearne and Dove canal. A new church in the Norman style was opened here in June, 1841. The tithes, the property of Trinity college, Cambridge, and the rector, were commuted in 1760. There are 3 daily schools here; one of which is understood to have a small endowment. Pop., in 1801, 461; in 1831, 1,029. Houses 199. Acres 1,030. A. P. £2,568. Poor rates, in 1837, £200.

ARDSLEY (EAST), a parish and township, lower division of the wapentake of Agbrigg, union of Wakefield, west riding of Yorkshire; $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles north-west of Wakefield. Living, a perpetual curacy, formerly in the archd. and dio. of York, now in the dio. of Ripon; rated at £27; gross income £387. Patron, in 1835, the earl of Cardigan. The great and small tithes, moduses, &c. of East and West Ardsley, the property of the lord of the manor and perpetual curate, were commuted in 1827. The church is a small neat edifice. There are two daily schools here. Pop., in 1801, 686; in 1831, 853. Houses 175. Acres 1,630. A. P. £3,092. Poor rates, in 1837, £241.

ARDSLEY (WEST), WESTERTON, or WOODKIRK, a parish in the same wapentake, union and county, as the above. Living, a perpetual curacy, formerly in the archd. and dio. of York, now in the dio. of Ripon; rated at £31 5s., and in the parliamentary returns at £150; gross income £265. Patron, in 1835, the earl of Cardigan. For commutation of tithes, see ARDSLEY (EAST). There are three daily schools here; and a Wesleyan Methodist chapel. Pop., in 1801, 1,032; in 1831, 1,450. Houses 290. Acres 2,250. A. P. £3,631. Poor rates, in 1837, £375.

ARDUDWY HUNDRED, Merionethshire, had a pop. of 10,499 souls in 1831. Houses 1,960.

ARDWICK, a chapelry to the parish of Manchester, hund. of Salford, union of Chorlton, co.-palatine of Lancaster; 1 mile south from Manchester. Living, a curacy not in charge, in the archd. and dio. of Chester; rated in the parliamentary returns at £138 4s.; gross income, in 1832, £310. In the patronage of the warden and fellows of the collegiate church of Manchester. There are nine daily schools, four boarding schools, and two very large Sunday schools, in this chapelry. This suburb is included in the boundaries of the new borough of Manchester. The Sheffield, Ashton-under-Lyne, and Manchester railway, joins the Manchester and Birmingham railway near Chancery-lane. It is here carried on a succession of immense viaducts. Pop., in 1801, 1,762; in 1831, 5,524. Houses 1,033. Acres 470. A. P. £11,241. Poor rates, in 1837, £825.

ARELEY (KING'S), a parish in the upper division of the hund. of Doddingtree, union of Martley, county of Worcester; $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles south by east of Bewdley; on the Severn opposite Stourport. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Worcester; rated at £9; gross income £406. Patron, in 1835, the rector of Martley. The church is a fine Gothic building, and stands on an eminence, from which there is an extensive prospect. In the burial ground there is a rude sepulchral monument bearing a quaint rhyming distich, importing that a person named Sir Harry was buried there. It is not certainly known who Sir Harry was; but tradition relates that he was a Sir Henry Comingsby of Herefordshire, who was driven into seclusion here by the loss of his only child, who was drowned by falling from his arms, as he held her at a window, into a moat. Charities connected with this parish produce £19 yearly. Layamon, author of a history of the British from Brute to Cadwallader, who states himself to have been a priest residing at Erenlege on the Severn, is said to have been born in this parish. Pop., in 1801, 377; in 1831, 372. Houses 83. Acres 1,390. A. P. £2,554. Poor rates, in 1837, £233.

ARELEY (URPPE), a parish in the south division of the hund. of Seisdon, union of Kidderminster, county of Stafford; 3 miles north-north-west from Bewdley; on the river Severn. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. of Stafford and dio. of Lichfield; gross income £255. It is a peculiar of the dean and chapter of Lichfield. Patron, in 1835, the earl of Mountnorris. There are three daily schools here. The charities to the poor of the parish amount to £34 15s. yearly. Pop., in 1801, 693; in 1831, 735. Houses 165. Acres 5,160. A. P. £4,831. Poor rates, in 1837, £173.

ARGAM, a parish in the wapentake of Dicker-ing, union of Bridlington, east riding, county of York. Living, a rectory united to the perpetual curacy of Bridlington; rated at £4. The church has been desecrated, and there has been no institution since 1605. Pop., in 1801, 21; in 1831, 29. Houses 3. Acres 510. A. P. £332. Poor rates, in 1837, £11.

ARKENDALE, a chapelry to the parish of Knaresborough, wapentake of Claro, west riding, county of York; 4 miles north-east from Knaresborough. Living, a perpetual curacy, formerly in the archd. of Richmond and dio. of Chester, now in the dio. of Ripon; rated in the parliamentary returns at £31; gross income £68. Patron, in 1835, the vicar of Knaresborough. Chapel recently rebuilt. The great and small tithes, and moduses of the manor of Arkendale, the property of the prebend of Beechill, the lay-impropriator and the vicar, were commuted in 1773. Pop., in 1801, 218; in 1831, 260. Houses 53. Acres 1,620. A. P. £2,358. Poor rates, in 1837, £124.

ARKENGARTH-DALE, a mountainous parish and township in the wapentake of Gilling-West, north riding of Yorkshire; 12 miles north by west of Richmond; on a tributary of the Swale. Living, a perpetual curacy, formerly in the archd. of Richmond and dio. of Chester, now in the dio. of Ripon; rated at £8, and in the parliamentary returns at £62; gross income £123. Patron, Sir John Lowther. Here is a free school, with an endowment of £60 per annum, founded by George Brown, Esq. of Stockton. All the children of the dale are admitted to it gratis. In 1833 it was attended by 90 children. There is also another daily school. Here is also a Methodist chapel. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the lead-mines in Arkengarth forest, which are of great antiquity, having been worked as early as the reign of King John; they are still the most productive in the country; and the smelting-mill is unequalled for its completeness and extent. The annual produce, a few years ago, was estimated at 2,000 tons. Pop., in 1801, 1,186; in 1831, 1,446. Houses 291. Acres 14,180. A. P. £5,195. Poor rates, in 1837, £521.

ARKESDEN, a parish in the hund. of Uttlesford, union of Saffron-Walden, Essex; 5 miles south from Saffron-Walden. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Colchester and dio. of London; rated at £13 6s. 8d., and in the parliamentary returns at £120; gross income £181. Patron, in 1835, R. B. Wolfe, Esq. For commutation of tithes, see WENDONS-AMBO. There is a National daily and Sunday school here. Pop., in 1801, 400; in 1831, 490. Houses 67. Acres 2,320. A. P. £2,079. Poor rates, in 1837, £309.

ARKHOLME, with CAWOOD, a township and chapelry in the parish of Melling, co.-palatine of Lancaster; 5 miles south-south-west of Kirkby-Lonsdale; on the river Lune, which here expands into a lake. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. of Richmond and dio. of Chester; rated at £8 10s., and in the parliamentary returns at £37 13s.; gross income £54. Patron, the vicar of Melling. There are three daily and a boarding school here. Pop., in 1801, 303; in 1831, 349. Houses 59. Acres 2,920. A. P. £3,597. Poor rates, in 1837, £214.

ARKSEY, or ARKSEY-WITH-BENTLEY, a parish in the wapentake of Strafforth and Tickhill, union of Doncaster, west riding of York, including the township of Bentley; 2 miles north of Doncaster. Living, a vicarage in the archd. and dio. of York; rated at £12 7s. 6d., and in the parliamentary returns at £120; gross income £117. Patron, in 1835, Sir W. B. Cooke, Bart. The great and small tithes, moduses, &c. of the townships of Bentley and Arksey, the property of the lord of the manor, were commuted in 1827-28. A free school was endowed here in 1660, with £40 per annum, by Sir Bryan Cooke; and the school-house was built in 1683 by Sir George Cooke, Bart. There are four other daily schools. There is also an hospital for twelve poor inhabitants, with an endowment of £89 12s. per annum. The other charities connected with the parish produce £18 15s. yearly. Pop., in 1801, 980; in 1831, 1,144. Houses 244. Acres 5,220. A. P. £10,067. Poor rates, in 1837, £626.

ARLECDON, a parish in the ward of Allerdale, above Derwent, Cumberland; 5½ miles east-north-east of Whitehaven. It includes the townships of High and Low Frizington, and Whillymoor. Living, a perpetual curacy, a peculiar in the dio. of Chester; rated at £10, and in the parliamentary returns at £70; gross income £94. Patron, in 1835, the bishop of Chester. All tithes of the manor of Frizington, the property of the bishop of Chester, were commuted in 1805. The great and small tithes, &c. of Lamplough and Arlecdon, and of the townships of Kelton, Winder, Arlecdon, and Whillymoor, the property of the bishop of Chester and the clerical rector, were commuted in 1819. A new church was consecrated here in August, 1829. There are two daily schools in the parish. Coal is worked to a small extent. Pop., in 1801, 134; in 1831, 475. Houses 94. Acres 5,700. A. P. £3,211. Poor rates, in 1837, £124.

ARLESTON. See SYNNIS.

ARLEY, a parish in the Kirby division of the hund. of Knightlow, union of Nuneaton, Warwickshire; 6 miles west by south from Nuneaton. Living, a rectory, formerly in the archd. of Coventry and dio. of Lichfield and Coventry, now in the dio. of Worcester; rated at £9 0s. 7d.; gross income £407. Patron, in 1835, the Rev. R. B. Vaughton. There is a free school here endowed by William Avery. The annual income is £15; attendance 30. Other charities connected with the parish produce £19 13s. yearly. Pop., in 1801, 254; in 1831, 270. Houses 57. Acres 2,130. A. P. £2,391. Poor rates, in 1837, £139.

ARLEY KING'S. See ARLEY KING'S.

ARLINGHAM, a parish in the hund. of Berkeley, union of Wheatonhurst, Gloucestershire; 1 mile south-east of Newnham; on the opposite side of the estuary of the Severn. Living, a vicarage in the archd. of Gloucester and dio. of Gloucester and Bristol; rated at £19 17s. 8½d.; gross income £200. Patroness, in 1835, Mrs Rogers. The tithes were commuted in 1801. The parish is surrounded on three sides by the Severn. A school was endowed here, in 1765, by Mrs Mary Yate: it has a revenue of £40 per annum, of which £20 are paid to the master, £10 to the mistress, and £10 are laid out in the purchase of books. In 1833, 54 children were educated on this endowment. The same lady also left £40 per annum to the poor of this parish. There are two infant schools here. Pop., in 1801, 506; in 1831, 744. Houses 103. Acres 2,300. A. P. £4,110. Poor rates, in 1837, £336.

ARLINGTON, a parish in the hund. of Sherwill, union of Barnstaple; 5 miles north-east of Barnstaple. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Exeter; rated at £13 18s. 1½d.; gross income £300. Patron, in 1835, S. P. Chichester, Esq. There is a daily school here. Pop., in 1801, 207; in 1831, 235. Houses 39. Acres 1,890. A. P. £1,709. Poor rates, in 1837, £123.

ARLINGTON, a tything in the parish of Bibury, county of Gloucester; 4 miles north-north-west from Fairford. Pop., in 1801, 274; in 1831, 333. Houses 79. There is a Baptist church here.

ARLINGTON, a parish in the hund. of Longbridge, rape of Pevensey, union of Hailsham, Sussex; 4 miles west-south-west of Hailsham; on the Cuckmere river. Living, a vicarage in the archd. of Lewes and dio. of Chichester; rated at £10 6s. 11d.; gross income £164; in the patronage of the prebendary of Chichester cathedral. There is a day and Sunday school in this parish. Pop., in 1801, 472; in 1831, 727. Houses 80. Acres 4,790. A. P. £5,317. Poor rates, in 1837, £804.

ARLSEY, a parish in the hund. of Clifton, union of Biggleswade, county of Bedford; 4 miles north-west of Baldock. Living, a discharged vicarage united to the rectory of Astwick, formerly in the archd. of Bedford and dio. of Lincoln, now in the dio. of Ely; rated at £8; gross income £300. Patron, in 1835, F. Gapte. There are two Sunday schools in the parish. The great and small tithes, the property of the lord of the manor and the vicar, were commuted in 1804. Pop., in 1801, 404; in 1831, 688. Houses 126. Acres 2,370. A. P. £3,203. Poor rates, in 1837, £248.

ARMATHWAITE, a chapelry in the parish of Hasket-in-the-Forest, Leath ward, Cumberland; 9 miles south-east from Carlisle, and 5 north-west from Kirk-Oswald; on the river Eden, which flows through it, and over which there is a stone-bridge of four arches. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. and dio. of Carlisle, annexed to the curacy of St Cuthbert, Carlisle; rated at £26 10s., and in the parliamentary returns at £80; gross income £65; in the patronage, in 1835, of the trustees of — Milbourne, Esq. Here was a small Benedictine nunnery, built and endowed by King William Rufus. About the time of the dissolution, there were only a prioress and three nuns in it, who had lands for their maintenance, valued at £18 18s. 8d. per annum. Returns with the parish.

ARMIN, a chapelry in the parish of Snaithe, union of Goole, west riding of Yorkshire; 6 miles east from Snaithe, and 2 north from Goole; on the river Ouse. Living, a curacy in the archd. and dio. of York; rated at £7, and in the parliamentary returns at £53 12s. 9d.; gross income £83. Patrons, in 1835, the earl of Beverley and N. E. Yarbrough, Esq. There are two infant schools and a day school here. Pop., in 1801, 391; in 1831, 567. Houses 96. Acres 3,660. A. P. £4,742. Poor rates, in 1837, £296.

ARMINGFORD HUNDRED, in the county of Cambridge. It is bounded on the north by the hundreds of Longstow and Wetherley; on the east by Triplow hundred; on the south by Hertfordshire; and on the west by Bedfordshire. Area in English statute acres, 28,751. Pop., in 1831, 7,539. Houses 1,359.

ARMINGHALL, a parish in the hund. and union of Henstead, Norfolk; 4 miles south from Norwich. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. of Norfolk and dio. of Norwich; rated at £16, and in the parliamentary returns at £45; gross income £66; in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Norwich. The London and Norwich railroad passes through this parish. There is a small daily school. Pop., in 1801, 81; in 1831, 86. Houses 18. Acres 900. A. P. £1,163. Poor rates, in 1837, £49.

ARMITAGE, a parish in the hund. of Offow-South, union of Lichfield, county of Stafford; 2 miles east-south-east of Rudgeley. It includes the hamlet of Handsacre. Living, a perpetual curacy, a peculiar of the prebendary of Lichfield, annexed to the prebend of Handsacre in Lichfield cathedral. It is rated at £20 10s., and in the parliamentary returns at £30; gross income, in 1832, £85. Patrons, in 1835, the dean and chapter of Lichfield. The church is situated on a rocky eminence, and forms a beautiful and picturesque object. An Independent church was formed here in 1820. In 1833 there were three daily, and one day and boarding school, in this parish. Charities connected with this parish produce £8 6s. per annum. The Grand Trunk canal passes through a large tunnel, and joins the Trent, in this parish. A projected branch of the Manchester South Union railway runs off to the left of Armitage church, and joins the Birmingham and Derby Junction near Alrewas. Its length is 7 miles 55 chains. Pop., in 1801, 464; in 1831, 977. Houses 185. Acres 1,950. A. P. £3,213. Poor rates, in 1837, £357.

ARMLEY, a chapelry in the parish of St Peter's, liberty of Leeds, west riding of York; 2 miles west of Leeds; on the river Aire. Living, a perpetual curacy, formerly in the archd. and dio. of York, now in the dio. of Ripon; rated at £26 1s. 4d.; gross income £220. Patron, the vicar of Leeds. The Wesleyan Methodists have also a large chapel here, founded in 1800. There are ten infant and six daily schools in this parish. The Leeds and Liverpool canal passes through the parish: also the Leeds and Bradford railway. Pop., in 1801, 2,695; in 1831, 5,159. Houses 1,011. Acres 1,040. A. P. £2,962. Poor rates, in 1837, £930.

ARMSCOTT, a hamlet in the parish of Tredington, Worcestershire; locally situated in the hund. of Kington, Warwick; 3 miles north-west of Ship-ton-on-Stour; near the Moreton and Avon railway. Pop., in 1801, 152; in 1831, 130. Houses 29.

ARMSTON, a hamlet in the parish of Polebrook, Northamptonshire. Ralph de Trublevile and Alice his wife, founded an hospital, with a chapel, hard by their manor-house here, before A. D. 1231. Pop., in 1801, 13; in 1831, 25. Houses 4. A. P. £752. Poor rates, in 1837, £19.

ARMTHORPE, a parish in the south division of the wapentake of Strafforth and Tickhill, union of Doncaster, west riding of Yorkshire; 3 miles north-east of Doncaster. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of York, valued at £8 18s. 9d.; gross income £366. Patron, the Crown. All tithes commuted in 1773. There is a charity school here, founded by Anne Holmes in 1689, with an endowment of £5 13s. per annum; for educating ten children, and apprenticing poor boys. Other charities connected with this parish produce £12 yearly. Pop., in 1801, 273; in 1831, 368. Houses 73. Acres 2,810. A. P. £2,735. Poor rates, in 1837, £228.

ARNCLIFFE, a hilly parish and township, partly in the western and partly in the eastern division of the wapentake of Staincliffe and Ewcross, union of Settle, west riding of Yorkshire; 10½ miles north-east of Settle; on a branch of the Wharfe. The parish contains the townships of Arncliffe, Buckden, Halton-Gill, West Halton, Hawksworth, and Litton. Living, a discharged vicarage, formerly in the archd. and dio. of York, now in the dio. of Ripon; rated at £13 6s. 8d., and in the parliamentary returns at £33 6s. 8d.; gross income £36. The patronage belongs to University college, Oxford. The great and small tithes of the township of Arncliffe, the property of University college, and the clerical rector, were commuted in 1768. Charities connected with the parish produce a yearly revenue of £59 12s. 6d. In 1838 there was 1 cotton-mill, employing 96 hands, in this parish. Pop. of the parish, in 1801 1,013; in 1831, 964. Houses 204. Acres 38,080. A. P. £12,843.—Pop. of the township of Arncliffe, in 1801, 241; in 1831, 213. Houses 43. Acres 5,790. A. P. £1,541. Poor rates, in 1837, £99.—See AMERDALE.

ARNCLIFFE. See INGLEBY-ARNCLIFFE.

ARNCOTT, a village in the parish of Ambrosden, county of Oxford; 3½ miles south-east of Bicester. It is a chapelry to Ambrosden. All tithes of this township were commuted in 1814. The Wesleyan Methodists have a school and chapel here. Pop., in 1801, 209; in 1831, 314. Houses 59. Acres 2,010. A. P. £1,240. Poor rates, in 1837, £238.

ARNE, a parish in the hund. of Hasilor, division and union of Wareham, Dorset; 5 miles east of Wareham. It lies on the coast between Wareham and Poole harbours. Living, a curacy annexed to the rectory of Wareham, formerly in the archd. of Dorset and dio. of Bristol, now in the dio. of Salisbury. On an eminence extending into the harbour there is a large barrow, which has been used as a beacon. Pop., in 1801, 96; in 1831, 171. Houses 22. Acres 2,450. A. P. £268. Poor rates, in 1837, £78.

ARNESBY, a parish in the hund. of Guthlaxton, union of Lutterworth, Leicestershire; 8 miles south by east of Leicester. Living, a discharged vicarage, formerly in the archd. of Leicester and dio. of Lincoln, now in the dio. of Peterborough; rated at £5 16s. 8d., and in the parliamentary returns at £85; gross income £123. Patron, in 1835, S. Sherwin, Esq. The great and small tithes were commuted in 1794. A Baptist church has existed here since 1702. There are six daily schools in the parish. The charities connected with the parish produced, in 1786, £13 16s. yearly. Pop., in 1801, 321; in 1831, 442. Houses 96. Acres 1,510. A. P. £2,708. Poor rates, in 1837, £163.

ARNOLD, a parish in the wapentake of Broxtow, union of Basford, Nottinghamshire; 4 miles north by east of Nottingham; on the post-road to Mansfield. Living, a discharged vicarage, formerly in the archd. of Nottingham and dio. of York, now in the dio. of Lincoln; rated at £7 17s. 8d.; gross income £310. Patron, in 1835, the duke of Devonshire. Tithes commuted in 1789. The Wesleyan and the Primitive Methodists, and Baptists, have chapels here. The village stands near Sherwood forest. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the manufacture of hosiery. There is a school for poor children, endowed with £22 16s., by Daniel Chadwick and others; and seven other daily schools. Other charities connected with the parish produce £16 16s. yearly. Pop., in 1801, 2,768; in 1831, 4,054. Houses 812. Acres 4,670. A. P. £5,276. Poor rates, in 1837, £1,047.

ARNSIDE. See BRETHAM.

ARRAM, a township in the parish of Atwick, east riding of Yorkshire; 11½ miles north-east of Beverley. Pop. returned with the parish.

ARRAN FOWDDY, a mountain in Merionethshire, rising to the height of 2,955 feet.

ARRETON, a village and parish in East Medina liberty, Isle of Wight; 3 miles south-east of Newport. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Winchester; rated at £21, and in the parliamentary returns at £120; gross income £220. Patron, in 1835, J. Fleming, Esq. There is a charity school here with a yearly revenue of £46, left in 1688 by John Mann, Esq., for maintaining, educating, and apprenticing poor children belonging to the parish. It is now united with the National school society. There are two other daily schools. Other charities connected with the parish produce £30 16s. per annum. Pop., in 1801, 1,374; in 1831, 1,864. Houses 334. Acres £8,270. A. P. £9,091. Poor rates, in 1837, £1,275.

ARRINGTON (anciently ERMINTON), a parish in the hund. of Wetherley, union of Caxton and Arrington, Cambridgeshire; 5 miles south-east of Caxton; on the post-road from Hertford to Huntingdon. Living, a vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Ely; rated at £7 6s. 3d., and in the parliamentary returns at £33 10s.; gross income £69; in the patronage of Trinity college, Cambridge. There are two daily schools here. Petty sessions for the Arrington division are held here. Pop., in 1801, 190; in 1831, 254. Houses 47. Acres 1,388. A. P. £998. Poor rates, in 1837, £65.

ARROW, a township in the parish of Woodchurch, co.-palatine of Chester; 6 miles north of Great Neston. Pop., in 1801, 96; in 1831, 91. Houses 15. Acres 730. A. P. £828. Poor rates, in 1837, £47.

ARROW, a parish in the hund. of Barlichway, union of Alcester, Warwickshire; 1 mile south-west of Alcester; on the Arrow river. It includes the township of Arrow, with the hamlets of Oversley and Ragley. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Worcester; rated at £10 10s. 7½d.; gross income £250. Patron, in 1835, the marquis of Hertford, who has a magnificent seat, called Ragley-hall, in this parish. Charities to the poor £5 per annum. There are two infant schools. Pop., in 1831, 466. Houses 101. Acres 4,220. A. P. £5,787.—Pop. of the township, including Ragley, in 1801, 245; in 1831, 287. Houses 65. Acres 2,560. A. P. £2,533. Poor rates, in 1837, £172.

ARROW (THE), a river which rises in Radnorshire, flows past Kingston and Pembridge, and falls into the Lug near Leominster.—Another river of the same name rises in the Lickey, Worcestershire, joins the Aine at Alcester, and pursuing a southerly course, falls into the Avon near Bilford-Grange.

ARROWTHORNE. See ALLATHORNE.

ARSLEY. See ARLSLEY.

ARTH (THE), a river in Cardiganshire, falling into the Irish sea at Llanddewi-Aberarth.

ARTHINGTON, a township in the parish of Addle, west riding of Yorkshire; 4 miles east from Otley; on the river Wharfe. Tanner says, "Peter de Ardington, in the latter end of the reign of King Stephen, or beginning of that of Henry II., erected here a small priory of Cluniac or Benedictine nuns, to the honour of the Virgin Mary. Herein were, at the time of the dissolution, ten religious; but their yearly income was valued only at from £11 to £19. This monastery was granted, 34th Henry VIII., to Thomas Cranmer, archbishop of Canterbury, in exchange." Of this monastery no vestige now remains, but the site is occupied by a farm-house. Arthington-hall stands in a fine elevated situation in the valley of the Wharfe. Pop., in 1801, 360; in 1831, 360. Houses 62. Acres 1,780. A. P. £3,434. Poor rates, in 1837, £229.—See ADDLE.

ARTHINGWORTH, a parish in the hund. of Rothwell, union of Market-Harborough, Northamptonshire, on the river Line; 4½ miles south by east of Market-Harborough. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Northampton and dio. of Peterborough; rated at £12 2s. 8½d.; gross income £350. Patron, in 1835, L. Rokeby, Esq. The great and small tithes were commuted in 1767. There is a free school here, with an endowment of £38 per annum; now connected with the National school society. Pop., in 1801, 207; in 1831, 225. Houses 52. Acres 2,030. A. P. £2,830. Poor rates, in 1837, £163.

ARTHUR (GREAT and LITTLE), two of the Scilly isles near St Martin's, a few acres in extent.

ARTHUR'S STONE, a cromlech on the top of Cefn-Bryn, a hill 583 feet in height, in the district of Gower; 9 miles west of Swansea. It is a piece of lapis molaris or millstone, 14 feet in length, and 7 feet 2 inches in depth. Its weight is supposed to be about 20 tons. It has eight perpendicular supporters terminating in small points on which the whole weight of the cromlech rests. Immediately under it is a spring of clear water, which has obtained the name of our Lady's well. Arthur's stone is celebrated in the Welsh triads as one of the three stupendous works effected in Britain, of which Stonehenge is another, and Silbury hill perhaps the third. In the triads it is called the Stone of Sketty, from a place of that name in its neighbourhood. These structures are in general found at the tops of hills, or if on the plain at the highest part, probably because they should be visible at a distance; stones placed upright, and standing at regular distances, are sometimes placed around them. The cromlech—the name by which they have been for ages known—usually consists of one large stone placed on three supporters; the covering-stones are never found horizontal, the weight subsiding where the lowest support is found. These monuments are also frequently called quoits, from the upper stone resembling the ancient discus. What nation or religion they belonged to it is difficult to say; they are met with in Sweden, Denmark, Norway, France, and the islands of the Mediterranean, but more especially in the Celtic kingdoms of the north of Europe. If they can be attributed to the Druidical priests, they must have been among the earliest of their works, as the simplicity, both of the plan and form, declares them to have been the work of men far less advanced in knowledge of architecture than the founders of the gigantic structures of Stonehenge. In general they are situated in the neighbourhood of barrows, and some of them, closing in the sides, are called hist-van. Rowland derives the name from the Hebrew. Corem-Cruach, a devoted or consecrated stone; according to Wormius they were sometimes called are, or altars; he supposes they were first altars, and afterwards tombs. The great similarity which prevails in the manner of their erection seems to prove that the use to which they were devoted must have been the same both in Britain and in Denmark. In Wales they are known by the name of Arthur's quoits; and by some antiquaries, the name is supposed to be derived from the Armoric, crum, crooked, or having a top-stone.—See ATLESBURY, and PENZANCE.

ARTHURET, a parish in Eskdale ward, union of Longtown, Cumberland, on the river Esk. It includes the townships of Longtown, Brakenhill, Lineside, and Netherby: which see. Living, a united rectory and vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Carlisle; rated at £3 2s. 1d.; gross income, £687. Patron, in 1835, Sir James R. G. Graham, Bart. In 1543, Sir Thomas Wharton, lord-warden of the English marches, defeated the Scots under Oliver Sinclair, on Solom moss, in this parish. "The country beyond this place," (the moss), say the compilers of the first edition of the 'Magna Britannia,' "was, before the union of the two kingdoms, called 'Batable Land;' that is, land always in debate: the inhabitants on both sides always contending for it, and yielding it to neither." In 1754, Lady Widdrington left an endowment of £40 a-year, on which about 80 children in this and the adjoining parish of Kirk-Andrews, are taught free. Archy Armstrong, court-jester to Charles I., died here in 1672, and was buried in the church-yard. Pop., in 1801, 2,418; in 1831, 2,903. Houses 594. Acres 17,390. A. P. £10,644. Poor rates, in 1837, £765.—There are valuable salmon-fisheries on the Esk in this parish.

ARTINGTON, or ERTINDOM, a tithing in the parish of St Nicholas-Guildford, Surrey; 1 mile south by west from Guildford. Pop., in 1801, 305; in 1831, 511. Houses 85. Acres 2,860.

ARUN (THE), a river in Sussex, rising to the north of Haslemere in Surrey, entering Sussex at Aldford, passing the town of Arundel, and falling into the sea at Little Hampton, after a course of nearly 40 miles. It has been rendered navigable as far as Newbridge; and, by means of the Rother, communicates with Midhurst and Petworth. It abounds in mullets; and gives name to a rape and town in the same county.—Another branch of this river rises in St Leonard's forest, and joins the main branch near Newbridge.

ARUNDEL, a rape in the county of Sussex, extending north and south from the English channel to Surrey, and bounded on one side by the river Arun. It contains the five hundreds of Arundel, Avisford, Bury, Poling, Rotherbridge, and West Easwith. Area in English statute acres 132,800. Pop., in 1831, 31,064. Houses 5,207.—ARUNDEL HUNDRED is limited to the borough and parish of Arundel.

ARUNDEL, a borough, market-town, and parish, in the above rape and hund.; 55 miles south-south-west from London, and 10 miles east from Chichester; on the line of a proposed railroad betwixt London and Portsmouth. It stands in an agreeable situation, on the north bank of the Arun, over which is a stone-bridge of three arches. The name is supposed to be derived from the river. Some regard this place as having been the Portus Adurni of the Romans. The houses are in general well-built; and run in two principal streets, which meet at right angles. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Chichester; rated at £5 0s. 10d.; gross income £199. Patron, the duke of Norfolk. The church was formerly collegiate. It is a Gothic structure, in the form of a cross, with a low tower at the intersection. Here lie several earls of the Arundel and Norfolk families. There are some inconsiderable remains of an hospital and a convent of Black friars, respecting which informs us that "Roger of Montgomery, who came over with the Conqueror, and was by him made earl of Arundel, and enriched with 27 manors in Sussex, founded the Benedictine monastery of St Martin de Sagio or Seex, in Normandy; and it is very probable that he, Robert de Belesme, or some other of his sons, gave the church of St Nicholas, in Arundel, to that foreign house, wherein was very early a cell of four or five black monks, subject to the monastery at Seex, and so continued till the seizure of these alien priories during the wars with France, temp. Edw. III." In the latter end of that reign, Richard, earl of Arundel, obtained license to found a large chantry in the chapel of the castle here, and assigned 1,000 marks towards the same, A. D. 1375. His son Richard, in order to fulfil his father's will, obtained of the king, with the consent of the abbot and convent of Seex, that the priory of St. Nicholas here should be extinguished, and that church made collegiate, and all the lands and tithes settled for the maintenance of twelve secular canon's priests, with other officers. "Upon this change it was styled the college of the Holy Trinity, which was endowed, 26th Henry VIII., with £168 0s. 7d., ob clare, and £263 14s. 9d., in toto." It was granted to Henry, earl of Arundel. An Independent church was formed here in 1784. There is also a Roman Catholic chapel.

The corporation of Arundel received its charter from Elizabeth. The members of the old corporation were a mayor, 12 burgesses, and steward, assisted by other officers. By the Municipal corporations reform act, Arundel is to be in future governed by a mayor, four aldermen, and twelve councillors. Petty sessions are held here for the upper division of Arundel rape. Arundel is a borough by prescription, and returned two members to parliament from the 30th of Edward I. till the passing of the Reform bill, when its representation was reduced to one. The elective franchise extends to the whole parish. It is also one of the polling-places for the county. The influence of the duke of Norfolk was formerly paramount here. The income of the borough in 1837 was £290, of which £223 arose from rents.—The principal trade of Arundel consists in the exportation of corn and timber; a considerable quantity of oak-bark is also shipped here. The river is navigable for vessels of 200 tons; and by means of canals communicates with the Thames and with Chichester harbour. Markets are held on Wednesday and Saturday for corn and provisions, and a fair for cattle on the 2d Tuesday in every month; other fairs are held on the 14th May for cattle and hogs; 21st August for hogs, cattle, and sheep; 25th September for cattle and sheep; and 17th December for cattle and pedlery. There is an annual show of fat stock in the month of December. Pop., in 1801, 1,855; in 1831, 2,803. Houses 517. Acres 1,830. A. P. £1,855. Poor rates, in 1837, £1,061.

The castle stands on an eminence on the north-east side of the town. The old part of the present building was erected on the site of a former one by Roger de Montgomery, at the time of the Conquest. In the reign of Henry I. it was besieged and taken from Robert de Belesme, who had rebelled against his sovereign. In earlier times it was deemed almost impregnable, and the possession of it was regarded as a point of great importance so late as the parliamentary wars. It was then much dilapidated, and having been long neglected, was falling into ruin, when the late duke of Norfolk determined to make it his principal residence. At a great expense it was repaired, or nearly rebuilt, and it is now one of the finest mansions in England. The first mention of Arundel and its castle occurs in the will of King Alfred, who bequeathed it to his nephew Adhelm.

After passing through the hands of several members of royal families, and other potent barons, it came into the possession of the Fitz-Alans, earls of Arundel, from whom it was conveyed by marriage to that of the Howards, dukes of Norfolk. The possession of this castle was declared by act of parliament, 2^o Henry VI. to confer the title of earl of Arundel without creation. This feudal privilege belongs to only one other castle in England,—that of Abergavenny in Monmouthshire.

ARVAN'S (Str), a parish, partly in the upper division of the hund. of Caldicott, partly in that of Ragland, union of Chepstow, county of Monmouth; 3 miles north-west from Chepstow; on the river Wye. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. and dio. of Llandaff; rated at £10, and in the parliamentary returns at £65; gross income £54. Patron, the duke of Beaufort. There are a National, and an infant school here. There are here the remains of two ancient chapels. Pop., in 1801, 282; in 1831, 304. Houses 68. Acres 2,840. A. P. £2,336. Poor rates, in 1837, £185. The hamlet of Portcassay is included in this parish.

ASAPH (Str), or LLAN-ELWY, a parish, partly in the hundreds of Isdulas and Yale, county of Denbigh, but mostly in the hundred of Rhuddlan, county of Flint. It includes the city of St Asaph, and the townships of Bodeugan, Cilowen, Gwernyngron, Talar, Faenol, Bodlewiddan, Pengwynn, Brynpolyn, Gwerglefyrd, Cyrchynen, and Rhyllon, in Flintshire, and those of Meriadog and Wigfair in the county of Denbigh. Pop., in 1801, 1,940; in 1831, 3,144. Houses 638. A. P. £8,992. Poor rates, in 1837, £1,720.

ASAPH (Str), a city, in the parish and union of St Asaph, county of Flint; 208 miles from London by Coventry; 20 miles from Chester; and 5 miles from Denbigh. It receives the appellation of city from being the seat of an episcopal see, though its size would scarcely entitle it to it. It is situated on an eminence between the rivers Clwyd and Elwy, and consists of little more than a single street. The value of the see, stated in the King's books, is that which was the actual value in the reign of Henry VIII., or £187 11s. 6d. In 1835, the total amount of its average gross yearly income, and of the ecclesiastical preferments attached to it, was £7,408; the net income being £6,301. The far greater part of the income of this see arises from tithes. It has recently been ordained in council that the sees of St Asaph and Bangor will be united when either of them shall become vacant, to be then called the see and diocese of St Asaph and Bangor. The bishop will be entitled to occupy a seat both in the cathedral church of St Asaph and also of Bangor. The average annual income of the bishop is to be £5,200. The archdeaconry is united to the bishopric; and the bishop also holds in commendam the rectory of Penant, in the county of Montgomery. The spiritual corporation consists of a dean and 13 prebendaries. There are four vicars choral, incumbents of the benefice of St Asaph. The diocese includes portions of the counties of Denbigh, Flint, Montgomery, Merioneth, and Salop; within which are 121 parishes, 181 churches and chapels; and, in 1838, 76 Sunday and daily schools, attended by 5,590 children, besides 19 Sunday schools. The deanery is rated at £45; gross yearly income £1,539. It is united to the vicarage of Henllan. The living of the parish is a vicarage in the archd. and dio. of St Asaph; gross income £183. Patron, the bishop. The church stands in the lower part of the town, and is used for parochial purposes. The cathedral is a plain building, built about the close of the 15th century, and consisting of a choir, a nave, two aisles, and a transept. It is 170 feet long, 108 broad, and 90 high. Some of the bishops of St Asaph have been eminent men; among these were William Morgan, the principal translator of the Welsh Bible, published in 1568, and one of the translators of Queen Elizabeth's Bible; Dr William Beveridge, author of the 'Thesaurus Theologicus,' and the 'Private Thoughts'; and the late Dr Samuel Horsley. There is an alma-house for eight poor widows, founded by Bishop Barrow, and endowed with £31 per annum, which is distributed among the inmates. The free grammar-school is said to have been founded and endowed by Bishop Hughes, who died in 1600. The salary of the master is £55 a-year, and the number of children usually attending it is from 30 to 50. Two National schools for boys and girls were erected by subscription in 1831. They are attended by about 200 children. There are other two daily, and several Sunday schools. Other charities connected with the parish, produce £106 6s. 3d. per annum. The episcopal palace is a spacious and commodious building. The see is said to have originated in St Kentigern, bishop of Glasgow, during his exile from Scotland, about the year 560. The town and diocese were named after the successor of the founder, who was recalled from exile. In the vicinity of St Asaph, some proprietors have afforded great encouragement to agriculture, by stimulating the exertions of the farmers by premiums and other means. Not far from the town are traces of a Roman encampment. The market-day is Saturday; and fairs are held on Easter Tuesday, July 15th, August 19th, October 16th, November 2d, and December 26th, for cattle. The North and South Wales Bank has a branch here. Petty sessions for the hundred of Rhuddlan are held here. Pop. and other returns with the parish.

ASBY, or as it was formerly written and pronounced ASNEY, and still more anciently ASHEBY, a parish in East-ward, union of East-ward, Westmoreland; 4 miles south by west from Appleby; and including the townships of Asby-Coatsforth, Little Asby, and Asby-Winderworth. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Carlisle; rated at £25 13s. 4d.; gross income £205. Patron, in 1835, Sir F. F. F. Vane. At Little Asby there was formerly a chapel. George Smith, merchant tailor and citizen of London, built and endowed a school-house here in 1688, to which £100 were contributed by Dr Smith, bishop of Carlisle, a native of this parish. The revenue amounts to £60 6s. It is now in connection with the National society. There is an alma-house for four poor widows, founded in 1812. A copper-mine has recently been opened in this parish. A great part of this parish is mountainous. Among the highest elevations are Gathornelnglow, 1,538 feet; Castlefolds, 1,700; and Oxenburgh, 1,620 feet. Asby-scar is a ridge of rock extending about 2 miles from south to north, and 4 miles from east to west. At Gudill-hill, about $\frac{1}{2}$ mile north-east from the village of Great Asby, is a quarry of freestone. About $\frac{1}{4}$ mile south from the same village is a curious cavern called Pate Hole, the main gallery of which is 1,290 feet long.

ASCOT HEATH, celebrated for its race-course, in the parish of Winkfield, county of Berks, in the vicinity of the Great park of Windsor. The race-course was made by William, duke of Cumberland. It has recently been very much improved, and presents an appearance of smoothness and evenness almost equal to the surface of a billiard table. The old weighing-house, the old stand of the judges, and the small room over it, have been removed from the north side of the course, and the obstruction which it formerly offered to the view, from the stands and from other parts of the course, is thus completely obviated. The judges' seat has been placed immediately opposite to the site it formerly occupied, and a new stand has been erected behind it, from which all the signals can be given, in the most effective manner, at the same time that it affords a very commodious view round the whole course. The new weigh-house is situated a few yards above the Royal stand. The basement is appropriated to the weighing-room; the first floor, confined to the stewards and their personal friends, has an excellent view of the heath; the roof is furnished with steps, and is solely devoted to the use of the trainers and jockies. The Great Western railway runs about $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles to the north of the heath; the post-road from London to Basingstoke at the same distance on the south.

ASCOTE (CHAPEL), an extra-parochial hamlet in the Southam division of the hund. of Knightlow, Warwickshire; $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles south-west from Southam. Pop., in 1801, 11; in 1831, 15. The area is included in that assigned to Bishops-Itchington. A. P. £1,200.

ASCOTT, a hamlet in the parish of Great Milton, county of Oxford; $4\frac{1}{2}$ miles north from Bensington. Pop., in 1801, 57; in 1831, 97. Houses 20. Acres 370. A. P. £963. Poor rates, in 1837, £79.

ASCOTT-UNDER-WYCHWOOD, a parochial chapelry in the hund. of Chadlington, union of Chipping-Norton, county of Oxford; 6 miles north-east from Burford. Living, a perpetual curacy, not in charge, in the archd. and dio. of Oxford; rated at £8 6s. 8d., in the parliamentary returns at £70; gross income £58. Patron, the vicar of Shipton-under-Wychwood. There are two daily and two Sunday schools here. Charities to the poor of this parish produce £44 18s. yearly. Pop., in 1801, 410; in 1831, 419. Houses 85. Acres 2,540. A. P. £1,995. Poor rates, in 1837, £190.

ASENBY, a township in the parish of Topcliffe, north riding of Yorkshire; $5\frac{1}{2}$ miles north from Boroughbridge. There are two daily schools here. Four boys from this township are educated at Topcliffe grammar-school. Pop., in 1801, 215; in 1831, 238. Houses 49. Acres 800. A. P. £1,481. Poor rates, in 1837, £78.

ASFORDBY. See ASHFORDBY.

ASGARBY, a parish in the hund. of Aswardburn, parts of Kesteven, Lincolnshire; $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles south-east from Sleaford. Living, a vicarage united to the rectory of Kirkby-Laythorpe, in the archd. and dio. of Lincoln; rated at £16 14s. 4d. Patron, in 1825, the marquis of Bristol. £10 a-year was bequeathed, in 1667, by Henry Pell, for the instruction of poor children in Asgarby, Howell, and Eveden, in the charity school of Asgarby. Pop., in 1801, 55; in 1831, 55. Houses 10. Acres 1,150. A. P. £977. Poor rates, in 1837, £30.

ASGARBY, a parish in Bolingbroke-soke West, parts of Lindsey, union of Sleaford, Lincolnshire; 6 miles north by west from Spilsby. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. and dio. of Lincoln; rated in the parliamentary returns at £14 8s.; gross income £34; in the patronage of the prebendary of the cathedral of Lincoln. There is a daily school here. Pop., in 1801, 59; in 1831, 144. Houses 15. Acres 1,590. A. P. £946. Poor rates, in 1837, £145.

ASH (THE), a small stream in Hertfordshire, which falls into the Lea, a little below the town of Ware.

ASH, a hamlet in the parish of Sutton-on-the-Hill, Derbyshire; 8 miles west by south from Derby. Pop., in 1831, 50. Houses 6.

ASH, a hamlet in the parish of Trowley, county of Devon; $7\frac{1}{2}$ miles east-south-east from Oakhamp-ton. The mansion house here was the birth-place of John Churchill, duke of Marlborough, in 1650. Returns with the parish.

ASH (NEAR SANDWICH), a parish in the hund. of Wingham, lathe of St Augustine, union of Eastry, county of Kent; 2 miles east by north from Wingham. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. and dio. of Canterbury; rated at £70, and in the parliamentary returns at £120; gross income £147. Patron, the archbishop of Canterbury. A school, in which about 70 children are educated, was endowed by Eleanor and Anne Cartwright, in 1731; and a school-house was built about 1818, by Elizabeth Godfrey; the annual income of which is upwards of £75. There are four other daily schools in the parish. Fairs are held on April 6th, and October 11th, for pedlery. The river Stour is here navigable, and is crossed by two ferries. In 1827 there were 142 acres of hops in this parish. The Central Kent railway intersects this parish. Pop., in 1801, 1,575; in 1831, 2,140. Houses 388. Acres 6,940. A. P. £15,640. Poor rates, in 1837, £1,532.—The ruins of the fortress called Richborough castle are in this parish. Near them is the supposed site of the Portus Rutupensis of the Romans. These remains stand on the brow of a hill near Sandwich, and consist of a wall 200 feet in length, from 10 to 30 in height, and 12 in thickness, inclosing an area of five acres. Many relics of antiquity have been dug up here.

ASH (NEXT RIDLEY), a parish in the hund. of Axton, Dartford, and Wilmington, lathe of Sutton-at-Hone, union of Dartford, county of Kent; 4 miles north by west from Wrotham. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Rochester; rated at £19 18s. 4d.; gross income £540. Patron, in 1835, M. Lambard, Esq. A free-school for twenty boys was endowed here in 1735, by the Rev. Samuel Atwood; yearly revenue £28 10s. There is also a school for girls. Both institutions are now united with the National society. There are other two daily schools. Pop., in 1801, 472; in 1831, 628. Houses 112. Acres 2,980. A. P. £3,297. Poor rates, in 1837, £385.

ASH, a parish, including the tything of Normandy, partly in the first division of the hund. of Godley, and partly in the first division of the hund. of Woking, Surrey; 5 miles north-east from Farnham, and 5 south of the London and Southampton railroad. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Surrey and dio. of Winchester; rated at £15 18s. 11d.; gross income £473; and in the patronage of Winchester college. Charities to the poor of this parish produce £15 15s. yearly. There are three daily schools here. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in agriculture. The Basingstoke canal, after running south to near the village of Ash, bends to the westward and enters Hampshire. Pop., in 1801, 1,133; in 1831, 2,001. Houses 388. Acres 12,650. A. P. £3,287. Pop., exclusive of the chapelry of Frimley, 601. Poor rates of Ash and Normandy, £307.

ASH, or ASNE, a parish in the hund. of Overton, Kingsclere division, union of Whitechurch, Hampshire; 5 miles east-north-east from Whitechurch, on the Great western road to Andover. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Winchester; rated at £9 11s. 5d.; gross income £487. Patron, in 1835, W. H. Beach, Esq. Pop., in 1801, 95; in 1831, 146. Houses 23. Acres 2,310. A. P. £1,877. Poor rates, in 1837, £276.

ASHAMPSTEAD, a chapelry in the hund. of Moreton, union of Bradfield, Berks; 5 miles south-east from East Ilsley. Living, a curacy annexed to the vicarage of Basildon, formerly in the archd. of Berks and dio. of Salisbury, now in the dio. of Oxford. A Baptist church was formed here in 1835

Pop., in 1801, 314; in 1831, 346. Houses 76. Acres 2,380. A. P. £2,297. Poor rates, in 1837, £155.

ASHAMSTEAD. See LEWKNOR.

ASH-BOCKING, or ASHBOCKEN, a parish in the hund. and union of Bosmere and Claydon, Suffolk. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Suffolk and dio. of Norwich; rated at £9 18s. 6½d.; gross income £340; and in the patronage of the crown. There is a National school here. Pop., in 1801, 186; in 1831, 234. Houses 39. Acres 750. A. P. £1,646. Poor rates, in 1837, £257.

ASHBOURNE, a parish, partly in the hund. of Appletree, partly in that of Morleston and Litchurch, but chiefly in that of Wirksworth, county of Derby. In the hundred of Appletree it comprises the townships of Hlland and Hlland-ward-Intacks, with the hamlets of Sturston, Hlland-ward, and Yeldersley; in the hundred of Morleston and Litchurch, the township of Clifton with Compton; and in the hundred of Wirksworth, the town of Ashbourne, the chapelry of Alsop-le-Dale with Eaton, and the liberties of Newton-Grange, and Offcoat with Underwood. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Derby and dio. of Lichfield, in connection with the rectory of Mapleton St Mary; rated at £5 4s. 7½d., in the parliamentary returns at £65; gross income £148. The patronage of the church, and the rectorial tithes, were given by William Rufus to the dean of Lincoln, with whose successors they still continue. The Wesleyan Methodists have a chapel here. There are two daily and Sunday National schools in the parish, with about 110 scholars. Pop., in 1801, 4,706; in 1831, 4,884. Houses 1,003. Acres 12,800. A. P. £25,906.

ASHBOURNE, ASHBURN, or ASHBORNE, a market-town on the confines of Derbyshire, in the parish of Ashbourne, hund. of Wirksworth; 139 miles north-west from London, and 13½ miles north-west from Derby. It is pleasantly situated on the river Dove, over which there is a stone bridge. The houses are in general of red brick, and roofed with slate; the streets are tolerably neat, and the supply of water is good. There are several news-rooms and libraries which are respectably supported. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the manufacture of cotton and tambour-lace; and large quantities of malt and cheese are exported. In 1838, there was one cotton-mill in this town, employing 213 hands. A market is held on Saturday; and fairs are held on the first Tuesday in January, and February 13th, for horses and cattle; April 3d, May 21st, and July 5th, for horses, cattle, and wool; August 16th, October 20th, and November 29th, for horses and cattle. If the 29th of November falls on Sunday, the fair is kept on the Saturday before, the rule being to keep it on the eve of St Andrew's day. The Commercial Bank of England has a branch here; also the Derby and Derbyshire Banking company. The projected railway from Derby to Macclesfield will pass between this place and Uttoxeter. Ashbourne is governed by the county-magistrates, who hold petty-sessions here and at Wirksworth. It is one of the polling places for the election of the members of the southern division of Derbyshire. The church of St Oswald was erected in 1240, by Hugh de Pattishull, bishop of Coventry. It was probably built upon or near the site of one more ancient, for there is mention made of a church at Ashburn in Domesday book. It is a spacious edifice in the form of a cross, having a central square tower with a lofty and ornamented octagonal spire. The northern part of the chancel is used as a sepulchral chapel for the Boothby family, and contains several monuments to the successive lords of the manor, and an exquisite monument from the chisel of Banks, to the memory of Penelope, only child of Sir Brooke Boothby, who died, in 1791, in her sixth year. It has been supposed that this monument suggested to Chantrey, his beautiful group of the two children, in Lichfield cathedral.—A Baptist church was formed here in 1826. The Methodists, and connexion of Lady Huntingdon, have also chapels here; the last was built by John Cooper, and endowed with £42 per annum in 1800. There are several daily schools. The free grammar-school was founded by Sir Thomas Cokaine and others, in 1585, under a charter of Elizabeth. It is endowed with estates producing £240 per annum, two-thirds of which, with a house and garden, are given to the master, and the remainder, with a house, to the usher. In 1833 there were 14 boys taught in this school. The English school, in which 30 boys are educated till they are fit to enter the grammar-school, was founded in 1710, and endowed by Mr Spalden with £10 per annum. The same person founded a school for 30 girls under twelve years of age, with a like endowment; and alms-houses for four widows of Protestant clergymen, and ten alms-houses for poor persons of the parish. Eight alms-houses were founded in 1610, by R. Owfield, which were endowed by various subsequent benefactions: six were founded in 1668, by Pegg, and endowed with an estate bequeathed by Jeremiah Pole; and six by John Cooper, for poor persons attending Lady Huntingdon's chapel, which have an endowment of £63 per annum. Ashbourne was a royal demesne at the time of the Conquest, and appears in Domesday book under the name of Esseburn. In 1644, a battle was fought near it, between the royalists and parliamentary armies, in which the former were defeated. In 1645, Charles I. visited Ashbourne, and attended divine service in the church. The manor-house was visited in 1745 by Charles Edward Stuart, accompanied by the dukes of Athol and Perth, who expelled the family of Sir Brooke Boothby, and kept possession for a night. Pop., in 1801, 2,006; in 1831, 2,246. A. P. £4,968. Poor rates, in 1837, £631.—In the immediate vicinity is the celebrated valley of Dovedale, whose romantic scenery attracts many visitors. See article DOVEDALE.

ASHBRITTLE (WZER), a parish in the hund. of Milverton, division of Wellington, union of Battle, Somersetshire; 5½ miles west from Wellington. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Taunton and dio. of Bath and Wells; rated at £19 3s. 11½d.; gross income £495. Patron, in 1835, John Quick, Esq. There are two daily schools here. Fairs for cattle are held on the last Monday in February, and 3d Monday in October. Pop., in 1801, 595; in 1831, 625. Houses 113. Acres 2,460. A. P. £2,816. Poor rates, in 1837, £202. The tithing of Greenham is included in this parish.

ASHBROOKE. See AMPNEY (St Mary), Gloucestershire.

ASHBURNHAM, a parish in the hund. of Foxearle, rape of Hastings, union of Battle, Sussex; 5 miles west from Battle. Living, a vicarage with the rectory of Penshurst united, in the archd. of Lewes and dio. of Chichester; rated at £8 13s. 4d.; gross income £318. Patron, in 1835, the earl of Ashburnham. There are two daily schools in this parish. Here is an alms-house for six poor widows, founded by one of the Ashburnham family. The village gives the name and title of Earl to the representatives of the Ashburnham family, who were lords of this manor before the Conquest. In the church are preserved the shirt and white silk drawers in which Charles I. was executed, and the watch which he gave to Mr John Ashburnham on the scaffold. They were bequeathed by one of his descendants to the clerk of this parish for ever. Pop., in 1801, 473; in 1831, 721. Houses 106. Acres 4,280, of which 91 were under hops in 1837. A. P. £2,593. Poor rates, in 1837, £278.

ASHBURTON, anciently called Aspertona, a borough, market-town, and parish, in the hund. of Teignbridge, union of Newton Abbot, Devonshire; 192 miles west-south-west from London, and 20 south-west from Exeter. It stands in a valley surrounded by hills, about half-a-mile from the river Dart, on the high road from London to Plymouth; and consists principally of one long street, the houses of brick, and roofed with slate. The small river Yeo runs through the town. In 1838 there were three woollen mills, employing 86 hands, in this parish. The market is held on Saturday. Fairs are held on the first Thursdays in March and June, August 10th, and November 11th, for horned cattle. The Devon and Cornwall Banking company have a branch here. The manor of Ashburton belonged originally to the see of Exeter; in the reign of James I. it was alienated to the Crown, and it has since passed through various hands. The town is under the jurisdiction of the county-magistrates. It was constituted one of the four stannary towns of Devon, in 1328; and a stannary court is sometimes held here. In the 26th Edward I. it returned two members to parliament, and also in the 8th Henry IV., from which time no members were returned till 1640, when the privilege was restored. It now returns only one member. The franchise extends to the whole parish. The paramount influence was formerly in the hands of Lord Clinton and Sir Lawrence Palk. The parish includes the chapelries of Bickington and Buckland-in-the-Moor. Living, a vicarage; rated at £38 8s. 11½d., and a peculiar of the dean and chapter of Exeter, who hold the patronage; gross income £825. The church was formerly collegiate, and some of the stalls are yet standing. It is situated on a hill to the north of the village, and is a venerable and specious building in the form of a cross, in the architecture of the 15th century, with a tower 90 feet high in the centre. The Baptists, Independents, and Wesleyan Methodists, have places of worship here. The Independent church was formed in 1700.—There were, in 1833, nine daily schools in this parish. The free grammar-school was founded and endowed in the 36th of Elizabeth, by Hugh Pomeroy, John Blundell, and others. The emoluments of the master are about £80 a-year. The late William Gifford, Esq., endowed this school with two scholarships of £30 each. In 1754, Lord Middleton, and John Harris, representatives of the borough, founded and endowed a free school, in which about 100 children are educated; yearly revenue £115. In 1805, Miss Mary Dunning left a bequest of £6 a-year for the education of ten poor girls. The sum of £10 a-year was left by Lawrence Blundell in 1637, for the maintenance and education of two poor scholars at the university. There are two daily and Sunday National schools, with about 310 scholars, and an infant school attended by about 80, in this parish. Other charities connected with the parish produce £105 15s. 11d. yearly. John Dunning, Lord Ashburton, the celebrated lawyer, was born here in 1731, and lies interred in the church. Dr Ireland, dean of Westminster, and the late Mr Gifford, editor of the Quarterly Review, were also natives of this place. Pop., in 1801, 3,080; in 1831, 4,165. Houses 513. Acres 8,320. A. P. £7,849. Poor rates, in 1837, £1,675. There are penny-posts to Buckfastleigh and Brent.

ASHBURY, a parish in the hund. of Shrivenham, union of Farringdon, near the vale of Whitehorse, Berks; 6 miles north-west from Lambourne.

It contains the tythings of Idstone and Odstone, and the hamlets of Ashbury and Chapelwick. Living, a sinecure rectory, formerly in the archd. of Berks and dio. of Salisbury, now in the dio. of Oxford; rated at £30 12s. 6d.; gross income £570. Patron, the bishop of Bath and Wells. Annexed to this is a discharged vicarage; rated at £11 16s. 1½d., with the chapelry of Chapelwick; gross income £580, and in the patronage of Magdalene college, Oxford. The rectorial and vicarial tithes, the property of the clerical rector and the vicar, were commuted in 1770. There are two Sunday schools. The charities to the poor of this parish produce £13 13s. yearly. Pop., in 1801, 634; in 1831, 698. Houses 130. Acres 5,520. A. P. £2,427. Poor rates, in 1837, £262.

ASHBURY, a parish in the hund. of Black Torrington, union of Okehampton, Devonshire; 5 miles south-west of Hatherleigh; on a branch of the Torridge. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. of Totness and dio. of Exeter; rated at £5 13s. 4d., and in the parliamentary returns at £110; gross income £109; in the patronage of the Crown. Pop., in 1801, 41; in 1831, 74. Houses 8. Acres 1,650. A. P. £508.

ASHBY WITH FENBY, a parish in the wapentake of Bradley-Haverstoe, parts of Lindsey, union of Caistor, Lincolnshire; 5½ miles south by east of Great Grimsby. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Lincoln; rated at £4 10s. 10d.; gross income £324; in the patronage of the Crown. Pop., in 1801, 152; in 1831, 179. Houses 43. Acres 1,620. A. P. £1,778. Poor rates, in 1837, £110.

ASHBY BY PARTNEY, sometimes called ASHBY BY SPILSBY, a parish in the Wold division of the wapentake of Candleshoe, parts of Lindsey, union of Spilsby, Lincolnshire; 2 miles east from Spilsby, and 1½ south-east from Partney. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. and dio. of Lincoln; rated at £7 10s. 2½d.; gross income £162. Patron, in 1835, Dr Fowler, bishop of Osory. The chancel of the church was covered with thatch so late as 1824. The great and small tithes, moduses, &c., the property of the clerical rector, were commuted in 1811. Pop., in 1801, 114; in 1831, 170. Houses 31. Acres 1,210. A. P. £1,472. Poor rates, in 1837, £115.

ASHBY, a township in the parish of Bottesford, union of Glandford Brigg, Lincolnshire; 1 mile north of Bottesford. Tithes commuted in 1801. There are three daily schools in this township. Pop., in 1801, 192; in 1831, 378. Houses 73. A. P. £2,166. Poor rates, in 1837, £166.

ASHBY, a parish in the hund. of Loddon, union of Loddon and Clavering, Norfolk; 7 miles south-east of Norwich. Living, a discharged rectory united with Carlton, in the archd. of Norfolk and dio. of Norwich; rated at £6. Patrons, Sir W. Beauchamp and Sir C. H. Rich. Pop., in 1801, 186; in 1831, 218. Houses 53. Acres 640. A. P. £397. Poor rates, in 1837, £62.

ASHBY, a parish in the hund. of West Flegg, Norfolk. Living, a rectory in connection with those of Oby and Thirne, in the archd. and dio. of Norwich; rated at £10; gross income £700. Patron, the bishop of Norwich. Pop., in 1801, including that of the parish of Oby, 47; in 1831, 82. Houses 11. Acres 1,150. A. P. £2,104. Poor rates, in 1837, £147.

ASHBY, a parish in the hund. of Lothingland, Suffolk; 5 miles north-west of Lowestoft. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. of Suffolk and dio. of Norwich; rated at £8; gross income £214. Patron, George Anguish, Esq. Pop., in 1801, 42; in 1831, 42. Houses 8. Acres 800. A. P. £558. Poor rates, in 1837, £43.

ASHBY (CANONS), a parish in the hund. of Greens Norton, union of Daventry, Northamptonshire; 8 miles west by north of Towcester. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. of Northampton and dio. of Peterborough. Patron, Sir H. Dryden, Bart. "A priory of Black canons, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, was founded here as early as King John's reign, if not before. About the time of the dissolution herein were thirteen religious, who were endowed with £127 19s., Speed. The site was granted, 29th Henry VIII. to Sir Francis Bryan."—Tanner's Not. Mon. Pop., in 1801, 40; in 1831, 31. Houses 5. Acres 1,410. A. P. £2,763.

ASHBY (CASTLE), a parish in the hund. of Wymersley, union of Hardingstone, Northamptonshire; 7½ miles east by south of Northampton. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Northampton and dio. of Peterborough; rated at £17 9s. 7d.; gross income £283. Patron, the marquis of Northampton. Pop., in 1801, 123; in 1831, 150. Houses 28. Acres 1,740. A. P. £2,634. Poor rates, in 1837, £125. —Yardley chase is within the demesnes of the marquis of Northampton in this parish.

ASHBY (COLL), a parish in the hund. of Guildsbrough, union of Brixworth, Northamptonshire; 10 miles north-west of Northampton; on the post-road to Lutterworth. Living, a vicarage in the archd. of Northampton and dio. of Peterborough; rated at £6 0s. 5d., and in the parliamentary returns at £131 4s.; gross income £230. Patron, in 1835, W. Musley. There is a free school for poor children here, which has an endowment of £18 per annum, arising from property left in 1710 by William Wickes, and £4 10s. bequeathed by Richard Ward in 1736. In 1833 there were 21 children attending this school. There are another small daily school and an infant school. The church-lands connected with this parish produce a yearly rent of £15 16s. 2d. Cold Ashton was the birth-place of Richard Knolles, author of the History of the Turks. Pop., in 1801, 379; in 1831, 385. Houses 86. Acres 1,940. A. P. £3,211. Poor rates, in 1837, £221.

ASHBY-DE-LA-LAUNDE, a parish in the wapentake of Flaxwell, parts of Kesteven, union of Sleaford, Lincolnshire; 7 miles north of Sleaford. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Lincoln; rated at £6 8s. 4d.; gross income £300. Patron, Neville King, Esq. The church consists of a nave and chancel. The great and small tithes, &c. the property of the lord of the manor and the vicar, were commuted in 1807. There is a small daily school here. Pop., in 1801, 127; in 1831, 178. Houses 22. Acres 2,860. A. P. £2,394. Poor rates, in 1837, £183.

ASHBY-DE-LA-ZOUCH, a market-town and parish in the hund. of East Goscote, union of Ashby-de-la-Zouch, Leicestershire; 11½ miles north-west by north of London, and 18 miles north-west by west of Leicester. It stands in a pleasant situation on the borders of Derbyshire, on the road from Leicester to Burton-on-Trent. The living is a discharged vicarage with the chapelry of Blackfordby annexed, formerly in the archd. of Leicester and dio. of Lincoln, now in the dio. of Peterborough; rated at £14 10s. 4d.; gross income £421. Patron, the marquis of Hastings. The church is an ancient edifice, in the decorated style of architecture. It consists of a nave and two chapels, separated by four lofty arches, springing from fluted pillars, and contains several monuments of the Huntingdon family. All tithes of the lordship or liberty, the property of the lord of the manor and the vicar, were commuted in 1768. The great and small tithes of the parish, the property of the lord of the manor and the vicar, were commuted in 1799–1800. A new church in the early English style, and capable of accommodating 900 persons, is now erecting. The Independents, Wesleyan Methodists, Baptists, and Lady Huntingdon's connexion, have places of worship here. Kilwardley Independent church was formed about the year 1700.—The free grammar-school, which was founded in 1567 by Henry, earl of Huntingdon, and others, has an endowment of 120 houses, and 75 acres of land. There are ten exhibitions of £10 per annum each, in Emanuel college, Cambridge, founded by Francis Ash, merchant and citizen of London; to which, after a preference has been given to the relations of the founder, scholars of this free school, and that of Derby, have a claim. The school is now attended by about 100 boys. Joseph Hall, afterwards bishop of Exeter, was its first head-master. A free school for 26 boys was founded here by Isaac Dawson in 1660, and endowed with £25 per annum; another was founded by Alderman Newton of Leicester. The Langley charity school had 36 children in 1833. The Rev. Simeon Ash, a native of this town, left £50 per annum, directing that £40 should be given to the poor, and £10 employed for the apprenticing of two boys in some corporate town. There are two schools on the British system, at which about 300 children are educated; and two National schools, besides several small daily schools, five Sunday schools, and a boarding school.

Ashby-de-la-Zouch consists chiefly of one principal street, with two smaller streets running in a parallel direction, and contains several well-built houses. A set of baths have been erected, called the Ivanhoe baths, which are supplied with water containing a large proportion of sea-salt from the neighbouring collieries. There are lodging-houses, a good hotel, a theatre, and other sources of attraction requisite in a place of fashionable resort. Hosiery of the coarser kind, and hats, are manufactured here; bricks are made in considerable numbers; and a furnace has been erected for smelting iron-ore, which is found in the wold. The town is governed by a constable and two head-boroughs, who are annually appointed at the court-leet of the lord of the manor; it is under the jurisdiction of the county-magistrates, and within that of a court of pleas held at Tutbury. The Ashby-de-la-Zouch poor-law union embraces a district of 83 square miles, containing a population, returned, in 1831, at 22,554. The average expenditure upon the poor of this district during the three years preceding the union, was £8,442. The expenditure in 1838 was £5,557. Saturday is the market-day; and fairs are held on Shrove Monday, Easter Tuesday, Whit Tuesday, the last Monday in September, and November 10th, for horses and cattle. There is a branch of the Leicestershire Banking company here. The Ashby-de-la-Zouch canal connects this place with Coventry. It is 26½ miles in length, and upon an uninterrupted level; but the course is very winding. There is a branch to Ticknall in Derbyshire, and another to Cloughshill in Leicestershire.

The name of the town seems to have been derived from the Saxon asc, an ash, and bye, a habitation. It takes the distinctive appellation from the ancient Norman French family of La Zouch, in whose possession the manor continued from the time of Henry III. till the year 1461. A strong castle was built here by Sir William Hastings, created Baron Hastings by Edward IV., and beheaded here by Richard III. In this castle Mary, queen of Scots, was for some time confined; and here Anne, consort of James I., and her son, Prince Henry, were magnificently entertained by the earl of Huntingdon, on their journey from York to London in 1603. In the beginning of the parliamentary war, the earl of Huntingdon was one of the first supporters of the king, and his castle of Ashby was garrisoned by his son, Colonel Henry Hastings, soon after created Baron Loughborough. The castle was besieged by Fairfax; and in February, 1646, Lord Loughborough surrendered it to Colonel Newham on honourable terms. This castle was one of the fortresses destroyed by order of the house of commons about the end of the year 1648. Portions of the hall, the chapel, and the kitchen, are yet standing, and form an extensive and interesting mass of ruins on the south of the town. A large portion of the town was destroyed by fire in the year 1753. A number of Roman coins have been found in the neighbourhood. The celebrated Joseph Hall, bishop of Norwich, was born here in 1574; and Dr John Bainbridge, a celebrated astronomer and mathematician, in 1582. Pop. of the town, in 1801, 2,674; in 1831, 4,400. Houses 783. Acres 6,980. Poor rates, in 1837, £1,206. Pop. of the parish, in 1801, 2,917; in 1831, 4,727. Houses 850. Acres 8,300. A. P. £12,764.—In the neighbourhood of Aahby-de-la-Zouch is the Trappist monastery of our Lady of Mount St Bernard; and at Grace Dieu is a fine Roman Catholic chapel, in the Gothic style, consecrated in 1838. There are penny-posts to Overscal, Measham, Appleby, Twycross, and Sheepy.

ASHBY-FOLVILLE, a parish and township in the hund. of East Goscote, union of Melton-Mowbray, Leicestershire; 6 miles south-west from Melton-Mowbray. Living, a discharged vicarage, formerly in the archd. of Leicester and dio. of Lincoln, now in the dio. of Peterborough; rated at £9, and in the parliamentary returns at £140; gross income £170. Patron, in 1835, J. Brown, Esq. Pop. of the village, in 1801, 135; in 1831, 161. Houses 41. Acres 1,800. Poor rates, in 1837, £106. William Folville, a Franciscan friar of some note in the controversy 'De pueris induendia,' was born here. Pop. of the parish, in 1801, 337; in 1831, 391. Houses 99. Acres 2,830. A. P. £2,715. Poor rates, in 1837, £212.—See BARBY.

ASHBY-MAGNA, a parish in the hund. of Guthlaxton, union of Lutterworth, Leicestershire; 4 miles north by east from Lutterworth. Living, a vicarage, formerly in the archd. of Leicester and dio. of Lincoln, now in the dio. of Peterborough; rated at £7 8s. 11½d., and in the parliamentary returns at £92; gross income £121. Patron, in 1835, the earl of Aylesford. Pop., in 1801, £223; in 1831, 330. Houses 64. Acres 1,720. A. P. £2,490. Poor rates, in 1837, £175.

ASHBY-MEARS. See MEARS-ASHBY.

ASHBY-PARVA, a parish in the hund. of Guthlaxton, union of Lutterworth, Leicestershire; 3 miles north by west from Lutterworth. Living, a rectory, formerly in the archd. of Leicester and dio. of Lincoln, now in the dio. of Peterborough; rated at £5 7s. 6d., and in the parliamentary returns at £100; gross income £99; in the patronage of the Crown. A new church has been recently built here. The Midland Counties railway passes within a mile of the village. Pop., in 1801, 135; in 1831, 169. Houses 35. Acres 1,260. A. P. £2,155. Poor rates, in 1837, £87.

ASHBY-PUERORUM, so called from an estate here which was bequeathed to the Lincoln choristers, a parish in the wapentake of Hill, parts of Lindsey, union of Horncastle, Lincolnshire; 4 miles north-east from Horncastle. It includes Stainsby hamlet and Holbeck. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Lincoln; rated at £6 3s. 2d., and in the parliamentary returns at £110; gross income £118. The church, a small antique structure, has a massive stone-tower. Patrons, the masters of the choristers of Lincoln cathedral. Pop., in 1801, 99; in 1831, 101. Houses 25. Acres 1,620.

A. P. £1,527. Poor rates, in 1837, £72.—Some Roman antiquities have been found here.

ASHBY (St LEONARDS), a parish in the hund. of Fawley, union of Daventry, Northamptonshire; 4 miles north from Daventry, and 2 west of the Lincoln and Birmingham railway. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Northampton and dio. of Peterborough; rated at £6 13s. 4d.; gross income £130. Patron, in 1835, J. Ashley, Esq. The church contains a richly ornamented screen and rood-loft, with some ancient stained glass in the windows. The impropriate and vicarial tithes, the property of the lay-impropriator and the vicar, were commuted in 1764. Charities connected with this parish produce £43 15s. yearly. There is a small daily school. The eastern side of the parish is bounded by the Roman road, Watling-street. This manor belonged to the Cateby family; one of whom is known as the favourite of Richard III., and the other as the projector of the Gunpowder plot. The tomb of the former still remains within the communion-rails of the church. Pop., in 1801, 232; in 1831, 257. Houses 56. Acres 2,050. A. P. £3,608. Poor rates, in 1837, £144.

ASHBY (WEST), a parish in Horncastle soke, parts of Lindsey, union of Horncastle, Lincolnshire; 2 miles north from Horncastle. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. and dio. of Lincoln; gross income £55. Patron, in 1835, the bishop of Carlisle. The church consists of a nave and chancel, with a tower. The great and small tithes, &c. the property of the bishop of Carlisle, were commuted in 1771. There are two daily schools here. Pop., in 1801, 297; in 1831, 391. Houses 84. Acres 1,590. A. P. £3,471. Poor rates, in 1837, £275.

ASHCHURCH, a parish in the lower division of the hund. and union of Tewkesbury, Gloucestershire; 2 miles east-north-east from Tewkesbury. It contains the tythings of Aston-upon-Carron, Fiddington and Natton, Northway and Newton, and Pamington. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. of Gloucester and dio. of Gloucester and Bristol; rated at £23, and in the parliamentary returns at £41 16s.; gross income £50. Patron, in 1835, F. H. Romney. The chapel consists of a nave, chancel, and northern aisle. Certain tithes of Aston-upon-Carron and Pamington, Homedowns, the property of the impropriators and feoffees of Bredon alms-houses, commuted in 1812. There are four daily schools in the parish. Charities connected with the parish produce £26 yearly. There is a mineral spring here, the water of which is similar to that of Cheltenham. The Tewkesbury branch railway will here join the Birmingham and Gloucester railway. Pop., in 1801, 558; in 1831, 649. Houses 131. Acres 4,240. A. P. £7,265. Poor rates, in 1837, £304.

ASHCOMBE, a parish in the hund. of Exminster, union of St Thomas, Devonshire; 2½ miles east from Chudleigh. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Exeter; rated at £18; gross income £247; in the patronage of the Crown. There are two charity schools here, which are supported partly by subscription, and partly by an endowment of £3 per annum. Pop., in 1801, 280; in 1831, 320. Houses 51. Acres 2,250. A. P. £9,265. Poor rates, in 1837, £225.

ASHCOTT, a chapelry in the parish of Shapwick, hund. of Whitley, union of Bridgewater, Somerset; 5 miles west-south-west from Glastonbury; on the post-road to Bridgewater. Living, a curacy annexed to the vicarage of Shapwick, in the archd. of Wells and dio. of Bath and Wells. The Wesleyan Methodists have a chapel here. Charities connected with this chapelry produce £70 per annum. Pop., in 1801, 358; in 1831, 834. Houses 135. Acres 2,890. A. P. £3,319. Poor rates, in 1837, £195.

ASHDON, or ASHINGDON, a parish and township in the hund. of Freshwell, union of Saffron-Walden, county of Essex, near the borders of Cambridgeshire; 3½ miles north-east from Saffron-Walden. It includes the hamlet of Bartlow-End: which see. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Colchester and dio. of London; rated at £28 3s. 4d.; gross income, £727; in the patronage of Gonville and Caius college, Cambridge. There is a National school here with about 70 children. Charities connected with the parish produce £25 yearly. A Baptist church was formed here in 1809. In this parish there are four pyramidal mounds or barrows, supposed to be the sepulchral monuments of the Danish chiefs, who fell in the battle of Assandune, between Edmund Ironside and Canute, in 1016. Holinshed says, "In the place, where the battle was fought, are yet seven or eight hills, wherein the carcasses of them that were slain at the same field were buried; and one being digged down of late, there were found two bodies in a stone coffin, the one laie with his head towards the other's feet, and manie chains of iron of horses were found in the same hill."—"A few yeares after, Canute ordered a church to be built at Ashdon, in honour of the victories obtained over Edmund, at the dedication of which Canute himself was present, attended by great numbers of the nobilitie and clergy." Pop. of the parish, in 1801, 893; in 1831, 1,103. Houses 218. Acres 4,840. A. P. £5,025. Pop. of the village, in 1801, 710; in 1831, 898. Houses 189. Poor rates, in 1837, £611.

ASHDOWN FOREST, in the hund. of East Greenstead, Hartfield, and Loxfield, county of Dorset; and of Rushmonden, rape of Pevensey, county of Sussex. In Burrell's MSS., we find the following notice of this forest:—"The forest of Ashdown or Lancaster Great park, according to the parliamentary survey, lies in the parishes of Marsfield, East Greenstead, Hartfield, Withyham and Bucksted, all which parcel of impayled ground contains 13,991 acres, and was estimated by the commissioners to be worth £2,256 3s. 4d. per annum."

ASHELDHAM, a parish in the hund. of Dengie, union of Malden, Essex; 4 miles south-south-west from Bradwell. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Essex and dio. of London; rated at £16 13s. 4d.; gross income, £348. Patron, the bishop of London. Pop., in 1801, 127; in 1831, 144. Houses 19. Acres 1,810. A. P. £2,248. Poor rates, in 1837, £237.

ASHELWORTH, a parish in a detached portion of the upper division of the hund. of Berkeley, union of Gloucester, county of Gloucester; 5½ miles north from Gloucester. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Gloucester and dio. of Gloucester and Bristol; rated at £10 2s. 11d.; gross income £187. Patron, the bishop of Bristol. The church consists of a nave, aisle, and two chancels, with a tower and spire. The great and small tithes, the property of the bishop of Bristol and the vicar, were commuted in 1797. There are two daily schools in the parish. It is bounded on the south-east by the Severn, which is here navigable. Charities to the poor of the parish £30 per annum. Pop., in 1801, 476; in 1831, 540. Houses 88. Acres 1,710. A. P. £2,727. Poor rates, in 1837, £152.

ASHEN, a parish in the hund. of Hinckford, union of Risbridge, Essex; 2½ miles south-west from Clare. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Middlesex and dio. of London; rated at £8; gross income £304; in the patronage of the Crown. There is a National school here. In the 17th Edward II. there was here a priory of Augustine friars. Pop., in 1801, 217; in 1831, 373. Houses 67. Acres 2,220. A. P. £2,107. Poor rates, in 1837, £169.

ASHENDON HUNDRED, in the county of Bucks, is bounded on the north by Buckingham hundred; on the east by Cottesloe hundred; on the south by Aylesbury hundred; and on the south-west and west by Oxfordshire. Area in English statute acres 66,670. Pop., in 1831, 12,933. Houses 2,556.

ASHENDON, a parish in the above hundred; 5½ miles north from Thame. Living, a perpetual curacy with that of Dourton united, in the archd. of Bucks and dio. of Lincoln; rated at £108, in the parliamentary returns at £120, gross income £106. Patron, the dean and chapter of Christ church, Oxford. Petty sessions are held here for the three hundreds of Ashendon, exclusive of the Quainton division. Pop., in 1801, 248; in 1831, with the hamlet of Pollecot, 368. Houses 60. Acres 1,790. A. P. £3,306. Poor rates, in 1837, £208.

ASHFIELD, a parish in the hund. of Thredling, union of Bosmere and Claydon, Suffolk; 2 miles east of Debenham; in connection with the chapelry of Thorpe. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. of Suffolk and dio. of Norwich; rated at £6, in the parliamentary returns at £32; gross income £55. The chapel is now in ruins. Patron, in 1835, Lord Henniker. Pop., in 1801, 252; in 1831, 375. Houses 42. Acres 1,560. A. P. £1,901. Poor rates, in 1837, £226.

ASHFIELD (GREAT), a parish in the hund. of Blackburn, union of Stow, Suffolk; 6 miles north-north-west from Stowmarket. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. of Suffolk and dio. of Norwich; rated in the parliamentary returns at £16; gross income £65. Patron, Lord Thurlow. Charities connected with this parish, £104 per annum. This was the birth-place of the Lord-chancellor Thurlow, in 1735, and of his brother the bishop of Durham. Pop., in 1801, 270; in 1831, 401. Houses 47. Acres 2,030. A. P. £1,901. Poor rates, in 1837, £182.

ASHFORD, a chapelry to the vicarage of Bakewell, hund. of High Peak, union of Bakewell, county of Derby; 2 miles north-west of Bakewell; on the road to Tideswell. Living, a perpetual curacy, a peculiar of the dean and chapter of Lichfield; rated at £2 1s., in the parliamentary returns at £91 12s. 4d.; gross income £102. Patron, the vicar of Bakewell. A Baptist church has existed here since 1700. The village is very beautifully situated on the Wey, which is here crossed by three stone bridges. On the banks are several mills for cutting and polishing black marble, of which there are quarries in the vicinity; these mills having been the first of the kind established in England. In 1631, William Harris founded a school here for poor children; it is endowed with £7 16s. 4d. per annum. In 1833, this school was attended by 38 children. There are four other daily schools. Near the church stood the mansion of Edward Plantagenet, of Woodstock, earl of Kent, which has entirely disappeared, and the site is only to be traced by the moat. Pop., in 1801, 678; in 1831, 782. Houses 155. A. P. £3,217. Poor rates, in 1837, £391.

ASHFORD, a parish in the hund. and division of Branton, union of Barnstaple, Devonshire; 2 miles north-west from Barnstaple; on the north side estuary of the Taw. Living, a vicarage in the archd. of Barnstaple and dio. of Exeter, in the patronage of the Crown. It is rated at £8 13s. 9d., in the parliamentary returns at £96 9s. 6d.; gross income £119. There is a daily school here. Pop., in 1801, 73; in 1831, 99. Houses 24. Acres 2,170. A. P. £662. Poor rates, in 1837, £58.

ASHFORD, a market-town, parish, and liberty, in the hund. of Chart and Longbridge, lathe of Scray, union of West Ashford, Kent; 5½ miles east-south-east from London; 12½ miles south-west from Canterbury. It stands in an agreeable situation near the river Stour, over which there is a bridge of four arches, to the east of the town. The principal street is nearly half a mile in length, and is paved and lighted. There are subscription libraries, and races are held annually for one day. A market is held on Tuesday, for corn; and fairs are held on the first and third Tuesday in every month, for cattle; on the 17th of May, 2d of August, for wool; 9th September, and 12th and 24th October, for horses, cattle, and pedlery. The market was first established in the reign of Edward I. Some linen is manufactured here. The town is one of the polling-places for the county. It is under the jurisdiction of the county-magistrates. The custom of gavel-kind prevails in this manor.—Living, a vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Canterbury; rated at £18 4s. 2d.; gross income £547. Patrons, the dean and chapter of Rochester. The church, formerly collegiate, is a spacious and ancient structure in the form of a cross. It consists of a nave, aisles, and three chancels, with a lofty tower; at the southern entrance there is a fine Norman arch. In a small chapel adjoining the south transept are three sumptuous monuments of marble, to the memory of the Smyths of Westenhanger; and in front of the altar steps is a very ancient monument to the duchess of Athol, who died in 1375. This building was, in a great measure, erected in the reign of Edward IV. by Sir John Fogge, who also founded a college for a master, two chaplains, and two secular clerks. The house still exists, and is used as the vicarage, but the college was dissolved in the reign of Henry VII. Leland in his Itinerary says: "A college was intended to have been founded in the parish of St Mary, by Sir John Fogge, comptroller to King Edward IV. But King Edward dyed ere Fogge had finished this enterprise, so that now remaineth to Ashford only the name of a prebend. The place hath lands, priests, and choristers, but removeable, for they have no commune seale." "But," says Bishop Tanner, "there is mention of Dr Sutton, master of the college here, as patron of Daunton, in Essex, A.D. 1496." The Baptists, Wesleyan Methodists, Society of Friends, and connection of the countess of Huntingdon, have chapels here. Sir Norton Knatchbull, in 1638, founded a free grammar-school here, with an endowment of £30 per annum, and vested the appointment of a master in his own family. This school was revived in 1832, and had 50 scholars in 1833. There are two National schools, which are supported partly by subscription, and partly by a bequest of £20 a-year, left by a Dr Thomas Turner, in 1702. There are several other daily and two infant schools. Dr Wallis, the celebrated mathematician, was born here in 1616. The family of Keppel, earls of Albemarle, has the title of Baron from this place. The line of the South-eastern railroad passes in the vicinity of Ashford, which is 45 miles distant from its junction with the Brighton railway; and 6½ from London. A branch has been projected from Ashford to Ramsgate, 28 miles 73 chains in length; also a branch to Sandwich. Pop., in 1801, 2,151; in 1831, 2,800. Houses 529. Acres 2,950. A. P. £8,387. Poor rates, in 1837, £737. There are penny-posts to Brabourne, Lease, and Wye.

ASHFORD, a parish in the hund. of Spelthorne, union of Staines, Middlesex; 3 miles east from Staines. Living, a curacy subordinate to Staines, in the archd. of Middlesex and dio. of London; in the patronage of the Crown. All tithes, &c. the property of the lord of the manor and vicar, were commuted in 1809. There are an infant, a daily, and an endowed Sabbath school, in this parish. Pop., in 1801, 264; in 1831, 458. Houses 81. Acres 1,500. A. P. £2,817. Poor rates, in 1837, £277.

ASHFORD-BOWDLER, a parish in the hund. of Munslow, union of Ludlow, county of Salop; 3 miles south from Ludlow; on the post-road to Tenbury. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. of Salop and dio. of Hereford; rated at £9; in the parliamentary returns at £40; gross income £55. Pop., in 1801, 79; in 1831, 99. Houses 17. Acres 630. A. P. £1,212. Poor rates, in 1837, £58.

ASHFORD-CARBONELL, a parish partly in the hund. of Munslow, and partly in that of Stot-teden, union of Ludlow, county of Salop; 3 miles south-south-east from Ludlow. The Teme separates this parish from Ashford Bowdler. Living, a curacy subordinate to the rectory of Little Hereford, in the peculiar jurisdiction of the chancellor of the cathedral of Hereford; rated at £10, and endowed with £800 royal bounty. Patron, the rector of Little Hereford. Pop., in 1801, 227; in 1831, 289. Houses 52. Acres 1,480. A. P. £722. Poor rates, in 1837, £193.

ASHFORDBY, or ASFORDBY, a parish in the hund. of Goscote-East, union of Melton-Mowbray, Leicestershire. Living, a rectory, formerly in the archd. of Leicester and dio. of Lincoln, now in the dio. of Peterborough; rated at £15 11s. 8d.; gross income £475. Patrons, in 1835, the incumbent (Rev. A. Burnaby), and his two sisters. There is a school here, towards the support of which, Morris Cam bequeathed £150, in 1769. There are other three daily schools. The village of Ashfordby is situated 3 miles west of Melton-Mowbray, on the river Wreak, which communicates with the Oakham and Melton-Mowbray navigation. Pop., in 1801, 364; in 1831, 467. Houses 93. Acres 1,210. A. P. £3,066. Poor rates, in 1837, £237.

ASHILL, a parish in the hund. of Wayland, union of Swaffham, Norfolk; 3½ miles north-west from Watton. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Norwich; rated at £19 13s. 6½d.; gross income £870. Patron, in 1835, the Rev. B. Edwards. The great and small tithes, the property of the clerical rector, were commuted in 1761. A day and Sunday National school was established here in 1821. The poor of this parish have right of pasture to a common of 43 acres; the other charities produce £36 a-year. The manor was held in the reign of Henry III. by the family of De Hastings. Pop., in 1801, 482; in 1831, 700. Houses 129. Acres 2,970. A. P. £5,366. Poor rates, in 1837, £347.

ASHILL, a parish in the hund. of Abdick and Bulston, union of Chard, Somerset; 3 miles north-west from Ilminster. Living, a discharged vicarage, and a peculiar of the prebendary of the cathedral of Wells, who is also patron. It is rated at £6 0s. 10d., in the parliamentary returns at £130; gross income £96. This parish contains the hamlets of Jordans, Rowlands, Southton, Wimbleton, and Wood. The Chard canal intersects it. Fairs are held on Easter Wednesday, first Wednesday after September 12, for cattle and pedlery. Pop., in 1801, 316; in 1831, 403. Houses 72. Acres 1,860. A. P. £3,855. Poor rates, in 1837, £164.

ASHINGDON, or ASSWEDEN, a parish in the hund. and union of Rochford, Essex; 2½ miles north from Rochford. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. of Essex and dio. of London; rated at £3 13s. 4d.; gross income £261. Patron, in 1835, Josiah Nottidge, Esq. By many, this is supposed to be the Assandune, where Canute vanquished the Saxons under Edmund Ironside. Pop., in 1801, 59;

in 1831, 98. Houses 16. Acres 1,020. A. P. £1,519. Poor rates, in 1837, £72.

ASHINGTON. See BOTHELL.

ASHINGTON, a parish in the hund. of Stone, division and union of Yeovil, Somerset; $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles east-south-east from Ilchester. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. of Wells and dio. of Bath and Wells; rated at £6 3s. 4d.; gross income £180. Patron, in 1835, John Williams. Five boys of this parish are educated in the school of Marston-Magna. Pop., in 1801, 62; in 1831, 74. Houses 8. Acres 550. A. P. £1,700. Poor rates, in 1837, £47.

ASHINGTON, a parish in the hund. of West Grinstead, rape of Bramber, union of Thakeham, Sussex; 5 miles north from Steyning. Living, a rectory with Buncton annexed, in the archd. and dio. of Chichester; rated at £8 5s.; gross income £207. Patron, in 1835, the duke of Norfolk. Pop., in 1801, 173; in 1831, 285. Houses 47. Acres 1,430. A. P. £865. Poor rates, in 1837, £133.

ASHLEY, a township in the parish of Bowdon, co.-palatine of Chester; 5 miles north-north-east from Nether Knutsford. There are two small daily schools here. Pop., in 1801, 288; in 1831, 379. Houses 63. Acres 2,390. A. P. £3,131. Poor rates, in 1837, £200.

ASHLEY, a parish in the hund. of Corby, union of Market-Harborough, Northamptonshire; 4 miles west from Rockingham; bounded on the north by the river Welland. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Northampton and dio. of Peterborough; rated at £17; gross income £395. Patron, in 1835, the Rev. R. Farrer. The great and small tithes, moduses, &c. the property of the clerical rector, were commuted in 1806. There is a Baptist church here; and two daily, and two Sunday schools. Charities to the poor of this parish produce £28 yearly. Pop., in 1801, 333; in 1831, 304. Houses 74. Acres 2,190. A. P. £1,978. Poor rates, in 1837, £271. —A remarkable whirlwind occurred here on the 50th October, 1660.

ASHLEY, a parish in the hund. of Buddlegate, Winchester division, union of Stockbridge, Hampshire; 3 miles south-east from Stockbridge. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Winchester; rated at £7 16s. 3d.; gross income £375. Patron, in 1835, the Rev. B. C. Taunton. There is a day and Sunday school here. Pop., in 1801, 92; in 1831, 98. Houses 18. Acres 2,580. A. P. £1,066. Poor rates, in 1837, £38.

ASHLEY. See NEWCHURCH, Isle of Wight.

ASHLEY, a parish in the hund. of North Pirehill, Staffordshire; 6 miles north-west from Eccleshall, 56 miles by railway from Liverpool, and 41 $\frac{1}{2}$ from Birmingham. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Stafford and dio. of Lichfield; rated at £10 2s. 8 $\frac{1}{2}$ d.; gross income £420. Patrons, in 1835, Thomas Kinneraley and — Meynell, Esqs. Charities to the poor of the parish produce £22 yearly. There are a Roman Catholic chapel, a National school, and three other daily schools in this parish, besides four Sunday schools. Pop., in 1801, 605; in 1831, 825. Houses 169. Acres 2,600. A. P. £3,206. Poor rates, in 1837, £203.

ASHLEY, a parish in the division of Malmesbury, union of Tetbury, Wilts; 5 miles north from Malmesbury. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. of Wilts and dio. of Salisbury; rated at £9 16s. 6 $\frac{1}{2}$ d.; gross income £199; in the patronage of the Crown. There is a day and Sunday school here. Pop., in 1801, 75; in 1831, 99. Houses 19. Acres 1,010. A. P. £1,214. Poor rates, in 1837, £43.

ASHLEY-GREEN. See CHESHAM.

ASHLEY-CUM-SYLVERLEY, a parish in the hund. of Cheveley, union of Newmarket, Cambridge;

3 miles south-east from Newmarket. Living, a rectory, formerly in the archd. of Sudbury and dio. of Norwich, now in the dio. of Ely; rated at £8; gross income £150. Patron, the marquis of Bute. The great and small tithes of Kirtling and Ashley-cum-Sylverley, the property of the clerical rector, the lord of the manor, and the vicar, were commuted in 1806. There is a daily school here. Pop., in 1801, 272; in 1831, 361. Houses 45. Acres 2,143. A. P. £2,347. Poor rates, in 1837, £198.

ASHLEYHAY, a township in the parish of Wirksworth, Derbyshire. Pop., in 1801, 198; in 1831, 241. Houses 51. A. P. £1,533. Poor rates, in 1837, £74. There is a daily school here.

ASHMANHAUGH, a parish in the hund. of Tunstead, Norfolk; 6 miles south from North Walsham. Living, a discharged perpetual curacy in the archd. of Norfolk and dio. of Norwich; rated at £10, in the parliamentary returns at £90; gross income £42. Patroness, in 1835, Lady Preston. Charities connected with this parish produce £11 12s. yearly. Pop., in 1801, 139; in 1831, 154. Houses 33. Acres 700. A. P. £642. Poor rates, in 1837, £76.

ASHMANSWORTH, a chapelry in the parish of East Woodhay, union of Kingsclere, Hampshire; $8\frac{1}{2}$ miles north-north-west from Whitechurch. Living, a curacy, annexed to the vicarage of East Woodhay, and in the peculiar jurisdiction of the bishop of Winchester. There is a National school here. Pop., in 1801, 196; in 1831, 222. Houses 34. Acres 1,740. A. P. £1,205. Poor rates, in 1837, £159.

ASHMORE, a parish in the hund. of Cranbourn, Shaston-West division, union of Shaftesbury, Dorset; 5 miles south-east from Shaftesbury; on the borders of Wiltshire. Living, a rectory, formerly in the archd. of Dorset and dio. of Bristol, now in the dio. of Salisbury; rated at £7 19s. 9 $\frac{1}{2}$ d., and in the parliamentary returns at £100; gross income £531. Patron, in 1835, C. Chisholme. There is a daily school here. Pop., in 1801, 141; in 1831, 191. Houses 38. Acres 3,940. A. P. £797. Poor rates, in 1837, £93.

ASHOLT, or ASHOLTZ, a parish in the Williton division, union of Bridgewater, Somerset; $6\frac{1}{2}$ miles west by south from Bridgewater. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Taunton and dio. of Bath and Wells; rated at £7 12s. 3 $\frac{1}{2}$ d.; gross income £290. Patron, in 1835, John West, Esq. Pop., in 1801, 136; in 1831, 228. Houses 38. Acres 2,650. A. P. £2,457. Poor rates, in 1837, £97.

ASHORN. See NEWBOLD-PACEY.

ASHOVER, a parish and township, partly in the hund. of Scarsdale, and partly in that of Wirksworth, union of Chesterfield, Derby; 6 miles south-west of Chesterfield; $2\frac{1}{2}$ west of the North Midland railroad. The hamlets of Dethwick-Lea and Holloway are included in the parish. The village—which was formerly a market-town—stands in a deep but narrow valley near the rivers Amber and Milntown; and is a place of great antiquity. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Derby and dio. of Lichfield; rated at £24 3s. 1 $\frac{1}{2}$ d.; gross income £567. Patron, in 1835, John Nodder, Esq. The church is an ancient building, with a handsome spire, and contains a curious and very ancient leaden font in the Saxon style, and several monuments to the Babingtons of Dethwick. The tithes of Crick and Southwingfield, manor of Lea in this parish, the property of the clerical rector and vicars, were commuted in 1776. The tithe of hay, &c., of Ashover manor, the property of the clerical rector, was commuted in 1779. In 1833 there were eighteen daily schools in this parish, attended by 314 children. A free school was founded in 1703; its endowment is £21 9s. per ann. chiefly derived from land bequeathed in 1819 by the Rev. Francis Gisborne. Other charities to the poor of the parish produce £7 7s. per annum. The principal manufactures here are those of stockings and tambour-lace. In 1838 there was one cotton-mill employing 34 hands, and one worsted-mill employing 71 hands in this parish. Lime and gritstone abound in the neighbourhood. Fairs for cattle and sheep are held on the 25th of April and 15th of October. A railway is projected to connect Ashover with the North Midland railway at Clay cross. Pop. of the parish, in 1801, 2,628; in 1831, 3,176. Houses 655. Acres 11,290. Poor rates, in 1837, £876. A. P. £10,214.—Pop. of the village, in 1801, 1,761; in 1831, 2,504. Houses 518. Acres 9,180.—On Ashover common, there is a rocking-stone, about 26 feet in circumference, called Robin Hood's mark.

ASHOW, a parish in the Kenilworth division of the hund. of Knightlow, union of Warwick, county of Warwick; 4 miles north-north-east from Warwick; on the river Avon. Living, a rectory, formerly in the archd. of Coventry and dio. of Lichfield and Coventry, now in the dio. of Worcester; rated at £6 2s. 1d.; gross income £295. Patron, in 1835, Chandos Leigh, Esq. There is a National school here. Charity to the poor, £5 per annum. Pop., in 1801, 205; in 1831, 176. Houses 42. Acres 1,100. A. P. £1,797. Poor rates, in 1837, £86.

ASHPERTON, a chapelry in the parish of Stretton-Grandisome, hund. of Radlow, union of Ledbury, Herefordshire; 5 miles north-west of Ledbury; on the line of the Hertfordshire and Gloucester canal now executing. Living, a curacy annexed to the vicarage of Stretton-Grandisome, in the archd. and dio. of Hereford. Pop., in 1801, 309; in 1831, 429. Houses 93. Acres 1,080. A. P. £1,669. Poor rates, in 1837, £156.

ASHPRINGTON, a parish in the hund. of Colebridge, union of Totness, Devon; 2 miles south-east from Totness; on the road to Dartmouth. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Totness and dio. of Exeter; rated at £29 1s. 8d.; gross income £560. Patron, in 1835, the Rev. G. J. Carwithen. Here are three daily schools, and an alms-house for six poor persons, founded by Sir Edward Giles in 1622. The Hareborn falls into the estuary of the river Dart, about a mile from the village. Pop., in 1801, 509; in 1831, 549. Houses 115. Acres 2,240. A. P. £5,869. Poor rates, in 1837, £297.

ASH-PRIORS, a parish in the hund. of Williton and Freemanora, Bishop's Lydeard division, union of Taunton, Somersetshire; 6 miles north-west from Taunton. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. of Taunton and dio. of Bath and Wells; gross income £70. Patron, in 1835, Sir Thomas B. Lethbridge, Bart. There are two daily schools here. Pop., in 1801, 155; in 1831, 210. Houses 41. Acres 750. A. P. £872. Poor rates, in 1837, £70.

ASHREIGNEY, or RING'S-ASH, a parish in the hund. of Winkley, union of Torrington, Devon; 4 miles west by south from Chamleigh. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Barnstaple and dio. of Exeter; rated at £24; gross income £402. Patron, in 1835, the Rev. J. T. Johnstone. There is a school here which was endowed with £10 per annum by Mrs Gertrude Pyncombe in 1730. In 1833 this school was attended by 122 scholars. There is also a daily and Sunday National school here. Pop., in 1801, 756; in 1831, 1,038. Houses 206. Acres 6,220. A. P. £2,735. Poor rates, in 1837, £321.

ASHRIDGE, a hamlet in the parish of Pitston, or Pightlesthorne, Buckinghamshire; 2 miles north-west by north from Chesham. In the year 1291, a parliament was held here by Edward I. Tanner says:—"Edmund, earl of Cornwall, son to Richard king of the Romans, founded here a college for a rector and 20 brethren, or canons, called Bonhommes, in honour of the precious blood of the holy Jesus, A. D. 1283. Its possessions were, at the time of the suppression, estimated at £447 18s." After the dissolution, Ashridge became a royal palace, and hither the Princess Elizabeth retired in 1554, when the object of Queen Mary's aversion. In the 17th year of Elizabeth's reign, John Dudley and John Ayscough had the site and demesne of this college in exchange with the crown for some other estate. In the reign of James I. it came into possession of the Ellesmere family, many of whose portraits are preserved in Ashridge abbey. An interesting account of this manor and abbey was published in 'The Topographer,' vol. ii. p. 131. "Ashridge," says Speed, "was in great repute for the blood (supposed out of Christ's sides) brought out of Germany by Edmund, eldest son of Richard, king of the Romans, and earl of Cornwall, whereto resorted a great concourse of people for devotion and adoration thereof. But when the sunshine of the gospel had pierced through such clouds of darkness, it was perceived apparently to be only honey clarified and coloured with saffron."

ASHTREAD, a parish in the second division of the hund. of Cophthorne and Effingham, union of Epsom, Surrey; 1½ mile south-west from Epsom; on the road to Leatherhead. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Surrey and dio. of Winchester; rated at £13 15s. 5d.; gross income £513; and in the patronage of the Hon. T. G. Howard and the Hon. Mrs Howard. A school for poor children has been founded and supported by the Hon. Colonel and Mrs Howard; there is also a charity school, with an endowment of £10 per annum, and two infant schools. An alms-house for six poor widows was founded and endowed with £32 7s. 2d. per annum, by Lady Diana Fielding, in 1731. Other charities connected with the parish produce £28 per annum. There is a mineral spring, similar to that of Epsom, in the parish. The line of the projected London and Dorking railway passes through this parish. In a mansion, lately pulled down, called Ashtead Park, Sir Robert Howard used to entertain Charles II. Pop., in 1801, 552; in 1831, 607. Houses 111. Acres 2,510. A. P. £3,022. Poor rates, in 1837, £465.

ASHTED ST JAMES, a chapelry in the parish of Aston-juxta-Birmingham, Warwickshire. Living, a perpetual curacy, formerly in the archd. of Coventry and dio. of Lichfield and Coventry, now in the dio. of Worcester; gross income £210. Patrons, in 1835, the bishop of Lichfield and others, as trustees. Pop., in 1831, 12,698.

ASHTON, a township in the parish of Tarvin, co.-palatine of Chester; 8 miles east-north-east from Chester; on the borders of Delamere forest. There are two daily schools here, and a dissenting meeting. Pop., in 1801, 342; in 1831, 405. Houses 76. Acres 1,740. A. P. £2,042. Poor rates, in 1837, £218.

ASHTON, a parish in the hund. of Exminster, union of St Thomas, Devon; 4 miles north from Chudleigh. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Exeter; rated at £11 10s. 2½d.; gross income £230. Patron, in 1835, the Rev. George Ware, the incumbent. In the church there are a very finely carved wooden screen and roof-loft. The parish is bounded on the west by the river Teign, the sudden inundations of which sometimes do much damage. Manganese is wrought here. The produce, in 1821, was 130 tons. There are a daily and Sunday National school here, and two or three dame schools. Pop., in 1801, 176; in 1831, 333. Houses 50. Acres 1,560. A. P. £1,613. Poor rates, in 1837, £166.

ASHTON, a township in the parish of Preston, Lancashire; 2 miles west by north of Preston; intersected by the Preston and Wyre railway. Pop., in 1801, with the hamlets of Cottam, Ingall, and Lea, 594; in 1831, 687. Houses 121. Acres 3,120. A. P. £7,337. Poor rates, in 1837, £362.

ASHTON, a township in the parish of Lancaster, co.-palatine of Lancaster; 4 miles south-south-west of Lancaster; between the estuary of the Lime and the Lancaster and Preston railway. There are 2 daily schools here. Pop., including that of Stodday, in 1801, 176; in 1831, 213. Houses 42. Acres 1,500. A. P. £2,215. Poor rates, in 1837, £132.—The Duke of Hamilton has a fine seat, called Ashton-hall, in this neighbourhood.

ASHTON. See ERYE, Hereford.

ASHTON, a parish in the hund. of Cleley, Northamptonshire; 7 miles south of Northampton. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Northampton and dio. of Peterborough; rated at £10; gross income £300; in the patronage of the Crown. This parish is intersected by the London and Birmingham railroad, and the Grand Junction canal. Pop., in 1801, 292; in 1831, 380. Houses 78. Acres 1,290. A. P. £1,346. Poor rates, in 1837, £66.

ASHTON, a hamlet in the parish of Ufford, Northampton. Pop., in 1801, 96; in 1831, 126. Houses 22. Acres 960. A. P. £956. Poor rates, in 1837, £66.

ASHTON, a hamlet in the parish of Oundle, Northampton. Pop., in 1801, 112; in 1831, 142. Houses 29. A. P. £1,857. Poor rates, in 1837, £107. There is a daily school here.

ASHTON (BLANK). See ASTON (BLANK).

ASHTON (COLD), a parish in the hund. of Pucklechurch, union of Chipping-Sodbury, Gloucestershire; 10½ miles east by south of Bristol; 5 north of Bath. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Gloucester and dio. of Gloucester and Bristol; rated at £17 1s. 8d.; gross income £492. Patron, in 1835, W. Batchellor. There are 2 day-schools here. Pop., in 1801, 224; in 1831, 322. Houses 68. Acres 2,310. A. P. £3,665. Poor rates, in 1837, £57.

ASHTON-UNDER-HILL, a chapelry in the parish of Beckford, Gloucestershire; 5 miles south-west of Evesham. Living, a curacy in the archd. of Gloucester and dio. of Gloucester and Bristol, annexed to the vicarage of Beckford. Pop., in 1801, 305; in 1831, 291. Houses 70. Acres 1,300. A. P. £1,857. Poor rates, in 1837, £122.

ASHTON-UNDER-EDGE. See ASTON-SUB-EDGE.

ASHTON-KEYNES, a parish in the hund. of Highworth, Cricklade, and Staple, union of Cricklade, and Wootton-Basset, Wilts; 4 miles west from Cricklade; on a branch of the Thames. Living, a vicarage with the chapel of Leigh annexed, in the archd. of Wilts and dio. of Salisbury; rated at £16; gross income £325. Patron, in 1836, J. Pitt, Esq. Tithes, the property of the clerical rector, lord of the manor, and vicar, commuted in 1777. There are an infant and 4 daily schools in this parish. Charities produce £113 yearly. Pop., exclusive of Leigh, in 1801, 764; in 1831, 915. Houses 212. Acres (including Leigh) 3,820. A. P. £4,909. Poor rates, in 1837, £560.

ASHTON (LOWE), a village and parish in the hund. of Hartcliffe with Bedminster, union of Bedminster, Somerset; 3 miles south-west of Bristol, and 1 north of the Bristol and Exeter railway. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Bath and dio. of Bath and Wells; rated at £10 17s. 11d.; gross income £117. Patrons, in 1835, Sir John Smith, Bart., and W. G. Langton, Esq. The church is an ancient and handsome building, containing several fine monuments. An Independent church was formed here in 1792. There is a National school here, towards the support of which a rent-charge of £10 was left in 1760 by Anne Smyth, and a bequest of £6 10s., by F. Derrick in 1661. Other charities connected with this parish produce £142 yearly. Petty-sessions are held here, and at Bedminster, for the division of Bedminster. Pop., in 1801, 895; in 1831, 1,423. Houses 250. Acres 4,110. A. P. £6,623. Poor rates, in 1837, £445.

ASHTON-UNDER-LYNE,

A parish and town in the hund. of Salford, union of Ashton-under-Lyne, co.-palatine of Lancaster. The parish, which is 6 miles in length and 4 in breadth, contains the divisions of Ashton-under-Lyne, Audenshaw, Hartshead, and Knott-Lanes, with the villages of Boston, Charlestown, Hay, Hurst, Mossley, Luzley, with Soweracre, Stayley-bridge, and Smallshaw.—Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Chester; rated at £26 13s. 4d.; gross income, in 1832, £1,473. Patron, the Earl of Stamford. The church, built in the reign of Henry V., is a spacious structure: a fire, in 1821, occasioned it considerable injury. It has a fine peal of bells. A chapel, seating 1,500, was erected here in 1819-20, by the parliamentary commissioners, at an expense of £13,632. It is a perpetual curacy in the patronage of the rector; gross income £152. There are other 3 chapels in connection with the establishment, and upwards of 20 dissenting places of worship in this parish.—Above 200 men are employed in coal mines within this parish. The number of cotton-mills within this parish in 1838 was 82, employing 2,875 horse-power, and 12,143 hands; there were also 3 woollen-mills employing 132 hands, and 1 silk manufactory employing 96 hands. The Ashton-under-Lyne poor-law union comprehends 13 townships in the counties of Chester and Lancaster, containing a population returned, in 1831, at 72,516. Pop. of the parish, in 1715, 5,097; in 1801, 15,632; in 1831, 35,597. Houses 5,960. Acres 9,300. The proportion paid by the parish for the county-rate, for the year 1830, was £1,619. The value of the parish for the county-rate, in 1815, was £33,796; in 1821, £44,000; and in 1828, £76,000. Poor rates, in 1837, £4,390.

The town of Ashton-under-Lyne is situated on an eminence rising from the north bank of the Tame; 186 miles north-west of London; 6½ by railway east-north-east of Manchester; and 4 south of Oldham. It consists partly of old and narrow streets, but some that have been recently formed present handsome houses. The proportion of £10 tenements in the town to the whole number of rate-payers is considerable, being 610 in 1831. The town is well-lighted by gas-works established in 1825; and was further improved by an expenditure of above £10,000, under acts passed in 1827 and 1828. There are a theatre, assembly-rooms, mechanics' institute, 6 National schools, and numerous charitable institutions, in the place. The Wesleyan and the New Connection Methodists, the Baptists, and the Independents, have places of worship here. The Independent chapel in Albion-street is a large and handsome structure, rebuilt in 1834 at a cost of £4,000. There is an Israelites' sanctuary in Church-street; and there are Unitarian, Moravian, and Catholic chapels, in the adjoining township of Duckinfield, which is only separated from Ashton by the Tame. Pop., in 1821, 9,222; in 1831, 14,673. Assessed taxes, in 1830, £1,434. There was anciently a market here, which fell into desuetude about 80 years ago, but was restored by act of parliament in 1828; the principal market-day is Saturday. Fairs for horses and cattle are held on March 23d, April 29th, July 25th, and November 21st. There is also a monthly fair for cattle. The Ashton, Stayley-bridge, Hyde, and Glossop bank has its head-establishment here. It was established in June 1836. Number of partners 328. The Saddleworth banking company have a branch here; also the Manchester and Liverpool District bank. The principal manufactures of this place are connected with the cotton trade, which had its rise here in 1769. Ashton is admirably situated, both for the purpose of trade and manufacture. Coals are plentiful, while, by the river Tame, water in abundance is supplied. Three of the canals of Yorkshire, Derbyshire, and Lancashire, centre here. By the Ashton canal, merchandise is conveyed to Manchester, and from thence to Liverpool; by the Huddersfield canal, a water conveyance is opened to the German ocean; and, by the Peak Forest canal, a communication is made to the heart of Derbyshire, for the conveyance of fuel and the reception of lime. There were 20 collieries, employing 1,000 men, within this parish in 1834. The cotton manufacture has taken deep root here within the last fifteen years, and new manufactories are constantly being erected. The present manufactories at Ashton, Duckenfield, and Stayley-bridge, are chiefly employed in spinning the finer kinds of yarn, and the weavers in producing calicoes, ginghams, and muslins. The Sheffield and Manchester railway, not yet begun, will pass near this town; and a branch railway has been projected between it and Ashton and Stayley-bridge. The length of this railway is 2 miles $44\frac{1}{2}$ chains; its point of junction at North street, near Guide-bridge, is 4 miles 74 chains from the terminus in Manchester, and 328 $\frac{1}{2}$ feet above the sea-level. The total distance from Store street in Manchester to a central point in Ashton is $6\frac{1}{2}$ miles; and to the extreme terminus in Stayley-bridge $7\frac{1}{2}$ miles.

The town was anciently a burgh, and the records of its privileges are said to exist in the manuscripts at Boyton, but for some cause not well-ascertained it was disfranchised. It is now under the jurisdiction of the county-magistrates, who hold petty-sessions here every week. The earl of Stamford and Warrington is lord of the manor, and the mayor and constables are appointed at his court-leet, which extends over the whole parish. There are no freemen, and there exists no criminal jurisdiction in the borough. The police force is under the authority of commissioners, being owners or occupiers of buildings within the town, of the value of £35 per annum. There is no gaol here. Prisoners are committed to the county-gaol at Lancaster, or the house-of-correction at Salford. Under an act of the 48th George III., a court of requests for the recovery of debts under £5, is held every third week, having jurisdiction over the whole parish, and several adjoining townships in the co-palatine of Chester. Three commissioners form a quorum, their qualification being a freehold estate of the yearly value of £50, or a personal estate of the value of £1,000. The number of suits determined in this court, in 1837, was 1,898. The office of clerk, and the subordinate officers of this court, are in the appointment of the lord of the manor. This town, within the limits of the lighting act (7th and 8th George IV.), is one of the new boroughs which return one member each under the reform bill. The first election took place on the 12th of December, 1832, when 402 votes were polled; the number in the present list is 700. The mayor is the returning officer.—The town, which gives name to the parish, is in ancient records called Ashton-sub-Lima. The Asheton family possessed exclusive jurisdiction here, even to the infliction of capital punishment. The ancient residence of this family, a building of great antiquity, is now occupied by the head-steward of the Earl of Stamford.

ASHTON-IN-MACKERFIELD, or ASHTON-IN-THE-WILLOWS, a township and chapelry in the parish of Winwick, union of Wigan, hund. of West Derby, co-palatine of Lancaster; $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles north-west of Newton; near the line of the Wigan railway. Living, a perpetual curacy annexed to the rectory of Winwick, in the archd. and dio. of Chester; rated at £1 12s.; gross income £181. Patron, the rector of Winwick. An Independent church was formed here in 1819. The Baptists, Independents, Unitarians, Methodists, and Roman Catholics, have places of worship here. Here is an endowed school founded in 1588, and 13 other daily schools, one of which is for the children of Roman Catholics. Other charities connected with the township produce £158. There are some collieries and cotton manufactories in the neighbourhood, which give employment to many of the inhabitants; 240 of the inhabitants were, in 1830, employed in various branches of iron manufacture. Pop., in 1801, 3,696; in 1831, 5,912. Houses 1,020. Acres 5,510. A. P. £16,440. Poor rates, in 1837, £913.

ASHTON-UPON-MERSEY, a parish and township in the hund. of Bucklow, union of Altrincham, co-palatine of Chester; 3 miles north-east of Altrincham. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Chester; rated at £13 4s. 6d.; gross income £761. Patron, in 1835, R. P. Johnson. An Independent church was founded here in 1802; the Methodists and Unitarians have also places of worship. There are 4 daily schools here, 3 of which are in Sale township. Charities connected with this parish produce £14 14s. yearly. Pop. of the township, in 1801, 778; in 1831, 974. Houses 183. Acres 1,630. A. P. £4,880. Poor rates, in 1837, £382.

ASHTON (STEEPLE), a parish and township in the hund. of Whorwelsdown, union of Westbury and Whorwelsdown, Wilts, including the tything of Hinton, with the chapelries of Littleton and Semington, and the township of West-Ashton. Living, a vicarage with the foregoing chapelry annexed, in the archd. of Salisbury, now in that of Wilts, and dio. of Salisbury; rated at £17 2s. 6d.; gross income £862; and in the patronage of Magdalene college, Cambridge. Bequests amounting to about £22 per annum have been made for the education of poor children of this parish. There are 3 daily schools. Other charities produce about £60 per annum. Pop., in 1801, 1,401; in 1831, 1,754. Houses 354. Acres 7,450. A. P. £10,204. Pop. of township, in 1801, 618; in 1831, 848. A. P. £3,987. Poor rates, in 1837, £203. Petty sessions are held here for the division of Whorwelsdown.—The township of Ashton West is $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles east from Trowbridge. Pop. of this township, in 1801, 344; in 1831, 374. A. P. £3,074. Poor rates, in 1837, £167.

ASHURST, a parish in the hund. of Washlingstone, lathe of Aylesford, union of Tunbridge, Kent, on the borders of Sussex; 3 miles west of Tunbridge-Wells. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. and dio. of Rochester; rated at £5 4s. 7d.; gross income £274. There is a day school here. Pop., in 1801, 102; in 1831, 206. Houses 32. Acres 1,000. A. P. £803. Poor rates, in 1837, £114.

ASHURST, a parish in the hund. of West Grinstead, rape of Bramer, union of Steyning, Sussex; 3 miles north of Steyning. Living, a rectory, not in charge, in the archd. and dio. of Chichester; gross income £268; in the patronage of Magdalene college, Oxford. There are 2 daily schools here. The Brighton and London railway crosses Bines-Green in this parish, in the 46th mile of the line. Pop., in 1801, 385; in 1831, 423.

Houses 55. Acres 2,250. A. P. £2,320. Poor rates, in 1837, £133.

ASHWATER, a parish in the hund. of Black Torrington, union and division of Holsworthy, Devon; 6 miles south-east by east from Holsworthy. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Totness and dio. of Exeter; rated at £26 6s. 8d., in the parliamentary returns at £150; gross income £491. Patron, in 1835, the Rev. T. Melhuish, the incumbent. Good building stone is found here. Fairs are held here on the first Tuesday in May, and on the first Monday after August 1st. The Exeter and Falmouth railway passes through this parish. Pop., in 1801, 643; in 1831, 862. Houses 159. Acres 4,220. A. P. £1,906. Poor rates, in 1837, £225.

ASHWELL, a parish and village in the hund. of Odsey, union of Royston, Herts; 4 miles north-north-east from Baldock. This was formerly a market-town; 't is a little to the north of the Icknield way, and is thought to be of Roman origin. The manor was ultimately granted to the see of London, to which it still belongs. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Huntingdon and dio. of Lincoln; rated at £22 3s. 6d.; gross income £555. Patron, the bishop of London. The church, which was lately rebuilt, has a lofty tower surmounted by a spire. An Independent church was formed here in 1796; there is also a Wesleyan Methodist chapel. Here is a free school conducted on the National plan. It was originally founded by Henry Colborn, in 1655; about 40 poor children receive instruction in it, and the salary of the master is £50 per annum. There are other four daily schools. Other charities connected with the parish produce £40 per annum. There are also endowed almshouses for six inmates. Pop., in 1801, 715; in 1831, 1,072. Houses 205. Acres 3,500. A. P. £3,675. Poor rates, in 1837, £448. —Within the parish, about half a mile from the village, is an entrenchment called Arbury banks, supposed to be the remains of a Roman fortification, in the neighbourhood of which various Roman antiquities have been found. Near the church is a small dell, the upper end of which is terminated by a steep rocky bank from the foot of which a number of springs gush out which flow into the Rhee.

ASHWELL, a parish in the hund. of Alstoe, union of Oakham, Rutland; 3½ miles north from Oakham. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Northampton and dio. of Peterborough; rated at £20 16s. 3d.; gross income £435. Patron, in 1835, Viscount Downe. A bequest of Elizabeth Wilcox, in 1646, to the poor of this parish, produces about £19 per annum. There are two daily schools. Pop., in 1801, 192; in 1831, 209. Houses 42. Acres 1,800. A. P. £2,740. Poor rates, in 1837, £91.

ASHWELL-THORPE, a parish in the hund. and union of Depwade, Norfolk; 3½ miles south-east from Wymondham. Living, a discharged rectory, united to that of Wrenningham, in the archd. of Norfolk and dio. of Norwich; rated at £6 13s. 4d.; gross income £650. Patron, in 1835, Lord Berners. There are two day schools, and a National school, here. This manor originally belonged to the family of Thorpe, from whom it passed into that of Bouchier, and was possessed by the celebrated Sir John Bouchier, Lord Berners, in the reign of Henry VII. Pop., in 1801, 314; in 1831, 471. Houses 81. Acres 1,030. A. P. £1,377. Poor rates, in 1837, £155.

ASHWICK, a parish in the hund. and division of Kilmersdon, union of Shepton-Mallet, Somerset; 3 miles north by east from Shepton-Mallet. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. of Taunton and dio. of Bath and Wells; gross income £118. Patron, in 1835, the vicar of Kilmersdon. There are 11 daily, and one boarding school in this parish. Coal-mines in the neighbourhood give employment to some of the inhabitants. Pop., in 1801, 776; in 1831, 995. Houses 213. Acres 1,700. A. P. £2,945. Poor rates, in 1837, £439.

ASHWICKEN, or ASHWYKEN, a parish in the hund. and union of Freebridge-Lynn, Norfolk; 5 miles east-south-east from King's Lynn. Living, a rectory, with that of Leziat attached, in the archd. and dio. of Norwich; rated at £6 13s. 4d.; gross income £450. Patron, in 1835, Joseph Parson. Pop., in 1801, 71; in 1831, 80. Houses 12. Acres 1,260. A. P. £1,261. Poor rates, in 1837, £60.

ASHWOOD, a hamlet in the parish of Swinford (King's), Stafford. On a heath, near the bridge over the Stour, in this vicinity, are the remains of a Roman entrenchment. The proposed Grand Connection railway passes within 14 chains to the left of Ashwood.

ASHWORTH, a chapelry in the parish of Middleton, hund. of Salford, co.-palatine of Lancaster; 3 miles west from Rochdale; on a branch of the Roch. Living, a perpetual curacy, not in charge, in the archd. and dio. of Chester; gross income £119. Patron, in 1835, W. Egerton, Esq. There is a daily school here. Pop., in 1801, 295; in 1831, 294. Houses 45. Acres 730. A. P. £894. Poor rates, in 1837, £126.

ASKE, a township in the parish of Easby, north riding of Yorkshire; 2½ miles north from Richmond. Here is Aske-hall, the seat of Lord Dundas. Pop., in 1801, 73; in 1831, 105. Houses 16. Acres 1,870. A. P. £2,462. Poor rates, in 1837, £108.

ASKERNE, or ASKERON, a township in the parish of Campsall, west riding of Yorkshire; 7 miles north by west from Doncaster; on the road to Selby. There is a small female school here. Pop., in 1801, returned with Sutton; in 1811, 113; in 1831, 256. Houses 49. Acres 800. Poor rates, in 1837, £69. —In the neighbourhood of Askerne is Conisborough castle. In the vicinity is a mineral spring, the water of which is of a sulphureous quality.

ASKERSWELL, a parish in the hund. of Egger-ton, Bridport division and union, Dorset; 5 miles east from Bridport; on the post-road to Dorchester. It is pleasantly situated in a valley surrounded by hills. Living, a rectory formerly in the archd. of Dorset and dio. of Bristol, now in the dio. of Salisbury; rated at £9 2s. 6d., and in the parliamentary returns at £123 10s.; gross income £185. Patron, in 1835, John Benett, Esq. The church land of this parish yields a yearly rent of £5. There are a daily and a Sunday school here. Pop., in 1801, 170; in 1831, 228. Houses 40. Acres 2,330. A. P. £1,044. Poor rates, in 1837, £50.

ASKERTON, a township in the parish of Lanercost, Cumberland; 13½ miles north-east from Carlisle; on a branch of the Irthing. It stands near the famous Picts-wall, and had formerly a garrison to repel the incursions of the Scots. Pop., in 1801, 356; in 1831, 473. Houses 75. A. P. £7,974. Poor rates, in 1837, £210. A daily and a Sunday school were commenced here in 1826. —Berethen castle, in this neighbourhood, was a royal fortress in the time of Camden.

ASKHAM, a chapelry in the liberty of Southwell and Scrooby, Nottinghamshire; 3 miles north from Tuxford. Living, a curacy, not in charge, in the peculiar jurisdiction of the see of York. Patron, the vicar of East Drayton. Pop., in 1801, 220; in 1831, 329. Houses 76. Acres 1,240. A. P. £1,608. Poor rates, in 1837, £130. There is a small day school here.

ASKHAM, a parish and township in West ward, union of West ward, Westmoreland, on the river

Lowther; 5 miles south from Penrith. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Carlisle; rated at £8, and in the parliamentary returns at £123; gross income £156. Patron, in 1835, the earl of Lonsdale. Here is a school with an endowment of about £11, in which from 30 to 40 children are taught; and another small daily school. Pop., including that of Helton-Flecket, in 1801, 448, of whom 355 belonged to the township of Askham; in 1831, 587. Houses 101. Acres 3,000. A. P. £8,183. Poor rates, in 1837, £192.

ASKHAM-BRYAN, or EAST ASKHAM, a parish and township in the lower division of the ainsty of the city of York; 4 miles west-south-west from York. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. and dio. of York; rated at £8, and in the parliamentary returns at £123 2s. 6d.; gross income £120. Patron, in 1835, H. Croft, Esq. The chapel is very ancient. The great and small tithes, the property of the lord of the manor, perpetual curate and vicar, were commuted in 1811. There is an endowment for the education of poor children of this parish, and three daily schools; the entire charities connected with the parish produce about £33 per annum. Pop., in 1801, 295; in 1831, 341. Houses 67. Acres 1,920. A. P. £2,307. Poor rates, in 1837, £167.

ASKHAM-RICHARD, or WEST ASKHAM, a parish in the lower division of the ainsty of the city of York; 6 miles south-west from York. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. and dio. of York; rated at £4 13s. 4d.; gross income £200. Patron, in 1835, H. Croft, Esq. The great and small tithes, moduses, &c., the property of the lay-impropriators and vicar, were commuted in 1813. The village is small and straggling. There is a day school with a small endowment. Pop., in 1801, 170; in 1831, 234. Houses 48. Acres 960. A. P. £1,685. Poor rates, in 1837, £90.

ASKRIGG, a market-town and chapelry in the parish of Aysgarth; north riding of Yorkshire; 246 miles north-west from London, 55 north-west from York, and 17 south-west from Richmond. It stands near the river Ure, in the vicinity of the moors, and the neighbouring country presents some picturesque scenery and waterfalls. Living, a perpetual curacy, formerly in the archd. of Richmond and dio. of Chester, now in the dio. of Ripon; rated at £10 10s.; gross income £110. Patron, in 1835, the vicar of Aysgarth. The market-day is Thursday; and fairs are held on May 11th, 12th, and 17th, and the first Thursday in June for woollen cloth, pewter, brass, and milliners' good; the 28th October for horned cattle, and 29th October for woollens, &c. Alms-houses for six poor women of Askrigg and Low Abbotside, each of whom receives £10 per annum, were founded and endowed here, in 1807, by Christopher Alderson. In this township is the free grammar-school of Yorebridge, founded in the 43^d of Elizabeth, and endowed with £64 10s. per annum, by Anthony Besson. There are another small day school and a Sunday school. Pop., in 1801, 761; in 1831, 737. Houses 187. Acres 4,790. A. P. £2,941. Poor rates, in 1837, £333.—In the neighbourhood are mines of lead which are not very productive.

ASKWITH, a township in the parish of Weston, west riding, county of York, near the river Wharfe; 3 miles north-west from Otley. The great and small tithes of this township, the property of the lay-impropriator and the vicar, were commuted in 1779. Pop., in 1801, 317; in 1831, 400. Houses 76. Acres 3,180. A. P. £1,846. Poor rates, in 1837, £98.

ASLACKBY, a parish in the wapentake of Aveland, county of Kesteven, union of Bourne, Lincolnshire; 2½ miles north from Folkingham; on the post-road to Sleaford; containing the hamlets of Graby and Milthorpe. Living, a vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Lincoln; rated at £12 10s. 7½d.; gross income £468. Patron, in 1835, the Rev. F. Barstow. The great and small tithes of Aslackby and Dowby, the property of the clerical rectors, lay-impropriators and vicar, were commuted in 1765. There are two daily schools in the parish. Tanner says:—"There seems to have been a preceptory or commandery of the Templars at the manor here, founded by John le Mareschal about the time of King Richard I., which was afterwards given to the hospitaliers, and, as part of their possessions, was granted, 33^d Henry VIII., to Edward, Lord Clinton, and Ursula his wife." A farm-house now stands on the site, containing some remains of the church of the order, and bearing the name of the Temple. There are also the remains of a very ancient castle. Pop., in 1801, 338; in 1831, 455. Houses 76. Acres 4,810. A. P. £4,862. Poor rates, in 1837, £127.

ASLACOE WAPENTAKE, in the parts of Lindsey, county of Lincoln, towards the north-west side of the county; bounded by the wapentake of Manley on the north; by Walshcroft and Lawress on the west; by Lawress on the south; and by Well and Corringham wapentakes on the west. Pop., in 1831, 4,839. Houses 880. Area in British statute acres, 43,240.

ASLACTON, a parish in the hund. and union of Depwade, county of Norfolk; 3 miles west-south-west from St Mary Stratton and the Norwich and London railroad. Living, a perpetual curacy not in charge, in the archd. of Norfolk and dio. of Norwich; rated at £15 5s., and in the parliamentary returns at £59, endowed with £800 royal bounty; gross income, £58. Patron, in 1835, John Cooper. There is a Wesleyan Methodist chapel in this parish. Charities to the poor of this parish produce £19 per annum. The village was the native place of Sir William le Neve, the herald and antiquary. Pop., in 1801, 278; in 1831, 359. Houses 50. Acres 1,310. A. P. £1,733. Poor rates, in 1837, £323.

ASLACTON, or ARSELACTON, a chapelry in the parish of Watton, county of Nottingham; 2½ miles north-east from Bingham; on the river Snite. Living, a perpetual curacy, united to the vicarage of Watton, and a peculiar of the collegiate church of Southwell. The great and small tithes of the townships of Aslacton and Scarrington, the property of the dean and chapter of Lincoln, lay-impropriators and vicar, were commuted in 1780. Aslacton is in the duchy of Lancaster. Cranmer, the first protestant archbishop of Canterbury, afterwards burnt at Oxford in 1555, was born here. Pop., in 1801, 171; in 1831, 269. Houses 58. A. P. £1,931. Poor rates, in 1837, £116.

ASPALL, a parish in the hund. and union of Hartesmere, Suffolk; 6 miles south from Eye. Living, a perpetual curacy not in charge, formerly in the archd. of Sudbury and dio. of Norwich, now in the dio. of Ely; gross income £150. Patron, in 1835, John Chevalier. Pop., in 1801, 87; in 1831, 126. Houses 19. Acres 1,240. A. P. £997. Poor rates, in 1837, £121.

ASPAL-STONHAM. See STONHAM-ASPEL.

ASPATRIA, or ASPATRICK, a parish and township in the hund. of Allerdale ward below Derwent, union of Wigton, Cumberland; 6 miles north-east of Maryport. The name is supposed to be derived from Gospatrick, earl of Dunbar. It comprises the townships of Aspatria with Brayton, Hayton with Melay, and Outsides with Allerby. Living, a vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Carlisle; rated at £10 4s. 2d.; gross income £250. Patron, in 1835, the bishop of Carlisle. The church is a finely ornamented structure in the Norman style of architecture. The tithes of Aspatria, Brumfield, and Allhallowa, the property of the bishop of Carlisle, lay-impropriators, and vicars, were commuted in 1817. All tithes, moduses, &c. of the manor of Aspatria, and the parishes of Aspatria, Brumfield, and Allhallowa, the property of the bishop of Carlisle, lay-impropriators, vicars, and perpetual curate, were commuted in 1812. There is an Independent church here, which was formed in 1827. Sir Thomas Musgrave's charity, connected with this parish, produces £10 per annum. There are three daily and Sunday National schools here, with an attendance of about 130 children. Aspatria is one of the polling-places in the election of a member for the western division of the county. The Maryport and Carlisle railroad passes through the township by a deep cutting. In a barrow called Beacon-hill, in this parish, a gigantic skeleton was found in 1790. Pop. of parish, in 1801, 770; in 1831, 1,395. Houses 270. Acres 8,610. A. P. £7,837.—Pop. of township, in 1801, 327; in 1831, 761. A. P. £3,236. Poor rates, in 1837, £209.

ASPEDEN, a parish in the hund. of Edwinstree, union of Buntingford, Herts; 1 mile south-west from Buntingford. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Huntingdon and dio. of Lincoln; rated at £15 5s. 2½d.; gross income, £360. Patron, in 1835, the earl of Hardwick. The river Rib flows south through this parish. In the church there is a curious monument to the memory of Sir Robert Clifforde, Knight, master of the ordnance to Henry VIII. Here is a free school, the master of which receives a salary of £17 per annum. Some of the children are clothed out of the produce of another charity of £7 5s. per annum. For Bishop Ward's charities to the poor of this parish, and that of Layston, see LAYSTON. Other charities connected with this parish produce about £26 per annum. There are a National school, two infant schools, and a day and boarding school here. Pop., in 1801, 364; in 1831, 560. Houses 113. Acres 1,620. A. P. £2,739. Poor rates, in 1837, £253.

ASPLEY, a township in the parish of Ecclestone, Staffordshire. Pop., in 1831, 26. Houses 4. Acres 540.

ASPLEY WITH FORDHALL, a hamlet in the parish of Wootton-Waven, Warwickshire. Pop., in 1821, 106; in 1831, returned with Ullenhall.

ASPLEY-GUISE, a parish in the hund. of Manshead, union of Woburn, county of Bedford; 2 miles north by west from Woburn. Living, a rectory, formerly in the archd. of Bedford and dio. of Lincoln, now in the dio. of Ely; rated at £15 16s. 10½d.; gross income £215. Patron, in 1835, the duke of Bedford. All tithes, moduses, &c., the property of the clerical rector, were commuted in 1760. There is a Wesleyan Methodist chapel here. A daily school was begun in 1833; there is also a boarding school for boys. A small portion of this parish stretches into Buckinghamshire. Pop., in 1801, 679; in 1831, 1,014. Houses 196. Acres 1,960. A. P. £2,544. Poor rates, in 1837, £281.

ASPULL, a township in the parish of Wigan, co.-palatine of Lancaster; 3 miles north-east from Wigan. There is a church here recently erected under the act for building new churches. Living, a curacy in the patronage of the rector of Wigan. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the neighbouring collieries. There are several daily schools here, one of which has a small endowment. Pop., in 1801, 1,253; in 1831, 2,464. Houses 422. Acres 1,900. A. P. £3,323. Poor rates, in 1837, £723.

ASSELBY, a township in the parish of Howden, east riding of Yorkshire; 2 miles west from Howden, and 2 south of the Hull and Selby railway. Pop., in 1801, 259; in 1831, 297. Houses 71. Acres 910. A. P. £1,091. Poor rates, in 1837, £146.

ASSENDON, a township in the parish of Pitton, Oxfordshire; 4 miles north-north-west from Henley-upon-Thames. There is a land-spring here, which only appears after a continuance of wet weather, and then sometimes overflows all the adjacent lowlands. Population returned with the parish.

ASSINGDEN. See ASHINGDON.

ASSINGTON, a parish in the hund. of Babergh, union of Sudbury, Suffolk; 4 miles north-west from Neyland. Living, a discharged vicarage, formerly in the archd. of Sudbury and dio. of Norwich, now in the dio. of Ely; rated at £10; gross income £390. Patron, in 1835, John Gwidon. There are a National school, and a small daily school, here. In 1777, John Gurdon bequeathed £100 for the instruction of poor children. Other charities connected with the parish produce about £7 per annum. Pop., in 1801, 471; in 1831, 641. Houses 129. Acres 3,450. A. P. £3,829. Poor rates, in 1837, £345.

ASTBURY, a parish in the hund. of Northwich, co.-palatine of Chester. It includes the townships of Buglawton, Davenport, Hulme-Walfield, Moreton with Alcumlow, Newbold-Astbury, Odd-rode, Radnor, Smallwood, and Summerford, and the chapelry of Congleton. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Chester, with the chapelry of Congleton annexed; rated at £68; gross income £1,900, and in the patronage of the trustees of Lord Crewe. The church is a handsome Gothic structure with a spire. The interior contains several stalls, a rood-loft, and some fine screen-work. The ceilings, which were put up in 1616-17, are of oak, and richly carved. Charities connected with this parish produce about £75 per annum. In the churchyard are some very ancient monuments of the Breretonas. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in silk-factories, of which, in 1838, there were 35 employing 3,276 hands; there were also 4 cotton-mills employing 367 hands. Pop., in 1801, 7,095; in 1831, 14,673. Houses 2,579. Acres 18,070. A. P. £37,232.

ASTERBY, a parish in the northern division of the wapentake of Gartree, parts of Lindsey, union of Horncastle, Lincolnshire; 6 miles north from Horncastle; on the road to Louth. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. and dio. of Lincoln; rated at £8 0s. 10d., and in the parliamentary returns at £135 10s. 6d.; gross income £210. Patron, in 1835, T. Southwell, Esq. Great and small tithes of Asterby and Goulceby townships, the property of the clerical rector, lay-impropriator and vicar, commuted in 1776. There is a small endowment for the instruction of poor children of this parish, founded by Anthony Ascham, in 1638. Pop., in 1801, 154; in 1831, 281. Houses 48. Acres 620. A. P. £884. Poor rates, in 1837, £136.

ASTERLEY, or EASTERLEY, in the hund. or Chadlington, Oxfordshire. "Among the fields and woods of this parish, (Kiddington,) detached at almost half a mile's distance from Over-Kiddington to the south-west, is a single farm-house called Asterley, which also denominates a manor. Here was once the parish of Asterley, of which the memory now scarcely subsists in tradition. But there is a large field called Chapelbroke, now covered with bushes and high trees, in which the church, long since decayed or destroyed, may probably be supposed to have stood. The church, called the parochial church of Asterley in the registers of Lincoln, was dedicated to St Peter. It was a rectory, and was valued, in 1291, at seven marks and a half, and is recited under the deanery of Cheping-Norton. In the year 1466, John Chedworth, bishop of Lincoln, united and incorporated the church of Asterley with that of Kiddington, on the petition of Sir Richard Illingworth, &c., and with the consent of Fulk Burmyngham, archdeacon of Oxford." Warton's Hist. of Kiddington.

ASTHALL, a parish in the hund. of Bampton, union of Witney, Oxfordshire; 3 miles east by south from Burford; on the post-road to Witney. It stands on a small rivulet, and includes the hamlet of Asthall-Leigh. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Oxford; rated at £7 9s. 4½d., and in the parliamentary returns at £69; gross income £100; and in the patronage of Eton college. Near the great Roman road, Akeman-street, there is a large barrow, believed to be the sepulchral monument of some person of note; and in the church there is a large stone-coffin, said to contain the remains of Alice Corbet, one of the mistresses of Henry I. Charities to the poor of this parish produce about £7 per annum, other charities being included in Swinbrook parish. In 1838 there was a woollen-mill employing 40 hands, in this parish. Pop., in 1801, 304; in 1831, 352. Houses 72. Acres 1,180. A. P. £2,436. Poor rates, in 1837, £231.

ASTLEY, a chapelry in the parish of Leigh, hund. of West Derby, co.-palatine of Lancaster; 2½ miles east from Leigh. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. and dio. of Chester; rated at £39 19s. 8d.; gross income £126. Patron, the vicar of Leigh. The Methodists and Unitarians have chapels here. There is a school here, with an endowment of about £26 per annum, and several other daily schools. Other charities connected with the parish produce about £53 per annum. Pop., in 1801, 1,545; in 1831, 1,832. Houses 319. Acres 2,120. A. P. £4,059. Poor rates, in 1837, £407.

ASTLEY, a chapelry in the parish of St Mary, liberties of Shrewsbury, Salop; 5 miles north-north-east from Shrewsbury. Living, a perpetual curacy, in the jurisdiction of the peculiar court of St. Mary's, Shrewsbury; rated at £5; gross income £56. Patrons, in 1835, the Mayor and Corporation of Shrewsbury. Pop., in 1801, 141; in 1831, 239. Houses 53. Acres 1,450. A. P. £2,528. Poor rates, in 1837, £44.

ASTLEY, a parish in the Kirby division of the hund. of Knightlow, union of Nuneaton, Warwickshire; 4½ miles west-south-west from Nuneaton; on the Sow brook. Living, a perpetual curacy, formerly in the archd. of Coventry and dio. of Lichfield and Coventry, now in the dio. of Worcester; rated at £10, and endowed with £16 per annum; gross income £60. Patron, in 1835, F. Newdigate, Esq. The chapel is only a part of the original building, which suffered much in the early part of the 7th century. Astley castle, once the abode of Henry Grey, marquis of Dorset, father of Lady Jane Grey, is still a tenable residence, though much of it is dismantled. "In the 17th Edward III.," says Tanner, "Sir Thomas de Astley obtained leave of the king and the ordinary, to change the chantry, which he had here founded some years before, into a dean and secular canons, and then erected here, in the form of a cross, a beautiful collegiate church to the honour of the assumption of the blessed Virgin. It consisted only of a dean, two canons or prebendaries, viz. of Milverton and Wolvey, and three vicars, besides clerks and servants, and was valued, 26th Henry VIII. at £46 0s. 8d. The site was granted to Henry, marquis of Dorset, 38th Henry VIII." Pop., in 1801, 251; in 1831, 340. Houses 58. Acres 2,550. A. P. £3,277. Poor rates, in 1837, £320. —About 2½ miles east from Astley is Arbury hall, a fine Gothic mansion, which owes much of its elegance to the taste of the late Sir Roger Newdigate.

ASTLEY, a parish in the lower division of the hund. of Doddingtree, union of Martley, county of Worcester; 5 miles south from Bewdley; on a small tributary of the Severn. Living, a rectory exempt from visitation, in the dio. of Worcester; rated at £5 13s. 4d.; gross income £719. Patrons, in 1835, the trustees of the late Rev. D. J. J. Cookes. There is a school here, with an endowment of £20 per annum, at which 38 children were educated in 1833. Other charities connected with the parish produce about £5 15s. per annum. "An alien priory of Benedictine monks, subordinate to the abbey of St Taurinus, near Ebroix, founded by Ralph de Todenei, in the time of William the Conqueror, or however, before 1160. Upon the frequent seizure of this estate into the king's hands during the wars with France, the abbot and convent of St Taurinus obtained leave, in the time of Richard II., to sell the same to John Beauchamp, who was in possession of it for some time; but afterwards, under Edward IV., this priory was annexed to the college of Westbury, in Gloucestershire, and, upon the dissolution, was granted by King Henry VII. to Sir Ralph Sadler." Tanner's Not. Mon. A hermitage was dug out of a rock near Redstone ferry here, which was a place of great resort for devotees of high quality in papal times. It has since been made a public house! Pop., in 1801, 697; in 1831, 849. Houses 167. Acres 3,310. A. P. £3,820. Poor rates, in 1837, £429.

ASTLEY. See SWILLINGTON.

ASTLEY (ABBOTS), a parish in the hund. of Stottesden, union of Bridgnorth, Salop; 2 miles north from Bridgnorth, and within the parliamentary boundary of that borough. Living, a perpetual curacy, not in charge, in the archd. of Salop and dio. of Lichfield. Patron, in 1829, T. Whitmore, Esq. The great and small tithes of Morville and Astley-Abbots, the property of the lay-impropriator and incumbent of Astley-Abbots, commuted in 1773. Here is a school for poor children with a small endowment, bequeathed, in 1805, by Mrs C. Philips. Pop., in 1801, 740; in 1831, 666. Houses 135. Acres 3,330. A. P. £3,571. Poor rates, in 1837, £323.

ASTON, a hamlet in the parish of Ivinghoe, Buckingham; 1 mile north-east from Ivinghoe. Pop., in 1801, 233; in 1831, 401. Houses 79. Acres 1,180.

ASTON-BY-BUDWORTH, a township in the parish of Great Budworth, co.-palatine of Chester; 3 miles north by east from Northwich. There are two daily schools here. Pop., in 1801, 396; in 1831, 409. Houses 53. Acres 2,830. A. P. £4,073. Poor rates, in 1837, £415.

ASTON, or ASTON-BY-SUTTON, a chapelry and township in the parish of Runcorn, co.-palatine of Chester; 3 miles east by north from Frodsham. Living, a perpetual curacy annexed to the vicarage of Runcorn in the archd. and dio. of Chester; rated at £18 15s. 4d.; gross income £88. Patron, in 1835, A. W. H. Aston, Esq. Leycester, in his history of the antiquities of Chester, says:—"But after that Middleton chapel fell into decay, another chapel was erected in later ages, somewhat nearer to the hall of Aston, called Aston-chapel, situated within the parish of Runcorne. And this Aston-chapel was lately made a parochial chapelry in our days by the grant of John Bridgeman, bishop of Chester, dated 16th April, 11^o Car. I. 1635, by the procurement of Sir Thomas Aston of Aston, Bart.: and so it is now become a parochial chapel for burial, baptism, and other rites for the adjacent villages of Sutton, Aston-juxta-Sutton, Middleton-Grange, and Aston-Grange." Pop., including that of Middleton-Grange, in 1801, 186; in 1831, 179. A. P. £2,372. Poor rates, in 1837, £74.

ASTON AND THORNTON, a hamlet in the parish of Hope, Derbyshire; $6\frac{1}{2}$ miles north-east from Tideswell; on a branch of the Derwent. Pop., in 1801, 116; in 1831, 104. Houses 22. A. P. £1,194. Poor rates, in 1837, £17.

ASTON, a township in the parish of Hawarden, Flint, North Wales; $1\frac{1}{2}$ mile north by west from Hawarden. There is a noble castle here, the residence of Sir Stephen C. Glyn, Bart. The greater part of the population are employed in an extensive iron-foundry in the neighbourhood. Pop., in 1831, 237. Houses 41.

ASTON, or PINF-ASTON, a parish in the hund. of Wigmore, union of Ludlow, Herefordshire; 4 miles south-west from Ludlow, on the road to Wigmore. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. and dio. of Hereford; rated at £2 13s. 4d.; gross income £86. Patron, in 1835, T. A. Knight, Esq. Pop., in 1801, 51; in 1831, 56. Houses 10. Acres 1,098. A. P. £522. Poor rates, in 1837, £10.

ASTON, a parish in the hund. of Broadwater, union and county of Hertford; 3 miles south-east from Stevenage; on the Beane river. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Huntingdon and dio. of Lincoln; rated at £26 11s. 8d.; gross income £383. Patron, in 1835, the Rev. James Ellice. There are a National school, and a small daily school here. Pop., in 1801, 416; in 1831, 494. Houses 93. Acres 1,990. A. P. £2,432. Poor rates, in 1837, £163.

ASTON, a township in the parish of Lydham, Montgomery, North Wales; 3 miles west from Church-Stretton. Pop., in 1801, 87; in 1831, 84. Houses 11. A. P. £735. Poor rates, in 1837, £42.

ASTON, a hamlet in the parish of Bampton, Oxfordshire; 5 miles south-south-west from Witney. There is an endowment for the education of poor children, made by Mr Horde in 1712. Pop., in 1801, including that of Cote, 626; in 1831, 718. Houses 157. Acres 1,870. A. P. £3,496. Poor rates, in 1837, £908.

ASTON. See WELLINGTON, Salop.

ASTON, a township in the parish of Wem, Salop. Pop., in 1831, 250. Houses 49.

ASTON. See OSWESTRY, Salop.

ASTON, a township in the parish of Muckleston, Stafford; 4 miles north-east from Muckleston. Pop., in 1831, 283. Houses 48. Acres 910.

ASTON, a parish in the Birmingham division of the hund. of Hemlingford, union of Aston, Warwickshire; $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles north-east by east from Birmingham, and $9\frac{1}{2}$ by railway from Liverpool. It contains the townships of Aston, Bordesley, Castle-Bromwich, Deritend, Duddlestone with Nechells, Erdington, Saltley-Washwood with Little Bromwich, Water-Orton, and Wotton. Living, a vicarage, to which are annexed the chapelries of Deritend, Bordesley, and Erdington, formerly in the archd. of Coventry and dio. of Lichfield and Coventry, now in the dio. of Worcester; rated at £21 4s. 9 $\frac{1}{2}$ d.; average gross income £2,062. Patrons, in 1835, the trustees of the late Rev. G. Peake. The great tithes, the property of the lay-impropriator, commuted in 1802. There are two chapels in this parish erected by the parliamentary commissioners, viz. at Bordesley and at Erdington. The former cost £13,091; the latter £4,200. Both are in the Gothic style. The Baptists, Methodists, Independents, and various bodies of dissenters, have chapels in this parish. There were in 1833, 2 infant schools, 26 daily schools, 11 day and boarding schools, 3 day and Sunday schools, and 11 Sunday schools in this parish. Here is an almshouse for ten poor persons, founded in 1650 by Sir Thomas Holte. Its annual revenue is £88. There is also a bequest of Dame Anne Holte, in 1735, of £20 per annum, for behoof of the alms people. Other charities connected with the parish produce about £64 per annum. The Aston poor-law union comprehends five parishes, containing 47 square miles, with a population, returned in 1831, at 36,635. The average yearly expenditure on the poor of this district, during the three years preceding the formation of the union, was £8,813. Expenditure in 1838, £6,042. The inhabitants are for the most part artisans, employed in the various branches of manufacture for which Birmingham is celebrated. In 1838 there was a cotton and silk mill employing 32 hands, in this parish. The Birmingham and Fazeley canal passes through this parish; and the Grand Junction railway here crosses this canal by a viaduct of 10 arches. The parish is intersected by the line of the proposed railway from Castle-Bromwich to Kingsbury. Aston hall, a fine old mansion in this parish, is now the property of James Watt, Esq., son of the inventor of the steam-engine. Pop., in 1801, 11,693; in 1831, 32,118. Houses 6,409. The population of this parish has increased by 12,929 persons since the census of 1821,—a circumstance which is attributable to its connection with the manufactures of Birmingham. Acres 13,330. A. P. £53,142. Poor rates, in 1837, £7,961.

ASTON, or WHITE-LADY-ASTON. See BAXWOOD.

ASTON, a parish and township with Aughton, in the south division of the wapentake of Strathford and Tickhill, west riding of Yorkshire; 6 miles south of Rotherham. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of York; rated at £12 15s. 2 $\frac{1}{2}$ d.; gross income £531. Patron, in 1835, the duke of Leeds. The church contains a monument to Lord D'Arcy and his three wives, and a marble-slab to the memory of the Rev. William Mason the poet, and friend of Gray, who was rector of this parish, and died in 1797. Charities to the poor of this parish produce £37 yearly. There are three daily schools, one of which has a small endowment. Pop., in 1801, 586; in 1831, 564. Houses 131. Acres 2,370. A. P. £4,012. Poor rates, in 1837, £254.

ASTON-ABBOTS, a hilly parish in the hund. of Cottesloe, union of Aylesbury, Buckinghamshire; 5 miles north-north-east from Aylesbury. Living, a vicarage in the archd. of St Albans and dio. of London; rated at £6 7s. 11d., and in the parliamentary returns at £150; gross income £145. Patron, in 1835, the earl of Chesterfield. Tithes, the property of the vicar, commuted in 1795. The church-land, belonging to the parish, produces a yearly rent of £8 10s. There are three daily schools here. Pop., in 1801, 276; in 1831, 303. Houses 63. Acres 2,180. A. P. £4,459. Poor rates, in 1837, £221.

ASTON-BLANK, a parish in the hund. of Bradley, union of Northleach, county of Gloucester; $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles north-east from Northleach. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Gloucester and dio. of Gloucester and Bristol; rated at £26 12s. 4d.; gross income £153. Patron, the Crown. Great and small tithes, the property of the lay-impropriator and vicar, commuted in 1795. There is a school here with a small endowment. Other charities connected with the parish produce £34 per annum. Pop., in 1801, 216; in 1831, 295. Houses 60. Acres 2,250. A. P. £2,637. Poor rates, in 1837, £89.

ASTON-BOTTERELL, a parish in the hund. of Stottesden, union of Cleobury-Mortimer, Salop; $8\frac{1}{2}$ miles south-west from Bridgnorth; on a branch of the Rea. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Salop and dio. of Hereford; rated at £7 1s. 0 $\frac{1}{2}$ d.; gross income £367. Patron, in 1835, the duke of Cleveland. Pop., in 1801, 247; in 1831, 260. Houses 42. Acres 3,000. A. P. £1,926. Poor rates, in 1837, £96.

ASTON-CANTLOW, a parish in the Stratford division of the hund. of Barlichway, union of Alcester, Warwickshire; 4 miles north-east from Alcester. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Worcester; rated at £9 9s. 7d., and in the parliamentary returns at £74 19s. 3d.; gross income £93. Patron, in 1835, the Rev. R. S. Charles. There are five daily schools in this parish. The Stratford-on-Avon canal skirts the eastern side of this parish, which is also intersected by the Alne. Pop., in 1801, 721; in 1831, 940. Houses 183. Acres 4,300. A. P. £5,509. Poor rates, in 1837, £555.

ASTON-ON-CARRON, a tything in the parish of Ashchurch, Gloucestershire; 4½ miles north-east from Tewkesbury. Pop., in 1801, 149; in 1831, 167. Houses 37. A. P. £1,053.

ASTON (CHETWYND), a township in the parish of Edgmond, Salop; 1½ mile south-south-east from Newport. There is a daily school here attended by about 40 children. Pop., in 1811, 268; in 1831, 246. Houses 57. A. P. £4,486. Poor rates with Church-Aston.

ASTON (CHURCH), a chapelry in the parish of Edgmond, Newport division of the hund. of South Bradford, Salop; 1 mile south-west from Newport. Living, a curacy to the rectory of Edgmond, in the archd. of Salop and dio. of Lichfield. There are three daily schools in this parish. The charities connected with this parish produce about £19 per annum. Pop., in 1801, 358; in 1831, 451. Houses 87. Poor rates, in 1837, £87.

ASTON-CLINTON, a parish in the hund. and union of Aylesbury, Bucks, including the township of Aston-Clinton and the hamlet of St Leonard; 4 miles east of Tring, on the post-road to Aylesbury. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Bucks and dio. of Lincoln; rated at £23 6s. 10½d.; gross income £519, and in the patronage of Jesus' college, Oxford. All tithes, &c., the property of the clerical rector, commuted in 1814. A Baptist church was formed here in 1830. Charities connected with the parish produce about £14 per annum. There is a National school here, and two daily schools. Pop. of the township, in 1801, 584; of the parish, 721; in 1831, 854, and 1,001. Houses 167, and 199. Acres 3,640. A. P. £3,526. Poor rates, in 1837, £518.

ASTON, or ASHTON-SUB-EDGE, a parish in the upper division of the hund. of Kiftgate, union of Evesham, Gloucestershire; 5 miles south-east of Evesham. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Gloucester and dio. of Gloucester and Bristol; rated at £10 2s. 3½d.; gross income £204. Patron, in 1835, the earl of Harrowby. Great and small tithes, moduses, &c., the property of the clerical rector, commuted in 1771. Pop., in 1801, 116; in 1831, 103. Houses 28. Acres 850. A. P. £986. Poor rates, in 1837, £16.

ASTON-EPISCOPI. See WHITE-LADY-ASTON.

ASTON-EYRE, a chapelry in the parish of Morvill, hund. of Stottesden, Salop; 4 miles west-north-west from Bridgnorth. Living, a curacy, not in charge, in the archd. of Salop and dio. of Hereford, and annexed to the curacy of Morvill. Pop., in 1801, 106; in 1831, 120. Houses 22. Acres 1,330. A. P. £948. Poor rates, in 1837, £62.

ASTON-FLAMVILLE, a parish and township in the hund. of Sparkenhoe, union of Hinckley, Leicestershire; 2½ miles east-north-east from Hinckley. Living, a rectory, with the curacy of Burbage and Sketchley annexed, formerly in the archd. of Leicester and dio. of Lincoln, now in the dio. of Peterborough; rated at £33 12s. 8½d.; and in the parliamentary returns at £124 1s. 4d.; gross income £905. Patroness, in 1835, the Countess De Grey. There are eight daily schools in this parish. Pop.

of the parish, in 1801, 1,162; of the township, 63; in 1831, 1,703, and 85. Houses 339, and 13. Acres 4,670, and 1,500. A. P. £8,455. Poor rates, in 1837, £85.

ASTON-GRANGE, a township in the parish of Runcorn, co.-palatine of Chester; 4 miles east from Frodsham. Pop., in 1801, 47; in 1831, 36. Houses 4. Acres 550. A. P. £849. Poor rates, in 1837, £43.

ASTON-INGHAM, a parish in the hund. of Greytree, union of Newent, Herefordshire; 4 miles north-east of Mitcheldean. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Hereford; rated at £7 7s. 1d.; gross income £372. Patrons, in 1835, the trustees of Francis Lawson, Esq. Here is a free school, with an endowment of £10 per annum, bequeathed by Christopher Stocke in 1682; attendance in 1833, 30. Pop., in 1801, 416; in 1831, 591. Houses 122. Acres 2,300. A. P. £2,548. Poor rates, in 1837, £224.

ASTON-IN-THE-WALLS, or ASTON-LE-WALLEYS, a parish in the hund. of Chipping-Warden, union of Banbury, county of Northampton, including the township of the same name, and the hamlet of Appletree. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Northampton and dio. of Peterborough; rated at £9 9s. 7d.; gross income £380; in the patronage of St. John's college, Oxford. There is a Roman Catholic day and Sunday school here. Pop. of the parish, in 1801, 225; of the township, 183; in 1831, 240, and 157. Houses 46. Acres 1,270. A. P. £3,050. Poor rates, in 1837, £49.

ASTON-ST-LEONARD, a hamlet and chapelry in the parish of Aston-Clinton, hund. of Aylesbury, Bucks. Living, a donative curacy in the archd. of Buckingham and dio. of Lincoln; gross income £100. Patrons, in 1835, Sir J. D. King and others in trust. It is endowed with an estate, vested in ten trustees, which produces a yearly rent of nearly £200. The chapel is ancient, and supposed to have been formerly the chantry-chapel to the abbey of Missenden. It contains a monument to Cornelius Wood, a distinguished general in the reign of Queen Anne, who died in 1712. Pop., in 1801, 137; in 1831, 147. Houses 32. Acres 970. A. P. £688. Poor rates returned with parish.

ASTON (LITTLE). See SHENSTONE, Staffordshire.—There is a liberty of the same name in the parish of Stone, Staffordshire.

ASTON-MAGNA, a hamlet in the parish of Blockley, Worcestershire; 3 miles north-west from Moreton-in-the-Marsh. Pop., in 1821, 254.

ASTON-MIDDLE, a township in the parish of Aston-Steeple, county of Oxford; 3 miles south by east from Deddington. Pop., in 1801, 90; in 1831, 121. Houses 25. A. P. £1,540. Poor rates, in 1837, £116.

ASTON-MOLLINS. See DINTON, Bucks.

ASTON-JUXTA-MONDRUM, a township in the parish of Acton, co.-palatine of Chester; 4 miles north from Nantwich. Pop., in 1801, 111; in 1831, 152. Houses 26. Acres 950. A. P. £1,585. Poor rates, in 1837, £178.

ASTON (NORTH), a parish in the hund. of Wootton, union of Woodstock, county of Oxford; 2½ miles south-east from Deddington; bounded by the Cherwell on the east. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Oxford; rated at £6 10s., and in the parliamentary returns at £110; gross income £133. Patron, in 1835, C. O. Bowles, Esq. There are two daily schools in the parish. Pop., in 1801, 220; in 1831, 305. Houses 65. Acres 1,230. A. P. £3,303. Poor rates, in 1837, £234.

ASTON-BOWANT, a parish in the hund. of Lewknor, union of Thame, county of Oxford; 3½ miles south-east from Tetworth. Living, a discharged vicarage, with the curacy of Stokenchurch annexed, in the archd. and dio. of Oxford; rated at £16 18s. 11d., and in the parliamentary returns at £148 12s. 9d.; gross income £180; in the patronage of the Crown. Rectorial and vicarial tithes, moduses, &c., the property of the lay-impropriators and vicar, were commuted in 1832. There are three daily, a Sunday National school, and two other Sunday schools within this parish. Charities connected with this parish, exclusive of those of the chapelry of Stokenchurch, produce about £57 per annum. In 1692, some Roman remains were discovered in Kingston-field, within this parish, at a short distance from the Ikenild-street. Pop., including the liberties of Chalford and Kingston-Blount, in 1821, 870; in 1831, 946. Houses 162. Acres 2,980. A. P. £1,948. Poor rates, in 1837, £665.

ASTON-SANDFORD, a parish in the north-west part of the detached portion of the hund. of Ashendon, union of Aylesbury, Bucks; 4 miles east-north-east from Thame. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Buckingham, rural deanery of Waddesdon, and dio. of Lincoln; rated at £12 16s. 0½d.; gross income £135. Patroness, in 1835, Mrs S. Barber. It is an antique little building, and consists of a nave, a chancel, and gable-roofed porch. The Rev. Thomas Scott, author of the admirable and well-known commentary on the Bible, was rector of this parish from 1806 till his death in 1821. The village consists of a few cottages dispersed round a small green. Pop., in 1801, 71; in 1831, 82. Houses 14. Acres 650. A. P. £845. Poor rates, in 1837, £57.

ASTON-SOMERVILLE, a parish in the lower division of the hund. of Kiftsgate, union of Evesham, Gloucestershire; 4 miles south by east from Evesham; on a branch of the Avon. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Gloucester and dio. of Gloucester and Bristol; rated at £9 3s. 4d.; gross income £277. Patron, in 1835, Lord Somerville. This manor has remained in the family of Somerville for upwards of six centuries. Lord Somerville, the distinguished agriculturist, was buried here in 1819. Pop., in 1801, 87; in 1831, 103. Houses 18. Acres 1,320. A. P. £2,440. No levy of poor rates in 1837.

ASTON (STEEPLE), a parish in the hund. of Wootton, union of Woodstock, county of Oxford; 4 miles south by east from Deddington; containing the townships of Aston-Steeple and Aston-Middle. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Oxford; rated at £16 2s. 8d.; gross income £612; in the patronage of Brazen-nose college, Oxford. There are four daily schools here, one of which is endowed with £20. Some Roman remains have been found here, at various periods. Pop., in 1801, 423; in 1831, 562. Houses 95. Acres 1,870. A. P. £1,677. Poor rates for the township, in 1837, £116.

ASTON-TIRROLD, or ASTON-TIRREL, a parish in the hund. of Moreton, union of Wallingford, county of Berks; 4 miles south-west from Wallingford. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Berks and dio. of Salisbury; rated at £10 12s. 11d.; gross income £250; in the patronage of Magdalene college, Oxford. There are a daily school here, and a day and boarding school. An Independent church was formed here in 1670. Charities connected with the parish produce about £12 per annum. This has been supposed—though apparently without foundation—to be the place, called in the Saxon chronicle, Aescasdune, where Ethelred I., and his brother Alfred, defeated the Danes in 871. Pop., in 1801, 294; in 1831, 343. Houses 71. Acres 2,030. A. P. £1,567. Poor rates, in 1837, £118.

ASTON-UPON-TRENT, a parish in the hund. of Morleston and Litchurch, union of Shardlow, Derbyshire; 6 miles south-east by south from Derby. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Derby and dio. of Lichfield; rated at £29 15s.; gross income £1,037. Patron, in 1835, E. A. Holden, Esq. Great and small tithes, the property of the clerical rector, were commuted in 1762. In 1833 there were three daily schools here, attended by 80 children. Charities connected with this parish produce about £22 per annum. In 1256, a grant of a market and fair was obtained; but they have long ago fallen into disuse. The Grand Trunk canal passes through this parish. Pop., in 1801, 467; in 1831, 620. Houses 131. Acres 1,710. A. P. £3,320. Poor rates, in 1837, £490.

ASTON-UPTHORP, a hamlet and chapelry in the parish of Blewberry, hund. of Moreton, union of Wallingford, Berks; 5 miles south-west from Wallingford. Living, a curacy, not in charge, to the vicarage of Blewberry, a peculiar of the see of Salisbury, and in the patronage of the vicar of Blewberry. Pop., in 1801, 196; in 1831, 172. Houses 81. Acres 1,120. A. P. £1,406. Poor rates, in 1837, £50.

ASTON-WHEATON. See WHEATON-ASTON.

ASTROPE, or ASTHORPE, a hamlet in the parish of King's-Sutton, county of Northampton; 6 miles west from Brackley. The impropriate and vicarial tithes of Astrope liberties, the property of the lay-impropriator and vicars, commuted in 1772. There is a mineral spring here, called St Rumbald's well, formerly much frequented. Population returned with the parish.

ASTWELL, a hamlet partly in the parish of Wappenham, and partly in that of Syresham, county of Northampton; 5½ miles north-north-east from Brackley. Pop., in 1801, 118; in 1831, 110. Houses 22. A. P. £2,006. Poor rates, in 1837, £113.

ASTWICK, a parish in the hund. and union of Biggleswade, county of Bedford; 5 miles south-south-east from Biggleswade. Living, a rectory formerly in the archd. of Bedford and dio. of Lincoln, now in the dio. of Ely; rated at £6 13s. 4d., and in connection with the vicarage of Arlsey. Great and small tithes, the property of the clerical rector, commuted in 1804. Pop., in 1801, 81; in 1831, 97. Houses 14. Acres 570. A. P. £711. Poor rates, in 1837, £46.

ASTWICK, or ESTWICK, in the parish of Evenley, Northamptonshire; 3 miles south-west by south from Brackley. "Astwick, or Estwick, the adjoining hamlet to Evenley, though now reduced to a hamlet of six houses, appears to have been formerly a large town, as may be seen from the ruins which are called the Old Town. There was formerly a capital manor-house, the site of which is now overgrown; but there is still remaining a moat full of water, 150 paces long, and 10 yards wide. Several Roman coins, and in particular one of Constantine, have been found in Astwick-field.—Bridges' Northampton, vol. I.

ASTWOOD, a parish in the hund. of Newport, union of Newport-Pagnell, Bucks; 6 miles north-north-east from Newport-Pagnell; on the road to Bedford. Living, a vicarage in the archd. of Buckingham and dio. of Lincoln; rated at £6 6s. 8d.; and in the patronage of the Crown. Lowndes' charity to the poor of this parish produces £5 per annum. Pop., in 1801, 160; in 1831, 268. Houses 51. Acres 1,300. A. P. £1,433. Poor rates, in 1837, £67.

ASWARBY, a parish in the wapentake of Aswardburn, parts of Kesteven, union of Sleaford, Lincolnshire; 4 miles north by west from Folkingham; on the post-road to Sleaford. The living is a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Lincoln; rated at £12 4s. 7d., and in the parliamentary returns at £139 10s.; gross income £300. Patron, in 1835, Sir T. Whichcote, Bart. There is a small daily school in this parish. The church is an interesting edifice, consisting of a lofty nave, aisle, and chancel, with an elegant tower and spire. Pop., in 1801, 113; in 1831, 113. Houses 20. Acres 1,940. A. P. £1,563. Poor rates, in 1837, £52.

ASWARDBY, a parish in the wapentake of Hill, parts of Lindsey, union of Spilsby, Lincolnshire; 4 miles north-west from Spilsby. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. and dio. of Lincoln; rated at £7 19s. 4d.; gross income £266. Patron, in 1835, R. Brakenbury, Esq. There is a small daily school here. Pop., in 1801, 59; in 1831, 80. Houses 15. Acres 650. A. P. £709. Poor rates, in 1837, £64.

ASWARDHURN, a wapentake in Lincolnshire, in the parts of Kesteven, bounded on the north by the wapentakes of Flaxwell and Langoe; on the east by that of Kirton; on the south by that of Aveland; and on the west by Winnibriggs and Threo, and Flaxwell, wapentakes. Area 45,280 statute acres. Houses 1,256. Pop., in 1831, 6,407.

ATCHAM, or ATTINGHAM, a parish in the Wellington division of the hund. of South Bradford, union of Atcham, Salop; 4 miles south-east from Shrewsbury; on a bend of the Severn, and on the post-road from Shrewsbury to Shifnal. The living is a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Salop and dio. of Lichfield; rated at £11 6s. 8d.; gross income £267. Patron, in 1835, R. Burton, Esq. Charities to the poor of this parish produce £85 per annum. In 1833 there was a daily school here, with 80 scholars. The Atcham poor-law union comprehends 43 parishes, containing a population, returned, in 1831, at 17,819. The average annual expenditure on the poor of the district, during the three years preceding the formation of the union, was £9,768. Expenditure, in 1838, £4,943. Pop., in 1801, 490; in 1831, 463. Houses 87. Acres 3,490. A. P. £4,144. Poor rates, in 1837, £440.—Attingham-hall, the seat of Lord Berwick, contains a fine gallery of paintings, chiefly by the early Italian masters, also a fine collection of Etruscan vases and other antiquities from Herculaneum.

ATCH-LENCH, a hamlet in the parish of Church-Lench, Worcestershire; 5 miles north from Evesham. Pop., in 1801, 70; in 1831, 82. Houses 19. A. P. £515.

ATHAN (Str), a parish in the hund. of Cowbridge, union of Bridgend and Cowbridge, Glamorgan, South Wales; 5 miles south of Cowbridge; including the port of West-Aber-Ddaw, and comprising 1,300 acres of land. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Llandaff; rated at £15 9s. 7d.; gross income £369. Patron, in 1835, William Rayer, Esq. There are two daily schools here. Here are the remains of East Orchard castle, one of twelve built by the Normans, and also traces of another of later date called West Orchard. Pop., in 1801, 264; in 1831, 312. Houses 68. A. P. £1,849. Poor rates, in 1837, £159.

ATHELINGTON, or ALLINGTON, a parish in the hund. and union of Hoxne, Suffolk; 4 miles south-east from Eye. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. of Suffolk and dio. of Norwich; rated at £4 14s. 2d., and in the parliamentary returns at £96; gross income £157. Patron, the Crown. Two boys are sent from this parish to the endowed school at Worlingworth. Pop., in 1801, 70; in 1831, 129. Houses 14. Acres 980. A. P. £711.

ATHELNEY (Isle or), a small piece of ground, formerly an island, of about 100 acres in extent, formed by the junction of the Tone with the Parrot, in the parish of Ling, hund. of Andersfield, county of Somerset, between Bridgewater and Langport; 7 miles from Bridgewater. Here Alfred the Great took refuge when his kingdom was overrun by the Danes: the flood and the surrounding marshes rendering the place nearly inaccessible. About the year 888, he founded here an abbey for monks of the Benedictine order, dedicated to the Blessed Saviour, St Peter, and St Paul. The abbot did not sit in parliament, but he enjoyed great privileges and was regarded as a spiritual lord. In the 26th Henry VIII., it was valued at £209 0s. 8d.; and after the suppression, the site and demesne lands were granted, 36th Henry VIII., to John Clayton. Of the buildings no vestige now remains, but the fragments of architecture and sculpture show it to have been of considerable consequence. Many curious relics of antiquity have been found here. The most important of these are, the head of a golden spear, supposed to have been presented by Alfred to the abbey, and an amulet of enamel and gold, now in the Ashmolean museum. A legend on the latter expresses that it was made by command of the king. See Palgrave's Anglo-Saxon History, p. 129.

ATHERINGTON, a parish in the hund. of North Tawton with Winkley, union of Barnstaple, county of Devon; 8 miles west from South Molton. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Barnstaple and dio. of Exeter; rated at £26 2s. 1d.; gross income £456. Patron, in 1835, J. Arthur. There is a day and Sunday school in this parish. The church contains the monument of a crusader, brought from Umberleigh chapel in 1818. Pop., in 1801, 484; in 1831, 593. Houses 114. Acres 2,500. A. P. £2,140. Poor rates, in 1837, £269.

ATHERINGTON, or ALDRINGTON, a parish in the half-hundred of Fishergate, rape of Lewes, union of Steyning, Sussex; 2½ miles west by north from Brighton. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. of Lewes and dio. of Chichester; rated at £7 10s. 2d.; gross income £369; and in the patronage of Magdalene college, Cambridge. The Brighton and London railway, and the Shoreham branch, intersect this parish. Here was a cell to the abbey of Seiz in Normandy. In Burrell's MSS., No. 5,683, p. 25, it is said:—"The antiquaries suppose this the Portus Adurni, where, when the Saxons infested our seas, the band of Exploratores, under the Roman emperors, had their station. It is now choked up with sand. The name, and some adjacent cottages called Portslade, i. e. the way to the port, persuade us to think that it was Aldrington, or Ederington, (a little village, which king Alfred granted to his younger son,) because they might easily land here, the shore being so open and plain." The church has been destroyed, and the village, which was anciently considerable, depopulated by the encroachments of the sea.

ATHERSTON, a hamlet in the parish of White Lackington, Somerset. Here was formerly a chapel.

ATHERSTONE, anciently ADRESTONE, and EDRESTONE, a market-town in the parish of Mancetter, union of Atherstone, county of Warwick; 107 miles north-west from London, by Coventry; 23 north by east from Warwick; and 14 from Coventry station on the London and Birmingham railway. It stands on the Roman Watling-street, at the northern extremity of the forest of Arden, on the road from London to Derby, and near the river Anker. This is a chapelry to the parish of Mancetter, and the living is a perpetual curacy, formerly in the archd. of Coventry and dio. of Lichfield and Coventry, now in the dio. of Worcester. It is rated at £11 5s., and in the parliamentary returns at £109; average income, in 1833, £98. Patron, the vicar of Mancetter. The chapel, originally belonging to the Augustin priory, is an ancient structure of the time of Richard II.; but its original character has been greatly altered by modern additions. The Unitarians, Independents, and Methodists, have places of worship here. The Independent church was formed in 1790.—A free grammar-school was founded here, in 1573, by Sir William Devereux and others; it is endowed with land, producing upwards of £288 per annum. There is also an English school, endowed with about £40 per annum, at which above 100 children were educated in 1834. There are several other daily schools, and some large Sunday schools. Other charities connected with the township produce upwards of £250 per annum. Here also is a well-established dispensary, a subscription library and news-room, and an infant-school. The Atherstone poor law union comprehends 14 parishes, embracing a district of 34 square miles, and containing a population returned in 1831 at 9,489. The average annual expenditure on the poor of this district, during the three years preceding the formation of the union, was £5,332. Expenditure, in 1838, £3,482. "In the 49th of Edward III.," says Tanner, "Ralph Lord Bassett of Draiton, gave land whereon to build a church and habitation in this place, for friars heremites of St Austin, which was shortly after done; and these mendicants continued here till the general dissolution, when the friary, and all that belonged to it, (being valued but at £1 10s. 2d. per annum,) were given to one Henry Cartwright and his heirs." The church of this convent is now used for the parochial chapel, and the rest is appropriated to the use of the free grammar-school.—The town of Atherstone consists chiefly of one principal street, which is well-built, and nearly a mile in length. It contains a convenient market-place and house; the latter being situated on pillars with a spacious assembly-room above. The town is within the jurisdiction of the county-magistrates, who hold a petty session weekly for the Atherstone division of the hundred of Hemlingford. The market-day is Tuesday, and fairs are held on April 7th, for horses, cows, and sheep; July 18th, a holiday fair; September 19th, for cattle and cheese; and on December 4th, there is a great cattle-fair. The Coventry Union bank has a branch here; and now also carries on the bank of Weaver and Walsh. The principal manufactures are those of hats, ribbons, and shalloons: the fairs are well-frequented: that in September was once the most considerable in England for the sale of cheese. The Coventry canal, united with that of the Trent and Mersey, passes within 100 yards of the town; and it has been proposed to carry the extension line of railroad from Stafford to Rugby through the town. There are posts to Sheepy, Twycross, Appleby, Menasham, and Nuneaton. At the Conquest, this town was given to the monks of Bec in Normandy, who obtained a grant of a market and an annual fair. It is 9 miles distant from the famous field of Bosworth. Pop., in 1801, 2,650; in 1831, 3,870. Houses 801. A. P. £8,006. Poor rates, in 1837, £1,767.

ATHERSTONE-UPON-STOUR, a parish in the Kingston division of the hund. of Kingston, union of Stratford-on-Avon, Warwickshire; 3 miles south from Stratford-on-Avon; on the river Stour, near its junction with the Avon. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Worcester; rated at £13 1s. 8d.; gross income £296. Patron, in 1835, the Rev. Thomas Cox, D.D. All tithes of Atherstone fields, the property of the lay-impropriator, commuted in 1764. This was the residence of Dr Thomas, the coniator of Dugdale's Antiquities. Pop., in 1801, 112; in 1831, 87. Houses 21. Acres 1,120. A. P. with Whitchurch. Poor rates, in 1837, £43.

ATHERTON, or CHOWRENT, a chapelry in the parish of Leigh, co-palatine of Lancaster; 7 miles north-east from Newton. Living, a perpetual curacy, not in charge, exempt from visitation; rated in the parliamentary returns at £140; gross income £108.

Patron, in 1835, Lord Lilford. The inhabitants are employed partly in collieries in the vicinity, and partly in the cotton-manufactories and iron-works of the place. The Bolton and Leigh railroad passes near the town. Pop., in 1801, 3,249; in 1831, 4,181. Houses 806. Acres 2,220. A. P. £7,568. Poor rates, in 1837, £779.

ATLOW, a chapelry in the parish of Bradborne, Derbyshire; 5 miles east-north-east from Ashborne; on a branch of the Dove. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. of Derby and dio. of Lichfield; rated at £18, and in the parliamentary returns at £130; gross income £150. Patron, in 1835, H. F. Okeover, Esq. Pop., in 1801, 187; in 1831, 517. Houses 29. Acres 1,580. A. P. £1,603. Poor rates, in 1837, £84.

ATPAR. See ADPAR.

ATRE (THE), a river of Cornwall, falling into the Tamar at Bodwelly hill.

ATTENBOROUGH, a parish in the southern division of the hund. of Brestow, Nottinghamshire; 5 miles south-west from Nottingham. It includes the hamlets of Chilwell and Toton: which see. Living, a discharged vicarage with the curacy of Bramoote annexed, formerly in the archd. of Nottingham and dio. of York, now in the dio. of Lincoln; rated at £4 15s.; gross income £250. Patron, in 1835, F. F. Foljambe, Esq. Charities connected with the parish produce about £10 yearly. This parish is traversed by the Nottingham canal, the Birmingham and Derby railroad, and the rivers Trent and Erewash. Henry Ireton, the son-in-law of Cromwell, was born here. Pop., in 1801, 813; in 1831, 1,094. Houses 216. Acres 1,990. A. P. £5,851.

ATTERBY, a township in the parish of Norton Bishop, Lincolnshire; 9 miles north-west from Market-Raisen. Pop., in 1801, 95; in 1831, 112. Houses 18. Acres 1,190. A. P. £942. Poor rates, in 1837, £59.

ATTERCLIFFE, or ATTERCLIFFE-CUM-DARNALL, a chapelry and township with Darnall, in the parish of Sheffield, west riding of Yorkshire; 1½ mile north-east from Sheffield, and included within the parliamentary boundaries of that borough. An abrupt precipice which here overhangs the Don, probably gave name to this township. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. and dio. of York; rated at £10, and in the parliamentary returns at £40; gross income £194. Patron, in 1835, the vicar of Sheffield. Under the act for building new churches, the parliamentary commissioners erected one here in 1822, in the later Gothic style, and capable of seating 2,000, at an expense of £12,800. Zion Independent chapel was founded in 1793. In 1833, there were a large infant school, 13 daily schools, and six Sunday schools, in this township. One of the Sunday schools has an endowment producing £16 12s. 6d. per annum; there are also alms-houses for four poor widows. Other charities connected with this parish produce about £13 per annum. Here are also two National schools. The canal from Sheffield to Tinsley on the Don, passes through this township. Pop., in 1801, 2,281; in 1831, 3,741, chiefly colliers, mechanics, and cutlers. Houses 784. Acres 1,270. A. P. £5,244. Poor rates returned with parish.

ATTERTON, a hamlet, formerly a chapelry, in the parish of Witherley, Leicestershire; 3 miles east by north from Atherstone. The chapel is now in ruins. Pop., in 1811, 83; in 1831, 76. Houses 13. A. P. £1,092. Poor rates, in 1837, £85.

ATTINGHAM. See ATCHAM.

ATTINGTON, an extra-parochial hamlet in the hund. of Thame, Oxfordshire; ¾ mile east of Tetworth. It consists of two farms and farm-houses.

Pop., in 1801, 7; in 1831, 7. Acres 560. A. P. £840.

ATTLEBOROUGH, a hamlet in NUNKATON parish, Warwickshire,—which see. The Birmingham and Derby junction railway passes this hamlet. The foundation-stone of a church, with 472 sittings, was laid here, by Lord Sandon, in February, 1841.

ATTLEBRIDGE, a parish in the hund. of Taverham, union of St Faith's, Norfolk; 5 miles south-south-east from Reepham; on the river Wensum. Living, a discharged vicarage united to the rectory of Alderford, in the archd. and dio. of Norwich; rated at £4 6s. 10d., and in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Norwich. Pop., in 1801, 85; in 1831, 117. Houses 15. Acres 810. A. P. £1,046. Poor rates, in 1837, £111.

ATTLEBURGH, or ATTLEBOROUGH, a market-town and parish in the hund. of Shropham, union of Wapland, Norfolk; 15½ miles south-west of Norwich; on the post-road to Thetford. This formerly consisted of the two parishes of Attleburgh Major and Minor; but they are now united into one. Living, a united rectory in the archd. of Norfolk and dio. of Norwich; of which Attleburgh-Major is rated at £19 8s. 9d.; and Attleburgh-Minor, which is discharged at £8 2s. 6d.; average income, in 1833, £1,246. Patron, in 1835, Sir Thomas Smyth, Bart. The church is a spacious building in the form of a cross, in the collegiate style, with a fine porch, and a square tower rising from the point of intersection. It contains monuments to distinguished members of the families of Mortimer, Ratcliffe, and Blickley. "Sir Robert Mortimer, knight," says Tanner, "designed the foundation of a chantry or college, in the parish church here, to the honour of the exaltation of the holy cross; but being prevented by death, his executors or trustees built and endowed the same for a master or warden, and four secular priests, about the 7^o of Henry IV. It was valued, 26^o Henry VIII., at £21 16s. 3d. per annum, and was granted, 33^o Henry VIII., to Robert, earl of Sussex." The Baptists, Methodists, and Society of Friends, have also places of worship here. Here is a school with an endowment of £16 10s. per annum; also a Sunday school supported by voluntary subscription; and two other daily schools. The charities connected with the parish produce upwards of £70 per annum. This place, formerly a city, and the capital of Norfolk, is now reduced to an inconsiderable town. It probably derives its name from some Saxon prince, who may have had his residence here. There is a good market here every second week, and a small weekly one on Thursday, and fairs are held on Thursdays before Easter, Thursday after Holy Thursday, and the 15th of August for cattle and toys. There is a bank here of Gurneys and Co. Pop., in 1801, 1,033; in 1831, 1,939. Houses 372. Acres 5,800. A. P. £9,577. Poor rates, in 1837, £1,189.—Near the town are the remains of an obelisk erected by the county to Sir Edward Rich, who, in 1675, gave £200 towards repairing the highway from Attleburgh to Wymondham, which is said to have been the first turnpike-road constructed in England, and for which an act was granted in the 7^o William III. There are penny-posts to Hingham, Great Ellingham, and New and Old Buckenham.

ATWICK, a parish and township with Arram and Skirlington, north division of the wapentake of Holderness, east riding of Yorkshire; 2 miles north from Hornsea. It stands in a pleasant situation on a small stream flowing into the German ocean, which here has made encroachments on the land. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of the east riding and dio. of York; rated at £4 7s. 11d., and in the parliamentary returns at £80; gross income £149. Patron, the Crown. Improprate and certain vicarial tithes, the property of the lay-impropriator and vicar, commuted in 1769. Here is a place of worship for Wesleyan Methodists. The bequest of Edward Fenwick, in 1689, provides for the education and apprenticing of boys of this parish; it produces £76 per annum. There is another for five girls, endowed with £8 per annum, the bequest of Ralph Burton in 1726, by whom £12 18s. were also left for other charitable purposes. Pop., in 1801, 368; in 1831, 285. Houses 58. Acres 2,100. A. P. £1,961. Poor rates, in 1837, £219.

AUBIN (St), or AUDIEU, a market-town, situated on the bay of the same name in the island of Jersey; 3 miles from St Helier. It is a well-built and thriving place. The port is defended by a pier running out to sea in the same manner as that of Guernsey. The parish-church being somewhat distant, there is a chapel-of-ease here.

AUBOURNE, a parish and township in the lower division of the wapentake of Boothby-Graffo, parts of Kesteven, Lincolnshire; including part of the township of Haddington; 6½ miles south-west from Lincoln; on the Witham. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Lincoln; rated at £7 13s. 10d., and in the parliamentary returns at £33 6s. 8d.; gross income £55. Patron, in 1835, C. Noel, Esq. Pop., in 1801, £179; in 1831, 356. Houses 62. Acres 3,090. A. P. £1,877. Poor rates, in 1837, £54.

AUBURN, or ABORN, a chapelry in the parish of Fraisthorpe, east riding of Yorkshire; 5 miles south by west from Bridlington. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. of the east riding and dio. of York; rated at £2 13s. 4d.; and endowed with £600 royal bounty. Pop. returned with the parish.

AUCKLAND (St Andrew), a parochial chapelry, partly in the south-eastern, but chiefly in the north-western division of Darlington ward, co.-palatine of Durham. The former part comprises the townships of Byer's-Green, Coundon-Grange, Eldon, Middlestone, Midridge-Grange, Old-Park, Sunderland-Bridge, Westerton, and Windleston. The latter division includes the townships of Auckland (St Andrew), West Auckland, North and South Bedburn, Binchester, Bishop-Auckland, Coundon, Evenwood, Hunwick with Helmington, Lynesack with Softley, Newfield, Newton-Capp, Pollard's-lands, Shildon, Last Thickley, and the chapelries of Auckland (St Helen) and Hamsterley. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. and dio. of Durham; rated at £10; gross income £270. Patron, in 1835, the bishop of Durham. It is not in charge, but is united to the chapelry of St Anne, Bishop-Auckland, which is endowed with £600 private benefaction, and £800 royal bounty. The church is a cruciform structure, with a tower at the west end, situated on a rising ground near the banks of the Gaunless. "The church or chapel of St Andrew here," says Tanner, "was made collegiate, and well endowed by Anthony Beck, bishop of Durham. At the time of the Lincoln taxation there were 12 portionists or prebendaries, and their revenues were then rated at £249 13s. 4d. But the founder in his statutes, made A. D. 1292, appointed a dean and nine prebendaries only, and of that number there was some alteration made by Thomas, bishop of Durham, A. D. 1428. But there were again a dean and eleven prebendaries, 26^o Henry VIII., when the deanery was valued at £100 7s. 2d., and the eleven prebends at £79 16s. 8d." Charities connected with this parish produce about £300 per annum. The township of Eldon gave the title of earl to John Scott, late lord-high-chancellor. Pop., in 1801, 7,090; in 1831, 11,137. Houses 1,918. Acres 67,770. A. P. £46,382.

The township of Auckland (St Andrew), in the above parish, is 1 mile south by east from Bishop-Auckland; and is intersected by the Bishop Auckland and Weardale railway. Pop., in 1801, 121; in 1831, 296. Houses 50. Acres 1,110. A. P. £1,551. Poor rates, in 1837, £127.—There are two daily schools in this township.

AUCKLAND (BISHOP), a market-town in the chapelry of St Andrew Auckland, north-western division of Darlington ward; 10½ miles south-west of Durham. It stands on an eminence of about 140 feet from the plain; bounded on the north by the river Wear, and on the south-east by the Gaunleas, which flows into the former near the town. The houses are remarkably well-built; the streets are lighted with gas; and the surrounding country is pleasant and fertile, and the air remarkably salubrious. The name is derived from its vicinity to the palace of the bishop of Durham, and from the number of oaks which formerly grew here. The slope of the hill on which it stands is pleasantly laid out in hanging-gardens, which give a picturesque effect to the buildings above. The living is a curacy not in charge, in the patronage of the bishop of Durham. The Independents, Society of Friends, and Methodists, have places of worship here. The free grammar-school here was founded in 1604, on the petition of Anne Swyfte, who, along with other benefactors, endowed it with property now producing £37 per annum. The management is vested in 12 governors, who are a body corporate, and have a common seal; the school-room was rebuilt about 60 years ago, and a small neat chapel erected over it by subscription. Bishop Barrington established a school here on the system of Dr Bell; about 200 children are educated in it. The master has a salary of £100 a-year, with a free house. It is now in connection with the National school society. In 1768, Mr Walton founded a school, in which 20 boys receive instruction gratis, and the master has a house and a salary of £20 per annum. There is also a Central National school here; alms-houses for two men and two women were founded and endowed here in the reign of Charles II. by Bishop Cosins; and Dr Barrington instituted a house of industry for girls, the mistress of which has a salary of £28. Auckland was formerly a borough by prescription; but its chief importance has been derived from its having been the principal residence of the bishops of Durham, whose palace or castle stands at the northern angle of the town, and covers, with the courts and offices, a surface of five acres. It was originally erected in the 13th century by Bishop Anthony Beck. The original building has almost entirely disappeared. It was bestowed in the time of the commonwealth on Sir Arthur Haselrigge, who pulled down and rebuilt a great part of it. After the Restoration, Bishop Cosins demolished what Sir Arthur had erected, employing the materials in constructing the palace-chapel. The other parts of the castle have been built at various times. The entrance from the town is through a handsome Gothic gateway designed by James Wyatt. The park and demesne lands belonging to it amount to 800 acres. At the bottom of the lawn, the Wear is crossed by Newton-Cap bridge, a lofty structure of two arches, built by Bishop Skirlaw about 1390. There are some manufactories of maulins and other cotton-goods in this town. The market-day is Thursday; and the fairs are held on Holy Thursday for horned cattle, swine, and all sorts of wares; on the day following, on Corpus Christi day, and on Thursday before October 10th, for sheep and horses. The North of England banking company have a branch here. The petty-sessions for the north-west division of Darlington ward are held here. Bishop-Auckland is a polling-place for the member for South Durham. Pop., in 1801, 1,961; in 1831, 2,859. Houses 467. Acres 2,570. A. P. £4,849. Poor rates, in 1837, £693. The Stockton and Darlington railroad passes in the vicinity of the town; and the Bishop-Auckland and Weardale railway here runs off from the former, and terminates at Frosterley; its whole length being 16 miles, 24 chains.

AUCKLAND (ST HELEN), a chapelry in the parish of Auckland (St Andrew), north-western division of the ward of Darlington, co.-palatine of Durham; 3 miles south-south-west from Bishop-Auckland. It comprises the townships of Auckland (St Helen), West Auckland, and Evenwood. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. and dio. of Durham; rated at £13 9s. 4d.; gross income £140; £82 per annum was also added, in 1837, to the income of this living out of the money granted for the augmentations of poor benefices, by the late bishop of Durham. Patron, in 1835, the bishop of Durham. There is a small daily school here. The Darlington railroad passes through the village, in which coal and sandstone are found in abundance. Pop. of the township, in 1801, 206; in 1831, 410. Houses 70. Acres 1,780. A. P. £1,828. Poor rates, in 1837, £152.—Raby castle, the noble seat of the earl of Darlington, is situated within half-a-mile of the town.

AUCKLAND (WEST), a township in the above chapelry; 4 miles south-west from Bishop-Auckland. About a third of the inhabitants are employed in agriculture, and the remainder in trade and manufactures. The Wesleyan Methodists have a place of worship here. There is a free school, with an endowment of about £30 per annum, at which sixty children attended in 1833. There are also a British school, and five other daily schools, besides two infant schools. Pop., in 1801, 978; in 1831, 1,529. Houses 308. Acres 3,720. A. P. £4,923. Poor rates, in 1837, £569.

AUDELEY-END, a magnificent seat, 1 mile west of Saffron-Walden, Essex. It belonged to Lord Howard, by whom it was bequeathed to Lord Braybrooke. The present stately mansion is but a small part of the original building, which was erected for James I. by the lord-treasurer, Thomas, Lord Audeley. The king declined to occupy it, with the remark, that it might be supported by a treasurer, but was too great for a king. By one of the earls of Suffolk, into whose hands it came, it was afterwards sold to Charles II.; who, failing to pay the purchase money, restored it to the earl, by whom a large portion of it was taken down. In the state-apartments of the mansion there are some valuable portraits by Holbein, Kneller, and other masters. In the neighbouring hamlet there is a fair on the 5th of August for cheese.

AUDENSHAW, a township in the parish of Ashton-under-Lyne, co.-palatine of Lancaster; 4½ miles east by south from Manchester, and ¾ of a mile from the first station in the Sheffield and Manchester railway. It includes Audenshaw, an ancient hamlet, with a Dissenter's chapel and free school; High Ash, an old hall of the Stopford's, where coats of arms and portraits of the kings of England were once preserved; Shepley-hall, a modern seat, well-known for its collection of pictures; and Little Moss, Waterhouses, Woodhouses, and Medlockvale, populous hamlets. Hat-making, calico-printing, and silk-weaving, are carried on here. The canal to Ashton passes the village. To the south-west are the large reservoirs of the Manchester and Salford water-works company. Pop., in 1821, 3,781.

AUDIEU. See AUBIN (ST).

AUDLEM, a parish in the hund. and union of Nantwich, co.-palatine of Chester; 7 miles south by east from Nantwich; on the Liverpool Junction canal. It comprises the townships of Audlem, Buer-ton, Dodcot with Wilkesley, Hankelow, and Tittenley. Living, a vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Chester; rated at £5 16s. 8d. Patron, in 1835, Sir R. S. Cotton, Bart. A Baptist church was formed here in 1815. There is here a free grammar-school with an endowment of £40 per annum, founded about 1655 by Ralph Bolton and Thomas Gammull; also an English school with an endowment, and four other daily schools. Other charities connected with this parish produce upwards of £80 per annum. Pop., in 1831, 2,978; of the township of Audlem, in 1801, 965; in 1831, 1,558. Houses 296. Acres 2,250. A. P. £3,786. Poor rates, in 1837, £378.

AUDLEY, a parish in the northern division of the hund. of Pirehill, union of Newcastle-under-Lyne, Staffordshire; 4½ miles north-west from Newcastle-under-Lyne, and 4 east of the Grand Junction railroad. It comprises the townships of Audley, Bignall-end, Eardley-end, Knowl-end, Park-end, and Talk-o'-th'-Hill, and the liberty of Halmer-end. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Stafford and dio. of Lichfield; rated at £6 13s. 4d., and in the parliamentary returns at £130; gross income £177. Patron, in 1835, G. Tollet, Esq. In 1622, Edward Vernon founded a free grammar-school here, in which about 50 children are educated, and the yearly revenue of which amounts to £120. There are other two schools connected with the National school society. The charities connected with the parish produce £16 12s. yearly. Pop., in 1801, 2,246, of which number 583 belonged to the township of Audley; and in 1831, 3,617, and 767. Houses 655 and 150. Acres in the parish 8,140. A. P. £12,891. Poor rates, in 1837, £1,003.

AUDLEY-STRETTON. See AUDLEY.

AUGHTON, a chapelry in the parish of Halton, co.-palatine of Lancaster; 7 miles north-east from Lancaster. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. of Richmond and dio. of Chester; rated at £22 3s. 4d.; gross income £140. Patrons, the rector of Halton and vicar of Lancaster. Here are a free school, with an endowment of £68 per annum; and two National Sunday schools. Pop., in 1831, returned with the parish; in 1821, 199. Acres 1,900.

AUGHTON, a parish in the hund. of West Derby, union of Ormskirk, co.-palatine of Lancaster; 2½ miles south-west from Ormskirk. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Chester; rated at £14 15s. 5d.; gross income £758. Patron, in 1835, J. P. Tempest. Tithes, the property of the clerical rector, commuted in 1813. There are a Roman Catholic chapel and school here; and five other daily schools. Charities to the poor of this parish produce about £18 yearly. The Leeds and Liverpool canal, and a branch of the Alt river, pass through this parish. Horse-races are held here annually. Pop., in 1801, 967; in 1831, 1,462. Houses 241. Acres 4,410. A. P. £3,730. Poor rates, in 1837, £357.

AUGHTON, a parish in the Holme-Beacon division of the wapentake of Harthill, union of Howden, east riding of Yorkshire; 8 miles north-north-west from Howden; on the eastern bank of the Derwent. It includes the townships of Aughton, East Cottingham, and Laytham; which see. Living, a discharged vicarage, to which is annexed the chapelry of Cottingham, in the archd. of the east riding and dio. of York; rated at £4; gross income £90. Patron, in 1829, T. Mosley, Esq. The church-lands of this parish produce a yearly rent of £18. There is a Sunday National school in the township of Aughton. On the Derwent here there stood formerly a castle, of which only the moat and trenches can now be traced. Here lived Robert Aske, who was executed as a leader of the insurrection called 'the pilgrimage of grace,' occasioned by the suppression of the monasteries in the reign of Henry VIII. Pop., of the parish, in 1801, 529; in 1831, 665; of the township, in 1801, 187; in 1831, 217. Houses 196 and 47. Acres 4,200 and 1,790. A. P. of the township, £1,648. Poor rates, in 1837, £90.

AUGHTON, a township in the parish of Aston, west riding of Yorkshire; 4 miles south-south-east from Rotherham. Pop. returned with Aston: which see.

AUGUSTINE (St.) LATHE, one of the five great divisions of the county of Kent. It forms the eastern part of the county; and is bounded on the north by the German ocean; on the east by the straits of Dover; on the south by the English channel, and Shepway lathe; and on the west by Shepway and Scray lathes. It contains the hundreds of Bewsborough, Bleangate, Bridge and Petham, Cornilo, Downhamford, Estry, Kinghamford, Preston, Isle of Thanet, Westgate, Whitstable, and Wingham, and the liberties of Canterbury and Sandwich. Its area is 161,240 acres. Pop., in 1831, 74,914, of whom 5,612 families were occupied in agriculture, and 4,086 in trade and manufactures.

AUKBOROUGH, a parish in the northern division of the wapentake of Manley, parts of Lindsey, union of Glandford-Brigg, Lincolnshire; 10½ miles west from Burton upon Humber; at the mouth of the Trent. Living, a discharged vicarage, with the rectory of Whitton annexed, in the archd. of Stow and dio. of Lincoln; rated at £10; and in the parliamentary returns at £100; gross income £219; alternately in the patronage of the bishop of Lincoln, and M. Constable, the lord of the manor. Improper and vicarial tithes, the property of the lord of the manor and vicar, commuted in 1765. There were three daily schools, with 85 children, in this parish in 1833. Many curious fossils are found here. Dr Stukeley has supposed Aukborough to be the Aquis of the Romans. Traces of a Roman camp and vicinal road exist in this parish. Pop., in 1801, 345; in 1831, 467. Houses 94. Acres 2,540. A. P. £3,740. Poor rates, in 1837, £190.

AUKLEY, a township in the parish of Finningley, Nottinghamshire; 5 miles north from Bawtry. Pop., in 1801, 137; in 1831, 127. Houses 28. Acres 1,970. A. P. £722. Poor rates, in 1837, £152.

AULT-HUCKNALL, or HAULT-HUCKNALL, a parish in the hund. of Scarsdale, union of Mansfield, county of Derby; 5½ miles north-west from Mansfield. Living, a vicarage in the archd. of Derby and dio. of Lichfield; rated at £6; gross income £114. Patron, in 1835, the duke of Devonshire. At Hardwicke, in this parish, there is a school for the education of poor children, founded in 1729 by Thomas Whitehead, the master of which has a yearly salary of £25. Pop., in 1801, 492; in 1831, 618. Houses 114. Acres 3,730. A. P. £505. Poor rates, in 1837, £192. See HARDWICKE.

AUNSBY, a parish in the wapentake of Aswardhurn, parts of Kesteven, union of Sleaford, Lincolnshire; 5½ miles north-west by north from Folkingham. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Lincoln; rated at £6 0s. 7½d., and in the parliamentary returns at £140; gross income £222. Patroness, in 1835, Mrs H. Newton. Pop., in 1801, 84; in 1831, 117. Houses 24. Acres 1,250. A. P. £1,295. Poor rates, in 1837, £9.

AUST, or AUST-CLAVE, a tything and chapelry in the parish of Henbury, Gloucestershire; 4 miles west-south-west from Thornbury; 12 north-west from Bristol. Living, a curacy, formerly in the archd. of Gloucester, now in that of Bristol, and dio. of Gloucester and Bristol, of the certified value of £20. Patron, the vicar of Henbury. Charities connected with this chapelry produce the yearly sum of £21 10s. The village stands among the salt-marshes on the eastern bank of the Severn, over which, at this place, there is a ferry to Chepstow, called the Old passage, to distinguish it from the New passage, which is two miles lower down the river. At this place Edward I. passed over to hold a conference with Llewellyn, the last prince of Wales. Pop., in 1801, 140; in 1831, 203. Houses 31. Acres 1,200. Poor rates, in 1837, £92.

AUSTELL (St.), a market-town and parish in the eastern division of the hund. of Powder, union of St Austell, Cornwall; 243 miles west-south-west from London; 10 south by west of Bodmin, and 13 north-north-east of Truro. Living, a vicarage with that of Blazey annexed, in the archd. of Cornwall and dio. of Exeter; rated at £21; gross income, in 1833, £640. Patron, the Crown. The church is an ancient building, consisting of three aisles, with a remarkably fine tower, and many curious sculptures. A Baptist church was formed here in 1833; an Independent in 1788; a Wesleyan Methodist in 1803. The Brianists and Society of Friends have also places of worship here. The only charity connected with this parish produces £243 per annum. There are two National and daily Sunday schools here, with an attendance of 300 children, and a British school with 200 children. The town is situated on the eastern side of a hill, at the bottom of which runs a small rivulet. The streets are narrow, and without foot-pavement. There are some manufactories of woollens, but the greater part of the inhabitants are employed in mining, and in the pilchard-fisheries in the bay of Austell, which engross immense attention during the fishing-season. The most important mines in the neighbourhood are known by the names of the East Crinnis, Pembroke, Polgorth and Beam tin-mines; and the copper-mines of Lanescot and Fowey. Many vessels are employed in the importation of coal, and in the exportation of copper-ore, tin, porcelain-clay, &c. Several harbours have been formed on different parts of the coast in this parish; of these, the most important is that at Charlestown, within a mile and a half of St Austell, capable of affording secure shelter to the vessels which resort thither. At Par, to the east of Charlestown, is another harbour for the accommodation of the Fowey consolidated and Lanescot mines, with which a canal has been made to communicate. At Pentewan, about 3½ miles south of St Austell, there is a third harbour, with which the town communicates by a railroad. St Austin is under the jurisdiction of the magistrates of the county, who hold petty-sessions here for the division of East Powder. The St Austin poor-law union comprehends 15 parishes, containing 101 square miles, and a population, returned in 1831, at 28,947. The average expenditure for the relief of the poor of this district, during the three years preceding the formation of the union, was £8,424. A considerable market for corn and all kinds of provisions is held on Friday; and fairs for oxen, sheep and cloth, are held on Thursday before Easter, Whit-Thursdays, first Friday after 23d, first Friday after October 16th, and the 30th of November. The market was conferred by charter of Elizabeth, when the tolls were assigned to the relief and maintenance of the poor, from which a considerable revenue is now drawn. In 1833, there was a woollen mill employing 11 hands in this parish. The Devon and Cornwall Banking company have a branch here. The name of St Austell is of uncertain determination. It was but an obscure village in the reign of Henry VIII., and rose into importance from the discovery of several rich mines in the vicinity. It was taken by Charles I. in the parliamentary wars a short time previous to the capitulation of the parliamentarians near Lostwithiel in 1644. Pop., in 1801, 3,788; in 1831, 8,738. The increase of population within the last thirty years, has been in a great measure owing to the discovery of new and rich mines of tin, and to the carrying of the high road from Plymouth to the Land's End through it. Houses 1,543. Acres 11,540. A. P. £40,638. Poor rates, in 1837, £2,691.—At Menacuddle, in this parish, there is a baptismal well, with a chapel attached. There are some good quarries of freestone, especially near the harbour of Pentewan, from which, stone for building many of the churches and mansions in the county has been procured. Not far from the same place, in one of the celebrated tin stream works, the bones of men, of oxen of enormous size, of a whale, and of some animals now unknown, were found. About 2½ miles north of St Austell is Hensburrow, one of the highest points in Cornwall, rising to the height of 1,030 feet.

AUSTERFIELD, a township and chapelry in the parish of Blyth, west riding of Yorkshire; 1½ mile north-north-east from Bawtrey; on the confines of Nottinghamshire. Living, a curacy in the archd. of Nottingham and dio. of York; rated at £15 8s. 4d.; and in the patronage of the vicar of Blyth. Vicarial tithes, the property of Trinity college, Cambridge, and vicar, commuted in 1765. There is a small daily school here. It has been supposed by antiquaries, that a great battle was fought here between the Britons and the Romans under Ostorius, from whose name Austerfield has been said to be derived. Pop., in 1801, 232; in 1831, 280. Houses 57. Acres 2,710. A. P. £2,419. Poor rates, in 1837, £92.

AUSTERSON, or AWSTASTON, a township in the parish of Acton, co.-palatine of Chester; 4 miles west-north-west from Nantwich. Pop., in 1801, 59; in 1831, 69. Houses 6. Acres 950. A. P. £891. Poor rates, in 1837, £56.

AUTHORPE, a township in the parish of Whitkirk, west riding of Yorkshire; 4 miles east by north from Leeds. On the 28th of May (old style), 1724, the celebrated civil engineer, John Smeaton, was born here. A lively representation of his greatest work, the Eddystone light-house, is carved upon his monument in the choir of Whitkirk church. Pop., in 1801, 103; in 1831, 169. Houses 32. Acres 660. A. P. £1,031. Poor rates, in 1837, £172.

AUTHWAITE. See BIRKER.

AUSTLE (St.). See AUSTELL (St.).

AUSTONLEY, a township in the parish of Almondbury, west riding of Yorkshire; 7½ miles south-east from Huddersfield. Pop., in 1801, 674; in 1831, 1,420. Houses 238. Acres 1,760. A. P. £972. Poor rates, in 1837, £249. There is a day and Sunday school here.

AUSTREY, a parish in the Tamworth division of the hund. of Hemlingford, union of Tamworth, Warwickshire; 6 miles east-north-east from Tamworth; on the borders of Leicestershire. Living, a vicarage, formerly in the archd. of Coventry and dio. of Lichfield and Coventry, now in that of Worcester; rated at £8; gross income £210. Patron, the Crown. The church presents some curious specimens of stained glass in the windows. Thomas Monk's charity, founded in 1713, for the purpose of apprenticing, education, and distribution to the poor in this and some other parishes, produces £291 per annum. Other charities connected with this parish produce upwards of £32 yearly. There are three daily schools in the parish. Pop., in 1801, 491; in

1831, 540. Houses 103. Acres 2,280. A. P. £3,694. Poor rates, in 1837, £192.

AUSTWICK, a township in the parish of Clapham, west riding of Yorkshire; 4 miles north-west from Settle. A fair for cattle is held here on the Thursday before Whitsuntide. Pop., in 1801, 478; in 1831, 614. Houses 131. Acres 5,400. A. P. £4,567. Poor rates, in 1837, £261.

AUTHORPE, a parish in the Wold division of the hund. of South Eske, parts of Lindsey, union of Louth, Lincolnshire; 4 miles north-west from Aldford. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. and dio. of Lincoln; rated at £5 13s. 4d., and in the parliamentary returns at £102 5s.; gross income £166. Patron, in 1835, R. Vyner, Esq. Pop., in 1801, 85; in 1831, 121. Houses 23. Acres 1,390. A. P. £1,056. Poor rates, in 1837, £175.

AVEBURY, or ABURY, a parish in the hund. of Selkley, union of Marlborough, Wilts; 6½ miles west from Marlborough. Living, a vicarage with that of Winterbourne Monckton annexed, in the archd. of Wilts and dio. of Salisbury; rated at £9, gross income £178. Patron, the Crown. The church is a building of high antiquity, but much altered by modern repairs. Here is a free school, with an endowment producing about £10 a-year, and founded in 1722 by Susannah Holford. Pop., in 1801, 590; in 1831, 747. Houses 139. Acres 5,450. A. P. £4,571. Poor rates, in 1837, £401. The village stands on the site of an ancient structure, supposed to have been erected by the ancient Britons for purposes similar to those for which Stonehenge was constructed; it was, however, on a much more stupendous scale. By Dr Stukeley it is described to have consisted of 650 stones, and to have been so extensive as to include the whole site of the present village. It was surrounded by a broad ditch, within which was a lofty vallum, intended, as is supposed, to enable spectators to observe the ceremonies over the whole extent of the area. Within the ditch was a circle, 1,400 feet in diameter, formed of 100 upright stones, from 15 to 17 feet in height, and about 40 in circumference, placed at a distance of 27 yards from one another. Within this were two circles, each consisting of two double concentric rows, composed of the same number of stones, and arranged in a similar manner. The grand circle had two entrances, consisting of double rows of 100 upright stones each, placed at equal distances, and extending a mile in length; the one terminating in a double concentric circle of smaller diameter, and the other having a stone larger than the rest at the extremity. Of this vast structure few traces now remain, the stones having been broken down and used in the construction of the houses of the village, and in repairing the roads. In the neighbourhood are many barrows, cromlechs, and tumuli; the largest of the latter is the Roman tumulus called Silbury hill, which is 1,680 feet in circumference, and 170 feet high, forming, from its conical form and isolated position, a conspicuous object among the low chalk hills of the vicinity. "In the time of Henry I. this manor was given by William de Tancerville to the Benedictine monks of St George of Boschavill in Normandy, to which abbey it became an alien priory. It was once given to St Mary, Winchester college, in Oxford; but afterwards, in the reign of Henry IV., it was annexed to the collegiate church of Fodringhey in Northamptonshire, and as parcel of its possessions, granted 2° Edward VI. to Sir William Sherington." Tanner's Not. Mon.

AVECOTE, or AUCOTE, in the parish of Shutlington, Warwickshire; 3 miles east by south from Tamworth. There was here, according to Tanner, "a small priory of four Benedictine monks, cell to Malvern the Greater in Worcestershire, begun by William Burdet, A. D. 1159. It was valued in the 26° Henry VIII., at £34 8s., and granted, 34° Henry VIII., in exchange to Thomas, Lord Audley, and Sir Thomas Pope."

AVELAND, the name of a wapentake in the parts of Kesteven, Lincolnshire; bounded on the north by Aswardhurn; on the east by the South forty-foot dyke, separating it from the parts of Holland; on the south by Ness; on the west by Bettisloe and Winnibriggs. Pop., in 1831, 9,978. Houses 1,885. Area in British statute acres, 53,220.

AVELEY, a parish in the hund. of Chafford, union of Orsett, Essex; 2 miles north-east of Purfleet. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Essex and dio. of London; rated at £14 10s. 5½d.; gross income £272. The patronage formerly belonged to Cardinal Wolsey, on whose disgrace it was given to the dean and chapter of St Paul. The present patron is the bishop of London. There are four daily schools here. The village was formerly a market-town. Here is an alms-house for three poor men, and another charity producing £3 per annum, which is applied to the distribution of bread among the poor in the parish. On Easter Monday a fair is held. Pop., in 1801, 543; in 1831, 758. Houses 135. Acres 3,920. A. P. £758. Poor rates, in 1837, £298.

AVENBURY, a parish in the hund. of Broxash, union of Bromyard, Hereford; 2 miles south-south-east from Bromyard; on the river Frome. Living, a vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Hereford; rated at £7 8s. 9d.; in the patronage of the Crown; gross income £49. There is a daily school here with about 50 scholars. Pop., in 1801, 316; in 1831, 344. Houses 64. Acres 3,140. A. P. £4,270. Poor rates, in 1837, £255.

AVENING, a parish in the hund. of Longtree union of Stroud, Gloucestershire; 3½ miles north by west from Tetbury, and within the parliamentary boundary of Stroud. It includes a part of the chapelry of Nailsworth. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Gloucester and dio. of Gloucester and Bristol; rated at £24; gross income £811. Patrons, in 1835, the heirs of the late Dr Brooke. A Baptist church was formed here in 1818; Upper Forest Green Independent church in 1822; and Nailsworth Independent church in 1867. Here is a free school supported partly by an endowment of £17 per annum, bequeathed by S. Sandford in 1710, and partly by subscription. There are other five daily schools. Other charities produce about £13 a-year. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the manufacture of cloth by hand-loom weaving. Pop., in 1801, 1,509; in 1831, 2,396. Houses 500. Acres 4,660. A. P. £4,279. Poor rates, in 1837, £359.—In this parish are several barrows in which human skeletons have been found. In a field near Gatcombe park there is a large tumulus, with a stone at each end, and a large one on the summit, known by the name of Longstone, and regarded as a monument to the memory of Long, a Danish chieftain.

AVERHAM, a parish in the wapentake of Thurgarton, union of Southwell, Nottinghamshire; 2 miles west by north from Newark; on the western bank of the Trent. Living, a rectory with that of Kellam annexed, in the archd. of Nottingham and dio. of York; rated at £20; gross income £1,467. Patron, in 1835, J. H. M. Sutton, Esq. Pop., in 1801, 166; in 1831, 182. Houses 28. Acres 2,000. A. P. £3,749. Poor rates, in 1837, £197.

AVETON-GIFFORD, a parish in the hund. of Ermington, union of Kingsbridge, Devon; 3 miles south-east from Modbury. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Totness and dio. of Exeter; rated at £38 1s. 8d.; gross income £662. Patron, in 1835, J.

Pitman, Esq. In 1833, there were four daily schools here attended by 134 children. Charities connected with the parish produce about £7 per annum. Pop., in 1801, 746; in 1831, 939. Houses 178. Acres 1,840. A. P. £5,436. Poor rates, in 1837, £507. The road from Modbury to Dodbrook is carried across the Avon in this parish.

AVINGHAM. See OVINGHAM.

AVINGTON, a parish in the hund. of Kintbury-Eagle, union of Hungerford, Berks; 2 miles east by south from Hungerford; on the river Kennet. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Berks and dio. of Salisbury; rated at £8; gross income £300. Patron, in 1835, Sir Francis Burdett, Bart. The church exhibits a curious specimen of Saxon architecture, the chancel being separated from the nave by an arch, richly ornamented with zigzag moulding, and a great variety of grotesque heads, springing from two enriched piers which lean outwards. The font is ancient, of a circular form, and adorned with rudely sculptured figures. Pop., in 1801, 57; in 1831, 94. Houses 15. Acres 1,100. A. P. £1,273. Poor rates, in 1837, £65.

AVINGTON, a parish in the hund. of Fawley, Southamptonshire; 4 miles north-east from Winchester. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Winchester; rated at £11 11s. 10d.; gross income £278. Patron, in 1835, the bishop of Winchester. Here is a day and Sunday school. By the bequest of Anne Bridges in 1761, the rector of Avington receives £20 per annum, on condition of his constant residence in the parish. Pop., in 1801, 123; in 1831, 191. Houses 39. Acres 1,830. A. P. £1,611. Poor rates, in 1837, £62.

AVISFORD HUNDRED, in the rape of Arundel, Sussex. Pop., in 1831, 2,976. Houses 512. Area in British statute acres, 15,410.

AVON, a chapelry in the parish of Christian-Malford, Wilts; 3 miles north-east from Chippenham. Living, a curacy subordinate to the rectory of Christian-Malford, and rated at £1 13s. 4d. Pop., in 1801, 14; in 1831, 26. Houses 4. Acres 160. A. P. £659. Poor rates, in 1837, £4.

AVON* (THE UPPER), a river which rises at Avon-Well, near Naseby, Northamptonshire, passing through Leicestershire, and almost equally divides Warwickshire, in which it passes Stratford-on-Avon, the birth-place of Shakspeare. It then enters the county of Worcester, after traversing which, and passing Evesham, it falls into the Severn at Tewkesbury. Its entire course is nearly 100 miles, and it is navigable for barges of about 40 tons burden to Stratford, whence a branch canal extends to the Worcester and Birmingham canal. Its principal tributaries are the Alne, the Leame, the Stour, the Sow, and the Swift.

AVON (THE LOWER), a river which rises near Tetbury, Gloucestershire, and running through a part of Wiltshire, enters the county of Somerset near Bath, where it becomes navigable. Passing that town and Bristol, it falls into the Bristol channel at Kings-road, 10 miles below the latter city. At the St Vincent rocks, in the neighbourhood of Bristol, a stupendous chain-bridge has been thrown across the valley of the Avon. Its whole course is about 80 miles, chiefly in a deep channel, which in many places runs through very rich and romantic valleys. It is connected with the Thames by the Kennet and Avon canal.

AVON (THE), a river which rises near Devizes, flows past Salisbury, enters Hampshire, and falls into the English channel a little below Christchurch, after a course of about 65 miles. The principal branch is the Stour: which see.

AVON (THE), a small river in Monmouthshire, falling into the Usk, near Caerleon. It is sometimes called the Toryden.

AVON (THE), a river in Wales, rising in the north of the county of Glamorgan, and falling into Swansea bay at Aberavon. Its course is about 16 miles.—There is another river of the same name in Wales, rising in the county of Merioneth, and falling into Cardigan bay, near Barmouth.

AVON-DASSET. See DASSET-AVON.

AWBURN, or ARBORN. See AUBURN.

AWKERINGTON. See ALKERTON.

AWLISCOMBE, a parish in the hund. of Hem-yock, union of Honiton, Devon; 2 miles north by west from Honiton. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Exeter; rated at £12 10s. 10d.; gross income £230. Patron, in 1835, the duke of Bedford. The church has a stone-screen in the style of the 15th century, with angels holding scrolls in the springing of the arches. George Pring's charity to the poor of this parish produces £10 per annum. The great tithes of Awliscombe are applicable to the augmentation of poor vicarages in Devonshire, and to the education of children belonging to the parish of Broadhembury. The yearly produce, in 1821, was £150. There is a Unitarian meeting-house in this parish. There are a daily school and two day and Sunday National schools here. A handsome bridge was built over the Otter here in 1817. Pop., in 1801, 426; in 1831, 598. Houses 103. Acres 1,820. A. P. £598. Poor rates, in 1837, £202.

AWNBY. See HOLYWELL, Lincolnshire.

AWRE, a parish in the hund. of Blidesloe, union of Westbury, Gloucestershire; 2½ miles east-north-east from Blakeney; on the estuary of the Severn, which bounds the parish on three sides. It includes the chapelry of Blakeney (which see) and the tythings of Blidesloe, Etloe, Etloe-Duchy, and Hagloe. Living, a vicarage in connection with Poulton, transferred from the archd. of Hereford to that of Gloucester, in the dio. of Gloucester and Bristol; rated at £10 5s.; gross income £572; and in the patronage of the Haberdashers' company, London. There are three daily schools here, two whereof are National. Charities connected with the parish produce about £24 per annum. Sternhold, one of the translators of the common English metrical version of the Psalms, was born here. Pop., in 1801, 952; in 1831, 1,309. Houses 219. Acres 4,120. A. P. £6,632. Poor rates, in 1837, £503.

AWSWORTH, a chapelry in the parish of Nut-hall, Nottinghamshire; 7 miles north-west by west from Nottingham. Living, a perpetual curacy in the patronage of the rector; gross income £101. Patron, in 1835, the rector of Nuthall. Pop. returned with the parish. The inhabitants are chiefly colliers. The coals wrought here are transported by railroads to the Nottingham canal.

AXBRIDGE, a market-town and parish, formerly a borough, in the hund. of Winterstoke, division of Wroughton, union of Axbridge, Somersetshire; 10 miles west from Wells; 23 north-east of Taunton; and 130 west by south of London. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. of Wells and dio. of Bath and Wells; rated at £11 4s. 4d.; gross income £166. Patron, in 1835, the bishop of Bath and Wells. The church stands on an eminence near the market-house, and is an ancient Gothic structure containing some ancient monuments. There are eight daily schools in the parish, which in 1833 were attended by 154 scholars. Charities connected with the parish produce about £100 per annum. The Axbridge poor-law union comprehends 38 parishes, with an area of 139 square miles, containing a population, returned, in 1831, at 28,794. The average expenditure on the relief of the poor of this district, during the three years preceding the formation of the union, was £11,615. Expenditure, in 1838, £9,450. The town of Axbridge is situated under the southern ridge of the Mendip hills. It consists principally of a tolerably neat street, running in a winding direction from east to west, at the east end of which stands the market-house. The guild-hall and market-house was lately rebuilt; the cost of the building, and the improvements connected with it, being about £1,800. It was formerly a borough by prescription, and sent members to parliament during the reigns of the first three Edwards, but none have been returned since Edward the Third's time, when the burgesses petitioned to be relieved from the expenses connected with the return of members. It is now one of the polling-places for the members for East Somersetshire. The town is governed by a corporation, consisting of 10 common councilmen, out of whom a mayor and an alderman are chosen. The incorporation holds a court of session quarterly for the borough; petty-sessions are held every Saturday. The average gross income of the borough is £65. The town is in an improving condition. A market is held on Saturday; and fairs for cattle, sheep, cheese, and toys, are held on the 3d February and 25th March. The banks are Stuckey's Banking company; and a branch of the West of England and South Wales Banking company. Pop., in 1801, 819; in 1831, 928. Houses 173. Acres 540. A. P. £1,929. Poor rates, in 1837, £367.—The Axe drainage, which took place about £40 years ago, at an expense of £70,000, improved the value of property in the neighbourhood of Axbridge so much, that land, which before that time was reckoned only worth about 2s. 6d. per acre, is now rented at £5 and £6.

* Mr Thomas Richards, in his 'Antiquæ Linguae Britannicæ Thesaurus,' under the article Avon, observes: "Avon is the proper name of several rivers in England; as Avon, the river of Bristol; the Avon in Northamptonshire; another in Warwickshire, where there is a town called Stratford-upon-Avon, &c., for which this reason is to be assigned, viz. that the English, when they drove the Britons out of that part of Great Britain, called from them England, took the appellatives of the old inhabitants for proper names; and so, by mistaking Avon, which, with us, signifies only a river in general, it came to serve with them for the proper name of several of their rivers." Mr Ireland says that the name Avon, or Eben, is common to rivers whose course is easy and gentle. There are three streams in Scotland which bear this name.

AXE (THE), a river in Somersetshire, rising in the Mendip hills; about 2 miles from Wells, and falling into the Severn near Uphill, after a course of about 25 miles. It gives name to the above town.

AXE (THE), a river that rises near Chedington, Dorset, and entering Devonshire at Ford, falls into the British channel at Axmouth. It has a course of above 20 miles, and is navigable for about 4 miles from its mouth.

AXFORD, a tything in the parish of Ramsbury, Wilts; 3 miles east-north-east from Marlborough; on the Kennet. Pop., in 1821, 428; in 1831, 450. Houses 86.

AXHOLME (ISLE OF), an island formed by the rivers Trent on the east, Don on the west, and Idle on the south, in the western division of the wapentake of Manley, Lincolnshire. It is 17 miles in length, and 5 in breadth; and contains about 47,000 acres of land. It comprises the parishes of Althorpe, Belton, Crowle, Epworth, Haxey, Luddington, and Owston, with their respective hamlets. It is divided into 13 constabularies, and is crossed by the Stamford and Keadby canal. At a very remote period this district probably formed part of the great forest of the Brigantes. The trunks of oaks, firs, and other trees, are often found here buried at a small distance from the surface of the ground. In 1747, there was found in a morass here, near Amcotts, the body of a woman in a state of entire preservation. The skin was completely tanned so as to stretch like doe-leather, which it equalled in strength, by the great quantity of oak-bark immersed in the moor-water. The form of the sandals renders it probable that the body had lain here from the time of Edward I. The pop., in 1831, including that of West Stockwith, which belongs to Nottinghamshire, was 12,150.

AXMINSTER HUNDRED, in the division of Honiton, Devonshire. The old hundred was bounded on the west by the hundred of Colyton and East Budleigh; on the south by the English channel; on the east by Dorsetshire; and on the north by the hundred of Colyton. Pop., in 1831, 13,939. Houses 2,648. Area in British statute acres, 51,930. The present hundred, according to the divisions of the county established at the quarter-sessions in 1830, is of small extent.

AXMINSTER, a market-town and parish, in the hund. and union of Axminster, Devon, southern division of Devonshire. The parish includes the tythings of Beerhall, Town, Westwater, and Wyke. The name is derived from its situation on the river Axe, and from a minster founded here by King Athelstan. It stands on a rising ground, in an agreeable situation near the confluence of the rivers Axe and Yarty. Living, a vicarage, to which are annexed the curacies of Kilmington and Membury, in the archd. and dio. of Exeter; rated at £44 6s. 8d.; gross income £1,042. Patron, in 1835, the Rev. W. Coneybeare. Besides this, there is a sinecure rectory belonging to the prebendary of Warthill in the cathedral of York; rated at £40 6s. 8d. The church is by some supposed to be in part as ancient as the time of Athelstan. It presents several styles of architecture. In the interior are three stone-stalls of unequal height, with trefoil arched heads, and an elegant piscina. Respecting the ancient minster, Tanner remarks:—"King Athelstane founded here a minster for seven priests to pray for the souls of those who were slain in a battle which he fought against the Danes at Breams-Down, near this place. This minster was in after ages altered from seven to two priests, for whom a portion of land was allotted, known by the name of Priest Aller, which, with the parsonage, belongeth to two prebends in the church of York. It was, during the vacancy of the archiepiscopal see, in the reign of Henry III., alienated to the abbey of Newnham, but restored 21^o Edward I. to the prebendaries, and continues to this day part of the endowment of the prebendaries of Grindal and Warthill." The Independents, Wesleyan Methodists, and Roman Catholics, have places of worship here. Chard-street Independent church was formed in 1662; the Wesleyan Methodist church in 1796. There are three Sunday schools here: a charity school endowed with £16 per annum, at which 14 poor children receive instruction; and other thirteen daily schools. Other charities connected with the parish produce about £40 per annum. The Axminster poor-law union comprises a district of 92 square miles, containing 17 parishes, with a population returned, in 1831, at 19,490. The average annual expenditure for the relief of the poor of this district, during the three years preceding the formation of the union, was £10,218. Expenditure, in 1838, £7,935. The town is large and irregularly built; but the streets are spacious, and the air is deemed salubrious. It is under the jurisdiction of the county-magistrates, who hold petty-sessions for Honiton division here. The inhabitants are employed in various manufactures; as those of carpets, broad and narrow cloths, cottons, tapes, druggetts, gloves, &c. Of these, the most important is the carpet-manufacture, for which Axminster is very famous, and which was established in 1755. It is still conducted by the family of the original proprietor, and the carpets are said to rival those of Turkey in beauty and durability. Williams, Cox, and Co., have a bank here. The Bridport Bank, and the Wilts and Dorsetshire Banking company, have branches here. Saturday is the market-day; and fairs are held on April 25th, the first Wednesday after June 24th, and the first Wednesday after September 29th. There are penny-posts to Colyton, Seaton, and Wilmington. Pop., in 1801, 2,154; in 1831, £2,719. Houses 522. Acres 6,590. A. P. £13,797. Poor rates, in 1837, £11,445.—On the banks of the Axe, about $1\frac{1}{2}$ mile from the town, are the remains of the abbey of Newnham. On the road between Charmouth and Axminster a tunnel passes through one of the steepest hills between London and Exeter; it was opened in 1832. It is about 70 yards in length, and of sufficient capacity to permit two of the largest stage-waggons passing each other. The form is that of an elliptic arch.

AXMOUTH, a parish in the hund. and union of Axminster, Devon, on the coast between Lyme and Sidmouth; 8 miles south from Colyton. Living, a vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Exeter; rated at £22 19s. 2d.; gross income £263. Patron, in 1835, J. H. Hallett. This manor was reckoned as parcel of Lodres in Dorsetshire, which was a great cell to the foreign monastery of St. Mary, Mountbrow, in Normandy. There is a school here for six poor children, on which a small endowment was conferred by William Serle in 1726. There is also another small daily school. The river Axe passes through this parish, and falls into the English channel. The small bay at its mouth was formerly much resorted to as a haven, and a harbour for coasting vessels, which bring a good deal of culm for the neighbouring lime-works, has recently been constructed. Piers have also been erected at the mouth of the Axe, under the shelter of which vessels of 100 tons burden discharge their cargoes. Pop., in 1801, 375; in 1831, 646. Houses 91. Acres 4,280. A. P. £5,139. Poor rates, in 1837, £221.—An extraordinary landslip took place here on the 25th of December, 1839, by which a chasm of from 200 to 300 feet in depth, from 400 to 600 feet wide, and above $1\frac{1}{2}$ mile in length, has been formed. It runs parallel with the coast; and between it and the beach there is an area of about a mile in length, by half as much in breadth, now cut off from the mainland by the chasm.

AXTON HUNDRED, in the eastern part of the lathe of Sutton-at-Hone, Kent. The old hundreds of Dartford and Wilmington are included with it in the population returns for 1831. The area of the whole being 39,280 acres. The population amounted to 13,863 in that year.

AYCLIFFE (GREAT), a parish in the south-east division of Darlington ward, union of Darlington, co.-palatine of Durham; 5 miles north from Darlington; on the post-road to Durham. It includes the townships of Great Aycliffe, Brafferton, Preston-le-Skerne, and Woodham; which see. Living, a vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Durham; rated at £20; gross income £282; in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Durham. There are three daily schools here; one of which has an endowment of about £4 yearly, in consideration of which, eight children are instructed in reading, writing, and accounts. The only other charity, which is expended on bread to the poor, amounts to £3 10s. per annum. The Darlington railway passes at the distance of three quarters of a mile to the west of the village. The village is of considerable antiquity, and was part of the possessions of the ancient see of Lindisfarne. Synods were held here in 782 and 789. Pop. of the parish, in 1831, 1,564. Houses 316. Acres 10,490. Pop. of the town, in 1801, 640; in 1831, 937. Houses 204. Acres 2,130. A. P. £3,372. Poor rates, in 1837, £203.

AYCLIFFE (SCHOOL), a township in the parish of Heighington, co.-palatine of Durham; $7\frac{1}{2}$ miles north by west from Darlington; near the Clarence railway. Pop., in 1801, 41; in 1831, 82. Houses 7. Acres 700. A. P. £350.

AYDON, a township in the parish of Corbridge, Northumberland; 2 miles north-east of Corbridge. Pop., in 1801, 102; in 1831, 99. Houses 20. Poor rates, in 1837, £55.

AYDON-CASTLE, a township in the parish of Corbridge, county of Northumberland; $1\frac{1}{2}$ mile north-east of Corbridge. It takes its name from a castle which belonged, in the reign of Edward I., to the family of Aydon, the ruins of which stand on the west side of a deep dale. This is erected in the form of the letter H, with four towers, one at the end of each wing. The walls are very thick, and one of the towers is upwards of 60 feet high, so that in the feudal times it was regarded as a place of great strength. Not far from the same place is Langley castle, formerly the seat of the Radcliffe family, which was once regarded as a strong fortress. Pop., in 1801, 29; in 1831, 29. Houses 5. Poor rates, in 1837, £10.

AYLBURTON, a chapelry in the parish of Lidney, Gloucester; $4\frac{1}{2}$ miles south-west from Blackney. Living, a curacy, not in charge, in the patronage of the vicar of Lidney. The charity of Christopher Willowby, founded in 1680, produces £16 per annum. There is a daily school here. Pop., in 1801, 249; in 1831, 368. Houses 67. A. P. £1,855. Poor rates, in 1837, £118.

AYLESBEAR, a parish in the hund. of East Budleigh, union of St Thomas, Devon; 5 miles west-south-west from Ottery-St-Mary. It includes the township of Aylesbear and the tything of Newton-Poppleford; which see. Living, a discharged vicarage, with the curacy of Newton-Poppleford annexed, in the archd. and dio. of Exeter; rated at £16 2s. 4d., and in the parliamentary returns at £112; gross income £155. Patron, in 1835, the Rev. W. H. Marker. There is a small endowment here for the instruction of six poor children, bequeathed, in 1697, by Richard White. There are three daily schools here. Pop., in 1801, 687; of which number 373 were in the township of Aylesbear; in 1831, 1,025. Houses 196. Acres 3,750. A. P. £2,526. Poor rates, in 1837, £375.

AYLESBURY HUNDRED, Bucks, situated near the centre of the county, is bounded on the north by Cottesloe and Ashendon hundreds; on the east by Hertfordshire, and Burnham hundred; on the south by that of Desborough; and on the west by Oxfordshire. Pop., in 1831, 18,413. Houses 3,516. Area in British statute acres, 60,450.

AYLESBURY, or ALLESBURY, a borough and parish in the hund. and union of Aylesbury, county of Buckingham; 88 miles north-west from London by Edgeware; and 18 from Buckingham. The parish is a prebend of the same name in the cathedral of Lincoln. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Buckingham and dio. of Lincoln; rated at £24 18s. 1d.; gross income, in 1833, £330; in the patronage of the prebendary of the cathedral of Lincoln. The church is an ancient structure in the form of a cross, with a low tower rising from the intersection of the nave and transept, which, owing to the elevated situation of the building, is seen for many miles round. All tithes of the township, and liberties of Aylesbury, the property of the prebendary of Aylesbury and the vicar, were commuted in 1771. The Wesleyan Methodists, Baptists, Independents, and Society of Friends, have places of worship here. The second Baptist church here was formed in 1837; Hale Leys Independent church, in 1789. The free grammar-school was founded and endowed with £8 per annum, by Sir Henry Lee of Ditchley. The endowment was subsequently augmented by £5,000, bequeathed by Henry Phillips, Esq., in 1714. The present income of the school is £539 8s. 8d. There are 120 boys on the foundation, 20 of whom receive instruction in the classics and mathematics. There is also a Lancasterian school, which was founded by John Hull of Uxbridge; besides which there are 8 other day-schools, and an infant-school, and several Sunday schools. A rental of £535 per annum is yielded by lands given in Queen Elizabeth's reign, by John Bedford, for the support of the poor and repair of the highways. Other charities connected with the parish produce about £490 a-year.—The town stands in the rich tract of land called the vale of Aylesbury. The county-hall is a handsome brick edifice, in which the quarter-sessions and Lent-assizes are held. Aylesbury was formerly governed by a corporation, who held their office under a charter of Mary, dated 1554; but from neglect and non-exercise of their privileges, the charter was forfeited in the reign of Elizabeth. The county-magistrates have now jurisdiction over the town, and hold petty-sessions here for the three hundreds of Aylesbury; the internal affairs are managed by constables appointed at the court-leet of the lord of the manor. The General Infirmary here has admitted 551 in-patients, and 761 out-patients, between the years 1834 and 1838. Its total expenditure during that period was £3,627. An horticultural and a book-society have been established here for some time. There were anciently two hospitals for lepers here, but they had gone into decay previously to 1360. "At the south end of the town," says Tanner, "was a house of Grey or Franciscan friars, founded by James earl of Ormond, in the 10th of Richard II., valued at £3 2s. 5d. per annum; and granted 32° Henry VIII. to Sir John Baldwin." The Aylesbury poor-law union forms a district comprehending 40 parishes, and 115 square miles, containing a population, returned in 1831, at 21,101. The average annual expenditure on the relief of the poor of this district, during the three years preceding the formation of the union, was £25,221. Expenditure, in 1838, £11,401.—This was the Aeglesberg of the Saxons, and one of the most strongly fortified towns of the ancient Britons; it maintained its independence till captured by Cuthwulf, brother of Ceawlin, king of the West Saxons, in 571. At the Conquest, Aylesbury became a royal manor. During the years 1644 and 1645, this town was an important garrison of the parliament. In the reign of Henry VIII., it came into the hands of Sir John Baldwin, chief justice of the common pleas, who procured the removal of the assizes from Buckingham to this place. By the interest of the Temple and Grenville families, the summer-assizes have been again transferred to Buckingham; but the county-gaol still remains at Aylesbury. Aylesbury district now returns the two members to parliament, originally returned by the corporation. When the charter was forfeited, the franchise was conferred on the inhabitants paying scot and lot, of whom there were about 1,200, being all the voters in the three hundreds of Aylesbury which were united to the borough in 1804. Aylesbury is also the place of nomination and polling in county-elections. A market for corn and provisions is held on Saturday. Fairs are held on Friday after January 18th, Saturday before Palm-Sunday, May 8th, June 14th, September 25th for cattle, and October 12th. A wool-fair was established here in 1834. Above 800,000 ducks are annually sent to the London markets from this place. There is a penny-post to Waddesdon. The banks here are those of Rickford and Hunt,—Butcher and Son,—and T. and T. S. Chapman. A branch railroad from this town, 7½ miles in length, communicates with the Birmingham railway at the village of Cheddington, 35 miles from London. The line is nearly straight, and was executed at an expense of £57,250. It has been leased to the London and Birmingham railway company, and yields the proprietors about 4 per cent. There is a branch-canal to this town from the Grand Junction canal. The family of Brudenell Bruce takes the title of marquess from Aylesbury. Pop., in 1801, 3,186; in 1831, with Walton, 5,021. Houses 990. Acres 3,200. A. P. £9,298. Poor rates, in 1837, £1,716.

AYLESBY, a parish in the wapentake of Bradley-Haverstoe, parts of Lindsey, union of Caistor, Lincolnshire; 4 miles west from Great Grimsby. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. and dio. of Lincoln, of the certified value of £10; gross income £73. Patron, in 1835, T. T. Drake, Esq. Pop., in 1801, 90; in 1831, 144. Houses 28. Acres 2,110. A. P. £2,918. Poor rates, in 1837, £149.

AYLESFORD LATHE, Kent. It is bounded on the north by the Thames; on the west by the lathe of Sutton-at-Hone; on the south by the county of Sussex; and on the east by the lathe of Scray. It includes the hundreds of Hoo, Sharnwell, Toltingtrough, Chatham, and Gillingham, Wrotham, Larkfield, Littlefield, Twyford, Tunbridge, Washlingstone, Branchley and Horsemonden, Eythorne, and Maidstone. Pop., in 1831, 91,468. Houses 15,442. Area in British statute acres, 233,580.

AYLESFORD, a parish in the hund. of Larkfield, lathe of Aylesford, union of Malling, west division of Kent; 3½ miles north-north-west from Maidstone. It stands at the foot of a hill near the Medway. Living, a vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Rochester; rated at £10; gross income £670; in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Rochester. The church occupies the summit of an abrupt rising-ground close to the town. It contains monuments to various members of the Colepepper, Duke, Banks, Rycout, and Sedley families. A fair is held here on the 29th of June. In 1773, a school for the education of 25 poor children was endowed here by Charles Milner, with £20 per annum; there are other three daily schools, and an hospital for six poor persons, which was founded in 1617, partly on a bequest by John Sedley, and partly at the expense of Sir William Sedley. The annual income of the hospital is £135 per annum. The church-lands of this parish produce £14 per annum; other charities £8 16s. yearly. According to Bishop Tanner,—"Richard Lord Grey of Codnor founded here, about A.D. 1240, an house of Carmelite or White friars, which was granted 33° Henry VIII. to Sir Thomas Wyatt, upon whose son's attainder it reverted to the crown, and was granted by Elizabeth to John Sedley." This priory has been rendered a convenient abode, and is now in possession of the family of Finch, earls of Aylesford, who take their title from this place. The North Aylesford poor-law union forms a district, comprehending 15 parishes, and 47 square miles containing a population, returned in 1831, at 12,171.

The average annual expenditure on the relief of the poor of this district, during the three years preceding the formation of the union, was £8,490. Expenditure in 1838, £6,789. In 455, a battle was fought here between Vortimer, and Hengist and Horsa, in which Horsa was slain. The Danes were also defeated by Alfred at Fernham in this parish, and the same invaders were repulsed here by Edmund Ironside. The northern part of the parish is ancient demesne, and under the government of a separate constable. Sir Charles Sedley, one of the dissolute courtiers of Charles I., was a native of this parish; as also was the celebrated eastern traveller, Sir Paul Rycaut. Pop., in 1801, 902; in 1831, 1,301. Houses 205. Acres 3,380. A. P. £6,835. Poor rates, in 1837, £976.—In the neighbourhood there are some remains of antiquity, the most important of which is a large cromlech called Kits-cotty-house, which stands about a mile to the north-east of the church. It has been regarded by some as the tomb of Catigern, the brother of Vortimer, and by others as that of Horsa the Saxon. Another monument of upright stones has been supposed to be that of Horsa. See articles ARTHUR'S STONE, and KIT'S-COTTY-HOUSE.

AYLESHAM. See HAILSHAM, SUSSEX.

AYLESTONE, a parish in the hunds. of Guthlaxton and Sparkenboe, union of Blaby, county of Leicester; 2½ miles south by west from Leicester. It contains the townships of Aylestone and Glen-Purva, with the chapelry of Lubbesthorpe. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Leicester and dio. of Peterborough; rated at £31 8s. 11d.; gross income £875. Patron, in 1835, the duke of Rutland. There are two small daily schools here. The Union canal passes through this parish, and joins the Soar a little to the south of the town. Pop. of the township in 1801, 440; in 1831, 528; of the parish in 1801, 649, and, including 61 in the hamlet of Lubbesthorpe, in 1831, 758. Houses 153. Acres 3,840. A. P. £3,420. Poor rates, in 1837, £265.

AYLMERTON, a parish in the hund. of North Erpingham, union of Erpingham, county of Norfolk; 3 miles west-south-west from Cromer. Living, a discharged rectory united to that of Runtun, in the archd. of Norfolk and dio. of Norwich; rated at £6 11s.; gross income £370. Patron, in 1835, Admiral Wyndham. Pop., in 1801, 212; in 1831, 284. Houses 61. Acres 1,460. A. P. £966. Poor rates, in 1837, £160.

AYLSHAM, a market-town and parish in the hund. of South Erpingham, union of Aylsham, county of Norfolk; 118 miles north-east from London, through Reepham; 12 miles north by west from Norwich; on the post-road to Cromer. It stands near the river Bure, which is navigable for boats of 13 tons hence to Yarmouth. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Norwich; rated at £17 9s. 9d.; gross income £459; in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Canterbury. The church is a fine building, of the 14th century, consisting of a nave, aisles, transepts, and a square tower. It contains some curious monuments. The Baptists have two churches here; the first formed in 1796, the second in 1833. There is a free school, originally founded and endowed by Robert Jannys. It is conducted on the National system, and is now chiefly supported by voluntary contributions. There are other nine daily schools here, and three Sunday schools. Other charities connected with the parish produce about £10 a-year. The Aylsham poor law union forms a district comprehending 46 parishes, and 106 square miles, containing a population, returned in 1831, at 19,351. The average annual expenditure on the relief of the poor of this district, during the three years preceding the formation of the union, was £20,391. Expenditure, in 1838, £9,652. The town is under the jurisdiction of the county-magistrates, who hold petty-sessions here and at Buxton for the division of South Erpingham. Tuesday is the market-day; and fairs are held on March 23d, and the last Tuesday in September, for lean cattle, ordinary horses, and pedlery; and on October 6th for cattle. During the reigns of Edward II. and Edward III., the town was celebrated for the manufacture of linen, which was sold under the name of Aylsham web. Subsequently the manufacture of woollen articles gave employment to many of the inhabitants; but since the introduction of machinery this branch of trade has also fallen into decay. The Norwich manufacturers, however, employ weavers here. In the neighbourhood there is a spa, the water of which has been found useful in chronic disorders. The principal seat in the neighbourhood is Blickling house. See BLICKLING. Pop., in 1801, 1,667; in 1831, 2,334. Houses 484. Acres 4,250. A. P. £7,283. Poor rates, in 1837, £921.

AYLSTON. See ALLEXTON.

AYLTHORPE. See AGRILTHORPE.

AYLTON, a parish in the hund. of Radlow, union of Ledbury, county of Hereford; 4 miles west from Ledbury. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. and dio. of Hereford; rated at £3 3s. 4d., and in the parliamentary returns at £75; gross income £152. Patron, in 1835, the earl of Oxford. Pop., in 1801, 63; in 1831, 126. Houses 19. Acres 810. A. P. £1,316. Poor rates, in 1837, £39.

AYMESTREY, or AYLMISTREE, a parish partly in the hund. of Stretford, and partly in that of Wigmore, union of Leominster, county of Hereford; 8 miles north-west from Leominster. It comprises the townships of Conhope, Aymestrey, and Over Lye. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Hereford; rated at £7 14s. 2d.; gross income £253; in the patronage of the Crown. There are a charity school here, with an endowment of about £14 per annum, now in connection with the National school society, and two other daily schools. Other charities connected with the parish produce about £19 per annum. The river Lugg runs through this parish, and its banks here are singularly rich and beautiful. Near the village are traces of Roman and British camps. Pop., in 1801, 779; in 1831, 1,006. Houses 195. Acres 7,070. A. P. £5,020. Poor rates, in 1837, £482.

AYNHO, a parish in the hund. of King's Sutton, union of Brackley, county of Northampton; 6 miles west-south-west from Brackley. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Northampton and dio. of Peterborough; rated at £25 5s. 5d.; gross income £500. Patron, in 1835, W. R. Cartwright, Esq. Great and small tithes, the property of the clerical rector, commuted in 1792. A free school here was founded by Mary Cartwright, and endowed with a rent-charge of £20 per annum. There are other three daily and two Sunday schools. Here also are almshouses for six poor persons founded in 1816 by John Baker of Oxford, with a yearly revenue of £161, which is distributed among the inmates. The other charities connected with this parish produce about £7 per annum. There was anciently an hospital here for the accommodation of travellers, founded in the reign of Henry II., afterwards granted to Magdalene college, Oxford. A charter for a weekly market and an annual fair at Michaelmas was granted in the 17th of Edward II.; but they have long ago fallen into disuse. At the east end of the village there still remain traces of the Roman vicinal road called Portway. During the time of the Commonwealth, the living of Aynho was held by Robert Wild, a Presbyterian minister, poet, and satirist, who was ejected from it in 1662, and retired to Oundle, where he died in 1679. Shakerley Marmion the dramatist, and Sir Ralph Winwood the statesman, were both natives of this parish. Pop., in 1801, 623; in 1831, 664. Houses 139. Acres 2,390. A. P. £5,031. Poor rates, in 1837, £307.

AYOTT (ST LAWRENCE), or AYOTT-MAGNA, a parish in the hund. of Broadwater, union of Welwyn, Hertford; $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles west from Welwyn. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Huntingdon and dio. of Lincoln; rated at £8 13s. 4d.; gross income £180. Patron, in 1835, L. Lyde, Esq. The church was rebuilt after a Grecian plan, by Revett, at the expense of Sir Lionel Lyde, in 1778. The old church, now in ruins, contains some curious monuments. Pop., in 1801, 115; in 1831, 134. Houses 22. Acres 980. A. P. £1,062. Poor rates, in 1837, £48.

AYOTT (ST PETER), or AYOTT-PARVA, a parish in the hund. of Broadwater, union of Welwyn, county of Hertford; 2 miles south-west from Welwyn. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Huntingdon and dio. of Lincoln; rated at £7 8s. 6d.; gross income £300. Patron, in 1835, the earl of Hardwicke. Pop., in 1801, 168; in 1831, 271. Houses 49. Acres 1,270. A. P. £1,072. Poor rates, in 1837, £66.

AYR (POINT OF), the northern extremity of the Isle of Man; in N. lat. $54^{\circ} 28'$; W. long. $4^{\circ} 23'$. There is a light-house on this point with a revolving light, bright and red alternately, which may be seen in clear weather at 15 miles distance. It was erected in 1818; height of lantern above high water, 106 feet; of building, 80 feet.

AYSGARTH, a parish and township in the wapentake of Hang-west, north riding, Yorkshire; 9 miles west from Middleham. It includes the townships of High and Low Abbotside, Askrigg, Aysgarth, Bainbridge, Bishop-Dale, Burton with Walden, Caperby, Newbiggin, Thoraby, and Thornton-Rust, with the chapelry of Hawes. Living, a discharged vicarage formerly in the archd. of Richmond and dio. of Chester, now in the dio. of Ripon; rated at £19 6s. 8d., and in the parliamentary returns at £122 11s. 10d.; gross income £143; in the patronage of Trinity college, Cambridge. The Society of Friends have a meeting-house here. The village stands on the river Ure, near a remarkably fine waterfall, called Aysgarth force. At this place, the whole waters fall over a rugged limestone rock into a narrow channel, and form a succession of picturesque waterfalls. Immediately above them is a bridge of a single arch, span 71 feet, from which the view is very delightful. This parish is 25 miles in length, and nearly half as many in breadth. There are daily schools in all the townships. Pop. of the township, in 1801, 268; in 1831, 332. Houses 69. Acres 1,220. A. P. £1,013. Poor rates, in 1837, £168. Pop. of the parish, in 1831, 5,796. Houses 1,219. Acres 79,960.

AYSLEBEY. See AISLABY, Yorkshire.

AYSTON, a parish in the hund. of Martinsley, union of Uppingham, county of Rutland, 1 mile north of Uppingham. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Northampton and dio. of Peterborough; rated at £8 7s. 8d., and in the parliamentary returns at £120 8s. 1d.; gross income £192. Patron, in 1835, G. Hudyer. Pop., in 1801, 92; in 1831, 101. Houses 23. Acres 1,030. A. P. £1,161. Poor rates, in 1837, £74.

AYTON (EAST), a township in the parish of Seamer, north riding, Yorkshire; 4 miles south-west from Scarborough. It is a chapelry to Seamer, to which vicarage the curacy is annexed. Great and small tithes, the property of the lord of the manor, commuted in 1768. There is a daily school here. Pop., in 1801, 290; in 1831, 360. Houses 68. Acres 2,610. A. P. £2,213. Poor rates, in 1837, £86.

AYTON (WEST), a township in the parish of Hutton-Bushe, wapentake of Pickering lythe, north riding, Yorkshire; $4\frac{1}{2}$ miles south-west from Scarborough. It lies on the Derwent, opposite to the township of East Ayton. Great and small tithes of this township, the property of the lay-impropriators and vicar, commuted in 1792. Near this are the remains of an ancient castle, formerly belonging to the family of Evers. By Lady Hewley, three-fourths of the manor were vested in trustees, to be applied to the support of dissenting ministers, and other charitable purposes. There is a daily school here. Pop., in 1801, 162; in 1831, 256. Houses 48. Acres 2,160. A. P. £1,817. Poor rates, in 1837, £149.

AYTON (GREAT), a parish in the western division of the liberty of Langbaugh, union of Stokesley, north riding, county of York; 3 miles north-east from Stokesley. It comprises the townships of Great and Little Ayton, and Nunthorpe. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. of Cleveland and dio. of York; rated at £14, and in the parliamentary returns at £70 10s. 10d.; gross income £82. Patron, in 1835, the Rev. G. Marwood. The Wesleyan and Primitive Methodists, Independents, and Society of Friends, have chapels here. A charity school was founded here in 1704 by Michael Postgate; it has an endowment of £10 per annum for the education of eight boys belonging to the village. In this school the celebrated navigator, Captain Cook, received part of his education. An agricultural school and model-farm has recently been founded by T. Richardson of Ayton-house. Other charities about £12 per annum. There are several quarries of freestone in this parish. Pop., in 1831, 12,961. Houses 263. Acres 5,740. Pop. of the township of Great Ayton, in 1801, 865; in 1831, 1,006. Houses 246. Acres 3,160. A. P. £5,020. Poor rates, in 1837, £323.

AYTON (LITTLE), a township in the above parish, north riding, county of York; $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles north-east from Stokesley. Pop., in 1801, 69; in 1831, 68. Houses 13. Acres 1,170. A. P. £983. Poor rates, in 1837, £37.

AZERLEY, or COZENLEY, a township in the parish of Kirkby-Malzeard, west riding of Yorkshire; $4\frac{1}{2}$ miles north-west from Ripon; on a head-branch of the river Ure. Pop., in 1801, 521; in 1831, 701. Houses 152. Acres 3,140. A. P. £3,696. Poor rates, in 1837, £468.

B

BABCARY, a parish in the hund. of Catsaeh, union of Langport, county of Somerset; 4 miles east of Somerton; including the hamlets of Farringdon and Stert. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Wells and dio. of Bath and Wells; rated at £13 18s. 6d.; gross income £343. Patron, in 1835, Uriah Messiter. There are a daily and a Sunday school here. Pop., in 1801, 337; in 1831, 453. Houses 91. Acres 2,450. A. P. £3,151. Poor rates, in 1837, £135.

BABERGH, a hundred in Suffolk; on the south-west part of the county; divided from Essex by the river Stour; and bounded on the south by the hundreds of Thingoe and Thedwestry; on the east by those of Cosford and Sampford; on the south by Essex; and on the west by the hundred of Resbridge.—Superficial area 68,380 acres. Inhabited houses, in 1831, 4,489. Pop., in 1831, 23,678.

BABINGLEY, or BABURGHLEY, a parish in the hund. and union of Freebridge-Lynn, Norfolk; 1½ mile north of Castle-Rising; on a small stream of the same name, which flows westwards into the Wash. Living, a discharged rectory with that of Sandringham, in the archd. and dio. of Norwich; rated at £4 13s. 4d. Patron, in 1835, H. H. Henley, Esq. The first Christian church in East Anglia is stated to have been erected here. Pop., in 1801, 33; in 1831, 38. Houses 8. Acres 870. A. P. £374. Poor rates, in 1837, £72.

BABINGTON, a parish in the hund. and division of Kilmersdon, union of Shepton-Mallet, Somerset; 4 miles north-west of Frome. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Wells and dio. of Bath and Wells; rated at £10; gross income £200. Patron, in 1835, J. T. Jolliffe, Esq. Elizabeth Long, in 1758, bequeathed £25 per annum to this parish, for various charitable purposes. There are a boy and a female school in this parish. Pop., in 1801, 215; in 1831, 206. Houses 36. Acres 600. A. P. £1,235. Poor rates, in 1837, £170.

BABRAHAM, anciently BADBURHAM, a parish in the hund. of Chilford, union of Linton, county of Cambridge, near the Gogmagog hills; 4 miles north-west of Linton; on the road to Cambridge. Living, a discharged vicarage, formerly in the archd. of Ely, now in that of Sudbury, dio. of Ely; rated at £6 5s. 10d., and in the parliamentary returns at £105; gross income £106. Patron, in 1835, H. J. Adeane. In 1723, Judith Bennet founded a school and almshouses here, the revenue of which amounts to £134 per annum. The school is attended by about 30 children, and the almshouses are inhabited by 7 poor women: £30 a-year is paid to the schoolmaster; £25 is applied in apprenticing, and £62 is laid out on the alms-people. Sir Horatio Palavicini, who collected the pope's taxes in England during the reign of Mary, and on the death of that queen, and the accession of Elizabeth, is said to have retained the money, and lived at Babraham house in this parish. Babraham had formerly a market on Mondays. Pop., in 1801, 196; in 1831, 273. Houses 53. Acres 2,350. A. P. £1,770. Poor rates, in 1837, £157.

BABURGHLEY. See BABINGLEY.

BABWORTH, a parish in the Hatfield division of the hund. of Bassettlaw, union of East Retford, county of Nottingham; 1 mile west from East Retford. It contains the hamlets of Great and Little Mortou, Norton-Grange, and part of Ranby. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Nottingham and dio. of York; rated at £14 19s. 2d.; gross income £881. Patron, in 1835, the Hon. J. B. Simpson. The Chesterfield canal passes a little to the north of the village; a share in which, now producing about £8 per annum, was bequeathed in 1781, by Lindley Simpson, Esq., for the support of a school for poor children. There are two daily schools, at which about 70 children are educated. Pop., in 1801, 297; in 1831, 449. Houses 76. Acres 5,490. A. P. £3,584. Poor rates, in 1837, £203.

BACH, a township in the parish of St Oswald, Cheshire. Pop., in 1801, 8; in 1831, 34. Houses 2. Acres 500. A. P. £435. Poor rates, in 1837, £5.

BACHE (THE), a small river in Montgomeryshire, falling into the Dungeven.

BACHELDRE, a township in the parish of Church-Stoke, county of Montgomery, North Wales; 4½ miles north-west from Bishop's-castle, in Shropshire. It is in the manor of Cawrs, of which the earl of Powis is lord. Pop. returned with that of Weston-Madoc.

BACHYMBYD, a township in the parish of Llanynys, county of Denbigh, North Wales; 3 miles north-north-west from Ruthin; on the road to St Asaph. Near this is an ancient seat of the Salisburys, now the property of Lord Bagot. Here is a grove of unusually large chestnut-trees. Pop. returned with the parish.

BACH-YNYS, or MACHUNIS, a small island at the mouth of the river Llwghor, in the parish of Llanelly, county of Carmarthen, South Wales; 1½ mile east from Llanelly. Near this was a monastery, founded in 513 by St Piro, who became the first abbot of it.

BACKFORD, a parish partly in the higher division of the hund. of Wirral, and partly in the lower division of the hund. of Broxton, Cheshire; 4 miles north by west from Chester. It contains the townships of Backford, Chorlton, Lea, Great Mollington, (in the hundred of Wirral,) and Conghall, or Conghall, (in the hundred of Broxton.) Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Chester; rated at £5 0s. 5d.; gross income £280. Patron, in 1835, the bishop of Chester. There are two daily schools, one of which is in connection with the National society, and has a small endowment arising out of lands in Great Mollington. The railroad from Chester to Birkenhead passes through this parish. Pop., in 1821, 450; in 1831, 487. Houses 83. Acres 4,320.—Of the township of Backford, in 1801, 138; in 1831, 165. Houses 29. Acres 800. A. P. of the township, in 1815, £1,327. Poor rates, in 1837, £97.

BACK WELL, or BACHWELL, a parish in the hund. of Hartcliffe-with-Bedminster, county of Somerset; 6 miles south-west from Bristol; and a little to the south of the Bristol and Exeter railway. It contains the hamlets of Downside, Farley, Moorside, and West-Town. The living consists of a sinecure rectory and a discharged vicarage, in the archd. of Bath and dio. of Bath and Wells; the former rated at £11 16s. 3d.; gross income £255. Patron, in 1835, the marquess of Bath; the latter rated at £6 19s. 9½d.; gross income £144. Patron, the rector. A Wesleyan Methodist church was formed here in 1830. A fair for cattle, sheep, and colts, is held on the 1st of September. There are extensive collieries in this parish, which employ a considerable number of the inhabitants. Here is a National school which is chiefly supported by subscription, and is attended by 100 scholars; there are other three daily schools, and three Sunday schools. Pop., in 1801, 604; in 1831, 1,038. Houses 178. Acres 2,750. A. P. £4,829. Poor rates, in 1837, £292.

BACKWORTH, or BLACKWORTH, a township in the parish of Earsdon, county of Northumberland; 5 miles north-west from North Shields. It was anciently a possession of the priory of Tynemouth, and now belongs to the Grey family, who have erected a modern mansion here. There is a daily school attended by about 60 pupils. There is a colliery here, the produce of which is known by the name of 'Northumberland Wallsend, & Earsdon Main.' It communicates with the Tyne by a railroad. Pop., in 1801, 163; in 1831, 412. Houses 70. A. P. £2,502. Poor rates, in 1837, £119.

BACONSTHORPE, a parish in the southern division of the hund. of North Erpingham, union of Erpingham, county of Norfolk; 4 miles south-east of Holt. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Norwich; rated at £9. Patrons, in 1829, George Chad and R. Fellowes, Esquires. The charity of Thomas Newman, connected with this parish, produces £5 per annum. There is a National school here, which, in 1833, was attended by about 150 children. Pop., in 1801, 239; in 1831, 333. A. P. £1,557. Poor rates, in 1837, £148.

BACOP, a chapelry in the parish of Whalley, co.-palatine of Lancaster; 6 miles north by west from Rochdale; on the road to Burnley. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. and dio. of Chester; gross income £113. Patron, the vicar of Whalley. The Methodists have one and the Baptists two places of worship here; the two latter churches were formed in 1720 and 1821. The inhabitants are much employed in the manufacture of cotton and woollen goods. Pop. returned with the parish.

BACTON, a parish in the hund. of Webtree, union of Dore, county of Hereford; 2 miles north-west of Abbey-Dore. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. and dio. of Hereford; rated at £3 13s. 4d., and in the parliamentary returns at £110; gross income £104. Patron, in 1835, F. Hamp. Here is a school with a small endowment, on which four children receive instruction. Charities to the poor of this parish produce £16 per annum. Pop., in 1801, 167; in 1831, 178. Houses 32. Acres 950. A. P. £595. Poor rates, in 1837, £69.

BACTON, a parish on the sea-coast, in the hund. of Tunstead, county of Norfolk; 4½ miles north-east from North Walsham. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Norwich; rated at £5 3s. 1½d.; gross income £267; and, in 1836, in the patronage of Lord and Lady Wodehouse. A Baptist church was formed here in 1822. There are here an infant school, and two daily schools. The children of this parish are admitted to Norris' school in Witton. Bradfield's charity to the poor produces £5 per annum. Pop., in 1801, 311; in 1831, 498. Houses 102. Acres 1,730. A. P. £1,972. Poor rates, in 1837, £184.

BACTON, a parish in the hund. and union of Hartesmere, county of Suffolk; 5½ miles north from Stowmarket. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Sudbury, and formerly in the dio. of Norwich, now in the dio. of Ely; rated at £19 12s. 3½d.; gross income £491. Patron, in 1835, H. D. Hemsworth. There are three daily schools in the parish. The town-lands of this parish produce £85 per annum. Pop., in 1801, 585; in 1831, 758. Houses 102. Acres 2,380. A. P. £2,750. Poor rates, in 1837, £617.

BACUP. See WHALLEY.

BADBURHAM. See BABRAHAM.

BADBURY HUNDRED, formerly in the Shaston East division of the county of Dorset, now in Wimborne division. Area, 30,550 acres. Pop., in 1831, 5,967.

BADBY, a parish in the hund. of Fawsley, union of Daventry, county of Northampton; 2 miles south-west from Daventry; on the road to Banbury. Living, a discharged vicarage, united with Newnham, in the archd. of Northampton and dio. of Peterborough; rated at £14; gross income £315. Patrons, the dean and chapter of Christ-church, Oxford. The great and small tithes, the property of the dean and chapter of Oxford, and the vicar, were commuted in 1779. The village stands on the ascent of a hill, forming part of a sandy heath called Badby-down. There are quarries of hard blue rag-stone, and numerous springs of water in the neighbourhood. On Arbury hill there is an intrenchment enclosing an area of ten acres, supposed to have been the site of a Roman camp. Here are two daily schools, one of which is endowed with a small bequest left by Sir John Knightley in 1802; and also an endowed Sunday school. Pop., in 1801, 462; in 1831, 583. Houses 124. Acres 2,370. A. P. £2,968. Poor rates, in 1837, £199.

BADDESLEY (NORTH), a parish in the hund. of Mansbridge, Romsey division, union of Hursley, county of Southampton; 3¼ miles east by south from Romsey. Living, a donative in the archd. and dio. of Winchester; rated in the parliamentary returns at £50; gross income £112. Patron, in 1835, T. Chamberlayne. Pop., in 1801, 242; in 1831, 297. Houses 52. Acres 2,570. A. P. £1,194. Poor rates, in 1837, £60.

BADDESLEY (SOUTH), a hamlet in the parish of Boldre, county of Southampton; 2 miles north-east from Lymington. Here was "a preceptory of the Knights Templars, and afterwards of St John of Jerusalem, valued at £118 16s. 7d. per annum, granted to Sir Thomas Seymour, 31^o Henry VIII., and to Sir Nicholas Throckmorton, 5^o Edward VI., but restored to the Hospitaliers, 4^o and 5^o Philip and Mary."—Tanner's Not. Mon.

BADDESLEY-CLINTON, a parish in the Solihull division of the hund. of Hemlingford, union of Solihull, county of Warwick; 12 miles south-east from Birmingham; on the post-road to Warwick. Living, a donative, formerly in the archd. of Coventry and dio. of Lichfield and Coventry, now in the dio. of Worcester; gross income £27. Patroness, in 1835, Lady H. Ferrers. The Warwick and Birmingham canal passes through the western part of this parish. Pop., in 1801, 130; in 1831, 110. Houses 22. Acres 1,140. A. P. £1,232. Poor rates, in 1837, £72.

BADDESLEY-ENSOR, a parochial chapelry in the Tamworth division of the hund. of Hemlingford, union of Atherstone, county of Warwick; 3 miles west-north-west from Atherstone; on the post-road to Lichfield. Living, a perpetual curacy, formerly in the archd. of Coventry and dio. of Lichfield and Coventry, now in the dio. of Worcester; rated at £16; gross income £106. Patrons, the inhabitants of the parish of Polcsworth. There is an Independent church here, which was founded in 1800; also a Roman Catholic chapel. Here is a school with a small endowment, left by George Abbot in 1647; also four other daily schools. Pop., in 1801, 371; in 1831, 568. Houses 108. Acres 1,340. A. P. £1,494. Poor rates, in 1837, £170.

BADDILEY, a parish in the hund. and union of Nantwich, co.-palatine of Chester; 3 miles west-south-west of Nantwich; on the Ellesmere canal.

Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. and dio. of Chester; rated at £24 3s. 6d., and in the parliamentary returns at £139 8s. 6d.; gross income £219. Patron, in 1835, Sir H. M. Mainwaring, Bart. Charities connected with this parish produce £46 yearly. In 1837, there was neither public-house nor beer-shop in this place. Pop., in 1801, 276; in 1831, 267. Houses 49. Acres 2,080. A. P. £2,634. Poor rates, in 1837, £281.

BADDINGTON, a township in the parish of Acton, co.-palatine of Chester; 2 miles south-south-west from Nantwich; on the Liverpool junction canal. Pop., in 1801, 146; in 1831, 153. Houses 14. Acres 1,500. A. P. £1,283. Poor rates, in 1837, £191.

BADDOW (GREAT), a parish in the hund. and union of Chelmsford, county of Essex; 2 miles south-east from Chelmsford; on the road to Maldon. Living, a vicarage in the archd. of Essex and dio. of London; rated at £18 6s. 8d.; gross income £445. Patroness, in 1835, Mrs Bullen. The church-land of this parish yields a yearly rent of £35 10s. Here is a free school in which 25 children are educated. The annual income amounts to £168 per annum, and the salary of the schoolmaster is £50. There are six other daily schools, and two large National schools. The other charities connected with the parish produce about £47 per annum. There are also five almshouses. Pop., in 1801, 1,445; in 1831, 1,719. Houses 337. Acres 4,030. A. P. £7,345. Poor rates, in 1837, £803.

BADDOW (LITTLE), a parish in the hund. and union of Chelmsford, county of Essex; 2 miles north from Danbury; on a branch of the Chedmer. The living consists of a sinecure rectory, in the archd. of Essex and dio. of London; rated at £7 13s. 4d., and a discharged vicarage, rated at £8 2s. 2d.; the united value is stated in the parliamentary returns at £148; gross income £125. Patron, in 1835, Col. Strutt. The church contains a costly monument to the memory of Sir Henry Mildmay, Bart., who died in 1639. There is an independent church here, formed in 1670. Here is a free school for 25 children, the master of which receives a salary of £25. The children are also partly clothed out of the proceeds of the endowment. There is also a Lancasterian school in this parish, founded in 1827. Pop., in 1801, 456; in 1831, 368. Houses 75. Acres 1,420. A. P. £2,562. Poor rates, in 1837, £380.

BADGER, a parish in the franchise of Wenlock, union of Shifnal, county of Salop; 6 miles north-east from Bridgenorth. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. of Salop and dio. of Hereford; rated at £4 13s. 4d.; gross income £280. Patroness, in 1835, Mrs H. Browne, who supports a daily school here. Pop., in 1801, 88; in 1831, 142. Houses 27. Acres 980. A. P. £1,667. Poor rates, in 1837, £25.

BADGEWORTH, a parish in the upper division of the hund. of Dudstone and King's-Barton, union of Cheltenham, county of Gloucester; 4 miles south-west from Cheltenham, and 2 south of the railroad from Cheltenham to Gloucester. Living, a vicarage, to which is annexed the chapel of Sherdington, in the archd. of Gloucester, and dio. of Gloucester and Bristol; rated at £20 11s. 3d.; gross income £299. Patron, in 1835, W. L. Lawrence. There is also a sinecure rectory, in the patronage of Jesus' college, Oxford. Charities connected with this parish produce £28 per annum. The inhabitants are entitled to send children to the free school at Churchdown. This parish lies on a small stream which flows north-westwards into the Severn. Pop., in 1801, 603; in 1831, 859. Houses 173. Acres 1,730. A. P. £4,994. Poor rates, in 1837, £331.

BADDINGTON, or BADGENDON, a parish in the hund. of Crowthorne and Minety, union of Cirencester, county of Gloucester; 3½ miles north-west from Cirencester. Living, a discharged rectory, formerly in the archd. and dio. of Gloucester, now in the archd. of Bristol and dio. of Gloucester and Bristol; rated at £8 14s. 4½d.; gross income £215; and in the patronage of Jesus' college, Oxford. In some fields in this parish are the remains of two intrenchments, which are supposed to have been thrown up in 556, when a battle was fought here between the Britons and Cedric king of the West Saxons. Pop., in 1801, 133; in 1831, 167. Houses 36. Acres 990. A. P. £1,291. Poor rates, in 1837, £97.

BADGWORTH, a parish in the division of Wrington, union of Axbridge, county of Somerset; 4 miles south-west from Axbridge. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Wells and dio. of Bath and Wells; rated at £25 15s.; gross income £523. Patron, in 1835, Sir John Mordaunt, Bart. There are three infant schools in this parish. Pop., in 1801, 280; in 1831, 352. Houses 58. Acres 1,470. A. P. £2,841. Poor rates, in 1837, £257.

BADINGHAM, a parish in the hund. and union of Hoxne, county of Suffolk; 4 miles north-east from Framlingham; on a branch of the Alde. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Suffolk and dio. of Norwich; rated at £22 16s. 8d.; gross income £602. Patron, in 1835, Robert Gorten. Charities to the poor of this parish produce £24 per annum. There are four daily schools here. Pop., in 1801, 607; in 1831, 866. Houses 155. Acres 3,390. A. P. £5,252. Poor rates, in 1837, £683.

BADLESMERE, a parish in the hund. and union of Feversham, lathe of Scray, county of Kent; 4 miles south-east from Feversham. Living, a discharged rectory, united with that of Levealand, in the archd. and dio. of Canterbury; rated at £5 2s.; gross income £418. Patron, in 1835, Lord Sondes. Fairs for linen and toys are held here on the 9th of September and the 24th of October. According to Bishop Tanner: "Bartholomew, Lord Badlesmere, obtained license, 13th Edward II., to found on the lands of this manor a house of regular canons. The lords of Badlesmere were potent barons in the reigns of Edward I. and Edward II., when the manor was forfeited by the attainder and execution of John, earl of Oxford and Baron Badlesmere; it has since been in the possession of the family of Sondes." Pop., in 1801, 101; in 1831, 135. Houses 17. Acres 820. A. P. £810. Poor rates, in 1837, £41.

BADLEY, a parish in the hund. and union of Bosmere and Claydon, county of Suffolk; 1½ mile north-west from Needham. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. of Suffolk and dio. of Norwich; rated in the parliamentary returns at £40; gross income £40. Patron, in 1835, the earl of Ashburnham. Pop., in 1801, 82; in 1831, 82. Houses 13. Acres 1,050. A. P. £1,186. Poor rates, in 1837, £183.

BADMINTON (GREAT), a parish in the upper division of the hund. of Grumbald's Ash, union of Chipping-Sodbury, county of Gloucester, situated on the borders of Wilts; 5½ miles east by north from Chipping-Sodbury, and 12 from Bath. Living, a discharged vicarage, with the chapelry of Little Badminton annexed, formerly in the archd. and dio. of Gloucester, now in the archd. of Bristol and dio. of Gloucester and Bristol; rated at £5 5s. 7½d.; gross income £7. Patron, in 1835, the duke of Beaufort. The church, erected by the late duke of Beaufort in 1783, is a remarkably elegant structure, richly decorated with ornamental statuary and memorials of the Beaufort family. An almshouse for three men and three women, and a school for the children of Great and Little Badminton and Littleton-Drew, are supported on a rent-charge of £94, given for the purpose in 1705, by Mary, duchess-dowager of Beaufort. Badminton-house, the residence of the duke of Beaufort, stands in a fine and very extensive park in this parish. It was erected in 1682 by the first duke of Beaufort. Pop., in 1801, 423; in 1831, 529. Houses 100. Acres 1,450. A. P. £2,563. Poor rates, in 1837, £229.

BADMINTON (LITTLE), a tything in the parish of Hawkesbury, county of Gloucester. This is a chapelry annexed to the above vicarage of Great Badminton. Pop., in 1801, 95; in 1831, 116. Houses 24.

BADSEY, a parish in the upper division of the hund. of Blackenhurst, union of Evesham, county of Worcester; 2 miles east by south from Evesham. It includes the hamlet of Aldington. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. and dio. of Worcester; rated at £5 6s. 8d.; gross income £156. Patrons, the dean and chapter of Christ-church, Oxford. The great and small tithes, the property of the dean and chapter of Oxford, lay-impropriators and perpetual curate, were commuted in 1812. Here is a school with a small endowment for the teaching of poor children. The annual income of all the charities connected with this parish, is £14. In 1838, there was a silk-mill in this parish, employing 35 hands. Pop., in 1801, 367; in 1831, 463. Houses 88. Acres 1,770. A. P. £3,489. Poor rates, in 1837, £132. See ALDINGTON.

BADSHOT and RUNFOLD, a tything in the parish of Farnham, county of Surrey; 2 miles north-east from Farnham. The inhabitants are employed in a great measure in the culture of hops. Pop., in 1801, 1,136; in 1831, 1,173. Houses 227.

BADSHOT. See BAGSHOT, Surrey.

BADSWORTH, a parish in the upper division of the wapentake of Osgoldcross, west riding, county of York; 4 miles south by east from Pontefract. It comprises the townships of Upton, Badsworth, and Thorpe-Audling. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of York; rated at £32 5s. 10d.; gross income £600. Patron, in 1835, the earl of Derby. The great and small tithes, moduses, &c. of the township of Thorpe-Audling in this parish, the property of the clerical rector and lay-impropriator, were commuted in 1810. The church-estate of this parish produces a rent of £43 per annum. There are two day and Sunday schools in the township of Badsworth. Pop. of the parish, in 1801, 544; in 1831, 782; of the township, in 1801, 182; in 1831, 198. Houses 144, and 35. Acres 4,320, and 1,740. A. P. £5,736, and £2,616. Poor rates, in 1837, £157.

BADWELL-ASH, or LITTLE ASHFIELD, a parish in the hund. of Blackbourn, union of Stow, county of Suffolk; 2 miles north from Great Ashfield. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. of Suffolk and dio. of Norwich; rated in the parliamentary returns at £49 16s. 8d.; gross income £81. Patroness, in 1835, Miss R. Clough. There is a daily school here. Charities connected with this parish, produce £13 per annum. Pop., in 1801, 348; in 1831, 490. Houses 79. Acres 2,000. A. P. £2,044. Poor rates, in 1837, £336.

BAGBERE, a hamlet and tything in the parish of Sturminster-Newton-Castle, county of Dorset; 9½ miles south-west by west from Shaftsbury. Here was formerly a chapel-of-ease, long since desecrated. Pop. returned with the parish.

BAGBOROUGH (WSSR), a parish in the hund. and union of Taunton and Taunton-Dean, county of Somerset; 9 miles north-west from Taunton. It includes the tything of East Bagborough, and the hamlets of Stockham, Triscombe, and Westwood. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Taunton and dio. of Bath and Wells; rated at £18 10s. 10d.; gross income £550. Patron, in 1835, J. P. L. Fenwick. There are four daily schools in the parish. Pop., in 1801, 352; in 1831, 453. Houses 71. Acres 1,900. A. P. £2,968. Poor rates, in 1837, £177.

BAGBY, a chapelry in the parish of Kirkby-Knowle, north riding, county of York; 3 miles south-east from Thirsk. Living, a curacy in the archd. of Cleveland and dio. of York, of the certified value of 10s. annexed to the rectory of Kirkby-Knowle. Pop., in 1801, 213; in 1831, 289. Houses 59. Acres 1,350. A. P. £2,643. Poor rates, in 1837, £70. There is a daily school here.

BAGENDON. See BADGINGTON.

BAGINTON, a parish in the Kenilworth division of the hund. of Knightlow, union and county of Warwick; 8¼ miles south by east from Coventry. Living, a rectory, formerly in the archd. of Coventry and dio. of Lichfield and Coventry, now in the dio. of Worcester; rated at £8 1s. 8d.; gross income £375. Patron, in 1835, the incumbent, the Rev. W. D. Bromley. Here is a free school for the poor children of the parish, which is endowed with upwards of £200 per annum. The salary of the mistress is £60, and the children are clothed and supplied with books, &c. at the expense of the charity. The other charities connected with this parish produce above £12 a-year. Here stood the castle of Sir William Bagot, an adherent of Richard II., the site of which is barely to be traced. In this mansion the duke of Hereford, afterwards Henry IV., passed the night previous to his intended combat with the duke of Norfolk. In the reign of James I. this manor came into the possession of William Bromley, Esq., one of whose descendants was Secretary Bromley, the able servant of Queen Anne. Pop., in 1801, 300; in 1831, 257. Houses 56. Acres 1,480. A. P. £2,532. Poor rates, in 1837, £169.

BAGLAN, a parish in the hund. and union of Neath, county of Glamorgan, South Wales; 4 miles south by east from Neath. Living, a curacy not in charge, annexed to the vicarage of Aberavon, in the archd. and dio. of Llandaff; of the certified value of £36, and returned in the diocesan report at £52. In the lower hamlet of Baglan there is a Calvinistic Methodist chapel. There is a mineral well here, with the use of which the inhabitants associate many superstitious notions. Pop., in 1801, 251; in 1831, 410. Houses 78. A. P. £1,823. Poor rates, in 1837, £178.

BAGLEY-WOOD, an extra-parochial liberty in the hund. of Hormer, county of Berks; 3 miles south from Oxford; on the road to Abingdon. It was formerly a place of some importance. Pop., in 1801, 5; in 1831, 21. Houses 3. Acres 390.

BAGNALL, a chapelry in the parish of Stoke-upon-Trent, county of Stafford; 6 miles south-west from Leek. Living, a curacy to the rectory of Bucknall, in the archd. of Stafford and dio. of Lichfield; rated at £3. Pop., in 1811, 268; in 1831, 306. Houses 55.

BAGNIGGE-WELLS, in the parish of St Pancras, county of Middlesex; 1¼ mile north-west from St Paul's cathedral, London. Here are two springs of mineral water.

BAGNOR, a township in the parish of Speen, county of Berks; 2 miles north-west from Speenhamland; on the Kennet. Pop. returned with Speen.

BAGSHOT, a chapelry in the parish of Windlesham, county of Surrey; 10 miles south-west from Staines, and 6 from Woking common on the Southampton railway; on the great post-road to Farnham. It was formerly called Holy-Hall, and gives name to an extensive tract of heath in the neighbourhood. Living, a perpetual curacy annexed to the rectory of Windleham. The church was destroyed by lightning, and rebuilt in 1676. The Baptists have a place of worship here: church formed in 1835. The village contains some good inns, and is principally indebted for its importance to its situation as a public thoroughfare. Many sheep are pastured on the heath, which also supplies the inhabitants with fuel. The mutton fed here is celebrated for its fine flavour. This was formerly an enclosed park belonging to the king of England, and was much resorted to by James I. and Charles I. to enjoy the pleasures of the chase. It was disparked during the civil war. In the neighbourhood are some handsome villas; and to the west is Bagsbot park, the residence of George IV. when prince of Wales, and afterwards of the duke of Gloucester. Pop. returned with the parish. There are penny-posts from this to Sandhurst, Blackwater, Yateley, Hawley, Farnborough, Cove, Chobham, Knaphill, Bisley, and Purbright.

BAGTHORPE, a parish in the hund. of Gallow, union of Docking, county of Norfolk; 7 miles south-west from Burnham. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. of Norfolk and dio. of Norwich; rated at £5 10s., and in the parliamentary returns at £130; gross income £125. Patron, in 1835, G. W. Chad. Pop., in 1801, 75; in 1831, 73. Houses 15. Acres 710. A. P. £757. Poor rates, in 1837, £51.

BAGULEY, a township in the parish of Bowden, co.-palatine of Chester; 6 miles east from Knutsford. Pop., in 1801, 423; in 1831, 468. Houses 86. Acres 2,070. A. P. £3,130. Poor rates, in 1837, £198.

BAGWORTH, a chapelry in the parish of Thornton, county of Leicester; 4 miles north-east from Market-Bosworth. Living, a curacy not in charge, attached to the vicarage of Thornton. Pop., (including that of Bagworth park,) in 1801, 323; in 1831, 328. Houses 64. A. P. £2,399. Poor rates, in 1837, £273. There is a daily school here endowed with £83.

BAILDON, a chapelry in the parish of Otley, west riding, county of York; 4 miles north from Bradford. Living, a perpetual curacy, formerly in the archd. and dio. of York, now in the archd. of Craven and dio. of Ripon; rated at £20 5s. 11d.; in the parliamentary returns at £113 11s.; gross income £148. Patron, the vicar of Otley. A Wesleyan Methodist church was formed here in 1807; a Primitive Methodist in 1824; and a Moravian church in 1815. The town stands near the river Aire. Fairs for cattle, horses, &c. are held on the first Saturday in March and November. Pop., in 1801, 1,719; in 1831, 3,044. Houses 591. Acres 2,940. A. P. £4,724. Poor rates, in 1837, £328.

BAILEY. See AUGHTON.

BAILIE, a township in the parish of Bewcastle, Cumberland; 5 miles north-east from Longtown; on a small tributary of the Esk. Pop., in 1801, 281; in 1831, 454. Houses 87.

BAINBRIDGE, a township in the parish of Aysgarth, north riding of the county of York; 1 mile south-west from Askrigg. It stands on the river Ure, over which there is a bridge of three arches. There are a Methodist chapel and a Friends' meeting-house here. Bainbridge has a free grammar-school endowed with £68 per annum. In the vicinity, on the river Bain, there are two beautiful water-falls, and a lake called Seamer-water, covering 105 acres, the favourite resort of water-fowl, and abounding in fish. On Brough-hill—a neighbouring eminence—are traces of a Roman fortification, near which a statue of the emperor Commodus was found. Pop., in 1801, 785; in 1831, 881. Houses 172. Acres 14,210. A. P. £3,915. Poor rates, in 1837, £461.

BAINTON, or BADINGTON, a chapelry to the parish of Ufford, county of Northampton; 5 miles east by north from Wandsford. Living, a curacy not in charge, annexed to the rectory of Ufford. Pop., in 1801, 134; in 1831, 171. Houses 35. Acres 960. A. P. £1,493. Poor rates, in 1837, £48.

BAINTON, or BEANTON, a hamlet in the parish of Stoke-Lyne, county of Oxford; 2 miles north from Bicester. Pop., in 1831, 27. Houses 5.

BAINTON, a parish in the Bainton-Beacon division of the wapentake of Harthill, union of Driffield, east riding of the county of York; 6 miles south-west from Great Driffield. Living, a rectory in the archd. of the east riding and dio. of York; rated at £35 14s. 9d.; gross income £780; and in the patronage of St John's college, Oxford. All tithes of the townships of Bainton and Naswick, the property of the clerical rector, commuted in 1774. The petty-sessions for the division of Bainton-Beacon are held here, and at Great Driffield. Pop., in 1801, 220; in 1831, 358. Houses 62. Acres 2,320. A. P. £3,283. Poor rates, in 1837, £216.

BAINTON-BEACON, a division in the north-east part of the wapentake of Harthill, east riding of the county of York, containing 14 parishes. Pop., in 1831, 8,528. Houses 1,614. Area in British statute acres, 56,690.

BAITHLEY. See BALE.

BAKEWELL, a parish in the hund. of High Peak, union of Bakewell, county of Derby. It includes the chapelries of Ashford, Baslow, Beeley, Buxton, Chelmerton, Great Longstone with Holmes, Mony-Ash, Sheldon, and Taddington with Priestcliffe, the townships of Bakewell, Blackwell, Brushfield, Bunnell, Flagg, Froggatt, Harthill, Over-Haddon, Rowland, Great Rowsley with part of Aport, and part of Wardlow, and the hamlets of Calver, Curbar, Hassop, and Little Longstone. It is upwards of 20 miles in length, and 8 in breadth. Living, a discharged vicarage, a peculiar of Lichfield; rated at £40; gross income £404. Patrons, the dean and chapter of Lichfield. The church is an ancient and spacious cruciform structure, situated on an eminence. Its architecture is partly Saxon and partly Gothic. The interior contains several interesting ancient tombs of the Vernons and Foljambes, with recumbent figures. In the churchyard stands a very ancient cross, decorated with rude sculpture, but much mutilated. An engraving and description of it is given in the 3d vol. of 'The Antiquarian Repertory.' The tithes of Mony-Ash manor, the property of the dean and chapter of Lichfield, lay-impropriators and vicar, were commuted in 1771. The great and small tithes of the townships of Bakewell and Over-Haddon, the property of the dean and chapter of Lichfield, lord of the manor and vicar, were commuted in 1806. The Bakewell poor-law union comprehends 50 parishes; the population of which was returned in 1831, at 25,879. The average expenditure on the relief of the poor of this district during the three years preceding the formation of the union, was £6,392. There are mines of coal, lead, and zinc, and quarries of stone and marble, which give employment to many of the inhabitants. In 1838 there were two cotton-mills in this parish, employing 393 hands. Pop., in 1801, 9,162; in 1831, 9,503. Houses 1,844. Acres 43,020. A. P. £44,886.—In this parish stands Chatsworth-house, the celebrated seat of the duke of Devonshire, distant about 3 miles from the market-town of Bakewell. See CHATSWORTH.—To the south of Bakewell, at the distance of 2 miles, on the eastern side of the Wye, stands Haddon-hall, a magnificent baronial mansion of the duke of Rutland, but not now inhabited. See HADDON-HALL.

The market-town of Bakewell, in the above parish, is situated on the river Wye, near its confluence with the Derwent; 153 miles north-west from London, 12 south-west from Chesterfield, and 22 north-west from Derby. It stands in a beautiful and picturesque vale between Matlock and Buxton; on a rising ground on the right bank of the Wye, about 2½ miles above its confluence with the Derwent. The Independents and Wesleyan Methodists have chapels in the place. The Methodist church was formed in 1807. There is a free school here, founded in 1636 by Lady Grace Manners, the master of which has a salary of £50 per annum. There are other four daily schools. St John's hospital, for six aged men, was founded and endowed in 1602 by Roger and John Manners of Nether-Haddon. The income of the charity is £40 per annum. The other charities connected with the town produce a yearly revenue of £29. Bakewell is the place of nomination, and a polling-place, for a member for North Derby. The town is under the jurisdiction of the county-magistrates, and its internal affairs are managed by a constable and other officers, who are appointed at the court-leet of the lord of the manor. The petty-sessions for the Bakewell division of the hundred of High Peak are held here on the first and third Monday in every month. A market is held here on Friday, and a cattle-market on the Mondays of every alternate week. Fairs for horses and cattle are held on Easter-Monday, Whit-Monday, August 26th, the Monday after October 10th, and the Monday after November 11th. The market has lost much of its former importance. Here are branches of the Sheffield and Rotherham banking company, and of the Northern and Central bank of England. The inhabitants are partly employed in the neighbouring quarries of black and grey marble, and of petrosilex or chert, and partly in a cotton-mill erected by the late Sir Richard Arkwright. The smelting of lead is also carried on to a considerable extent. The town is much resorted to by anglers on the Wye, which is well-stocked with trout and grayling. The original name of this town is derived from the Saxon Badecanwillan, of which it is a contraction and corruption. This name was given to it from the circumstance of there being a mineral well here, the waters of which were used to supply baths, which are supposed to have been in repute prior to the year 924. At this time the town or castle was founded here, on an elevated station, on the road to Chatsworth, still called the Castle-hill, by Edward the Elder; though, from remains discovered in the vicinity, it is believed that this was anciently a Roman station. At the Conquest, the manor was granted to the family of Peverell, from whom it passed to the Gernons, who sold it in the reign of Henry VII. to the Vernons, from whom it descended to its present possessors, the dukes of Rutland. The water is chalybeate; and a fine set of baths have been recently re-established by the duke of Rutland, the temperature of the water of which is 60° of Fahrenheit. There are also shower and private warm baths, with suitable accommodation. In the same establishment are a museum and news-room. Pop., in 1801, 1,412; in 1831, 1,898. Houses 385. Acres 3,380. A. P. £9,503. Poor rates, in 1837, £647.

BALA, a town in the parish of Llan-y-kil, county of Merioneth, North Wales; near the northern end of the lake of the same name; about 12 miles from the London and Holyhead road, and 184 north-west by west from London. It consists for the most part of one wide street, with a few handsome houses, two good inns, a chapel, and a market-house; and is about a mile distant from the parish church. The Calvinistic Methodists have a place of worship here. Their church was formed in 1757. Bala is one of the polling-places for the election of the member for Merionethshire; it is a borough by prescription, and has been long incorporated; it is governed by two bailiffs and a common council, and the assizes are held here and at Dolgelly alternately. Petty-sessions for the hundred of Penllyn are also held here. The market is held on Saturday, and is well-supplied; and fairs are held on May 14th, July 10th, September 11th and 22d, October 24th, and November 8th, at which there is a considerable trade in woollens, gloves, stockings, and worsted wigs. There are two provincial banks in Bala, viz. a branch of the North and South Wales bank, and a branch of the National Provincial bank of England. This is a place of great antiquity. In the neighbourhood are the traces of three Roman camps which are supposed to have been used as exploratory stations. Pop., in 1821, 1,163; in 1831, included in the parish.

BALA-LAKE, also called LLYN TEGID, or PIMBLE-MERE, a lake in the county of Merioneth, 4 miles in length, and 1 in breadth; forming the source of the noble river Dee, which issues from its north-east extremity. It is the largest lake in North Wales, and is well supplied with pike, eels, tench, trout, and the fish called the gwyniad, which resembles salmon. The fishery of the lake, which now belongs to the Wynnes of Wynnystay, was formerly the property of the abbey of Basingmont. On the banks of the lake are the fishing-lodges of Sir W. W. Wynn, and Sir R. C. Hoare, the learned antiquary. The scenery in the immediate neighbourhood is uninteresting; but the view in the distance is remarkably sublime. A Roman road passed near this lake; and on Tom-men-y-Bala and another mount in the vicinity, there are traces of ancient British forts.

BALA-SALLA, a village of about 500 inhabitants, in the parish of Castle-town, Isle of Man; about 2 miles north-north-east of Castletown, with which its population is returned; on the road to Douglas. In the vicinity are the ruins of the ancient abbey of St Mary of Rushen, founded in 1098 by Mac Manis, and enlarged and richly endowed by his successors in the sovereignty of Man. Olave, king of Man, in 1134, bestowed it on Furness abbey in Lancashire. Some remains of the abbey are still visible.

BALBY, a township with Hexthorp in the parish of Doncaster, west riding of the county of York; 2 miles south-west from Doncaster; on the right bank of the Don. In this, and the neighbouring village of Warmsworth, the first meetings of the Society of Friends were held by George Fox and his followers. Pop., in 1801, 283; in 1831, 420. Houses 91. Acres 1,420. A. P. £3,606. Poor rates, in 1837, £150.

BALCOMBE, a parish partly in the hund. of Buttinghill, and partly in that of Strut, rape of Lewes, union of Cuckfield, county of Sussex; 4 miles north from Cuckfield. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Lewes and dio. of Chichester; rated at £15 18s. 6½d.; gross income £368. Patron, in 1835, the Rev. Dr Bethune. The London and Brighton railway passes through this parish. Pop., in 1801, 451; in 1831, 641. Houses 87. Acres 6,050. A. P. £2,171. Poor rates, in 1837, £416.

BALDEBSBY, a township in the parish of Top-cliff, north riding of the county of York; 6 miles north-north-east from Ripon. Pop., in 1801, 247; in 1831, 269. Houses 55. Acres 1,600. A. P. £1,853. Poor rates, in 1837, £92.

BALDERSTON, a chapelry in the parish of Blackburn, co.-palatine of Lancaster; 6½ miles east-north-east from Preston. Living, a perpetual curacy; rated at £9 10s. 8d., and in the parliamentary returns at £90; gross income £90. Patron, the vicar of Blackburn. There is also an Independent place of worship in the place. Charities connected with this chapelry produce £10 10s. per annum. Pop., in 1801, 615; in 1831, 658. Houses 105. Acres 1,710. A. P. £2,705. Poor rates, in 1837, £313.

BALDERTON, a parish in the southern division of the wapentake of Newark, union of Newark, county of Nottingham; 2 miles south-east from Newark. Living, a vicarage annexed to that of Farndon, in the archd. of Nottingham and dio. of York. The great and small tithes, the property of the prebendaries of Farndon and Stoke, and the vicar, were commuted in 1766. There is a school here for twelve boys and ten girls, with an endowment of £18 per annum, arising from a bequest made, by William Alvey in 1726. Other charities connected with the parish produce a yearly revenue of £32. Pop., in 1801, 636; in 1831, 830. Houses 190. Acres 4,050. A. P. £0,228. Poor rates, in 1837, £503.

BALDOCK, a market-town and parish in the hund. of Broadwater, union of Hitchin, county of Hertford; 37 miles north by west from London, and 19 from Hertford. It stands in a valley between two hills, near the source of the river Rhea, on the great north road, at its intersection with the Roman Icknield-street. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. of Huntingdon and dio. of Lincoln; rated at £10 8s. 9d., and in the parliamentary returns at £76 14s. 8d.; gross income £142. Patron, the Crown. The church was erected on the site of one formerly built by the Knights Templars, of which some portions still exist, and form part of the present structure. It is a spacious building, with three chancels, and "a goodly tower," containing some monuments of the Templars, a finely carved oak-screen, a very curious font, and part of the ancient rood-loft. The Society of Friends, and the Independents, have chapels here. In 1617, Mr John Wynne founded and endowed almshouses for twelve aged widows. This charity has since been augmented by various other benefactions; and the yearly revenue now amounts to £95. The charity estates for the repair of, and other expenses connected with the church, produce £153 per annum. Other charities connected with the parish produce £16 a-year. Courts leet and baron are held here. The principal street of the town is wide, and contains many respectable houses. The inns are numerous and good, and, on account of the great thoroughfare, are much frequented. The neighbouring country being very favourable to the growth of barley, the inhabitants are extensively employed in malting; there is a large brewery in the town. A great quantity of straw-plait is made here and in the neighbourhood for the London market. Fairs for cheese, cattle, and household goods, are held on the 7th of March, the last Thursday in May, 5th August, 2d October, and 11th December. Thursday is the market-day, when considerable quantities of corn are sold. The name of this place is spelt Baudoc in some old writings, but has by some been supposed to have been derived from that of Balbec in Syria, and to have been given to it by the Templars. The site was granted to them in the reign of Stephen, by Gilbert, earl of Pembroke, and afterwards confirmed to them by his descendant, William. By their influence, John, and his son, Henry III., conferred on it the grant of a market and an annual fair of five days. "Here," says Lambard, "Queene Isabel, wife to Edward II. the earl of Kent his brother, and Edward (after the third of that name) his son sojourned after their arrayall, and wrote from thence their letters of request to the citizens of London for their aide against the Spensers, which they performed accordingly, for they made open proclamation, that such as were not the queene's freindes, should depart the citey immediatly: then made they the barons, byshops, abbots, and others, to be sworne the queene's freindes, and favourers of the quarrell: and forasmuche as the byshop of Exceter either refused to doe it, or was suspected to mislike it, they strake of his head." Pop., in 1801, 1,283; in 1831, 1,704. Houses 310. Acres 200. A. P. £2,110. Poor rates, in 1837, £638.

BALDON-MARSH, a parish in the hund. of Bullington, union of Abingdon, county of Oxford; 5½ miles south-east from Oxford. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Oxford, within the peculiar and exempt jurisdiction of Dorchester; rated at £6 13s. 4d.; gross income £105. Patron, in 1835, Sir H. Willoughby, Bart. Six boys and six girls are educated on a foundation by Elizabeth Law, who, in 1771, bequeathed lands in Baldon-Toot for that purpose. Pop., in 1801, 208; in 1831, 318. Houses 63. Acres 570. A. P. £1,152. Poor rates, in 1837, £58.

BALDON-TOOT, a parish in the hund. of Bullington, union of Abingdon, county of Oxford; 5 miles south-east from Oxford. Living, a vicarage not in charge; in the patronage of the rector of Baldon-Marsh. There are two daily schools here. Pop., in 1801, 223; in 1831, 272. Houses 56. Acres 2,010. A. P. £1,656. Poor rates, in 1837, £162.

BALDOX-FEE. See ELING.

BALDSLOW, a hundred in the rape of Hastings, county of Sussex, comprising 12,807 acres, and six parishes.

BALE, or BAITHLEY, a parish in the hund. of Holt, union of Walsingham, county of Norfolk; 5 miles west by south from Holt. Living, a discharged rectory, united with that of Gunthorpe, in the archd. of Norfolk and dio. of Norwich; rated at £10 13s. 4d. See GUNTHORPE. Charities connected with this parish produce £15 per annum. There are an infant and a daily school here. Pop., in 1801, 195; in 1831, 275. Houses 54. Acres 710. A. P. £980. Poor rates, in 1837, £221.

BALK, a township in the parish of Kirkby-Knowle, north riding of the county of York; 4½ miles north-east from Thirsk. Pop., in 1801, 106; in 1831, 72. Houses 13. Acres 780. A. P. £1,034. Poor rates, in 1837, £54.

BALKHOLME, a township in the parish of Howden, east riding of the county of York; 3 miles east from Howden, and 1 south of the Selby and Hull railroad. Pop., in 1801, 120; in 1831, 117. Houses 24. Acres 550.

BALLAUGH, a parish and village in the Isle of Man; 7 miles south-west from Ramsay, on the road to Peel. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Man; gross income £276. Patron, the Crown. Pop., in 1821, 1,467; in 1831, 1,411. Houses 279. A small stream, descending from Snawfell, flows north-west past this village, which is scattered over an extent of nearly 2 miles.

BALLESDON. See KINTSBURY.

BALLIDON, a chapelry in the parish of Bradborne, county of Derby; 6 miles north-north-east from Ashborne, on the road to Winster. Living, a curacy to the vicarage of Bradborne, in the archd. of Derby and dio. of Lichfield; rated at £10, and in the parliamentary returns at £12. Pop., in 1801, 80; in 1831, 108. Houses 16. A. P. £2,382. Poor rates, in 1837, £117. The children of this chapelry attend the schools at Bradborne or Paswick.

BALLINGDON, a parochial chapelry in the hund. of Hinckford, county of Essex; ¼ mile south-west from Sudbury. Living, a perpetual curacy, but there is no church, and the church of the ancient parish of Brundon or Berington, is in ruins. "Balingdon, otherwise Balidon, hath had the credit of being set down in the maps as a distinct parish, whereas Brundon, that is really one, hath been generally forgotten. According to the accounts we have, there are two manors here, viz. 1st, Balingdon-above-Bridge, that hath only a court-baron, for the king is lord of the leet, that extends into part of Bulmer, Brundon, and Middleton. 2d, Balingdon-below-Bridge, having both a court-leet and a court-baron. There is reason to believe, that this district was part of the manor of Brundon, which in the earliest times belonged to the family of Limesi. The inhabitants of this village resort for divine service to the church of All Saints in Sudbury. That church, with the chapel of Berindune or Beledon, was appropriated to the abbey of St Albans, for the use of their kitchen."—Morant's Essex. Pop., in 1801, 530; in 1831, 283. Houses 179. Acres 730. A. P. £1,547. Poor rates, in 1837, £461.

BALLINGHAM, a parish in the upper division of the hund. of Wormelow, union of Ross, county of Hereford; $7\frac{1}{2}$ miles south-east from Hereford; bounded on three sides by the river Wye. Living, a perpetual curacy not in charge, in the archd. and dio. of Hereford; rated at £12, in the parliamentary returns at £100; gross income £165. Patron, in 1835, Sir E. Stanhope. There is a day-school here. Pop., in 1801, 138; in 1831, 147. Houses 33. Acres 950. A. P. £958. Poor rates, in 1837, £100.

BALNE, a township in the parish of Snaith, west riding of the county of York; $4\frac{1}{2}$ miles south-west from Snaith. Pop., in 1801, 312; in 1831, 343. Houses 58. Acres 2,870. A. P. £2,638. Poor rates, in 1837, £261.

BALSALL, BALSHALL, or TEMPLE-BALSALL, a chapelry in the parish of Hampton-in-Arden, county of Warwick; 10 miles north-north-west from Warwick. Living, a perpetual curacy, formerly in the archd. of Coventry, and dio. of Lichfield and Coventry, now in the dio. of Worcester; rated in the parliamentary returns at £50; gross income £50, and in the peculiar jurisdiction of the dean and chapter of Lichfield. Patrons, in 1835, the governors of the Balsall hospital. The chapel originally belonged to the Knights Templars, and was built about the middle of the twelfth century. The east and west ends have lofty windows with fine pointed arches, extending from the roof nearly to the ground, and there are also three noble windows on the sides. The heads of the windows are adorned with beautiful tracery, and all dissimilar. Near the church are the remains of the ancient hall of the Templars. "This manor," says Tanner, "was given to the Knights Templars, in the reign of Stephen, and became a commandery or preceptory of that order. It belonged afterwards to the Knights Hospitallers, though it doth not appear that any of them resided here; and, as part of their possessions, was granted, 7° Edward VI., to John, earl of Warwick, and 8° Elizabeth, to Robert Dudley, earl of Leicester." In 1670, the manor of Temple-Balsall was bequeathed by lady Katherine Leveson, of Trentham, in the county of Stafford, to twelve trustees, for the erection and endowment of an hospital in the parish of Balsall, directing that £8 per annum should be given to each of twenty poor women, and £20 per annum to a minister, for reading prayers to them, and teaching twenty poor boys of the same parish. In the reign of Queen Anne an act was passed for the better management of this hospital, when it was incorporated under the name of "The Hospital of Lady Katherine Leveson," and the government was vested in eleven trustees, who were empowered to enlarge the buildings and increase the number of alms-women. The revenue of this charity now amounts to about £1,745 per annum; the number of alms-women has been increased to thirty, and the establishment consists of a master, assistant-master, an apothecary, a matron, and a nurse. The master, in addition to his salary of £70, receives from the funds of the hospital £50 per annum, as perpetual curate of Balsall. An annuity of £50 is also paid to the vicar of Long Itchington. The hospital buildings are extensive and substantial, forming a square, and healthfully situated on the edge of an extensive green. The other charities connected with this parish produce £14 per annum. There are six other daily schools in this chapelry. Pop., in 1801, 858; in 1831, 1,038. Houses 218. A. P. £6,283. Poor rates, in 1837, £278.

BALSCOTT, a hamlet in the parish of Wroxton, county of Oxford; $4\frac{1}{2}$ miles west by north from Banbury. Here is a chapel to the vicarage of Wroxton. Pop., in 1831, 213. Houses 42. Acres 550.

BALSHAM, a parish in the hund. of Radfield, union of Linton, county of Cambridge; 9 miles south-south-east from Cambridge, near the Roman way. Living, a rectory, formerly in the archd. of Ely, now in that of Sudbury, dio. of Ely; rated at £39 16s. 8d.; gross income £1,170. Patrons, the governors of the Charter-house. Great and small tithes, the property of the clerical rector, commuted in 1801. There are an infant and five daily schools here. Charities connected with this parish produce £49 per annum. On the summit of the Gogmagog hills, which are partly in this parish, there are traces of a circular camp called Vandlebury, with a lofty vallum and ditch. It appears to have been occupied by the Romans, but was probably of British origin. This village is said to have been the birth-place of Hugh de Bottesham, founder of Peterhouse college, Cambridge. Pop., in 1801, 542; in 1831, 1,074. Houses 218. Acres 4,402. A. P. £5,128. Poor rates, in 1837, £736.

BALTONSBOROUGH, or BALTONSBURY, a parish in the hund. of Glaston-Twelve-Hides, union of Wells, county of Somerset; 4 miles south-east from Glastonbury. Living, a curacy annexed to the vicarage of Butleigh, in the archd. of Wells, and dio. of Bath and Wells, of the certified value of £27 9s. 8d. Patronage with the vicarage of Butleigh. There are five daily schools here. The proposed line of the Glastonbury and Bruton railway passes through this parish. Pop., in 1801, 547; in 1831, 675. Houses 124. Acres 2,700. A. P. £6,226. Poor rates, in 1837, £231.

BAMBER-BRIDGE, a village in the township of Walton-le-Dale, Lancashire; 3 miles south-south-east of Preston.

BAMBROUGH, or BAMBOROUGH, a ward and parish in the county of Northumberland. The ward is bounded on the north by Islandshire, on the west by Glendale and Coquetdale wards, on the south by the Ayn, and on the east by the German ocean. It is about 17 miles in length, and 8 miles in breadth, and consists principally of arable ground. It contains seven parishes. Pop., in 1831, 10,842. Houses 2,107. Area in British statute acres 69,650. The parish of Bambrough comprises the chapelries of Beadnell and Lucker, and the townships of Adderstone, Bambrough, Bambrough-Castle, Bradford, Budle, Burton, Elford, Fleatham, Glororum, Hoppen, Mouson, Newham, Newstead, Outchester, Ratchwood, Shoston, Spindlestone, North Sunderland, Swinhoe, Tuggal, Warrenton, and Warnford. It is in the poor law union of Belford. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. of Northumberland and dio. of Durham; rated in the parliamentary returns at £109 18s. 9d.; gross income £121. Patrons, in 1835, the trustees of Lord Crewe. The church-estate of this parish is £100 per annum. Pop., in 1801, 2,935; in 1831, 3,949. Houses 773. Acres 25,100. A. P. £30,356.—The village of Bambrough is situated on the sea-coast, 5 miles east by north from Belford. This was anciently a royal borough and a market-town, and in the 23d of Edward I. returned two members to parliament. It was originally called Bebbanburg, and gave name to an extensive district called Bambroughshire, possessed of certain privileges now obsolete. "King Henry I. having given the churches of St Oswald and St Aidan here, with their chapels, to the priory of Nosthell in Yorkshire, some regular canons of the order of St Augustine were settled here as a cell to that religious house, who were endowed, 26^o Henry VIII., with £124 15s. 7d. per annum. Here were also a college, an hospital dedicated to St Mary Magdalene, and a house of Black friars."—Tanner's Not. Mon. Pop., in 1801, 295; in 1831, 417. Houses 97. A. P. £295. Poor rates, in 1837, £168.

BAMBROUGH-CASTLE, a township in the above parish and ward of Bambrough; 5 miles east of Belford. The name is derived from its vicinity to the celebrated castle of Bambrough, which stands on a high and rugged triangular rock of basalt, projecting into the sea, and accessible only from the south-east side. It rises 150 feet above the water-mark. It taketh, says Lambard, "the name of Queene Bebban who builded it, as sayethe Beda. Which reporteth further, that the handes of Kinge Oswald weare kept in a church theare, which in reward of his pitie toward the poore, to whom he opened the same most liberally, wear for ever preserved unwithered, accordinge as Aidan the bishop had before told hym. But Henry Huntington saythe, that Ida the first kinge of Northumberland built it, enclosed it first with a hedge, and then with a wall, about the yeare 554. Eadfride, nephew and successor to Ceolwlf, which lyved in Beda his tyme, imprisoned within this castle Cynewife the bishop of Lindisf. bycause he suffered Offa a nobleman to be plucked from his church, and to be slayne. It was much defaced by Anlaf and Sueny the Danes, under King Aedelred 991. In tyme of William Rufus, Earle Robert of Northumberland fled to this castle, William followed, and besieged it so straidly, that he constreyned him to flight, wherin he toke him, and bycause he found the castle impregnable, he built a castle of wood over against it, which he called then a malvesine, 'malus vicinus,' and in thend caused the defendantes to render it, 1094. Howsoever the Scot came to it, I find, in Mat. Paris, that by composition betwene King Henry II. and hym, he delyvered Henry this towne amongst other, and Henry delivered to him the earldome of Huntingdon 1157. Edw. II. to satisfie his nobles, comitted Peter Gaveston to this castle, but they ceased not tyll they had slayne him." During the wars between Stephen and the princess Matilda, and between the rival houses of York and Lancaster, it was often taken and retaken; and in the reign of Henry VII., it had become considerably dilapidated. The castle and manor were granted in the reign of James I. to John Foster, Esq. The following subsequent account of it is quoted from Pennant, who visited it in 1777: "This castle and the manor belonging to it, was once the property of the Fosters; but, on the forfeiture of Thomas Foster, Esq., in 1715, for having joined the Pretender, it was purchased by his uncle Lord Crewe, bishop of Durham, and, with other considerable estates, left vested in trustees, to be applied to unconfin'd charitable uses. Three of these trustees are a majority; one of them makes the place his residence, and blesses the coast by his judicious and humane application of the prelate's generous bequest. He has repaired and rendered habitable the great Norman square tower; the part reserved for himself and his family is a large hall and a few smaller apartments; but the rest of the spacious edifice is allotted for purposes which make the heart to glow with joy when thought of. The upper part is an ample granary; from whence corn is dispensed to the poor without distinction, even in the dearest time, at the rate of 4s. a bushel; and the distressed for many miles around, often experience the convenience of this benefaction. Other apartments are fitted up for the reception of shipwrecked sailors; and bedding is provided for thirty, should such a number happen to be cast on shore at the same time. A constant patrol is kept every stormy night along this tempestuous coast, for above eight miles, the length of the manor, by which means numbers of lives have been preserved. Many poor wretches are often found on the shore in a state of insensibility, but by timely relief, are soon brought to themselves. It often happens that ships strike on the rocks in such a manner as to be capable of relief, in case numbers of people could be suddenly assembled: for that purpose a cannon is fixed on the top of the tower, which is fired once, if the accident happens in such a quarter; twice, if in another; and three times if in such a place. By these signals the country people are directed to the spot they are to fly to, and by this means, frequently preserve not only the crew, but even the vessel; for machines of different kinds are always in readiness to heave ships out of their perilous situation. In a word, all the schemes of this trustee have a humane and useful tendency." From the top of the tower, signals are made to the fishermen of Holy Island, when any vessel is discovered in distress, for they are enabled to put off boats from the island when those from the land could not pass through the surf. In the castle there are also an infirmary and dispensary, with a resident surgeon. The library contains an extensive collection of theological books, and a curious assemblage of tracts and pamphlets. It was founded by Lord Crewe's trustees, in 1778, and is open to every respectable householder within 20 miles of Bambrough, and every clergyman of whatever denomination. Here are also two schools on the system of Dr Bell, supported on funds arising out of the Crewe estates, wherein between 160 and 180 children of both sexes are educated, of whom 30 girls are clothed and lodged in the castle, till they are fit for service. Pop., in 1801, 60; in 1831, 61. Houses 8. Poor rates, in 1837, £21.

BAMBURGH. See BAUMBER.

BAMFORD, a hamlet in the parish of Hathersage, county of Derby; 4 miles north by west of Castleton; on a head-branch of the Derwent. Pop., in 1801, 173; in 1831, 238. Houses 46. A. P. £848. Poor rates, in 1837, £46.

BAMFORD, or BAMFFORD, a township in the parish of Middleton, co.-palatine of Lancaster; 3 miles west from Rochdale. The Independents have a chapel here. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the cotton-factories. Pop. with Birtle.

BAMPTON HUNDRED, in Oxfordshire, is bounded by Chadlington hundred on the north; Wootton hundred on the east; Berkshire on the south; and Gloucestershire on the west. Area, 42,070 acres. Pop., in 1831, 14,710. Houses 2,905.

BAMPTON HUNDRED, in Collumpton division, Devonshire, has an area of 29,430 acres. Population, in 1831, 7,000.

BAMPTON, or BATHAMPTON, a market-town and parish in the hund. of the same name, county of Devon; 161 miles west by south from London, and 6 miles north from Tiverton. It contains the hamlets of Petton and Shillingford. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Exeter; rated at £21 11s. 8d., and in the parliamentary returns at £95; gross income £136. Patron, in 1835, C. Chichester. The church is a spacious structure, in which several of the Bouchiers, earls of Bath, are interred. Divine service is performed once a month in a chapel at Petton, 4 miles distant from the village. The Baptists have a chapel here. Their church formed in 1690. Charities connected with the parish produce £11 10s. yearly. There are five daily and two boarding schools. Bampton is supposed to have been the Beamdone of the ancient chroniclers, where, in 614, the Britons were defeated with great slaughter by Cyneghious, king of the West Saxons. The name is said to be a corruption of Batherniton, or Bathrumpton, from its proximity to the river Bathern, which rises on the skirts of Somersetshire, and flows south-westwards into the Exe, about a mile below the town. The town stands in a vale; the houses are built of stone and irregularly scattered over a space of about half a mile. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the manufacture of serge. There is also a pottery in the town. Markets were formerly held on Wednesday and Saturday, but that on Wednesday has fallen into disuse. Fairs for cattle are held on Whit-Tuesday, the last Thursday in October, for cattle, and the last Wednesday in November. The sheep fed in the neighbourhood are of a large size and of an uncommonly fine quality; they are sold in great numbers at the annual fairs. The town was formerly a borough and sent two members to parliament. It now votes in the election of a county-member for North Devon. It is within the jurisdiction of the county-magistrates, who hold petty-sessions here, and at Cullumpton, Tiverton, Hemyock, and Culmstock, and is governed by two port-reeves, two constables, and inferior officers, who are chosen by the inhabitants. Near the town there is a chalybeate spring of some celebrity. The site of an ancient castle can still be traced; it was erected in 1336 by a member of the family of Cogan. John de Bampton, a Carmelite friar, who first read lectures on the works of Aristotle in Cambridge, and died in 1391, was a native of this parish. Pop., in 1801, 1,364; in 1831, 1,961. Houses 368. Acres 8,130. A. P. £7,232. Poor rates, in 1837, £1,265.

BAMPTON WITH WEALD, formerly called BAMPTON-IN-THE-BUSH, a parish in the hund. of Bampton, union of Witney, county of Oxford; 6 miles north-east of Farringdon in Berkshire. It comprises the market-town of Bampton, the chapelry of Shifford, and the hamlets of Aston with Cote, Chimney, and part of Bright-Hampton. Living, a vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Oxford, divided into three mediocres, each of which is valued at £10 0s. 10d.; gross income of the 1st portion, to which the curacy of Shifford is annexed, £490; of the 2d, £464; of the 3d, £444. Patrons, the dean and chapter of Exeter. The church is a large and handsome cruciform structure, having a fine peal of six bells. Not far from the church are the traces of a castle supposed to have been built by Aymer de Valence, Earl of Pembroke, in 1321. Great and small tithes, the property of the dean and chapter of Oxford, clerical rector, lay-impropriator, and vicar, commuted in 1812. The church-lands of this parish produce a yearly rent of £26 2s. The parish possesses five daily, three Sunday, and two boarding-schools, besides a day and Sunday National school, and a free grammar-school, founded and endowed with £300 by Mr Robert Veysey of Chimney, in 1635. The endowment, augmented by subsequent benefactions, now yields above £50 per annum. The National school, in which about 170 children are educated, has an income of £45 per annum, derived partly from endowment and partly from subscriptions. Other charities connected with this parish produce an annual revenue of £115. Pop., in 1801, 1,787; in 1831, 2,514. Houses 623. Acres 8,750. A. P. £14,219.—The market-town of Bampton is situated on a stream which, flowing south-east, discharges itself into the Isis; 71 miles north-west from London, and 6 south-west from Witney. This was called by the Saxons Beamtune, and was a place of some importance in Saxon times: in the reign of Edward the Confessor, it was annexed to the diocese of Exeter by Leofric, chaplain to that monarch, and first bishop of the see. At the Conquest it was considered of importance, and assessed highly for its market, which was "famous for the abundance of fellmongers' wares, as jackets, gloves, breeches, stockings, &c. which were brought hither from Witney, and sold here into Berkshire, Wilts, and Dorsetshire; no town in England having the like trade for these sort of wares." The market-day is Wednesday, but it has almost fallen into disuse. Fairs for horses and toys are held on the 26th of May and 26th of August. The inhabitants are now chiefly engaged in agriculture. Phillips, the author of the 'Splendid Shilling,' &c. was born here in 1676. Pop. with Weald, in 1801, 1,003; in 1831, 1,605. Houses 331. Acres 4,970. A. P. £7,661. Poor rates, in 1837, £577.

BAMPTON, a parish and township in West ward, county of Westmoreland; 4 miles north-west from Shap. It lies along the river Lowther, and stretches south-eastwards to the lake called Haweswater. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Carlisle; valued at £7 5s., and in the parliamentary returns at £107; gross income £101. Patron, the Crown. The church was rebuilt in 1726. There is a free grammar-school here, which was founded in 1627, and endowed with the sum of £500, collected by Thomas Sutton, D. D., a native of this parish, in London, and other places. This school, the master of which conducts a Sunday school also, is free for all children of the parish, and the yearly revenue is about £70. Here were educated Dr John Mill, celebrated for his edition of the New Testament, and Dr Edmund Gibson, bishop of London, who rebuilt the school-house. There is a parochial library with a fund for its support. There is also a small library for the use of the vicar of this parish, founded and endowed by Jonathan Tinslar about the middle of last century. At Roughill, in this parish, there is a school which was founded by Edmund Noble in 1662, and endowed with £9 5s. per annum. At Measand there is also a school, founded in 1723 by Richard Wright, and endowed with lands which now yield £50 per annum. Pop., in 1801, 600; in 1831, 636. Houses 107. Acres 10,390. A. P. £4,237. Poor rates, in 1837, £377.

BAMPTON-GRANGE, a hamlet in the above parish.

BAMPTON (KIRK), a parish in the ward and county of Cumberland; $6\frac{1}{2}$ miles west from Carlisle. It comprises the townships of Kirk-Bampton, Little Bampton, and Oughterby. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. and dio. of Carlisle; rated at £14 17s. 10d.; gross income £100. Patrons, in 1835, the earl of Lonsdale, and Sir W. Brisco. This parish possesses two daily schools, in which 92 scholars are taught, and a Sunday school. Pop. of the parish, in 1801, 456; of the township, 149; in 1831, 523, and 192. Houses 99, and 37. Acres 3,580. A. P. £3,026. Poor rates, in 1837, £227.

BAMPTON (LITTLE), a township in the above parish of Kirk-Bampton; 5 miles north by east from Wigton. Pop., in 1801, 190; in 1831, 213. Houses 39.

BANBURY, a hundred in the northern part of the county of Oxford, bounded on the north and east by Northamptonshire; on the south and west by the hundred of Bloxham and by Warwickshire. Two portions of this hundred, in one of which is situated the town of Charlbury, and in another that of Shutford, are separated from the rest. Pop., in 1831, 11,449. Houses 2,314. Area in British statute acres, 21,230.

BANBURY, a borough, market-town, and parish, having separate jurisdiction, in the hundred and union of Banbury, Oxfordshire; 69 miles north-west from London; 12 north-east from Chipping-Norton; and 18 north-west from Bicester; on the great post-road from Aylesbury to Southam. The parish comprises the borough-town of Banbury, and the hamlet of Naithrop. The living of Banbury is a discharged vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Oxford; rated at £22 0s. 10d., and in the parliamentary returns at £110. Patron, the bishop of Oxford. The church was erected at an immense expense, under an act of parliament obtained in 1790, and is a spacious structure, in imitation of St Paul's. The Society of Friends, Independents, Presbyterians, Wesleyan Methodists, and Roman Catholics, have places of worship here. The Independent church was formed in 1810; the Wesleyan Methodist in 1804. The Catholic church is a fine building, in the Gothic style. There was formerly a free grammar-school here, which has, however, been abandoned: it was held in high estimation, and the statutes of St Paul's school, London, are said to have been drawn up on the model of those of the school of Banbury. In 1705, a blue-coat school was established by subscription, and endowed by various benefactors with property to the amount of £75 per annum. It has been incorporated with a National school, established here in 1817, and contains 217 pupils. There are also three daily, three day and boarding, and two Sunday schools, one of which is supported by the proceeds of a legacy of £295, 3 per cent. consols, left by Sir John Knightley in 1802. There is an unwendowed almshouse for twelve poor persons, eight of whom participate in a fund called the widow's groats. The house was rebuilt by Francis, Lord North, and Guildford. The rents which are appropriated to the repair of bridges and highways in this parish, amount yearly to £69 13s. Other charities connected with the parish produce £119 per annum. "According to Speed," says Tanner, "here was in this town a college dedicated to St Mary, and endowed with £48 6s. per annum. Dugdale mentions a guild of that valuation, and perhaps there were no other than the chantry priests belonging to that guild. In, or near this town, was an hospital in the reign of King John, dedicated to St John, consisting of a prior or master, and several leprous brethren and sisters. It had revenues, 26^o Henry VIII., valued at £15 1s. 10d. The mastership was in the gift of the bishop of Lincoln."

The town of Banbury stands on the small river Charwell; though of a cheerful aspect, it possesses no claims to distinction in point of elegant buildings. It has been considerably improved under an act of parliament, passed in the 6^o George IV. Within the last few years the causeways have been well-paved by the commissioners, and the carriage-road repaired and put into excellent order: the drainage also has been greatly improved, and the town lighted with gas. Banbury received a charter of incorporation from Mary I.; a second charter was granted by James I., which was afterwards confirmed in all material points by George I. in 1718. The corporate body consisted of a mayor, twelve aldermen, six capital burgesses, and thirty assistants. The style of the corporate body under the municipal reform act, is the mayor, aldermen, and burgesses of the borough of Banbury in the county of Oxford. Petty-sessions for the hundreds of Bloxham and Banbury are held here, and a general session once every six months. A court of record for the recovery of debts under 40s., which was formerly held by the corporation, had been discontinued, but was recently revived; the practice and machinery of the court were carefully and judiciously arranged by Mr Sergeant Talfourd, at that time deputy-recorder of Banbury. The income of the burgh, in 1837, was £908; of which £145 arose from rents, quit-rents, &c.; and £767 from burgh-rates. The elective franchise was conferred in the reign of Mary. One member is returned to parliament by the parish of Banbury. The number of electors registered in 1837, was 371. The influence of the marquess of Bute formerly predominated here. The town is in a flourishing and improving state. The manufactories of this place, principally the making of horse-girths and plush, have declined; but its numerous fairs and large weekly markets attract a considerable amount of trade. The retail shops are numerous and respectable; the population is increasing, and the proximity of the Birmingham and Oxford canal brings an extensive carrying trade. The nett income of the corporation, in 1835, was about £125 per annum. For cheese of a superior quality, and for an article of pastry called 'Banbury cakes,' Banbury has long been famous. The market-day is Thursday; and fairs are held on the Thursday after January 18th, for cattle, horses, and sheep; first Thursday in Lent, for cattle, horses, sheep, and fish; second Thursday before Easter for cattle and sheep; Holy Thursday; Thursday and Friday in Trinity week; August 13th, for horses, cows, and sheep; Thursday after Old Michaelmas, for hogs, cheese, and hiring servants; October 30th, and second Thursday before Christmas, for cheese, hops, and cattle. "In these northern parts of Oxfordshire about Banbury," say the editors of the old 'Magna Britannia,' "it has long been a custom, at set times of the year, for young people to meet in the market-place here, to be hired as servants, which meeting at this place they call the Mop. The men-servants sort themselves, and carry their badges, according as they are qualified; the carters standing in one place with their whips, the shepherds in another with their crooks, &c. but the maids stand all promiscuously." There is a branch of the Leamington and Warwick banking company here.

The name Banbury is a contraction of the ancient Saxon name, Banesberig; and from the circumstance of a number of Roman coins, an altar, and other antiquities, having been discovered here, it is supposed to have been a Roman station. Alexander, bishop of Lincoln, erected a castle here about the year 1125, which continued to be an episcopal residence till the reign of Edward VI. It is described by Leland to have contained "a terrible prison for convict men:" at present only a fragment of one of the walls remains. During the wars of the houses of York and Lancaster, a conflict took place in 1469, near Edgecote, about 3 miles distant, between the forces of the earl of Warwick, and those under the earl of Pembroke and Lord Stafford, who had possession of the town. In this battle Pembroke and his brother, Sir Richard Herbert, were taken and beheaded; and the capture of Edward IV. himself followed a few days after. In the war between Charles I. and the parliament, the inhabitants of Banbury—who were almost universally puritans—took part with the latter, in whose cause the castle was garrisoned. It was taken by the royalists after the battle of Edgehill, when Sir William Compton held it during thirteen weeks against Colonel Fiennes, the parliamentary officer, till relieved by the duke of Newcastle. For ten weeks it was afterwards besieged by Colonel Whalley, and surrendered on honourable terms, when the king joined the Scottish army.—Banbury formerly gave the title of Earl to the Knollys family, a claim to the succession of which has recently been advanced, but without success.—Pop. of the town, in 1801, 2,755; in 1831, 3,787; of the parish, in 1801, 3,810; in 1831, 5,906. Houses 702, and 1,148. Acres 3,150. A. P. £15,547. The Banbury poor-law union comprehends 51 parishes, embracing an area of 127 square miles; with a population returned, in 1831, at 26,859. The average annual expenditure on the poor of this district, during the three years preceding the formation of the union, was £26,556. Expenditure, in 1838, £12,918. Poor rates of the borough, in 1837, £2,435.—Near the town are several mineral wells, and the pyrites aureus, or golden fire-stone, is frequently found here in digging wells.—In the vicinity are Wroxton abbey, one of the seats of the marquess of Bute; Broughton castle, the property of Lord Say and Sele; and Wykham-park.

BANGOR, a city and parish in the hund. of Uwch-gorfael, union of Bangor and Beaumaris, county of Carnarvon, North Wales; 28½ miles north-west by west from London, 9 north-east from Carnarvon, and 4 east from Beaumaris. It stands at the foot of a steep rock, in a narrow and fertile vale, near the northern entrance of the Menai strait, and the mouth of the river Ogwen.—The diocese comprehends the island of Anglesea, the county of Carnarvon, with the exception of four parishes, fourteen parishes in the county of Denbigh, and seven in that of Montgomery. By an order in council, gazetted in October, 1838, the sees of St Asaph and Bangor will be united on the next vacancy in either. There are three archdeacons; Anglesea, Bangor, and Merioneth, of which the two former are generally held in commendam by the bishop. In the 26th Henry VIII., the revenues of this see were rated at £151 8s., or £131 16s. 4d. clear, per annum; the average gross yearly income of the see of Bangor, in 1831, was £6,560; the nett income, £4,464. The members of the chapter, and other functionaries attached to the cathedral, are the bishop, dean, archdeacon, treasurer, and two prebendaries, with endowments; a preceptor, chancellor, and three canons, unendowed; two vicars choral, an organist, lay-clerks, and choristers, with inferior officers. There are no revenues belonging to the chapter as a corporate body; but the average gross yearly revenues of the deaneries, prebends, and other ecclesiastical preferments, amounted separately, in 1831, to £3,353. The cathedral was founded by St Daniel in 525, and afterwards dedicated to him. This building was frequently destroyed and rebuilt during the early and troublous periods of English history. During the wars between Henry III. and the Welsh, in 1247, it suffered considerable dilapidation, and in 1402 it was burned down in the war succeeding the revolt of Owen Glendower. The choir of the present cathedral was erected in 1496, at the expence of Bishop Deane or Deny, and the tower and nave were added in 1532, by Bishop Skiffington. Bishop Bulkeley, the occupant of the see in 1647, alienated a large part of the lands belonging to the see, and actually sold the bells of the cathedral. At present the building is in a state of the most complete repair. The choir is used only for the cathedral service; the service is read in the Welsh tongue in one of the transepts, and the nave is fitted up as a parish-church. Its dimensions are as follows: length 214 feet; length of the nave 141 feet; of the cross aisles 96 feet; of the side aisles 60 feet; height of the tower 60 feet. In an arched recess in the wall, stands the tomb of Prince Owen Gryffyd, who was interred here in 1169. The bishop is lord of the manors of Bangor and Vaynol, and has the immediate jurisdiction of the city.—Living, a vicarage, not in charge, with the curacy of Pentir; gross income £1,006. Patron, the bishop. The tithes are appropriated to the church of Bangor. The Wesleyan and Calvinistic Methodists, Independents, Presbyterians, and Roman Catholics, have places of worship here. The Calvinistic Methodist church was formed in 1800. There is a Central National school here. There is also a free school, which was founded in 1557 by Dr Jeffrey Glynn, brother of Bishop Glynn; the total annual income of the school amounted, in 1832, to £560. There are five other daily schools in the parish, one of which is supported by an endowment of the late Dr Williams, and four Sunday schools. Here also are alms-houses founded by Bishop Rowlands in 1616; they are occupied by six poor old single men, each of whom is allowed seven shillings a-week for his maintenance. The total annual income of this charity amounts to £215. The other charities connected with the parish produce about £25 per annum. There is a dispensary in the city.

Bangor consists chiefly of one narrow street, almost a mile in length. The principal buildings are the cathedral, the episcopal palace, the deanery-house, the free school, market-house, assembly-rooms, and three good inns. From its proximity to the sea, Bangor has become a favourite bathing-place; and the number of visitors has been greatly increased since the construction of the Menai bridge, which, it is said, is visited by upwards of 50,000 persons annually. For the reception of lodgers during the summer-season, many houses and several good inns have been fitted up in a commodious manner; numerous neat villas have also been erected in the vicinity. About 36 years ago there were only 93 houses in Bangor; since that period upwards of 800 have been built. The scenery in the neighbourhood of Bangor presents many attractions, and the views of Beaumaris bay and the Carnarvon mountains, from Garth point, the promenade of the inhabitants, are of the most picturesque, bold, and sublime character. Steam-boats ply between Liverpool and Bangor during nine months of the year. Petty-sessions are held here for the Bangor division of the county. It has been proposed to establish assizes for the surrounding counties here: should this be carried into effect, Bangor will become the capital of North Wales. The market-day is Friday, and fairs are held on April 5, June 25, September 16, and October 28. The Northern and Central bank of England, and the North and South Wales bank have branches here. The principal trade consists in the export of slate, which are raised in the quarries of Llandegai, 6 miles distant from the town, and conveyed on a rail way to Port Penrhyn. There is a good fishery near Garth ferry, in the straits of Menai. Pop., in 1801, 1,770; in 1831, 4,751. Houses 1,171. A. P. £3,270. Poor rates, in 1837, £1,601. The Bangor and Beaumaris poor-law union comprehends 21 parishes, containing a population returned, in 1831, at 19,972.

The name of Bangor signifies either 'High Choir,' or 'White Choir;' and to distinguish it from Bangor-is-y-coed, or 'Bangor-below-the-wood,' in Flintshire, the city has been called Bangor-Fawr, or

'Bangor the Great.' It was formerly defended by a strong castle, erected in the reign of William Rufus, by Hugh, earl of Chester, the traces of which still remain. The settlement, which is probably coeval with the see, is supposed to owe its origin to St Deiniol, or Daniel, who founded a college here, of which, in 525, he became abbot.

In the neighbourhood of Bangor is the residence of G. H. D. Pennant, Esq., who succeeded to the estates of the late Lady Penrhyn, a superb castle in the Saxon style of architecture, built on the site of the palace of Roderic, who, in 720, was one of the princes of Wales. The design is by Mr Wotton, and the expense is said to have exceeded £100,000.—At a place called Ty-côch, about 2 miles from Bangor, there was found in 1806, a grit stone, 16 inches in length, bearing an inscription in honour of Antoninus Pius.

BANGOR, a parish in the hund. of Troedryaur, union of Newcastle-in-Emlyn, county of Cardigan. Living, a rectory with that of Henllan annexed, in the archd. of Cardigan and dio. of St Davids; gross income £177. Patron, in 1835, the bishop of St Davids. Pop., in 1801, 176; in 1831, 210. Houses 42. A. P. £1,024. Poor rates, in 1837, £73.

BANGOR-MONACHORUM, or BANGOR-IB-Y-COEN, a parish, partly in the hundred of Maylor, county of Flint, and partly in the hundred of Bromfield, union of Wrexham, county of Denbigh, North Wales; 6 miles north from Ellesmere. It contains the townships of Bangor, in Flint and Eytton; Pickhill, Royton, and Lesswick in Denbigh. The village lies on the river Dee, in an open and fertile country. Living, a rectory with the curacy of Overton annexed, in the archd. and dio. of Chester; rated at £30 6s. 2d.; gross income £1,200. Patron, in 1835, the marquis of Westminster. There are two daily schools here, one of which is endowed with £30 per annum. Richard of Cirencester calls this place Banchorium Statio, and it is remarkable for a monastery which formerly stood here, of which, however, no traces now remain. This is said to have been one of the largest and most ancient monasteries in Britain, and to have been founded by Lucius, son of Coel, the first Christian king of Britain, previous to the year 180. A famous college certainly did exist here at the coming of St Augustine. "Theare weare in it," says Lambard, "2100 monkes, which Galfride calleth 'gregem domini,' and sayth, 'quod rectum ordinem tenebant,' and yet Beda confesseth that they al lyved of the labour of their handes. Upon refusal to accept Augustine for their archebysshop (as appeareth before under the title of Augustine's Oke) Ethelbert excyted King Ethelfride against theym, which gatheringe together a great army at Chester, came towards theim, who (why the comon soulidours prepared to encontre Ethelfride) kneled downe not farr of, and prayed. When Ethelfride saw theym, he demaunded what they did, it was answered, that they prayed for success in battayl. Nay, then, said Ethelfride, set on theym first, for they fight against us no less then the rest, though they want weapons, in so muche as they pray against us. And so he slew 1200 of theym, and scattered the rest." The Welsh pretty generally attribute this massacre to the influence of Augustine. In a memorial presented by the Welsh clergy to Sir Robert Peel, in 1835, praying for the appointment of natives of the country to the Welsh sees, it is stated that the ancient Britons, now represented by the Welsh, received the gospel and embraced Christianity in the days of the apostles, and had a regularly established episcopal church long before the arrival and settlement of the Saxons in England. "For it is an historical fact, that three British or Welsh bishops were present at the council of Arles, in France, in the year 314, whose names are subscribed to the acts of that council. Several Welsh bishops subsequently attended the famous council of Nice, in the year 325 of Sardica, in 349; and of Ariminum, in 359. The Saxons arrived in England in 449, of which they dispossessed the natives, and succeeded in driving them, before the close of the 6th century, beyond the Severn and the Dee, which formed at that time the eastern and northern boundaries of Cambria. Augustine, the monk, arrived from Rome to preach the corrupt faith of that apostate church to the Saxons in England in the year 597, and was consecrated archbishop of Canterbury in 599. In the year 602 he attempted to persuade the Welsh bishops to accept him for their archbishop, with a view to reduce the Welsh church under his own jurisdiction, and unite it to the church of Rome. The Welsh bishops and clergy in convocation refused submission on two grounds: that he taught doctrines and customs which to them were new, and which they believed to be unscriptural; and that they were already subject to a metropolitan of their own, the archbishop of Caerleon. This refusal on the part of the Welsh bishops and clergy called forth a threat from Augustine, which was carried into effect not many years after in the massacre of the Welsh clergy at Bangor—an event which filled the minds of the Welsh with such abhorrence of the Roman Catholic religion, that an union between the Welsh church, which retained its primitive purity, and the Saxon, which was so full of the spirit and corruptions of popery, became from that moment hopeless and impracticable. Upon this followed a succession of unprovoked wars against Wales, which were carried on for the space of 400 years by the Saxon kings, at the instigation of the priests, for the purpose of subjugating by force that church, which, shielded by its lofty mountains, still maintained its independence, and formed a stubborn exception to the universal dominion of the pope." William of Malmesbury, describing this place shortly after the Conquest, says that the ruins of many churches and of extensive buildings then remained, but these and the city have long ago disappeared. Pop., in 1801, 1,201,—of the township, 560; in 1831, 1,389, and 648. Houses 269, and 130. A. P. £13,351, and £4,517. Poor rates, in 1837, £335.

BANHAM, a parish in the hund., and union of Guiltcross, county of Norfolk; 2 miles north-east of Kenninghale. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Norfolk and dio. of Norwich; rated at £9 3s. 6d.; gross income £800. Patron, the Crown. A fair is held here on the 22d of June, for horses and toys. There is a school here with a small endowment; and three other daily schools. The rent of the townlands in this parish amounts to £68 per annum. The fuel allotment is £62 a-year; and the other charities connected with the parish produce £11 per annum. Pop., in 1801, 1,015; in 1831, 1,297. Houses 237. Acres 3,710. A. P. £8,435. Poor rates, in 1837, £1,003.

BANKS. See LANERCOST.

BANNINGHAM, a parish in the hund. of South Erpingham, union of Aylesham, county of Norfolk; 2½ miles north-east from Aylesham. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Norwich; rated at £10 15s. 10d.; gross income £300. Patron, in 1835, S. Bignold. The charities connected with this parish produce £14 per annum. Pop., in 1801, 228; in 1831, 360. Houses 72. Acres 770. A. P. £1,134. Poor rates, in 1837, £311.

BANSTEAD, a parish in the hund. of Wallington, union of Epsom, county of Surrey, situated between Dorking and Croydon; 3 miles south-east from Ewell. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Surrey, and dio. of Winchester; rated at £13 8s. 7d.; gross income £310. Patron, in 1835, the incumbent, the Rev. W. L. Buckle. By a recent arrangement the contiguous parts of the parishes of Ewell and Banstead have been consolidated into a distinct district, and assigned to the chapel of St Andrew for all ecclesiastical purposes. There are three National schools in this parish. Charities connected with this parish produce £39 per annum. In the neighbourhood are those beautiful downs on which the Epsom races are held; and numerous elegant country-seats, the most celebrated of which is the Oaks, now the property of the earl of Derby. This mansion, during a large part of the reign of George III., was celebrated for the rank and fashion of its numerous visitors; and a musical entertainment, called 'The Maid of the Oaks,' by General Burgoyne, was suggested by an expensive fête champêtre, given here in 1773. Pop., in 1801, 717; in 1831, 991. Houses 185. Acres 5,840. A. P. £5,445. Poor rates, in 1837, £759.

BANWELL, a village and parish in the hund. of Winterstoke, union of Axbridge, county of Somerset; 4 miles north-north-west from Axbridge; 6 miles from the Bristol channel; and 3 south of the Bristol and Exeter railway. This parish contains the hamlets of Knightcot, East and West Rolston, Towerhead, Westwick, Winterstoke, Woolfords-hill or Overhill, and Yarborough. The living is a vicarage; rated at £26 6s. 0½d.; gross income £625; and in the peculiar jurisdiction and patronage of the dean and chapter of Bristol. The church is a fine building, with windows of stained glass. The Wesleyan Methodists have a place of worship here: their church was formed in 1792. In 1767, an English free-school was established here, and endowed by subscription with £10 10s. per annum. There is another day school, with several Sunday schools. In 1673, a rent charge of £4 per annum was given by William Burgis, to accumulate for the apprenticing of a boy every seven years.—The village stands in an agreeable situation, near the Mendip-hills. The petty sessions for the division of Wrington, are held here and at Wrington. Fairs for cattle, sheep and cheese, are held here on the 18th of January and 18th of July. Here is a branch of Stuckey's banking company. There is a mineral spring here, which, after driving two mills, falls into the channel near Woodspring priory. In King Edward the Confessor's charter, the village of Banwell is called Banawelli, and Collinson says it derives its name from the British bann, signifying deep, and weilgi, the sea: the waters of the Bristol channel having once overspread the valley above which the village stands. Since the time of Edward the Confessor, the manor has been in the possession of the bishops of Bath and Wells. Two singular caverns were discovered here in 1824. One of these contained a large quantity of bones of animals, mingled with diluvial matter; the other, which is called the Stalactite cavern, presents many beautiful specimens of the transparent stalactitic formations. Banwell park lies eastward from the village, and is still partly covered with fine wood, though most sadly reduced in extent from what it is said to have been at the time of making the Domesday survey. This park was anciently well-stocked with deer, and it still abounds with various kinds of game. The palace here, for the occasional residence of the bishops, was built by Bishop Beckington, and was probably constructed in some measure out of the ruins of the ancient abbey. This palace has long since been neglected, and fallen into decay, and, from some of its materials, a large, handsome, and commodious farm-house and offices have been erected, called Banwell-court, it being the manor-house, and the place where the bishop's courts are held. Pop., in 1801, 1,082; in 1831, 1,623. Houses 295. Acres 4,970. A. P. £11,441. Poor rates, in 1837, £888.

BAPCHILD, a parish in the hund. and union of Milton, lathe of Scray, county of Kent; 1 mile south-east from Sittingbourne; on the post-road between Canterbury and Chatham. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Canterbury; rated at £8, and in the parliamentary returns at £91 5s. 6d.; gross income £193. Patron, in 1835, the dean and chapter of Chichester. The church is of high antiquity. It consists of a nave and north aisle, with two chancels and a square tower, and possesses some remains of ancient painted glass. There is a daily school here with a small endowment for the education of poor children. Two ecclesiastical councils are said to have been held here in 694 and 798. A fair is held here on the 21st of August. On the north side of the road are the remains of a building, erected as a resting-place for pilgrims on their way to the shrine of St Thomas à Becket at Canterbury. Pop., in 1801, 224; in 1831, 319. Houses 58. Acres 1,080. A. P. £1,825. Poor rates, in 1837, £226.

BAPTON. See FISHERTON-DE-LA-MERE.

BARBON, a chapelry in the parish of Kirkby-Lonsdale, county of Westmoreland; 3 miles north-north-east from Kirkby-Lonsdale. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. of Richmond and dio. of Chester; rated at £3 1s. 6d., in the parliamentary returns at £62; gross income £66. Patron, the vicar of Kirkby-Lonsdale. There are two daily schools here in which 37 pupils are taught, and a Sunday school. Pop., in 1801, 242; in 1831, 318. Houses 62. Acres 4,690. A. P. £2,626. Poor rates, in 1837, £111.

BARBURY-HILL, a hill to the west of Ogbourn-St-George, Wiltshire, not far from Marlborough downs. There was formerly a castle here, which was an extensive fortification, with a double trench. On the neighbouring plain there are several barrows, and it is supposed that a great battle was fought here at an early period.

BARBY, a parish in the hund. of Fawley, union of Rugby, county of Northampton; 6 miles north-west from Daventry. Living, a rectory with Onely, in the archd. of Northampton and dio. of Peterborough; rated at £30 2s. 11d.; gross income £965. Patrons, in 1835, the trustees of C. Williams. The great and small tithes, the property of the clerical rector, were commuted in 1778. The village stands on the borders of Warwickshire, near the Oxford canal, and within a mile of the northern extremity of the Kilsby tunnel on the London and Birmingham railway. There are three daily schools here, one of which is endowed with £37 per annum from the Barby town-lands, and a Sunday school which also has a small endowment from the same source. The rent of the town-lands is £98 per annum. The poor's land produces a yearly rent of £28. Pop., including that of Onely, in 1801, 597; in 1831, 637. Houses 147. Acres 3,700. A. P. £5,032. Poor rates, in 1837, £375.

BARCHESTON-WITH-WILLINGTON, a parish in the Brailes division of the hundred of Kington, union of Shipston-on-Stour, county of Warwick; 1 mile east-south-east from Shipston-on-Stour. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Worcester; rated at £13 6s. 8d.; gross income £198. Patron, in 1835, the incumbent, the Rev. T. L. Snow. Pop., in 1801, 180; in 1831, 198. Houses 37. Acres 1,620. A. P. £3,198. Poor rates in 1837, £147.

BARCLAY, a hundred in the lathe of Scray, county of Kent. Pop., in 1831, 1,658. Houses 223. Acres 7,110.

BARCOMB, a hundred in the rape of Lewes, county of Sussex. Pop., in 1831, 2,263. Houses 375. Acres 9,740.

BARCOMB, a parish in the hund. of Barcomb, rape of Lewes, union of Chailey, county of Sussex; 3 miles north by east from Lewes; on the river Ouse. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Lewes and dio. of Chichester; rated at £18 10s. 10d.; gross income £768; and in the patronage of the Crown. A school was established here by the late Thomas Rickman, Esq., who bequeathed it an annuity of £20 for ten years. There are other two daily schools. Pop., in 1801, 615; in 1831, 931. Houses 145. Acres 5,280. A. P. £3,353. Poor rates, in 1837, £808.

BARDEN IN WHARFDALE, or BARDEN-FOREST, a township and chapelry in the parish of Skipton, west riding, county of York; 8 miles north-east from Skipton. Living, a curacy not in charge, in the patronage of the duke of Devonshire. There are here a daily school and a Sunday National school. Here are the remains of an ancient tower, formerly one of the lodges of the forest of Barden. Pop., in 1801, 191; in 1831, 214. Houses 38. Acres (including those of the chapelry of Bolton Abbey), 10,110. A. P. £863. Poor rates, in 1837, £108.

BARDFIELD (GREAT), a parish in the hund. of Freshwell, union of Dunmow, county of Essex; 4 miles east from Thaxted; on the Blackwater. Living, a vicarage in the archd. of Colchester and dio. of London; rated at £11; gross income £180. Patrons, in 1835, the devisees in trust of the late W. C. Key. There was formerly a market on Tuesday, but it has fallen into disuse; a fair is held on the 22d of June for cattle and toys. There is a free school here, which receives part of an endowment of £40 per annum, bequeathed in 1584 by William Bendlowe, for the education of children and other charitable purposes. There are other three daily schools, and several bequests for educational and other charitable purposes connected with this parish, which produce in all about £51 per annum. Petty sessions for the division of Freshwell are held here. Pop., in 1801, 833; in 1831, 1,029. Houses 207. Acres 3,400. A. P. £3,534. Poor rates, in 1837, £639.

BARDFIELD (LITTLE), a parish in the hund. of Freshwell, union of Dunmow, county of Essex; 3½ miles east from Thaxted. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Colchester and dio. of London; rated at £11; gross income £472. Patron, in 1835, Rev. M. Bernard. There is here an alms-house for poor widows, and a school for eighteen poor children, endowed in 1774 by Sarah Bernard. The annual income of this charity is £86. Pop., in 1801, 282; in 1831, 295. A. P. £1,652. Poor rates, in 1837, £252.

BARDFIELD-SALING, or LITTLE SALING, a parish in the hund. of Freshwell, union of Dunmow, county of Essex; 5 miles north-east from Great Dunmow. Living, a donative curacy in the archd. of Essex and dio. of London, not in charge; rated in the parliamentary returns at £40; gross income £75. Patron, in 1835, the Rev. B. Goodrich, the incumbent. The only charity connected with this parish, produces £7 per annum. Pop., in 1801, 257; in 1831, 359. Houses 71. Acres 1,510. A. P. £1,094. Poor rates, in 1837, £205.

BARDNEY, a parish in the west division of the wapentake of Wraggœ, parts of Lindsey, union and county of Lincoln; 4 miles south-west from Wragby. Living, a discharged vicarage, in the archd. and dio.

of Lincoln; rated at £7 10s., and in the parliamentary returns at £84; gross income £80. Patron, the bishop of Lincoln. There is a free school here, founded in 1711 by Thomas Kitchen, and endowed with lands which now produce £160 per annum. There are three other daily schools attended by about 60 children. There is also an alms-house for seven poor men and seven poor women, founded and endowed by Peter Handcock of Bardney, in 1708. "Here was a noble monastery," says Tanner, "before the year 697, to which Ethelred, king of Mercia, was a great benefactor, if not the original founder; who, upon his resignation of the crown, retired hither, and became first monk, and afterwards abbot of this house, till his death. It is said to have had three hundred monks, but was destroyed by the Danes in the year 870, and continued in ruins above two hundred years, till Remigius, bishop of Lincoln, or rather Gislebert de Gaunt, in the time of William the Conqueror, re-edified the church and buildings, and replenished the same with Benedictine monks to the honour of St Peter, St Paul, and St Oswald the king and martyr, whose relics were first enshrined here, but, in 909, translated to Gloucester. The revenues of this abbey were valued, according to Leland, at £432, in the 26th of Henry VIII. After the dissolution the site came into the hands of Sir Robert Tyrwhit." The site of this abbey, which was one of the most ancient in the kingdom, is about half a mile to the north-west of the village, but no remains of it are now visible. There is also a large barrow in its neighbourhood in which King Ethelred is said to have been buried, and a fine cross has been erected to his memory on its summit. This place was anciently called Beardanam. Pop., in 1801, 703; in 1831, 1,098. Houses 193. Acres 5,490. A. P. £5,295. Poor rates, in 1837, £889.

BARDON-PARK, an extra-parochial liberty in the hund. of Sparkenboe, county of Leicester; 9 miles north-west from Leicester. The Independents have a place of worship here. Pop., in 1801, 65; in 1831, 65. Houses 11. Acres 1,710. A. P. £671. Poor rates, in 1837, £59.

BARDSEA, a township in the parish of Urswick, co.-palatine of Lancaster; 2½ miles south by east from Ulverston. There is a school here, to which Wilson Braddyll gave, in 1781, a rent charge of £8 per annum for the education of poor children. There was anciently an hospital here of St. John of Jerusalem. Pop. returned with the parish. A steamer is now (August, 1840) plying daily between this place and Fleetwood-on-Wyre, making the passage in about an hour-and-a-half. From Fleetwood there is a railway conveyance by Poulton and Kirkham to Preston, in an hour-and-a-quarter.

BARDSEY (ISLE OF), an island, extra-parochial, in the hund. of Commitmaen, county of Carnarvon, North Wales; 20 miles north-east from Pwllheli. It lies on the Irish sea, at the northern point of Cardigan bay, and is called, in Welsh, Inys Enlli, i. e. 'The Island of the current.' Its extent is about 2 miles in length, and 1 in breadth. It consists partly of a rugged hill, but chiefly of a fertile plain at a small elevation above the sea. The inhabitants are mostly employed in fishing and agriculture. The parish-church is at Aberdaron, on the mainland. This island was the retreat of Dubritius, archbishop of Caerleon, who died here in 612; and there was an abbey here, one of the earliest religious establishments in Wales. At the general dissolution its revenues amounted to £46 ls. 4d. Lambard says: "Daniel, byshop of Bangor, and divers other relligious, lye buried here; amongst which, Bale reckoneth the Merlin of Calidon to be one, which died in the year 570. It is manifest that the ile was named of Bardes, which name hath in process of tyme degenerated from the first meaning no less than Tyrannus or Sophista with the Grecians, beinge of themselves good wordes, and yet drawn to evel acceptance by desert of evel mens doinges; whoe enjoyninge the names, have not practised the offices, and imbracinge the place, have rejected the office; for in the begynninge theise bardes weare suche as receyvinge religion from the Samothites, did, by litle and litle, lose the puritie of the same; and in the tyme of the Romaynes fell in maner to mere gentilitye, but now lately to plaine minstrelsye, as to singe at the table genealogies, and the gestes of noblemen. Wherwith the Welchemen of latter age have bene so muche delighted, as it grew in manor to a custome amongst them, to give frankly their horse, or other apparell about them, to any of theise that would in Welche meter comend them." There are a daily and a Sunday school here. The only safe landing-place is at a little harbour on the south-east side, which is capable of admitting vessels of 40 tons burden. Pop., in 1831, 84. Houses 15.

BARDSEY, a parish in the lower division of the wapentake of Skyrack, west riding of the county of York; 5 miles south-west from Wetherby. It comprises the townships of Bardsey with Rigton, Wothersome, and part of Wike. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. and dio. of York; rated at £4 ls. 8d., and in the parliamentary returns at £150; gross income £270. Patron, in 1835, G. L. Fox, Esq. The parish-school here is endowed with £19 19s. per annum, by the bequest of Robert Lord Bingley in 1728. The other charities connected with the parish amount to £4 per annum. This was probably the birth-place of Congreve, the poet and dramatist; he was baptized here in February, 1670. Near the village to the north are traces of an ancient fort and encampment. Pop., in 1801, 364; in 1831, 352. Houses 72. Acres 3,380. A. P. £1,629. Poor rates of Bardsey with Rigton, in 1837, £95.

BARDWELL, a parish in the hund. of Blackburn, union of Thingoe, county of Suffolk; 9 miles north-east from Bury. Living, a rectory, formerly in the archd. of Sudbury and dio. of Norwich, now in the dio. of Ely; rated at £7 17s. 1d.; gross income £597; and in the patronage of St John's college, Oxford. The Baptists have a place of worship here: church formed in 1824. This parish possesses two daily schools, one of which is endowed with £17 10s. per annum, and a Sunday school. The town-estate yields a yearly rent of £87, out of which £13 is allotted to the support of a charity school. Other charities connected with the parish produce £9 per annum. Pop., in 1801, 556; in 1831, 799. Houses 85. Acres 3,320. A. P. £2,972. Poor rates, in 1837, £570.

BARE, a township in the parish of Lancaster, co.-palatine of Lancaster; 3 miles north-west from Lancaster. Pop., in 1831, 110. Houses 17. Acres 180. Poor rates, in 1837, £41.

BAREHAM, or BERGHAM, in the parish of Linton, county of Cambridge. "A priory here of Crouchid or Crossed friars, cell immediately subordinate to Welnetham in Suffolk, which house also was subordinate to the great house of that order in London, is met with as early as 21st Edward I., and was granted as parcel of the above-mentioned London friary, 32nd Hen. VIII., to Philip Paris, and afterwards to John Millicent, Esq."—Tanner's Not. Mon.

BARESBY, or BARNESBY, a chapelry in the parish of Ashby-Folville, county of Leicester; 9 miles north-east from Leicester. The tithes of the lordship or liberties of Baresby and South Croxton, the property of the clerical rector, lay-impropriator and vicar, were commuted in 1794. There are two daily schools here. Pop., in 1801, 202; in 1831, 230. A. P. £1,620. Poor rates, in 1837, £106.

BARFORD, or BRERFORD, a hundred in the north-eastern part of the county of Bedford, bordering on Huntingdon, containing 8 parishes. It lies between the hundreds of Willey and Wixamtree, and extends from Bedford to St Neots in Huntingdonshire. Pop., in 1821, 5,137; in 1831, 5,880. Area 26,170 acres. Houses 1,152.

BARFORD, a parish in the hund. of Forehoe, county of Norfolk; $4\frac{1}{2}$ miles north from Wymondham. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. of Norfolk and dio. of Norwich; rated at £4 8s. 4d.; gross income £294. Patron, in 1835, the incumbent, the Rev. H. Franklin. Charities connected with this parish produce £22 per annum. Pop., in 1801, 233; in 1831, 420. Houses 79. Acres 940. A. P. £1,442. Poor rates, in 1837, £215.

BARFORD, a parish in the Warwick division of the hund. of Kington, union and county of Warwick, situated on the bank of the Avon; 3 miles south by west from Warwick. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Worcester; rated at £11 11s.; gross income £869. Patron, in 1835, John Mills. The rectorial tithes, the property of the clerical rector, were commuted in 1760. The church-lands of this parish yield an annual rent of £11 5s. John Beale, in 1672, and the Rev. Thomas Dugard, in 1677, bequeathed property, from which £48 per annum is drawn for the endowment of a free school in which about thirty boys and thirty girls are educated. There are also a boarding and a Sunday school here. Pop., in 1801, 485; in 1831, 748. Houses 165. Acres 1,490. A. P. £3,451. Poor rates, in 1837, £300.

BARFORD (GREAT), a parish in the hund. of Barford, union and county of Bedford; 6 miles east-north-east from Bedford. Living, a discharged vicarage united with that of Roxden, in the archd. of Bedford and dio. of Lincoln; rated at £9; and in the patronage of Trinity college, Cambridge. The great and small tithes, the property of Trinity college, Cambridge, and the vicar, were commuted in 1820. There are two daily and two Sunday schools here. The river Ouse, over which there is here a bridge, built about the beginning of the 15th century, is navigable along the south-eastern parts of the parish. Pop., in 1801, 431; in 1831, 731. Houses 150. Acres 2,830. A. P. £2,545. Poor rates, in 1837, £428.

BARFORD (GREAT), a parish in the hund. of Wootton, union of Banbury, county of Oxford; 2 miles west-north-west from Deddington. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Oxford; rated at £6 5s.; gross income £67. Patron, in 1835, J. Hall, Esq. The church presents many curious vestiges of the Saxon or early Norman architecture. For commutation of tithes, see DEDDINGTON. There is a day and Sunday National school here. Charities connected with the parish produce £30 per annum. Pop., in 1801, 266; in 1831, 350. Houses 86. Acres 1,180. A. P. £1,841. Poor rates, in 1837, £175.

BARFORD (LITTLE), a parish in the hund. of Biggleswade, union of St Neots, county of Bedford; 2 miles south-west from St Neots, Hants. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Bedford and dio. of Lincoln; rated at £13 16s. 3d.; gross income £256. Patron, in 1835, J. Alington. Tithes of this parish, the property of the clerical rector, were commuted in 1778. There is a daily school here. Charities connected with the parish produce £6 15s. per annum; the greater part is allotted to the education of poor children. Pop., in 1801, 80; in 1831, 176. Houses 25. Acres 1,190. A. P. £1,260. Poor rates, in 1837, £47.

BARFORD (St John's), a chapelry in the parish of East Adderbury, hund. of Bloxham, county of Oxford; $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles west from Deddington. Living, a curacy not in charge, in connexion with the vicarage of East Adderbury. The great and small tithes, the property of the lay-impropriator and vicar, were commuted in 1793. Pop., in 1801, 100; in 1831, 131. Houses 25. Acres 480. A. P. £1,517. Poor rates, in 1837, £108.

BARFORD (St Martin), a parish in the hund. of Cawden and Cadworth, union of Wilton, county of Wilts; $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles west from Wilton. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Salisbury; rated at £24 2s. 8d.; gross income £815; and in the patronage of All Souls college, Oxford. The tithe of hay, of Barford (St Martin), and South Newton, the property of the clerical rector, was commuted in 1809. There are two daily schools here. Pop., in 1801, 450; in 1831, 570. Houses 105. Acres 2,290. A. P. £3,983. Poor rates, in 1837, £443.

BARFORTH, a township, formerly called Old Richmond, in the parish of Forcett, north riding of the county of York; 10 miles north from Richmond. Here was a Roman station. Pop., in 1801, 142; in 1831, 128. Houses 21. Acres 1,750. A. P. £3,498. Poor rates, in 1837, £89.

BARFRETON, or BARSTON, a parish in the hund. and union of Estry, lathe of St Augustine, county of Kent; 6 miles south by east from Wingham. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. and dio. of Canterbury; rated at £7 14s.; gross income £190, exclusive of £200 per annum allowed by St John's college, Oxford, in whose members the patronage is vested. The church is a small building, consisting of a nave and chancel, separated by a circular arch, but is regarded as one of the most curious specimens of Saxon and Norman architecture now remaining; it is highly decorated with grotesque sculpture; the southern entrance, in particular, is richly ornamented with various mouldings. Pop., in 1801, 59; in 1831, 114. Houses 16. Acres 360. A. P. £523. Poor rates, in 1837, £22.

BARHAM, a parish in the hund. of Leightonstone, union and county of Huntingdon; $5\frac{1}{2}$ miles north-north-east from Kimbolton. Living, a perpetual curacy not in charge, annexed to the vicarage of Spaldwick, in the archd. of Huntingdon and dio. of Lincoln; rated in the parliamentary returns at £68; gross income £58; and in the patronage of the prebendary of the cathedral of Lincoln. The tithes, the property of the prebends of Long-Stow and Spaldwick, and vicar, were commuted in 1760. Charities connected with this parish produce £7 10s. per annum. Pop., in 1801, 96; in 1831, 73. Houses 18. Acres 700. A. P. £798. Poor rates, in 1837, £45.

BARHAM, a parish in the hund. of Kinghamford, lathe of St Augustine, union of Bridge, county of Kent; 6 miles south-east from Canterbury. Living, a curacy not in charge, annexed to the rectory of Bishopbourne, in the archd. and dio. of Canterbury. The Canterbury races are held annually on Barham downs in the month of August. There are three daily schools here. These downs also exhibit many traces of ancient encampments, and vast numbers of tumuli are scattered over them. Pop., in 1801, 751; in 1831, 1,053. Houses 141. Acres 4,480. A. P. £3,684. Poor rates, in 1837, £383.

BARHAM, a parish in the hund. and union of Boamere and Claydon, county of Suffolk; 4 miles north-north-west from Ipswich. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Suffolk and dio. of Norwich; rated at £12 10s. 5d.; gross income £344. Patron, in 1835, John Longe. This parish possesses two daily schools. Pop., in 1801, 352; in 1831, 625. Houses

64. Acres 2,520. A. P. £2,251. Poor rates, in 1837, £167. The house of industry for the hundred of Boamere and Claydon, is included in the returns of the parish of Barham; the house contained 198 inmates in 1811; in 1821, it contained 489; and in 1831, 429.

BARHOLME, a parish in the wapentake of Ness, parts of Kesteven, union of Stamford, county of Lincoln; 4 miles west-north-west from Market-Deeping. Living, a discharged vicarage, with the curacy of Stow annexed, in the archd. and dio. of Lincoln; rated at £5 11s. 8d., and in the parliamentary returns at £126 11s. 8d.; gross income £154; in the patronage of the governors of Oakham and Uppingham schools. All tithes, moduses, &c. of the lordship of Barholme, the property of the trustees of certain charities, and the vicar, were commuted in 1799-1801. Pop., in 1801, 145; in 1831, 155. Houses 32. Acres 1,230. A. P. £1,352. Poor rates, in 1837, £43.

BARKBY, a parish in the eastern division of the hund. of Goscote, union of Barrow-upon-Soar, county of Leicester; 5 miles north-east from Leicester. It contains the chapelry of Barkby-Thorpe, and the township of North Thurmaston. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Leicester and dio. of Lincoln; rated at £10; gross income £256. Patron, in 1835, W. A. Pochin, Esq. There is a day and Sunday school here, in which 83 children are taught. Charities connected with this parish produce about £30 per annum. Pop. of the township, in 1801, 369; of the parish, 572; in 1831, 550, and 806. Houses 106, and 159. Acres 1,020, and 2,290. A. P. £4,681, and £10,921. Poor rates, in 1837, £221.

BARKBY-THORPE, a chapelry in the above parish; 4 miles north-east from Leicester. Pop., in 1801, 72; in 1831, 72. Houses 13. Acres 790. A. P. £1,641. Poor rates, in 1837, £73.

BARKHAM, a parish in the hund. of Charlton, union of Wokingham, county of Berks; 5 miles south-west from Wokingham. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Berks and dio. of Salisbury; rated at £5 15s. 7d.; gross income £350. Patron, in 1835, the Rev. H. E. St John. There is a daily and a Sunday school here. This parish is one of those entitled in turn to present an inmate to Lucas' hospital, at Wokingham. There are two small benefactions to the poor of this parish, which produce about £2 per annum. Pop., in 1801, 185; in 1831, 247. Houses 36. Acres 1,450. A. P. £1,423. Poor rates, in 1837, £98.

BARKING, or BERKING, a parish in the hund. of Becontree, union of Bomford, county of Essex; 7 miles east-north-east from London. It comprises the market-town and ward of Barking, and the wards of Chadwell, Ilford, and Ripple; and is within the jurisdiction of the Central criminal court. Living, a vicarage in the archd. of Essex and dio. of London; rated at £19 18s. 11d.; gross income £1,428; and in the patronage of All Souls college, Oxford. Two chapelries at Ilford and Epping forest are annexed to the living. The Independents have a place of worship here; their church was formed in 1706. In 1641, a free school was founded here, and endowed with the sum of £666 18s. 4d., bequeathed for the purpose by Sir James Campbell; the revenue now amounts to £20 per annum. The school is taught on the National system, and about 70 boys receive education in it. A new school-house, capable of containing upwards of 200 children, was erected in 1827. Two boys of this parish are entitled to be educated in Christ's hospital, London. Here is also a school supported by subscription, in which 400 children are educated on Dr Bell's system, and of these, 80 are clothed. There are also alma-houses for four inmates, without endowment. Other charities to the poor of this parish produce £285 per annum.—The town first rose into importance in 670, when Erkenwald, bishop of London, founded here an extensive abbey for nuns of the Benedictine order, over which a long succession of abbesses presided, many of whom were of noble, and some even of royal descent. During the eruption of the Danes in 870, the abbey was burnt to the ground, many of the nuns massacred, and the rest dispersed. About a century after this event, King Edgar rebuilt the abbey, over which his Queen Elfrida presided after his decease. At the general dissolution, in the reign of Henry VIII., the revenues of this house were valued at £1,084 6s. 2d., and the site was granted, 5th Edward VI., to Edward, Lord Clinton. The abbess was lady paramount in all the manors of this half-hundred, and she held of the king by an entire barony, there being but three more of the kind in England, viz. the prioress of Wilton, Shaftsbury, and Winchester. Of the buildings of this stately convent, an ancient square embattled gateway alone remains; over it is the chapel of the Holy Rood; the arch is pointed, and above it is a canopied niche with pinnacles. This structure has octagonal turrets rising from the ground on each side. During the building of the tower in London, William the Conqueror retired to this town; and here Edwin, earl of Mercia, and Morcar, earl of Northumberland, swore fealty to him. This town has been supposed to derive its name from burg-ing, 'the fortification in the meadow,' denoting its vicinity to an ancient intrenchment of which distinct traces still remain. It stands on the small river Roding, about 2 miles above its junction with the Thames; and is lighted with gas. The market-house was erected in the reign of Elizabeth. A market is held on Saturday; and fairs are held on Sept. 14th for toys, and October 22d for horses. The inhabitants are chiefly fishermen, or persons engaged in the conveyance of coal and timber from the Thames. They send vessels to the coasts of Scotland and Holland, and supply the London market. At Barking-creek, which is navigable to Ilford, there is a convenient wharf which facilitates the operations of trade in a great degree. Great quantities of vegetables are raised in the neighbourhood for the London market. Pop. of the parish, in 1801, 3,906; in 1831, 8,036; of the town, in 1801, 1,585; in 1831, 3,404. Houses 1,486, and 622. Acres 10,170. A. P. £20,366. Poor rates of the town, in 1837, £4,792.—At a short distance from the town, towards Dagenham, an old house is shown as one in which, according to tradition, the Gunpowder plot was concerted.—There is an immense embankment here, by which the Thames, at full tide, is prevented overflowing a large extent of level land. It gave way in 1707, but was repaired and strengthened at an expense of above £40,000.

BARKING, a parish in the hund. of Bosmere and Claydon, county of Suffolk; 1 mile south-west from Needham. This parish contains the town of Market-Needham, and the hamlet of Barking. Living, a rectory, with the chapelry of Darnsden annexed, in the archd. of Suffolk and dio. of Norwich; rated at £27 10s. 7½d.; gross income £529. Patron, in 1835, the earl of Ashburnham. There is a free school here, to which, in 1650, Francis Theobald bequeathed £30 per annum. Pop., including that of Market-Needham, in 1801, 1,818; in 1831, 1,884. Houses 386. Acres 3,010. A. P. £2,709. Poor rates, in 1837, £321.

BARKISLAND, a township in the parish of Halifax, west riding of the county of York; 4½ miles south-west of Halifax. The vicarial tithes of the manor of Barkisland were commuted in 1814. In 1657, a school for 12 children was founded here by Sarah Gledhill, and endowed with property now producing about £40 per annum. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in some woollen and cotton factories in the neighbourhood. Pop., in 1801, 1,799; in 1831, 2,290. Houses 422. Acres 2,420. A. P. £2,819. Poor rates, in 1837, £397.

BARKSTON, a parish in the hund. of Framland, county of Leicester; 1½ miles north by west from Melton-Mowbray. Living, a discharged vicarage, formerly in the archd. of Leicester and dio. of Lincoln, now in the dio. of Peterborough; rated at £7 5s. 5d., and in the parliamentary returns at £82 9s. 10d.; gross income £114. Patron, in 1835, the earl of Rutland. There are two daily and three Sunday schools here. All tithes, moduses, &c. of Barkston and Plungar, were commuted in 1791. The Grantham and Nottingham canal passes through this parish. Pop., in 1801, 238; in 1831, 297. Houses 60. Acres 2,870. A. P. £2,155. Poor rates, in 1837, £111.

BARKSTONE, a parish in the soke of Grantham, parts of Kesteven, county of Lincoln; 4 miles north-north-east from Grantham. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Lincoln; rated at £13 7s. 6d.; gross income £568. Patron, the prebendary of the cathedral of Salisbury. This parish possesses 3 daily and 4 Sunday schools. There is a small endowment for the instruction of poor children; also an alms-house for six poor persons, with an endowment of £43 per annum. Pop., in 1801, 276; in 1831, 430. Houses 83. Acres 2,060. A. P. £2,355. Poor rates, in 1837, £195.

BARKSTONE-ASH, a wapentake in the west riding of the county of York. It is bounded on the west by the wapentake of Skyrack; on the south by the river Aire; on the east by the river Ouse; and on the north by the river Wharfe. It contains 4 market-towns, 18 parishes, and 48 townships. In 1821, there were 4,422 houses, and 20,722 inhabitants in this wapentake. The Barkstone-Ash and Skyrack court of requests, established by act passed in 1839, has jurisdiction for the recovery of debts not exceeding £15, whether contracted before or subsequent to the passing of the act, against all persons residing, trading, or dealing, within the towns of Aberford, Selby, Sherbourne, and Tadcaster; also within the parishes of Bardsey, Brayton, Bramham, Brotherton, Cawood, Collingham, Kirkfenton, Kirkby Wharf, Ledham, Methley, Monkfryston, Newton, Kyme, Saxton, Selby, Sherburn, Tadcaster, Harewood, and Westow; also within the townships of Temple Newsam and Thorpe Stapleton, in the parish of Whitkirk; and also within the township of Scarcroft, in the parish of Thorne,—wherever the cause of action shall have arisen, or the plaintiff reside.

BARKSTONE-ASH, a township in the parish of Sherbourne, in the above wapentake; 5 miles south-east from Tadcaster. Pop., in 1801, 264; in 1831, 265. A. P. £1,226.

BARKWAY, a town and parish in the hund. of Edwinstree, county of Hertford; 34 miles north by east from London, and 13½ miles north-north-east from Hertford. It includes the hamlet of Nuthampstead. The town stands in an agreeable situation on a rising ground, and consists principally of one street, the houses of which are in general modern. There is a great thorough-fare here, from which circumstance the town derives considerable advantage. Living, a vicarage, annexed to the rectory of Reed, in the archd. of Middlesex and dio. of London; rated at £14. Patroness, in 1835, Lady Selsey. The church is an ancient structure, having some curious remains of painted glass in the windows. The great and small tithes of Barkway and Reed, were commuted in 1801. The Independent church here was formed in 1783. There are four daily and two Sunday schools in this parish. This was formerly a market-town, by grant of Henry III., but the market has been discontinued owing to the contiguity of Royston. A fair for pedlery is still held on the 20th of July. The town is regulated by constables and other officers appointed at the annual court-leet of the lord of the manor. Pop. of the town, in 1801, 699; in 1831, 859. Houses 172. A. P. £3,871. Pop. of the parish, in 1801, 851; in 1831, 1,108. Houses 214. Acres 5,060. A. P. £5,886.

BARKWITH (EAST), a parish in the eastern division of the wapentake of Wraggöe, parts of Lindsey, county of Lincoln; 3 miles north-east from Wragby. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. and dio. of Lincoln; rated at £11 10s. 10d.; gross income £202. Patron, in 1835, G. R. Heneage, Esq. The great and small tithes, Easter offerings, &c., the property of the clerical rector, were commuted in 1767. There is a daily school here. Pop., in 1801, 157; in 1831, 187. Houses 36. Acres 990. A. P. £1,155. Poor rates, in 1837, £39.

BARKWITH (WEST), a parish in the eastern division of the wapentake of Wraggöe, parts of Lindsey, county of Lincoln; 3 miles east-north-east from Wragby. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. and dio. of Lincoln; rated at £5s. 5s., and in the parliamentary returns at £100; gross income £144. Patron, in 1835, C. D. Holland, Esq. Pop., in 1801, 66; in 1831, 113. Houses 18. Acres 500. A. P. £876. Poor rates, in 1837, £51.

BARLASTON, a parish in the hund. of Pirehill, county of Stafford; 3½ miles north by west from Stone. Living, a curacy in the archd. of Stafford and dio. of Lichfield and Coventry, of the certified value of £9, valued in the parliamentary returns at £147 10s.; and in 1835, in the patronage of the marquess of Stafford. Petty sessions for the southern division of the hundred of Pirehill are held here and at Walton. The Grand Trunk canal, and the Manchester and Staffordshire railway, pass through this parish. There are here two daily schools, one of which is endowed with £12 per annum. Pop., in 1801, 349; in 1831, 514. A. P. £2,963. Poor rates, in 1837, £159.

BARLAVINGTON, or BARLTON, a parish in the hund. of Rotherbridge, rape of Arundel, Sussex; 4½ miles south of Petworth. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. and dio. of Chichester; rated at £5 13s. 4d., in the parliamentary returns at £54 13s.; nett income, in 1831, £68. Patron, in 1835, J. Beddulphe, Esq.; impropiator the earl of Egremont. Pop., in 1801, 78; in 1831, 111. Houses 19. Acres 1,710. A. P. £767. Poor rates, in 1837, £130.

BARLBOROUGH, a parish and village in the hund. of Scarsdale, Derbyshire; 8 miles north-east of Chesterfield; on the road from Sheffield to Oller-ton; and about 2 miles east of the North Midland railroad and the Chesterfield canal. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Derby and dio. of Lichfield and Coventry; rated at £10 1s. 5½d.; gross income £580; in 1835, in the patronage of C. H. Rhodes, Esq. There are six daily schools here, containing 134 scholars, and one Sunday school. There is here an hospital for six poor persons, founded and endowed in 1752 by Margaret and Mary Pole, with lands producing £67 15s. per annum. It consists of six dwellings of two rooms, with a small garden each. There are several other minor charities. Pop., in 1801, 677; in 1831, 713. Houses 136. Acres 2,229. A. P. £3,981. Poor rates, in 1837, £398.

BARLEBY, or BARLEY, a chapelry in the parish of Hemingbrough, east riding, Yorkshire; 1½ mile north-east of Selby, and 1 mile north of the Leeds and Hull railroad. Living, a perpetual curacy not in charge, united to the rectory of Hemingbrough; gross income, in 1831, £65. Patron, the vicar of Hemingbrough. There are two small daily schools here. Pop., in 1801, 241; in 1831, 348. Houses 83. Acres 1,310. A. P. £1,718. Poor rates, in 1837, £140.

BARLESTON, or BARLSTON, a chapelry in the parish of Market-Bosworth, Leicestershire; 2½ miles north-east of Market-Bosworth, and within 3 of the Leicester and Swamington railway. Living, a curacy not in charge, attached to the rectory of Market-Bosworth. There are, besides a daily school, three infant and two Sunday schools here. Pop., in 1801, 505; in 1831, 582. Houses 128. Acres 810. A. P. £1,746. Poor rates, in 1837, £302.

BARLEY, a parish in the hund. of Edwinstree, county of Hertford; 2 miles north-east of Barkway; on the road to Cambridge. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Middlesex and dio. of London; rated at £26 13s. 4d.; gross income £551. Patron, the bishop of Ely. There are four daily schools here, one of which is endowed with £10 per annum, and a Sunday school. Pop., in 1801, 494; in 1831, 704. Houses 137. Acres 2,700. A. P. £2,312. Poor rates, in 1837, £449.

BARLEY, a joint township with Whitley-Booths, in Pendle forest, parish of Whalley, Blackburn, co-palatine of Lancaster; 4½ miles west of Colne. There are two Sunday schools here. Pop., in 1801, 528; in 1831, 707. Houses 125. Acres 2,370. A. P. £1,252. Poor rates, in 1837, £261.

BARLEY. See BARLOW, Yorkshire.

BARLEYTHORPE, a chapelry in the parish of Oakham-Deansfield, county of Rutland; 2 miles north-west of Oakham, on the post-road to Melton-Mowbray. Living, a curacy annexed to the vicarage of Oakham. This manor belonged to the abbot and convent of Westminster from the time of Edward the Confessor till the dissolution. It was granted, in 1559, to the dean and chapter of St Peter's, Westminster, to whom it still belongs. Tithes commuted in 1772. Pop. returned with the parish.

BARLICHWAY, a large hundred in the county of Warwick, bounded on the north by Hemlingford hundred and Leicestershire; on the east by the counties of Leicester and Northampton; on the south by Knightlow hundred; and on the west by Knightlow hundred, and the county of the city of Coventry. Area 100,310 acres. Pop., in 1831, 26,685. Houses 5,346. It is divided into Alcester, Henley, Snitterfield, and Stratford divisions.

BARLINCH, or BARLINK, in the parish of Brompton-Regis, hund. of Williton and Freemanners, Somerset. According to Tanner, William de Say, in the time of Henry II., founded here a priory of Black canons. It had, about the time of the dissolution, eight religious, who were endowed with £98 18s. 4d. per annum. The house was granted, 30° Henry VIII., to Sir John Wallop.

BARLING, a parish in the hund. and union of Rochford, county of Essex; 3 miles east-north-east of Prittlewell. Living, a vicarage, a peculiar of the dean and chapter of St Paul's; rated at £18; gross income £308. There are two small daily schools here. Pop., in 1801, 264; in 1831, 317. Houses 63. Acres 1,240. A. P. £2,302. Poor rates, in 1837, £251.

BARLINGS, a parish in the wapentake of Lawress, parts of Lindsey, union and county of Lincoln; 6 miles east-north-east of Lincoln, on the road to Wragby, and near a small stream to which it gives name. It includes part of the hamlet of Langworth which lies about a mile to the north. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. of Stow and dio. of Lincoln; rated at £12, and in the parliamentary returns at £70; gross income £55. Patrons, in 1835, T. T. Drake and C. Turnor, Esqrs. There are two daily schools here. "Here was," says Tanner, "an abbey of Premonstratensian canons, dedicated to St Mary, founded A. D. 1154. It was first situate at the place called Barling-grange, but Ralph de Haya having given these religious a place called Oxeney, in another part of this town, the abbey was removed thither. Hence it was sometimes called the abbey of Oxeney, or De Oxeniaco, but generally Barlings. The revenue of this house was rated, 26th Henry VIII, at £307 16s. 6d. The site was granted to Charles, duke of Suffolk." The last prior of this house was Dr Mackerel, who, with the vicar of Louth and others, having headed an insurrection against the royal authority, was taken and executed at Tyburn, in 1537. Nothing of the building now remains save a few mutilated pillars. The chartulary of this abbey is preserved in the Cottonian library. Pop., in 1801, 116; in 1831, 280. Houses 58. Acres 2,630. A. P. £1,926. Poor rates, in 1837, £92.

BARLOW, or BARLEY, a township in the parish of Brayton, west riding of Yorkshire; 3 miles south-east from Selby. There are a daily and a Sunday school here. Pop., in 1801, 173; in 1831, 225. Houses 41. Acres 2,150. A. P. £2,807. Poor rates, in 1837, £82.

BARLOW (GREAT), a township in the parish of Staveley, hund. of Scarsdale, county of Derby; 4 miles north-west of Chesterfield. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. of Derby and dio. of Lichfield and Coventry; rated at £6, and in the parliamentary returns at £55; and, in 1835, in the patronage of the rector of Staveley. The great and small tithes of Great and Little Barlow were commuted in 1817. There are a daily and a Sunday school here, with a small library for the use of both; and several small endowments for the poor. This chapelry also partakes in the charity of the Rev. Francis Gisborne, under management at Bakewell. Pop., in 1801, 552; in 1831, 581. Houses 120. Acres 3,760. A. P. £2,112. Poor rates, in 1837, £139.

BARLOW (LITTLE), a township in the parish of Dronfield, Derbyshire; 5 miles north-west from Chesterfield. Pop., in 1801, 44; in 1831, 58. Houses 13. Acreage included in Great Barlow. A. P. £328. Poor rates, in 1837, £27.

BARMBY-ON-THE-MARSH, a chapelry in the parish of Howden, east riding of Yorkshire, near the junction of the rivers Ouse and Derwent; 4½ miles south-west of Howden. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. of the East riding and dio. of York, in the jurisdiction of the peculiar court of Howden-shire; rated at £20, and in the parliamentary returns at £36 10s.; gross income £30; in the patronage of the vicar of Howden. The inhabitants are employed to some extent in the manufacture of sacking. There are two mineral springs here, one of a chalybeate, the other of a sulphurous nature. There are four daily schools and one Sunday school. Pop., in 1801, 364; in 1831, 473. Houses 107. Acres 1,440. A. P. £2,206. Poor rates, in 1837, £195.

BARMBY-UPON-DON, or BARNBY-DUN, a parish and township in the southern division of the wapentake of Strafforth and Tickhill, west riding of Yorkshire; 5½ miles north-north-east of Doncaster, on the road to Snaith. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. and dio. of York; rated at £9 12s. 6d., and in the parliamentary returns at £86; gross income £119. Tithes commuted in 1803. Patron, in 1835, the Rev. J. Gresham. This parish contains the townships of Thorpe-in-Bainie, on the western bank of the Don, and Barmby-upon-Don, on the eastern bank, also part of the township of Bramwith. There are three daily schools here, one of which, containing 49 pupils, is partly supported by an endowment, and one Sunday school. The produce of certain allotments on the enclosure of the common lands of this parish, is distributed annually amongst the poor. In 1731, Frances, countess of Sutherland, bequeathed property producing £26 10s. per annum, chiefly for the relief of four poor women of the township of Bramwith, or this parish. Pop. of the township, in 1801, 369; in 1831, 440. That of the parish, in 1831, 561. Houses 119. Acres 3,670. A. P. £5,196. Poor rates, in 1837, £337.

BARMBY-ON-THE-MOOR, a parish within the liberty of St Peter, York, union of Pocklington, in the Wilton-beacon division of the wapentake of Harthill, east riding of Yorkshire; 1½ mile west of Pocklington, on the post-road to York. Living, a discharged vicarage, a peculiar of the dean of York; rated at £5 6s. 8d., in the parliamentary returns at £55 4s. 6d.; gross income £70. The tithes of the manor and township, the property of the dean of York and the curate, were commuted in 1777. The church, consisting of a nave and chancel, was repewed in 1823. It has an elegant octagonal spire. Patron, the dean of York. There are two daily schools here. The Wesleyan and Primitive Methodists have chapels here. A fair is held here on the Thursday preceding St Peter's day. Pop., in 1801, 321; in 1831, 452. Houses 93. Acres 2,290. A. P. £2,517. Poor rates, in 1837, £204.

BARMELE, a township in the parish of Hawarden, county of Flint, North Wales; ½ mile from Hawarden. Pop., in 1831, 115. Houses 20.

BARMERE, or BARMER, an extra-parochial liberty in the hund. of Gallow, Norfolk; 6 miles south-west of Burnham-Westgate. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. of Norfolk and dio. of Norwich; rated at £5; gross income £5. Patron, in 1835, T. Keralake, Esq. Pop., in 1801, 15; in 1831, 43. Houses 8. Acres 890. A. P. £1,278. Poor rates, in 1837, £108.

BARMING (EAST), a parish in the hund. and union of Maidstone, lathe of Aylesford, Kent; 2 miles west by south of Maidstone. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Rochester; rated at £12 17s. 1d.; gross income £635; in the patronage of the Crown. The church is a neat edifice, with a cemetery embosomed in fine elms. There are two daily schools and one Sunday school here. This parish is celebrated for its plantations of hops, apples, cherries, and filberts. Pop., in 1801, 326; in 1831, 565. Houses 102. Acres 1,210. A. P. £2,117. Poor rates, in 1837, £134.

BARMING (WEST). See NETTLESTED, Kent.

BARMOOR, a township in the parish of Lowick, Northumberland; 6 miles north-east of Wooler, and 1 west of Lowick. Barmoor castle, the seat of the Sitwells, is a very stately and elegant structure. It was built in 1801-2 on the site of an ancient fabric once belonging to the Muschampes. An annual meeting of the leading agriculturists of the country and neighbourhood is held here, and the ancient village has been gradually removed to the vicinity of the castle. The English general lodged at Barmoor wood the night after the battle of Flodden. Between Lowick and Barmoor is a place called the Crosshill, where a fair was anciently held. Pop. returned with that of the parish.

BARMOUTH, or ABERMAW, a town in the parish of Llanaber, county of Merioneth, North Wales, belonging to the parish of Corwen, hundred of Ederion, Merionethshire; 222 miles north-west of Loudon, and 8 south-west of Dolgelly. The natives generally call it Bernaw. The name of Abermaw is derived from its situation at the mouth of the river Maw or Mawddach, more commonly known by the name of Afon, or Avon-Vawr, which is navigable by small boats nearly as high up as Dolgelly. It lies at the foot of a lofty mountain, and is built on a very steep bank, the houses forming terraces rising above one another, and approached by steps cut in the rock; so that, as Bingley avers, an inhabitant of one of the upper tiers standing at his door, may look down the chimney of his neighbour below. The distant view of the town is picturesque, and has been compared, but very inaptly, to that of Edinburgh, or Gibraltar. This is the only sea-port in the county; but the entrance to the harbour is rendered dangerous by an accumulation of sand. The town—though in itself presenting little attraction—is much frequented during summer for the benefit of sea-bathing; and there are comfortable accommodations for invalids and visitors. On the banks of the river Maw, and on the sands at low water, there are agreeable promenades; and the view of the distant mountains is extremely picturesque. There is a considerable trade in fannel and hosiery; and there are upwards of 100 small sloops belonging to the place. The market is held on Friday, when fish and poultry are sold at very cheap rates. Fairs are held on the 7th of Oct. and 21st of November. There are here a Calvinistic Methodist church formed in 1807, and an Independent church formed in 1828. Pop. returned with the parish. There is a cross mail to Carnarvon.

BARMPTON, a township in the parish of Haughton-le-Skerne, co.-palatine of Durham; 4 miles north-east of Darlington. Pop., in 1801, 126; in 1831, 90. Houses 20. Acres 1,000. A. P. £1,901. Poor rates, in 1837, £93.

BARMSTON, a township in the parish of Wasington, co.-palatine of Durham; 5 miles west of Sutherland. The Stanhope and Tyne railway passes in the vicinity. Pop., in 1801, 49; in 1831, 73. Houses 13. Acres 980. A. P. £828. Poor rates, in 1837, £44.

BARMSTON, a parish in the northern division of the wapentake of Holderness, union of Bridlington, east riding of Yorkshire; 7 miles south by west of Bridlington. Living, a rectory in the archd. of the east riding and dio. of York; rated at £13 11s. 10d.; gross income £1,065. Patron, in 1835, Sir F. Boynton, Bart. Tithes of Barmston and Winton-cum-Barmston, commuted in 1819. The church is an edifice of the 14th century, and contains a curious monument to Sir Martin de la Mare. There are a daily and a Sunday school here. Here is an almshouse for four poor men, founded in 1726 by Sir Griffith Boynton. The village is agreeably situated near the German ocean. Pop., in 1801, 163; in 1831, 223. Houses 36. Acres 2,180. A. P. £4,662. Poor rates, in 1837, £160.

BARNACLE, a hamlet in the parish of Bulkington, county of Warwick; 4 miles south-east of Nuneaton. Pop. returned with the parish. The Birmingham and Derby junction railway intersects this township.

BARNACK, a parish in the liberty of Peterborough, Northamptonshire; $\frac{3}{4}$ miles north of Wansford. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Northampton and dio. of Peterborough; rated at £28 10s.; gross income £1,129; in the patronage of the bishop of Peterborough. The great and small tithes of Barnack with Pilgate, the property of the clerical rector, were commuted in 1799–1800. There are four daily schools here, with 144 scholars. There are extensive stone-quarries in this parish. Pop., in 1801, 613; in 1831, 812. Houses 103.

Acres 4,440. A. P. £4,692. Poor rates, in 1837, £113.

BARNACRE-WITH-BONDS, a township in the parish of Garstang, co.-palatine of Lancaster; $1\frac{1}{2}$ mile north-east of Garstang. There are two small daily schools here. Pop., in 1801, 474; in 1831, 519. Houses 100. Acres 3,880. A. P. £4,484. Poor rates, in 1837, £244.

BARNARD-CASTLE, called as frequently CASTLE-BARNARD, a market-town and chapelry in the parish of Gainford, south-western division of the ward of Darlington, union of Teesdale, co.-palatine of Durham; 246 miles north-north-west of London, and 26 south-west of Durham. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. and dio. of Durham; rated at £30 8s., and in the parliamentary returns at £130; gross income £229; in the patronage of the vicar of Gainford. The chapel is an ancient cruciform structure, with a detached tower, and presents a mixture of styles of architecture. The Independents and Wesleyan Methodists have places of worship here. The Wesleyan church was formed in 1765. Besides a day and Sunday school, endowed with £133, there are here seven daily schools and an infant school. "Richard, duke of Gloucester," says Tanner, "obtained license, in the 17th Edward IV., to found a college in the castle here, for a dean and twelve secular priests, two clerks, and six choristers, to the honour of Christ Jesus, the Virgin Mary, St Margaret, and St Ninian, and to purchase lands, &c., not exceeding the yearly value of 400 marks; but I met with no further account of it. Here certainly was an hospital of St John, valued, 26th Henry VIII., at £5 15s. 4d.; it seems to be yet in being, and the mastership to be in the gift of the lord-chancellor of Great Britain." Hutchinson, in his 'History of Durham,' states that St John's hospital was founded in 1229 by John Baliol of Scotland, who was born here. The lands belonging to this hospital are managed by a custos, who receives his appointment from the lord-chancellor, and whose emoluments arise from fines on granting leases for lives. The hospital itself is a low thatched building, of one room only, in Newgate-street, in which two old women reside, rent free, and receive 10s. monthly between them. The principal charity consists of a sum of £75 8s. 6d., arising from the sale of waste lands, which is annually divided amongst 17 poor men, in various proportions. There are several minor charities; amongst others, seven twopenny loaves are given every Sunday to seven poor widows attending divine service. The town consists of a spacious street nearly a mile in length, intersected by smaller streets. It is situated on the south side of an eminence rising abruptly from the northern bank of the river Tees, over which there is a narrow bridge of two pointed-arches, which was built in 1596. The streets are well-paved and lighted with gas. The environs are remarkably pleasant, and present romantic scenery, especially along the banks of the Tees. Many of the inhabitants were formerly employed in the manufacture of camlets, and the weaving of stocking-hose. Hats, carpets, and white leather-breeches, are also made here; and on the banks of the Tees are several mills for spinning thread. The market-day is Wednesday, and here is held one of the largest corn-markets in the North of England. The market-cross is an octagonal freestone building, open at the sides for the accommodation of the public. Fairs are held on Easter-Monday, on the Wednesday in Whitsun-week, and on St James's day; and on July 25th for horses, cattle, and sheep. The Darlington District banking company, the National Provincial bank, and the Yorkshire District bank, have branches here. Barnard-Castle is one of the polling places for a member for South Durham. The town is governed by a steward and jury of the manor of Darlington. Petty-sessions are held by the county-magistrates on the first Wednesday of every month. Barnard-Castle moss, extending to 6,000 acres, was enclosed by an act of 35° George III. Barnard-Castle derives its name from Barnard, grandfather of John Baliol, king of Scotland, who erected here a strong castle, in which Richard, duke of Gloucester, afterwards king of England, resided for some time. "Toward the end of Kinge Jhon's reigne," says Lambard, "what tyme Lewes of Fraunce molested this realme, Alexander, king of Scotland, came to Dover, and did to Lewes the homage that of right he ought to Jhon. And as he passed by Castle-Barnard with his companie, (which castle then stode in the precinct of Halywerkfolk in the custodie of Hugh Baliol,) he survaid it about, to espie whether it weare assailable of any side; and while he was thus occupied, one within discharged a cross-bowe, and strake Eustace Vesey (which had marrayed his syster) on the forehead with suche might, that he fell dead to the ground. Wherof the kinge and al his nobles conceived great sorrowe, but wear not able to amend it." On the defection of Baliol, his estates were claimed by Beke, bishop of Durham, but Edward bestowed it on the earl of Warwick. In the reign of Elizabeth, it belonged to the earl of Westmoreland; and during his rebellion, it was seized and garrisoned for the queen by Sir George Bowes of Streatham. It now came into the possession of the Crown, and was subsequently purchased, along with the houses, parish-lands and privileges, by an ancestor of the duke of Cleveland, to whom they at present belong. The remains of the castle are extremely interesting, and cover six acres of land.—Pop., in 1801, 2,966; in 1831, 4,430. Houses 513. Acres 3,810. A. P. £7,310. Poor rates, in 1837, £1,360. There are posts to Romald-Kirk and Middleton; and a railway has been proposed to join the Stockton and Darlington railway.

BARNARDISTON, corruptedly BERNISTON, a parish in the hund. and union of Risbridge, Suffolk; 4 miles west-north-west of Clare. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Sudbury and dio. of Norwich; rated at £7 10s. 5d.; gross income £204. Patron, in 1835, the Rev. V. Ellis. There are a daily and a Sunday school here. The manor gave name to a family possessing various estates in the county. Pop., in 1801, 142; in 1831, 206. Houses 39. Acres 1,520. A. P. £1,094. Poor rates, in 1837, £118.

BARNBOW, a township in the parish of Barwick-in-Elmet, west riding of Yorkshire; 6 miles east-north-east of Leeds. Pop. returned with the parish.

BARNBROUGH, BARNBURGH, or BARNBOURGH, a parish in the northern division of the wapentake of Strafforth and Tickhill, union of Doncaster, west riding of Yorkshire; 6 miles west of Doncaster. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of York; valued at £23; gross income £656; in the patronage of the prebendaries of the collegiate church of Southwell. The church, consisting of a nave and side-aisles, is a building of the 14th century, and contains some ancient monuments. There are two daily schools here, one of which has a small endowment, and a Sunday school. Barnbrough-hall, in this parish, contains some pictures of the family of Sir Thomas More. "The village," says Mr Allen, "is remarkable for a tradition relative to a singular and fatal contest between a man and a wild cat. The inhabitants say that the fight began in an adjacent wood, and that it was continued from thence into the porch of the church, where it ended fatally to both the combatants, as each there expired of the wounds received in the conflict. 'A rude representation in the church commemorates the event; and, as in similar traditions, the accidentally natural red tinge of some of the stones, has been construed into bloody stains, which all the properties of soap and water have not been able to efface.'" Pop., in 1801, 446; in 1831, 520. Houses 108. Acres 1,770. A. P. £2,423. Poor rates, in 1837, £175.

BARNBY, a parish in the hund. of Mutford and Lothingland, county of Suffolk; 5 miles east by south of Beccles. Living, a discharged rectory not in charge, in the archd. of Suffolk and dio. of Norwich; rated at £130, and united to the vicarage of Wheatacre, All Saints. Pop., in 1801, 188; in 1831, 303. Houses 41. Acres 1,390. A. P. £1,177. Poor rates, in 1837, £57.

BARNBY, a township in the parish of Lythe, north riding of Yorkshire; 5 miles west by north of Whitby. Pop., in 1801, 254; in 1831, 224. Houses 53. Acres 1,400. A. P. £1,772. Poor rates, in 1837, £153.

BARNBY-UPON-DON. See BARNBY.

BARNBY-MOOR, anciently BARNBY-ON-THE-MOOR, a township in the parish of Blyth, county of Nottingham; 3½ miles north-west of East Retford; on the post-road to Doncaster. Pop., in 1801, 141; in 1831, 205. Houses 41. Acreage with the parish. A. P. £4,189. Poor rates, in 1837, £106. Tithes commuted in 1807.

BARNBY-IN-THE-WILLOWS, a parish in the southern division of the hund. of Newark, county of Nottingham; 4 miles east by south of Newark: so called, "because it stands upon the river Fedick, where marshy ground abounds with willows," say old topographers. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Nottingham and dio. of York; rated at £5 9s. 9½d.; gross income £184; in the patronage of the prebendaries of the collegiate church of Southwell. There are a daily and a Sunday school here. Pop., in 1801, 195; in 1831, 237. Houses 45. Acres 1,680. A. P. £1,960. Poor rates, in 1837, £141.

BARNES, a parish and village in the western division of Brixton, union of Richmond, Surrey, pleasantly situated on the banks of the Thames; 5 miles south-west of London; and within a short distance of Mortlake, a small elbow on the road forming their point of separation. Living, a rectory in the peculiar jurisdiction of the archbishop of Canterbury; valued at £9 3s. 4d.; gross income £377; and in the patronage of the dean and chapter of St Paul's. The church is an ancient building. On the south exterior wall is a tablet within a small enclosure, to the memory of Edward Rose, a London citizen, who, in 1653, bequeathed £20 to the poor of this parish, on condition that his monumental tablet should be kept in repair, and have rose-bushes trained around it. There is an endowment here for the instruction of poor children. Besides a day and Sunday National school, there are an infant and day school, and four boarding schools here. In 1812, the count D'Antraigues, a French emigrant, and his countess, were assassinated here by their Italian footman. Barnes common consists of about 500 acres of ground, which are in great part flooded by the Thames in spring-tides. This parish is within the jurisdiction of the Central criminal court. Pop., in 1801, 860; in 1831, 1,417. Houses 217. Acres 820. A. P. £8,433. Poor rates, in 1837, £649.

BARN-ELMS, or BARNES ELMS, a hamlet in the above parish, consisting of two houses, and so called from its being surrounded by majestic elms. One of these houses, known by the name of Queen Elizabeth's dairy, belonged originally to Sir Francis Walsingham, who, in 1589, entertained the queen and her court here. It was afterwards the property of the celebrated bookseller, Jacob Tonson, who erected a room, or gallery here, for meetings of the kit-kat club, and adorned it with portraits of the members, painted by Sir Godfrey Kneller. These are now in the possession of William Baker, Esq. of Bayfordbury near Hertford. The kit-kat club-room has been allowed to fall into ruins. It was about 18 feet high, 40 feet long, and 20 feet wide, and hung with red cloth. This was for some time the residence of Cowley before he settled at Chertsey.

BARNESLEY, or BARNLEY, (ST. MARY,) a market-town and chapelry in the parish of Silkstone, west riding of Yorkshire; 172 miles north-north-west of London; 40 south-west of York; and 10 south of Wakefield; on the post-road to Sheffield. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. and dio. of York; valued at £18 18s.; gross income £225; in the patronage of the archbishop of York. Tithes commuted in 1777. The church—which is a chapel-of-ease to that of Silkstone—with the exception of the heltry, was rebuilt some years ago, under an act of the 59th of George III. A handsome chapel in the Gothic style, with a small bell-tower, and capable of seating 1,250, was erected under the authority of the parliamentary commissioners in 1822, at an expense of £5,918. There is a Roman Catholic chapel here; and the Society of Friends, Primitive, New Connexion, and Wesleyan Methodists, and Independents, have places of worship. The two Independent churches were formed one in 1776, and the other in 1818; the Wesleyan Methodist church in 1797, the Primitive Methodist in 1820. There are twelve daily schools here, one of which, with 340 pupils, is partly supported by an endowment of £45 per annum, and another, containing 70 scholars, is endowed with £18 per annum; there are also five Sunday schools.—The town of Barnesley, found in Domesday-book under the name of Bernesleye, and anciently called Bleak-Barnesley, or Black-Barnesley, is situated on the side of a hill, and consists of several narrow streets, in which are some handsome houses and a spacious market-place. The houses are in general built of stone obtained from quarries in the neighbourhood. The streets are paved, and lighted with gas, under an act passed in the 3d of George IV. There is a special act for the recovery of small debts; and petty-sessions for the wapentake of Staincross are held here. A subscription library was established here in 1808. Constables and other officers are appointed at the court-leet of the lord-of-the-manor, the duke of Leeds. A market is held on Wednesday, at which a considerable quantity of corn is sold; a smaller market, chiefly for provisions, is held on Saturday. Fairs for cattle, horses, cheese, and swine, are held on Feb. 28th, May 12th, and Oct. 10th. The inhabitants were formerly much employed in wire-drawing; but this branch of business has rather declined. The spinning of yarn now employs many, as does the weaving of linen-fabrics, especially damasks and drills. The Barnesley banking company was established in 1832; number of shareholders 134. There is also a branch of the Yorkshire District bank. Coal is found in abundance in the neighbourhood, the mining of which gives employment to 550 men. There are a glass-work, several dye-works, and three iron foundries. The Deane and Dove canal passes near the town; and the Barnesley canal communicates with Wakefield by the Calder. This canal was opened in 1799; it crosses the Deane by an aqueduct of 5 arches, and is connected with a railroad to Silkstone. At the distance of about a mile from the town are the remains of the Cluniac priory of Monk-Breton, founded in the 3d of Henry II., by Adam Fitz-Swain, the revenues of which amounted, at the dissolution, to £323 8s. 2d. This house was a chapter-abbey. Pop., in 1801, 3,606; in 1831, 10,330. Houses 2,031. Acres 4,000. A. P. £15,029. Poor rates, in 1837, £1,430.

BARNET-CHIPPING, or BERGNET-CHIPPING, or HIGH-BARNET, but most commonly CHIPPING-BARNET, a market-town and parish, East Barnet, union of Barnet, liberty of St Albans, Hertfordshire; 11 miles north-north-west of London, and 9 south-east of St Albans, on the great post-road betwixt these cities. Living, a curacy not in charge, annexed to the rectory of East Barnet, and valued at £22 2s. 8½d. in the king's books. The church is an ancient structure, with a square embattled tower, and contains various monuments to members of the Ravenscroft family and others. It was erected in 1400 by John Moot, abbot of St Albans. The Independents have a place of worship here, licensed under the new Marriage act. There are three daily schools here, one of which is a grammar-school, founded by Queen Elizabeth in 1573, and endowed by individuals at various times, and also two boarding and two Sunday schools. Here are alms-houses, generally called Jesus' hospital, for six poor elderly women, founded in the reign of Charles II.; and further endowed with a portion of the interest of £500, bequeathed, in 1731, by Mrs Barcock, after distributing £10 to the poor. In 1729, James Garret, Esq., bequeathed £800 for the purpose of founding and endowing alms-houses here for six poor widows; and part of an estate at Kentish town was bestowed upon six others, by Mr Palmer, for aged men and their wives. The town of Barnet-Chipping receives the Saxon appellation of Chipping, or 'market,' from the privilege of holding a market here, which Henry II. granted to the monks of St Albans. It is also called High-Barnet, from being situated on a hill. It consists principally of one street upwards of a mile in length. The market-day is Monday, on which much business is done, especially in the sale of pigs and cattle. A very large and important fair is held here on the 4th and 5th of September, for the sale of cattle and horses, collected in the north of England, and in Scotland, in the early part of the spring. In the fairs for 1839, upwards of 45,000 head of cattle, and 1,000 horses, changed owners. A workhouse has been erected here for the union of Barnet, capable of receiving 200 inmates, at an expense of £3,757. On the neighbouring common a mineral spring was discovered in 1652. There was formerly a race-course on this heath. Pop., in 1801, 1,258; in 1831, 2,369. Houses 364. Acres 1,440. A. P. £6,727. Poor rates, in 1837, £837. There are penny-posts to Hadleigh, Shenley, Highgate, Whetstone, and Finchley.

BARNET-EAST, a parish in the hund. of Cashio, liberty of St. Albans, union of Barnet, county of Hertford. Living, a rectory in the archd. of St. Albans and dio. of London; rated at £22 2s. 8½d., in the parliamentary returns at £150; gross income, with Barnet-Chipping, £1,078; in the patronage of the Crown. The church, an ancient structure, formerly belonged to the monastery of St. Albans. Pop., of the parish, exclusive of Chipping-Barnet, in 1801, 353; in 1831, 547. Houses 95. Acres 1,630. A. P. £5,321. Poor rates, in 1837, £367.

BARNET-FRIARN, or FRYERN-BARNET, a parish in the Finsbury division of the hund. of Ossulstone, county of Middlesex; 9 miles north-west of London. Living, a perpetual curacy not in charge, in the archd. of Middlesex and dio. of London, and in the patronage of the dean and chapter of St. Paul's.

The church is a small building in the Norman style of architecture. There is a day and Sunday school here. The parish contains the hamlet of Colney-Hatch, half of Whetstone, and a part of Finchley common. Alms-houses for twelve aged persons were founded and endowed here, in 1612, by Lawrence Camp, Esq. of London. This was the birth-place, in 1732, of John Walker, the author of the well-known English pronouncing dictionary. Pop., in 1801, 432; in 1831, 615. Houses 121. Acres 1,330. A. P. £7,453. Poor rates, in 1837, £320.

BARNET-BY-THE-WOLD, or BARNETBY-LE-WOLD, a parish in the southern division of the wapentake of Yarborough, union of Glandford-Brigg, parts of Lindsey, county of Lincoln; 5 miles east-north-east of Glandford-Brigg. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Lincoln; rated at £6 4s. 2d.; gross income £305; in the patronage of the bishop of Lincoln. Tithes commuted in 1766. There are three daily and two Sunday schools here. Pop., in 1801, 211; in 1831, 532. Houses 107. Acres 1,630. A. P. £2,558. Poor rates, in 1837, £235.

BARNEY, a parish in the hund. of North Greenboe, union of Walsingham, county of Norfolk; 5 miles east-north-east of Fakenham. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Norwich; valued at £6 13s. 4d., in the parliamentary returns at £86 2s. 1d.; gross income £132. Patron, in 1835, Sir J. D. Astley, Bart. There is a day and Sunday school here. Pop., in 1801, 216; in 1831, 263. Houses 47. Acres 1,210. A. P. £1,289. Poor rates, in 1837, £113.

BARNFIELD (East), a hundred in the lathe of Scray, county of Kent. Area 8,590 acres. Pop., in 1831, 2,428. Houses 411. This hundred is chiefly composed of the parish of Hawkhurst.

BARNHAM, a village in the hund. of Blackbourn, union of Thetford, county of Suffolk; 3 miles south of Thetford, on the post-road to Bury St Edmunds. It comprises two parishes, in the archd. of Sudbury and dio. of Norwich. Living of St Gregory a rectory, rated at £7 11s. 10½d.; the other, a rectory, rated at £8 5s. 5d., the church of which is in ruins. These are now consolidated into one rectory and united with that of Euston, and were, in 1835, in the patronage of the duke of Grafton. Gross income of the united rectories £676. There are a daily and a Sunday school here. Some tumuli, which lie between this village and Thetford, are supposed to mark the scene of a conflict, in 870, between King Edward the Elder and the Danes. Pop., in 1801, 303; in 1831, 384. Houses 70. Acres 5,420. A. P. £1,254. Poor rates, in 1837, £89.

BARNHAM, a parish in the hund. of Avisford, union of West Hampnett, rape of Arundel, Sussex; 4 miles west-south-west of Arundel, and in the vicinity of the Arundel and Portsmouth canal. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Chichester; rated at £7 15s., in the parliamentary returns at £60; gross income £67; in the patronage of the bishop of Chichester. Pop., in 1801, 124; in 1831, 148. A. P. £1,579. Poor rates, in 1837, £86.

BARNHAM-BROOM, a parish in the hund. of Forehoe, Norfolk; 4½ miles north-west of Wymondham. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Norfolk and dio. of Norwich; rated at £12 8s. 1½d.; gross income £540; united with the vicarage of Kemberley, and, in 1835, in the patronage of Lord Woodhouse. There are a daily and a Sunday school here. Pop., in 1801, 307; in 1831, 463. Houses 89. Acres 1870. A. P. £2,533. Poor rates, in 1837, £242.

BARNHILL, a hamlet in the parish of Malpas, co. palatine of Chester; 10 miles south-east of Chester. The petty-sessions for the hundred are held here.

BARNINGHAM, a parish in the hund. of Blackbourn, union of Thetford, county of Suffolk; 8½ miles south-west of East Harling. Living, a discharged rectory, united with that of Coney-Weston, formerly in the archd. of Sudbury and dio. of Norwich; rated at £13 9s. 2d.; gross income £800; in 1835, in the patronage of the incumbent, the Rev. George Hunt. There are two Sunday schools here, and a Wesleyan Methodist chapel. Pop., in 1801, 316; in 1831, 514. Houses 53. Acres 1,520. A. P. £2,360. Poor rates, in 1837, £140.

BARNINGHAM, a parish in the western division of the wapentake of Gilling, north riding of Yorkshire; 6 miles north-west of Richmond, on the post-road to Brough. It includes the townships of Barningham, Hope, and Scargill. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Richmond and dio. of Chester; rated at £19 17s. 1d., in the parliamentary returns at £120; gross income £643; in the patronage of the Crown. There are two daily and two day and Sunday National schools here, one of which is endowed with land, and has a small library attached. The parish lies on the border of Arkingarth forest. Pop. of the parish, in 1831, 550; of the township, in 1801, 323; in 1831, 396. Houses 105. Acres 1,093. A. P. £3,623. Poor rates, in 1837, £212.

BARNINGHAM (Little), a parish in the hund. of South Erpingham, Norfolk; 5 miles north-west of Ayleham. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. of Norfolk and dio. of Norwich; rated at £5 15s. 2½d.; gross income £160. Patrons, in 1835, G. T. and T. L. Grover, and G. B. Knight. A market and fair were formerly held here, under a charter granted by Edward I. to Walter de Barmingham, lord of the manor. Pop., in 1801, 179; in 1831, 227. Houses 51. Acres 1,900. A. P. £994. Poor rates, in 1837, £207.

BARNINGHAM-NORWOOD, a parish in the hund. and union of North Erpingham, county of Norfolk; 4½ miles east by south of Holt. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. of Norfolk and dio. of Norwich; rated at £6 13s. 4d.; gross income £161. Patron, in 1835, Admiral Wynyham. Pop., in 1801, 56; in 1831, 42. Houses 7. Acres 810. A. P. £754. Poor rates, in 1837, £42.

BARNINGHAM-WINTER, a parish in the hund. and union of North Erpingham, county of Norfolk; 5½ miles south-east of Holt. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. of Norfolk and dio. of Norwich; rated at £6 13s. 4d.; gross income £135; in 1835, in the patronage of J. T. Mott, Esq. There is a Sunday school here. In the reign of Edward II., Roger le Curzain obtained a grant of a market and fair for this parish, but both have fallen into disuse. Pop., in 1801, 75; in 1831, 114. Houses 17. Acres 860. A. P. £803. Poor rates, in 1837, £161.

BARNOLDBY-LE-BECK, a parish in the wapentake of Bradley-Haverstoe, parts of Lindsey, union of Caistor, county of Lincoln; 6 miles south-west of Grimsby. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Lincoln; rated at £14 13s. 4d.; gross income £150; and in the patronage of the collegiate church of Southwell. Tithes commuted in 1769. There are a daily and a Sunday school here, and two alms-houses, with an endowment of £10 per annum. Pop., in 1801, 188; in 1831, 232. Houses 37. Acres 1,460. A. P. £1,348. Poor rates, in 1837, £201.

BARNOLDWICK, a parish in the eastern division of the wapentake of Staincliffe and Eweross, west riding, county of York; 5 miles north of Colne, near the Leeds and Liverpool canal. It comprises the townships of Barnoldwick, Brogden, Coates, and Satterforth. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. and dio. of York, in the peculiar jurisdiction of the lord of the manor; rated at £5 8s. 4d., and in the parliamentary returns at £62 9s. 6d.; and in 1835, in the patronage of Sir J. L. Kaye, Bart. The church formerly went by the name of Gill-Kirk, from its standing on the verge of a deep glen. In 1147, an abbey was founded here, but, in consequence of disagreements between the abbot and monks, and the rector and parishioners, it was removed to Kirkstall. The Baptists had a chapel here since 1668. Besides a daily school there are two Sunday schools here. Pop. of township, in 1801, 769; in 1831, 1,682; and of parish, in 1831, 2,724. Houses 496. Acres 6,040. A. P. £7,306. Poor rates, in 1837, £418.

BARNSHAW, a hamlet in the chapelry of Goostrey, parish of Sandbach, hund. of Northwich, co. palatine of Chester; $5\frac{1}{2}$ miles south-east of Nether Knutsford, on the line of the Manchester and Sheffield railway. Pop. returned with Goostrey.

BARNSELEY, a parish in the hund. of Brightwell's Barrow, union of Cirencester, county of Gloucester; 4 miles east-north-east of Cirencester. Living, a rectory in the dio. of Gloucester and Bristol, within the peculiar jurisdiction of the vicar of Bibury; valued at £13 15s. 5d.; and in 1829, in the patronage of the Misses Perrot. There are a Sunday and two daily schools here, and a Roman Catholic chapel. There are several small charities in this parish producing about £18 annually. Pop., in 1821, 271; in 1831, 318. Houses 70. Acres 2,050. A. P. £2,578. Poor rates, in 1837, £169.

BARNSELEY. See BARNESLEY.

BARNSTAPLE, a port, borough, market-town, and parish, in the hund. of Brainton, union of Barnstaple, county of Devon; 192 miles west by south of London, and 37 north-west of Exeter. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Barnstaple and dio. of Exeter; valued at £15 8s. 9d.; gross income £373. Patron, in 1835, Lord Wharnccliffe. The church is a spacious ancient structure, with a spire. The Baptists, Independents, and Wesleyan Methodists, have places of worship here. The first Baptist church was formed in 1817; the second in 1835; the Independent church in 1705; and the Wesleyan Methodist in 1811: the last two are licensed under the new marriage act. There is a free grammar-school here, which was founded and endowed, in 1649, by Richard Ferris, to which a small annuity was given in 1760 by the Rev. John Wright. The management is vested in the corporation, by whom the master is appointed. The school is an ancient building in the churchyard, part of the old Cluniac monastery to be afterwards noticed. In this school were educated John Jewel, bishop of Salisbury, and his great polemical opponent, Thomas Harding, the Jesuit professor at Louvain; the poet Gay—who was born in the vicinity—and the learned Dr Musgrove. A charity school, in which 50 boys are clothed and educated, was founded here in 1710, and derives its revenue from lands purchased with several benefactions, amounting, in 1821, to an annual income of £130. The trustees of this school have also the management of a charity school, endowed for 20 girls in 1659. Two annual sums of £4 were bequeathed in 1810 to two dissenting schoolmistresses for teaching poor children to read. There are 17 daily and 6 Sunday schools here. A mechanics' institute was formed here in 1826; and a dispensary instituted in 1832. In 1824, an alma-house, entitled Litchdon alma-house, was founded and endowed by John Penrose, Esq., with property yielding an annual rental, in 1822, of £228. The house is a large building, with a garden and chapel, and 20 separate dwelling-houses, each containing two almoners. Other alma-houses, are Horwood's, for 16 persons, founded in 1665; Paige's, founded in 1646 for 8 poor; and Harris's, in 1646. Besides these there are numerous bequests to the poor, one of which, Cornish's gift, yielded above £70 per annum. "Johel filius Aluredi, (earl of Brittany,) or Johel of Totness, founded here," according to Taurer, "a priory of five or six Cluniac monks, in the time of William the Conqueror, or in the succeeding reign, to the honour of St Mary Magdalene. This was at first a cell to the abbey of St Martin de Campia at Paris, but was afterwards made denizen, and continued till the general suppression, when it was valued at £159 13s. 3d. It was granted, 29th Hen. VIII., to William, Lord Howard, and Margaret his wife. Here were also an hospital to the Holy Trinity, and an house of Friars Austine."

Barnstaple is said to have been erected into a borough by Athelstan, who built a castle here at the junction of the Taw with the Yeo, of which no vestiges now remain except the artificial mount on which it stood. In the Conqueror's reign it had 40 burgesses within borough, and 9 without. It was incorporated by Henry I.; and its privileges were confirmed in 20th James I., and 17th Charles I. It was formerly a place of considerable trade. In 1588, it fitted out three ships for the fleet raised to repel the Spanish armada; and, during the parliamentary wars, it was distinguished for its opposition to the royal cause. The town is situated about 6 miles from the mouth of the Taw, on the eastern bank of the river, over which there is a stone-bridge of sixteen arches, in a pleasant valley bounded by a semicircular range of hills, to which the river forms a chord. The streets are regular, and lighted with gas; and, generally speaking, it is one of the most agreeable towns in the county.—There is a considerable trade carried on, though much less than formerly, in consequence of the obstruction which has been long arising to the navigation by the accumulation of sand in the river, which would here form a magnificent harbour but for this obstacle. The trade consists chiefly in the importation of wood from North America and the Baltic, and lime from Wales, and in coasting traffic with the various ports in the Bristol channel. Some years ago the town received the privilege of bonding wine, spirits, and articles of colonial produce. The chief local trade is that of malting. The most important manufactures are those of serge and shalloons, and patent lace; there are several tanyards, an ironfoundry, and extensive works for the manufacture of coarse pottery, bricks, and tiles. Fishing nets, woven in the loom, are also made here. Lead-ore has been found in the neighbourhood, and limestone is abundant. The weekly market is held on Friday, and is celebrated for extensive dealings in corn and provisions. There is a fair for horses, cattle, and sheep, on the 19th of September, and great markets are on the 21st of April, and the second Friday in December: a cattle-market is held monthly. There is a branch of the National Provincial bank of England here; also of the west of England and South-Wales District bank; and a private bank of Draka, Gubble, & Co. Previous to the late Municipal act, the government was vested in a mayor, a high steward, a recorder, a senior and a junior alderman, and 23 common councilmen. It is now governed by a mayor, 6 aldermen, and 18 councillors; and is divided into two wards. Its expenditure, in 1837, amounted to £1,374, being an excess of £669 above its income, which arises chiefly from rents and redeemed land-tax, and tolls and dues. The town's common extends to 108 acres. It was enclosed by act of 26th Geo. III. Barnstaple has had a commission of the peace granted, and a court of quarter-sessions and recorder appointed. Petty-sessions for the division of Braunton are held here every Tuesday. There is a court-leet for the hundred of Basingstoke, having jurisdiction over 19 tythings. The limits of the borough are co-extensive with those of the town and parish. The courts are held in the guild-hall, a handsome building, erected by the corporation in 1812. In 1821, an act was obtained for enlarging the market-place, and a new and commodious town-hall has been erected; the expense of these improvements was £8,125. A new prison has been erected here on the improved plan; it contains 20 cells. The town has returned two members to parliament since the 23^d Edward I. The mayor is the returning officer. It is also a polling-place for the members for South Devon. Pop., in 1801, 3,748; in 1831, 6,840. The increase of population is attributable to the establishment of three lace manufactures in the neighbourhood. Houses 1,081. Acres 3,970. A. P. £11,362. Poor rates, in 1837, £1,281. There are penny-posts to Newport, Pilton, and Swinebridge.

BARNSTON, a township in the parish of Woodchurch, co.-palatine of Chester; 4 miles north of Great Neston. There is a tunnel here 550 yards in length, through which the Grand Trunk canal passes. Pop., in 1801, 129; in 1831, 112. Houses 25. Acres 1,130. A. P. £1,098. Parochial rates expended, in 1837, £12.

BARNSTON, or BIRNSTON, a parish in the hund. of Dunmow, Essex; 2 miles south-east of Dunmow. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Middlesex and dio. of London; valued at £13; gross income £336. Patron, in 1835, N. R. Toke, Esq. There is a Sunday school here. Pop., in 1801, 186; in 1831, 215. Houses 42. Acres 2,770. A. P. £1,697. Poor rates, in 1837, £284.

BARNTON, a township in the parish of Great Budworth, co.-palatine of Chester; 2 miles north-west of Northwich. There are a Sunday and two daily schools here. Pop., in 1801, 402; in 1831, 730. Houses 130. Acres 630. A. P. £1,505. Poor rates, in 1837, £254.

BARNWELL, a parish in the hund. of Flendish, county of Cambridge, adjoining the town of Cambridge. Here was formerly an abbey, built by Sir Payne Peverell, standard-bearer to Robert, duke of Normandy, of which the chapel alone remains entire, and is used for religious service. The Baptists and Wesleyans have places of worship here. A church was erected here by the parliamentary commissioners in 1837-9: it is in the Gothic style, and accommodates 1,408. Cost £6,879. A great annual fair, called Sturbridge fair, is held here for fourteen days. It was originally granted by King John for the benefit of an hospital of lepers. It is proclaimed on the 18th of September by the vice-chancellor of the university, and afterwards by the corporation. "The original is thought to be casual," say the editors of the 'Magna Britannia,' published in 1788. "A clothier of Kendal having wetted his cloth in this brook, (the Sture,) exposed it to sale, as not fit for his London market, whither he was going, and found he got so well by it, that he, and some other of his townsmen, came the next year with more cloths, for which they had so good a market, that they kept coming annually, and brought other trades to accompany them, till it became such a fair as now it is. It lasts fourteen days, and vast quantities of goods are there sold. Bury fair is thought to excel it in fineness of company; and Bristol and Way-hill fairs to equal, if not surpass, it in merchandises and goods; but take it altogether, as it affords both pleasure and profit, no fair is to be equalled to it in England, nor perhaps in Europe; though it were to be wished, that the many incentives to vice, which are there found, were more carefully banished, though the fair were lessened.' The village was burned down in 1731; but a more deplorable accident happened here four years before, viz. on the 8th of September, 1727:—"A multitude of people being assembled in a barn to see a puppet-show, it was set on fire by a villain who was denied admittance; and the spectators crowding to the door, which was made fast, it was so long ere it was opened, and especially as it turned inwards, that the people tumbled over one another in getting out. During this the roof fell in, by which numbers were smothered, while the fire was burning many more: so that not above five or six escaped out of sixscore men, women and children; among whom were several young gentlewomen of fortune. Many of the dead were so disfigured and mangled that they could not be distinguished by their friends, who came next day to remove them for interment, and therefore they were promiscuously put into a large hole dug for the purpose in the churchyard." ['England's Gazetteer, 1751.] Pop., in 1821, 411.

BARNWELL-ALL-SAINTS, or KING'S BARNWELL, a parish belonging to the hund. of Huxloe, but situated in that of Polebrook, union of Oundle, Northamptonshire; 3 miles south-east of Oundle, in the neighbourhood of Lilford-hall. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Northampton and dio. of Peterborough; valued at £15 6s. 8d.; and, in 1835, in the patronage of Lord Montague. In 1821, this rectory was united by act of parliament to that of Barnwell-St-Andrews. Pop., in 1801, 86; in 1831, 126. Houses 26. Acres 1,680. A. P. £1,598. Poor rates, in 1837, £89.

BARNWELL-ST-ANDREWS, a parish in the hund. of Polebrooke, union of Oundle, Northamptonshire; 2 miles south-east of Oundle. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Northampton and dio. of Peterborough; rated at £17 2s.; gross income, with Barnwell-All-Saints, £480. Patron, in 1835, Lord Montague. Tithes commuted in 11^o George IV. The church is an ancient structure, with a tower and spire. Here are almshouses for fourteen aged and infirm persons. For this and the above parish, there are two endowed day and Sunday schools, in which 123 children are taught. 'Parson Latham's hospital' in this parish, for a warden and 11 poor, was founded in 2^o James I. In Camden's time there was a castle here. Pop., in 1801, 154; in 1831, 284. Houses 51. Acres 1,740. A. P. £1,979. Poor rates, in 1837, £78.

BARNWOOD, a parish in the upper division of the hund. of Dudstone and King's Barton, union and county of Gloucester; 1½ mile east-south-east of Gloucester. Living, a curacy not in charge, in the archd. of Gloucester and dio. of Gloucester and Bristol; gross income £195; in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Gloucester. There is a day and Sunday school here, with a small endowment. This parish is intersected by the Roman fosse road, and by the Gloucester and Cheltenham railway. Pop. in 1801, 309; in 1831, 419. Houses 81. Acre 1,150. A. P. £2,699. Poor rates, in 1837, £193.

BARONS PARK. See DESFORD.

BARONY, a township in the parish of Auckland-St-Andrew, co.-palatine of Durham. Pop., in 1821, 479. Houses 221. Acres 3,480.

BARR (GREAT), a chapelry in the parish of Aldridge, county of Stafford; 5 miles south-east of Walsall. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. of Stafford and dio. of Lichfield and Coventry; rated at £20; and, in 1835, in the patronage of Sir E. D. Scott, Bart. See ALDRIDGE. There are here two daily schools, one of which is supported by an endowment from — Addyes,—a day and boarding school, and a day and Sunday National school,—the latter of which is supported by the lady of Sir E. D. Scott. The petty-sessions for the hundred of Offlow are held here and at Handsworth. Pop., in 1801, 756; in 1831, 859. Houses 146. Acres 4,960. A. P. £6,845. Poor rates, in 1837, £273.

BARR-PERRY. See HANDSWORTH.

BARBASFORD, a township in the parish of Chollerton, Northumberland; $6\frac{1}{4}$ miles north of Hexham. Robert de Umfraville obtained of Edward I. license for a weekly market here, but it has been long since disused. Pop., in 1801, 169; in 1831, 232. Houses 51. Acreage and poor rates with the parish.

BARRAWAY, a hamlet in the parish of Soham, Cambridgeshire; $3\frac{1}{4}$ miles east of Ely, near the river Cam. It is a chapelry to the vicarage of Soham: which see. Pop. returned with the parish.

BARRINGTON, a parish in the hund. of Wetherley, union of Royston, county of Cambridge; $6\frac{1}{4}$ miles south-west of Cambridge. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Ely; valued at £7 14s. 4d., and in the parliamentary returns at £120 19s. 8d.; gross income, with Hauton and Newton, £107; tithes commuted in 1796. The town and church-estates in this parish produce a yearly revenue of £32 15s.; in the patronage of the master and fellows of Trinity college, Cambridge. There is an independent chapel here. Here are two daily schools, towards the support of one of which the master and fellows of Trinity college contribute £6 per annum, and a Sunday school. Pop., in 1801, 348; in 1831, 485. Houses 70. Acres 2,129. A. P. £2,067. Poor rates, in 1837, £480.

BARRINGTON, a parish in the southern division of the hund. of Petherton, union of Langport, Somersetshire; $3\frac{1}{4}$ miles north-east of Ilminster. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. of Taunton and dio. of Bath and Wells; rated at £15, and in the parliamentary returns at £69; gross income £84; in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Bristol. There are a daily and a Sunday school here. Hemp and flax are cultivated extensively in this parish. Pop., in 1801, 374; in 1831, 468. Houses 75. Acres 1,520. A. P. £2,854. Poor rates, in 1837, £177.

BARRINGTON (GREAT), a parish, partly in the hund. of Farringdon, union of Stow-on-the-Wold, Berks, and partly in the lower division of the hundred of Slaughter, Gloucestershire; 4 miles north-west of Burford. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Gloucester and dio. of Gloucester and Bristol; valued at £7 6s. 8d.; gross income £222; in 1835, in the patronage of Lord Dynevor. Tithes commuted in 1759. The church stands in the county of Gloucester, and is a handsome building, with a tower terminating in battlements and pinnacles. It is supposed to have been erected in the time of Henry VII. There are here three daily and two Sunday schools. In 1783, Mary, countess of Talbot, bequeathed £400 to the poor of this parish. There are a few other small charities. Here are quarries of excellent freestone, which was used in the reparation of Westminster abbey and erection of Blenheim house. Pop., in 1801, 348; in 1831, 532. Houses 112. Acres 2,580. A. P. £1,297. Poor rates, in 1837, £252.

BARRINGTON (LITTLE), a parish in the lower division of the hund. of Slaughter, county of Gloucester; 3 miles north-west of Burford. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Gloucester and dio. of Gloucester and Bristol; valued at £4 19s. 3d., and in the parliamentary returns at £130; gross income £100; in the patronage of the Crown. Besides an infant school, there are a daily and a Sunday school. There are some small bequests to the poor, and for repairing the church. Pop., in 1801,

140; in 1831, 162. Houses 34. Acres 1,780. A. P. £1,274. Poor rates, in 1837, £127.

BARROW (THE), a river in Westmoreland, falling into the Burbeck, near Howsehouse.

BARROW-ON-TRENT, a parish, partly in the hund. of Appletree, and partly in the hund. of Morleston and Litchurch, union of Shardlow, county of Derby; 6 miles south of Derby, and in the vicinity of the Grand Trunk canal, which intersects the parish. Living, a discharged vicarage, to which is annexed the chapelry of Twyford, in the archd. of Derby and dio. of Lichfield and Coventry; valued at £5 6s. 5d., and in the parliamentary returns at £120; gross income £105. Patron, in 1835, J. Beaumont, Esq. Tithes commuted in 1787. There are a daily and a Sunday school here, the former of which has a small endowment. Pop., in 1801, 268; in 1831, 294, exclusive of the portion which lies in the hundred of Appletree, consisting of the chapelry of Twyford, and the liberty of Synfin. Houses 56. Acres 1,190. A. P. £4,949. Poor rates, in 1837, £163.

BARROW, a hamlet in the parish of Boddington, county of Gloucester; 4 miles north-west of Cheltenham. Pop. returned with the parish.

BARROW, a township in the parish of Hallystone, Northumberland; 22 miles west by south of Alnwick. Pop., in 1801, 19; in 1831, 14. Houses 2. Acreage with the parish. Poor rates, in 1837, £10.

BARROW, or BARK, a hamlet in the parish of Cottesmere, county of Rutland; 6 miles north by east of Oakham, in the neighbourhood of the Melton-Mowbray and Oakham canal. Pop., in 1801, 129; in 1831, 144. Houses 24. Acreage with the parish. A. P. £1,380. Poor rates, in 1837, £27.

BARROW, a parochial chapelry in the hund. of Wenlock, county of Salop; $3\frac{1}{4}$ miles east by south of Much-Wenlock. Living, a curacy, annexed to the rectory of Willey, in the archd. of Salop and dio. of Hereford; rated at £3 13s. Patron, in 1835, Lord Forrester. There is a daily school here, endowed by Mr John Slaney, about 1618, for the instruction of 20 boys, and an almshouse for six poor persons. Pop., in 1801, 479; in 1831, 351. Houses 76. Acres 2,290. A. P. £2,106. Poor rates, in 1837, £475.

BARROW, a parish in the hund. and union of Thingoe, county of Suffolk; 6 miles west of Bury St Edmunds. Living, a rectory, formerly in the archd. of Sudbury and dio. of Norwich, now in the diocese of Ely; rated at £23 9s. 9d.; gross income £720; in the patronage of St John's college, Cambridge. Besides a boarding school, there are four daily and two Sunday schools here. Charities connected with the parish produce about £12 per annum. A fair is held here on May 1. Pop., in 1801, 614; in 1831, 856. Houses 94. Acres 2,810. A. P. £3,726. Poor rates, in 1837, £499.

BARROW (GREAT), a parish and township in the second division of the hund. of Eddisbury, union of Great Broughton, co.-palatine of Chester; 5 miles east-north-east of Chester. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Chester; rated at £19 6s. 5d.; gross income £340. Patron, in 1835, Lord H. Cholmondeley. There are a daily and a Sunday school here. Tanner says: "Robert de Bachiping having given, in the reign of Henry II., the church of this place to the Knights-Hospitallers of St John of Jerusalem, here was settled a preceptory of that order, which, with Iveley in Derbyshire, was valued 26th Henry VIII., at £107 3s. 8d." The parish, which includes the additional township of Little Barrow, contained in 1801, 501 inhabitants; and in 1831, 678. Houses 77. Acres 1,210. A. P. £4,504. Poor rates, in 1837, £449.

BARROW-GURNEY, a parish in the hund. of Hartcliffe, with Bedminster, union of Bedminster, county of Somerset; $5\frac{1}{2}$ miles south-west of Bristol, in the vicinity of the Bristol and Exeter railway. Living, a donative curacy; rated at £36. Patron, in 1835, Montague Gore, Esq. There are here a Sunday and two daily schools. Pop., in 1831, 279. Houses 44. Acres 2,130. A. P. £3,131. Poor rates, in 1837, £73. See BARROW-MINCHIN.

BARROW-UPON-HUMBER, a parish in the northern division of the wapentake of Yarborough, parts of Lindsey, union of Glandford-Brigg, county of Lincoln; 8 miles north of Glandford-Brigg. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Lincoln; rated at £9 16s.; gross income £357; and in the patronage of the Crown. There are a Sunday school and eleven daily schools here. The tithes of this parish, the property of the Crown, the trustees of the lectureship of Barrow, and the lay-impropriator and vicar, were commuted in 1797. About a mile to the north-west of the village, is an extensive intrenchment commonly called the Castle, supposed to be the site of an ancient British camp. According to Tanner: "Wulpher, king of the Mercians, gave to that pious man Cead or Chad, about the middle of the seventh century, the land of fifty families, as Bede tells us, to build a monastery at a place called Al Barwe, i. e. 'at the wood,' in the province of Lindsey; some appearance of which, Bede saith, remained in his time." Pop., in 1801, 926; in 1831, 1,334. Houses 221. Acres 4,620. A. P. £6,742. Poor rates, in 1837, £726.

BARROW-MINCHIN, a hamlet in the parish of Barrow-Gurney, Somersetshire. "A Benedictine nunnery, dedicated to St Mary and St Edwin, founded by Gurney, lord of Stoke Hamden, before A.D. 1200. The revenues of this small priory were valued at £29 6s. 8d. The site was granted, 36th Henry VIII. to William Clerk, and made a fair dwelling-place by Drewe of Brightstow." Tanner's Not. Mon.

BARROW (NORTH), a parish in the hund. of Catsash, union of Wincanton, county of Somerset; 3 miles south-west of Castle-Carey. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. of Wells and dio. of Bath and Wells; rated at £7 17s. 8d.; gross income £160. Patron, in 1835, E. B. Portman, Esq. There are an infant and a Sunday school here. Pop., in 1801, 101; in 1831, 150. Houses 30. Acres 970. A. P. £1,342. Poor rates, in 1837, £61.

BARROW (SOUTH), a parochial chapelry in the hund. of Catsash, union of Wincanton, county of Somerset; 4 miles south-west of Castle-Carey. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. of Wells and dio. of Bath and Wells; rated at £10, in the parliamentary returns at £70; gross income £80. Patroness, in 1835, Mrs Toogood. There is a Sunday school here, supported by E. B. Portman, Esq. Pop., in 1801, 122; in 1831, 139. Houses 24. Acres 560. A. P. £1,179. Poor rates, in 1837, £45.

BARROW-UPON-SOAR, a parish in the east hund. of Goscote, union of Barrow-upon-Soar, county of Leicester; 2 miles north of Mount Sorrel. The Leicester canal and Midland Counties railway pass through this parish. It contains the township of Barrow-on-Soar, and the chapelries of Quorndon, Mount-Sorrel, and Woodhouse. Living, a vicarage in the archd. of Leicester and dio. of Lincoln; rated at £15 2s. 8d.; gross income £326; in the patronage of the master and fellows of St. John's college, Cambridge. There are here a grammar-school, endowed with about £100 per annum, and three Sunday schools. The great and small tithes of the Liberty were commuted in 1760. The village is intersected by the railway. It contained, in 1801, 1,090 inhabitants; and in 1831, 1,638. A workhouse has been erected here by the poor-law commissioners, for the union of Barrow-on-Soar, at an expense of £6,400 0s. 6d., capable of accommodating 300 persons. In 1686, an almshouse for six poor widows, or aged bachelors, was founded here by the Rev. Humphrey Babington, and endowed with an estate which, in 1786, produced £200 per annum. A rent charge of £2 was bequeathed for the benefit of eight poor house-keepers in this parish, by the bishop of St Asaph, Dr Wm. Beveridge, who was born here in 1638. Pop. of the parish, in 1821, 5,560; in 1831, 6,254. Houses 1,271. Acres 7,950. A. P. £6,145. Poor rates, in 1837, £931.

BARROWBY, a parish in the wapentake of Winnibriggs and Threo, parts of Kesteven, union of Grantham, county of Lincoln; $1\frac{1}{4}$ mile west of Grantham. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Lincoln; rated at £31 1s. 5d.; gross income £1,160. The great and small tithes, the property of the clerical rector, were commuted in 1762. Patron, in 1835, the duke of Devonshire. There are a Sunday school and four daily schools here. Pop., in 1801, 465; in 1831, 687. Houses 125. Acres 4,010. A. P. £6,936. Poor rates, in 1837, £271.

BARROWBY, a township in the parish of Leak, north riding, county of York; 5 miles north of Thirsk. There are two daily schools and a Sunday school here. Pop., in 1801, 251; in 1831, 350. Houses 86. Acres 1,280. A. P. £1,405. Poor rates, in 1837, £98.

BARROWDEN, a parish in the hund. of Wrangdike, union of Uppingham, county of Rutland; 6 miles east of Uppingham, on the banks of the Welland. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Northampton and dio. of Peterborough; rated at £14 13s. 1d.; gross income £510. Patron, in 1835, the marquiss of Exeter. There are two daily and three Sunday schools here. Pop., in 1801, 511; in 1831, 465. Houses 113. Acres 1,530. A. P. £2,100. Poor rates, in 1837, £235.

BARROWFORD, a township in the parish of Whalley, co.-palatine of Lancaster; 2 miles west of Colne. There are four daily schools, besides an infant and a Sunday school here. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in various cotton-factories in the vicinity. A congregation of Wesleyan Methodists was formed here in 1802. Pop., in 1801, 1,224; in 1831, 2,633. Houses 479. Acres 1,540. A. P. £3,687. Poor rates, including those of Colne, in 1837, £595.

BARRY, a parish, with a village of the same name, in the hund. of Dinas-Powis, union of Cardiff, county of Glamorgan, South Wales; 9 miles south-west of Cardiff. It lies on the British channel, and comprehends about 430 acres of land. Living, a rectory not in charge, in the dio. of Llandaff; rated at £26, in the parliamentary returns at £68; gross income £87. Patron, in 1835, W. Romilly, Esq. Pop., in 1801, 70; in 1831, 72. Houses 12. A. P. £645. Poor rates, in 1837, £16.

BARRY ISLE, a small island in the parish of Barry, and considered part of the hund. of Dinas-Powis, county of Glamorgan, South Wales. It is situated in the Bristol channel, opposite to the village of Barry, and separated from the shore by a narrow channel which is passable for carriages at low water. It comprises about 300 acres, and abounds with rabbits. In the centre of the island there was formerly a chapel; and the ruins of another are discoverable at low water. It is supposed that the noble family of Barry, in Ireland, took their name from this islet.

BARSBY, a chapelry in the parish of Ashby-Folville, county of Leicester. There are two daily schools here. Pop., in 1801, 202; in 1831, 230.

Houses 56. Acres 1,030. A. P. £1,629. Poor rates, in 1837, £106.

BARSHAM, a parish in the hund. and union of Wangford, county of Suffolk; 2 miles west of Beccles, near the river Waversey. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Suffolk and dio. of Norwich; rated at £15 6s. 8d.; gross income £533. Patron, in 1835, Rev. A. F. Suckling. There is a Sunday school here. In the village was born Dr Laurence Eachard, divine and historian. Pop., in 1801, 162; in 1831, 182. Houses 35. Acres 1,470. A. P. £1,962. Poor rates, in 1837, £219.

BARSHAM (EAST), a parish in the hund. of Gallow, union of Walsingham, county of Norfolk; 2½ miles north of Fakenham. Living, a discharged vicarage, united with the rectory of Little Snoring; rated at £6 13s. 4d.; gross income £666. Patron, in 1835, Sir Jacob Astley, Bart. There are two daily schools here. Pop., in 1801, 180; in 1831, 219. Houses 43. Acres 1,230. A. P. £1,482. Poor rates, in 1837, £133.

BARSHAM (NORTH), a parish in the hund. of Gallow, union of Walsingham, county of Norfolk; 2 miles south-west of New Walsingham. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. of Norfolk and dio. of Norwich; rated at £6; gross income £236. Patron, in 1835, Earl of Orford. Pop., in 1801, 44; in 1831, 84. Houses 12. Acres 710. A. P. £1,299. Poor rates, in 1837, £69.

BARSHAM (WEST), a parish in the hund. of Gallow, union of Walsingham, county of Norfolk; 3 miles north-west of Fakenham, on the post-road to Wells. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Norfolk and dio. of Norwich; rated at £5 12s. 1d.; gross income £165. Patron, in 1835, C. M. Balders, Esq. Pop., in 1801, 36; in 1831, 101. Houses 15. Acres 1,380. A. P. £2,245. Poor rates, in 1837, £75.

BARSTABLE HUNDRED, Essex.

BARSTON. See BARFRESTON.

BARSTON, a parish in the Solihull division of the hund. of Hemlingford, union of Solihull, county of Warwick; 11 miles north-north-west of Warwick. Living, a perpetual curacy not in charge, formerly in the archd. of Coventry and dio. of Lichfield and Coventry, now in the dio. of Worcester, annexed to the rectory of Berkswell, and in the peculiar jurisdiction of the lord of the manor. There are a daily and two Sunday schools here. Charities connected with the parish produce £7 14s. per annum. Pop., in 1801, 361; in 1831, 342. Houses 64. Acres 1,990. A. P. £3,287. Poor rates, in 1837, £124.

BARSTREE, a chapelry in the parish of Dormington, hund. of Greytree, county of Hereford; 4 miles east of Hereford, on the post-road to Ledbury. Living, a perpetual curacy not in charge, united with the vicarage of Dormington in the archd. and dio. of Hereford; rated at £4 9s. Patron, the vicar of Dormington. Pop., in 1801, 48; in 1831, 50. Houses 10. Acres 250. A. P. £215. Poor rates, in 1837, £52.

BARTHERTON, a township in the parish of Wybunbury, co.-palatine of Chester; 2 miles south-east of Nantwich, on the post-road to Stafford. Pop., in 1801, 25; in 1831, 34. Houses 3. Acres 270. A. P. £711. Poor rates, in 1837, £46.

BARTHOLOMEW-HOSPITAL (ST), an extra-parochial liberty in the lower division of the hund. of Eastry, lathes of St Augustine, county of Kent, in the immediate vicinity of the town of Sandwich. It takes its name from an hospital, thus described by Tanner:—"Here is an hospital dedicated to St Bartholomew, which was founded by Thomas Crompthon, Esq., and Maud his wife, who was of the family of Sandwich, about A. D. 1190, for a master, brethren and sisters, and three priests, whereof one was to be prior. Sir Henry Sandwich, Lord Warden of the Cinque ports, increased the revenues, that here might be maintained twelve brethren and four sisters. It was returned, A. D. 1562, to be endowed with £40 per annum. It is yet in being for six poor men and as many women, who have each a house and garden, and a handsome allowance, and is under the care and government of the mayor and jurates of Sandwich." Pop., in 1801, 49; in 1831, 52. Houses 18.

BARTHOLOMEW (ST) HYDE, a parish, partly in the city of Winchester, and partly in the liberty of Soke, union of New Winchester, county of Southampton, adjacent to the north side of the city of Winchester. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Winchester; rated at £10; gross income £88; in the patronage of the Crown. Here was anciently one of the mitred parliamentary abbeyes, a small portion of the building of which still remains. In Tanner's Not. Mon. it is thus spoken of:—"King Alfred founded here first only a house and chapel for the learned monk Grimbald, whom he had brought out of Flanders, but afterwards projected, and by his will, ordered a noble church, or religious house, to be built in the cemetery, on the north side of the old minster, or cathedral, and designed that Grimbald should preside over it. This was begun in 901, and finished to the honour of the Holy Trinity, Virgin Mary, and St Peter, by his son, King Edward, who placed therein secular canons; but, in 963, they were expelled, and an abbot and monks put into possession by the often mentioned Bishop Ethelwold. Now the churches and habitations of these two societies being so very near together, the differences which were occasioned by their singing, bells, and other matters, arose to so great a height, that the religious of the new monastery thought fit, about the year 1110, to remove to a better and more quiet situation without the walls, on the north part of the city, called Hyde, where Henry I., at the instance of William Gifford, bishop of Winchester, founded a stately abbey for them. St Peter was generally accounted patron, though it is sometimes called the monastery of St Grimbald, and sometimes of St Barnabas. It was valued, before the dissolution, at £865 1s. 3d., and the site was granted, 37° Henry VIII., to Richard Bethell." Charities connected with this parish produce about £23 per annum. Pop., in 1801, 700; in 1831, 744. Houses 108. A. P. £542. Poor rates, in 1837, £359.

BARTHOMLEY, a parish in the hund. of Nantwich, union of Congleton, co.-palatine of Chester, extending into the northern division of the hundred of Firehill, county of Stafford; 6 miles south by east of Sandbach. In the county of Chester, it comprises the chapelries of Alsager and Haslington, and the townships of Barthomley and Crewe; and in the county of Stafford, the township of Batterley. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Chester, rated at £95 7s. 1d.; gross income £929. Patrons, in 1835, the trustees of the late Lord Crewe. The church is an old building, the nave of which has a richly carved wooden roof, put up in 1589. Here is a school with an endowment of £10 per annum, in which six boys are educated gratuitously. The other charities connected with the parish, and in which all the townships share, produce £20 10s. per annum. Pop. of the parish, in 1801, 1,662; of the township, 184; in 1831, 2,523 and 449. Houses 462 and 82. Acres 11,600 and 2,240. A. P. £13,132 and £2,745. Poor rates of the township, in 1837, £203.

BARTHORPE, a township with Acklam, partly in the liberty of St Peter of York, and partly in the parish of Acklam, wapentake of Buckrose, east riding of the county of York; $9\frac{1}{2}$ miles south by west of New Malton. Pop. returned with Acklam.

BARTINGTON, a township in the parish of Great Budworth, western division of the hund. of Bucklow, co.-palatine of Chester; 4 miles north-west of Northwich. There is a daily school here. Pop., in 1801, 77; in 1831, 76. Houses 15. Acres 210. A. P. £603. Poor rates, in 1837, £86.

BARTLEY-REGIS, a hamlet in the parish of Minstead, county of Southampton.

BARTLOW, a parish in the hund. of Chilford, union of Linton, county of Cambridge; 2 miles east by south of Linton. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Sudbury and dio. of Ely; rated at £19 16s. 8d.; gross income £273. Patron, in 1835, the Rev. John Ballen. Pop., in 1801, 83; in 1831, 106. Houses 19. Acres 320. A. P. £675. Poor rates, in 1837, £50.

BARTLOW-END, or STEYINGTON-END, a hamlet in the parish of Ashdon, Essex; 5 miles north-east of Saffron Walden. This is supposed to have been formerly a distinct parish. There are two daily schools here. See ASHDON. Pop., in 1801, 163; in 1831, 205. Houses 39. Acreage with the parish. Poor rates, in 1837, £159.

BARTON, a hamlet contiguous to Abingdon, in the parish of St Helens, county of Berks. Pop., in 1801, 13; in 1831, 14. House 1.

BARTON, a parish in the hund. of Wetherley, union of Chesterton, county of Cambridge; $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles south-west of Cambridge. Living, a vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Ely; rated at £8 11s. 3d., in the parliamentary returns at £125; gross income £156. Patron, the bishop of Ely. Here was formerly a rectory; but, according to Blomefield,—"the rectory was appropriated to Merton priory, the collation of the vicars being reserved to the see for the license or appropriation. The rectory was valued at £26 13s. 4d." The parish possesses an infant and a Sunday school. Pop., in 1801, 218; in 1831, 284. Houses 63. Acres 1,500. A. P. £1,107. Poor rates, in 1837, £231.

BARTON, a township in the parish of Farndon, co.-palatine of Chester; $8\frac{1}{2}$ miles south of Chester. There are a Calvinistic Methodist chapel here, and a daily school. Pop., in 1801, 143; in 1831, 168. Houses 31. Acres 490. A. P. £756. Poor rates, in 1837, £61.

BARTON, a township in the parish of Kington, county of Hereford; 1 mile north of Kington. Ger-vase of Canterbury, a monkish historian, who flourished in the time of Richard I, mentions a priory of Benedictine monks as existing in this neighbourhood. See KINGTON. Pop. and assessed property of this township, returned with the parish.

BARTON, a township in the parish of Preston, co.-palatine of Lancaster; $5\frac{1}{2}$ miles north of Preston; on the line of the Lancaster and Preston railway. There is a Sunday school here, attended by 80 children, who have the privilege of attending an endowed daily school at Broughton. Pop., in 1801, 348; in 1831, 422. Houses 66. Acres 1,510. A. P. £3,795. Poor rates, in 1837, £204.

BARTON-IN-FABIS, a parish in the northern division of the wapentake of Rushcliffe, county of Nottingham; 5 miles south-west of Nottingham; on the river Trent. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Nottingham and dio. of York; rated at £19 3s. 9d.; gross income £360; in the patronage of the archbishop of York. All the tithes of Barton and Clifton, the property of the clerical rectors, were commuted in 1759. This parish possesses a daily and a Sunday school. Pop., in 1801, 322; in 1831, 379. Houses 80. Acres 1,620. A. P. £2,047. Poor rates, in 1837, £92.

BARTON, or HIGH BARTON, a parish in West ward, union of Basford, county of Westmoreland; 13 miles west by north of Appleby. It includes the chapelries of Hartoap with Patterdale and Martin-dale, and the townships of High Barton, Low Winder, Sockbridge, and Yanwath, with Eamont Bridge. Living, a vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Carlisle; rated at £11 1s., in the parliamentary returns at £150; gross income £131. Patron, in 1835, the earl of Lonsdale. This parish possesses four daily schools, and a boarding school. Here is a free grammar-school, founded and endowed, in 1649, by Dr Lancelot Dawes and Dr Gerard Langbaine. The endowment has been subsequently augmented to about £90 per annum. Dr Langbaine, who wrote some works on history and antiquities, was born in this parish. Part of the lake of Ullswater, where the river Eamont flows from it, is in this parish. Various minerals are found in the hills; Barton-fell, in particular, contains a variety of spars and petrifactions. Pop., in 1801, 1,060; in 1831, 1,537. Houses 268. Acres £33,690. A. P. £10,565. Poor rates, in 1837, £469.

BARTON, a township in the parish of Hawks-well, north riding, county of York; 5 miles south by west of Richmond. Pop., in 1801, 91; in 1831, 104. Houses 17. Acres 1,330. A. P. £995.

BARTON-IN-THE-BEANS, a hamlet chiefly in the parish of Market-Bosworth, but extending into those of Nailstone and Shakerstone, county of Leicester; 2 miles north of Market-Bosworth. There are a Sunday and two small daily schools here. Pop., in 1821, 177; in 1831, 163. Houses 39. Acres 820. A. P. £1,164. Poor rates, in 1837, £65.

BARTON-BENDISH, a village and parish in the hund. of Clackclose, union of Downham, county of Norfolk; 4 miles north of Stoke Ferry. Living consists of two united rectories in the archd. of Norfolk and dio. of Norwich: viz. St Mary's, a discharged rectory, rated at £5 6s. 8d.; and All Saints, a discharged rectory, rated at £5 13s. 4d.; gross income £316. Patron, in 1835, Sir H. Berney. All the tithes, the property of the clerical rectors, were commuted in 1774. There is a daily school here. The name of the place was taken from a dyke, named Bendish, which the Saxons erected to mark the boundary of the hundred. In 1783, Richard Jones bequeathed £200 for the formation of a fund for the instruction of six poor children belonging to the village. Pop., in 1801, 353; in 1831, 459. Houses 79. Acres 4,390. A. P. £2,821. Poor rates, in 1837, £304.

BARTON-BLOUNT, a parish in the hund. of Appletree, county of Derby; 11 miles west of Derby. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. of Derby and dio. of Lichfield and Coventry; rated at £4 19s. 1d., in the parliamentary returns at £108. Patron, in 1835, F. Bradshaw, Esq. The parish is in the honour of Tutbury. Pop., in 1801, 61; in 1831, 60. Houses 6. Acres 1,530. A. P. £2,218. Poor rates, in 1837, £47.

BARTON-IN-THE-CLAY, a parish in the hund. of Flitt, union of Luton, county of Bedford; $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles south of Silsoe. Living, a rectory, formerly in the archd. of Bedford and dio. of Lincoln, now in the dio. of Ely; rated at £26 9s. 7d.; gross income £420; in the patronage of the Crown. The great and small tithes, the property of the clerical rector, were commuted in 1809. There is a Baptist chapel here. The parish possesses three daily schools, one of which is endowed with £32 per annum, and a Sunday school. Pop., in 1801, 448; in 1831, 720. Houses 146. Acres 2,270. A. P. £2,790. Poor rates, in 1837, £294.

BARTON, a parish in the eastern division of the wapentake of Gilling, north riding, county of York;

5 miles south-west of Darlington. Living, a perpetual curacy, formerly in the archd. of Richmond and dio. of Chester, now in the dio. of Ripon; rated at £11; gross income £52. Patron, in 1835, the vicar of Stanwick. Excellent limestone is found in the vicinity. There are two daily schools here, besides an infant and a Sunday school. Pop., in 1821, including the townships of Barton-St-Cuthbert and Newton-Morell, 467; in 1831, 468. Houses 107. Acres 2,790. A. P. £3,667. Poor rates, in 1837, £195.

BARTON (ST DAVID'S), a parish in the hund. of Catsash, county of Somerset; 5 miles north-east of Somerton. Living, a discharged vicarage, rated at £8, in the parliamentary returns at £40, and in the peculiar jurisdiction and patronage of the prebendary of Barton-St-David's, in the cathedral of Wells. The Independents have also a place of worship here. The parish possesses three daily schools and a Sunday school. Pop., in 1801, 288; in 1831, 410. Houses 52. Acres 1,090. A. P. £940. Poor rates, in 1837, £54.

BARTON (EARL'S), a parish in the hund. of Hamfordshoe, union of Wellingborough, county of Northampton; 3½ miles south-west of Wellingborough. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Northampton and dio. of Peterborough; rated at £10; gross income £195; in the patronage of the Crown. The church is a curious edifice in various styles of architecture. A Baptist church was formed here in 1796. There are four daily and two Sunday schools in this parish. It is crossed by the river Nen, through which the Northampton canal communicates with the German ocean. Pop., in 1801, 725; in 1831, 977. Houses 190. Acres 1,760. Poor rates, in 1837, £393.

BARTON (GREAT), a parish in the hund. of Thedwestry, county of Suffolk; 2½ miles north-east of Bury St Edmunds. Living, a discharged vicarage, formerly in the archd. of Sudbury and dio. of Norwich, now in the dio. of Ely; rated at £10 15s. 7½d. Patron, in 1835, Sir H. E. Bunbury, Bart. The great and small tithes, the property of the lord of the manor and vicar, were commuted in 1802. There are a daily and a Sunday school here. Among the poor of the parish £10 are distributed annually out of Howardly's donation. Pop., in 1801, 523; in 1831, 778. Houses 146. Acres 4,030. A. P. £3,128. Poor rates, in 1837, £463.

BARTON-HARTSHORNE, a parish in the hund., union, and county of Buckingham; 4 miles south-west of Buckingham. Living, a perpetual curacy with Chetwood, formerly in the archd. of Bedford and dio. of Lincoln, now in the dio. of Ely; rated at £20; gross income £82. Patrons, in 1835, — Bracebridge and — Viger. Pop., in 1801, 100; in 1831, 145. Houses 26. Acres 870. A. P. £919. Poor rates, in 1837, £54.

BARTON-UPON-THE-HEATH, a parish in the Brails division of the hund. of Kingston, county of Warwick; 5 miles south of Shipton-on-Stour. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Worcester; rated at £12 17s. 11d.; gross income £392; in the patronage of the president and fellows of Trinity college, Oxford. There are a daily and a Sunday school here, the latter of which has a small endowment. Robert Dover, who instituted the Cotswold games, resided here. About 2 miles to the west of this place stands the Fourshire-stone, noticed by Leland as marking the point of union of the four counties of Warwick, Worcester, Gloucester, and Oxford. Pop., in 1801, 137; in 1831, 206. Houses 35. Acres 1,540. A. P. £2,975. Poor rates, in 1837, £94.

BARTON-UPON-HUMBER, a parish and market-town in the northern division of the wapentake of Yarborough, parts of Lindsey, county of Lincoln; 166 miles north of London, 32 north-east of Lincoln, and 7 south of Hull. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Lincoln; valued at £19 4s. 8d.; gross income £390. Patron, in 1835, the Rev. G. Uppleby. The impropriate and vicarial tithes, of the lordship of Barton-upon-Humber, the property of the lay-impropriator and the vicar, were commuted in 1793. The church of St Peter is a spacious edifice, consisting of a nave with aisles and a chancel, chiefly in the decorated style of English architecture, with a tower, the lower part of which is of Saxon architecture; the upper, in the early Norman style. The church of St Mary is a more modern building, probably of the 14th century. The Independents, and Primitive and Wesleyan Methodists, have places of worship here. The Independent church was formed in 1805; the Wesleyan Methodist, in 1812. A charity school, for the instruction of poor children in reading, writing, and arithmetic, was founded here in 1722, by Mr William Long. The original endowment was £7 12s. per annum, to which £50 were added in 1735, by Mr Nicholas Fountain. In 1669, alms-houses for four aged women of the district of St Mary were founded and endowed by Mr Thomas Holland.—The town takes its name from its situation on the southern bank of the Humber, on a rising ground at the extremity of the wolds, about three quarters of a mile from the river. The great Northern road passes the Humber to Hull. It was a place of considerable commerce in the time of the Conqueror, but suffered much when Edward I. made Kingston-upon-Hull a free borough. It now derives its chief importance from the ferry over the Humber—which is here upwards of 6 miles broad—to Kingston-upon-Hull.—The town consists of two spacious, but irregularly-built streets, in which there are some good modern houses. The principal trade is in corn and flour, and a considerable number of the inhabitants are employed in the manufacture of ropes, bricks, and tiles. Barton is a polling-place for the member for Lindsey. The manor belongs to the Crown. The town is within the jurisdiction of the county-magistrates, who hold petty-sessions here for a portion of the division. Monday is market-day, and a large cattle-market is held on every alternate Monday. A fair for cattle is held on Trinity-Thursdays. There is a branch of the Hull banking company here. Pop., in 1801, 1,709; in 1831, 3,231. Houses 221. Acres 4,620. A. P. £12,354. Poor rates, in 1837, £726. There is a penny-post to Barrow.—About 3 miles to the south-east of the town stand the remains of Thornton-abbey. These consist of part of the church and other conventual buildings; and the gate-house, which is ornamented with statues, and has four hexagonal towers at the angles. This abbey was founded in 1139 by William le Gros, earl of Albemarle and lord of Holderness, for Black canons, and dedicated to the Virgin Mary. At the dissolution, the revenues were valued at £703 17s. 2d. In 1540, Henry VIII. and his queen were entertained here on their return from Kingston-upon-Hull.

BARTON-UPON-IRWELL, a township in the parish of Eccles, co. palatine of Lancaster; 5½ miles west of Manchester, on the line of the Liverpool and Manchester railroad. At this place, the first aqueduct-bridge in England constructed over a navigable river, was raised for the carrying of the duke of Bridgewater's canal over the river Irwell. It consists of 3 arches of great strength; the centre one 63 feet wide, and 40 feet above the surface of the water. The Wesleyan Methodists and Roman Catholics have each a place of worship here. The township possesses also twelve daily, nine Sunday, and two boarding schools. Pop., in 1801, 6,197; in 1831, 8,976. Houses 1,567. Acres 10,530. A. P. £20,624. Poor rates, in 1837, £1,896.

BARTON (LITTLE), or BARTON MILLS, a small village and parish in the hund. of Lackford, union of Mildenhall, co. of Suffolk; 1 mile south of Mildenhall. Living, a rectory formerly in the archd. of Sudbury and dio. of Norwich, now in the dio. of Ely, rated at £14 15s. 10d.; gross income £550; in the patronage of the Crown. All tithes, moduses, &c., the property of the clerical rector, were commuted in 1796. The Baptists have a place of worship here. There are three daily schools containing 76 pupils, and a Sunday school. Charities connected with the parish produce £14 per annum. Pop., in 1801, 305; in 1831, 591. A. P. £2,995. Houses 104. Acres 2,050. Poor rates, in 1837, £354.

BARTON, ST MARY, a hamlet in the parish of St Mary de Lode, county of Gloucester. Pop., in 1801, 412; in 1831, 786. Houses 165. Acres, including Tuffey, 1,470. A. P. £1,555. Poor rates, in 1837, £254.

BARTON, ST MARY, a chapelry and township in the parish of Barton St Cuthbert, eastern division of the wapentake of Gilling, north riding, county of York. Living, a curacy in the archd. of Richmond and dio. of York, rated at £10; in the patronage of the vicar of Gilling. Distance from Darlington, 5 miles south-west. Pop., in 1831, 786. A. P. £1,555.

BARTON, ST MICHAEL'S, a hamlet in the parish of St Michael, county of Gloucester. There are a daily and a day and boarding school here. Pop., in 1801, 285; in 1831, 676. Houses 130. Acres 500. A. P. £846. Poor rates, in 1837, £162.

BARTON (MIDDLE), a township in the parish of Steeple-Barton, county of Oxford.

BARTON-MILLS. See BARTON, LITTLE.

BARTON-UNDER-NEEDWOOD, a parochial chapelry in the parish of Tatenhill, union of Burton-upon-Trent, Staffordshire; 5 miles south-west of Burton-upon-Trent, in the vicinity of the Grand Trunk canal. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. of Stafford and dio. of Lichfield and Coventry; rated at £25, in the parliamentary returns at £132; gross income £135; in the patronage of the deau of Lichfield. The chapel was erected in the reign of Henry VIII., by Dr John Taylor, a native of the village. There are here a daily, a day and boarding, and an infant school, besides two day and Sunday National schools, one of which is endowed by the Drapers' company with £30 10s. per annum, and with £9 10s. per annum arising from land, the other has an annual endowment of £20. Courts-leet and baron are held here, and the village is in the honour of Tutbury. Fairs are held on the 3d of May and 20th of November; if Sunday, the Saturday previous. Pop., in 1801, 834; in 1831, 1,344. Houses 270. Acres 3,520. A. P. £7,263. Poor rates, in 1837, £434.

BARTON (PEVRELL), a tything in the parish of South Stoneham, county of Southampton.

BARTON-REGIS, a hundred of Gloucestershire, city of Bristol. Area 8,030 acres. Houses 7,680. Pop., in 1832, 44,812.

BARTON-SEGRAVE, a parish in the hund. of Huxloe, union of Kettering, county of Northampton; 2 miles south-east of Kettering, on the post-road to Higham Ferrers. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Northampton and dio. of Peterborough; rated at £10 17s. 1d.; gross income £493. Patron, in 1835, the duke of Buccleugh. Its body and tower are very old. There are a daily and a Sunday school here. This parish was the native place of John Bridges, Esq., who made extensive collections for a history of the county. John Ekins left by will £50 for the poor of the parish. The village derived its name from the family of Segrave, the most eminent member of which was Nicholas de Segrave, marshal of England in the time of Edward IV. Pop., in 1801, 159; in 1831, 203. Houses 42. Acres 2,030. A. P. £3,118. Poor rates, in 1837, £139.

BARTON-STACEY, a hundred in the Andover division of the county of Southampton. Area 13,370 acres. Houses 351. Pop., in 1831, 1961.

BARTON-STACEY, a parish in the hund. of the same name, Basingstoke division, union of Andover, county of Southampton. It comprises the tythings of Barton-Stacey, Bransbury, Drayton, and Newton-Stacey; 5 miles south-west of Winchester. Living, a vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Winchester, rated at £8 2s. 1d.; gross income £272; in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Winton. This parish possesses three daily schools, one of which has an endowment of £9 per annum, from a rent-charge of £40 left for charitable purposes by Dorothy and Elizabeth Wright. A fair is held here on the 31st of July for millinery, goods, and toys. A Roman road passes through this parish, and at Bransbury there seems to have been a strong intrenchment. Pop., in 1801, 431; in 1831, 623. Houses 120. Acres 4,520. A. P. £2,227. Poor rates, in 1837, £232.

BARTON-STEEPLE, a parish in the hund. of Wooton, county of Oxford, comprising the hamlets of Middle-Barton and Seawells-Barton; 4½ miles south-west of Doddington. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Oxford, rated at £7 9s. 4½d.; gross income £86. Patrons, in 1835, the assignees of T. Churchill. There are two daily schools and a Sunday school in this parish. Pop., in 1801, 393; in 1831, 608. Houses 126. Acres 2,710. A. P. £3,130. Poor rates, in 1837, £316.

BARTON-STREET, a hamlet in the parish of St Mary de Lode and St Michael, county of Gloucester, adjacent to the eastern gate of the city of Gloucester. Pop., in 1801, 412; in 1831, 786.

BARTON-IN-THE-STREET, a parish in the wapentakes of Bulmer and Byedale, north riding, union of Malton, county of York, comprising the townships of Coneythorpe, Barton le Street and Butterwick; 5½ miles north-west of New Malton. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Cleveland and dio. of York, rated at £14 18s. 6½d.; gross income £450. Patron, in 1835, the Marquis of Hertford. The church contains some curious specimens of sculpture, and is said to have been built of materials taken from the abbey of St Mary, York. There are a daily National, and a Sunday school here. Pop. of the town, in 1801, 149; in 1831, 190; of the parish, in 1801, 342; in 1831, 496. Houses 73. Acres 3,180. A. P. £3,856. Poor rates, in 1837, £184.

BARTON-TURFF, a parish in the hund. of Tunstead, county of Norfolk; 6½ miles south-east of North Walsham. Living, a discharged vicarage united with the rectory of Istead, in the archd. of Norfolk and dio. of Norwich, rated at £3 13s. 4d.; gross income, £379; in the patronage of the bishop of Norwich. There is a day and Sunday National school here, containing 69 pupils. Pop., in 1801, 290; in 1831, 391. Houses 69. Acres 1,750. A. P. £1,593. Poor rates, in 1837, £151.

BARTON-WESTCOTT, a parish in the hund. of Wooton, union of Woodstock, county of Oxford; 3 miles east of Etonstone. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Oxford, rated at £7; gross income £180. Patron, in 1835, Rev. J. Seagrave. There are two daily schools and a Sunday school here. Pop., in 1801, 184; in 1831, 258. Houses 60. Acres 650. A. P. £1,197. Poor rates, in 1837, £122.

BARTON-IN-THE-WILLOWS, a township in the parish of Cramb, wapentake of Bulmer, north riding, county of York; 10 miles north-east of York. There are here a daily and a Sunday school. Pop., in 1801, 149; in 1831, 202. Houses 32. Acres 980. A. P. £1,568. Poor rates, in 1837, £77.

BARUGH, or BARON, a township in the parish of Darton, west riding, county of York; 2 miles north-west of Barnsley. There are three daily schools and a Sunday school here. Pop., in 1801, 362; in 1831, 946. Houses 197. Acres 1,660. A. P. £2,584. Poor rates, in 1837, £123.

BARUGH-AMBO, a township in the parish of Kirkby-Misperton, wapentake of Pickering lythe, north riding, county of York; 4 miles south-west of Pickering. Pop., in 1801, 188; in 1831, 294. Houses 55. Acres 2,150. A. P. £1,816. Poor rates, in 1837, £142.

BARWELL, a parish in the hund. of Sparkenhoe, union of Hinckley, county of Leicester, comprising the chapelries of Potters-Marston and Stapleton; 2 miles north of Hinckley. Living, a discharged rectory, formerly in the archd. of Leicester and dio. of Lincoln, now in the dio. of Peterborough, rated at £20 10s. 7½d.; gross income £914. Patron, in 1835, the Rev. George Mettman. This parish possesses four daily schools,—one of which is endowed with £20 16s. per annum by Gabriel Newton of Leicester, and two Sunday schools. Pop., in 1801, 787; in 1831, 1,505. Houses 303. Acres 3,950. A. P. £4,683. Poor rates, in 1837, £629.

BARWICK, or BERWICK, a hamlet in the parish of Rothing-Abbots, county of Essex, situated in the hund. of Ongar; north-east of Chipping-Ongar. Pop., in 1801, 67; in 1821, 97. It is now included in Rothing-Abbots.

BARWICK WITH STAFFORD, a parish in the hund. of Houndsborough, Berwick, and Coker, Yeovil division, county of Somerset; 2 miles south of Yeovil. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. of Wells and dio. of Bath and Wells, rated at £7 14s. 7d., in the parliamentary returns at £70; gross income £100. Patron, in 1835, J. Newman, Esq. There are two daily schools and a Sunday school in this parish. In 1838, there were two flax mills here, employing 29 hands. Pop., in 1801, 339; in 1831, 415. Houses 46. Acres 920. Poor rates, in 1837, £135.

BARWICK-BASSET. See CALNE.

BARWICK, or BERWICK-IN-THE-BRAKES, a parish in the hund. of Smithdon, union of Docking, county of Norfolk; 4 miles west of Burnham Westgate. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Norfolk and dio. of Norwich; rated at £6; gross income £40; and, in 1835, in the patronage of Mrs Anne Hoste. Pop., in 1801, 27; in 1831, 35. Assessed property included in Stanhoe. Poor rates, in 1837, £76.

BARWICK, or BERWICK-IN-ELMETT, a parish in the lower division of the wapentake of Skyrack, west riding, county of York; 7 miles south of Wetherby, on the post-road to Pontefract. It includes the townships of Barwick-in-Elmett, Barnbow, Kiddal with Potterton, Norwick with Scoles, and Roundhay. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of York; rated at £32 12s. 6d.; gross income £1,440. Patron, the Crown. The great and small tithes, moduses, &c. the property of the clerical rector and lay-impropriator, were commuted in 1796. This parish possesses three daily, three boarding, and three Sunday schools. On an eminence, called Hall-Tower-hill, are traces of a castle, said to have been the residence of Edwin, one of the most distinguished of the Northumbrian kings. "Somewhere in the wood of Elmete," says Tanser, "at Barwick in Elmete, as some think, was a monastery under the government of Abbot Thrydwulf, about A. D. 730." Pop. of the township, in 1801, 370; of the parish, in 1821, 1,067; in 1831, 1,922. Houses 397. Acres 8,030. A. P. £9,658. Poor rates, in 1837, £240.

BASCHURCH, a parish in the hund. of Pimhill, county of Salop; 7 miles north-west of Shrewsbury. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Salop and dio. of Lichfield and Coventry; rated at £10 16s. Patron, the Crown. The great and small tithes of the manors of Baschurch, Hordley, Standwine-in-the-wood, Weston, Lullingfield, and Hanward-in-the-Fields, the property of the clerical rector, lay-impropriators and vicar, were commuted in 1777. There are here three daily schools, two of which and an infant school are endowed, and belong to the same foundation: the endowment arises from land let at a time price rent of about £400 per annum, out of which many of the scholars are clothed and apprenticed. There are here some traces of a Roman camp. Pop., in 1801, 1,069; in 1831, 1,321. Houses 214. Acres 8,490. A. P. £9,461. Poor rates, in 1837, £635.

BASFORD, a township in the parish of Wybunbury, hund. of Nantwich, co-palatine of Chester; 4 miles east of Nantwich, intersected by the Birmingham railroad. Pop., in 1801, 55; in 1831, 85. Houses 14. Acres 490. A. P. £783. Poor rates, in 1837, £54.

BASFORD, a parish in the northern division of the wapentake of Broxtow, union of Basford, county of Nottingham; 2½ miles north of Nottingham. The village stands in a valley, in the midst of beautiful scenery. The great increase of its population is ascribed to the extension of lace and lace-machine manufactories. The removal of the court of the honour of Peveril from Nottingham to this place, has also added to its importance. Living, a vicarage, formerly in the archd. of Nottingham and dio. of York, now in the dio. of Lincoln; rated at £8 17s. 7d.; gross income £260. Patron, the Crown. The great and small tithes, the property of the lay-impropriator and vicar, were commuted in 1792. The Wesleyan Methodists and Baptists have chapels here. The Methodist church was formed in 1825,—the Baptist in 1838. There are twelve daily and ten Sunday schools in this parish, besides an infant school, containing 101 children. Pop., in 1801, 2,124; in 1831, 6,325. Houses 1,261. Acres 2,720. A. P. £5,239. Poor rates, in 1837, £1,104. The Basford poor-law union comprehends 43 parishes, embracing an area of 140 square miles; with a population returned, in 1831, at 51,794. The average annual expenditure on the poor of this district, during the three years preceding the formation of the union, was £13,718. Expenditure, in 1838, £9,369.

BASFORD, a township in the parish of Chedleton, northern division of the hund. of Totmonslow, county of Stafford; 3 miles south of Leek. There is a small daily school here. Pop., in 1801, 209; in 1831, 300. Houses 47. Acreage and poor rates with the parish. A. P. £2,443.

BASHALL, BASHALL-EAVES, or BECKSHALGH, a township in the parish of Mitton, western division of the wapentake of Staincliff and Ewcross, west riding, county of York; 2½ miles west of Clitheroe. Pop., in 1821, 348; in 1831, 310. Houses 49. Acres 3,640. A. P. £3,777. Poor rates, in 1837, £246.

BASILDEN, or BASILDON, a parish in the hund. of Moreton, union of Bradfield, county of Berks; 7½ miles north-west of Reading, intersected by the Great Western railway. Living, a discharged vicarage, formerly in the archd. of Berks and dio. of Salisbury, now in the dio. of Oxford; rated at £7 14s. 4½d., in the parliamentary returns at £133 9s. 11d.; gross income, with Ashampstead, £257. Patrons, in 1835, the Rev. C. Simeon, and Sir F. Sykes, who present alternately to the living. There are three daily schools here. This parish is celebrated for the goodness of the soil and the extent of the farms. A fair for toys is held here on September 14th. Pop., in 1801, 623; in 1831, 780. Houses 159. Acres 3,120. A. P., £4,142. Poor rates, in 1837, £362. The Great Western railway is carried across the Thames at Gathampton near the place.

BASILDON, a chapelry in the parish of Laindon, hund. of Barstable, county of Essex; 5 miles south of Billericay. Living, a curacy annexed to the rectory of Laindon. There is a Sunday school here. Pop., in 1801, 62; in 1831, 124. Houses 23. Acres 1,850. A. P. £2,044. Poor rates, in 1837, £99.

BASING (OLD), a township and chapelry in the parish and hund. of Basingstoke division, county of Southampton; 2 miles north-east of Basingstoke, on the line of the Southampton and London railroad. Living, a curacy not in charge, annexed to the vicarage of Basingstoke. There are here three daily schools and a Sunday school. This place was the scene of the defeat of Ethelred I., in 871, by the Danes. At the time of the Norman survey, Basing belonged to Hugh de Portu, who held fifty-five lordships in this county. He had an extensive castle here, which was rebuilt on a magnificent scale by Sir William Paulet, his lineal descendant, whom Edward VI. created Marquess of Winchester, and who afterwards became lord-treasurer to Queen Elizabeth. John, the fifth marquess, was a faithful adherent of Charles I., and defended Basing-castle against Colonel Norton, Sir William Waller, and other parliamentary leaders, during a siege which lasted two years. It was taken by storm by Cromwell himself, on the 14th of October, 1645. "Sir Hardresse Waller's and Colonel Mountague's regiments having forced the works of the besieged, mounted the walls, and got into the house before the defendants perceived their danger; many of them were put to the sword; Major Cuffie was killed by Major-General Harrison, and four hundred prisoners were taken; among whom was the brave marquess himself, and Sir Robert Peake, who commanded the garrison under him. Hugh Peters was at the taking of this house, and being come to London to make a report of it to the parliament, said, 'Twas an house fit for an emperor to dwell in, it was so spacious and beautiful.' The marquess, from this action, called the house Love-loyalty, which name he had caused to be written with a diamond in every window, as if he would have it a perpetual monument of his loyalty to his prince; but this name so provoked the enemy, that they burnt it to the ground. Here was a bed, 'tis said, valued at £1,400, and the plunder was so great, that a private soldier got £300 in money. This marquess's loyalty was the more extraordinary, because it came from a Catholic subject to a Protestant prince." In the neighbourhood is Hackwood-hall, the property of the duke of Bolton. Here are many portraits of members of the Paulet family, and in particular one by Hans Holbein, of the first Marquess of Winchester. Pop., in 1801, 819; in 1831, 1,103. Houses 207. Acres 4,970. A. P. £5,652. Poor rates, in 1837, £903.

BASINGSTOKE HUNDRED, in the division of Basingstoke, county of Southampton. Area 26,330 acres. Houses 1,367. Pop., in 1831, 7,604.

BASINGSTOKE, a market-town and parish in the Basingstoke division of Hampshire, situated in the hund. and union of Basingstoke, but having separate jurisdiction; 45½ miles south-west of Nine Elms, Vauxhall bridge, London, by the Southampton and London railroad, and 7 miles west of Odiam. It is mentioned in Domesday-book as being a royal manor, and in possession of a market. Living, a discharged vicarage, to which are attached the chapelries of Basing and Upper Nately, in the archd. and dio. of Winchester; valued at £30 6s. 5½d.; gross income £579; in the patronage of the president and fellows of Magdalene college, Oxford. The church, which was erected in the reign of Henry VIII., under the superintendence of Fox, Bishop of Winchester, is a spacious structure, consisting of a nave, chancel, and side-aisles, with a square tower. The south side is of stone, the north of stone and flint in alternate squares, and ornamented with shields on the spandrels and the chancel doorway. All tithes, the property of Magdalene college, Oxford, and the vicar, were commuted in 1786. The Independents, Methodists, Society of Friends, and Connexion of the Countess of Huntingdon, have places of worship here. The church of Lady Huntingdon's Connexion was formed in 1786.—There are twelve daily, three Sunday, and two infant schools, in this parish. The free school was re-established by Queen Mary, when the guild was dissolved, and has now an endowment which yields £200 per annum. The school-room is in an ancient building, supposed to have been originally the parish-church, adjoining to the ruins of the chapel of the Holy Ghost. The master is appointed by the Crown, and the usher by the corporation. There are now 13 boys on the foundation, those belonging to the town pay 15s., and those from the vicinity £1 1s. per quarter for English education in this school. The Rev. Thomas Warton, professor of poetry in the university of Oxford, was master of this school, and his accomplished sons, Dr Joseph Warton and Thomas Warton, received the early part of their education here. In 1646, Mr Richard Aldworth founded and endowed a Blue coat school here, in which 9 boys are clothed, maintained, and educated. There is another charity school, supported by funds left by Sir James Lancaster, in 1618, under the management of the Skinners' company of London. Here is also a National school for 100 boys, which was established by Dr Sheppard, late vicar of Basingstoke; and another for 100 girls, the school-room of which was erected at an expense of £500 by his widow. In 1607, Sir James Dean founded here and endowed alms-houses for eight aged men or women, each of whom receive £6 18s. per annum. In 1808, Mr Joseph Page founded and endowed three alms-houses here, for aged widows connected with the congregation of Independents. Besides these, there are several minor charities. "King Henry III.," says Tanner, "founded an hospital here in the year 1261, at the instance and on the estate of Walter de Merton, who gave by his will 450 marks to purchase land for the better endowment of it, for the maintenance of aged and impotent priests; and after the foundation of Merton college in Oxford, the incurable scholars or fellows of that college were particularly to be sent hither. It was dedicated to St Mary and St John the Baptist. The mastership was very early attached to the wardenship of Merton college, Oxford." On an eminence to the north-west of the town are some remains of a chapel which belonged to a fraternity of the Holy Ghost, instituted here by Sir William, afterwards Lord Sandys, and Fox, Bishop of Winchester. In the reign of Edward VI. this fraternity was dissolved; but it was re-established in the reign of Mary. Cromwell made over the estates to the parliament, but they were restored in 1670, through the intercession of Morley, Bishop of Winchester, and are now enjoyed by the Free school.

The town of Basingstoke is situated in a fertile and open part of the country, near a branch of the Loddon. It consists of several streets, containing neat and well-built houses, and lighted with gas. It possesses a market-house, and a town-hall, erected at an expense of £9,695, in which petty-sessions for the division of Basingstoke are held. The gaol is a modern building, consisting of three apartments with a yard attached to it. The principal business carried on here is the trade in corn and malt, which is much facilitated by the situation of the town at the junction of five important roads, and upon the Basingstoke canal, which, navigable by vessels of nearly 50 tons burthen, extends to the river Wey in Surrey, thus communicating with the Thames and London. This canal was completed in 1796, at an expense of £180,000. The London and Southampton railway was completed to this place in the spring of 1839, and opened betwixt it and London on June 10th. There are now six daily trains betwixt Vauxhall and this town. In 1821, 365 families were returned as employed here in various trades and manufactures,—the majority in that of druggets and shalloons,—but this branch of manufacture has declined considerably of late years. The market-day is Wednesday, and fairs are held on Wednesday in Whitsun week for pedlery, on Sept. 23d, and Oct. 11th, for cattle and hiring servants; and on Easter-Tuesday, a fair for the sale of cheese and cattle is held on Basingstoke downs. The town was early incorporated, and sent members to parliament from the 23^d of Edward I. to the 4^o of Edward II., when, it is said, the privilege was withdrawn at the request of the inhabitants. Its qualified electors now vote for the members for North-Hampshire. The late corporation holds under a charter granted 20^o James I., and confirmed in 17^o Charles I. It consisted of a mayor, high-steward, recorder, seven aldermen, and seven burgesses, a town-clerk, and inferior officers. An annual court-leet is held here for the hundred, the jurisdiction of which extends over nineteen tythings. Under the new Municipal act Basingstoke is governed by a mayor, 4 aldermen, and 12 councillors; and has had a commission of the peace granted to it. The revenue of the burgh in 1837, amounted to £1,288; its expenditures to nearly the same. Several eminent men have been natives of Basingstoke. Among these are John Basing, or de Basingstoke, a celebrated Greek scholar of the 13th century; Sir James Lancaster, an eminent navigator in the reign of Elizabeth; and the brothers, Thomas and Joseph Warton, already mentioned. A work-house has been erected here for the union of Basingstoke, by the poor-law commissioners, at an expense of £7,500, capable of accommodating 400 persons. Pop., in 1801, 2,589; in 1831, 3,581. Houses 701. Acres 3,970. A. P. £11,382. Poor rates, in 1837, £1,845.—In the vicinity of the town, there are traces of an ancient encampment, of an elliptical form, 1100 yards in circumference, called Aubrey camp.

BASINGTHORPE WITH WESTBY, a parish in the wapentake of Beltisloe, parts of Kesteven, union of Grantham, county of Lincoln; 3 miles north-west of Corby. Living, a vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Lincoln; rated at £8 17s. 6d., and annexed to the rectory of Welby. Patron, in 1835, Lord Huntingtower. Pop., in 1801, 158; in 1831, 122. Houses 22. Acres 920. A. P. £2,699. Poor rates, in 1837, £122.

BASINGWICK, a village in the parish of Holywell and hund. of Coleshill, county of Flint, North Wales; 1 mile east of Holywell. Here are the remains of an ancient abbey, overlooking a deep and narrow vale down which runs the rivulet which rises from St Winifred's well. It was almost entire in 1720, when the greater part was taken down by order of the proprietor. Of the refectory there are still considerable remains; and a spacious and elegant chapel, which Henry II. erected for the Knights-Templars, is still standing. Of the church no portion remains entire; but the Grange-house, which is built of brick, has been preserved, and continues to enjoy its original name and destination. It was founded in the year 1131, by Ranulph, Earl of Chester, and granted by Henry II., in 1159, to a community of Cistercian monks. At the general dissolution its revenues were valued at £150 7s. 3d. per annum. Pop. returned with the parish.

BASLOW, a chapelry in the parish of Bakewell, county of Derby; 3½ miles north-east of Bakewell. Living, a perpetual curacy, annexed to the vicarage of Bakewell, in the peculiar jurisdiction of the dean and chapter of Lichfield; rated at £27 6s. 8d. Patron, in 1835, the duke of Devonshire. The vicarial tithes of the township of Baslow, and the hamlets of Bubnell, Curbar, and Froggatt, the property of the vicar, were commuted in 1823. At Barbrook, in this parish, are furnaces for smelting lead ore. There are five daily schools here, one of which is endowed by the duchess of Rutland, and another by Mrs Hague, and three Sunday schools. Baslow is in the honour of Tutbury. Pop., in 1801, 817; in 1831, 863. Houses 165. Acres 2,360. A. P. £3,088. Poor rates, in 1837, including Bubnell, £318.

BASSALEG, or BASSALLEG, a parish partly in in the upper and partly in the lower divisions of the hund. of Wentloog, union of Newport, county of Monmouth; 3 miles west of Newport, intersected by the Crumlin canal. It includes the hamlets of Duffrin, Rogerstone, and Graig. Living, a discharged vicarage, to which are annexed the chapels of Henllys and Risca, in the archd. and dio. of Llandaff; valued at £14 13s. 6½d.; gross income £370; in the patronage of the bishop of Llandaff. The Baptists and Independents have places of worship here. Petty-sessions for the division of Newport, are held here and at Castletown. This parish possesses six daily and three Sunday schools; one of the former is endowed by Rowland Morgan with £20 per annum. The same person also left lands and tenements from which two poor men and two poor women receive each annually £3 10s. The Romney railway or trainroad, extends from the Sirhowey railway at Pye-corner in this parish, to Abertyswg in Bedwelty parish, a distance of 2½ miles. On the brow of a hill about the distance of a mile from the village are the traces of a Saxon camp, called Craeg-y-Saeson, about a mile from which is another, called Pen-y-Park-Newydd, which is supposed to have belonged to the Britons. "Here was a priory of Black monks," says Tanner, "a cell to the abbey of Glastonbury, to which the church of this place was given by Robert de Haya, and Gundreda his wife, some time between 1101 and 1120. This cell, which was dedicated to St Basilus, seems to have gone into decay long before the general dissolution of religious houses." Pop., in 1821, 1,329; in 1831, 1,664. Houses 234. Acres 6,290. A. P. £4,829.

BASSENTHWAITE, a parish in Allerdale ward below Derwent, county of Cumberland; 5 miles north-west of Keswick. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. and dio. of Carlisle; valued at £22 4s. 8d., in the parliamentary returns at £112; gross income £125; in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Carlisle. The great and small tithes, moduses, &c. the property of the vicar, were commuted in 1770. There are three daily schools here. This parish is divided, according to Nicholson, into two constable-wicks; that where the church stands, near Crosthwaite, being called the High-side, and the Low-side known by the name of the Hawes, where the chapel stands. Lead-ore has been found in the neighbourhood, and a mine of antimony wrought. The river Derwent runs through the parish. The village in the picturesque vale of Bassenthwaite, near the lake called Bassenthwaite, or Broad-water, which is about 4 miles in length, by 1 in breadth, and covers a surface of 1500 acres. On the eastern side of the valley is the lofty mountain of SKIDDAW, [which see,] which is also within the parish; on the western side, the range called Winthrop Brow, terminate abruptly on the margin of the lake. The following is Hutchinson's description of Bassenthwaite: "This lake affords many bays, where you may, in some parts, push under the cover of a lofty over-hanging grove, and, in others, rocky coves, where you find the gentler echo, favourable to music, and a song. The painter has tamer landscapes here, but they are warmer, and more serene than those of Keswick. Soft pastoral scenes margin the lake on the eastern side, over which, Skiddaw lifts an august brow, to give the boldest contrast to the green and gently rising eminences, the scattered coppices, the velvet drest lawn, the rich verdure of the mead, the tranquil cottage, and the serene and shining mirror which the lake expands. The boldest landscape found here consists of irregular eminences, clothed with oaks, at whose feet a grassy margin lies to the water's brink, and holds some farmhold; whilst the sublimer mountains, pile upon pile, lift up their heads, and, from the western sun, cast long shades upon the lake, whose distant shores catch the surpassing beams, and glow with additional beauty, from the contrasting shades, over which, the distant eminences mix their brows with the azure of the atmosphere." Pop., in 1801, 450; in 1831, 549. Houses 101. Acres 6,980. A. P. £3,453. Poor rates, in 1837, £261.

BASSET-HOUSE, an extra-parochial liberty in the hund. of Sparkenhoe, county of Leicester, which contained, in 1801, 17, and in 1831, 23 inhabitants. Houses 2. A. P. £427.

BASSETLAW, a wapentake in the county of Nottingham, situated at the northern extremity of the county, bordering on those of Lincoln and York. It contains the divisions of Hatfield, South-Clay and North-Clay, which include fifty-four parishes and the borough of East Retford. Area 184,530 acres. Pop., in 1801, 34,025; in 1831, 37,245. Houses 77,155.

BASSILDON. See BASILDON, Essex.

BASSINGBOURN, a parish in the hund. of Armington, union of Royston, county of Cambridge; 2½ miles north-west of Royston. Living, a vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Ely; valued at £7 0s. 10d.; gross income £232; in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Westminster. The great and small tithes, the property of the dean and chapter of Westminster and the vicar, were commuted in 1801. The Independents have a chapel here, founded in 1791. A fair is annually held here on the festival of St Peter and St Paul. The parish possesses six daily and two Sunday schools, one of which has an endowment of £12 per annum. Bassingbourn was formerly a market-town, being constituted such by Henry III.; but the market has long been discontinued. Pop., in 1801, 828; in 1831, 1,446. Houses 276. Acres 4,235. A. P. £4,811. Poor rates, in 1837, £781.

BASSINGHAM, a parish in the lower division of the wapentake of Boothby-Graffo, parts of Kesteven, county of Lincoln; 8 miles north-east of Newark. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Lincoln; valued at £26 16s. 8d.; gross income £483; in the patronage of the president and fellows of Corpus Christi college, Cambridge. There are three daily schools here, one of which has an endowment of £12 per annum. Pop., in 1801, 413; in 1831, 740. Houses 130. Acres 1,940. A. P. £3,946. Poor rates, in 1837, £156.

BASSINGHAM, Norfolk. See BESSINGHAM.

BASSINGTON, a township in the parish of Eglingham, Northumberland; 3 miles north-west of Alnwick. It stands on the northern bank of the Alne. Pop., in 1801, 9; in 1821, 12. Poor rates, in 1837, £54.

BASTON, a parish in the wapentake of Ness, parts of Kesteven, union of Bourn, county of Lincoln; 3 miles north-west of Market-Deeping, on the post-road to Bourn. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Lincoln; valued at £6 1s. 3d.; gross income £238; in the patronage of the Crown. For commutation of tithes, see LANGTOFT. The Rev. John Mossop, late vicar of the parish, who died in 1835, bequeathed a piece of land for the benefit of poor widows belonging to the parishes of Baston and Langtoft. There are three daily schools here, containing 65 scholars. Pop., including that of certain extra-parochial places in the fens, in 1801, 457; in 1831, 709. Houses 144. Acres 3,520. A. P. £4,401. Poor rates, in 1837, £273.

BASTWICK, a hamlet and parochial chapelry in the parish of Reppa, county of Norfolk; 5¼ miles north-east of Acle, on the banks of the North River. The chapel, which is ancient, has fallen into ruins. Pop. returned with the parish.

BASWICK, or BERKSWICK, a parish in the hund. of Cuttlestone, union and county of Stafford; 2 miles south-east of Stafford. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. of Stafford and dio. of Lichfield and Coventry, in the peculiar jurisdiction of the prebendary of Whittington and Bastwick in the cathedral of Lichfield; valued at £30, in the parliamentary returns at £85; gross income £238. Patrons, in 1835, the Rev. W. Inge and — Lane, Esq. There are three daily schools here, in which 56 pupils are taught. Charities connected with the parish produce £15 3s. annually. The parish includes the chapelry of Acton-Trussell, with the townships of Baswick, Bednall, Brockton, Milford, and Walton; and contained, in 1821, 1,376, and in 1831, 1,329 inhabitants. Pop. of the town, in 1801, 443; in 1831, 546. Houses in the parish 269. Acres 6,410. A. P. £2,700. Poor rates, in 1837, £247.

BATCOMBE, a parish in the hund. of Yetminster union of Cerne, Sherborne division of the county of Dorset; 9 miles south of Sherborne. Living, a discharged rectory, united to that of Frome-Vaughan, formerly in the archd. of Dorset and dio. of Bristol, now in the dio. of Gloucester and Bristol; valued at £9 9s. 9½d.; gross income £413. Patrons, in 1835, the earl of Darlington and earl of Sandwich alternately. The tithes, &c., the property of the clerical rector, were commuted in 1782. There is a Sunday school here. Pop., in 1801, 155; in 1831, 178. Houses 36. Acres 1,790. Poor rates, in 1837, £48.

BATCOMBE, a parish in the hund. of Whitestone, Shepton Mallet division and union, county of Somerset; 3 miles north of Bruton. Living, a rectory, united with the perpetual curacy of Upton Noble, in the archd. of Wells and dio. of Bath and Wells; valued at £26 14s. 4½d.; gross income £700. Patron, in 1835, the Rev. J. Brown. The parish possesses seven daily schools. Pop., in 1801, 677; in 1831, 839. Houses 171. Acres 3,150. A. P. £2,597. Poor rates, in 1837, £534.

BATES-ISLAND, in the parish of Earsdon,

Northumberland; nearly opposite to Hartley. Here was formerly a chapel and a hermitage, both now in ruins. Lord Delaval made a small harbour here for the shelter of fishermen in storms.

BATH,

A handsome and interesting city, situated in the hund. of Bath-Forum, union of Bath, at the north-eastern extremity of Somersetshire, near the borders of Wilts and Gloucestershire. It stands in a narrow valley, intersected by the Avon, and is surrounded by an amphitheatre of hills of considerable elevation, belonging to the great western oolitic range. The river Avon, which is navigable from hence to Bristol, winds for about two miles through the city and its suburbs; and a direct communication with London, through the counties of Middlesex, Bucks, Berks, Hampshire, and Wilts, is afforded by the Kennet and Avon canal, which here joins the Avon, and is connected with the Thames at Reading; while the completion of the Great Western railway will connect it with London on the one hand, and Bristol on the other. The city is on the direct road from London to Bristol, and is distant from the former, by way of Maidenhead and Calne, 107 miles west, or by railway 105½; from Chippingham 12 miles south by east, or by railway, 11½; and from Weston-super-Mare, by railway, 30 miles. Its geographical position is N. lat. 51° 23', W. long. 2° 22'. Mean temperature in June, 61.20; in August, 62.70.

Ecclesiastical affairs.—Bath, with Wells, forms a bishopric, the revenues of which were anciently valued at £533 1s. 3d.; and stated by the ecclesiastical revenue commissioners to average yearly the gross sum of £6,770, from which a sum of about £824 of permanent yearly payments falls to be deducted; leaving a nett yearly income of £5,946, which will probably be reduced to about £5,500 by the diminution of fines upon renewals. The Bishop has the patronage of the precentorship, chancellorship, treasurer, subdeanery, and all the prebends of the cathedral; also of the three archdeaconries of the diocese, 3 perpetual curacies, 9 rectories, and 15 vicarages, in the counties of Berks, Somerset, Wilts, and Dorset. The diocese extends over the whole county of Somerset, with the exception of a small portion of the city of Bristol; and contains 368 parishes, with 503 churches and chapels, and 453 benefices, the average gross income of each of which is £281, and 229 curates, the average of whose income is £81. The episcopal palace is at WELLS: which also see for description of the cathedral, and account of revenues and ecclesiastical corporation.

The city of Bath formerly contained four parishes, the livings of all of which were in the archd. of Bath, and dio. of Bath and Wells: viz. the Abbey, or St. Peter and St. Paul, a vicarage; St. Swithin's or Walcot, a rectory; and St. James and St. Michael, curacies not in charge. By charter of Queen Elizabeth, these parishes, with the exception of Walcot, were united into one rectory, with the chapelries of Widcombe and Lyncombe annexed, valued at £20 17s. 11d.; gross income £750; till recently in the patronage of the corporation.—The Abbey-church is a fine old building, in the latest style of Gothic architecture, nearly coeval with the chapels of King's college, Cambridge, St. George's, Windsor, and Henry Seventh's chapel, Westminster. But though it possesses the general features of the style in which these edifices are built, it is itself simple and unadorned even to plainness. It is in the form of a cross, from the intersection of which rises a quadrangular tower to the height of 170 feet, containing a fine peal of ten bells with chimes. The length from east to west is 210 feet, by 72 in breadth, and 78 in height. The interior is remarkably light and elegant, and crowded with ornaments. This structure was erected on the foundation, and partly with the materials, of the ancient church in the monastery, founded here by Oric, one of the petty princes of Wessex, in 676. This church having fallen, partly from age and partly from accidents during the wars, into a state of dilapidation, it was begun in its present form about the year 1500, by Bishop King, who is said to have been admonished in a dream to do so,—a circumstance which is recorded in certain sculptures on the west front. That prelate dying before it was finished, and the inhabitants refusing to purchase it from the commissioners of Henry VIII., the walls remained roofless; but the site with all its buildings was purchased by Matthew Colthurst, whose son made a present of the whole to the mayor and citizens. The contributions of various individuals effected its completion in 1616. In 1834, the building underwent very extensive repairs.—St. James' church is a neat structure, rebuilt in 1768.—St. Michael's is the fourth church that has stood on the same site. The present edifice is an elegant structure, with a spire 182 feet high.—Till lately Walcot parish existed as one living, and was valued at £6 19s. 9d.; gross income £892. The parish church, dedicated to St. Swithin, was re-edified in 1780; but was totally inadequate to the vast population of the parish, consequently, in 1798, Christchurch, in Montpelier-row, was erected, the body of which is set apart for the poor. Trinity church, in James street, in the florid Gothic style, was completed in 1822; and St. Saviour's, near Beaufort-buildings, was opened in 1832. In 1840, the rectory of Walcot was divided into three livings, viz. Walcot, Trinity, and St. Saviour's.—St. Mary's church, Bathwick, is a modern Gothic structure, with a square tower, about 120 feet high.—Lyncombe and Widcombe is a small old church in the beautiful valley of Widcombe.—A new church, dedicated to St. Mark, has been built under Beechen cliff, to accommodate the increasing population of this extensive parish.—St. Mary Magdalene's is a parochial chapel in Holloway, under Beechen cliff. The living is in the gift of the Crown.—St. Mary's is a handsome chapel, externally Doric, internally Ionic, situated in Queen square; it was erected by subscription in 1735.—The Octagon chapel in Milsom street, was erected in 1767.—Margaret chapel, in Brock street, is a handsome structure, in the early style of English architecture.—The chapel of All Saints, near Lansdown crescent, is a good specimen of the decorated style; it was erected in 1794.—The other chapels are Kensington chapel, near the London road, erected in 1795; and Laura chapel, in Henrietta street, built by tontine subscription in 1796. The Roman Catholics, Baptists, Methodists, Huntingdonians, Moravians, Independents, Unitarians, and Society of Friends, have places of worship here, several of which are very handsome structures. The Independent church was formed in 1769; one of the Baptist churches in 1720; the Moravian in 1765; the Wesleyan Methodist in 1780; the Primitive Methodist in 1829; the Huntingdonian in 1765.

Municipal government.—The old limits of the city of Bath, with its suburbs and liberties, comprised the three parishes of St. James, St. Michael, St. Peter, and St. Paul, and a portion of that part of the parish of Walcot which lies to the southward of the parish of Charlcombe. By an act passed in the 9th Geo. III., confirmed by a charter of the 34th of the same king, the civil and criminal jurisdiction of the city courts and magistrates was carried beyond the limits of the city into part of the adjacent parish of Bathwick. The boundary act has added to the city, for the purpose of parliamentary representation, the whole of the parishes of Bathwick, Lyncombe and Widcombe, and Walcot. All the buildings of the town are included in these limits, besides a considerable rural district. This city received its first extant charter from Richard I., which was confirmed 31° Henry III. The charter was brought to its present form in the 34° George III., when such modifications were made as seemed to be demanded by the increasing importance of the place. Bath was, until the late act, governed by a mayor, recorder, ten aldermen, twenty common-council-men, and various subordinate officers. Under the new municipal act, Bath is divided into 7 wards, and is governed by a mayor, 14 aldermen, and 42 councillors. Petty-sessions for the division of Bath are held in the Guildhall and Chandos House. A court of requests for debts not exceeding £10, is held every Wednesday, by commissioners appointed under the act 45° George III., c. 67, whose jurisdiction extends over the city of Bath, parish of Walcot, the hundreds of Bath-forum and Wellow, with the liberties of Claverton, Easton, Amrill, and Hampton, in Somerset. Bath has had a commission of the peace granted it, and a court of sessions and recorder are appointed for the city. All prisoners, when fully committed for trial, and after conviction by a court in this city, are sent to the county-gaol at Shepton-Mallet, near Wells, a distance of 18 miles, under a contract which has been entered into by the city with the county-justices. About 200 criminals are sent thither annually, at a cost of eight shillings per head. The prisoners confined in the city-gaol are those under examination, prisoners convicted summarily of breaches of the peace, others committed for want of bail, and debtors. The gaol contains two day-rooms, two yards, and six sleeping-cells for prisoners committed for want of sureties, five cells for vagrants, four sleeping-rooms for the superior class of debtors, and one sleeping-room for common debtors, who have also a day-room. There is an apartment for female debtors. The greatest number of prisoners in custody, from January to July, 1836, was 320. Of these 86 were debtors. The greatest number in custody at one time during that period was 54. The magistrates of the city have determined to erect a new gaol, the plan of which has been sanctioned by government. Bath, including the old city, and the parishes of Bathwick, Lyncombe and Widcombe, and Walcot, returns two members to parliament. The elective franchise was first conferred in the reign of Edward I., since which time members have been returned with only a few and these voluntary interruptions. The right of election was formerly vested in the mayor, aldermen, and common-council. The number of electors on the register for 1837 was 3,095. The income of the corporation amounted in 1839, to £12,500.

Population, Trade, &c.]—Population of the city, in 1801, 34,160; in 1811, 38,434; in 1821, 46,688; and in 1831, 50,800. The Bath poor-law union comprehends 24 parishes, embracing an area of 46 square miles; with a population returned in 1831, at 64,230. The poor rates expenditure in 1839 amounted to—for the city, £14,168; and for the union, £24,092. The average annual expenditure on the poor of the district, during the three years preceding the formation of the union was £19,928. The population of the various parishes in and adjoining the city, is shown in the following table:—

St. Peter and Paul . . .	2,666	361
Walcot	26,023	3,994
Bathwick	4,033	759
Lyncombe and Widcombe	8,704	1,545
Parliamentary boundary	50,800	7,789

The trade of Bath is in a great measure dependent on its visitors. Lodging-houses and hotels are numerous and elegant, and visitors of all ranks find no difficulty in obtaining suitable accommodation. In a recent parliamentary return we find it stated that there are constantly a great many strangers, of all classes in society, who come here to reside for a short time from all parts of the United Kingdom, the West Indies, and the Continent; so much so that, when the season is full, there is an addition to the permanent population of 14,000 persons. Yet property is said to have depreciated very much for several years back. Tradesmen and artists employed in the ornamental departments of business, are, of course, very numerous. The manufacture of coarse woollen cloth, called Bath-coating, was at one time carried on here and in the neighbourhood, to a considerable extent, but it has long ceased to exist. The facilities for trade are considerable, from the extensive ramifications of the Kennet and Avon canal, as well as the direct communication with London through the same channel, and by the Great Western railroad now executing. The market-days are Wednesday and Saturday. Fairs for cattle, horses, and all kinds of merchandise, are held on February 14, and July 10. There are here branches of the National Provincial bank of England, of the West of England and South Wales district bank, and of Stuckey's banking company. The city has been lighted with gas since 1819.

Public buildings.]—It is impossible in a work of this kind to enter into a minute description of all the buildings which adorn such a city as Bath; a slight sketch of a few of the most important must suffice. One of the earliest of the modern improvements was the erection of Queen's square. The houses in this square are ornamented with columns and pilasters of the Corinthian order, and in the midst is a garden, with an obelisk in the centre, 70 feet high. The Circus is a noble range of buildings; the fronts of the houses are here embellished with a series of double pillars of the Doric, Ionic, and Corinthian orders, rising one above another, and supporting a battlement decorated with sculpture. In the centre of the garden is a large covered reservoir, which supplies the neighbourhood with water from springs in the adjacent hills.—Not inferior in elegance are the houses which compose the Royal Crescent. This pile of buildings commands a fine view of the city, the vale of the Avon, and the distant hills. Behind the Royal Crescent rise Catharine place, St. James' square, Cavendish place and crescent, Somerset place, Lansdown crescent, Portland place, and Camden place. This, indeed, is a remarkably fine part of the town; the rows of houses rising one above another in a rich picturesque manner, and with a progressive elevation unusually favourable to the display of architectural beauties.—On the eastern side of the city is Pulteney bridge, an elegant structure of three arches covered on both sides with shops, and leading from High street, in the centre of the city, to Bathwick.—On this side also of the town is Laura place, a handsome square, intersected diagonally by Great Pulteney street.—At the extremity of this street are Sidney gardens, an extensive piece of ground laid out in the style of the London Vauxhall. The Kennet and Avon canal passes through these grounds, and over it are thrown two cast-iron bridges in the Chinese style. Behind the gardens rises a steep hill, upon which handsome villas are progressively rising. The North and South parade are elegant ranges of buildings, with terraces, nearly 600 yards in length, and 52 feet broad. At Prior park a splendid grouse of buildings, forming a Catholic collegiate establishment, has recently been erected. They embrace a magnificent mansion for apostolic vicar, and a church in the form of a Greek cross. Among the public buildings of Bath may be mentioned the Guild-hall. This is an elegant structure, built of freestone, with a portico of four lofty Corinthian columns supporting a triangular pediment with a rich entablature and cornice. This structure contains a handsome vestibule, a public-hall for the city-sessions, offices for the courts of record and requests and other public business, with a record-room, and the chambers of the town-clerk; above stairs are a noble banquetting or ball-room, with a music gallery, tea-rooms, &c.

	POPULATION.	HOUSES.
St. James	5,848	656
St. Michael	3,526	474

Baths.—The baths, to which this city owes its name and in a great measure its prosperity, are five in number: the King's bath, the Queen's bath, the Hot bath, the Cross bath, and the Kingston bath, which last is the property of Earl Manvers. The public and private baths are different branches of the same establishment, the exclusive property—with the above exception—of the corporation, and of which they have always retained the management in their own hands. In 1839 the proceeds of the Pump-rooms and baths amounted to £1,646 10s. 9d. The revenue from the Pump-room is made up of subscriptions for drinking the water, at the rate of 2s. 6d. a-week, £1 1s. for three months, or £2 2s. for the year; the price of a private bath is, at the Hot or Cross baths, 2s. 6d., and at the King and Queen's bath, 1s. 6d. The charge for a public bath is 1s. at the King's, Queen's, and Cross baths, and 6d. at the Hot bath. The grand Pump-room is the finest hall connected with the baths. It was built in 1797, and is a handsome erection, 85 feet in length, 48 in breadth, and 34 in height; adorned with columns of the Corinthian order, supporting a rich entablature and a lofty ceiling, and lighted by a double range of windows. At the west end there is an orchestra gallery, and at the east end stands a handsome marble statue of the celebrated Beau Nash, who first officiated in Bath as master of the ceremonies.—The King's bath is a large basin, 60 feet 11 inches in length, and 40 feet 2 inches in breadth; containing, when filled to the ordinary level, 364 tons of water. It is supplied with water directly from the spring, which rises in the centre with great force,—at the rate of 20 gallons per minute. Temperature 114°. The sides of the bath are surrounded by a colonnade of the Doric order, with seats and recesses.—The Queen's bath is attached to the King's, and opens into it; it is 25 feet square; the temperature is somewhat lower.—The Cross bath derives its name from a cross which was erected in its centre by the earl of Melfort, in the reign of James II., but which has been removed. It is at the western extremity of Bath-street, about 150 yards from the King's bath, and yields 12 gallons per minute of the temperature of 109° Fahrenheit.—The Hot bath is so denominated from its superior degree of heat, which ranges about 117° Fahrenheit. It is 40 yards to the south-west of the King's bath, and is furnished with dry and vapour baths, to which a small pump-room has been added.—The Kingston baths, which belong to the earl of Manvers, are provided with sudatories and various other conveniences.—In 1811 considerable apprehensions were entertained of the escape of the hot springs with which the prosperity of the city is so intimately connected, and heavy expenses were incurred by the corporation in puddling the ground through which they rise. The report of a committee on that year states the result of those works on the Hot bath:—

In 1693, it used to fill in	11½ hours.
Just before the puddling was executed, it filled in	16 —
And at the date of the report, 1811, in	8 —

An unsuccessful attempt was made about the same time by another engineer, on the Cross bath, which—

In 1693, filled in	11½ hours.
In 1748, —	16½ —
Before the attempt, in	26 —
Immediately after, in 1810, in	19 —
At the date of report, 1811, in	30 —

The same report states that the temperature was reduced from 97 Fahr. to 91 Fahr.

The King and Queen's bath filled, in 1693, in	9½ hours.
And in 1810, in	13 —

An attempt was then made to puddle these springs also, but was discontinued, as it endangered the safety of the pump-room. No inconvenience is now felt from a deficiency of water in any of the baths. By chemical analysis, the Bath waters have been found to contain carbonic acid and nitrogen gas in small quantity, some sulphate and muriate of soda, sulphate and carbonate of lime, silicious earth and oxide of iron. Their taste is by no means unpleasant, and the use of them has been recommended in gout, rheumatism, paralytic affections, biliary obstructions, and cutaneous disorders. The general indications for the use of this medicinal water are in cases where a gentle stimulus is required. The cases to which it is more particularly suited are mostly of the chronic kind. The reader who wishes a more elaborate account and analysis of the hot springs at Bath is recommended to consult Mr. Richard Phillips's paper on the subject in No. 96 of the Philosophical Magazine.*

Warner, the learned topographer of Bath, assures us that it was the practice, till the middle of the 15th century, for men and women to mingle indiscriminately in the hot waters of Bath. Bishop Beckington was the first who endeavoured to break through this indecent custom; and on the 29th of August, 1449, he issued a mandate, forbidding the sexes to bathe together without being covered with a proper clothing. Till the period of the dissolution, the baths were vested in the monastery, which received all the profits arising from them. Just previous to the dissolution, we have the following account of them given to us by the accurate Leland. "There be two springs of whote water in the west-south-west part of the towne, whereoff the bigger is cauled the Crossebath, bycause it hath a crosse erected in the middle of it. This bathe is much frequented of people diseased with lepre, pokkes scabbes, and great aches, and is temperate and

* According to Mr. Phillips, a quart of water taken from the Hot spring contains—

Carbonic acid	2.4 inches.
Sulphate of lime	18. grains.
Muriate of soda	6.6
Sulphate of soda	3.
Carbonate of lime	1.6
Silicia4
Oxide of iron0039
	22.0039

pleasant, having a 11 or 12 arches of stone in the sides for men to stonde under yn tyme of reyne. Many be holp by this bathe from scabbes and aches. The other bathe is a 2 hunderth foote of, and is lesse in cumpace within the waulle than the other, having but 7 arches yn the waulle. This is caullid the Hote-bathe; for at cumming inte it, men think that it wold scald the flesch at the first, but after that the flesch ys warmed it is more tolerable and pleasant. Both these bathes be in the middle of a lite streat, and joine to St. John's hospitale; so that it may be thought that Reginald bishop of Bath made this Hospitale nere these 2 commune bathes to socour poore people resorting to them. The Kinges-bathe is very faire and large, standing almost in the middle of the towne, and at the west end of the Cathedrale chirch. The area that this bathe is yn is cumpassed with an high stone waulle. The brimmes of this bathe hath a little wall cumpassing them, and in this waul be a 32 arches for men and women to stand separately in. To this bathe do Gentilmen resort. Ther goeth a sluise out of this bathe, and servid in tymes with water derivid out of it 2 places in Bath priorie usid for bathes; els voide, for in them be no springes. The colour of the water of the baynes is as it were a depe blew se water, and rikith like a sething pottle continually, having sumwhat a sulphureous and sumwhat a pleasant savor. The water that rennith from the 2 smaual bathes goith by a dike into Avon, by west byneth the bridge. The water that goith from the Kinges-bath, turnith a mylle, and after goith into Avon above Bath bridge. In all the 3 bathes a man may evidently see how the water hubelith up from the springes. Old Lambard thus describes them:—"Thear are in the towne at this day three severall bathes; the Common bathe open to al men; the Cross bathe, and the Kinge's bathe inclosed. The common bathe is so muche hoater then the Kinge's bathe, as the Kinge's is hoater then the Cross bathe, and yet the heate of bothe is sufferable. They springe upright out of fyne sand; they be of grene colour, and they purge themselves every noon-tyde and mydnyght, by the space of 11 howers together, duringe which tyme no man entreth into theym; for if he should, the water will blyster his bodie, even as the dew that lyeth upon rue, if it be gathered in a morninge." In the year 1562, Doctor William Turner published a volume entitled 'A Booke of the Natures and Properties, as well of the Bathes in England as of other Bathes in Germanye and Italye,' &c. which seems to be the first physical examination of the Bath waters that had ever been made, or at least given to the public. From this volume we find, that the baths of this city were, at the time of his writing, entirely neglected, and so little known that Turner, though an inquisitive man, had never heard of them till his return from Germany.

Places of amusement.—The public amusements in Bath, as might be anticipated, are numerous, and conducted on a liberal scale. The most important of these are the subscription assemblies and concerts, which take place during the season, under the superintendence of a master-of-ceremonies. This office originated with the celebrated Beau Nash, who by a peculiar union of good sense, effrontery, wit, vivacity, and perseverance, acquired an ascendancy among the votaries of rank and fashion, which rendered him a species of modish despot, to whose decrees it was deemed a part of the loyalty of high breeding to yield implicit submission. The assemblies are held in the Upper assembly-rooms, in the vicinity of the Circus, which were erected by Wood, in 1791, at an expense of £20,000. The ball-room is 105 feet in length, 43 feet wide, and 42 in height. The Lower assembly-rooms stood near the Parade, and were also very elegantly fitted up, though on a less extensive scale. They were destroyed by fire in 1820. The theatre is a handsome edifice on the south side of Beaufort-square. It is fitted up in a splendid style with three tiers of boxes, and the roof is divided into compartments, now containing the beautiful paintings by Cassali, which formerly occupied a similar situation in Fonthill abbey. In the vicinity of the town, especially on Lansdown and Claverton downs, there are delightful spots for equestrian exercise. Races take place on Lansdown, in the week after Ascot races; and in April there is a spring-meeting for half-bred mares. The influx of visitors now takes place about Christmas, and the "season" lasts till the end of May or beginning of June. Formerly it was much earlier. The manners of the place, and the motives of those who visit it, have been most ludicrously described in Anstey's well-known poem entitled 'The New Bath Guide.' In Defoe's tour we have a satirical notice of this place and its visitors as severe in its way as any thing that Anstey has written. He says of Bath:—"It was of old a resort for cripples and diseased persons; and we see the crutches hang up at the several baths, as the thank-offerings of those who came either lame, and went away cured. But now we may say it is a resort of the sound, as well as the sick, and a place that helps the indolent and the gay to commit the worst of murders, that is to say, to kill time. To such it is indeed a constant round of diversion. In the morning, the young lady is brought in a close chair, dressed in her bathing-clothes, to the Cross-bath. There the music plays her into the bath, and the women who tend her, present her with a little floating wooden dish, like a bason; into which the lady puts an handkerchief and a nosegay, and of late the snuff-box is added. She then traverses the bath, if a novice, with a guide; if otherwise, by herself; and having amused herself near an hour, calls for her chair, and returns to her lodgings."

Institutions, Clubs, &c.—Several societies have been founded in Bath for literary and scientific purposes. The Bath Literary and Scientific institution was established in 1820. It consists of 175 proprietors, and 32 subscribers. The buildings occupy the site of the Lower assembly-rooms, and comprise a library, lecture-room, and museum, with apartments for the keeper.—The Bath and West of England society for the encouragement of agriculture, the arts, manufactures, and commerce, by the distribution of rewards and medals, was established in 1777, at the suggestion of Mr. Edmund Rack.—A mechanics' institution exists here. It possesses a library of upwards of a thousand volumes. Circulating libraries are numerous and well-supplied with books. The subscription club possesses a fine club-house in York buildings, adjoining the York hotel. It was established in 1790. The members are elected by ballot; but the members of the London west-end clubs are eligible without ballot. There are other subscription clubs of inferior note.

Charities.—The public charities in Bath are numerous and well-administered. The Bath hospital, founded in 1742, is an establishment open to poor persons from all parts of the kingdom, who may be suffering under diseases capable of being benefited by the use of the Bath waters. It contains 133 beds, and is supported by subscription. The number of persons admitted in 1838—chiefly acute cases—amounted to 505.—The United hospital, founded by the junction of the Bath city infirmary and the Bath casualty hospital, in 1826, is a spacious building near the Cross-bath. The number of in-patients relieved in 1839 amounted to 1,029; of out-patients, to 12,077; and the expenditure to £3,034 12s. 11d. A valuable anatomical museum is attached to this hospital; and a course of anatomical lectures is given every winter. The library contains some hundred volumes.—There is an infirmary for diseases of the eye, in Pierreport place, supported by subscription. This institution was founded in 1811, and the number of patients cured during the twenty-five years of its existence has been 12,545. Those admitted in 1837 amounted to 747; cured 634. Expenditure £86. There are also societies for the relief of women during child-birth; an asylum for orphans and unprotected females; a penitentiary; a humane society; societies for the suppression of vagrants, and the relief of persons imprisoned for small debts, and various others having more or less extensive benevolent views, and almost all supported by subscription.—"In the south-west part of the city," says Tanner, "near the Cross and Hot baths, is the hospital of St. John the Baptist, founded by Reginald Fitz-Jocelyn, bishop of Bath, about the year 1180, for the succour of poor people resorting to these baths. Its revenues were valued, 28th Henry VIII., at £27 4s. 11d., per annum in the whole, and £22 19s. 6d. clear. And, escaping the general dissolution, there are twelve poor people still maintained in it. Queen Elizabeth granted the advowson of it, in 1578, to the mayor and commonalty of the city of Bath." The annual revenue of this hospital in 1818 was £11,395. Here is also a hospital called the Bimsberies, or Black alms hospital, in Bimbery-lane, founded in the reign of Edward VI.—Another charity on a most liberal scale is well known by the name of Partis' college. It is a capacious range of houses on New-bridge-hill, near the road to Bristol, arranged in the form of a quadrangle of which one side is open, and containing a chapel and thirty separate dwelling-houses. These are given to thirty decayed gentlewomen, ten of whom must be either daughters or widows of clergymen: each has a house of four apartments, a garden, and a liberal pecuniary allowance. This was founded and endowed by Mrs. Partis, in fulfilment of the intention of her husband, Fletcher Partis, Esq., who died before carrying it into effect. There are besides many other smaller charities and gifts.

Schools.—A free grammar school was founded in Bath, and endowed with lands belonging to some dissolved religious houses, by Edward VI.; the management is vested in the corporation, who appoint the master. He has a salary of £84 per annum and a free house, on the original foundation; but in addition to this, the rectory of Charlecombe was annexed to the mastership, by the Rev. William Robins, for the instruction of ten additional boys, sons of freemen or inhabitants of Bath, in classical and commercial learning. The present building was erected in 1752.—A Blue-coat school for fifty boys and fifty girls, was founded in 1711, by Robert Nelson. On leaving the school each boy receives £6, and each girl £5, to be expended in apprenticing them.—Besides these there are several infant and Sabbath schools. To one of the Roman Catholic chapels 2 charity schools for boys and girls are attached. There is also a Central National school here.—A college, to be called Queen's college, has been projected in this city. The situation chosen for the buildings is a rising-ground under Sham castle. The expense of the edifice is estimated at £26,000. The works are in progress, and it is fully expected that the institution will prove a most successful one to all interested. Two preparatory schools are projected at Keynsham, midway between Bath and Bristol.—A splendid Roman Catholic collegiate establishment has been erected at Prior park.

History.—The origin of Bath is involved in obscurity. Its name, and in all probability its original importance, were derived from its medicinal springs. The traditional account of its foundation is this:—Bladud, son of Lud, king of Britain, about 890 B. C. was afflicted with leprosy. This misfortune caused him to be banished from court; and for some time he wandered about in search of means for the cure or alleviation of his malady. At last he was led to make trial of the waters of Bath, under the use of which he recovered his health and vigour; whereupon, after his accession, he erected a palace and founded a town here. So late as 1699, a statue of Bladud was erected in the king's bath, with an inscription commemorating the circumstance; but the absolute want of corroborative evidence has caused this tradition to be now looked on as fabulous. There is no evidence to prove that the virtues of the Bath waters were known to the inhabitants of the district prior to the Roman invasion: although some have maintained that the Britons had a town here, called Caer Badon, or 'the place of Baths.' Be this as it may, it seems beyond a doubt that the town was enlarged, and baths erected, in the reign of Claudius. The site of these baths was discovered in 1755, in removing the foundations of the old abbey-house, or priory, at the depth of from 11 to 20 feet below the surface of the ground. Bath soon became a favourite resort of the Romans, who subsequently bestowed upon it the name of Aquæ Solis; it was also the Fontis Calidæ of Ptolemy and Antoninus. Bath was abandoned by the Romans in the 5th century. It now bore the name of Caer Palladur, i. e. 'the city of the waters of Pallas,' and fell into the possession of the Britons, who held it for more than a century. The Saxon sway at last prevailed in England, and, in the year 577, the memorable victory at Deorham, about 8 miles from Bath, gave that city into their hands. It was instantly ravaged and abandoned to indiscriminate plunder; but the walls rose again on their ancient foundations, and it became a Saxon city. The Saxons called it Hat Baden, or 'hot baths,' and Acemannes-ceaster, 'the city of sick men.' One of the earliest monastic institutions was founded at Bath, after the conversion of England to Christianity. Bishop Tanner thus speaks of it: "King Osric built in the year 676, a nunnery here, which being destroyed by the Danes during the wars of the Heptarchy, King Offa, about the year 775, is said to have rebuilt the church of St. Peter, and to have placed secular canons therein who soon became famous. But King Edgar removed them, and in their room fixed here, about 970, an abbot and convent of Benedictine monks. These continued here till the general dissolution; but John, bishop of Wells, having obtained a grant of this city and monastery from William the Conqueror, and finely new built the church of St. Peter, made it his cathedral, and assumed the title of bishop of Wells, in the time of Henry I., and henceforth the monks were governed by a prior. The yearly revenues of this monastery were valued, 26th Henry VIII., at £695 6s. 1d., and the site of it was granted, in the 34th of the same reign, to Humphrey Collins." At the time of the Norman survey, Bath was returned as containing 178 burgesses, of whom 64 held under the king, 90 under different feudatories of the Crown, and 24 under the abbot of St. Peter's. The town was taken by assault and burnt to the ground, by Geoffrey, Bishop of Constance, and Robert de Mowbray, who supported the claim of Robert, Duke of Normandy, to the throne of England, in opposition to William Rufus. In 1090, it was bought by John de Villula, Bishop of Wells, from Henry I. That prelate erected the church of St. Peter, and took up his residence here. During the reign of Stephen, Bath and its vicinity was the scene of frequent conflicts between the adherents of the king and the partisans of the empress Matilda, who had her headquarters at Bristol. The bishops continued to be the feudal superiors, in right of the purchase by John de Villula, till the year 1193, when it was transferred to Richard I. by Bishop Savaric, in exchange for the abbey of Glastonbury. Bath was now made a free borough with certain important privileges, and began to rise in wealth and importance. The abbey became very rich; and during its season of prosperity the monks introduced the manufacture of woollen cloth—which had first appeared in England in about 1330—in consequence of which the shuttle was introduced into the armorial bearings of the monastery. In 1377, Bath contained no more than 579 lay-inhabitants. In the early part of the civil wars, it was fortified for the king, but on the retreat of Hertford into Wales, it was taken by the army of the parliament, and became the head-quarters of the army raised in this part of the country by General Waller. The battle of Lansdown took place in the vicinity in 1643; but the city was ultimately surrendered to parliament in 1645. After the Restoration, Charles II. visited Bath, his physicians having recommended the internal use of the waters, a practice which soon thereafter became general. In the reign of James II., Bath closed its gates against the Duke of Monmouth; and even so late as the rebellion of 1715, many of the inhabitants exhibited a strong predilection in favour of the exiled family. From this period the history of Bath presents nothing remarkable. The most interesting points connected with its subsequent history are those which mark the various changes and improvements which it has successively undergone. The project of extending the city, and embellishing it with handsome streets, was first suggested about the year 1728 by Mr. John Wood, an enterprising architect, whose plans were facilitated by the abundance of excellent freestone which the neighbouring hills supplied, and by the warmth with which his plans were encouraged by the proprietors of land in the vicinity. Bath is now one of the handsomest cities in England. To its natural advantages of situation it owes not a little; but the resources of art have also been liberally expended upon it.—Many celebrated persons have been born or have resided in Bath; of these it is impossible to give a list in a work like the present; we cannot, however, avoid mentioning Sir John Harington; John Hales, afterwards professor of Greek in Oxford; Christopher Anstey, author of 'The New Bath Guide'; and John Palmer, the projector of mail-coaches. The principal historian of Bath is the Rev. Richard Warner, whose work was published in 1801, in 1 vol. 4to.

BATHAMPTON, a parish in the hund. of Hampton and Claverton, union of Bath, county of Somerset; 2 miles north-east of Bath, and intersected by the Great Western railway. It lies on the north side of the Avon, opposite to Bath-easton, and is connected with the city of Bath by a series of suburban villas. Living, a discharged vicarage, in the archd. of Bath and dio. of Bath and Wells; valued at £7 17s. 1d., united with that of Bathford. There are two small daily schools here. Pop., in 1801, 157; in 1831, 314. Houses 55. Acres 860. A. P. £2,560. Poor rates, in 1837, £54.

BATHEALTON, a parish in the hund. of Milverton, Wellington division, county of Somerset; 3 miles south of Wiveliscombe, in the neighbourhood of the Western canal, and Bristol and Exeter railway. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Bath, and dio. of Bath and Wells; valued at £7 2s. 6d. Patron, in 1835, the Rev. Ed. Webber. There is a day and Sunday school here. Pop., in 1801, 123; in 1831, 98. Houses 18. Acres 740. A. P. £1,789. Poor rates, in 1837, £82.

BATH-EASTON, a parish in the liberty and union of Bath, hund. of Bath-Forum, county of Somerset; 2½ miles north-east of Bath, near the line of the Great Western railway. It is divided into Upper and Lower Bath-Easton, and lies on the north bank of the Avon. The line of houses being now entirely uninterrupted, it may almost be regarded as a part of the city of Bath. Living, a discharged vicarage, with the curacy of St. Catharine annexed, in the archd. of Bath and dio. of Bath and Wells; valued at £9 6s. 5d.; gross income £340; in the patronage of the dean and canons of Christ-church, Oxford. The church is an elegant Gothic structure, having a handsome embattled tower, with a peal of 12 bells. This church was very early appropriated to the abbey of St. Peter, in Bath. About the year 1262, some dispute having taken place between the prior and convent of that monastery and the vicar of Bath-easton, relative to certain tithes, the following composition was agreed to by the parties: It was stipulated, that the vicar should receive all the oblations, mortuaries and tithes within his parish, except in such lands as belonged to the prior and convent, a free house and garden, and the grass of the churchyard; in consideration of which grants, he was bound to sustain all the ordinary vicarial burdens, both in the church of Bath-easton and in the chapel of St. Catharine, for the daily service of which he was to find a chaplain at his own expense. The parish is within the jurisdiction of a court of requests held at Bath every Wednesday for the recovery of debts under £10. See article BATH.—There are six daily schools here, one of which has an endowment for the education of ten boys, a boarding-school, and two Sunday schools. In 1838, there was a silk-mill here, employing 32 hands. On Salisbury-hill in the neighbourhood, are the traces of a circular intrenchment, supposed to have been the camp of the Saxons during the siege of Bath in 577. Pop., in 1801, 1,072; in 1831, 1,783. Houses 341. Acres 1,900. A. P. £4,094. Poor rates, in 1837, £491.

BATHELE. See BALE.

BATHERM (THE), a small river of Devonshire which flows into the Exe about a mile from Bampton.

BATHFORD, a parish in the hund. of Bath-Forum, union of Bath, county of Somerset; 4 miles east-north-east of Bath, and intersected by the Great Western railway, which passes 7 chains to the right of the village. It stands on a picturesque neighbourhood, on the left bank of the Avon, from a ford over which it took its name. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Bath and dio. of Bath and Wells; valued at £8 18s.; gross income, with Bathampton, £410; tithes commuted in 1839, aggregate tithes, the property of the impropiator, £114; vicarial tithes £160. Patrons, the dean and chapter of Bristol. There are three daily schools here. See article BATH.—In the vicinity is a picturesque eminence called Hampton cliffs, the views from which are remarkably fine. Pop., in 1801, 563; in 1831, 870. Houses 166. Acres 2,030. A. P. £4,957. Poor rates, in 1837, £242.

BATH-FORUM, a hundred in the division of Bath, county of Somerset. Area 15,550 acres. Houses 3,683. Pop., in 1831, 21,109.

BATH-HAMPTON. See BAMPTON, Devon.

BATHLEY, or BATHELEY, a township in the parish of North-Muskhams, county of Nottingham; 3½ miles north-west of Newark-upon-Trent. Pop., in 1801, 172; in 1831, 197. Houses 43. Acreage with the parish. Poor rates, in 1837, £63.

BATHURST, in the hund. of Battle, rape of Hastings, Sussex. "Bathurst is not far from Battle Abbey, and belonged to the family of that name, who were dispossessed thereof, and the castle demolished, in the times of the disputes between the houses of York and Lancaster, of which nothing remains but some ruins in a wood called Bathurst wood."—Burrell's MSS. No. 5,681, page 95.

BATHURST, in the hund. of Hawksborough, rape of Hastings, Sussex.—"Bathurst is a manor in Warbleton, whose lord was Lewine de Baderheste. It has now (17th Geo. III.) the same owners as Cralle. Bathurst wood, called also Bothurst wood, lies in the parish of Battle, was part of the demesnes of that abbey, and contained 403 acres, 0 r. 15 p."—Burrell's MSS. No. 5,679, page 29.

BATHWICK, a parish in the hund. of Bath-Forum, union of Bath, county of Somerset; but included within the parliamentary boundaries of the city of Bath, and intersected by the Kennet and Avon canal, and the Great Western railway. This is one of the most important suburbs of the city of Bath, with which it is connected by two handsome bridges over the river Avon. It contains some of the finest streets in Bath, among which are Great Pultney Street, Laura Street, Sydney Place, &c. Here are also the Sydney-gardens; for a description of which see article BATH. At the beginning of last century, this parish contained only a few scattered houses situated in a marshy district, frequently overflowed by the river. Living, a rectory and vicarage, with Wolley, in the archd. of Bath and dio. of Bath and Wells. The rectory is valued at £3 6s. 3d.; the vicarage at £8 3s. 4d.; gross income of both £210. Patron, in 1835, the Duke of Cleveland. The church was erected in 1820, and is a handsome and spacious building. It contains a beautiful altar-piece, the production of Mr B. Barber. This parish possesses twelve daily and three Sunday schools. Bathwick is within the liberty of the city of Bath, and under the jurisdiction of the courts of that city. See BATH.—Pop., in 1801, 2,720; in 1831, 4,035. Houses 693. Acres 630. A. P. £35,242. Poor rates, in 1837, £1,456.

BATLEY, a parish partly in the lower division of the wapentake of Agbrigg, and partly in the wapentake of Morley, union of Dewsbury, west riding of the county of York; 6½ miles north-east of Wakefield, near the York and North Midland railway. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. and dio. of York; valued at £16 11s. 8d., in the parliamentary returns at £150; gross income £200. Patrons, in 1835, the Earl of Wilton and the Earl of Cardigan, alternately. The parish-church was erected in the reign of Henry VI. A new church was built here by the parliamentary commissioners, in the Gothic style, at an expense of £2,953 2s. 6d. Sittings 1,000. An Independent chapel was erected here in 1839. The inhabitants are employed in the manufacture of carpets, and woollen cloths. In 1838, there were 21 woollen mills here, employing 1,332 hands. In 1812, the Rev. William Lee founded a free school here for the education of 60 children, and endowed it with an estate which now yields £120 per annum; in 1818, the school-house, and a house for the master, were rebuilt. A small endowment was left in 1806, by Joshua Scholefield, for the education of five poor children; and a school for 15 girls is supported by subscription. Besides these there are nine daily schools, containing 421 pupils, and six Sunday schools. This parish is within the jurisdiction of the new court of requests for the parishes of Halifax, Bradford, &c., and contains the townships of Batley, Morley, and Churwell, with the chapelry of Gildersome. Pop., in 1821, 9,154; in 1831, 11,335. Houses 2,309. Acres 6,890. A. P. £14,977. Poor rates, in 1837, £927.

BATSFORD, or BATTESFORD, a parish in the upper division of the hund. of Kiftsgate, county of Gloucester; 2 miles north-west of Moreton, in the neighbourhood of the Moreton and Stratford railway. Living, a rectory, formerly in the dio. of Gloucester, now in the archd. of Gloucester and dio. of Gloucester and Bristol; valued at £13 3s. 9d.; gross income £395; in the patronage of the dean and canons of Christ-church, Oxford. There is a Sunday school here, and the children belonging to the parish have the privilege of attending an endowed school at Moreton-in-the-Marsh. The great Roman road to Cirencester passes through this parish, and there are traces of a Roman intrenchment. Pop., in 1801, 89; in 1831, 107. Houses 19. Acres 980. A. P. £2,004. Poor rates, in 1837, £128.

BATTEL. See BATTLE, Sussex.

BATTERLEY, a township in the parish of Barthomley, northern division of the hund. of Firehill, county of Stafford; 6 miles south-east of Sandbach, in the vicinity of the Grand Junction railroad from Birmingham to Liverpool. Pop., in 1821, 242; in 1831, 305. Houses 55. Acres 1,020. Poor rates, in 1837, £169.

BATTERSBY, a township in the parish of Ingleby-Greenhoe, western division of the liberty of Langbaugh, north riding, county of York; 5 miles east of Stokesley. Pop., in 1801, 78; in 1831, 77. Houses 16. Acres 740. Assessed property and poor rates with the parishes.

BATTERSEA, a parish in the western division of the hund. of Brixton, union of Wandsworth and Clapham, county of Surrey; 4 miles south-west of London; intersected by the Southampton and London railroad. Living, a vicarage in the archd. of Surrey and dio. of Winchester; valued at £13 15s. 2½d.; gross income £1,044. Patron, in 1835, Earl Spencer. In consequence of the manner in which the ground is laid out, the tithes are very productive, and the living is one of the most valuable in the neighbourhood of London. The church, which was rebuilt in 1777, is a neat brick structure; it has a tower with a small spire, and stands on the margin of the river. A new church was erected here by the parliamentary commissioners, in the Gothic style, with belfry, at an expense of £2,819 1s. 10d. Sittings 596. The living is a curacy subordinate to the vicarage. The Baptists and Wesleyan Methodists have also places of worship here. The Baptist church was formed in 1796. There are here eight daily schools, one of which has an endowment of £92 16s. per annum, and four infant schools.—This place is denominated in Domesday-book, Patricesey, or Peter-sey, from its having anciently belonged to the abbey of St Peter at Westminster. It lies on the southern side of the Thames, opposite Chelsea. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in agriculture, and raise a large quantity of vegetables for the London market. This parish is within the jurisdiction of the Central criminal court. A court-leet is held by the lord of the manor at Wandsworth, when constables and a headborough for the parish of Battersea are appointed. A fair was formerly held at Easter, but it has been suppressed. In this parish, on the site subsequently occupied by Hodges & Co.'s distillery, stood the mansion of the St John family. This mansion was often visited by Pope, who is said to have written some of his works here in a small parlour wainscotted with cedar and overlooking the Thames. The last Lord Bolingbroke died here in 1751, at the age of 79. Pop., in 1801, 3,365; in 1831, 5,540. Houses 957. Acres 3,020. A. P. £33,060. Poor rates, in 1837, £3,701.

BATTISFORD, a parish in the hund. and union of Bosmere and Claydon, county of Suffolk; 2 miles west of Needham. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Suffolk and dio. of Norwich; valued at £8 Os. 7½d.; gross income £312. Patron, in 1835, G. Paske, Esq. There are two daily schools here. "An hospital of knights of St John of Jerusalem, was erected here so early as the reign of Henry II., and was valued, 26th Henry VIII., at £53 10s. per annum; and was granted, 35th Henry VIII., to Sir Richard Gresham."—Tanner's Not. Mon. Pop., in 1801, 290; in 1831, 436. Houses 62. Acres 1,340. A. P. £1,680. Poor rates, in 1837, £152.

BATTLE, a hund. in the rape of Hastings, county of Sussex. It contains the parishes of Battle and Whatlington. Area 9,480 acres. Houses 533. Pop., in 1831, 3,285. "This hundred is a franchise, the inhabitants whereof are exempt from attending assizes and sessions, or serving on juries, and the lord of the manor appoints a coroner thereof."—Burrell's MSS. "The whole rape or honour of Hastings is contributory to the hundred of Battle, which was formerly paid to the abbot, and is now to Sir Wm. Webster, Bart., lord of that hundred, viz.: £1 9s. 4d. per annum by Thomas, Lord Pelham. This manor extends over thirteen parishes, it is a manor paramount."—Ib.

BATTLE, or BATTEL, a parish and market-town in the hund. and union of Battle, rape of Hastings, county of Sussex; 8 miles north-west of Hastings. Living, a vicarage, with the name and jurisdiction of a deanery, in the archd. of Lewes and dio. of Chichester; valued at £24 13s. 4d.; gross income £480. Patron, in 1835, Sir Godfrey Webster, Bart. The church is a handsome structure, in a mixed style of architecture in which the Norman predominates; it consists of a nave, a chancel, and two aisles, and has a lofty tower. The Baptists, Wesleyan Methodists, and Swedenborgians, have places of worship here. The Baptist church was formed in 1793; the Swedenborgian in 1829. This parish possesses twelve daily schools, one of which is endowed for the instruction of 30 children, a day and Sunday National school, and two Sunday schools. The village consists principally of a single street, which runs up a rising ground, at a little distance from the upper termination of which stands the celebrated abbey. The town is within the jurisdiction of the county magistrates, who hold the petty-sessions for the Battle division of the rape of Hastings, in the George Inn here. At this place a work-house has been erected, by the poor-law commissioners for the union of Battle, at an expense of £500. The Battle poor-law union comprehends 14 parishes, embracing an area of 78 square miles; with a population returned in 1831, at 12,068. The average annual expenditure on the poor of this district, during the three years preceding the formation of the union, was £15,314. Expenditure, in 1838, £6,435. It stands in a beautiful valley, surrounded by wooded eminences, and is lighted, and well-supplied with water. This town is famous for the manufacture of fine gunpowder, for which there are several mills. A market was granted so early as the reign of Henry I., when the town had risen to some importance. The market-day is Thursday; and fairs are held on Whitmonday and November 22d, and one for cattle on the second Tuesday of every month. This place was formerly called, according to Burrell, St Mary-in-the-Wood, and took its present appellation from the celebrated battle between William duke of Normandy, and Harold king of England, fought on the 14th of October, 1066, in which the latter lost his crown and life. This is usually called the battle of Hastings, though in fact it took place at a considerable distance to the northward of that town. The reader will be pleased with the following animated description of this famous battle from Palgrave's History:—"The English were strongly fortified in their position by lines of trenches and palisadoes; and within these defences they were marshalled according to the Danish fashion, shield against shield, presenting an impenetrable front to the enemy. The men of Kent formed the vanguard, for it was their privilege to be the first in the strife. The burgesses of London, in like manner, claimed and obtained the honour of being the royal body-guard, and they were drawn up around the standard. At the foot of this banner stood Harold, with his brothers, Leofwin and Gurth, and a chosen body of the bravest thanes, all anxiously gazing on that quarter, from whence they expected the advance of the enemy. Before the Normans began their march, and very early in the morning of the feast of St Calixtus, William had assembled his barons around him, and exhorted them to maintain his righteous cause. As the invaders drew nigh, Harold saw a division advancing, composed of the volunteers from the county of Boulogne and from the Amiennois, under the command of William Fitz-Osbern and Roger Montgomery. 'It is the duke!'—exclaimed Harold—'and little shall I fear him. By my forces, will his be four times outnumbered!' Gurth shook his head, and expatiated on the strength of the Norman cavalry, as opposed to the foot soldiers of England; but their discourse was stopped by the appearance of the combined cohorts, under Aimeric, viscount of Thouars, and Alan Fergant of Brittany. Harold's heart sunk at the sight, and he broke out into passionate exclamations of fear and dismay. But now the third and last division of the Norman army was drawing nigh. The consecrated gonfanon floats amidst the forest of spears; and Harold is now too well aware that he beholds the ranks which are commanded in person by the duke of Normandy. As the Normans were marshalled in three divisions, so they began the battle by simultaneous attacks upon three points of the English forces. Immediately before the duke, rode Taillefer, the minstrel, singing, with a loud and clear voice, the lay of Charlemagne and Roland, and the emprises of the paladins who had fallen in the dolorous pass of Roncevaux. Taillefer, as his guerdon, had craved permission to strike the first blow, for he was a valiant warrior, emulating the deeds which he sung: his appellation, 'Taille-fer,' is probably to be considered not as his real name, but as an epithet derived from his strength and prowess; and he fully justified his demand, by transfixing the first Englishman whom he attacked, and by felling the second to the ground. The battle now became general, and raged with the greatest fury. The Normans advanced beyond the English lines, but they were driven back, and forced into a trench, where horses and riders fell upon each other in fearful confusion. More Normans were slain here, than in any other part of the field. The alarm spread; the light troops left in charge of the baggage and the stores thought that all was lost, and were about to take flight, but the fierce Odo, bishop of Bayeux, the duke's half-brother, and who was better fitted for the shield than for the mitre, succeeded in reassuring them, and then, returning to the field, and rushing into that part where the battle was hottest, he fought as the stoutest of the warriors engaged in the conflict, directing their movements and inciting them to slaughter. From nine in the morning till three in the afternoon, the successes on either side were nearly balanced. The charges of the Norman cavalry gave them great advantage, but the English phalanx repelled their enemies; and the soldiers were so well protected by their targets, that the artillery of the Normans was long discharged in vain. The bowmen, seeing that they had failed to make any impression, altered the direction of their shafts, and, instead of shooting point-blank, the flights of arrows were directed upwards, so that the points came down upon the heads of the men of England, and the iron shower fell with murderous effect. The English ranks were exceedingly distressed by the volleys, yet they still stood firm; and the Normans now employed a stratagem to decoy their opponents out of their intrenchments. A feigned retreat on their part, induced the English to pursue them with great heat. The Normans suddenly wheeled about, and a new and fiercer battle was urged. The field was covered with separate bands of foemen, each engaged with one another. Here, the English yielded—there, they conquered. One English thane, armed with a battleaxe, spread dismay amongst the Frenchmen. He was cut down by Roger de Montgomery. The Normans have preserved the name of the Norman baron, but that of the Englishman is lost in oblivion. Some other English thanes are also praised, as having singly, and by their personal prowess, delayed the ruin of their countrymen and country. At one period of the battle, the Normans were nearly routed. The cry was raised, that the duke was slain, and they began to fly in every direction. William threw off his helmet, and galloping through the squadrons, rallied his barons, though not without great difficulty. Harold, on his part, used every possible exertion, and was distinguished as the most active and bravest amongst the soldiers in the host which he led on to destruction. A Norman arrow wounded him in the left eye; he dropped from his steed in agony, and was borne to the foot of the standard. The English began to give way, or, rather, to retreat to the standard as their rallying point. The Normans encircled them, and fought desperately to reach this goal. Robert Fitz Ernest had almost seized the banner, but he was killed in the attempt. William led his troops on, with the intention, it is said, of measuring his sword with Harold. He did encounter an English horseman, from whom he received such a stroke upon his helmet that he was nearly brought to the ground. The Normans flew to the aid of their sovereign, and the bold Englishman was pierced by their lances. About the same time, the tide of battle took a momentary turn. The Kentish men and East Saxons rallied, and repelled the Norman barons; but Harold was not amongst them; and William led on his troops with desperate intrepidity. In the thick crowd of the assailants and the assailed, the hoofs of the horses were plunged deep into the gore of the dead, and the dying. Gurth was at the foot of the standard, without hope, but without fear—he fell by the falchion of William. The English banner was cast down, and the gonfanon planted in its place, announced that William of Normandy was the conqueror.—It was now late in the evening. The English troops were entirely broken, yet no Englishman would surrender. The conflict continued in many parts of the bloody field, long after dark. The fugitives spread themselves over the adjoining country, then covered with wood and forest. Wherever the English could make a stand, they resisted; and the Normans confess that the great preponderance of their force, alone enabled them to obtain the victory. By William's orders, a spot close to the gonfanon was cleared, and he caused his pavilion to be pitched among the corpses which were heaped around. He there supped with his barons; and they feasted among the dead. But when he contemplated the fearful slaughter, a natural feeling of pity, perhaps allied to repentance, arose in his stern mind; and the abbey of Battle, in which the prayer was to be offered up perpetually for the repose of the souls of all who had fallen in the conflict, was at once the monument of his triumph and the token of his piety. The abbey was most richly endowed: and all the land, for one league round about, was annexed to the Battle franchise. The abbot was freed from the authority of the metropolitan of Canterbury, and invested with archiepiscopal jurisdiction. The high altar was erected on the very spot where Harold's standard had waved; and the roll, deposited in the archives of the monastery, recorded the names of those who had fought with the Conqueror, and amongst whom the lands of broad England were divided. But all this pomp and solemnity has passed away like a dream. The 'perpetual prayer' has ceased for ever,—the roll of Battle is rent,—the shields of the Norman lineages are trodden in the dust,—the abbey is levelled with the ground—and a dank and reedy pool fills the spot where the foundations of the quire have been uncovered, merely for the gaze of the idle visitor, or the instruction of the moping antiquary."

The revenues of this celebrated abbey—Abbatia de Bello, as it was called in Latin—were valued, 26th Henry VIII., at £987 0s. 10¹/₂d., according to Speed, and the site was granted, in the 30th of the same reign, to Sir Anthony Browne. The extent of the ruins is still sufficient to show the magnificence of the original structure, which must have been nearly a mile in circuit. There are still to be seen some arches of the cloisters, an immense hall called the refectory, and the great gate at the entrance of the quadrangle, an apartment which was used as a townhouse until the year 1794. A considerable portion of the conventual buildings has been made available in the erection of a mansion-house for the lord of the manor. The foundation of the abbey was soon followed by that of the town. Pop., in 1801, 2,040; in 1831, 2,999. Houses 497. Acres 7,880. A. P. £10,122. Poor rates, in 1837, £1,235.

BATTLE, a parish and village in the hund. of Merthyr, county of Brecon, union of Brecknock, South Wales; 3 miles north-east of Brecknock. It stands on the river Eskir, near its confluence with the Usk. Living, a perpetual curacy, in the archd. of Brecon and dio. of St David's, not in charge, valued at £5 5s.; gross income £73. Patrons, in 1835, the representatives of J. Brown. There are a daily and a Sunday school here. The origin of the name is uncertain. By some it is supposed to have been derived from a battle fought here in which Robert Fitzhamon and Jestyn ap Gwrmant slew Rhys ap Tudor, prince of South Wales, or from the invasion of the county of Brecon by Bernard de Newmarch. By others it is thought to be named after Battle in Sussex, where was the mother church of the priory of Brecon. Pop., in 1821, 183; in 1831, 192. Houses 35. A. P. £975. Poor rates, in 1837, £61.

BATTLE-BRIDGE, a hamlet in the parish of Pancras, county of Middlesex; 1½ mile north of St Paul's, London. Here is a mineral spring, called St Chad's well. Pop. returned with the parish.

BATTLE-FIELD, a parish in the liberty of Shrewsbury, union of Atcham, county of Salop; 4 miles north-east of Shrewsbury. Living, a perpetual curacy formerly in the archd. of Salop and dio. of Lichfield and Coventry, now in the dio. of Chester; valued at £3, in the parliamentary returns at £121;

gross income £238. Patroness, in 1835, Mrs Corbett. There is a daily school here, containing 46 scholars. A fair for horned cattle and sheep is held here on the 2d of August.—The name is derived from the battle fought here on the 21st of July, 1403, being the eve of St Mary Magdalene, between Henry IV. and the rebels under Percy, earl of Northumberland. "The Scots, commanded by the valiant earl of Douglas, began the action by so furious an attack on the van of the royal army that it was thrown into disorder, and its leader, the young earl of Stafford, slain. King Henry, who commanded the main body of his army, advanced with great rapidity with a reinforcement; which encouraged his troops to rally and repel the enemy. In a little time the battle became general, and raged with uncommon fury. Each of the armies consisted of about 14,000 of the best troops in Britain. The leaders on both sides were equally brave, fired with the most violent animosity, and fought for their fortunes, honours, and lives, which rendered the conflict exceedingly fierce and obstinate. The king displayed the most consummate prudence as a general, and the most undaunted courage as a soldier, killing as it is said a great number of his enemies with his own hand. He was nobly supported by his son the Prince of Wales, who (though he was wounded in the face at the beginning of the action) gave a specimen of that intrepidity which afterwards acquired him so much glory. On the other side young Hotspur and the earl of Douglas are said to have performed prodigies of valour. Victory hovered over the two armies about three hours, sometimes seeming to incline to the one, and sometimes to the other. At length Hotspur being killed by an unknown hand, his troops were quite dispirited, and fled with great precipitation, leaving almost one half of their companions killed, wounded, or prisoners. The loss of the royal army in killed and wounded was also very great. The earl of Worcester, the baron of Kinderton, and Sir Richard Vernon, having been taken, were beheaded two days after the battle. The earl of Douglas was also taken; but was treated with all becoming civility and respect." Pop., in 1801, 83; in 1831, 70. Houses 12. Acres 850. A. P. £740. Poor rates, in 1837, £56.

BATTLES DEN, a parish in the hund. of Manshead, union of Woburn, county of Bedford; 3 miles south of Woburn, on the post road to Dunstable. Living a rectory, united with that of Potsgrove, formerly in the archd. of Bedford and dio. of Lincoln, now in the dio. of Ely; valued at £12 9s. 7d.; gross income £328. Patron, in 1835, Sir G. P. Turner, Bart. Earl Bathurst takes the title of baron from this place. It stands on the Roman road called Watling street. Pop., in 1801, 133; in 1831, 145. Houses 28. Acres 1,140. A. P. £2,420. Poor rates, in 1837, £167.

BAUGHURST, a parish in the hund. of Evingar, division and union of Kingsclere, county of Southampton; 4 miles east of Kingsclere. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Winchester, valued at £7 12s. 1d., and in the peculiar jurisdiction and patronage of the bishop of Winchester. It contains the tithings of Ham and Inhurst, and possesses a Sunday school. Charities to the poor of the parish amount to £3 per annum. Pop., in 1801, 358; in 1831, 491. Houses 82. Acres 1,020. A. P. £972. Poor rates, in 1837, £163.

BAULKING, anciently BETHELKING, a hamlet and chapelry, formerly a market-town, in the parish of Uffington, hund. of Shrevenham, county of Berks; 3½ miles south-east of Farringdon, in the vicinity of the Great Western railway, and Berks and Wilts canal. Here is a chapel, the curacy of which is annexed to the vicarage of Uppingham. The great and small tithes of this township, the property of the lay-impropriator and vicar, commuted in 1777. Pop., in 1801, 173; in 1831, 185. Houses 19. Acreage with the parish. A. P. £2,798. Poor rates, in 1837, £151.

BAUMBER, or BAMBURGH, a parish in the northern division of the wapentake of Gartree, parts of Lindsey, county of Lincoln; 5 miles north-west of Horncastle. Living, a curacy not in charge, in the archd. and dio. of Lincoln, valued at £30; gross income £37. Patron, in 1835, the Duke of Newcastle. There is a daily school here. Pop., in 1801, 261; in 1831, 356. Houses 67. Acres 3,200. A. P. £2,927. Poor rates, in 1837, £173.

BAUNTON, a parish in the hund. of Crowthorne, and Minety, union of Cirencester, county of Gloucester; 2 miles north of Cirencester, near the Roman foss-way, which passes the eastern border of the parish. Living, a curacy not in charge, in the archd. and dio. of Gloucester, valued at £15; gross income £67. Patroness, in 1835, Miss Masters. There are a daily and a Sunday school here. Pop., in 1801, 108; in 1831, 144. Houses 30. Acres 1,310. A. P. £1,251. Poor rates, in 1837, £82.

BAUSELEY, a township in the parish of Alberbury, hund. of Deythur, county of Montgomery North Wales; 10 miles north-east of Welch Pool. The vicarial tithes, moduses, &c., the property of All Souls college, Oxford, and vicar, were commuted in 2^d Will. IV. Pop., in 1821, 418; in 1831, 365. Houses 78. A. P. £1,069. Poor rates, in 1837, £106.

BAVERSTOCK, a parish in the hund. of Cawden, and Cawdworth, Salisbury and Amesbury division, union of Wilton, county of Wilts; 4 miles west of Wilton, and intersected by the south-western railway. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Salisbury, valued at £11 10s. 2½d., and in the parliamentary returns at £150; gross income £325; Patrons, the rector and fellows of Exeter college, Oxford. Here are a daily and a Sunday school. Pop., in 1801, 120; in 1831, 166. Houses 23. Acres 710. A. P. £1,502. Poor rates, in 1837, £74.

BAVANT FIFIELD. See FIFIELD BAVANT.

BAVINGTON (GREAT), a township in the parish of Kirk-Whelpington, Northumberland; 11 miles north by east of Hexham. There are a Presbyterian meeting-house and a daily school here. Pop., in 1801, 82; in 1831, 70. Houses 15. Acreage with the parish. Poor rates, including Little Bavington, in 1837, £33.

BAVINGTON (LITTLE), a township in the parish of Thockrington, Northumberland; 10 miles north-north-east of Hexham. Pop., in 1801, 58 in 1831, 72. Houses 17. Acreage with the parish.

BAWBURGH, a parish in the hund. of Forehoe, county of Norfolk; 5 miles west of Norwich, on the river Yare. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Norfolk and dio. of Norwich; valued at £13 17s. 6d., rated in the parliamentary returns at £100; gross income £100; in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Norwich. There are three daily schools here, one of which is partially supported by J. J. Gurney, Esq. Pop., including that of the hamlet of Bowthorp, in 1801, 268; in 1831, 440. Houses 88. Acres 2,070. A. P. £1,940. Poor rates, in 1837, £35.

BAWDESWELL, or BALDESWELL, a parish in the hund. of Eynesford, union of Mitford and Launditch, county of Norfolk; 4 miles west of Reepham. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. of Norfolk and dio. of Norwich; valued at £7; gross income £214. Patron, in 1835, E. Lombe, Esq. There are three daily schools here, one of which is endowed with £20 per annum. Pop., in 1801, 456; in 1831, 587. Houses 131. Acres 1,310. A. P. £985. Poor rates, in 1837, £227.

BAWDRIIP, a parish in the northern division of the hund. of Petherton, union of Bridgewater, county of Somerset; 3 miles north-east of Bridgewater, in the neighbourhood of the Bristol and Exeter railway. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Wells and dio. of Bath and Wells; valued at £15 19s. 7d.; gross income £370. Patron, in 1835, Edward Page, Esq. There is a daily school here. Pop., in 1801, 244; in 1831, 373. Houses 71. Acres 1,780. A. P. £4,350. Poor rates, in 1837, £86.

BAWDSEY, a parish in the hund. of Wilford, union of Woodbridge, Suffolk, bounded by the German ocean; 8 miles south-east of Woodbridge. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Suffolk and dio. of Norwich; valued at £6 13s. 4d.; gross income £170. Patron, the Crown. There is a Sunday school here supported by subscription. A market was formerly held here on Friday, under grant from Edward I.; but it has been allowed to fall into disuse. A fair is held on the 8th of September. Pop., in 1801, 344; in 1831, 454. Houses 89. Acres 2,640. A. P. £2,014. Poor rates, in 1837, £222.

BAWSEY, a parish in the Lynn division of the hund. of Freebridge, union of Freebridge Lynn, county of Norfolk; 2 miles east of King's Lynn. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. of Norfolk and dio. of Norwich; valued at £4; gross income £55. Patron, in 1835, A. Hamond, Esq. Pop., in 1801, 21; in 1831, 39. Houses 6. Acres 1,090. A. P. £631. Poor rates, in 1837, £18.

BAWTRY, a chapelry and market-town, partly in the parish of Blyth, southern division of the wapentake of Strafforth and Tickhill, west riding of Yorkshire, and partly in the Hatfield division of the hund. of Bassetlaw, county of Nottingham, though generally regarded as wholly in the former; 153 miles north by west of London, 9 south-east of Doncaster, and 44 south by east of York, on the river Idle. This is a chapelry to the parish of Blyth; the living is a curacy, not in charge, in the patronage of the vicar. The chapel was erected in the reign of Henry II., and rebuilt in 1686; a tower was added in 1712. The Wesleyan Methodists and Independents have places of worship here. This chapelry possesses five daily and two Sunday schools. The river Idle, or Iredale, on which it stands, forms at this place the boundary of the counties of York and Nottingham, and is navigable for small craft. The trade consists chiefly in the transportation of stone, timber, lead, and iron, to London, Hull, and other places. The market-day is Thursday; and fairs for cattle and horses are held on Whit-Thurs-day, and 23d of November. The principal North-road passes here, so that the town is a great thorough-fare. At Scrooby, 1 mile from Bawtry, is a farm-house, formed of the remains of an ancient palace of the archbishops of York, which was occupied by Cardinal Wolsey, and afterwards by Archbishop Sand. "In the uttermost edge of Harworth, near Bawtree, Robert Moreton, Esq., founded an hospital, before A. D. 1316, for an ecclesiastic master and certain poor people. It was dedicated to St Mary Magdalene, and valued, 26° Henry VIII., at £6 6s. 8d. per annum. It is yet in being, and in the patronage of the archbishop of York."—Tanner's Not. Mon. Pop., in 1801, 798; in 1831, 1,149. Houses 218. Acres £270. A. P. £1,857. Poor rates, in 1837, £401.

BAXTERLEY, a parish in the Atherstone division of the hund. of Hemlingford, union of Atherstone county of Warwick; 3½ miles west of Atherstone, in the neighbourhood of the Birmingham and Derby railway. Living, a discharged vicarage, formerly in the archd. of Coventry and dio. of Lichfield and Coventry, now in the dio. of Worcester; valued at £5; gross income £262; in the patronage of the Crown, and T. Boulthbee, Esq. Pop., in 1801, 194; in 1831, 189. Houses 42. Acres 850. A. P. £1,406. Poor rates, in 1837, £118.

BAYCLIFF, or BADPIT, a hamlet in the parish of Hill Deverhill, hund. of Heytesbury, Warminster division, county of Wilts; 5 miles west by south of Heytesbury. Here was formerly a free chapelry, valued at £2 11s. 8½d.

BAYDON, a parish in the hund. of Ramsbury, union of Hungerford, Marlborough and Ramsbury division, county of Wilts; 4½ miles north of Ramsbury. Living, a perpetual curacy, not in charge, in the archd. of Wilts and dio. of Salisbury, subordinate to the vicarage of Ramsbury; gross income £149. Patron, in 1835, A. Meyrick, Esq. This parish possesses two daily and two Sunday schools. Pop., in 1801, 290; in 1831, 358. Houses 79. Acres 3,060. A. P. £2,243. Poor rates, in 1837, £246.

BAYESDALE, in the parish of Stokesley, eastern division of the liberty of Langbaugh, north riding of the county of York.—"A small Cistercian nunnery, founded first at Hoton by Ralph de Nevil, about A. D. 1162. Afterward the nuns were at Thorpe, and towards the latter part of the time of King Henry II., by the benefaction of Guido de Bovingcourt, they settled at Basedale, in the parish of Stokesley, which was dedicated to the blessed Virgin Mary; had a prioress and eight or ten religious, whose income was rated, 26° Henry VIII., at £21 19s. 4d. It was granted, 36° Henry VIII., to John Thinde and Ralph Bulmer."—Tanner's Not. Mon.

BAYFIELD, a parish in the hund. of Holt, county of Norfolk; 2 miles north-west of Holt. Living, a discharged sinecure rectory in the archd. of Norfolk and dio. of Norwich; valued at £4; gross income £40. Patroness, in 1835, Mrs E. J. Best. Pop., in 1801, 17.—See GLANDFORD with BAYFIELD.

BAYFORD, a parish in the hund., union, and county of Hertford; 4 miles south-south-west of Hertford. Living, a curacy, not in charge, attached to the rectory of Essendon. The chapel contains some ancient monuments of the Baker family. The manor has been long in the possession of this family, at whose seat of Bayfordbury the original portraits of the members of the kit-kat club are preserved. See BARN-ELMS. There is a day and Sunday National school here, containing 60 pupils. Pop., in 1801, 235; in 1831, 332. Houses 51. Acres 1,450. A. P. £1,346. Poor rates, in 1837, £135.

BAYHAM, a hamlet in the parish of Frant, hund. of Rotherfield, rape of Pevensey, county of Sussex; 2 miles west of Lamberhurst. A monastery of Premonstratensian canons was founded here in 1200, of the buildings of which there are still some traces. At the general dissolution, its revenues were valued at £152 9s. 4½d. The marquess of Camden has a seat here, and takes the title of Viscount Bayham.

BAYLEHAM, a parish in the hund. of Bosmere and Claydon, county of Suffolk; 2½ miles south by east of Needham, on the post-road to Ipswich. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Suffolk and dio. of Norwich; valued at £12 4s. 9½d.; gross income £284. Patron, in 1835, N. Lee Acton, Esq. There are two daily schools here. Pop., in 1801, 232; in 1831, 238. Houses 48. Acres 830. A. P. £1,983. Poor rates, in 1837, £240.

BAYSWATER, a hamlet in the parish of Paddington, Middlesex; 3½ miles west of St Paul's, London, on the Uxbridge road, and in the vicinity of the Great Western railway. Here are extensive tea-gardens, which occupy the site of the gardens of the celebrated Sir John Hill, author of a voluminous system of botany and other works. Pop. returned with the parish.

BAYTON, a parish in the lower division of the hund. of Doddingtree, county of Worcester; 6 miles west by south of Bewdley. Living, a discharged vicarage united with that of Mable. The great and small tithes, moduses, &c., the property of the vicar, were commuted in 1814. There are two daily and two Sunday schools here. Pop., in 1801, 389; in 1831, 445. Houses 88. Acres 1,960. A. P. £1,904. Poor rates, in 1837, £121.

BAYVILL, a parish in the hund. of Kemess, county of Pembroke, South Wales; 2 miles north of Newport. It lies on the north side of Newport bay. Living, a discharged vicarage, in connection with the perpetual curacy of Moylgrove, in the archd. of Cardigan and dio. of St David's; valued at £5, and in the parliamentary returns at £95; gross income £224. Patron, the Crown. There are a daily and a Sunday school here. Pop., in 1821, 111; in 1831, 160. Houses 26. A. P. £284. Poor rates, in 1837, £58.

BAYWORTH, a hamlet in the parish of Sunningwell, county of Berks; 2½ miles north of Abingdon. Here was formerly a chapel-of-ease, now gone to decay, which, according to Lyson, was much resorted to for private marriages, before the marriage act. Pop. returned with the parish.

BEACHAMPTON, a parish in the hund., union, and county of Buckingham; 5 miles north-east of Buckingham, intersected by the Buckingham canal. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Buckingham and dio. of Lincoln; valued at £14 16s. 6½d.; gross income £380. Patrons, in 1835, the trustees of the Rev. — Wortley. There is a daily school here, endowed with lands producing £48 per annum, containing 68 children. Other charities connected with the parish produce £15 annually. Pop., in 1821, 251; in 1831, 254. Houses 47. Acres 2,110. A. P. £2,271. Poor rates, in 1837, £137.

BEACHAMWELL, a parish in the hund. of Clackclose, union of Swaffham, county of Norfolk; 5 miles west-south-west of Swaffham. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Norfolk and dio. of Norwich, formed of the consolidated and discharged rectories of All Saints, and St John's and St Mary's, the former of which is valued at £6 13s. 4d., and the latter at £9 13s. 4d.; gross income £191. Patron of All Saints with Shingham, the Crown; of St John's and St Mary's, in 1835, J. Motteaux, Esq. There is a Sunday school here. Pop., in 1821, 288; in 1831, 254. Houses 43. Acres 3,730. A. P. £2,076. Poor rates, in 1837, £124.

BEACHEY-HEAD, a promontory on the coast of Sussex, between Hastings and Seaford, and about 1½ mile south of Eastbourn, situated in N. lat. 50° 44', and E. long. 0° 13'. This is the highest headland on the southern coast of England, and is frequently the scene of shipwrecks in bad weather. A lighthouse was erected here in 1828. The light is revolving, and may be seen at the distance of 28 miles in clear weather. The rock rises in many places almost perpendicularly from the water, and is hollowed out into caverns, the resort of multitudes of sea-fowl. The country between this place and Arundel rises into the hills called the South Downs. On the 30th of June, 1690, the combined Dutch and English fleets were defeated within sight of this promontory, by a French armament of superior force.

BEACHINGSTOKE, or BISCHAM-STOKE, a parish in the hund. of Swanborough, union of Devizes, county of Wilts; 5½ miles east by south of Devizes. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Wilts and dio. of Salisbury; valued at £7 2s. 11d. Patron, in 1835, G. Henage, Esq. Pop., in 1801, 174; in 1831, 187. Houses 38. Acres 740. A. P. £1,529. Poor rates, in 1837, £140.

BEACHLEY, a hamlet in the parish of Tidenham, county of Gloucester, at the confluence of the Wye with the Severn; 3 miles south-south-east of Chepton. There is a ferry over the Severn at this place, which tradition refers to as the scene of a conference between Edward the Elder and Leolin, prince of Wales. Pop. returned with the parish.

BEACHWOOD, a hamlet in the parish of Flammsted, Hertford; 1½ mile south-west by west of Market-Street. "In this parish," says Tanner, "at a place formerly called Wodechurch, after St Giles-in-the-Wood, and lately Beachwood, Roger de Toney, in the time of Stephen, founded a small priory for nuns of the order of St Benedict, dedicated to St Giles, valued, 26° Henry VIII., at £46 16s. 1d., and granted 31° of the same reign to Sir Richard Page. Pop. returned with the parish.

BEACONSFIELD, a market-town and parish in the hund. of Burnham, union of Amersham, Buckinghamshire; 23 miles west by north of London, and 36 south-east of Buckingham. It stands on an eminence on which beacon-fires were formerly lighted, and from which the name is derived. Living, a rectory, formerly in the archd. of Buckingham and dio. of Lincoln, now in the dio. of Oxford; valued at £26 2s. 8½d.; gross income £855; net income £545; in the patronage of the president and fellows of Magdalene college, Oxford. The church, composed of flint and square-stones, comprises a nave, chancel, and side-aisles, with a tower at the west end. It belonged to an ancient monastery of Augustine monks, founded at Burnham, in 1165, by Richard, earl of Cornwall, the revenues of which were valued, at the dissolution, at £91 5s. 11d. Within it is interred the celebrated Edmund Burke, whose seat, called the Gregories, is in the neighbourhood. There is also a monument of white marble in the church to the memory of Edmund Waller, the poet, whose landed property was chiefly in this vicinity. Here are two Independent chapels, founded in 1730 and 1800. This parish possesses seven daily schools, in which 208 children are taught, besides three boarding and two Sunday schools. The town consists of four streets, which meet at the centre in a spacious market-place. The principal street forms a part of the road from Uxbridge to High-Wycombe, and is about three quarters of a mile in length. Petty-sessions are held in the Saracen's-head inn here, for the second division of the hundred of Burnham. The market-day is Wednesday, and fairs for horses, cows, and sheep, are held on the 13th of February and Holy Thursday, which are very well attended. Several minor charities exist here, supported by endowments conferred by members of the Waller family and others.—About 3 miles distant is Bulstrode, the celebrated seat of the duke of Portland. Pop., in 1801, 1,149; in 1831, 1,763. Houses 325. Acres 3,710. A. P. £5,924. Poor rates, in 1837, £580.

BEADLAM, or BEWDLAM, a township in the parish of Kirkdale, north riding of the county of York; 3 miles east of Helmsley. The great and small tithes of this township, the property of the lay-impropriator and vicar, were commuted in 1817. Pop., in 1801, 93; in 1831, 151. Houses 31. Acres 620. A. P. £1,032. Poor rates, in 1837, £85.

BEADNELL, a township and chapelry in the parish and ward of Bambrough, Northumberland; 9 miles south-east of Belford, on the sea-shore, near Beadnell-Point. Living, a perpetual curacy not in charge, in the archd. of Northumberland and dio. of Durham; valued in the parliamentary returns at £63; gross income £80; in the patronage of the perpetual curate of Bamfrough. The chapel is an elegant structure of the Gothic order. The village stands on the sea-shore, and has a small harbour. There is a daily school here, the master of which receives £5 5s. per annum from the trustees of Lord Crewe's charity, for teaching seven children. There is also a Sunday school supported by Shafto Craster, Esq. Pop., in 1801, 223; in 1831, 251. Houses 58. Acreage with the parish. Poor rates, in 1837, £141.

BEAFORD, a parish in the hund. of Shebbear, division of Black Torrington and Shebbear, union of Torrington, county of Devon; 5 miles south-east of Great Torrington. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Barnstaple and dio. of Exeter; valued at £11 15s. 7½d.; gross income £233. Patron, in 1835, Thomas May, Esq. There are three daily schools here. Pop., in 1801, 516; in 1831, 624. Houses 111. Acres 3,760. A. P. £1,796. Poor rates, in 1837, £265.

BEAGHALL, a township in the parish of Killington, west riding of the county of York; 4 miles east of Postefract. There are two daily schools here, one of which is endowed with £5 per annum. Pop., in 1801, 384; in 1831, 563. Houses 121. Acres 1,570. A. P. £3,775. Poor rates, in 1837, £252.

BEAKESBOURNE, or LYVINGBOURNE, a parish in the hund. of Bridge and Petham, lathe of St. Augustine, union of Bridge, county of Kent, and a member of the cinque port liberty of Hastings; ¾ miles east-south-east of Canterbury, on the post-road to Dover. Living, a vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Canterbury; valued at £8; gross income £920; in the patronage of the archbishop of Canterbury. There is a day and Sunday school here. Pop., in 1801, 216; in 1831, 351. Houses 50. Acres 1,200. Poor rates, in 1837, £190.

BEAL, a hamlet in the parish of Kyloe, district of Islandshire, which belongs to the co.-palatine of Durham, though situated in the north of Northumberland; 6½ miles north-north-west of Belford, on the post-road to Berwick-upon-Tweed. It is chiefly remarkable as having been the residence of the famous Irish female saint, Begogh. There were lands at Beal, in 1334, belonging ad caruificium, that is, of fee to the hangman.

BEAL (THE), a river of Kent, rising near Shadoxhurst; flowing north-west, and falling into the Medway, near Talding, a little below Twyford bridge.

BEALINGS (GREAT), a parish in the hund. of Carleford, union of Woodbridge, county of Suffolk; 2½ miles west of Woodbridge. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. of Suffolk and dio. of Norwich; valued at £10 4s. 7d.; gross income £250. Patron, in 1835, Lord Henniker. There are two daily schools in this parish. Pop., in 1801, 218; in 1831, 367. Houses 75. Acres 830. A. P. £1,658. Poor rates, in 1837, £105.

BEALINGS (LITTLE), a parish in the hund. of Carleford, union of Woodbridge, county of Suffolk; 3 miles west of Woodbridge. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Suffolk and dio. of Norwich, valued at £6 7s. 3½d.; gross income £140. Patron, in 1835, F. Smythies, Esq. There is a daily school here endowed with £10 per annum. Pop., in 1801, 277; in 1831, 272. Houses 56. Acres 410. A. P. £842. Poor rates, in 1837, £120.

BEAMINSTER-FORUM AND REDHONE HUNDRED, in the Bridport division of the county of Dorset. Area 34,550 acres. Houses 1,945. Pop., in 1831, 10,055.

BEAMINSTER, a market-town and chapelry in the parish of Netherbury, hund. of Beaminster-forum and Redhone, Bridport division and union of Beaminster, county of Dorset; 137 miles west-south-west of London, and 16 west-north-west of Dorchester. The chapelry contains the hamlets of Axknoll, Langham, Marsh, Meerhay, North Maper-ton, Parnham and Wansley. It is divided into two manors, which form the prebends of Beaminster Prima and Beaminster Secunda, in the cathedral church of Salisbury, the former valued at £20 2s. 6d., and the latter at £22 5s. 7½d. Living, a curacy not in charge, annexed to the vicarage of Netherbury, and in the peculiar jurisdiction of the dean of Salisbury. The chapel is a fine building, on an eminence on the south side of the town. The tower, which is nearly 100 feet in height, is ornamented with sculpture, and contains a peal of bells. The Independents have a place of worship here; the church having been formed in 1688.—Beaminster is a handsome town, on the river Birt, which is formed by the union of several rivulets rising in the immediate vicinity. It is a place of considerable antiquity, but most of the houses are comparatively modern, as it has three times suffered severely from fire. The first of these occurrences took place in 1644, during the civil wars, while it was occupied by Prince Maurice. The town was again burned to the ground in 1684. The last conflagration was in 1781, when upwards of fifty houses were consumed, but being nearly all insured, it did not materially affect the prosperity of the town. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the manufacture of sail-cloth; that of woollen cloth, formerly the principal one, has begun to decline. In 1838 there were three flax-mills here, employing 46 hands. There are also some potteries for the coarser kinds of earthen ware, and manufactories of tin, iron, and copper-ware. The market-day is Thursday; and fairs are held on the 4th of April, 19th of September, and 9th of October. Beaminster is one of the polling-places for the members for Dorsetshire. It is under the jurisdiction of the county magistrates. The quarter-sessions for the county were formerly held here, but have been removed to Bridport. Alms-houses for six aged persons were founded here, in 1627, by Sir John Strode of Parham, Knight. The interest of £200 is distributed among the poor, under the bequest of Gilbert Adams of Beaminster; and the reversion, after 99 years, of lands in the parish of Corscomb, producing £30 per annum, was left for the benefit of twelve distressed families in this chapelry, by the Rev. William Hillary, in 1712. Here is an endowed free school, founded in 1684 by Mrs Frances Tucker, for the education of 20 poor boys, of whom at least one annually must be sent to sea. The endowment has increased in value to £160 per annum, and the present number of scholars is 100. The Rev. Samuel Hood, father of Lords Hood and Bridport, was master of this school in 1715. There are other sixteen daily schools, containing collectively 355 pupils, and four Sunday schools. Pop., in 1801, 2,140; in 1831, 2,968. Houses 566. Acres 4,350. A. P. £11,659. Poor rates, in 1837, £1,273.—The Beaminster poor-law union comprehends 26 parishes, embracing an area of 80 square miles, with a population returned, in 1831, at £13,869. The average annual expenditure on the poor of this district, during the three years preceding the formation of the union, was £7,540. Expenditure, in 1838, £5,690.

BEAMISH, a township in the parish of Chester-le-street, co.-palatine of Durham; 5½ miles south-west of Gateshead, in the vicinity of the Stanhope and Tyne railway. The inhabitants are partly employed in the neighbouring collieries. Pop., in 1801, 1,574; in 1831, 1,848. Houses 322. Acres 4,120.

BEAMSLEY, a township, partly in the parish of Addingham, and partly in that of Skipton, upper division of the wapentake of Claro, west riding of Yorkshire; 6 miles east by north of Skipton. Here is an hospital, founded in the reign of Elizabeth by Margaret, countess of Cumberland, for 13 poor women. In 1820, the revenues amounted to £357 9s. 4d. per annum, from which annuities of £16 each are paid to twelve of the alms-women, and £18 to the thirteenth. Pop., in 1801, 276; in 1831, 279. Houses 49. Acres 1,820. A. P. £1,409. Poor rates, in 1837, £86.

BEANE (THE), a river which rises in the parish of Yardley, county of Hertford, and passing by Walton and Stapleford, discharges itself into the Lea, near Hoddesdon.

BEANLEY, a township in the parish of Eglingham, Northumberland; 7 miles north-west of Alnwick. There is a daily school here. On Hedgeley-moor, at a short distance from the village, is a cross erected in memory of Sir Ralph Percy, an officer attached to the house of Lancaster, who fell in 1484, in a battle with the Yorkists. Pop., in 1801, 164; in 1831, 169. Houses 30. Acreage with the parish. Poor rates, in 1837, £120.

BEARD, a township in the parish of Glossop, hund. of High Peak, county of Derby; 10½ miles north by west of Chapel-in-le-Grith. The Manchester and Sheffield railroad passes through the parish. In Beard, and the three adjoining hamlets, there are six daily, five Sunday, and two infant schools. Pop., in 1801, 297; in 1831, 283. Houses 54. Acreage with the parish. Poor rates, including Allersett, Whittle, &c., in 1837, £756.

BEARL, a hamlet in the parish of Bywell-St-Andrew, county of Northumberland; 2 miles north of Bywell. Pop., in 1801, 69; in 1831, 70. Houses 13. Acreage with the parish. Poor rates, in 1837, £20.

BEARLEY, a parochial chapelry in the Snitterfield division of the hund. of Barlichway, county of Warwick; 4 miles north-north-west, on the post-road to Henley-in-Arden, and in the neighbourhood of the Birmingham and Stratford-on-Avon canal. Living, a perpetual curacy, not in charge, in the archd. and dio. of Worcester, subject to the vicarage of Wootton-Wawen; valued in the parliamentary returns at £49 13s.; gross income £64; in the patronage of King's college, Cambridge. There are a daily and a Sunday school here. Pop., in 1801, 165; in 1831, 230. Houses 49. Acres 810. A. P. £1,135. Poor rates, in 1837, £101.

BEARSTEAD, or BERSTEAD, a parish in the hund. of Eyehorne, lathe of Aylesford, union of Maidstone, county of Kent; 2½ miles east of Maidstone, intersected by the Central Kent railway. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Canterbury; valued at £6 7s. 4d.; gross income £246; nett income £191; in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Rochester. There are four daily schools in this parish. Petty-sessions are held here for the eastern division of the lathe of Aylesford. A fair is held here on the 25th of September. Pop., in 1801, 294; in 1831, 594. Houses 116. Acres 640. A. P. £1,967. Poor rates, in 1837, £236.

BEARSTON, a township in the parish of Mucklestone, northern division of Pirehill, county of Stafford; 5 miles north-east of Market-Drayton. For Bearston and the three townships of Dorrington, Gravenhanger, and Woore, there are two day and Sunday schools. Pop., in 1831, 95. Houses 16. Acreage with the parish.

BEARWARDCOTE, a township in the parish of Etwell, hund. of Appletree, county of Derby; 6 miles south-west of Derby, in the vicinity of the Birmingham and Derby railway. There is a day and Sunday school here. Pop., in 1801, 504, including that of the town of Etwell; in 1831, 471. Houses 89. Acreage with the parish. A. P. £3,334. Poor rates, in 1837, £38.

BEATHWAITE-GREEN, a hamlet in the parish of Haversham, Kendal ward, county of Westmoreland; 3½ miles north by west, in the vicinity of the Lancaster canal. The Wesleyan Methodists have a place of worship here,—a congregation of that body having been formed in 1780.

BEAUCHIEF ABBEY, an extra-parochial liberty in the hund. of Scarsdale, county of Derby; 3½ miles south-west of Sheffield, on the post-road to Dronfield. Living, a donative, in the patronage of P. P. Burnall, Esq. The chapel is a small building, erected about 1660, with reeded windows, double buttresses at the angles, and an ancient tower which belonged to the abbey that formerly existed here. By a deed executed at Richmond, on the 14th of March, 1601, this liberty was exempted from assessment for taxes. Beauchief was one of the lesser monasteries. It had lands and tenements in the parishes immediately contiguous, namely, Dore, Sheffield, Norton, and Dronfield, and estates in Nottinghamshire and Leicestershire, as well as much interest in several towns and villages less remote. This abbey was founded by Robert Fitz-Ranulph, lord of Alfreton, as an expiation for the part he is said to have acted in the murder of Thomas à Becket. The late Dr Pegge, the learned antiquary of Whittington, discountenances this tradition. His arguments, however, which are chiefly founded on the circumstance of the brother of Robert Fitz-Ranulph being afterwards in great favour with Henry the Second, do not appear conclusive, particularly when opposed to the authority of Dugdale, Fuller, Bishop Tanner, and others who have written on the subject. Dugdale says, "Robert Fitz-Ranulph, lord of Alfreton, Norton, and Marnham, was one of the four knights who martyred the blessed Thomas à Becket, archbishop of Canterbury, and afterwards founded the monastery of Beauchief, by way of expiating his crime, in the reign of Henry the Second." Bishop Tanner writes, "Beauchief, an abbey of Premonstratensian, or White canons, founded A. D. 1183, by Robert Fitz-Ranulph, lord of Alfreton, one of the executioners of Thomas à Becket, archbishop of Canterbury; to whom canonized, this monastery was dedicated." Pop., in 1801, 102; in 1831, 88. Houses 16. Acres 780. A. P. £847.

BEAUDESERT, a parish in the Henley division of the hund. of Barlichway, union of Stratford-on-Avon, county of Warwick; 1 mile east of Henley-in-Arden, on the post-road to Birmingham. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Worcester; valued at £7 6s. 0½d.; gross income £296. Patron, the Crown. The church exhibits some good specimens of early architecture. Charities connected with this parish produce £4 ls. annually. A castle was erected here soon after the Conquest, the site of which can still be traced. A fair and market were formerly held here, under a charter obtained in the reign of Stephen. The Rev. Richard Jago, a poet of some note, was born here in 1715. Pop., in 1801, 150; in 1831, 199. Houses 41. Acres 840. A. P. £2,504. Poor rates, in 1837, £145.

BEAULIEU, a parochial chapelry in the liberty of the same name, eastern division and union of New Forest, county of Southampton; 7 miles north-east of Lymington, on the river Beaulieu, which is navigable from this place to the sea. Living, a perpetual curacy, not in charge, in the archd. and dio. of Winchester; valued in the parliamentary returns at £61; gross income £72; a donation in the patronage of Lord Montague. The Baptists have two chapels here; the first church was formed in 1817, the second in 1833. There are three daily schools here, one of which containing 72 children, is supported by Lady Montague, at an expense of £100 per annum. The inhabitants are employed in the manufacture of coarse sackings. Fairs for horses and horned cattle are held here on the 15th of April and 4th of September. In the immediate neighbourhood of the village, on the opposite side of the river, are the remains of the monastery of Beaulieu, consisting chiefly of the outer wall which incloses an area of about a mile and a quarter in circumference. It was founded in 1204 by King John, for thirty Cistercian monks. Its revenue was valued, at the dissolution, at £428 6s. 8d., and the site was granted, in the 30th Henry VIII., to Thomas Wriothesley, Esq. Among other privileges, this monastery and its dependencies enjoyed exemption from arrest for debt, which the manor still retains. It was also a sanctuary, and afforded an asylum to Margaret of Anjou, wife of Henry VI., after the battle of Barnet. In the reign of Henry VII. it also afforded a temporary refuge to the celebrated Perkin Warbeck. Some time previous to the foundation of this abbey, an hospital of the knights of St John of Jerusalem was founded near the same spot, and gave name to the place from the beauty of its situation. From the spot on which it stood there is a fine view, commanding on the one hand the Rudles, and Hurst castle; and on the other, Spithead, and the entrance to Portsmouth harbour. At Easter £3 10s. is annually distributed among the poor of this parish,—the gift of an unknown benefactor. Pop., in 1801, 1,384; in 1831, 1,298. Houses 240. Acres 9,480. A. P. £5,229. Poor rates, in 1837, £805.

BEAULIEU (THE), or EXE, a river rising near Lyndhurst, Southampton, and falling into the English channel. See SOUTHAMPTON.

BEUMANOR, an extra-parochial liberty in the western division of the hund. of Goscombe, county of Leicester; 3 miles west of Mount Sorrell. Pop., in 1801, 61; in 1831, 98. Houses 15. Acres 1,210.

BEUMARIS, a parish, borough, and market-town in the hund. of Tyndaethway, union of Bangor and Beaumaris, island and county of Anglesea, North Wales; 239 miles north-west of London; of Menai bridge, to which a fine road was constructed at the expense of the late Lord Bulkeley, $\frac{1}{4}$ miles; and of Bangor, 6 north by east.—Living, a curacy in the patronage of Lord Bulkeley. This was formerly a chapelry to the parish of Llandegfan, in the diocese of Bangor; but it has recently been erected into a distinct parish. The church, which stands in the centre of the town, is a spacious structure. Independents, Wesleyan and Calvinistic Methodists, have chapels here. A free school was founded and endowed here in 1603, by David Hughes, Esq., a native of the town. There are four other daily schools, in which 313 children are instructed, and four Sunday schools. Alms-houses for six poor persons, each of whom receives an annuity, were erected by David Hughes, Esq.; to which institution the late Lord Bulkeley gave an additional endowment. This nobleman also bequeathed, by will, to the corporation of the borough, £2,000, to be invested in lands or government securities, and the interest applied to charitable uses, and the internal regulation of the town.—The town of Beaumaris is situated on the picturesque bay of Beaumaris, at the northern entrance of the Menai street. It consists principally of one street, which contains many handsome houses. The principal buildings are the church, the town-hall, the county-hall, the custom-house, and the free-school. The town-hall has good accommodation below for the markets, above are apartments allotted to the use of the corporation, and an elegant assembly-room. The sessions are held in the county-hall. Edward I., in 1295, erected a castle here, which is situated at the upper end of the principal street. The remains of this castle are very picturesque. In the reign of Henry VII. the English garrison was withdrawn, and was not restored till 1642. It was garrisoned for the king by Thomas, afterwards Lord Bulkeley, and his son Richard, who defended it with considerable success in 1646, but were finally obliged to yield on honourable terms to General Mytton. This castle still belongs to the Crown. This town was erected into a corporation, who acquired their estates, tolls, dues, and revenues under a charter, granted by Edward I., and confirmed by letters patent in the first year of Elizabeth, reserving to the Crown a fee-farm rent of £34 15s. 1d., which is paid annually. It has returned one member to parliament since the reign of Edward VI. The corporation consisted of a mayor, recorder, 2 bailiffs, 24 burgesses, a town-clerk, and 2 sergeants-at-mace, besides the common burgesses. It is now governed by a mayor, 4 aldermen, and 12 councillors. Its income, in 1837, amounted to £926 15s. 11d., of which sum £803 arose from rents. The mayor, bailiffs, and the twenty-four capital burgesses used to elect the member of parliament, without any participation on the part of the common burgesses. It now, in conjunction with the boroughs of Amlwch, Holyhead, and Llangefni, with the suburbs of each, sends one member to parliament. It is likewise the nomination-place in the election of a member for Anglesea. It is not now a place of any importance in a commercial point of view: a few sloops belong to the port, but they are chiefly employed in the carrying-trade for other ports. Vessels frequently take shelter in the roadstead during tempestuous weather. The bay of Beaumaris is a small but safe and sheltered asylum close to the town, which may be entered safely by the western passage at any time of the tide. The Cross-road is readily found in day-light by the peak on the Horse; but to reach the Friar's-road it is necessary to keep in view the top of the tower on Priestholme, so that it may not be covered by the high end of the island. All danger on the Anglesea coast is thus avoided, and the other shore may be guarded against by taking soundings. A market is held in Beaumaris every Wednesday; and fairs for cattle are held on the 13th of February, Holy Thursday, the 19th of September, and the 19th of December. This town has of late been much resorted to in the summer-season, as a bathing-place. A steam-boat plies during nine months of the year between it and Liverpool. The view from the green commands a fine prospect of a portion of the strait inclosed by the promontory called the Orme's head, while the distance is bounded by the Caernarvon mountains, which rise ridge on ridge till they terminate in the lofty Snowdon. This splendid prospect is beheld to the best advantage from Baron-Hill, the seat of the former Lords Bulkeley, now the property of Bulkeley Williams, Esq., the successor of the last Lord Bulkeley. Near the town is a ferry, granted to the corporation in the reign of Elizabeth; it is passable at low-water.—In this vicinity was an ancient friary, called Llanffaes, founded before the year 1240, by Llewellyn, prince of Wales. The residence of Sir R. Williams has been erected on the site, and a small portion of the original edifice now remaining, has been incorporated with the walls of a barn. Pop., in 1821, 2,505; in 1831, 2,497. Houses 410. A. P. £2,077. Poor rates, in 1837, £920.—The borough of Beaumaris does not contribute to the county-rates.

BEAUMONT, a parish in the ward and county of Cumberland; 5 miles west-north-west of Carlisle, on the banks of the Eden. Living, a discharged rectory, which was united, in 1692, with that of Kirk-Andrews-upon-Eden, in the archd. of Carlisle, and dio. of Carlisle and Man; valued at £8 ls. 8d.; and in the parliamentary returns at £80; gross income £249. Patron, in 1835, the Earl of Lonsdale. The tithes, moduses, compositions, &c., of Beaumont and Kirk-Andrews-upon-Eden, the property of the clerical rector, were commuted 7^o and 8^o George IV. The children belonging to this parish are entitled to attend a school erected in the parish of Kirk-Andrews-upon-Eden, by subscription, to which a small endowment was given in 1755, by Thomas Pattinson. Pop., in 1801, 219; in 1831, 276. Houses 56. Acres 1,470. A. P. £1,816. Poor rates, in 1837, £16.

BEAUMONT-WITH-MOZE, a parish in the hund. and union of Tendring, county of Essex; 7 miles south-east of Manningtree. Living, a rectory, consolidated with that of Moze, formerly in the archd. of Colchester and dio. of London, now in the dio. of Rochester, valued at £18; gross income £670. In the patronage of the governors of Guy's hospital, London. The parish is situated near the extremity of an inlet of the North sea, between the Naze and Harwich. Pop., in 1801, 340; in 1831, 452. Houses 59. Acres 2,890. A. P. £3,462. Poor rates, in 1837, £283.

BEAUMONT-LEYS, an extra parochial liberty, in the western division of the hund. of Goscote, county of Leicester; 2 miles north of Leicester, in the vicinity of the Leicester and Swannington railway. Pop., in 1801, 20; in 1831, 28. Houses 2. Acres 1,210.

BEAUSALL, a hamlet in the parish of Hatton, county of Warwick; 4 miles north-west of Warwick. Pop., in 1801, 187; in 1831, 249. Houses 60. Acreage with the parish. A. P. £2,087. Poor rates, in 1837, £174.

BEAU-VALE, in the parish of Greasley, southern division of the wapentake of Broxtow, county of Nottingham. "Nicholas de Cantilupe, in the 17th of Edward III., founded here a monastery for Carthusian monks, to the honour of the Holy Trinity. There were at first a prior and only twelve monks, but they increased to nineteen before the dissolution, when their possessions were valued at £227 8s. per annum; the greater part of which was granted, 33d Henry VIII., to Sir Wm. Hussey and his heirs male, and, 4th Edward VI., in reversion to Richard Morison." Tanner's Not. Mon.

BEAWORTH, a tything in the parish of Cheriton, hund. of Fawley, Droxford division of the county of Southampton; 4½ miles south of New Abresford. A leaden box containing upwards of 7,000 coins of William the Conqueror and William Rufus, was found here in 1833. Pop., in 1801, 130; in 1831, 156. Houses 21. Acreage with the parish. A. P. £757. Poor rates, in 1837, £86.

BEAWORTHY, a parish in the hund. of Black Torrington, county of Devon; 6 miles south-west of Hatherleigh, intersected by the Exeter and Falmouth railway. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. of Totness and dio. of Exeter, valued at £6 6s., and in the parliamentary returns at £130; gross income £146. Patron, in 1835, Sir A. Molesworth, Bart. There is a day and Sunday school here. Pop., in 1801, 218; in 1831, 339. Houses 56. Acres 6,270. A. P. £878. Poor rates, in 1837, £319.

BEBBINGTON, a parish in the lower division of the hund. and union of Wirrall, co.-palatine of Chester; 6 miles north-east of Great Neston, intersected by the Chester Junction railway. The river Mersey is navigable along the northern boundary of the parish. It comprises the townships of Higher and Lower Bebbington, Poulton with Spittle, Storeton, and Tranmore. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Chester, valued at £30 13s. 4d.; gross income £725. Patron, in 1835, the Rev. R. M. Fielden. The church is an ancient structure, partly in the Norman and partly in a mixed style of English architecture. In this parish, according to Tanner, there was a house or hospital for poor leprose persons early in the time of King Edward I. Pop., in 1821, 1,678; in 1831, 2,193. Houses 414. Acres 5,250. Poor rates, in 1837, £542.

BEBBINGTON (LOWER), a township in the above parish; 5 miles north-east of Great Neston, on the line of the Chester Junction railway. There is a daily school here. Pop., in 1801, 263; in 1831, 440. Houses 95. Acres 910. A. P. £1,283. Poor rates, in 1837, £103.

BEBBINGTON (HIGHER), a township in the parish of Bebbington; 5½ miles north-east of Great Neston, on the line of the Chester Junction railway. There is a daily school, endowed with land producing £30 per annum, a boarding and a Sunday school here. Pop., in 1801, 143; in 1831, 273. Houses 51. Acres 1,050. A. P. £1,065. Poor rates, in 1837, £76.

BEBSIDE, a township in the parish of Horton, eastern division of Castle ward, county of Northumberland; 5 miles south-east of Morpeth, on the river Blyth. Here is an extensive manufactory of wrought iron. Pop., in 1801, 126; in 1831, 100. Houses 10. Acreage with the parish. Poor rates, in 1837, £67.

BECCLES, a market-town and parish, in the hund. and union of Wangford, Suffolk; 98 miles north-east of London, and 32 north-east of Ipswich; bounded on the north and west by the river Waveney, which is navigable from this place to Yarmouth. The town is divided into two parishes. That of St Mary Endgate is a discharged vicarage, valued at £7 6s. 8d.; the living was consolidated in 1419 with that of the other parish, which is a rectory, in the archd. of Suffolk and dio. of Norwich, valued at £21 12s. 3d.; gross income £254. Patron, in 1835, the Earl of Gosford. It is a spacious Gothic structure, highly ornamented with sculpture, and was founded about the year 1369. The tower is detached. The Baptists, Independents, and Methodists, have places of worship here. The Independent church was formed in 1652; the Baptist in 1808.

—In 1774, Dr Falconberg, a native of the town, founded a free grammar-school here, and endowed it with an estate in the parish of Corton, now producing about £200 per annum, and under the management of the bishop of Norwich, the archdeacon of Suffolk, and the rector of Beccles. This school has ten exhibitions at Emmanuel college, Cambridge. In 1631, a free school for the instruction of 48 boys in writing and arithmetic was founded here by Sir John Leman, who endowed it with 100 acres of land. There are also two National schools supported by subscription, in which 140 children of both sexes are educated, and schools on the British system for 300 children. There are also four Sunday schools. "There was," says Tanner, "in the time of Edward III., an alms-house or hospital for lepers, with a chapel dedicated to St Mary Magdalene, which continued all the time of Queen Elizabeth, but was granted by Charles II. to William Chapman for life, and, A. D. 1676, to the portreeve, surveyors, and commonalty of Beccles, towards the maintenance of the poor for ever."

Beccles is a large and well-built town, consisting of several streets diverging from an extensive area used as a market-place. The environs are agreeable; and near the town is a good race course, on which races are held in September. The theatre is a neat building, with an assembly-room attached; the town-hall is also a handsome structure. The gaol, which has been much extended and improved, stands apart from other buildings, in an open airy situation. A part only of the area formed by the boundary wall is occupied by the prison buildings; the remainder is garden-ground in the possession of the keeper. The buildings consist of a centre, two wings, and irregular projections. There is a tread-mill in this prison. Number of prisoners in 1835, 170. This manor and common was originally a part of the possessions of the ancient abbey of Bury. The town was incorporated by Queen Elizabeth, in 1584. It was governed by a portreeve, 12 principal and 24 inferior burgesses; but by the Municipal reform act its magistracy consists of a portreeve, 4 aldermen, and 12 councillors. The revenue of the burgh, in 1837, was £2,765, of which £1,634 arose from rents. It is within the jurisdiction of the county-magistrates, who hold petty sessions for the division of Beccles, in the town-hall here. Beccles is one of the polling-places for the members for East Suffolk. Saturday is the market-day; and fairs are held on Whit-Monday, June 29th, and October 2d, for cattle, horses, and pedlery. The principal trade is in coals, corn, and malt, which is much facilitated by the water-communication with Yarmouth. In 1832 the corporation of Beccles obtained an act of parliament for deepening the river Waveney from that town to the point of junction between the river and the Norwich and Lowestoft navigation. This important undertaking has been accomplished, and the town now enjoys all the advantages of a port trading direct to the various parts of the united kingdom, and even to foreign ports, without the necessity of transhipment. A steam vessel is constantly employed in towing vessels between this town and Lowestoft, and thence to the sea. See LOWESTOFT. This town suffered severely from fire, in November, 1586, more than eighty houses and £20,000 worth of property having been burned. Pop., in 1801, 2,788; in 1831, 3,862. Houses 830. Acres 1,740. A. P. £7,976. Poor rates, in 1837, £1,329.

BECCONSALL, or HESKETH-CUM-BECCONSALL, a chapelry in the parish of Croston, hund. of Leyland, co.-palatine of Lancaster; 10 miles north-east of Ormskirk on the river Douglas. Living, a perpetual curacy, formerly in the archd. and dio. of Chester, now in the dio. of Manchester, valued at £2 7s. 11d., and in the parliamentary returns at £134 11s.; gross income £98; in the patronage of the vicar of Croston. There are three daily and two Sunday schools here. Pop., in 1801, 353; in 1831, 523. Houses 110. Acres 1,580. A. P. £1,675. Poor rates, in 1837, £137.

BECHTON, a township in the parish of Sandbach, hund. of Nantwich, co.-palatine of Chester; 2 miles south-east of Sandbach, in the vicinity of the Chester junction railway and the Grand Trunk canal. There are four daily schools here, in which 81 children are instructed. Pop., in 1801, 578; in 1831, 818. Houses 150. Acres 2,830. A. P. £3,876. Poor rates, in 1837, £559.

BECK. See BILLINGFORD.

BECKBURY, a parish in the liberties of Wenlock, union of Shifnal, county of Salop; 6½ miles north-east of Bridgenorth. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. of Salop and dio. of Hereford, valued at £5 3s. 4d.; gross income £350. Patron, the Crown. There are two daily schools in this parish. Pop., in 1801, 231, in 1831, 307. Houses 60. Acres 1,640. A. P. £2,340. Poor rates, in 1837, £154.

BECKENHAM, a parish in the hund. of Bromley and Beckenham, lathe of Sutton-at-Hone, union of Bromley, county of Kent; 9 miles south-south-east of London, intersected by the Croydon railway, and canal. The name is derived from the Saxon bec, a brook, and ham, a dwelling, and is given to the parish from a small stream which passes through it, and falls into the Ravensbourne. Living, a rectory formerly in the archd. and dio. of Rochester, now in the dio. of Canterbury; valued at £16 18s. 9d.; gross income £900. Patron, in 1835, John Cator, Esq. The church is a spacious structure, containing monuments to various members of the Style, Raymond, and Burrell families. It was erected about the beginning of the 17th century, with a lofty spire, which was afterwards destroyed by lightning, and rebuilt in 1796. The Baptists have a place of worship here. In 1709, Mrs Mary Watson bequeathed an estate worth £42 10s. per annum, for the education of poor children. This has been augmented by subsequent benefactions to £294 per annum; from which fund two school-rooms have been erected in conjunction with the National society, in which 81 children are instructed. In 1717, Captain Leonard Bowyer gave £100 to this school, for the education of four additional children. In 1694, four unendowed alms-houses were erected near the church by Anthony Rawlins, Esq. A fair, chiefly for toys, is held on the Monday before St Bartholomew's day. Pop., in 1801, 955; in 1831, 1,288. Houses 238. Acres 3,820. A. P. £8,060. Poor rates, in 1837, £782.

BECKERMET (St BRIDGET's), a parish in the ward of Allerdale above Darwent, Cumberland; 3½ miles south by east of Egremont. Living, a curacy in the archd. and dio. of Chester, valued at £7; gross income £87. Patron, in 1829, the Rev. H. J. Todd. This parish, which includes the township of Calder in Copeland, possesses seven daily schools, containing 157 children, and two Sunday schools. There are quarries of freestone in this parish. Pop., in 1801, 420; in 1831, 574. Houses 100. Acres 4,640. A. P. £3,554. Poor rates, in 1837, £138.

BECKERMET (St JOHN's), a parish in the ward of Allerdale above Darwent, Cumberland; 3 miles south-south-east of Egremont. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. and dio. of Chester; valued at £7; gross income £57. Patron, in 1829, the Rev. H. J. Todd. There are three daily schools in this parish, containing 57 pupils, and a Sunday school. Pop., in 1801, 328; in 1831, 397. Houses 68. Acres, 3,030. A. P. £1,960. Poor rates, in 1837, £60.

BECKERMET. (GREAT and LITTLE), two united townships, partly in the parish of St Bridget's and partly in that of St John, ward of Allerdale above Darwent, Cumberland. Pop. included in that of the parishes.

BECKET, a tything in the parish and hund. of Shrivensham, county of Berks; 5½ miles south-west of Farringdon, in the vicinity of the Great Western railway. Soon after the conquest, this manor fell to the Crown, and the manor-house was occasionally made a royal residence. Dr Shute Barrington, late bishop of Durham, was born here in 1731. Pop. returned with the parish.

BECKFORD, a parish in the hund. of Tibaldstone, union of Winchcomb, county of Gloucester; 5½ miles east-north-east of Tewkesbury, in the neighbourhood of the Cheltenham and Great Western union railway. Living, a vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Gloucester, valued at £16 16s. 10d.;

united with the curacy of Ashton-under-Hill; gross income £319. Patron, in 1835, the Rev. Dr Timbrill. The church is a very ancient structure. The great and small tithes of the townships of Beckford, Gratton, Ashton-under-Hill, and Bengrave, the property of the lay-impropriators and the vicar, were commuted in 1773. The Roman Catholics had a chapel here; but now meet in a private chapel at Overton. "Here probably was one of the Saxon monasteries, about which the contest was in the synod of Clovesho, in the year 803, between the bishops of Worcester and Hereford. It is more certain that this manor was given, in the time of Henry I., to the abbey of St Martin and St Barbara in Normandy, commonly called St Barbe-en-Auge, by Rabellus Camerarius; and that a prior and canons were sent over, and it became a cell to that foreign house, which was of the order of St Austin. Upon the suppression of alien priories, this was bestowed by King Henry VI. upon Eaton college, when it was reckoned to them at the yearly value of £56 6s. 8d.; but afterwards by King Edward IV. on Fodringhey. And, as parcel of the possessions of this last-mentioned college, it was granted, 1^o Edward VI., to Sir Richard Lee."—Tanner's Not. Mon. Charities connected with the parish produce £46 yearly. Pop., in 1801, 375; in 1831, 433. Houses 86. Acres 2,650. A. P. £2,106. Poor rates, in 1837, £84.

BECKHAM (EAST), a parish in the northern division of the hund. and union of Erpingham, county of Norfolk; 4 miles west by south of Cromer. Living, a curacy without duty. The church has been long in ruins. The inhabitants repair for divine service to the church of West Beckham. Pop., in 1801, 58; in 1831, 50. Houses 8. Acres 790. A. P., £450. Poor rates, in 1837, £233.

BECKHAM (WEST), a parish in the southern division of the hund. and union of Erpingham, county of Norfolk; 5 miles west by south of Cromer. Living, a perpetual curacy not in charge, in the archd. and dio. of Norwich; valued at £34; gross income £81; in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Norwich. The church has a tower, octagonal above. There is a daily school here. Pop., in 1801, 137; in 1831, 156. Houses 34. Acres 780. A. P. £671. Poor rates, in 1837, £108.

BECKHAMPTON, a tything in the parish of Avebury, and division of Marlborough and Ramsbury, county of Wilts; 6 miles west of Marlborough. This was formerly a chapelry, the curacy of which was valued at £4 8s. 6d. Pop. returned with the parish.

BECKINGHAM WITH SUTTON, a parish in the wapentake of Lovedon, parts of Kesteven, union of Gainsborough, county of Lincoln; 4½ miles east of Newark-upon-Trent. Living, a rectory, to which is annexed the curacy of Fenton and the perpetual curacy of Stragglethorpe, in the archd. and dio. of Lincoln; valued at £41 6s. 8d.; gross income £780. Patron, in 1835, Robert Moody, Esq. The great and small tithes of the township of Beckingham and Sutton, the property of the clerical rector and lay-impropriator, were commuted in 1769. There are two daily schools in this parish. Pop., in 1801, 357; in 1831, 481. Houses 83. Acres 2,200. A. P. £3,512. Poor rates, in 1837, £153.

BECKINGHAM, a parish in the liberty of Southwell and Scrooby, situated in the north Clay division of the wapentake of Bassettlaw, union of Newark, county of Nottingham; 2½ miles west of Gainsborough, on the river Trent, which is here navigable. Living, a discharged vicarage, a peculiar of the prebendary of Beckingham in the collegiate church of Southwell; valued at £6 15s. 3d.; in the patronage of the prebendary of Beckingham. The great and small tithes, the property of the prebend of Beckingham and vicar, commuted in 1776. There are three daily schools here, one of which has an endowment of £15 7s. 9d. per annum. Here is a school for ten poor children, with an endowment of £15 per annum. This parish was the birth-place of Dr William Howell, the historian. Other charities connected with the parish produce £8 yearly. Pop., in 1801, 425; in 1831, 481. Houses 102. Acres 3,010. A. P. £4,671. Poor rates, in 1837, £266.

BECKINGTON, a parish in the hund. of Frome, union of Frome, county of Somerset; 3 miles north-east of Frome. Living, a rectory, with Standerwick, in the archd. of Wells and dio. of Bath and Wells; valued at £19 11s. 0½d.; gross income £753; nett income £540. Patron, in 1835, S. I. Sainsbury, Esq. There is a Baptist chapel here. The church was formed in 1786. This parish possesses three daily and three Sunday schools. In 1838, there was a woollen-mill here employing 49 hands. Charities connected with the parish produce £22 per annum. Thomas Beckington, bishop of Bath and Wells, was born here in 1465. In the parish-church is interred Samuel Daniel the poet, who died in 1619. Pop., in 1801, 1,469; in 1831, 1,340. Houses 264. Acres 1,840. A. P. £3,387. Poor rates, in 1837, £734.

BECKLEY, a parish, partly in the hund. of Ashendon, county of Buckingham, and partly in the hund. of Bullington, union of Headington, county of Oxford; 4 miles north-east of Oxford, on the Roman road from Alcester to Wallingford. Living, a vicarage, with the chapelries of Horton and Studley annexed, in the archd. and dio. of Oxford; valued at £8, in the parliamentary returns at £58; gross income £114; and, in 1835, in the patronage of the incumbent's family, the Rev. T. Leigh Cooke. The great and small tithes, moduses, &c. of the township of Beckley, the property of the dean of Oxford, were commuted in 7^o and 8^o George IV. There is a daily school here, with a small endowment, containing 50 pupils, and a Sunday school. An alms-house was founded and endowed in this parish, 23d May, 15^o Charles I., by Sir George Croke, for the maintenance of eight poor people. This parish contains the township of Beckley, the population of which, in 1801, was 318; and, in 1831, 371. Various fragments of Roman pottery have been found in this parish. Pop. of the parish, in 1821, 825; in 1831, 776. Houses 35. Acres 4,370. A. P. £1,684. Poor rates, in 1837, £157.

BECKLEY, a parish in the hund. of Goldspur, rape of Hastings, union of Rye, county of Sussex; 6½ miles west-north-west of Rye. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Lewes and dio. of Chichester; valued at £11 6s. 8d.; gross income £896; in the patronage of University college, Oxford. There is a National school in this parish, containing 140 scholars. There were formerly extensive iron forges here. Fairs are held on Easter-Thursdays, and December 26th for cattle and pedlery. This parish is bounded on the north by the river Rother, which separates the counties of Kent and Sussex. Pop., in 1801, 742; in 1831, 1,477. Houses 159. Acres 5,540. A. P. £4,193. Poor rates, in 1837, £1,126.

BECKURMONDS, a hamlet in the parish of Arncliffe, west riding of the county of York.

BECKWITH-GREEN, a hamlet in the parish of Pannal, county of York; 6½ miles north-east of Otley.

BECNTREE HUNDRED, Essex, contains 9 parishes, and is bounded on the north by the hundreds of Ongar and Waltham; on the east by Havering Liberty; on the south by the Thames; and on the west by that of Ossulston. Area 35,950 acres. Houses 6,118. Pop., in 1831, 34,924.

BEDALE, a parish partly in the wapentake of Hallikeld, and partly in the eastern division of the wapentake of Hang, union of Northallerton or Bedale, north riding of York; 223 miles north-north-west of London, and 34 north-west of York, in the neighbourhood of the Great North of England railroad. It comprises the townships of Langthorne, Aiskew, Burrel with Cowling, Crakehall, and Firby, the market-town of Bedale, and the hamlet of Randsgrange. Living, a rectory, formerly in the archd. of Richmond and dio. of Chester, now in the dio. of Ripon; valued at £89 4s. 9½d.; gross income £2,000; and, in 1835, in the patronage of Miss Peirse and M. Stapleton. The church was erected in the reign of Edward III. It is a spacious structure, having a square embattled tower, constructed with so much strength, that the inhabitants were able to defend themselves in it during an inroad of the Scots. The Methodists have several places of worship here, and the Roman Catholics have a chapel; there is also a Baptist church formed in 1793. In 1821, a Wesleyan Methodist church was formed. This parish possesses eleven daily schools, one of which is endowed with £5 per annum by Timothy Webster, for the instruction of eight poor children; another—the grammar-school—has been endowed by an unknown benefactor with £7 11s. 4d. annually. There are besides two day and Sunday National schools, partly supported by an annual endowment of £21, and partly by subscription and payments from the children. The market-town of Bedale is situated in the wapentake of Hallikeld, on the banks of a small stream which flows into the Swale near Gatesby. It consists for the most part of one principal street. The country in the neighbourhood is highly cultivated, and is remarkable for breeding excellent hunters and roadsters. Pop., in 1801, 1,005; in 1831, 1,266. The county-magistrates hold the petty-sessions for the division of Hang East here. The market, which is well-attended, is held on Tuesday. Fairs are held on Easter-Tuesday, Whit-Tuesday, the 6th and 7th of June, for horses, cattle, sheep, leather, &c.; on October 11th and 12th for horned cattle, sheep, hogs, and leather, and on the last Monday but one before Christmas, for cattle and sheep. In 1691, Dr Samwells founded an hospital for six aged men, and endowed it with £55 3s. 2d. per annum: the house is a neat building of stone, in which each of the pensioners has an apartment, with a garden of half an acre besides. John Clapham also founded an hospital for a master and six brethren of the age of 60, or thereabouts, and endowed it with a rent-charge of £30; and, in 1667, Robert Young built an alms-house, and endowed it with land for the maintenance of three poor women. Other charities connected with the parish produce £50 6s. per annum. In the neighbourhood is Bedale-hall, in the gardens of which are traces of an ancient castle said to have been founded by Fitz-Alan, earl of Arundel. In this parish was born Sir Christopher Wray, lord-chief-justice of the court of Queen's bench, in the reign of Elizabeth. Pop., in 1821, 2,631; in 1831, 2,707. Houses 539. Acres 7,070. A. P. £4,666. Poor rates, in 1837, £432.

BEDBURN (North), a township in the parish of St-Andrew-Auckland, north-western division of the ward of Darlington, co-palatine of Durham; 5½ miles north-west of Bishop Auckland and Weardale railway. There is a daily school here. Pop., in 1801, 245; in 1831, 387. Houses 74. Acres 1,890. A. P. £2,324. Poor rates, in 1837, £213.

BEDBURN (South), a township in the parish of St-Andrew-Auckland, north-western division of the ward of Darlington, co-palatine of Durham; 7 miles west of Bishop Auckland, in the neighbourhood of the Bishop Auckland and Weardale railway. Pop., in 1801, 310; in 1831, 296. Houses 56. Acres 7,700. A. P. £3,123. Poor rates, in 1837, £125.

BEDCESTER, a hamlet in the parish of Fontmell Magna, county of Dorset; 8 miles south by west of Shaftesbury. Pop. returned with the parish.

BEDDGELART, or BETHGELERT, a parish, including a village of the same name, situated partly in the hundreds of Eviony and Uwch-Gorfai, union of Festiniog, county of Carnarvon, and partly in that of Arudwy, Merionethshire; 12 miles south-east of Carnarvon, in the vicinity of the celebrated pass of Aberglaslyn. The village, which consists of twenty-nine cottages, stands at the junction of the rivers Colwyn and Glaslyn, in one of the retired and romantic valleys in Wales, inclosed on every side by lofty and precipitous mountains. Some of the inhabitants act as guides to the top of Snowdon, and obtain a considerable emolument from this source during the summer months. There is a good inn, which is almost entirely supported by tourists. Living, a perpetual curacy not in charge, in the archd. of Merioneth and dio. of St Asaph and Bangor; valued in the parliamentary returns at £89 10s.; gross income £90. Patroness, in 1835, Mrs Priestley. The Calvinistic Methodists have two places of worship here; the churches were formed in 1797 and 1824. There are two daily and four Sunday schools in this parish. There was anciently a priory of Augustine monks here, dedicated to St Mary, which was deemed the oldest religious house in Wales, with the exception of Bardsey. It now belongs to the earl of Radnor. The name of the place signifies 'the grave of Gelert.' There is a tradition that a dog named Gelert, belonging to Llewellyn, the last prince of Wales, preserved the infant child of his master from the attack of a wolf. On the return of the father, he met the dog covered with blood, and seeing the clothes which covered his child's bed sprinkled with the same, he instantly conceived the idea that the dog had killed his child, and slew him on the spot. Discovering his mistake, he caused the dog to be buried in the centre of the valley, where a stone is yet shown as marking the spot. Pop., in 1821, 867; in 1831, 1,071. Houses 196. A. P. £487. Poor rates, in 1837, £470.

BEDDINGHAM, a parish in the hund. of Totnere, rape of Pevensey, union of West Firle, county of Sussex, within the liberty of the duchy of Lancaster; 2½ miles south-east of Lewes, on the river Ouse. Living, a discharged vicarage united with the vicarage of West Firle, in the archd. of Lewes and dio. of Chichester; valued at £35 12s.; gross income £349. Patrons, in 1835, the bishop and dean and chapter of Chichester alternately. There are a daily and a Sunday school in this parish. Here was a monastery in the beginning of the ninth century. Pop., in 1801, 219; in 1831, 264. Houses 49. Acres 2,250. A. P. £3,561. Poor rates, in 1837, £356.

BEDDINGTON, a parish and township in the hund. of Wallington, union of Croydon, Surrey. The former includes also the hamlet of Wallington; 12 miles south of London, intersected by the Croydon railway. Living, a rectory, valued at £13 16s. 8d., in the archd. of Surrey and dio. of Winchester; gross income £1,217; and, in 1835, in the patronage of the Carewe family. The church is a Gothic structure, with a fine tower, and two aisles. It formerly belonged to Merton abbey. It contains several stalls, and handsome monuments, chiefly to various members of the Carewe family. There are a small day-school here, and a day and boarding school. In 1838, there was a woollen-mill, employing 13 hands, within this parish. In the neighbourhood of the village is Beddington park, the seat of the Carewe family. Sir Francis Carewe, who died in 1611, frequently entertained Queen Elizabeth here, and is said to have been the first to raise orange-trees in England, from seeds supplied by his illustrious brother-in-law, Sir Walter Raleigh. The park is still famous for its walnut-trees. Pop. of the town, in 1601, 353; in 1831, 496; that of the parish, in 1821, 1,327; in 1831, 1,429. Houses 254. Acres 3,830. A. P. £5,992. Poor rates, in 1837, £495.

BEDFIELD, a parish in the hund. of Hoxon, county of Suffolk; 4 miles north-north-west of Framlingham. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. of Suffolk and dio. of Norwich; valued at £14; gross income £291. Patron, in 1835, the Earl of Stradbroke. There is a daily school here. Pop., in 1801, 295; in 1831, 323. Houses 45. Acres 1,780. A. P. £1,748. Poor rates, in 1837, £209.

BEDFONT (EAST), WITH HATTON, a parish in the hund. of Spelthorne, union of Staines, Middlesex; 3½ miles east-north-east of Staines, on the post-road to London. Living, a discharged vicarage, in the archd. of Middlesex and dio. of London, proposed to be transferred to dio. of Rochester; valued at £6 13s. 4d., in the parliamentary returns at £100; gross income £302; in the patronage of the bishop of London. The church is a structure of considerable antiquity. This parish possesses five daily schools. Pop., in 1801, 456; in 1831, 968. Houses 182. Acres 1,890. A. P. £3,014. Poor rates, in 1837, £438.

BEDFONT (WEST), a hamlet in the parish of Stanwell, hund. of Spelthorne, county of Middlesex; 3 miles north-east of Staines. Pop. returned with the parish.

BEDFORDSHIRE,

An inland county of England, situated nearly in the centre of the island, between the parallels of 51° 50', and 52° 21' N. lat. It is bounded on the north-west and north by the county of Northampton; on the north-east by Huntingdonshire; on the east by the county of Cambridge; on the south-east and south by Hertfordshire; and on the west and south-west by Buckinghamshire. Its greatest length is 36 miles; its greatest breadth 23. Its circuit is about 150 miles. The general aspect of the country is undulating and diversified, the hills being numerous, but not lofty, and the valleys neither deep nor extensive. The Chiltern hills cross it in a north-eastern direction; and to the east of these is another small range running in the same direction. The vale of Bedford lies between these ranges; it is a strong clay soil, and is intersected by the Ouse, which flows in a very winding course through it.

Rivers, &c.—This county is watered by three principal rivers: the Ouse, the Ivel, and the Lea. The Ouse rises in the county of Northampton, and, after passing through the county of Buckingham, enters Bedfordshire near Turvey, 8 miles west of Bedford, but, from its windings, does not reach that town till after a course of above 25 miles. At Bedford it begins to be navigable, and proceeds in a north-eastern direction towards St Neots in Huntingdonshire. This stream is remarkable for the slowness as well as tortuousness of its course; and it is subject to sudden overflows after heavy rains. It receives a few small streams from both sides; but its principal tributary is the Ivel, one branch of which rises a little to the north of Dunstable in this county, and another in the vicinity of Baldoch, in Hertfordshire. The Ivel flows north-east, becomes navigable at Biggleswade, and falls into the Ouse at Tempsford, 6 miles north-west of Biggleswade, after a course of 30 miles. It is connected with the toy of Shefford by the Ivel navigation. See ARTS OUSE and LEA. The Lea rises in this county, in the neighbourhood of Houghton-Regis; flows east to Limbury, and then south-east to Luton, and enters Hertfordshire between East and West Hide.

Area and Soil.—The county of Bedford contains an area of 463 square statute miles, or 296,320 acres, of which 80,000 are stated to be arable, and 168,000 pasture or common, mostly upon a cold clay soil. The vale of Bedford is considered one of the finest corn-districts in the kingdom. On the south, the country is much less fertile, being crossed by a ridge of chalk hills, and covered with a very thin soil. Towards the south-eastern corner of the county, there is some rich dairy land. The general aspect of the western portion is flat and sandy, but is favourable to the culture of turnips and beans. In the more favourable parts of the county—as in the vicinity of Biggleswade and in the parish of Sandy—large quantities of vegetables and garden-produce are raised for the supply of the metropolis, as well as the local markets. To the north of Bedford the land is very poor, and presents large tracts of iron sand. Farms in this county are seldom of large extent; the average size is about 150 acres. The extent of woodland is now much less than formerly.—The mineral products of this county are of comparatively little value. Fuller's earth abounds in the neighbourhood of Woburn, and was anciently known by the name of Woburn earth. Limestone and coarse marble are abundant. There are numerous mineral springs in this county; some saline, others chalybeate; but none have attained any degree of celebrity. They occur at Bedford, Bletsoe, Bromham, Clapham, Cranfield, Milton-Ernest, Odell, and Turvey.

Hundreds, Rates, &c.—Bedfordshire is divided into 9 hundreds, namely: BARFORD, BIGGLESWADE, CLIFTON, FLITT, MANSHEAD, REDBORNE-STOKE, STODDEN, WILEY, and WIXAMTREE: which see. The county-town is BEDFORD; besides which there are the market-towns of DUNSTABLE, AMPTHILL, BIGGLESWADE, HARROLD, LEIGHTON-BUZZARD, LUTON, POTTON, TODDINGTON, and WOBURN. See these articles. Two members of parliament are returned for the county; and two for the borough of Bedford. The influential families of Bedfordshire are those of Russell, Osborn, Pym, St John, Fox, and Whitbread. The county is included in the Norfolk-shire; and the assizes and sessions are held in the circuit-hall at Bedford on the 2d of January, 10th April, 3d July, and 16th October. The county-rates and poor-rates in 1815, were £72,782, raised by an assessment on rent at the rate of 4s. in the pound; in 1827, the whole amount was £92,340 11s., of which £81,959 was applied to the relief of the poor; in 1830, it was £96,994; in 1834, £77,819; and in 1837, £37,530, being an expenditure of 8s. per head on an average. The amount of money invested in Savings' banks in this county, in 1837, was £68,668; average amount of each deposit £33. The total amount of real property, returned in 1815, was £343,685.

Population.—The population of the county, in 1801, was 63,393; in 1811, it was 70,213; of whom 9,431 families were returned as engaged in agriculture, 4,155 in manufactures, and 1,341 otherwise employed. In 1821, the population was 83,716; and in 1831, 95,383, of whom 56.8 per cent. were engaged in agriculture, and 25.7 in trade. Houses, in 1831, 17,978. A large proportion of the female population is employed in the plaiting of straw, for which Dunstable in particular is famous, and in the manufacture of thread-lace; but this latter branch has much declined since the application of machinery to its processes. A considerable number of mats are made, and a pretty extensive trade in corn, timber, and seed is carried on. The county is reckoned healthy; the rate of mortality, on an average of ten years, is estimated at 1 in 56.

Roads.—The following are the principal roads in Bedfordshire. The Great Northern road from London to Glasgow enters near the 41st mile-stone, and, after passing Biggleswade, Tempsford, and Eaton-Socon, enters Huntingdonshire about 2 miles north of Eaton-Socon.—The great road from London to Chester and Holyhead enters at Dunstable, near the 33d mile-stone, and, passing through Hockley, quits it at the 42d mile-stone.—The road from London to Higham-Ferrers and Kettering, enters from Kitchin in the county of Hertford, near the 36th mile-stone, and passes through Shefford, and Bedford, 11 miles beyond which it enters Northamptonshire.—There are about 240 miles of turnpike-roads in the county.—The Grand Junction canal, and the London and Birmingham railway, skirt the county to the west of Leighton-Buzzard.

Ecclesiastical Affairs.—Bedford is in the province of Canterbury, and was formerly in the dio. of Lincoln, but has been recently transferred to that of Ely. It forms an archd., valued at £60 12s. 3d.; and is divided into the rural deaneries of Bedford, Clapham, Dunstable, Eaton, Fleet, and Shefford. It is divided into 124 parishes, of which 56 are rectories, 61 vicarages, and 7 are perpetual curacies and donatives. The number of dissenting congregations in this county, in 1828, was 71; up to the end of 1838, 19 dissenting places of worship had been licensed under the marriage-act in this county. Bedfordshire, in 1835, contained 208 daily schools, with an aggregate of 6,009 scholars; and 198 Sunday, and 36 infant-schools, comprising in all 15,918 children.

Antiquities.—This county is crossed in the southern extremity by the ancient British road known by the name of Iknield street, or way. Watling street, which stretched across the island, from the Kentish coast to the country of the Guetheli, enters this county near Luton; and turns north-west, passing a little to the north of Dunstable, to Fenny-Stratford, in the county of Buckingham. Another Roman military way enters the county near Baldock, and, keeping the line of the Great North road, leads in a direct line to Chesterfield. There are various other remains of Roman, Saxon, and Danish origin. Of castles, the most important was Bedford castle, built by the family of Beauchamp, and dismantled by order of Henry III. The keeps and extensive earth-works of the castles of Risinghoe and Cainhoe still remain; and at Bletsoe, Ridgmont, Meppershall, Puddington, and Thurleigh, vestiges of castles or castellated mansions may be seen. Some of the old churches, such as that of Puddington, Felmersham, Eaton-Bray, and Elstow, exhibit interesting remains of early architecture. Previous to the Reformation, this county contained 15 religious houses, including one alien-priory and a preceptory of Knights-Hospitallers. See articles BEDFORD, DUNSTABLE, EATON, ELSTOW, NEWNHAM, &c.

History.—Previous to the Roman invasion, this county was inhabited by the Cassii, or Cattieuchlani. When the Roman dominion was established, it became part of Britannia Superior, and afterwards of Britannia Prima; subsequently, in 310, it was added to the district of Flavia Cæsariensis. During the Saxon heptarchy, it belonged to the kingdom of Mercia; and, on the abolition of two of these kingdoms, it was equally divided between Mercia and Essex. When England was united under one monarchy, Bedfordshire was included within the Denelege, or Danish jurisdiction. It was the scene of many conflicts with the Danes, in the reign of Edward the Elder. Bedford was one of the first counties to declare against Charles I., at the beginning of the parliamentary war.

BEDFORD, a borough and market-town, and the county town of Bedfordshire, is situated 51 miles north-north-west of London, and intersected by the river Ouse, along both banks of which it extends.

Bedford is divided into five parishes: viz. St Cuthbert, St John, St Mary, St Paul and St Peter's Martin, all in the archd. of Bedford, and formerly in the dio. of Lincoln, but now transferred to the dio. of Ely. There was anciently a sixth parish, called St Peter's Dunstable, the living of which has been united to that of St Mary.—The living of St Cuthbert's is a discharged rectory, valued at £5 9s. 4d.; gross income £129; in the patronage of the Crown.—St John's is a rectory not in charge, annexed to the mastership of the hospital of St John; gross income £171; in the patronage of the corporation.—St Mary's is a rectory, valued at £11 4s. 9d.; gross income £273; in the patronage of the bishop of Ely.—St Paul's is a discharged vicarage, valued at £10; gross income £280. Patron, in 1835, Lord Carteret. The church of St Paul's is a fine building, with a handsome tower surmounted by a lofty octagonal spire. It had formerly a curious stone-pulpit, which is still preserved in the chancel, and some ancient monuments.—St Peter's Martin is a rectory, valued at £11 13s. 1d.; gross income £205. Patron, the Crown. The church is an ancient building, having a Norman arch at the south entrance. The tithes of the parishes of St Paul, St Peter and St Cuthbert, the property of the clerical rectors, lay-impropriator, trustees of certain charities, and the vicar, were commuted in 1795. The great and small tithes of St Mary's parish, the property of the clerical rectors, were commuted in 1797. The Independents have two, and the Baptists three places of worship here; and the Methodists and Moravians have also places of worship. The Independent chapel, Mill-street, was founded in 1777. The Independent Old Meeting house church, Mill-lane, was formed in 1650. John Bunyan was co-pastor of this church from 1671 to 1688. The Mill-street Baptist chapel was founded in 1796.

The town of Bedford is situated in the middle of the tract of country, called Bedford vale, already described in the previous article BEDFORDSHIRE. It consists of a principal street, nearly a mile in length, which is intersected by several smaller ones. It contains many ancient but well-built houses, and the general aspect of the town is pleasing. The streets are paved, and lighted with gas, and there is a good supply of water. The ancient bridge over the Ouse, forming the communication between the north and south parts of the city, was taken down in 1811, and a new one of five arches erected in its stead at an expense of £15,000. The northern approach to the bridge is adorned with an elegant crescent, and new buildings are springing up in various quarters. Races are held here in March; assemblies take place in winter; and there is a small theatre which is occasionally opened. A public library was instituted in 1830. It contained, in 1836, 3,900 volumes. Number of members 148. Besides the churches, the principal public building is the town-hall, in which the sessions and assizes are held. At the north-west entrance to the town stands the county-gaol, on a small plot of ground, about 176 feet square, inclosed by a boundary wall 20 feet high. The principal building occupies the middle of the enclosure, and with its airing-yards, covers nearly the whole of the space,—the remainder being used as a garden. It was erected in 1800, with the exception of a small addition made in 1820 for female debtors. It is a substantial building, constructed on the plan of the benevolent Howard, and consists of three stories. The number of prisoners, in 1836, was 241. The county house of correction is situated within 300 yards of the gaol. It is a neat brick building; and was completed for the reception of prisoners in 1820. It contains only four wards, comprising 51 very small separate cells, many of which are built against the boundary-wall, and four small day-rooms. The number of prisoners in 1836, was 317. The house of industry was erected in 1796, at an expense of £5,000; it is placed, by an act of the 34th George III., under the management of 13 directors resident in the town. The county Lunatic asylum is a handsome erection of brick, on the road to Amptill, capable of containing 65 patients; it was erected in 1812, by act of parliament, at an expense of £13,000. The county-infirmary, founded in 1803, stands on the same road, and is a substantial erection of brick, with a stone front; the late Samuel Whitbread presented £10,000 in support of this institution; and at a parliamentary election for the county, the marquess of Tavistock gave £2,000 to it, instead of giving the usual entertainment to the freeholders. It contains 90 beds, and the library attached has already about 1,300 volumes. A workhouse has been erected in this town, for the union of Bedford, by the poor-law commissioners, at an expense of £1,800. The Bedford poor-law union comprehends 44 parishes, embracing an area of 152 square miles; with a population returned in 1831 at 28,033. The average annual expenditure on the poor of this district, during the three years preceding the formation of the union was £25,716. Expenditure, in 1838, £10,044.

A market for cattle is held on Monday, and for corn and provisions on Saturday. Fairs for cattle are held on the first Tuesday in Lent, April 21st, July 5th, August 21st, October 11th, and December 19th; and a cattle fair on the 17th of November. Bedford was incorporated so early as the reign of Henry II.; the first charter being dated in 1166. It continued to enjoy many privileges by prescription till the reign of Charles II., when these were confirmed by royal charter. By the municipal act passed in 1835, the government of the borough is vested in a mayor, six aldermen, and eighteen councillors, under the style and title of 'the mayor, bailiffs, and burgesses of the town of Bedford'; by the same act a commission of the peace has been granted to it, and the town divided into two wards. The borough has returned two members to parliament since the 23rd of Edward I. The mayor is the returning officer. The right of election was always exercised by the freemen and burgesses, without respect to residence, and by all householders paying scot and lot, and not receiving alms. Under this franchise, the greatest number of electors ever polled was 914. The assizes for the district, and the quarter-sessions for the town and county, are held at Lent and midsummer, in the county-hall in this town.

The variety and magnitude of the charitable endowments and schools of Bedford is remarkable. The most important of these were founded by Sir William Harpur, a native of this town, and lord-mayor of London in 1561. This person obtained letters-patent from Queen Elizabeth in 1566, for the establishment of a free grammar-school at Bedford. For the support of this he gave property in Bedford, and in the parishes of St George the Martyr, and St Andrew-above-the-Bars, Holborn, London, the revenues of which, at the period of foundation, did not exceed £180 annually, but have now increased to about £14,000 a-year, and are still augmenting. An act of parliament was obtained for regulating the disposal of these funds; and the management was vested in 18 resident trustees, 6 of whom go out of office annually, and are replaced by others who are elected from the respectable householders. The school is under the inspection of the warden and fellows of New college, Oxford, who appoint the master and usher. There are at present about 80 boys on the foundation. Every inhabitant of Bedford, renting a house of £10 per annum, may have his son classically educated here. Eight scholarships of £80 per annum each, in the universities of Oxford, Cambridge, or Dublin, are given to boys educated in this school; six of these are restricted to those whose parents are inhabitants of Bedford; the other two are open to all scholars on the foundation. A National school for children of both sexes, and containing 350 boys and 170 girls, is supported from the same fund as the free grammar-school; also a commercial school; an infant school; an English school for boys; and an hospital for the education and maintenance of 50 children. The sum of £800 is annually distributed, in sums of £20, as marriage-portions to maidens of good character residing in the town; and £500 is annually applied to the relief of decayed housekeepers. Connected with the same charity are 58 alms-houses for aged men and women, who receive from 7s. to 10s. weekly each, and from £2 to £3 per annum for clothing. In 1727, Mr Alexander Leith founded a school for ten boys and ten girls, and endowed it with lands producing £46 10s. per annum. A blue-coat school for 25 boys was founded in 1760, and endowed with £33 15s. 6d. per annum, by Alderman Newton of Leicester; this is now combined with the preparatory school for boys of the poor, and contains 286 pupils. Besides those already mentioned, there are 8 daily and 11 Sunday schools. The trustees of the Harpur charity have determined to establish a girls' school for the poorer inhabitants of Bedford,—the children to be admitted at six years of age. In 1679, Mr Thomas Christie founded and endowed eight alms-houses for unmarried persons of either sex. Other charities connected with the town produce £297 per annum.

The name, which is formed from the Saxon Bedanford, or Bedicanford, that is, 'the lodging at the ford,' is derived from its situation at an ancient ford on the Ouse; as was also the name of Lettuydur, or Lifvidur, which it received from the later Britons. In 572, a battle was fought here between the Britons and the West Saxons, who were under the command of Cuthwulf, brother of Ceawlin, third king of Wessex. Bedford was the burial-place of Offa, king of Mercia, whose tomb, and the chapel which contained it, were carried away by an inundation of the Ouse. The Danes having destroyed a great part of the town, it was restored and enlarged by Edward the Elder, who built a fortress on the south side of the river. A castle of considerable strength was erected here, soon after the Conquest, by Payne de Beauchamp, third baron of Bedford, which was besieged and taken by Stephen in 1137, in the war against Matilda. When the barons took up arms against King John, Bedford was fortified on the part of the insurgents by William de Beauchamp, but it was taken by Falco de Breaut, whose services were rewarded by the monarch with a gift of the castle and barony. "But this ungrateful man, having raised a new war against Henry III., pulled down all the religious houses near him to fortify his castle, and harassed the country all around; till the king laid siege to it, and after sixty days, notwithstanding the obstinacy of the rebels, reduced it.

After all this the king, in consideration of his former services, granted Breaut his life; but banished both him and his company. But after he had caused the ditches to be filled, and the works to be thrown down, as also the outer wall to be demolished, he left the inner part of the castle standing for William de Beauchamp to live in. There was nothing left of this castle in Leland's time, who says it was then clean down. There is now, on a rising ground near the Ouse, the ancient seat of Bedford castle, a very fine bowling-green, shown sometimes to travellers as a curiosity. —[Magna Brit. Ed. 1738.] "The first earl of Bedford was Hugh de Bellemont, son of the earl of Leicester, who had his earldom given him by King Stephen, together with the daughter of Simon de Beauchamp. Notwithstanding this, he refused to do him homage, and fortified the castle of Bedford. After its surrender to Stephen for want of provisions, he fell from the dignity of earl to that of a knight, and in the end to miserable poverty; for which reason he was surnamed Pauper. But the first earl of Bedford, properly so called, was Ingelram de Coucy, who was raised to this dignity in the 46th of Edward III. He was a person of great merit, served the king in his wars of France, and was honoured by him with the garter, and his daughter in marriage. The next who enjoyed the honour of Bedford was of the blood-royal. This was John Plantagenet, third son to Henry IV., created duke of Bedford in the 2nd of Henry V. In the minority of Henry VI. he was regent of France. His great and memorable services are particularly recorded in our English histories. He died without issue in the 14th of Henry VI. and was buried at Roan. Charles VIII., king of France, when he visited his tomb there, being desired by one of his nobles, who stood by, to cause it to be defaced, made this remarkable answer: 'Let him rest in peace, now he is dead;—it was when he was alive and in the field, that France dreaded him.'" —[Mag. Brit. Ed. 1738.]—At the coronation of the kings of England the ancient barons of Bedford held the office of lord-almoner, which now belongs to the marquess of Exeter, as inheritor of part of the barony. The perquisites attached to this office are a silver alms-bason, and the cloth upon which the king walks from Westminster-hall to the abbey.

At NEWNHAM are remains of a priory of Black canons, and at ELSTOW are the remains of a nunnery. See these articles.—Cadwell priory, of which there are some remains on the bank of the Ouse, about a mile west of the town, was founded in the reign of King John, by Robert, son of William de Houghton, for brethren of the order of the Holy Cross; the revenues at the dissolution amounted to £148 15s. 10d. The chapel of King Offa, already mentioned, is supposed to have been connected with a monastery, of which Bishop Tanner remarks, that it "seems to have been a monastery pretty early in the Saxon times. But who was founder, to what saint it was dedicated, or when and by whom it was destroyed, I have not yet met with any account. In the south part of the town is a priory or hospital, which was built and endowed by some townsman, as early as King Edward the Second's reign, to the honour of John the Baptist. It had, 26th Henry VIII., an income of £21 0s. 8d., and still continues; consisting of a master, who is rector of the parish-church of St John adjoining, and ten poor men; the patronage is in the mayor, aldermen, bailiffs, and common-council of Bedford. Here were also an hospital, dedicated to St Leonard, and a house of Franciscan friars." Pop., in 1801, 3,948; in 1831, 6,959. Houses 1,397. Acres 2,200. A. P. £9,188. Poor rates, in 1837, £1,496.—Bedford is exempt from contributing to the county rate.

BEDFORD, a township in the parish of Leigh, hund. of West Derby, co.-palatine of Lancaster; 7 miles north-east of Newton-in-Makerfield, in the vicinity of the Bolton and Leigh railroad, and the Wigan and Leigh canal. There are a Wesleyan Methodist chapel here, the church having been formed in 1793; and a Roman Catholic chapel. The township possesses four daily and four Sunday schools. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in cotton-factories in the vicinity. Pop., in 1801, 1,965; in 1831, 3,087. Houses 538. Acres 1,750. A. P. £6,094. Poor rates, in 1837, £562.

BEDFORD-LEVEL, a large tract of fen country, extending to not less than 400,000 acres, situated partly in the counties of Norfolk, Suffolk, Huntingdon, Northampton, Lincoln, and Cambridge. Peterborough fen in Northamptonshire, nearly the whole of the isle of Ely in Cambridgeshire, the parts of Holland in Lincolnshire, about 50,000 acres in Huntingdonshire, 63,000 acres in Norfolk, and 30,000 in Suffolk, belong to this great level. It appears to have been formerly inhabited, from the foundations of houses and the trunks of trees which are occasionally found in the soil, and the descriptions of our earlier historians represent it as one of the finest and most fertile districts in the island. But in the 13th century repeated inundations of the sea laid waste this tract. Various attempts were made to drain it, especially in the reigns of Henry VI. and Charles I., but without success. This was at last effected by William, earl of Bedford, in 1649, from which circumstance it received the name which it now bears. By an act of parliament passed in the reign of Charles II., a corporation was established for the government and preservation of the level. It consists of 1 governor, 6 bailiffs, and 20 conservators, and to the present day the fens are managed by this corporation. This act also vested 10,000 acres in the king, 2,000 in the earl of Portland, and 83,000 in the manor of East Greenwich, in common and free soccage. A large portion of this tract of country has been brought into cultivation, and produces grain, flax, and coleseed, in considerable quantity. Sir John Rennie has recently reported that an additional fall of nearly six feet may be gained in the low-water marks of the river Ouse, and that by uniting the Ouse, the Nene, the Welland, and the Witham, and carrying them by one improved outfall into the centre of the great wash, not only will the drainage and navigation of the whole of that immense, fertile, and valuable district of land-draining by those rivers called the Bedford Level, South Holland, and other districts, amounting to about a million of acres, be greatly improved, and consequently increased in value; but also there would, in all probability, in the course of a few years, be gained 150,000 acres of new and valuable land; this alone, taken at the value of £40 per acre, although a great deal of the land which has already been acquired from the sea in that neighbourhood is now worth considerably more, would amount to £8,000,000. And when it is considered that the whole county of Rutland only contains 95,000 acres, and the Isle of Wight about 100,000 acres, the great magnitude and importance of the undertaking, which is estimated at £1,800,000, may be readily conceived. In the fens there are many decoys, where vast numbers of wild ducks are annually taken during the winter-season, and sent to London.

BEDHAMPTON, a parish in the hund. of Portsdown, Fareham division of the county of Southampton; 1 mile west of Havant, near the post-road to Portsmouth. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Winchester; valued at £10 3s. 9d.; gross income £414. Patron, in 1835, A. Reid, Esq. There are two daily schools here. Pop., in 1801, 105; in 1831, 537. Houses 101. Acres 3,280. A. P. £3,317. Poor rates, in 1837, £527.

BEDHURST. See COMPTON-ABBAS.

BEDHINGFIELD, a parish in the hund. of Hoxon, county of Suffolk; 4 miles south-south-east of Eye, in the vicinity of the Eastern Counties railroad. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Suffolk and dio. of Norwich; valued at £8; gross income £276. Patron, in 1835, J. J. Bedingfield, Esq. There are a daily and a Sunday school here. Charities connected with the parish produce £48 annually. Pop., in 1801, 252; in 1831, 332. Houses 35. Acres 1,680. A. P. £2,062. Poor rates, in 1837, £201.

BEDINGHAM, a parish in the hund. of Loddon, union of Hoxne, county of Norfolk; 4 miles north-west by west of Bungay, near the London and Norwich railway. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Norfolk and dio. of Norwich; valued at £5, in the parliamentary returns at £130; gross income £150. Patron, in 1835, J. W. Gooch, Esq. The parish was formerly divided. The other church has been long since demolished. Charities connected with the parish produce £43 9s. 6d. annually. Pop., in 1801, 293; in 1831, 380. Houses 49. Acres 1,140. A. P. £1,949. Poor rates, in 1837, £244.

BEDLINGTON, a parish in the eastern division of Chester ward, union of Morpeth, co.-palatine of Durham, but situated between the rivers Wansbeck on the north, and Blyth on the south, in the south-eastern portion of Castle ward, county of Northumberland; 4½ miles south-east of Morpeth. It comprises the townships of Bedlington, Chambois with North Blyth, Choppington, Netherton, or Nedirton, and East and West Sleekburn; and extends to about 30 square miles. This parish—commonly called Bedlingtonshire—was formerly a royal franchise; and, as part of the patrimony of St Cuthbert, under the bishop of Durham—who is still lord of the manor—it enjoyed its own courts, and officers of justice, of which it was deprived by an act passed in the reign of Henry VIII. and it is now, in all matters of law and civil jurisdiction, a member of the county-palatine. Living, a vicarage in the archd. of Northumberland and dio. of Durham, valued at £13 6s. 8d.; gross income £455; in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Durham. The church, a small building, with an old tower, was enlarged and repaired in 1818. Here are places of worship belonging to the Presbyterians, and to the Primitive and Wesleyan Methodists. There are eight daily and four Sunday schools here. Petty sessions for the district of Bedlingtonshire are held monthly in the village. There are extensive ironworks in this parish. Pop., of the parish, in 1801, 1,422; in 1831, 2,120. Houses 368. Acres 8,910. Poor rates, in 1837, £662.

BEDMINSTER, a parish in the hund. of Hartcliffe with Bedminster, union of Bedminster, county of Somerset; 1½ mile south by west of Bristol, on the line of the Bristol and Exeter railway. It comprises six tythings; East, West, and North Tythings, Knull, Bishopworth-Arthur, and Bishopworth-Lions. Living, a discharged vicarage, with the chapelries of St Thomas Radcliffe and Abbot's Leigh annexed, formerly in the archd. of Bath, and dio. of Bath and Wells, now in the dio. of Gloucester and Bristol, valued at £10 3s. 4d.; gross income £438; in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Sarum. The church is an old building, in a mixed style of architecture. A new church has been erected here by the parliamentary commissioners, in the Gothic style, with a tower, at an expense of £8,673 0s. 6d. Sittings 1,615. The Independents have a handsome chapel here. The Baptists and Methodists have also places of worship here. There are 20 daily and 6 Sunday schools in this parish. Bedminster was formerly a small village, it is now an extensive suburb of Bristol. The charities connected with the parish produce £37 5s. per annum. The petty sessions for the division of Bedminster are held here and at Long Ashton, and also a court-baron for the prebend. Pop., in 1801, 3,278; in 1831, 13,130. Houses 2,342. Acres 4,180. A. P. £19,014. Poor rates, in 1837, £5,065.—The Bedminster poor law union comprehends 23 parishes, embracing an area of 85 square miles; with a population returned in 1831, at 29,399. The average annual expenditure on the poor of this district, during the three years preceding the formation of the union, was £9,752. Expenditure, in 1838, £7,540.

BEDNALL, a liberty and joint-township with Acton-Trussell, in the parish of Baswich, eastern division of the hund. of Cuttleston, county of Stafford; 3 miles north-east of Penkridge, intersected by the Grand Junction railroad. Living, a perpetual curacy, in the archd. of Stafford and dio. of Lichfield and Coventry, valued at £12 10s.; gross income £247; a peculiar of the prebendary of Whittington, in the cathedral church of Lichfield. There are a daily and a Sunday school here. Pop., in 1801, 145; in 1831, 551. Houses 108. Acres 2,370. A. P. £2,698. Poor rates, in 1837, £155.

BEDSTONE, a parish in the hund. of Purslow, county of Salop; 6 miles north-east of Knighton. Living, a discharged rectory, in the archd. of Salop and dio. of Hereford, valued at £4 13s. 4d.; gross income £234. Patron, in 1835, B. Brown, Esq. There is a daily school in this parish. Pop., in 1801, 157; in 1831, 159. Houses 21. Acres 1,200. A. P. £1,718. Poor rates, in 1837, £65.

BEDWARDINE (ST JOHN), a parish in the lower division of the hund. of Oswaldslow, county of Worcester; 1 mile south-west by south of Worcester, forming part of the western suburb of that city. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Worcester, valued at £13 6s. 8d.; gross income £712; in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Worcester. The parish, including the hamlets of Wick-Episcopi, Boulton, Lawrence, and Oldbury, possesses eight daily and three infant schools. Pop., in 1801, 1,574; in 1831, 2,661. Houses 555. Acres 3,730. A. P. £2,352. Poor rates, in 1837, £946.

BEDWAS, a parish, partly in the hund. of Caerphilly, union of Newport, county of Glamorgan, South Wales, and partly in the hund. of Wentloog, county of Monmouth; 10 miles west by north of Newport. The former part contains the hamlet of Van, and the latter those of Upper and Lower Bedwas. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Llandaff, annexed to the bishopric. There is a daily school in this parish, with an endowment of £23 per annum. The Independents have a place of worship here. Pop., in 1801, 586; in 1831, 756. Houses 151. Acres 4,340. A. P. £1,712. Poor rates, in 1837, £368.

BEDWELL-GREEN. See HOUGHTON-REGIS.

BEDWELTY, or BYDWELTY, a parish in the lower division of the hund. of Wentilloog, county of Monmouth; 12 miles north-west of Newport, intersected by the Monmouthshire canal. It comprises the hamlets of Ishlawroed, Mamhole and Ushlawroed, the extensive coal and iron works in which afford employment to upwards of 16,000 labourers. Living, a perpetual curacy, not in charge, valued in the parliamentary returns at £100, and of the certified value of £15; gross income £168; in the patronage of the bishop of Llandaff. The Independents and Calvinistic Methodists have chapels here. The latter church was formed in 1800; besides the Ebenezer chapel at Rumney iron-works, which was also formed the same year. The parish possesses 10 daily and 19 Sunday schools. In 1838 there was a woollen mill here, employing 9 hands. Pop., in 1821, 1,382; in 1831, 10,637. Houses 1,945. Acres 15,440. A. P. £4,967. Poor rates, in 1837, £741. See BASSALEG.

BEDWIN (GREAT), a borough, market-town, and parish, in the hund. of Kinwardstone, union of Hungerford, county of Wilts; 71 miles west by south of London; 6½ miles south-east of Marlborough, and 4 south-west of Hungerford, intersected by the Kennet and Avon canal. It contains the tythings of Crofton, Martin, Wilton, Wixcombe, and Woolfhall.—Living, a discharged vicarage, in the dio. of Salisbury, a royal peculiar, under the archidiaconal jurisdiction of Great and Little Bedwin, and Collingborne Ducis; valued at £8 10s. 10d.; gross income £213. Patron, in 1835, the Marquis of Aylesbury. The church is an ancient and curious building, in the form of a cross, from the intersection of which a fine tower rises. The parish possesses 13 day schools, containing, in 1834, 145 pupils. One of these schools was endowed by William Cox, with a barn, and 3 acres of land, now producing about £8 per annum. The town has been supposed to have been the Leucomagus of Ravennas, and was formerly of greater extent and importance than at present. A desperate battle was fought here in 674, between Wulfhere, king of Mercia, and Osca, general of Saxburga, queen of Wessex. As it was deemed a city under the Saxons, Bedwin retained most of its privileges after the Conquest. It was a borough by prescription, and sent members to parliament in the 23d of Edward I. From this period to the 9th of Henry V., there were many intermissions; but since that time, until disfranchised by the reform act, two members were regularly returned. The market was held on Tuesday, but it has long since fallen into disuse, having been superseded by that of Marlborough. Fairs for horses, cows, sheep, and hardware, are held on the 23d of April, and 26th of July. The soil of the parish is good and well-cultivated. Pop., in 1801, 1,632; in 1831, 2,191. Houses 357. Acres 10,420. A. P. £1,532. Poor rates, in 1837, £1,060.

BEDWIN (LITTLE), a parish in the hund. of Kinwardstone, union of Hungerford, county of Wilts; 4 miles west-south-west of Hungerford, crossed by the Kennet and Avon canal, and contiguous to the parish of Great Bedwin. Living, a vicarage in the archd. of Wilts and dio. of Salisbury, a peculiar as above, valued at £9 6s. 8d.; gross income £281. Patron, in 1835, the Marquis of Aylesbury. The church is a curious building in the Anglo-Norman style of architecture. Pop., in 1801, 428; in 1831, 567. Houses 100. Acres 3,170. A. P. £968. Poor rates, in 1837, £236.

BEDWORTH, a parish in the Kirby division of the hund. of Knightlow, Warwickshire; 3½ miles south of Nuneaton. Living, a rectory, formerly in the archd. of Coventry and dio. of Lichfield and Coventry, now in the dio. of Worcester; valued at £10 3s. 11½d.; gross income £594. Patron, in 1835, the Earl of Aylesford. The church has been recently enlarged. Tithes, moduses, &c., the property of the clerical rector, commuted in 1769. The Independents and Baptists have places of worship here. The Independent church was formed in 1686; the Baptist in 1796. There are 5 daily and 3 Sunday schools; and very extensive alms-houses, originally endowed by the Rev. Nicholas Chamberlain, in 1715. A new hospital is now erecting for the administration of this charity. It forms three sides of a cloistered quadrangle, and is calculated to lodge 20 male and 20 female pensioners in great comfort, each having a separate bedroom and pantry, and a sitting-room betwixt two. It is in the later Gothic style, and will cost £8,500. There is a coal-mine in this vicinity, from which a railway runs to the Coventry canal. In 1838 there were two 2 silk mills here, employing 128 hands. Fairs are held on April 6th, June 6th, and August 25th. Pop., in 1801, 3,161; in 1831, 3,980. Houses 868. Acres 2,240. A. P. £5,844. Poor rates, in 1837, £1,150.

BEEBY, a parish in the eastern division of the hund. of Goscoat, county of Leicester; 6 miles north-east of Leicester, in the neighbourhood of the Midland Counties railway. Living, a rectory, formerly in the archd. of Leicester and dio. of Lincoln, now in the dio. of Peterborough, valued at £15 2s. 6d., and in the parliamentary returns at £107 3s. Tithes commuted in 1839; composition £278 9s. 10d. Patron, in 1835, the Earl of Shaftesbury. There is a day and Sunday school here. Charities connected with the parish produce £6 4s. 6d. per annum. Pop., in 1801, 128; in 1831, 120. Houses 25. Acres 1,020. A. P. £2,000. Poor rates, in 1837, £144.

BEECH, a liberty in the parish of Stone, county of Stafford. Pop., in 1821, 838; in 1831 it was returned with the parish.

BEECHAMWELL. See BEACHAMWELL.

BEECH-HILL, a tything in the parish of Strathfield-saye, hund. of Reading, county of Berks, but locally situated in the hund. of Charlton; 6 miles south by west of Reading. The Baptists have a chapel here, and there are a daily and a Sunday school. Pop., in 1801, 184; in 1831, 249. Houses 30. Acres 770. A. P. £983. Poor rates, in 1837, £128.

BEECHINGSTOKE. See BEACHINGSTOKE.

BEEDING, or SEAL, a parish in the hund. of Burbeach, rape of Bramber, union of Steyning, county of Sussex; 1 mile east of Steyning, intersected by the river Adur, and the London and Horsham railway. It comprises the tythings of Upper and Lower Beeding.—Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Lewes and dio. of Chichester; valued at £8; gross income £132; in the patronage of the president and fellows of Magdalene college, Oxford. A chapel of ease in the early English style was built in 1839 in St. Leonard's forest in this parish; and a new church is now (1840) erecting at Plummer's plain. Here was a convent of Benedictine monks from the monastery of Salmur. "This alien priory was made denizen, 19^o Richard II., but was suppressed, and the churches and lands belonging to it, (valued at £26 9s. 9d.) annexed to St. Mary Magdalene college, Oxford. The site of the house of the White friars here, was granted 35^o Henry VIII. to Richard Andrews and Nicolas Temple." Tanner's Not. Mon.—Pop., in 1801, 689; in 1831, 1,122. Houses 174. Acres 3,500. A. P. £5,847. Poor rates, in 1837, £531.

BEEDON, or BUDON, a parish in the hund. of Faircross, union of Wantage, county of Berks; 2 miles south of East Ilsley. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Berks, and formerly in the dio. of Salisbury, now in the dio. of Oxford; valued at £6 10s. 10d., in the parliamentary returns at £66 10s. 4d.; gross income £126. Patron, in 1835, Sir J. Reade, Bart. This parish contains the hamlet of Stanmore. Pop., in 1801, 303; in 1831, 306. Houses 60. Acres 1,930. A. P. £1,751. Poor rates, in 1837, £245.

BEEFORD, a parish in the northern division of the wapentake of Holderness, union of Driffield, east riding of the county of York; 7 miles east-south-east of Great Driffield. Living, a rectory in the archd. of the east riding and dio. of York; valued at £22; gross income £798; in the patronage of the archbishop of York. The great and small tithes, the property of the clerical rector, were commuted in 1766. The Independents have a place of worship here, and there are five daily schools. This parish contains the townships of Dunnington, Lissett, and Beesford, the latter of which is pleasantly situated on the high road from Hull to Scarborough, and contained, in 1801, 378; and, in 1831, 731 inhabitants. Pop. of the parish, in 1821, 791; in 1831, 894. Houses 174. Acres 5,270. A. P. £5,177. Poor rates, in 1837, £270.

BEELEY, a chapelry in the parish of Bakewell, hund. of High Peak, county of Derby; $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles east of Bakewell, on the bank of the river Derwent. Living, a perpetual curacy, a peculiar of the dean and chapter of Lichfield; valued at £10 18s., in the parliamentary returns at £50; gross income £98. Patron, in 1835, the Duke of Devonshire. Certain tithes of the township of Beeley, the property of the lord of the manor, dean and chapter of Lichfield, and the vicar, were commuted in 1811. There are a daily and a Sunday school here, the former of which is endowed with £10 per annum by the duke of Devonshire. Pop., in 1801, 208; in 1831, 441. Houses 70. Acres 3,250. A. P. £882. Poor rates, in 1837, £97.

BEELSBY, a parish in the wapentake of Bradley-Haverstoe, parts of Lindsey, union of Caistor, county of Lincoln; 5 miles east of Caistor. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Lincoln; valued at £8 17s. 6d.; gross income £450; in the patronage of the chapter of the collegiate church of Southwell. There are two daily schools here. Pop., in 1801, 148; in 1831, 158. Houses 34. Acres 1,980. A. P. £3,760. Poor rates, in 1837, £40.

BEENHAM, or BENHAM-VALENCE, a parish in the hund. of Reading, union of Bradfield, county of Berks; 8 miles west-south-west of Reading, on the post-road to Newbury. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Berks and dio. of Salisbury; valued at £7 17s.; gross income £212. Patron, in 1835, the Rev. J. Bushnell. The tithes of this parish, the property of the lord of the manor and vicar, were commuted in 1811. There are an infant and a Sunday school in this parish. Pop., in 1801, 381; in 1831, 360. Houses 87. Acres 1,890. A. P. £2,516. Poor rates, in 1837, £133.

BEER. See SEATON with BEER.

BEER-ALSTON, a borough in the parish of Beer-Ferris, division and hund. of Roborough, county of Devon; 8 miles north by west of Plymouth, on the river Tamar. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in agriculture and mining. There are some lead-mines in the vicinity. There is an Independent chapel here, the church having been formed in 1809. The town is under the jurisdiction of the county-magistrates, though nominally governed by a portreeve and other officers, chosen annually at the court-leet of the lord of the manor. Beer-Alston was a borough by prescription, and, from the 27th of Elizabeth, until its disfranchisement under the Reform act, returned two representatives to parliament. The right of election was vested in those who held land in the borough, and paid an acknowledgment of threepence to the lord of the manor. The lord of the manor, the earl of Beverley, having become the only holder of land, used to avail himself of this circumstance in such a manner as to make the borough completely his own, by granting burgage-tenures to qualify voters, which were usually resigned when the election was over. About the year 1295, this borough received the grant of a weekly market and an annual fair, both of which have long since fallen into disuse. Pop. returned with the parish.

BEERCROCOMBE, a parish in the hund. of Abdick and Bulstone, Ilminster division, union of Langport, county of Somerset; 5 miles north-west of Ilminster, in the vicinity of the Bristol and Exeter railway. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. of Taunton and dio. of Bath and Wells; valued at £11 12s. 6d., in the parliamentary returns at £150; gross income £200. Patron, in 1835, the Earl of Egremont. Pop., in 1801, 137; in 1831, 182. Houses 32. Acres 770. A. P. £1,331. Poor rates, in 1837, £72.

BEER-FERRIS, or FERRERS, a parish in the hund. of Roborough, division and union of Tavistock, county of Devon; 3 miles north-east of Saltash, on the western bank of the Tavy. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Totness and dio. of Exeter; valued at £24 1s. 0^d; gross income £800; nett income £700. Patron, in 1835, Viscount Valletort. The church is a neat little edifice, near the Tavy, about $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles from Beer-Alston; and contains several monuments to members of the Ferrers and Champenoune families. There are four daily schools here, one of which is endowed with £90 per annum, and two Sunday schools. The parish is bounded on the west by the Tamar, and on the east by the Tavy, which unite at its southern angle. Pop., in 1801, 1,110; in 1831, 1,876. Houses 330. Acres 5,850. A. P. £25,559. Poor rates, in 1837, £730.

BEER-HACKET, a parish in the hund. and union of Sherborne, Sherborne division of the county of Dorset; 4 miles south-west of Sherborne. The South Western railway runs five chains to the left of the village. Living, a discharged rectory exempt from visitation, a peculiar of the dean of Salisbury; valued at £6 2s. 8^d; gross income £210. Patrons, in 1835, W. Helyar and J. Munden. Pop., in 1801, 87; in 1831, 110. Houses 19. Acres 450. A. P. included in Lillington. Poor rates, in 1837, £39.

BEER-HALL. See AXMINSTER.

BEER-HEATH. See BEER-REGIS.

BEER-REGIS HUNDRED, in the Blandford division of the county of Dorset, is bounded on the north and east by Coomdsitch hundred; on the west by that of Piddletton; and on the south by the hundred of Barrow. Area 9,920 acres. Houses 393. Population, in 1831, 2,047.

BEER-REGIS, or BEER-REGIS, a market-town and parish in the hund. of Beer-Regis, Blandford division, union of Wareham, county of Dorset; 7 miles north-west of Wareham, near the post-road to Dorchester. The parish comprises the hamlets of Shitterton and Beer-Heath. Living, a vicarage, with the chapelry of Winterborne-Kington, in the archd. of Dorset, and formerly in the dio. of Bristol, now in the dio. of Salisbury; valued at £25 5s.; gross income £400; in the patronage of the master and fellows of Baliol college, Oxford. This living, with that of Charmonth, formerly constituted the 'golden prebend' in the cathedral church of Salisbury. The church is a large ancient building, with a square tower. It contains several monuments to the memory of the Turbervilles, who formerly possessed the manor. This edifice was entirely restored and repaired in 1835. The Wesleyan Methodists, and the Independents, have places of worship here. The parish possesses eight daily schools, in two of which are 40 pupils; the other six collectively contain 43 males and 81 females, and are termed 'but-toning schools,' from the children being taught to make buttons in them, and to read. There are besides three Sunday schools. Beer-Regis is supposed by Dr Stukeley to have been the Ibernium of the Romans. It was erected into a free borough by Edward I., but never sent representatives to parliament. It has suffered severely from fire on three different occasions; first in 1634, again in 1788, and on the last occasion in 1817. The market is held on Wednesday. An annual fair for horses, cattle, sheep, hops, cheese, and all sorts of goods, is held on the 18th of September and the five following days, on Woodbury-hill.—Dr John Moreton, archbishop of Canterbury, was born here, as was also Dr Turberville, bishop of Exeter. Pop., in 1801, 936; in 1831, 1,170. Houses 286. Acres 8,150. A. P. £1,993. Poor rates, in 1837, £537.

BEEES (St), a parish in the ward of Allerdale above Darwent, county of Cumberland; 3 miles west by north of Egremont on the coast. It comprises the port and town of Whitehaven, the chapels of Ennerdale, Eskdale with Wasdale, and Nether-Wasdale, and the townships of St Bees, Hensingham, Kinneyside, Lowside-Quarter, Preston-Quarter, Rottington, Sandwith, and Wheddicar. The village was formerly known by the name of Begock, Begoth or Beghes, and the church is styled in ancient evidences Kirkby-Begog. Living, a perpetual curacy, in the archd. of Richmond and dio. of Chester; valued at £12; gross income £105. Patron, in 1835, the Earl of Lonsdale. The chapel, which is built of free-stone, is part of an ancient church belonging to a monastery founded about 650 by St Bega. The form of the building is that of a cross. The western port, or nave, is fitted up as the parish church, the great door of which is ornamented with grotesque heads, chevron mouldings, &c. It formerly contained a large effigy in wood, of Anthony, the last Lord Lucy of Egremont. This, however, was removed some time since. The monastery is thus spoken of by Tanner:—"Bega, an holy woman from Ireland, is said to have founded, about the year of our Lord 650, a small monastery in Copeland, where afterwards a church was built in memory of her. This religious house, being destroyed by the Danes, was restored by William, son to Ranulph de Meschin, earl of Cumberland, in the time of Henry I., and made a cell of a prior and six Benedictine monks to the abbey of St Mary at York. It was endowed, at the dissolution, with £149 19s. 6d., and granted, 7^o Edward VI., to Sir Thomas Chaloner, but 4^o and 5^o Philip and Mary, to the bishop of Chester and his successors." The eastern part of the abbey, built in the 13th century, was fitted up in 1817 as a college, containing one large hall for the students, and a lecture-room, the end of the ancient cross-aisle being converted into another. This institution was commenced under the auspices of the late Dr G. H. Law, bishop of Chester, for the benefit of young men in the northern dioceses, who do not intend to complete their education in Oxford or Cambridge, and who become entitled to receive ordination after having studied for a certain time at this place. One of the lecture-rooms is likewise used as a library, and contains a very useful collection of works on divinity. The students, previous to admission, are expected to be well-versed in the classics, so that the course of study does not exceed two years, or at most three. In 1583, Edmund Grindall, archbishop of Canterbury, who was born at Hensingham in this parish, obtained letters-patent for the foundation of a free grammar-school here, in which gratuitous instruction in the classics alone is given to 100 boys. This institution is under the management of a corporation of seven governors, two of whom are always the provost of Queen's college, Oxford, and the rector of Egremont. This school has the privilege of sending a scholar to be examined for one of five exhibitions, founded in Queen's college, Oxford, by Lady Hastings; and failing of scholars from Carlisle, those of St Bees are eligible to two exhibitions in the same college, founded by Bishop Thomas. It has also a fellowship and two scholarships at Queen's college, Oxford; a fellowship and three scholarships at Pembroke college; and a scholarship of £4 yearly at Magdalene college, Cambridge. This has long been a distinguished seminary in the North of England, and has produced several learned characters, among whom was Bishop Hall. There are 81 daily, and 9 Sunday schools, in this parish. The parish is of considerable extent, and contains many coal-mines; lime and free-stone are also found in abundance; and at Kinneyside there is a lead-mine, where the ore is smelted. In 1838 there was a flax-mill here, employing 50 hands. The district forms a promontory on the coast, and appears, from various ruins, to have been fortified by the Romans, at all convenient landing-places, against the incursions of the Irish and Scots. The village is very ancient, and stands on the side of the bay which is formed by the southern headland. St Bee's head, anciently called the cliff of Barath, is a conspicuous sea-mark for vessels in the north-east parts of the Irish sea. It is in N. lat. 54° 31'; and W. long. 3° 39'; and has a lighthouse, erected in 1718, with a fixed light, elevated 333 feet above high water, and visible at the distance of 20 miles in clear weather. Pop., in 1801, 12,848; in 1831, 20,013. Houses 3,724. Acres 69,260. A. P. £35,479. Poor rates, in 1837, £3,700.

BEESEBY, a parish united with that of Hawerby, in the wapentake of Bradley-Haverstoe, parts of Lindsey, union of Caistor, county of Lincoln; 8 miles north-north-west of Louth. The living is a rectory consolidated with that of Hawerby; with which also the population is returned. See HAWERBY.

BEESEBY-IN-THE-MARSH, a parish in the Wold division of the hund. of Calceworth, parts of Lindsey, union of Louth, county of Lincoln; 2½ miles north by east of Alford. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Lincoln; valued at £13 10s. 2½d.; gross income £251. Patron, the Crown. Pop., in 1801, 131; in 1831, 159. Houses 28. Acres 1,180. A. P. £1,684. Poor rates, in 1837, £109.

BEESTON, a hamlet, partly in the parish of Northill, partly in that of Sandy, hund. of Wixamtree, county of Bedford; 2½ miles north-north-west of Biggleswade, on the post-road to Huntingdon. Pop., in 1801, 180; in 1831, 258. Houses 50. Acres 210. Other returns with the parish.

BEESTON, a township in the parish of Bunbury, first division of the hund. of Eddisbury, county of Chester; 3½ miles south-west of Tarporley, on the line of the Chester and Crewe railway. In the vicinity is Beeston castle, now in ruins, situated on the insulated sandstone rock of Beeston, which is 366 feet in height. This fortress was erected in 1228, by Ranulph de Blundeville, and became a royal garrison in the war between Henry III. and his barons. In 1645, it was demolished by order of the parliament. The remains are extensive. Pop., in 1801, 377; in 1831, 434. Houses 74. Acres 1,720. A. P. £2,690. Poor rates, in 1837, £339.

BEESTON, a parish in the hund. of Launditch, union of Mitford and Launditch, county of Norfolk; 6½ miles north-east of Swaffham. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. and dio. of Norwich, valued at £13; gross income £480; in the patronage of the chancellor of the duchy of Lancaster. There are a daily and a day and Sunday school here, and an alms-house with a small endowment. Other charities connected with the parish produce £44 19s. per annum. Pop., in 1801, including that of Bitter-ing, 511; in 1831, 702. Houses 120. Acres 3,100. A. P. £2,535. Poor rates, in 1837, £564.

BEESTON, a parish in the southern division of the hund. of Broxtow, union of Basford, county of Nottingham; $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles south-west of Nottingham, intersected by the Midland Counties railroad, and by the Nottingham canal, which here forms a junction with the Trent. Living, a discharged vicarage, in the archd. of Nottingham, and formerly in the dio. of York, now in the dio. of Lincoln, valued at £4 15s.; gross income £257. Patron, in 1835, the Duke of Devonshire. All tithes, tenths, moduses, &c., of this parish, the property of the lay-impropriator and vicar, were commuted in 1806. The Baptists and Wesleyan Methodists have chapels here. The Baptist church was formed in 1804; the Wesleyan Methodist, in 1824. There are eight daily schools here, in which 171 children receive instruction, and three Sunday schools. Charities connected with this parish produce £24 5s. annually. The inhabitants of this parish have been considerably increased by the establishment of lace-manufactories and silk-mills, in which many of them are engaged. Pop., in 1801, 948; in 1831, 2,530. Houses 504. Acres 1,440. A. P. £4,139. Poor rates, in 1837, £512.

BEESTON, a chapelry in the parish of St Peter, $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles south by west of Leeds, within the liberty of that borough, west riding, county of York. It comprises the townships of Beeston-Shaw, Cottingley-Hall, New-Hall, Parkside, Royds, and Snickells. Living, a perpetual curacy annexed to the vicarage of St Peter, Leeds, formerly in the archd. and dio. of York, now in the dio. of Ripon; valued at £28; gross income £190. The chapelry possesses a daily and a Sunday school. There are extensive coal-mines here, which have been wrought since the time of Charles II. Pop., in 1801, 1,427; in 1831, 2,128. Houses 419. Acres 1,770. A. P. £6,046. Poor rates, in 1837, £776.

BEESTON, St Andrew, a parish in the hund. of Taverham, union of St Faith, county of Norfolk; $4\frac{1}{2}$ miles north-north-east of Norwich. Living, a discharged rectory, in the archd. of Norfolk and dio. of Norwich, valued at £3 6s. 8d.; gross income £220. Patron, in 1835, F. R. Reynolds, Esq. The church is desecrated, and the living is a sinecure. Pop., in 1801, 39; in 1831, 49. Houses 8. Acres 920. A. P. £803. Poor rates, in 1837, £55.

BEESTON, St Lawrence, a parish in the hund. of Tunstead, county of Norfolk; $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles east north-east of Coltishall. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. of Norfolk and dio. of Norwich, valued at £6; gross income £100. Patron, in 1835, Sir J. Preston. There is a Sunday school here. Pop., in 1801, 36; in 1831, 52. Houses 7. Acres 450. Poor rates, in 1837, £41.

BEESTON-REGIS, a parish in the northern division of the hund. and union of Erpingham, county of Norfolk; 3 miles west-north-west of Cromer, near the sea. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Norfolk and dio. of Norwich, valued at £16; gross income £138. Patron, the Crown. "The lady Margery de Cressy," says Tanner, "in the latter part of the reign of John, or in the beginning of that of Henry III., built near the village a small monastery for a prior and about four Augustine canons, to the honour of the Blessed Virgin. It was valued, 26th Henry VIII., at £50 6s. 4d., and granted, 37th Henry VIII., to Sir Edmund Windham, and Giles Seafoile." Some portions of the building are still extant. There is a daily school in this parish. The charities of Edmund Hooks and an unknown donor, produce £18

4s. per annum. Pop., in 1801, 167; in 1831, 246. Houses 45. Acres 740. A. P. £833. Poor rates, in 1837, £131.

BEETHAM, or BETHOLME, a parish in the ward and union of Kendal, county of Westmoreland; $8\frac{1}{2}$ miles west of Kirkby-Lonsdale, intersected by the river Ken and the Kendal and Lancaster canal. It comprises the chapelry of Witherslack, and the townships of Beetham, Farlton, Haverbrack, and Methop with Ulpha. Living, a discharged vicarage formerly in the archd. of Richmond and dio. of Chester, now in the dio. of Carlisle and Man; valued at £13 7s. 4d.; gross income £181. Patron, the Crown. Here is a grammar-school, endowed with £26 per annum, by Dr John Barwick, dean of St Paul's; the trustees of Dr Barwick's charity allow the teacher £10 a-year additional for attending on Sundays, and the mistress of the school £30; the school-house was built in 1663, and rebuilt in 1827. There are besides four daily schools in the parish. Other charities produce £62 4s. 4d. per annum. Not far from the village are the ruins of the towers of Arnaide and Hellsack, supposed to have been erected to guard the bay of Morecambe. Pop., in 1801, 1,295; in 1831, 1,639. Houses 294. Acres 12,850. A. P. £9,750. Poor rates, in 1837, £425.

BEE TLEY, a parish in the hund. of Launditch, union of Mitford and Launditch, county of Norfolk; 4 miles north-west by north of East Dereham. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. of Norfolk and dio. of Norwich, valued at £9 7s. 11d.; gross income £390. Patron, in 1835, W. Collison, Esq. Charities connected with this parish produce £3 15s. 4d. per annum. Pop., in 1801, 242; in 1831, 381. Houses 55. Acres 1,770. A. P. £2,302. Poor rates, in 1837, £197.

BEGARE, in the north riding of the county of York. "The abbey of Begare in Brittany having several estates in England, particularly in Lincolnshire and Yorkshire, there was a cell of alien monks of that abbey fixed near Richmond, in the time of Henry III., which, upon the suppression of these foreign houses, was first granted to the chantry of St Anne at Thresh, then to Eaton college, then to the priory of Mountgrave, and lastly to Eaton college again."—Tanner's Not. Mon.

BEGBROOKE, a parish in the hund. of Wootton, union of Woodstock, county of Oxford; $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles south-east by south of Woodstock, intersected by the Oxford canal. Living, a rectory, in the archd. and dio. of Oxford, not in charge, rated in the parliamentary returns at £107 7s.; gross income £170; in the patronage of the principal and fellows of Brazen-nose college, Oxford. A small portion of property here, at the time of making Pope Nicholas' taxation, belonged to the abbey of Godestow. The church, which is of Norman structure, had in Hearne's time a figure of St Michael over the door to whom it was originally dedicated; and near the entrance, in the churchyard, were the remains of a stone coffin, said to have been that of the founder. But both of those are now gone, and the principal indication of the church's antiquity is an arch of zigzag workmanship, which separates the chancel from the nave. There is a day and Sunday school here, attended by upwards of 40 children. A little to the westward of the church, but in the adjoining parish of Bladon, are traces of an ancient fortification, called Round castle. Pop., in 1801, 80; in 1831, 102. Houses 22. Acres 380. A. P. £1,280. Poor rates, in 1837, £104.

BEGELLY, a parish in the hund. and union of Narberth, county of Pembroke, South Wales; 5 miles south-south-east of Narberth. Living, a discharged rectory, with the curacy of Williamston, in the archd. and dio. of Llandaff, valued at £12 19s. 2d.; gross income £233. Patron, in 1835, Sir R. B. P. Phillips. The Calvinistic Methodists have a place of worship here; the church was formed in 1826. There is a daily school here. Coal is found in this parish. Pop., in 1821, 895; in 1831, 996. Houses 107. A. P. £1,981. Poor rates, in 1837, £102.

BEGGERIDGE, a hamlet in the parish and hundred of Wellow, county of Somerset.

BEGUILDY (LOWER and UPPER), a parish in the hund. and union of Knighton, county of Radnor, South Wales; $7\frac{1}{2}$ miles north-west of Knighton, on the river Teme. Living, a vicarage in the archd. and dio. of St David's, valued at £7 15s. 7 $\frac{1}{2}$ d., and in the parliamentary returns at £142 9s. 6d.; gross income £164; in the patronage of the bishop of St David. There are two daily schools here, one of which is endowed with £10 per annum. Pop., in 1821, 974; in 1831, 1,043. Houses 186. A. P. £4,124. Poor rates, in 1837, £451.

BEIGHAM, a hamlet in the parish of Frant, eastern division of the hund. of Washington, lathe of Aylesford, county of Kent, and partly in the hund. of Rotherfield, rape of Pevensey, county of Sussex; $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles west of Lamberhurst, near the post road to Tunbridge. "Robert de Turneham or Thornham the second, gave his estate here, A. D. 1200, to the Præmonstratensian canons of Brokely, in order to found an abbey in a pleasant part of it called Beaulieu, who soon removed themselves hither, as did those of Ottenham also shortly after. Beigham was dedicated to the Blessed Virgin, and was one of those smaller monasteries which Cardinal Wolsey obtained, 17th Henry VIII., for the endowment of his colleges, though its spiritualities were valued at £27 6s. 8d., and its temporalities at £125 2s. 8d."—Tanner's Not. Mon.

BEIGHTON, a parish in the hund. of Scarsdale, county of Derby; 9 miles north-east by north of Chesterfield, on the line of the North Midland railroad, and crossed by the Chesterfield canal; containing the hamlets of Berley, Hackenthorpe, and Southwell. Living, a discharged vicarage, in the archd. of Derby and dio. of Lichfield and Coventry, valued at £6 11s. 10 $\frac{1}{2}$ d.; gross income £312. Patron, in 1835, Earl Manvers. The great and small tithes, the property of the lord of the manor and vicar, were commuted in 1797. The parish possesses two daily schools, one of which is partly supported by an endowment of £4 4s. per annum, and two Sunday schools. Lands producing about £14 per annum were bequeathed in 1666, by William Jessop, for apprenticing poor children and other charitable purposes. Other charities connected with the parish produce £12 6s. annually. Pop., in 1801, 634; in 1831, 960. Houses 179. Acres 3,070. A. P. £3,738. Poor rates, in 1837, £269.

BEIGHTON, or BOYRON, a parish in the hund. of Walsham, union of Blofield, county of Norfolk; $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles south-west of Acle. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. of Norfolk and dio. of Norwich, valued at £13; gross income £369; and, in 1829, in the patronage of R. Fellowes, Esq. The poor's allotment lands in this parish produce £20 5s. annually, which is distributed in sums varying from 6s. to 12s. Pop., in 1801, 208; in 1831, 262. Houses 61. Acres 910. A. P. £1,257. Poor rates, in 1837, £129.

BEIGHTON, or BEYRON, a parish in the hund. of Thedwestry, union of Stow, county of Suffolk; 5 miles east by south of Bury St Edmunds. Living, a discharged rectory, formerly in the archd. of Sudbury and dio. of Norwich, now in the dio. of Ely, valued at £4 3s. 4d., and in the parliamentary returns at £81 12s. 3d.; gross income £175. Patron, the Crown. There are two daily and two Sunday schools in this parish. Pop., in 1801, 231; in 1831, 330. Houses 43. Acres 550. A. P. £940. Poor rates, in 1837, £142.

BELBY, a township and chapelry in the parish of Hayton, Holme-Beacon division of the wapentake of Harthill, east riding, county of York; 4 miles south of Pocklington, intersected by the Pocklington canal. Living, a curacy, not in charge, annexed to the vicarage of Hayton. All tithes of this township, the property of the dean of York and the vicar, were commuted in 1814. Pop., in 1801, 173; in 1831, 248. Houses 40. Acres 1,220. A. P. £1,146. Poor rates, in 1837, £69.

BELAUGH, a parish in the southern division of the hund. of Erpingham, union of Aylsham, county of Norfolk; $1\frac{1}{2}$ mile south-east of Coltishall. Living, a discharged rectory, with the vicarage of Scottow, in the archd. of Norfolk and dio. of Norwich, valued at £6; gross income £420; in the patronage of the bishop of Norwich. Pop., in 1801, 74; in 1831, 151. Houses 35. Acres 810. A. P. £986. Poor rates, in 1837, £106.

BELBANK, a township in the parish of Stapleton, Eskdale ward, county of Cumberland; 9 miles north-east of Brampton. Pop., in 1801, 109; in 1831, 127. Houses 19. Acreage with the parish. A. P. £1,706. Poor rates, in 1837, £51.—There is a daily school here.

BELBANK, a township in the parish of Bewcastle, Eskdale ward, county of Cumberland; 10 miles north-east of Brampton. Here are coal and iron works. Pop., in 1801, 284; in 1831, 485. Houses 87. Other returns with the parish.

BELBROUGHTON, a parish in the lower division of the hund. of Halfshire, union of Bromesgrove, county of Worcester; $5\frac{1}{2}$ miles east of Kidderminster. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Worcester, valued at £19; gross income £1,398; in the patronage of the president and fellows of St John's college, Oxford. There are seven daily schools here, one of which, containing 16 boys, is endowed with £10 4s. per annum, and two Sunday schools. Charities connected with this parish produce £24 6s. Fairs for horned-cattle, horses, and cheese, are held here on the last Monday in April, the Monday before St Luke's day, and the 18th of October. Pop., in 1801, 1,266; in 1831, 1,489. Houses 319. Acres 5,350. A. P. £7,535. Poor rates, in 1837, £782.

BELBY. See SURFLEET.

BELBY, a township in the parish of Howden, wapentake of Howdenshire, east riding of the county of York; $1\frac{1}{2}$ mile north by east of Howden, in the vicinity of the Selby and Hull railway. Pop., in 1801, 38; in 1831, 44. Houses 10. Acres 440. A. P. £1,255. Poor rates, in 1837, £61.

BELCHALWELL, a parish in the hund. of Cranborne, union of Sturminster, Shaston division of the county of Dorset; $6\frac{1}{2}$ miles west-north-west of Blandford Forum. Living, a discharged rectory, united, in 1776, to the rectory of Fifehead-Neville, formerly in the archd. of Dorset and dio. of Bristol, now in the dio. of Salisbury; valued at £7 15s.; gross income £370. Patron, in 1835, Lord Rivers. There are a daily and a Sunday school here. Pop., in 1801, 134; in 1831, 205. Houses 28. Acres 950. A. P. £1,913. Poor rates, in 1837, £108.

BELCHAMP-OTTEN, a parish in the hund. of Hinckford, union of Sudbury, county of Essex; $4\frac{1}{2}$ miles west of Sudbury. Living, a rectory, formerly in the archd. of Middlesex and dio. of London, now in the dio. of Rochester; valued at £12; gross income £355. Patron, in 1835, the Rev. A. Cox. There is a Sunday school here, supported by the rector. Pop., in 1801, 261; in 1831, 397. Houses 73. Acres 1,600. A. P. £2,187. Poor rates, in 1837, £319.

BELCHAMP (ST PAUL), a parish in the hund. of Hincford, union of Sudbury, county of Essex; 2 miles south-east of Clare. Living, a discharged vicarage in the peculiar jurisdiction and patronage of the dean and chapter of St Paul's, London; valued at £14; gross income £247. There are a daily and a Sunday school in this parish. A fair is held here on the 11th of December for cattle and toys. Pop., in 1801, 499; in 1831, 808. Houses 97. Acres 2,270. A. P. £2,722. Poor rates, in 1837, £365.

BELCHAMP (WALTERS), a parish in the hund. of Hincford, union of Sudbury, county of Essex; 3 miles west of Sudbury. Living, a discharged vicarage consolidated with that of Bulmer, formerly in the archd. of Middlesex and dio. of London, now in the dio. of Rochester; valued at £6; gross income £445. Patron, in 1835, S. M. Raymond. A fair for toys is held here on Whit-Tuesday. Pop., in 1801, 422; in 1831, 670. Houses 130. Acres 2,110. A. P. £2,903. Poor rates, in 1837, £312. See BULMER, Essex.

BELCHFORD, a parish in the northern division of the wapentake of Gartree, parts of Lindsey, county of Lincoln; 4½ miles north-east of Horn-castle. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Lincoln; valued at £18 6s. 8d.; gross income £428. Patron, the Crown. The great and small tithes, the property of the clerical rector, were commuted in 1801. There are two daily schools here. Pop., in 1801, 275; in 1831, 517. Houses 88. Acres 2,390. A. P. £2,399. Poor rates, in 1837, £364.

BELFORD, a parish chiefly in the northern division of the ward of Bambrough, union of Belford, county of Northumberland, and partly in Islandshire, an insulated portion of the co.-palatine of Durham. It extends 4½ miles from east to west, and about 3 from north to south, and comprises the market-town of Belford, and the townships of Detchant, Easington, Easington-Grange, Elwick, and Middleton. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. of Northumberland and dio. of Durham; valued at £2, and in the parliamentary returns at £94; gross income £147. Patron, in 1835, W. Clarke, Esq. This parish possesses eight daily, three Sunday, and three boarding schools. The soil is fertile; and coal, limestone, and building-stone, are found in abundance. A few mineral springs have at different periods been discovered in the parish. A workhouse has been erected here by the poor-law commissioners for the union of Belford, at an expense of £800, capable of containing 50 individuals. The Belford poor-law union comprehends 34 parishes, embracing an area of 58 square miles; with a population returned, in 1831, at 6,422. The average annual expenditure on the poor of this district, during the three years preceding the formation of the union, was £2,326. Expenditure, in 1838, £1,860. Pop., in 1821, 1,783; in 1831, 2,030. Houses 341. Acres 7,720. A. P. £16,948. Poor rates, in 1837, £729.

The market-town of Belford, in the above parish and union, is 322 miles north by west of London; 49 of Newcastle; 15½ south by east of Berwick, and 13½ north by west of Alnwick, on the great post-road between London and Edinburgh; occupying a gentle eminence within two miles of the sea. The market is held on Thursday, at which extensive business is done in corn. Fairs for black cattle, sheep, and horses, are held on the Tuesday before Whitsunday, and the 23d of August. The North of England Joint Stock banking company has a branch here. The town is under the jurisdiction of the magistrates of the county, who hold petty-sessions here for the ward of Bambrough. The United Secession, Wesleyan Methodists, and Church of Scotland, have chapels here. There are five daily schools, containing 180 pupils, and two Sunday schools, in this township. Pop., in 1801, 902; in 1831, 1,354. Houses 230. Acreage with the parish. A. P. £5,755. Poor rates, in 1837, £468.

BELGH, or BELLER'S-GRANGE. See CUCKNEY, Nottinghamshire.

BELGRAVE, formerly MERDEGRAVE, a parish, partly in the western and partly in the eastern division of the hund. of Goscote, county of Leicester; 2 miles north of Leicester, on the river Soar, which is here navigable for barges, and intersected by the Midland Counties railway. It includes the chapels of Birstall and South Thurmaston, with the township of Belgrave. Living, a vicarage, formerly in the dio. of Lincoln, now in the archd. of Leicester and dio. of Peterborough; valued at £13 6s. 8d., in the parliamentary returns at £81; gross income £154; in the patronage of the Bishop of Peterborough. The rectorial and vicarial tithes of the manor of Birstall, the property of the bishop of Lichfield, were commuted in 1759. There are four daily and three Sunday schools here. Charities connected with this parish produce annually about £34. This parish is in the honour of Tutbury. Traces of the Roman fosse-way are still discernible in it. Belgrave gives the title of Viscount to the marquess of Westminster. Pop., in 1801, 1,601; in 1831, 2,329. Houses 240. Acres 2,480. A. P. £5,022. Poor rates, in 1837, £428.

BELLASIS. See STANNINGTON.

BELLASIZE, a township in the parish of East-riding, wapentake of Howdenshire, east riding of the county of York; 4½ miles east of Howden, in the vicinity of the Selby and Hull railroad. Pop., in 1801, 153; in 1831, 189. Houses 42. Acres 1,020. A. P. £1,672. Poor rates, in 1837, £154.

BELLEAU, a parish in the marsh division of the hund. of Calceworth, parts of Lindsey, union of Louth, county of Lincoln; 4 miles north-west of Alford, near the post-road to Louth. The name is derived from some fine springs of water which arise from the chalk-rocks in the vicinity. Living, a discharged rectory, annexed to the vicarage of Aby, in the archd. and dio. of Lincoln; valued at £13 3s. 9d.; gross income £307. Patron, in 1835, Lord Willoughby d'Eresby. For commutation of tithes, see SWABY. Pop., in 1801, 113; in 1831, 107. Houses 14. Acres 430. A. P. £1,156. Poor rates, in 1837, £145.

BELLERBY, a chapelry in the parish of Spennithorne, western division of the wapentake of Hang, north riding of the county of York; 1 mile north of Leyburn. Living, a curacy, formerly in the archd. of Richmond and dio. of Chester, now in the dio. of Ripon; valued at £4; gross income £78. Patron, in 1835, J. C. Chaytor, Esq. All tithes of Bellerby manor, the property of the clerical rector, were commuted in 1770. There is a day school here. Pop., in 1801, 309; in 1831, 417. Houses 91. Acres 2,540. A. P. £2,815. Poor rates, in 1837, £130.

BELLINGHAM, a parish chiefly composed of moors and sheep-walks, in the north-western division of Tindale ward, union of Bellingham, Northumberland, formerly a chapelry to the extensive parish of Simonburn, which was divided into six parishes, by an act of the 51^o of George III., cap. 194.—Living, a rectory, not in charge, in the archd. of Northumberland and dio. of Durham; in the patronage of the governors of Greenwith hospital. The church is a small ancient structure; the roof is finely groined, and the chancel contains numerous tablets and monuments. The parish possesses 7 daily schools, 4 of which are in the village of Bellingham, and the average attendance during winter at the whole is about 130. On an eminence, now called Hallfield, is said to have stood a castle belonging to the De Bellinghams. Richard de Bellingham was possessor of the manor in the reign of Richard II. and Henry IV.; subsequently it became the property of the earl of Derwentwater; on whose attainder, in 1715, it was granted, with his other estates, to Greenwich hospital. In this parish there is an extensive moor, called Hareshaw common, containing above 7,000 acres, and abounding with game. There are 4 coal-pits now working. Iron-stone and limestone are found. This parish contains the market-town of Bellingham, and the townships of East-Charlton, West-Charlton, Leemailing, the Nook, and Tarretburn. The number of farms is about 77. A workhouse has been built here by the poor-law commissioners for the union of Bellingham, capable of accommodating about 50 persons, at an expense of £550. Bellingham poor-law union comprehends 37 parishes, embracing an area of 331 square miles; with a population returned, in 1831, at 6,530. The average annual expenditure on the poor of this district, during the three years preceding the formation of the union, was £3,224. Expenditure, in 1838, £2,562. Pop., in 1801, 1,079; in 1831, 1,460. Houses 268. Acres 18,000; about 12,000 of which are common. The assessed property was returned, in 1815, with Simonburn; in 1831 the declared annual value was £6,435. Poor rates, in 1837, £721; in 1838, £603.

The market-town of Bellingham, in the above parish and union, is 294 miles north-north-west of London, and 14 north-north-west of Hexham; on the northern bank of the North Tyne, and at the mouth of the Hareshaw burn, over which a bridge was erected in 1826. Saturday is the market-day. A hiring fair, and for cattle, sheep, linen and woollen cloth, is held here on the first Wednesday after September 15th, and statute fairs are held on the Saturdays before May 12th and November 12th. The town is under the jurisdiction of the county-magistrates; and the internal affairs are regulated by constables, who are appointed at the court-leet of the lords of the manor. There are here places of worship belonging to the United Secession church of Scotland, and the Roman Catholics. A new Roman Catholic chapel was erected in 1838. Of the 4 daily schools here, one is endowed with the interest of £200, bequeathed, in 1730, by Isabel Reed, for the tuition of 50 poor children: the average cost of education in this parish is 5s. per quarter. A book-club was established in the town in 1809. Pop., in 1801, 337; in 1831, 464. Houses 82. Poor rates, in 1837, £177.

BELLESTER, a township in the parish of Haltwhistle, western division of the ward of Tindale, county of Northumberland; 16 miles west by south of Hexham, in the vicinity of the Newcastle and Carlisle railway. Not far from this village, on the banks of the South Tyne, are the ruins of an ancient castle which formerly belonged to the Blenkinsop family. It has been an irregular structure, and now consists of a rude and crumbling mass of ruins overshadowed by an enormous sycamore. Pop., in 1801, 86; in 1831, 120. Houses 22. Acreage with the parish. Poor rates, in 1837, £36.

BELMISTHORPE, a small hamlet in the parish of Ryhall, county of Rutland; 3 miles north-east of Stamford, on the eastern bank of the river Wash. This once formed part of the estates of the celebrated Lady Godwin. Pop., in 1801, 104. Other returns with the parish.

BELPER, a market-town and chapelry in the parish of Duffield, hund. of Appletree, union of Belper, county of Derby; 134 miles north-north-west of London, and 7 north of Derby; intersected by the North Midland Counties railroad. It stands in an agreeable situation on the Derwent, over which there is a handsome stone-bridge of three arches. It consists of several regular streets. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. of Derby and dio. of Lichfield and Coventry; valued at £3, rated in the parliamentary returns at £94; gross income £158; and subordinate to the vicarage of Duffield. The chapel is a handsome structure, with a high tower. It was erected in 1824, at an expense of £12,603, which was partly defrayed by a parliamentary grant. Another chapel has recently been erected, the living of which is also a curacy subordinate to the vicarage of Duffield. The Baptists, Independents, Wesleyan and Primitive Methodists, and Unitarians, have places of worship here. The Independent congregation was formed in 1790; the Wesleyan Methodist in 1807; and the Primitive Methodist in 1810. There are here 21 daily schools, collectively containing 744 scholars, and 7 Sunday schools. Till the year 1777, Belper was an inconsiderable village, inhabited principally by nailers. The manufacture of nails is still extensively carried on here; but the town has risen into importance chiefly since the establishment of the cotton-mills of Messrs Strutt. The weaving of linen-yarn into sheeting, checks, &c. is also carried on to some extent here. Saturday is market-day, and fairs for horned cattle, sheep, and horses, are held on May 12th, and October 31st. There is a branch of the Derby and Derbyshire banking company here. Belper is a polling-place for the county. Here are two alms-houses for poor persons, founded and endowed by Henry Smith, Esq., who also bequeathed an estate producing £30 per annum, directing the produce to be equally divided between the curate and the poor of Belper. A workhouse has been built here, by the poor-law commissioners, for the union of Belper, at an expense of £7,580, capable of containing 300 persons. Pop., in 1801, 4,500; in 1831, 7,890. Houses 1,482. Acreage with the parish. A. P. £8,906. Poor rates, in 1837, £861.

BELSAY, a township in the parish of Bolam, north-eastern division of the ward of Tindale, county of Northumberland; 15 miles north-west of Newcastle-on-Tyne. Belsay castle, the ancient seat and inheritance of the Middletons, consists of an old tower to which additions were made in 1628. The modern mansion, erected by Sir Charles Middleton, is a superb Grecian edifice. There are a daily and a Sunday school here. Pop., in 1801, 189; in 1831, 334. Houses 56. Acreage with the parish. Poor rates, in 1837, £76.

BELSTEAD, a parish in the hund. of Sampford, county of Suffolk; 3½ miles south-west of Ipswich, intersected by the Eastern Counties railroad. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. of Suffolk and dio. of Norwich; valued at £7 6s. 0½d.; gross income £340. Patron, in 1835, A. Steward, Esq. There is a daily school here. Charities connected with this parish produce £17 18s. 9d. Pop., in 1801, 212; in 1831, 248. Houses 27. Acres 1,090. A. P. £1,198. Poor rates, in 1837, £121.

BELSTONE, a parish in the hund. of Black Torrington, union of Oakhampton, county of Devon; 2 miles south-east of Oakhampton. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. of Totness and dio. of Exeter; valued at £9 0s. 1d.; in the parliamentary returns at £90; gross income £166. Patron, in 1835, Rev. John Hole. There is a daily school here. In 1838 there was a woollen-mill, employing 100 hauds, within this parish. Pop., in 1801, 137; in 1831, 206. Houses 37. Acres 2,010. A. P. £696. Poor rates, in 1837, £47.

BELTINGHAM, a village in the parish of Haltwhistle, county of Northumberland, between Ridley Hall and Willmotewick. In the yard of its ancient chapel stands a remarkably large yew-tree of a great age.

BELTISLOE, a wapentake in the parts of Kesteven, county of Lincoln. Area 53,470 acres. Houses 1,176. Pop., in 1831, 6,430.

BELTON, a parish in the western division of the hund. of Goscote, county of Leicester; 6½ miles east-north-east of Ashby-de-la-Zouch, in the neighbourhood of the Leicester and Swannington railway. Living, a discharged vicarage, formerly in the archd. of Leicester and dio. of Lincoln, now in the dio. of Peterborough; valued at £8 18s. 4d., and in the parliamentary returns at £68; gross income £204. Patron, in 1835, the Marquess of Hastings. There is a daily school here. The parish possesses, besides, three Sunday schools, and a Dissenting chapel. On the first Monday after Trinity week, a considerable fair for horses is held here. At Grace-Dieu, a convent for nuns, of the order of St Augustine, was founded in the reign of Henry III., the revenues of which, at the dissolution, were valued at £101 8s. 2½d. The remains of this building have been converted, with modern additions, into a family mansion. Pop., in 1801, (including that of the extra-parochial liberty of Grace-Dieu,) 586; in 1831, 735. Houses 134. Acres 1,900. A. P. £2,476. Poor rates, in 1837, £280.

BELTON, a parish in the soke and union of Grantham, parts of Kesteven, county of Lincoln; 2½ miles north-east of Grantham. Living, a curacy not in charge; valued at £39 10s.; gross income £441. Patron, in 1835, Earl Brownlow. There is a daily school here. Here are almshouses for six poor persons. Belton gives the title of baron to Earl Brownlow, who has a magnificent seat, called Belton Hall, within a mile of the village. The designs of the mansion, which was erected in 1689, were furnished by Sir Christopher Wren. Pop., in 1801, 147; in 1831, 160. Houses 31. Acres 3,120. A. P. £2,963. Poor rates, in 1837, £92.

BELTON, a parish in the western division of the wapentake of Manley, parts of Lindsey, county of Lincoln; 11 miles north-west of Gainsborough, in the vicinity of the New Torne river, and the Stamford and Keadly canal. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Lincoln; valued at £12 3s. 6½d., in the parliamentary returns at £150; in the patronage of the corporation of the city of Lincoln. There are six daily schools here. This parish comprises the hamlets of Biltoft, Hyrst, Mosswood, Sandtoft, Temple-Bellwood, and part of the levels of Hatfield-chase. A fair is held here on September 25th for hemp, flax, and other commodities. Pop., in 1801, 1,259; in 1831, 1,596. Houses 302. Acres 8,530. A. P. £10,963. Poor rates, in 1837, £540.

BELTON, a parish in the soke of Oakham, union of Uppingham, county of Rutland; 4 miles west-north-west of Uppingham. Living, a curacy not in charge, in the archd. of Northampton and dio. of Peterborough, annexed to the vicarage of Wardley. The great and small tithes of the lordship of Belton, the property of the lay-impropriator and vicar, were commuted in 1794. The parish possesses three daily schools, one of which is endowed with £15 15s., for which 18 children are taught free. There are also two Sunday schools. Charities connected with the parish produce about £90 per annum. A fair was granted to the village by Edward III.; but it has long ago fallen into disuse. Pop., in 1801, 366; in 1831, 400. Houses 85. Acres 2,380. A. P. £2,208. Poor rates, in 1837, £195.

BELTON, a parish in the hund. of Lothingland, county of Suffolk; 4 miles south-west of Yarmouth, on the eastern bank of the Waveney, which is navigable here. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. of Suffolk and dio. of Norwich; valued at £17 15s.; gross income £362; in the patronage of the Bishop of Norwich. There is a day and Sunday National school here, attended by 109 children. The poor's allotment land in this parish produces annually £12 12s. Pop., in 1801, 350; in 1831, 424. Houses 75. Acres 2,120. A. P. £1,941. Poor rates, in 1837, £108.

BELVOIR, an extra-parochial liberty, partly in the soke of Grantham, parts of Kesteven, county of Lincoln, and partly in the hund. of Framland, county of Leicester; 7 miles west by south of Grantham, in the vicinity of Grantham canal, which passes through the vale of Belvoir. Here is Belvoir-castle, the mansion of the duke of Rutland, and one of the most magnificent structures in the kingdom. The original building was a fortress, erected soon after the Conquest by Robert de Todenei, standard-bearer to William, and has been several times burnt down or otherwise destroyed. It is now a fine modern castellated building, surmounting an isolated and perhaps artificial hill, at the bottom of which the stables and offices are built. The east front is 252 feet in length. The Regent's gallery is a noble apartment, 127 feet long, filled with the choicest productions of art. Attached to the castle, according to Nichols, there are 22 manors, which extensive domain was chiefly granted to the Manners family by Henry VIII. The vale of Belvoir extends, from within a mile of Grantham, into the counties of Lincoln, Leicester, and Nottingham. Near to the castle was "a priory of four black monks, subordinate to the abbey of St. Alban's in Hertfordshire, to which it was annexed by its founder, Robert de Belvedeir or de Todenei, in the time of William the Conqueror. It was dedicated to St. Mary, valued at £135 per annum; and was granted, 33rd Henry VIII., to Thomas, earl of Rutland, and Robert Tirwhet."—Tanner's Not. Mon. Pop., in 1801, 80; in 1831, 105. Houses 2. Acres 170.—The inhabitants are chiefly servants with their families, and mechanics employed by the duke of Rutland, occupying the detached offices belonging to Belvoir-castle, excepting only an innkeeper and his family. Petty-sessions are held at the Belvoir inn for part of the hundred of Framland.

BEMBRIDGE, a chapelry and hamlet in the parish of Brading, Isle of Wight; 3 miles east-north-east of the parish-church, at Bembridge point. Living, a curacy subordinate to the vicarage of Brading. A commodious chapel, erected by public subscription, was consecrated here in 1827. It is said to combine much internal neatness, with elegance of general design. It is ornamented with a light and tasteful spire, and is beautifully situated on a wooded eminence near the shore. Here is also a school for children of the working classes, supported by voluntary contributions. "The recent erection of several handsome dwellings, with their embellishment of luxuriant gardens and shrubberies, contribute much to grace and enliven the charming landscapes which distinguish the peninsula of Bembridge. The most conspicuous building stands very near the beach abutting the high road, and was designed for a hotel or boarding-house. Those possessing the greatest beauty are Hill-Grove and a Gothic villa, both at nearly equal distances above the hotel. The parsonage, very near the church, is a pretty residence: other houses are in course of erection."—Brannon's Select Views, 1834. From a recent and well executed engraving, published in the Isle by Mr. Brannon, and kindly sent us, with information, by a correspondent in Southampton, this modern little watering-place does appear to be one of no ordinary elegance and beauty.

BEMERTON, a parish in the hund. of Branch and Dole, union of Wilton, county of Wilts; 2 miles west by north of Salisbury. Living, a rectory not in charge, annexed to that of Fuggleston. George Herbert, who died in 1635; John Norris, a celebrated metaphysical and poetical writer, who died in 1711; and Archdeacon Coxe, the traveller and historian, who died in 1828, were rectors of this parish. Pop. returned with that of Fuggleston.

BEMPSTONE, a hund. in the county of Somerset; bounded on the north-west by the hundred of Brent with Wrington; on the north by Winterstoke hundred; on the east by that of Wells-forum; on the south-east by the hundred of Glaston; on the south by Whitley hundred; and on the south-west by the hundred of Huntspill.—Area 24,530 acres. Houses 1,299. Pop., in 1831, 7,326.

BEMPTON, a parish in the wapentake of Dickering, union of Bridlington, east riding of Yorkshire; $3\frac{1}{4}$ miles north-north-east of Bridlington, bounded on the north by the North sea. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. of the east riding and dio. of York; valued at £13 6s. 8d.; rated in the parliamentary returns at £46; gross income £51. Patron, in 1835, H. Broadley, Esq. The great and small tithes of the township of Bampton, the property of the lay-impropriator, were commuted in 1764. There are two daily schools in this parish. Pop., in 1801, 222; in 1831, 287. Houses 60. Acres 1,930. A. P. £2,343. Poor rates, in 1837, £112.

BENEFIELD, a parish in the hund. of Polebrooke, union of Oundle, county of Northampton; $3\frac{1}{4}$ miles west of Oundle. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Northampton and dio. of Peterborough; valued at £35 9s. 7d.; gross income £577. Patron, in 1835, J. Watts Russell, Esq. All tithes, the property of the clerical rector, were commuted in 1820. Here is a day and Sunday school, endowed with £10 10s. per annum, containing, on an average, 65 scholars. To this school a class of 20 females has been added, who are taught needle-work four mornings in the week; and £20 a-year is paid to its funds by J. Watts Russell, Esq., the lord of the manor, and proprietor of the parish. Charities connected with the parish produce about £12 15s. Pop., in 1801, 354; in 1831, 519. Houses 100. Acres 5,100. A. P. £5,422. Poor rates, in 1837, £317.

BENENDEN, a parish in the hund. of Rolvenden, lathe of Scray, union of Cranbrook, county of Kent; 3 miles south-east of Cranbrook. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Canterbury; valued at £17 12s. 6d., and in the parliamentary returns at £92; gross income £119. Patron, in 1835, T. L. Hodges, Esq. The village is of great antiquity. A fair for horses and horned cattle is held here on the 15th of May. A school was founded here in 1609, by Edward Gibbon, Esq., the endowments of which now yield about £75 per annum. There are three other daily schools, in which 80 pupils are taught; an evening school, and three Sunday schools, one of which is supported by Mr James Buckland. Pop., in 1801, 1,300; in 1831, 1,663. Houses 269. Acres 6,780; of which about 630 are in hops. A. P. £5,778. Poor rates, in 1837, £961.

BENFIELD-SIDE, a township in the parish of Lanchester, western division of the ward of Chester, co. palatine of Durham; $13\frac{1}{4}$ miles north-west of Durham, in the vicinity of the Stanhope and Tyne railway. There are two daily schools here. Pop., in 1821, 341; in 1831, 534. Houses 81. Acres 2,150. A. P. £1,792.

BENFLEET (NORTH), or LITTLE BENFLEET, a parish in the hund. of Barstable, union of Billericay, county of Essex; 3 miles west of Rayleigh. Living, a rectory, formerly in the archd. of Essex and dio. of London, now in the dio. of Rochester; valued at £16; gross income £600. Patron, in 1835, the Rev. C. R. Rowlatt. Pop., in 1801, 174; in 1831, 300. Houses 50. Acres 1,730. A. P. £3,446. Poor rates, in 1837, £113.

BENFLEET (SOUTH), or GREAT BENFLEET, a parish in the hund. of Barstable, union of Billericay, county of Essex; 4 miles south-west by south of Rayleigh, on Hadleigh bay, which separates it from Canvey Island, and is navigable for light vessels. Living, a discharged vicarage, formerly in the archd. of Essex and dio. of London, now in the dio. of Rochester; valued at £16 5s. 5d.; gross income £225; in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Westminster. There are three daily schools in this parish. A fair is held here on August 24th for toys. Pop., in 1801, 338; in 1831, 533. Houses 72. Acres 2,160. A. P. £3,731. Poor rates, in 1837, £279.

BENGEO, BENGEOO, or BENGE, a parish in the hund., union, and county of Hertford; 1 mile north-north-east of Hertford. Living, a discharged vicarage, formerly in the archd. of Huntingdon and dio. of Lincoln, now in the dio. of Rochester; valued at £7 8s. 6½d., and in the parliamentary returns at £140; gross income £120. Patrons, in 1835, the Trustees of T. H. Bryde, Esq. There are five daily schools here, and two almshouses for four poor widows. The poor of the parish receive £4 a-year from Mrs Clarke's charity. Pop., in 1801, 584; in 1831, 855. Houses 166. Acres 3,020. A. P. £4,118. Poor rates, in 1837, £333.

BENGERS. See IVER.

BENGRAVE. See BECKFORD.

BENGWORTH (ST PETER), a parish in the hund. of Blackenhurst, union of Evesham, county of Worcester; one-half mile south-east of Evesham, within the jurisdiction of that borough, of which, though situated on the opposite side of the Avon, it may be considered a part, as it participates in its election and corporate privileges. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. and dio. of Worcester; valued at £7 10s. 10d.; gross income £168. Patron, in 1835, the Rev. Mr Allies. The church has a handsome tower and spire. The great and small tithes, the property of the lay-impropriator and perpetual curate, were commuted in 1775. Here is a free school for 30 boys, towards the foundation and endowment of which, John Deacle, a native of this place, and an alderman of London, gave £2,000. There are also a daily school, and three day and boarding schools, in this parish. Pop., in 1801, 672; in 1831, 965. Houses 195. Acreage with Evesham. A. P. £4,839. Poor rates, in 1837, £493.

BENHALL, a parish in the hund. and union of Plomsgate, county of Suffolk, $1\frac{1}{4}$ mile west by south of Saxmundham. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Suffolk and dio. of Norwich; valued at £7 1s. 3d., and in the parliamentary returns at £113 0s. 2d.; gross income £190. Patrons, in 1835, the trustees of E. Hollond, Esq. Here is a free school, founded and endowed with property producing £36 per annum, by Sir Edward Duke, in 1731. Pop., in 1801, 533; in 1831, 668. Houses 81. Acres 2,010. A. P. £2,621. Poor rates, in 1837, £583.

BENHAM, a tything in the parish of Speen, hund. of Kintbury-Eagle, county of Berks, 3 miles west of Speenhamland, on the post-road to Hungerford. Pop., in 1801, 256; in 1831 it was returned with the parish, with which also the other returns are given.

BENNET-LAND, a hamlet in the parish of Eastington, east riding of Yorkshire; 5 miles east by north of Howden, in the vicinity of the York and North Midland railway.

BENNET'S (Sr), OF HOLME, in the parish of Horning, hund. of Tunstead, county of Norfolk; 6 miles north by west of Acle.—"This solitary place among the marshes—then known by the name of Cowholme and Calvescroft—was given by a little prince called Horn, to a society of religious hermits, under the government of one Suneman, about the year 800, who (with the chapel of St Benedict by them here built) were all destroyed in the general devastation of this country by the Danes under Ingvar and Hubba in 870. In the next century a holy man called Wolfric gathered seven companions hither and rebuilt the chapel and houses; they had lived here sixty years when King Canute thought fit to found and endow this place for an abbey of black monks to the honour of St Benedict before A.D. 1020. Its revenues increased so much as to be valued, 26th Henry VIII., at £677 9s. 8d.; and the next year, by private act of parliament, this abbey was united to the bishopric of Norwich, in exchange for the old estates of the see, and the bishops of Norwich were to be thenceforth abbots of this monastery." Tanner's Not. Mon.

BENNINGBOROUGH, or BENINGBROUGH, a township in the parish of Newton-upon-Ouse, wapentake of Bulmer, north riding of Yorkshire; 6½ miles north-west of York, on the river Nidd, and in the vicinity of the Great North of England railway. Pop., in 1801, 84; in 1831, 93. Houses 16. Acres 1,070. A. P. £4,652. Poor rates, in 1837, £11.

BENNINGHOLME AND GRANGE, a township in the parish of Swine, wapentake of Holderness, east riding of Yorkshire; 7 miles east by south of Beverley. Pop., in 1801, 78; in 1831, 105. Houses 15. Acres 1,280. A. P. £1,775. Poor rates, in 1837, £146.

BENNINGTON, a parish in the hund. of Broadwater, union and county of Hertford; 5 miles east-south-east of Stevenage. Living, a rectory, formerly in the archd. of Huntingdon and dio. of Lincoln, now in the dio. of Rochester; valued at £19; gross income £820. Patron, in 1835, G. Proctor, Esq. There are three daily schools in this parish. Charities connected with it produce about £30 per annum. This was formerly a market-town, but the market has fallen into disuse. A fair is held here for pedlery goods. An ancient palace of the kings of Mercia formerly stood here; and an entrenched eminence marks the site of an ancient castle. Pop., in 1801, 487; in 1831, 631. Houses 120. Acres 2,950. A. P. £2,917. Poor rates, in 1837, £339.

BENNINGTON, a parish in the wapentake of Skirbeck, parts of Holland, county of Lincoln; 5 miles north-east of Boston, bounded on the south-east by the Boston Deep. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Lincoln; valued at £33 8s. 11½d.; gross income £649. Patron, in 1835, the earl of Ripon. The great and small tithes, moduses, &c., the property of the clerical rector, were commuted in 1815. There are three daily schools here, one of which is endowed with £15 per annum. Pop., in 1801, 362; in 1831, 500. Houses 93. Acres 3,090. A. P. £3,213. Poor rates, in 1837, £267.

BENNINGTON (LONG), a parish in the wapentake of Loveden, parts of Kesteven, union of Boston, county of Lincoln; 7 miles north-west of Grantham, on the post-road to Newark-upon-Trent. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Lincoln, united with the curacy of Foston; valued at £20

1s. 10d.; gross income £463. Patron, the Crown. All tithes, moduses, &c., of Long Bennington and Foston, the property of the lay-impropriator and vicar, were commuted in 1794. The parish possesses six daily and two Sunday schools.—"The church and four carucates of land in this town being given by Ralph de Filgeris or Fulgeris to the abbey of Savigny in Normandy before 1175, here became an alien priory of Cistercian monks, subordinate to that foreign monastery. During the wars with France, it was seized into the king's hands, and, being then valued at £50 per annum, given by Richard II. to the Carthusians of St Ann, near Coventry. But after the suppression of these houses this was given, 9th Henry V., to the priory of Mount-grace; and as part and parcel of the possessions of this last named monastery, this manor of Long Bennington was granted to the dean and chapter of Westminster, 34th Henry VIII." Tanner's Not. Mon. Pop., in 1801, 723; in 1831, 982. Houses 158. Acres 4,420. A. P. £6,049. Poor rates, in 1837, £234.

BENNIWORTH, a parish in the wapentake of Wragg, parts of Lindsey, county of Lincoln; 5½ miles east by north of Wragby. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Lincoln; valued at £23 8s. 6½d.; gross income £523. Patron, in 1835, G. R. Heneage. The great and small tithes, moduses, &c. the property of the clerical rector, were commuted in 1770. There are two daily schools here, one of which is supported by Fieschi Heneage, Esq. Pop., in 1801, 277; in 1831, 373. Houses 50. Acres 2,840. A. P. £2,735. Poor rates, in 1837, £247.

BENNO'S (ST) CHAPEL. See CLYNNOG.

BENRIDGE, a township in the parish of Ponteland, western division of Castle-ward, county of Northumberland. Pop. returned with the township of Kirkley.

BENRIDGE, a hamlet in the parish of Mitford, western division of the ward of Morpeth, county of Northumberland; 2 miles west-north-west of Morpeth. Pop., in 1801, 54; in 1831, 53. Houses 11. Acreage with the parish. Poor rates, in 1837, £19.

BENSINGTON, or BENSON, a parish, partly in the hund. of Dorchester, and partly in that of Ewelme, union of Wallingford, county of Oxford; 2 miles north-east of Wallingford, on the post-road to Abingdon. It includes the hamlets of Fifield and Crowmarsh-Battle. Living, a perpetual curacy not in charge, exempt from visitation, and under the jurisdiction of the peculiar court of Dorchester. It is valued in the parliamentary returns at £122; gross income £180; in the patronage of the dean and canons of Christ-church, Oxford. Lands left for repairing and maintaining the church of Bensington produce £73 12s. 6d. annually. An Independent church was formed here in 1800. There are two daily and two day and Sunday schools here. This place is said to have been taken in 572 from the Britons, by Ceawlin, king of the West Saxons, whose successors held it nearly 200 years, finally surrendering it to Offa, king of Mercia. Here is an hospital, founded in the reign of Henry VI., by William de la Pole, duke of Suffolk, the mastership of which is held by the regius professor of physic in the university of Oxford. Pop., in 1801, 811; in 1831, 1,266. Houses 222. Acres 2,800. A. P. £3,329. Poor rates, in 1837, 674.

BENTFIELD, a hamlet in the parish of Stansted-Mountfitchet; hund. of Clavering, county of Essex; 2 miles north-west of Stansted-Mountfitchet. Pop., in 1801, 612; in 1831, 505. Houses 105. Acres 740. Other returns with the parish.

BENTHALL, a parish in the hund. of Wenlock, union of Madeley, county of Salop; 2 miles northeast of Much-Wenlock, near the river Severn, which is here navigable. Living, a perpetual curacy, not in charge, in the archd. of Salop and dio. of Hereford, annexed to the vicarage of Wenlock. There is a daily school here, with a small endowment. Pop., in 1801, 636; in 1831, 525. Houses 121. Acres 770. A. P. £2,077. Poor rates, in 1837, £241.

BENTHAM, a parish in the western division of the wapentake of Staincliffe and Ewcross, union of Settle, west riding of Yorkshire; 11½ miles west-north-west of Settle. It comprises the chapelry of Ingletton, and the townships of Bentham and Langcliffe. Living, a rectory, formerly in the archd. of Richmond and dio. of Chester, now in the dio. of Ripon, valued at £35 7s. 8½d.; gross income £569. Patron, in 1835, J. W. Farrer, Esq. It has recently been enlarged. A free school in Upper Bentham, and an hospital for six men and six women, were founded in 1726, by William Collingwood, and endowed with property, which now produces £240 per annum; other charities produce £38 16s. per annum. The parish possesses also nine daily and six Sunday schools. In 1838 there were 2 flax-mills, employing 308 hands within this parish, and also a cotton-mill, employing 83 hands. At High Bentham, in this township, fairs for cattle are held on January 25th, June 22d, the Saturday in Easter week, and October 25th. Pop. of the township of Bentham, in 1801, 1,487; in 1831, 2,179; that of the parish, in 1801, 2,843; in 1831, 3,957. Houses 771. Acres 24,990. A. P. £7,286. Poor rates, in 1837, £618.

BENTLEY, or BENETHLEY, in the parish of Harrow-on-the-hill, hund. of Gore, county of Middlesex. There was formerly a priory called Benethley, or Bentley, near the extremity of this parish towards Stanmore.

BENTLEY, a parish and liberty in the hund. of Basingstoke, union of Alton, Basingstoke division of the county of Southampton; 4 miles west south-west of Farnham, in the neighbourhood of the Southampton and London railroad. Living, a perpetual curacy not in charge, in the archd. and dio. of Winchester, annexed to the vicarage of Farnham; valued in the parliamentary returns at £90; gross income £116; in the patronage of the archdeacon of Surrey. There are two daily schools here. Charities connected with this parish produce about £21 annually. Pop., in 1801, 504; in 1831, 728. Houses 121. Acres 2,450. A. P. £4,147. Poor rates, in 1837, £387.

BENTLEY, a township and liberty in the parish of Wolverhampton, southern division of the hund. of Offlow, county of Stafford; 2 miles west by north of Walsall, in the vicinity of the London and Birmingham railroad. Pop., in 1801, 96; in 1831, 104. Houses 17. Acres 1,470. A. P. £1,069. Poor rates, in 1837, £83.

BENTLEY, a parish in the hund. of Samford, county of Suffolk; 6 miles south-west of Ipswich, on the line of the Eastern Counties railroad. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Suffolk and dio. of Norwich; valued at £6 12s. 11d., in the parliamentary returns at £140; gross income £182. Patron, in 1835, B. Keene, Esq. There is a Sunday school here, and also a school in which children are taught to knit. Pop., in 1801, 337; in 1831, 363. Houses 64. Acres 2,330. A. P. £3,320. Poor rates, in 1837, £197.

BENTLEY, a hamlet and chapelry in the parish of Shustock, Atherstone division of the hund. of Hemlingford, county of Warwick; 3 miles south-west of Atherstone, in the neighbourhood of the Birmingham and Derby railroad. Living, a curacy not in charge, annexed to the vicarage of Shustock.

There are two daily schools here. Pop., in 1801, 206; in 1831, 270. Houses 65. Acres 1,230. A. P. £1,735. Poor rates, in 1837, £84.

BENTLEY. See ARKSEY.

BENTLEY. See HALIFAX, Yorkshire.

BENTLEY. See ROWLEY, Yorkshire.

BENTLEY (FENNY), a parish in the wapentake of Wirksworth, county of Derby; 2 miles north by west of Ashborne. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. of Derby and dio. of Lichfield and Coventry; valued at £6 12s. 10d., in the parliamentary returns at £150; gross income £125; in the patronage of the dean of Lincoln. There are two Sunday, and two infant schools here. Pop., in 1801, 180; in 1831, 308. Houses 57. Acres 670. A. P. £2,000. Poor rates, in 1837, £65.

BENTLEY (GREAT), a parish in the hund. and union of Tendring, county of Essex; 8 miles east-south-east of Colchester. Living, a discharged vicarage, formerly in the archd. of Colchester and dio. of London, now in the dio. of Rochester; valued at £7, in the parliamentary returns at £147 10s. 8d.; gross income £236; in the patronage of the Bishop of Rochester. This parish possesses four daily and four infant schools. A fair is held here on July 15th for toys. Pop., in 1801, 617; in 1831, 978. Houses 192. Acres 2,850. A. P. £5,055. Poor rates, in 1837, £445.

BENTLEY (HUNGRY), a liberty and chapelry in the parish of Longford, hund. of Appletree, county of Derby; 4½ miles south of Ashborne. Between Alkanton and Hungry-Bentley, there was formerly an hospital dedicated to St Leonard. Pop., in 1801, 82; in 1831, 92. Houses 13. Acreage with the parish. A. P. £1,268. Poor rates, in 1837, £27.

BENTLEY (LITTLE), a parish in the hund. and union of Tendring, county of Essex; 5 miles south by east of Manningtree. Living, a rectory, formerly in the archd. of Colchester and dio. of London, now in the dio. of Rochester; valued at £13; gross income £687. Patron, in 1835, Robert Foote, Esq. There are three daily and two Sunday schools in this parish. Pop., in 1801, 331; in 1831, 438. Houses 88. Acres 2,750. A. P. £2,980. Poor rates, in 1837, £236.

BENTON (LONG), a parish in the eastern division of Castle-ward, union of Tynemouth, county of Northumberland; 3 miles north-east of Newcastle-on-Tyne, in the vicinity of the Carlisle and Newcastle railway. It comprises the townships of Long Benton, Killingworth, Walker with Little Benton, and Weetslet. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Northumberland and dio. of Durham; valued at £3 1s. 3d.; gross income £353; in the patronage of the master and fellows of Baliol college, Oxford. There are here nine daily schools, in which 387 children are taught, and five Sunday schools. The township of Long Benton consists of one street of considerable length, built upon a rock, and is dry, pleasant, and healthy. This parish contains extensive collieries, foundries, quarries, gunpowder-works, &c. Upwards of 1,200 hands are employed in collieries alone. At Heaton colliery, in May, 1815, 65 persons, besides many horses, were killed, in consequence of the sudden irruption of water from an exhausted mine. Pop., in 1801, 3,355; in 1831, 6,613. Houses 1,174. Acres 8,760. A. P. £40,176. Poor rates, in 1837, £1,356.

BENTWORTH, a parish in the hund. of Odham, union of Alton, Basingstoke division of the county of Southampton; 3½ miles west of Alton. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Winchester; valued at £14 10s. 5d.; gross income £760. Patron, in 1835, the Rev. T. Matthews. The Independents have a place of worship here. There is a daily school here. Pop., in 1801, 425; in 1831, 592. Houses 103. Acres 3,770. A. P. £3,392. Poor rates, in 1837, £313.

BENWELL, a township in the parish of St John, western division of Castle-ward, county of Northumberland; 2 miles west of Newcastle-on-Tyne, near the line of the Carlisle and Newcastle railway. A new church has been erected here by the parliamentary commissioners, in the Gothic style, with a tower, at an expense of £1,607 7s. 8d. Sittings 600. The township possesses three daily schools, besides a Sunday and an evening school. There are many collieries in the vicinity, one of which, in the beginning of last century, took fire from a candle, and burned for nearly thirty years. Benwell is believed to have been the Condercum of the Romans, and the station of the Ala Astorum. Roman antiquities have been found here. Pop., in 1801, 951; in 1831, 1,278. Houses 234. Acres 1,270. A. P. £11,730. Poor rates, in 1837, £498.—Benwell High Cross, so called from a cross that formerly stood here, lies considerably to the east of the village.

BENWICK, a chapelry in the parish of Dodding-ton, northern division of the hund. of Witchford, Isle of Ely, county of Cambridge; 6 miles south-west of March. Living, a curacy exempt from visitation, annexed to the rectory of Dodding-ton. Pop., in 1801, 346; in 1831, 526. Houses 103. Acres 3,060. A. P. £3,753. Poor rates, in 1837, £362.

BEOLEY, anciently, perhaps, BEAULIEU, a parish in the upper division of the hund. of Pershore, county of Worcester; 7 miles east of Bromsgrove, in the neighbourhood of the Birmingham and Gloucester railway. Living, a vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Worcester; valued at £7 16s. 10½d.; gross income £74. Patron, in 1835, Wm. Holmes, Esq. There is a day and boarding school here. In the vicinity was an ancient castle—of which very slight traces now remain—which belonged successively to the noble families of Mortimer, Beauchamp, and Holland. Pop., in 1801, 630; in 1831, 673. Houses 131. Acres 4,700. A. P. £5,822. Poor rates, in 1837, £490.

BEPTON, a parish in the hund. of Easebourne, rape of Chichester, union of Midhurst, county of Sussex; 2½ miles south-west of Midhurst, within the jurisdiction of the borough. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Chichester; valued at £8; gross income £128. Patron, in 1835, W. S. Poyntz, Esq. Pop., in 1801, 129; in 1831, 166. Houses 26. Acres 1,260. A. P. £877. Poor rates, in 1837, £74.

BERDON, BERDEN, or BERDIN, a parish in the hund. of Clavering, union of Bishop Stortford, county of Essex; 5 miles north-west of Stansted-Mountfitchet, in the vicinity of the railroad from London to Cambridge. Living, a perpetual curacy, annexed to the vicarage of Ugley. There are two daily schools in this parish. The Rev. Joseph Mede, a learned theologian and commentator on the Revelation, was born here in 1586. "Here was, in the beginning of the reign of Henry III., an hospital or priory of canons, and brethren of the order of St Augustine, dedicated to St John the Evangelist. William Bohun, earl of Northampton, and Elizabeth his wife, had license, 17° Edward III., to give the advowson of this priory to the abbot and convent of Walden. Its yearly revenues were computed, 26° Henry VIII., at £31 5s. 1d. The site was granted, 30° Henry VIII., to Henry Parker; and, 5° Edward VI., to Sir Thomas Wroth, who alienated the same to Thomas Avery and his wife Margaret, by license dated March 17th, 1° of Mary, and 25° Elizabeth, it was settled on the hospitals of Christchurch, Bridewell and St Thomas."—Tanner's Not.

Mon. Pop., in 1801, 291; in 1831, 342. Houses 68. Acres 1,570. A. P. £2,287. Poor rates, in 1837, £256.

BERDWICK. See ARBON.

BERE-ALSTON. See BERE-ALSTON.

BERE-CHURCH, or WEST DONILAND, a parish within the liberty of the borough and union of Colchester, county of Essex; 2 miles south by west of Colchester, within the jurisdiction of the borough. Living, a perpetual curacy, formerly in the archd. of Colchester and dio. of London, now in the dio. of Rochester; gross income £100. Patron, in 1835, Sir G. H. Smyth. There is a daily school here. Pop., in 1801, 126; in 1831, 142. Houses 18. Acres 1,450. A. P. £1,429. Poor rates, in 1837, £142.

BERE-FERRIS. See BERE-FERRIS.

BEREFORD. See BARFORD.

BERE-HACKET. See BERE-HACKET.

BERE-REGIS. See BERE-REGIS.

BERGHAM. See BARHAM.

BERGHOLT (EAST), a parish in the hund. of Sampford, county of Suffolk; 6 miles south-south-east of Hadleigh, on the line of the Eastern Counties railway, and bounded on the south by the navigable river Stour. Living, a rectory not in charge, united with that of Brantham. All tithes, the property of the clerical rector, were commuted in 1815. An Independent church was formed here in 1689. Here is a free school, which was built by subscription, on land given, in 1594, by Edward Lamb, and endowed with property, which now produces £40 per annum, bequeathed for the purpose, in 1589, by Letitia Dykes. There are four other daily schools, besides two boarding and two Sunday schools, in the parish. Charities connected with it produce £34 8s. 2d. per annum. A fair is held here on July 22d for toys. Pop., in 1801, 970; in 1831, 1,360. Houses 186. Acres 2,380. A. P. £5,846. Poor rates, in 1837, £366.

BERGHOLT (WEST), a parish in the Colchester division of the hund. of Lexden, union of Lexden and Winstree, county of Essex; 3 miles north-west of Colchester, in the vicinity of the Eastern Counties railway. Living, a rectory, formerly in the archd. of Colchester and dio. of London, now in the dio. of Rochester; valued at £10; gross income £463. Patron, in 1835, William Fisher, Esq. This parish possesses five daily schools, a day and boarding, and a Sunday school. In the neighbourhood is a circular intrenchment, which Stukeley regards as having been the site of Cunobeline's palace, the British king. Pop., in 1801, 552; in 1831, 786. Houses 155. Acres 2,170. A. P. £3,232. Poor rates, in 1837, £303.

BERK. See BARROW.

BERKELEY HUNDRED, in the county of Gloucester, consisting of two divisions, embraces an area of 62,430 acres. Houses 5,196. Pop., in 1831, 26,848.

BERKELEY, a parish in the upper division of the hund. of Berkeley, union of Thornbury, county of Gloucester. A branch of the Bristol and Gloucester railway, to join the one between Cheltenham and Swindon, intersects this parish. It comprises the market-town of Berkeley, the chapelry of Stone, the tythings of Alkington, Hinton, and Ham, and the hamlets of radstone and Hamfallow. Living, a vicarage in the archd. of Gloucester and dio. of Gloucester and Bristol; valued at £32 15s. 7½d. Patron, in 1835, Lord Seagrave. The church is a spacious structure, in the pointed style of architecture. It contains some curious monuments, and is the burial-place of Jenner. The tower stands detached from the body of the church. There is a chapel-of-ease at Stone. There are 21 daily and 5 Sunday schools in this parish. The charitable benefactions connected with it are very numerous, and produce £246 16s. 2d. per annum. In 1838 there was a cotton-mill, employing 27 hands, within this parish. The vale of Berkeley is celebrated for the excellence of its dairy-farms, and for the production of Gloucester cheese. Pop., in 1821, 3,835; in 1831, 3,899. Houses 707. Acres 14,680. A. P. £28,278. Poor rates, in 1837, £2,021.

The market-town of Berkeley, in the above parish, is 114 miles north by west of London, and 15 south-south-west of Gloucester, in the vicinity of the Gloucester and Bristol railway. It stands in the vale of Berkeley, on an eminence about a mile from the Severn, and on a small tributary of that river. It consists principally of four streets. The Independents have a place of worship here. There is some trade in timber, coal, malt, and cheese, which is facilitated by the vicinity of the Severn, and the Berkeley and Gloucester canal, which last is navigable for vessels of 600 tons burden. It extends in a course nearly parallel with the Severn, from a point on the eastern bank of the Severn, within 24 miles of Berkeley to Gloucester, a distance of 18 miles, and is connected with the town of Berkeley by a cut. The market-day is Wednesday, and a fair for cattle and pigs is held on May 14th. This town was a borough in the reign of Edward I.; but the charter of incorporation has been lost. It is governed by a mayor and 12 aldermen. Petty-sessions for the upper division of the hundred of Berkeley are held at the White Hart inn here. The qualified electors in Berkeley vote for the county-members for West Gloucestershire, under the new system of representation. Here is a free school for 39 boys, founded and endowed, in 1696, with lands, now producing £38 per annum, by Mr Samuel Thurner, in addition to which, lands producing £17 per annum were bequeathed by Mr John Smith. There are, besides, seven daily, and three Sunday schools, in this township. Berkeley was the birth-place of the celebrated Dr Edward Jenner, who introduced the practice of vaccination. Having obtained a European reputation, and some wealth, he died here of apoplexy in 1823. This place is of great antiquity. Under the Saxons it was a place of importance, and is recorded in Domesday-book as a royal demesne and a free borough. The manor is one of the largest in the kingdom, having nearly 30 parishes dependent on it. It was granted by William the Conqueror to Roger de Berkeley, who built a castle here, about three-fourths of a mile from the town, on the south-east side. The grandson of the founder was deprived of his title and estates by Henry II., for his adherence to King Stephen; they were conferred on Robert Fitz-Harding, who assumed the title of Baron de Berkeley. In this castle—which Sir James Mackintosh pronounces to be 'the finest specimen of the smaller castellated architecture'—the unfortunate Edward II. was murdered in September, 1327, having been detained here in confinement under the nominal custody of the earl. A small apartment called the dungeon-room, with its original furniture, over the flight of steps leading into the keep, is shown as the place where the cruel murder was perpetrated. [See Walsingham, page 127. Holinshed, ii. 883.] This castle sustained a siege, in the reign of Charles I., against the army of the parliament, but was obliged to surrender, after a siege of nine days. The remains consist of the keep, flanked by three semicircular towers, and a square tower of more recent date. The entrance is under a massive arch, adorned with rich carvings; the area is circular, and enclosed with a moat. A portion of the structure has been modernized, and is the residence of Colonel Berkeley, who enjoys the estate, but not the title. In the different apartments of the castle, a series of family portraits is preserved,—including one of George Lord Berkeley, the friend of Burton, who dedicated his 'Anatomy of Melancholy' to his lordship.—"Here was an old religious house long before the Conquest, which might be the family at Berkeley, mentioned in the acts of a synod at Clovesho, in 1824. It is very doubtful whether it consisted of monks or of nuns, who were suppressed by the villany of Earl Godwin, in the time of Edward the Confessor, as related by Camden and others out of Walter Mapes.—The hospital of St James and St John here is mentioned, Cart. 12^o Hen. III. m. 4., wherein is a confirmation of several parcels of land wherewith it was endowed."—Tanner's Not. Mon. Pop., in 1801, 658; in 1831, 760. Houses 177. Acreage with the parish. A. P. £1,600. Poor rates, in 1837, £277.

BERKELEY, a parish in the hund. and union of Frome, Shepton-Mallet division, county of Somerset; 2 miles east-north-east of Frome, intersected by the Bath and Weymouth railway. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Wells and dio. of Bath and Wells; valued at £7 9s. 7d.; gross income £350; nett income £200. Patron, in 1835, the Rev. J. M. Rogers. There are three daily and two Sunday schools here. Pop., in 1801, 598; in 1831, 531. Houses 111. Acres 1,880. A. P. £2,831. Poor rates, in 1837, £421.

BERKESWELL, a parish in the Solihull division of the hund. of Hemlingford, union of Meriden, county of Warwick; 6 miles west of Coventry, on the line of the London and Birmingham railway, and in the neighbourhood of the Birmingham and Warwick canal. Living, a rectory united with the curacy of Barston, formerly in the archd. of Coventry and dio. of Lichfield and Coventry, now in the dio. of Worcester; valued at £14 12s. 6d.; gross income £800. Patron, in 1835, Colonel Desbrowe. A daily school and several other charitable establishments are supported by the produce of a portion of land, which now yields about £70 per annum. The parish possesses four additional daily schools,—an infant school, containing 26 females, supported by Lady Wilmot, and two Sunday schools, maintained by Sir T. E. Eardley Wilmot, Bart. Various minor charities connected with the parish produce about £40 annually. Pop., in 1801, 1,192; in 1831, 1,450. Houses 277. Acres 6,360. A. P. £7,489. Poor rates, in 1837, £562.

BERKHAMPSTEAD (GREAT), or ST PETER'S, sometimes written BERKHAMSTED, a market-town and parish in the hund. of Dacorum, union of Berkhamstead, county of Hertford; 28 miles by railway north-west of London, on the line of the London and Birmingham railroad, and intersected by the Grand Junction canal. Living, a rectory, formerly in the archd. of Huntingdon and dio. of Lincoln, now in the dio. of Rochester; valued at £20; gross income £407. Patron, the Crown. The church is a spacious cruciform structure, with a square embattled tower rising from the intersection; within the church are two small chapels, and some interesting monuments. The Baptists, Independents, and Society of Friends, have places of worship here. The Independent church was formed in 1780; the Baptist in 1676. In the reign of Henry VIII., John Incent, dean of St Paul's, founded a free grammar-school here, to which the lands of the dissolved guild of St John the Baptist were granted as an endowment. It was formally incorporated and made a royal foundation by Edward VI., subject to the visitation of the warden of All Souls' college, Oxford. From this foundation the master has £250, and an assistant, £125 per annum; the annual income being between £600 and £700. In 1727, Thomas Bourne, Esq., founded the Blue-coat school here for 20 boys and 10 girls, and endowed it with £8,000, with which the sum of £9,300 in the New South sea annuities was purchased. At present 20 boys and 10 girls receive clothing and instruction in this school. There are 17 additional daily schools in this parish, in which 232 children are taught, besides 7 Sunday and 3 infant schools. In 1681, John Sayer, chief cook to Charles I., founded alms-houses here for six poor widows, and endowed them with £1,000, to which his widow added £300, and Mrs Martha Dacre £26 5s., per annum. The other local charities of this parish are numerous, to one of which, for the supply of fuel to the poor, James I. gave £100, and Charles I. £200.

The town of Berkhamstead stands in a deep valley on a branch of the river Gade. It consists of two streets, one nearly a mile in length, crossed by another at right angles. The houses are for the most part built of brick, and disposed without any regularity; but some are handsome. At the north end of Castle-street are the remains of the castle, which consist of detached portions of massive walls, surrounded on the north-west by a double, and on the other sides by a triple moat, and indicate, in no unequivocal manner, the ancient strength and importance of the fortress. Saturday is the market-day; and fairs for cattle and cheese are held on Shrove-Monday, Whit-Monday, and August 5th; statute fairs are also held on September 29th and October 11th. The female part of the population is now chiefly employed in the plating of straw, the manufacture of lace having declined. The trade of the place is much facilitated by the immediate neighbourhood of the London and Birmingham railroad, and the Grand Junction canal. Petty-sessions for the hundred of Dacorum is held here and at Hemel-Hempstead. The gaol here is used as a house of correction, and for the temporary confinement of malefactors, previous to their committal to the county-gaol. The Berkhamstead poor-law union comprehends 10 parishes, embracing an area of 39 square miles; with a population returned, in 1831, at 9,871. The average annual expenditure on the poor of this district, during the three years preceding the formation of the union, was £7,753. Expenditure, in 1838, £3,354. "Here were," says Tanner, "in the time of King John, two hospitals of poor and infirm persons, one dedicated to St John the Baptist, and the other, which was both for brothers and sisters, lepers, to St John the Evangelist: the custody of both which was granted by Jeffrey Fitz-Pearce, earl of Essex, to the house of St Thomas of Acon in London. There was also in this town, in the time of Edward II., an hospital of St Thomas the Martyr. Upon the dissolution, the hospitals of St John the Evangelist, and St Leonard, which was at the south-east end of the High-street, with all the lands belonging to them, were granted, 36th Henry VIII., to Robert Hordun. Sir Henry Chauncey also mentions an old hospital called St James, from St James' well, at the further end of the High Street." This was the birth-place of Cowper the poet in 1731. The parsonage-house in which he was born, however, was pulled down by the Rev. John Croft, rector of Berkhamstead, who also cut down the poet's favourite walnut-tree. Pop., in 1801, 1,690; in 1831, 2,369. Houses 477. Acres 4,250. A. P. £5,679. Poor rates, in 1837, £507.

"The Saxons, in old time," Norden remarks, "called this town Berghamstedt, because it was seated among the hills; for berg signified a hill; ham, a town; and stedt, a seat; all of which was very proper for the situation hereof." Spelman mentions that Wilthred, king of Kent, assisted at a great council held here in 697. At this place, William the Conqueror swore to preserve and keep inviolate the good and approved ancient laws of the kingdom. The manor of Berkhamstead was granted by the Conqueror to his half-brother, Robert, "who fortified the castle here with a double trench and rampire, as appears from domesday-book, under the title of the lands of the earl of Morton; in these words: 'In Trun hundred, the earl of Moreton held Berchehamstede for 13 hides, and in it there was a priest, with 14 villains, 15 borderers, and 6 servants.' In the borough are 52 burgesses, &c. This earl being of an arrogant spirit, and envying the glory of King Henry I., raised a rebellion against him in Normandy, whereupon that king seized his estate in England, and this manor, with others. While it remained in the crown, this town obtained many privileges; for King Henry II. granted to the manor of Barkhamsted St Peter, all the laws, liberties, and customs, that they had enjoyed in the reign of King Edward the Confessor, and that they should be quit of all tollage, postage, passage, and customs, for their merchandise through England, Normandy, Aquitaine, and Anjou; and that no summons, distress, or execution, should be made by any of the king's officers within the liberties of Barkhamsted, but by the high-steward, coroner, and bailiffs of the same: that no market shall be kept within seven miles of it, nor shall the men, or merchants, be obliged to attend at any assize or sessions, &c. King Henry II. kept his court here, and it continued in the crown till the reign of King John, anno 1206, when he granted to Jeffrey Fitz-Piers, earl of Essex, this castle and honour of Barkhamsted, with the knight's fee thereunto belonging, in fee-farm, for £100 per annum to hold to him and his heirs; but this earl dying in 1215, King John seized this castle and town into his hands, and so it was in the crown again. King Henry III. gave it his younger brother Richard, whom he had made earl of Cornwall; and as the market had been a little before changed from Sunday to Monday, so the earl procured a fair of eight days, beginning upon the invention of the Holy Cross, May 3d. He was a great man and valiant hero; went into the Holy Land, forced the sultan of Babylon to make a truce upon several articles very advantageous to the Christians; as that Jerusalem should not be molested, the French prisoners released, &c.; and returning home, sickened and died at this place, anno 1272, being then in possession of this manor; and leaving it to his son Edmund, who dying without heirs, it reverted to the crown, anno 1306, where it has remained ever since, and is now annexed to the dukedom of Cornwall, and appropriated to the princes of Wales successively. His royal highness, George, prince of Wales, being now the lord of it; but Edward Carey, Esq., holds this castle and manor of the princes of Wales by lease, which was obtained by his ancestors of Queen Elizabeth, and has a noble seat here built out of the ruins of the castle. This manor and honour of Barkhamsted is very large and extensive, and 53 towns adjoining pay their homage, and choose their constables there, viz. in Hertfordshire 11, in Buckinghamshire 15, and in Northamptonshire 27, besides Lee, which is reckoned with Norcot, and Grove with Dunale, in this county." [Mag. Brit. vol. ii. page 1000.] Berkhamstead sent members to parliament in the 14th of Edward III. A charter of incorporation was given or renewed by James I. to the bailiff and burgesses of Berkhamstead St Peter, the burgesses having power to choose a recorder, town-clerk, and other officers, and to hold a weekly market on Thursday, besides their ancient market on Monday.

REFERENCE TO THE HUNDREDS.

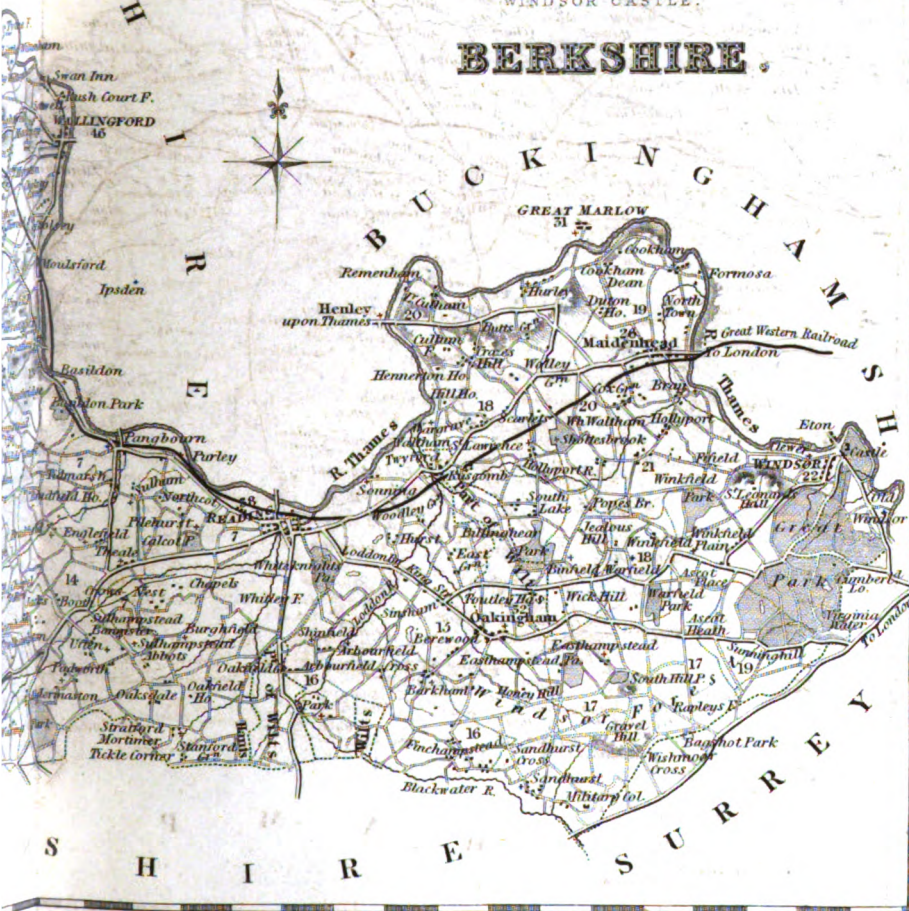

11 Strivenham	11 Lambourn
12 Faringdon	12 Faircross
13 Banfield	13 Moreton
14 Theale	14 Theale
15 Sonning	15 Sonning
16 Charlton	16 Charlton
17 Ripplesmere	17 Ripplesmere
18 Wargrave	18 Wargrave
19 Cookham	19 Cookham
20 Beynhurst	20 Beynhurst
21 Bray	21 Bray

The Figures prefixed to the Towns note the distance from London.

WINDSOR CASTLE.

BERKSHIRE.

Longitude West 50 from Greenwich

but the town was so much impoverished during the civil wars, that the burgesses were unable to maintain their privileges, and the charter became forfeited.

BERKHAMPSTEAD (LITTLE), a parish in the hund., union, and county of Hertford; $4\frac{1}{2}$ miles south-west of Hertford. Living, a rectory, formerly in the archd. of Huntingdon and dio. of Lincoln, now in the dio. of Rochester; valued at £7 8s. 6 $\frac{1}{2}$ d.; gross income £266. Patron, in 1835, the Marquis of Salisbury. There are a daily school, and a day and Sunday National school, here. In 1730 Maurice Hunt bequeathed £600 to the poor of this parish, the interest of which is annually distributed among those not receiving parochial relief. Pop., in 1801, 314; in 1831, 202. Houses 91. Acres 1,670. A. P. £1,467. Poor rates, in 1837, £98.

BERKHAMPSTEAD, ST MARY. See NORTH CHURCH.

BERKING. See BARKING, Essex.

BERKSHIRE,

An inland county of England, of irregular form, extending from $51^{\circ} 19'$ to $51^{\circ} 48'$ N. lat., and from $34^{\circ} 30'$ to $1^{\circ} 43'$ W. long. Its extreme length is 48 miles; greatest breadth 29; and circumference 208. It comprehends an area of 752 square miles, and, consequently, 481,280 acres; or, according to the population returns for 1831, 472,270 acres. On the north it is bounded for a distance of nearly 100 miles by the Thames, which separates it from the counties of Gloucester, Oxford, and Buckingham; on the east by Surrey; on the south by Southamptonshire; and on the west by Wilts. Fuller compares the general outline of its figure to that of a lute; others, to a slipper or sandal.

Physical Features, Rivers, &c.—The surface of this county presents few abrupt or bold elevations. The most elevated tract is a series of downs, a continuation of those in the northern part of Wiltshire. The White Horse hill, a part of this range, rises on the western boundary of the county to an altitude of 888 feet. The vale of the White Horse is the most fertile part of the county. The forest-lands are chiefly on the eastern and southern sides. Windsor forest is above 50 miles in circumference; but a great part of it was enclosed under an act passed in 1813. The principal river of Berkshire is the Thames, which becomes navigable soon after touching upon it. It enters the county at St John's bridge, about a mile to the south of Lechlade in Gloucestershire, and skirts it during a course of more than 100 miles, in which it passes the towns of Abingdon, Wallingford, Reading, Henley, Maidenhead, and Windsor. The river Kennet, which is also navigable from Newbury downwards, flows into the county from Wiltshire, near Hungerford, and falls into the Thames at Reading, after a course of 25 miles in Berkshire.—The Lambourn rises in the chalk hills near the town of the same name, and falls into the Kennet near Newbury, after a course of about 12 miles.—The Loddon rises near Aldershot in the county of Southampton, enters Berkshire in the parish of Swallowfield, and falls into the Thames near Wargrave, after a course of near 30 miles, of which about 12 are in Berkshire.—The Ock is a stream of about 20 miles in length, flowing through the vale of the White Horse, and falling into the Thames near Abingdon.—There are two lines of canal in this county. The Wilts and Berks canal extends from the Thames, a little below Abingdon, through the vale of the White Horse to the western border of the county; entering Wiltshire a little beyond Shrivenham, and joining the Kennet and Avon canal at Semmington, near Melksham. It is 52 miles in length, and $27\frac{1}{2}$ feet wide at the surface. The Kennet and Avon canal crosses the lower part of the county, from the Kennet above Newbury, and enters Wiltshire a little beyond Hungerford. It is 45 feet wide at the surface, and 57 miles in length. It was completed in 1810.—At Maidenhead the Great Western railway enters this county. After passing through that town and Reading, and crossing the Thames at Bassildon and Moulsoford, it pursues its course about 3 miles south-west of Wallingford, 4 south of Abingdon, and 2 north of Wantage, when, having crossed the Berks and Wilts canal twice, it leaves the county on the western border near Shrivenham.—The most important roads are the great London and Bath road, which enters the county at Maidenhead-bridge, and, after passing through Reading, and Thatcham, and a little to the north of Newbury, leaves it near the 64th mile-stone at Mongleford; and the Cirencester road, which leaves the London and Bath road at Stubbings' heath; enters Oxfordshire at Henley-upon-Thames; re-enters Berks at Abingdon, and runs through Farringdon and Lechlade.

Agriculture, &c.—Berkshire is chiefly an agricultural county; and possesses some of the finest corn-land tracts in the kingdom; no minerals of any importance occur. The western and central parts are considered the most fertile; the east and south being chiefly occupied by Windsor forest, with a considerable portion of waste and unenclosed lands. The general substratum of the cultivated districts consists of chalk or gravel, with clay in different places at various depths. Saraden-stones, of a fine silicious grit, are found in great abundance on the downs of Berkshire, and frequently on strata with which they have no apparent connection. The most fertile district is the vale of the White Horse, which receives its name from the figure of a gigantic horse cut on the side of a hill so as to expose the white chalk below. The vale of the Kennet is next in natural fertility, and perhaps superior in cultivation. Wheat, oats, barley, beans, pease, buck-wheat, vetches, rape-seed, turnips, and potatoes, are extensively cultivated; of less extensive cultivation are onions, carrots, hops, wood, flax, asparagus, and lavender. The average rent of land is about 25s. per acre. The predominant wood of the county is hazel; but ash and alder are not uncommon. The cattle are generally of the long horned or common country breed; there is a strongly marked breed of sheep, called Not sheep, said to be native; but pure specimens are not common. The cart-horses are good and strong, but not tall. Pigs and poultry are numerous in the dairy districts, and, from the proximity of London, very profitable to the farmer. The true Berkshire breed of pigs is highly esteemed. Much malt is made in the county, of which considerable quantities are sent to the metropolis. The climate of Berkshire is mild, the air salubrious and pure. There are, comparatively speaking, few manufactures in the county,—its prosperity mainly depending upon the export and import of commodities through the medium of the Thames. The proportion of the population engaged in agriculture, in 1831, was 45.2 in 100; in trade and manufactures, 31.8.

Ecclesiastical affairs.—The county of Berks is in the province of Canterbury, and, with the exception of two parishes, was formerly in the diocese of Salisbury. It has been recently transferred, in accordance with the recommendation of the church-commissioners, to the diocese of Oxford. Berkshire forms an archdeaconry, which contains the deaneries of Abingdon, Newbury, Reading, and Wallingford; it is divided into 147 parishes, of which 71 are rectories, 64 vicarages, and 12 perpetual curacies. In 1829 there were 81 Dissenting congregations in this county; in 1838, six of these were Roman Catholic. It possessed, in 1835, 511 daily schools, attended by 15,981 scholars, and 23 infant-schools, containing 693 children, forming a total of 16,574 young persons under daily instruction. There were, besides, 225 Sunday schools, attended by 14,113 individuals.

Hundreds, Rates, &c.—Berkshire is divided into 20 hundreds: viz. BEYNHURST, BRAY, CHARLTON, COMPTON, FAIRCROSS, FARRINGTON, GANFIELD, HORNER, KINTBURY-EAGLE, LAMBOURN, MORETON, OCK, READING, RIPPLESMEERE, SHRIVENHAM, SONNING, THEALE, WANTAGE, and WARGRAVE: which see. It contains the boroughs of Reading, Wallingford, Windsor, and Abingdon; the three first of which return each two members to parliament, the last, one, and the incorporated market-towns of Maidenhead, Newbury, and Wokingham; and the market-towns of Farringdon, Hungerford, East Ilsley, Lambourn, and Wantage. Besides these members for the boroughs, the county returns two knights of the shire to parliament. The county-members are nominated at Abingdon, and polled for at Abingdon, Reading, Newbury, Wantage, Bracknell, Maidenhead, Great Farringdon, and East-Ilsley. The county is included in the Oxford circuit. The Lent assizes and Epiphany quarter-sessions are held at Reading; the Easter sessions at Newbury; the Summer-assizes and Hilary sessions at Abingdon; and the Michaelmas sessions alternately at Abingdon and Reading. The county-bridewell or house of correction is at Abingdon, and the county-gaol and house of correction at Reading. The amount raised by the parish-rates in this county in the year ending March 25th, 1837, was £67,713, and the expenditure was £68,709; of which £56,618 was applied to the relief of the poor.

Antiquities.—The churches in this county present some curious remains of Saxon and Norman architecture. There were anciently twelve religious houses in Berkshire, one of which was an alien priory, and two were preceptories of the Knights-Hospitallers. There were also three colleges, one of which is still extant in the royal chapel of St George at Windsor; and ten hospitals, two of which still exist at Abingdon, and others at Donnington, Lambourn, and Newbury. There was a magnificent abbey at Reading, built by Henry I., of which scarcely any traces remain. See ABINGDON, AVINGTON, READING, WALLINGFORD, &c. Roman remains occur in various places; but the only well-ascertained Roman station is that of Spine, the modern Speen. This county gives the title of Earl to a branch of the family of Howard, the representative of which is the earl of Suffolk and Berkshire.—Pop., in 1801, 109,215; in 1811, 116,277; in 1821, 131,977; in 1831, 145,200. Houses 23,032. A. P. £643,781.

Name and History.—The name of the county has been changed into its present form from Barrocschire, or Berrocschire, which is by some supposed to have been derived from a wood abounding in box, and called Barroc, or Berroc. Some, as Higden, and Brompton, though perhaps fancifully, deduce its etymology from berroc, a 'bare oak,' beneath which the Britons were wont to hold their provincial meetings. "It is more probable, however," to use the language of an etymologist, "that it may have been derived from the quantity of birch wood produced in the county in former ages, the soil in general being more adapted to the growth of that wood than any other." At the time of the Roman invasion this county was inhabited by two tribes, to whom the invaders gave the names of Bibroci and Attrebatii. Under the Saxon heptarchy it formed part of the kingdom of Wessex, and was the scene of frequent conflicts with the Danes. The castle of Wallingford was garrisoned by Brian Fitzcourt for the Empress Matilda, during the struggle between her and Stephen, and afforded her a retreat when driven from Oxford. The castles of Wallingford and Windsor were seized by John, while his brother, Richard I., was absent on an expedition to the Holy Land; and during the quarrels between John and his nobles, meetings were held for the redress of grievances alternately in Wallingford and Reading, the former of which was fortified by the king, the latter was in the hands of the barons. During the parliamentary war, Wallingford and Windsor were garrisoned, the former for the king, and the latter for the parliament; and each retained possession of these places till the conclusion of the war. Further historical details will be found under the names of the more important towns, as ABINGDON, MAIDENHEAD, WALLINGFORD, WANTAGE, and WINDSOR: which see.

BERLINGTON, or BIRLINGTON, a township in the parish of Warkworth, eastern division of Coquetdale-ward, county of Northumberland; 6 miles south-east of Alnwick, on the northern bank of the river Coquet. Pop., in 1801, 87; in 1831, 85. Houses 15. Acreage with the parish. Poor rates, in 1837, £10.

BERMERSLEY, a township in the parish of Norton-in-the-Moors, northern division of the hund. of Pirehill, county of Stafford; 6 miles north-east of Newcastle-under-Lyne, in the vicinity of the Manchester and Birmingham railway, and the Grand Trunk canal. Pop., in 1821, 190; in 1831, 244. Houses 42. Other returns with the parish.

BERMONDSEY, a parish in the eastern division of the hund. of Brixton, union of Bermondsey, county of Surrey, adjoining on the east to the borough of Southwark, included in the bills of mortality, and within the jurisdiction of the Central criminal court; 1½ mile south-east of London. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Surrey and dio. of Winchester; valued at £15 8s. 11½d.; gross income £519; and, in 1829, in the patronage of Mrs Hamblay, since deceased. The present church was erected in 1660, and is a plain building, without any pretensions to architectural distinction. Among the communion plate of this parish is preserved an ancient silver salver, which presents a beautiful specimen of chased engraving. This curious relic has been assigned to the age of Edward II. It is supposed to have belonged to the abbey of Bermondsey, and transferred to the parish at the period of the dissolution. A new church was erected here in 1828, at an expense of £21,412. The building is handsome, in the Grecian style, with a tower, and a portico of the Ionic order, with 2,000 sittings; the living is a curacy, subordinate to the original rectory. The Independents and Wesleyan Methodists have places of worship here. An Independent church was formed in 1844, and another in 1703. There are also two Catholic chapels here, to which two schools are attached. The Catholic population connected with the chapel is upwards of 9,000, belonging entirely to the labouring classes. A monastic institution is now erecting in this place for the order of the Sisters of Mercy. Here is a free school, founded and endowed, in 1718, by Josiah Bacon, Esq., in which 80 boys are instructed in reading, writing, and arithmetic, who left £700 for the erection of the premises, £80 per annum to the master, £50 per annum to the usher, and £20 per annum for keeping the premises in repair. Besides the united charity schools, which contain 219 children, 80 of whom are clothed by the institution, there are seventy-two daily schools, one of which has been established by the Rev. W. Day as a collegiate school for the better instruction of females, particularly those intended for governesses, in all the branches of education, except sewing. There are also five Sunday schools, containing, collectively, 1,414 children. Charities connected with this parish, in addition to those already mentioned, produce about £250 per annum. "Aylwin Child, citizen of London," says Tanner, "about the year 1062, began a new and fair church in Southwark, to the honour of our Holy Saviour, with design to place therein a convent of monks of the Cluniac order, who were procured from the priory de Caritate in France, by means of Archbishop Lanfranc, A. D. 1069, about which time King William Rufus augmented the small estate which Aylwin had procured for these religious, with the grant of the manor of Bermondsey and other revenues. This priory was made denizen, 4° Richard II., erected into an abbey, A. D. 1399, and was endowed before the dissolution with a yearly income worth £548 2s. 5d. The site was granted, 33° Henry VIII., to Sir Richard or Sir Robert Southwell. Here were also an hospital dedicated to St Saviour, and another dedicated to St Thomas." Of the buildings of this convent few traces now remain. The town consists of two principal streets intersected by several smaller ones, and lighted with gas. The inhabitants are much employed in various branches of trade connected with shipping and ship-building, tanning, and fellmongering. In 1838 there was a woollen-mill, employing 23 hands, within this parish. The workhouse, erected here for the union of Bermondsey, has been altered and enlarged by the poor-law commissioners, at an expense of £100. The Bermondsey poor-law union comprehends 1 parish, embracing an area of 1 square mile; with a population returned, in 1831, at 29,741. The average annual expenditure on the poor of this district, during the three years preceding the formation of the union, was £16,861. Expenditure, in 1838, £10,281. Pop., in 1801, 17,169; in 1831, 29,741. Houses 4,918. Acres 620. A. P. £65,131. Poor rates, in 1837, £15,951.

BERMONDSPIT HUNDRED, in the Basingstoke division of the county of Southampton. Area 19,390 acres. Houses 452. Pop., in 1831, 2,585.

BERNOLDSWICK. See BARNOLDSWICK.

BERRICK-SALOME, a chapelry to the parish of Chalgrove, hund. of Ewelme, county of Oxford; 4 miles north-north-east of Wallingford. There is a daily school here. Pop., in 1801, 143; in 1831, 134. Houses 34. Acres 1,090. A. P. £1,125. Poor rates, in 1837, £92. Charities to the poor of this chapelry produce £8 6s. 11d. annually.

BERRIER AND MURRAH, a township in the parish of Greystock, Leath ward, county of Cumberland; 8 miles west of Penrith. Here is a school for six girls, endowed with the interest of £238 8s. 3d., 3 per cent. consols. The scholars are taught to read, sew, and knit. Pop., in 1801, 136; in 1831, 113. Houses 21. Acreage with the parish. Poor rates, in 1837, £24.

BERRIEW, or AREB-RHIW, a parish and township in the hund. of Newton, county of Montgomery, North Wales; 5 miles south by west of Welshpool, at the confluence of the Rhiw with the Severn. Living, a vicarage in the archd. and dio. of St Asaph and Bangor; valued at £13 6s. 8d.; gross income £450; in the patronage of the Bishop of St Asaph and Bangor. This parish possesses three daily schools, one of which, including 54 boys, is supported by an endowment in land, and three Sunday schools. The petty-sessions for the hundred are held here. In 1838 there was a woollen-mill, employing three hands, within this parish. Pop., in 1801, 2,059; in 1831, 2,429. Houses 453. A. P. £10,020. Poor rates, in 1837, £1,202.

BERRINGTON, a hamlet in the parish of Kyloe, in Islandshire, of the county of Durham. This was anciently the manor of Maners, within which several proprietors held lands by rendering a rose at the feast of Pentecost.

BERRINGTON, anciently BURINGTON, a hamlet in the parish of Chipping-Campden, upper division of the hund. of Kiftagete, county of Gloucester. Pop., in 1801, 138; in 1831, 129. Houses 37. Other returns with the parish.

BERRINGTON, a parish in the hund. of Condovery, union of Atcham, county of Salop; 5 miles south-east by south of Shrewsbury, intersected by the Severn, which is here navigable. Living, a rectory, formerly in the archd. of Salop and dio. of Lichfield and Coventry, now in the dio. of Chester; valued at £10 12s. 1d.; gross income £400. Patron, in 1835, Lord Berwick. There are three daily schools here. Pop., in 1801, 603; in 1831, 684. Houses 77. Acres 2,920. A. P. £4,226. Poor rates, in 1837, £339.

BERRINGTON, a hamlet in the parish of Tenbury, upper division of the hund. of Doddingtree, county of Worcester; 2 miles west by south of Tenbury, in the vicinity of the Leominster canal. Pop., in 1801, 189; in 1831, 165. Houses 35. Other returns with the parish.

BERROW, a parish in the hund. of Brenton-with-Wrington, Wrington division, union of Axbridge, county of Somerset; 9½ miles west by south of Axbridge; bounded on the west by Berrow bay, and intersected by the Bristol and Exeter railway. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Wells and dio. of Bath and Wells; valued at £13 11s. 10½d.; gross income £191; in the patronage of the Archdeacon of Wells. There are four daily schools in this parish. Pop., in 1801, 371; in 1831, 496. Houses 73. Acres 2,310. A. P. £6,060. Poor rates, in 1837, £296.

BERROW, a parish in a detached portion of the lower division of the hund. of Oswaldslaw, union of Upton-upon-Severn, county of Worcester, situated in the hund. of Pershore; 5½ miles south-west of Upton-upon-Severn, and about 8 west of the Birmingham and Gloucester railway. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. and dio. of Worcester; valued at £7 18s. 4d., and in the parliamentary returns at £45; gross income £84; in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Worcester. Charities connected with the parish produce £11 13s. per annum. Pop., in 1801, 397; in 1831, 507. Houses 90. Acres 1,940. A. P. £2,279. Poor rates, in 1837, £177.

BERRY-ARBOR, a parish in the hund. and division of Branton, union of Barnstaple, county of Devon; 3 miles east-south-east of Ilfracombe. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Barnstaple and dio. of Exeter; valued at £34 15s. 10d.; gross income £720. Patrons, in 1835, — Fursdon, Esq., the Bishop of Exeter, the Rev. E. W. Richards, and J. D. Bassett, Esq., alternately. All tithes, moduses, &c., the property of the clerical rector, were commuted in 1809. There are two daily and two Sunday schools here. This parish, in 1522, was the birth-place of the celebrated Bishop Jewell. Pop., in 1801, 532; in 1831, 794. Houses 153. Acres 5,050. A. P. £3,959. Poor rates, in 1837, £232.

BERRY-POMEROY, a parish in the division of Teignbridge, hund. of Haytor, union of Totness, county of Devon; 2 miles east-north-east of Totness. Living, a vicarage in the archd. of Totness and dio. of Exeter; valued at £18 19s. 7d.; gross income £360. Patrons, in 1835, R. W. Newman, and W. J. Denne; impropiator, the Duke of Somerset. The church contains some ancient monuments of the Seymour family, as well as a finely carved screen and rood-loft. There are five daily and two Sunday schools here. From lands left in 1700 by Mrs Bound, small sums are distributed at different periods amongst the poor of this parish. In a beautiful dell in this vicinity, surrounded with wooded hills, are the remains of Berry castle, erected by Ralph de Pomeroy, whose family held this lordship from the Conquest to the reign of Edward VI. The protector Somerset purchased the castle from Sir Thomas Pomeroy, since which period it has been possessed by the Seymour family. It was dismantled in the civil wars, and a considerable portion has fallen to ruin. The great gates, with the walls of the south front, the north wing of the quadrangle, and a few turrets, are yet standing; and these are so finely overhung with the branches of trees and shrubs that grow close to the walls, so beautifully mantled with ivy, and so richly incrustured with moss, that they constitute a most picturesque object. When the surrounding scenery is taken into account, the noble mass of wood fronting the gate, the bold ridges rising on the margin on the south, and the fertile valley opening to the east, the ruins of Berry-Pomeroy castle—as it is frequently called—are nearly unrivalled in their effect. Pop., in 1801, 1,124; in 1831, 1,186. Houses 122. Acres 4,610. A. P. £7,419. Poor rates, in 1837, £653.

BERSHAM, a township in the parish of Wrexham, hund. of Bromfield, county of Denbigh, North Wales; 1 mile west of Wrexham; to the vicarage of which there is a chapel here. Living, a curacy not in charge. The Calvinistic Methodists have a chapel here; the church was founded in 1717. There are six daily schools here, one of which, containing 36 girls, is supported by Mrs Fitz-Hugh of Plas Power. There are some iron-works in the vicinity, in which many of the inhabitants are employed. Pop., in 1821, 1,139; in 1831, 1,240. Houses 282. Poor rates, in 1837, £315.

BERSTED, a parish in the hund. of Aldwick, rape of Chichester, county of Sussex; $\frac{1}{2}$ miles south-east of Chichester, in the vicinity of the Arundel and Portsmouth canal. Living, a vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Canterbury; valued at £7 18s. 9d.; gross income £222; in the peculiar jurisdiction and patronage of the Archbishop of Canterbury. This parish possesses 13 daily schools, including 186 pupils, and three day and Sunday schools,—one of which was instituted by her late Royal Highness, the Princess Charlotte of Wales, and is supported by voluntary donations; and another, in which 20 females are instructed and clothed, is maintained at the sole charge of Mrs Smith of Bersted Lodge. This parish contains the hamlets of North and South Bersted, and the bathing-place of Bognor. Pop., in 1801, 737; in 1831, 2,190. Houses 410. Acres 2,750. A. P. £7,834. Poor rates, in 1837, £1,183.

BERWICK, a parish in the hund. of Longbridge, rape of Pevensey, union of West Fife, county of Sussex; 7 miles south-east of Lewes, on the Cuckmere river. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Lewes and dio. of Chichester; valued at £13 6s. 8d.; gross income £362. Patron, in 1835, — Delves, Esq. There is a day and Sunday school here. This parish is within the liberty of the duchy of Lancaster. Pop., in 1801, 170; in 1831, 203. Houses 33. Acres 1,250. A. P. £1,477. Poor rates, in 1837, £101.

BERWICK. See SKIPTON, west riding of Yorkshire.

BERWICK-HILL, a township in the parish of Ponteland, western division of Castle-ward, county of Northumberland; $6\frac{1}{2}$ miles south by west of Morpeth. Pop., in 1801, 108; in 1831, 105. Houses 21. Acreage with the parish. Poor rates, in 1837, £69.

BERWICK, ST JAMES, a parish in the division of Salisbury and Amesbury, hund. of Branch and Dole, union of Wilton, county of Wilts; $\frac{1}{2}$ miles west-south-west of Amesbury. Living, a discharged vicarage, exempt from visitation, a peculiar of the bishop of Salisbury; valued at £8 10s.; gross income £54. Patron, in 1835, Lord Ashburton. There is a day and Sunday school in this parish. Pop., in 1801, 226; in 1831, 232. Houses 44. Acres 2,370. A. P. £2,024. Poor rates, in 1837, £113.

BERWICK, ST JOHN, a parish in the division of Hindon, hund. of Chalk, union of Tisbury, county of Wilts; $\frac{1}{2}$ miles east by south of Shaftesbury. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Salisbury; valued at £26 13s. 4d.; gross income £664; in the patronage of the Warden and Fellows of New college, Oxford. Here is a place of worship for Baptists; the church was formed in 1825. This parish possesses a daily school, containing 53 pupils, and two Sunday schools. Pop., in 1801, 357; in 1831, 425. Houses 90. Acres 4,230. A. P. £2,881. Poor rates, in 1837, £280.

BERWICK, ST LEONARD, a parish in the division of Hindon, hund. of Dunworth, union of Tisbury, county of Wilts; 1 mile east of Hindon. Living, a rectory, to which is annexed the chapelry of Sedghill, in the archd. and dio. of Salisbury; valued at £8 6s. 8d.; gross income £389. Patronage in dispute. The great and small tithes, the property of the clerical rector, were commuted in 1816. Pop., in 1801, 36; in 1831, 51. Houses 8. Acres 970. A. P. £1,025. Poor rates, in 1837, £19.

BERWICK-ON-TWEED, a seaport town and parish, situated on the northern bank of the Tweed, at its confluence with the sea, the centre of the poor-law union of Berwick-on-Tweed, county of Northumberland; 337 miles north by west of London, 54 east-south-east of Edinburgh, and 64 north by west of Newcastle-on-Tyne. Geographical position of the townhouse, $55^{\circ} 46' 21''$ N. lat., and $1^{\circ} 59' 41''$ W. long.

The living is a vicarage in the archd. of Northumberland, deanery of Bambrough, custom of York, and dio. of Durham, of the annual value of £289. Patrons, the dean and chapter of Durham. The parish-church is a handsome edifice. The Presbyterians, Baptists, United Secession church, Scottish Relief, the Wesleyan and Primitive Methodists, and Roman Catholics, have places of worship here. The United Secession church was formed in 1771; the Wesleyan Methodist in 1796; and the Primitive Methodist in 1829. There is also a week-day lectureship, founded in 1825, now in the gift of the London Mercers' company.—A free grammar-school was founded here by Queen Elizabeth; the management is vested in the corporation. The master has a free house and garden, a salary of £80 per annum, and is entitled to charge a fee of 10s. per quarter for every scholar who is not the son of a freeman. The number of his pupils varies from 20 to 30. In the corporation school the sons of burgesses are instructed in English, Latin, and Mathematics, by separate teachers, who receive considerable salaries, and have each a free house and garden.—Forty boys are clothed and educated in the Blue-coat school, which was founded in 1725. The National system is followed in this school: the salary of the master is £50 per annum. In 1819 the ladies of Berwick established a school of industry, in which above 120 girls are taught.—The corporation of Berwick support six daily schools, containing 330 children; another, with 98 pupils, is supported out of the poor's rate. Besides these, the parish possesses 17 daily and 17 Sunday schools; the former including 563, the latter 912 scholars. The charitable bequests of John Brown, Esq. and others, produce annually about £104.—A dispensary was established here in 1814. A lunatic asylum for paupers was erected in 1813. David I. of Scotland is said to have founded in, or near South Berwick, a Benedictine nunnery.

The town of Berwick is equally celebrated in the History of Scotland and in the annals of this country. Stretching itself up a gentle acclivity, which forms the northern bank of the river, Berwick enjoys a favourable southern aspect. It includes within its walls an area of little more than 2 miles in circumference; and consists of streets which for the most part are narrow, straggling, and irregular. Its principal buildings are: the town-hall, a very handsome modern free-stone structure, with a beautiful portico of the Tuscan order, its pediment surmounted by a graceful spire, begun in 1754, and finished in 1761;—the governor's house, an edifice of stone;—the barracks, built of the same materials, strong and commodious;—and the bridge, consisting of 15 noble arches, and measuring 1,164 feet in length, though only 17 feet wide: it was begun in the reign of James I., but such was the poverty of the period, or the indolence of the workmen, that upwards of 24 years elapsed before it was completed. The disbursements were then found to have amounted to £15,000. The houses are in general ancient. The town is fortified, but the works are chiefly modern; of the more ancient fortifications few traces remain. The modern works consist of an earthen rampart, substantially reveted, with bastions, flanks, and a ditch, on the north and east; and on the south and west, of high walls flanked with cannon, under which the river flows, serving the purpose of a moat. The ramparts form a very agreeable promenade. The suburb, called Castlegate, is situated without the walls, near the north-west part of the town; and a long range of houses, called the Greens, stretches from Castlegate eastward. There are good assembly-rooms, in which subscription-concerts are held. A public subscription library was established in 1812, and now possesses upwards of 5,000 volumes.

Some manufactures, but not to any great extent, are carried on here; among which are those of linen, sack, and sail-cloth, ropes, hosiery, carpets, &c. There is an extensive iron-foundry. Berwick has an extensive coasting commerce. There are regular traders and steamers between Berwick, London, Kingston-upon-Hull, Newcastle, and Leith. Timber, iron, hemp, flax, bones, tallow, and blubber, form the principal of the imported articles; corn, coals, wool, salmon, pork, and eggs, are exported in considerable quantity. Salmon are caught in great numbers in the Tweed; and are for the most part sent to London, either alive in wells, in the holds of vessels, or packed in ice, which preserve their freshness for a considerable time. There is a considerable fishery of white fish and lobsters off the coast. About 800 of the inhabitants are connected with these fisheries. The fisheries produced a rental of £20,000 20 years ago; they do not now reach £4,000. The port of Berwick is frequented only by small vessels, a bar at the entrance of the harbour rendering it unfit for large ones. According to returns made in 1828, the number of vessels belonging to the port was 54, and the average burden 90 tons. In 1834, the tonnage inwards, coasting and foreign, amounted to 28,768 tons; outwards, 40,715. For the improvement and protection of this harbour, a stone-pier, half-a-mile in length, has been constructed, and a lighthouse erected at its extremity. There are no docks. The Tweed is navigable as high as the bridge, and the tide flows about 7 miles farther up; the ordinary spring-tides rise 15 feet. A railway has been proposed between Berwick and Kelso. The market, which is held on Saturday, is well-supplied with grain and provisions; a smaller market is held on Wednesday. A fair for black cattle, sheep, and horses, is held on the Friday in Trinity week. There is here a branch of the North of England joint-stock banking company.

The charter, under which Berwick is now incorporated, was granted by James VI., though it had previously held under various charters granted at different periods. The corporation formerly consisted of a mayor, recorder, four bailiffs, and an indefinite number of burgesses. By the municipal act of 1835, the borough has been divided into three wards, to each of which six councillors are apportioned. Petty-sessions for the borough are held in the town-hall. A commission of the peace and court of quarter-sessions have been recently granted. In all the courts, civil and criminal, the proceedings are regulated by English law: although it is difficult to determine, either historically or topographically, whether Berwick belongs to England or Scotland. The annual value of the corporation property, in 1837, was £12,754, of which £3,849 arose out of rents; the expenditure in that year was £12,369; the debt is about £60,000. Berwick has returned two members to parliament since the reign of Philip and Mary; and has always been what is called an open borough, though much influenced by the number of residents in the pay of government. The right of election was vested to all the burgesses, whether resident or not, in number about 1,000. Under the reform act, the parish of Berwick, and the townships of Tweedmouth and Spittal, unite in returning two members to parliament. The liberties of Berwick extend from the entrance of the harbour northwards to the grounds of Lamberton, whence they are bounded by a line crossing the river Whitadder, and ending at the Tweed; the other boundary line runs down close by the river to its termination at the bar, there forming an equilateral angle, two sides of which are 2 miles each, and the other side somewhat more. Within these liberties—which form one parish—are a number of private estates; a part is let out upon leases; and the rest, measuring about 4,500 acres, is parcelled out into separate allotments called 'Burgess' meadows,' or stints, which are occupied by the oldest burgesses or their widows, and are worth from £5 to £15 per annum. The sixth pillar upon Berwick bridge separates Berwick from the co-palatine of Durham. The poor-laws are very judiciously administered in this place by a select body of trustees, who are elected by the rate-payers. In 1820, the poor-rates of the houses, lands, and fisheries, within the parish, amounted to £5,388; in the year ending March, 1837, they had been reduced to £3,067. The workhouse, erected here for the union of Berwick-on-Tweed, has been altered and enlarged by the poor-law commissioners, at an expense of £1,000. The Berwick-on-Tweed poor-law union comprehends 17 parishes, embracing an area of 77 square miles; with a population returned, in 1831, at 28,782. The average annual expenditure on the poor of this district, during the three years preceding the formation of the union, was £8,442. Expenditure, in 1838, £6,837.

The name of Berwick is supposed by Leland to have been originally Aberwick, from the British words aber, the mouth of a river, and wic, a town. Camden and some other antiquaries derive it from the ancient word berewic, which is used in old records to designate a hamlet attached to a place of greater importance.* The supposition of Leland seems to be the better of the two; but Chalmers suggests that the name may have originated in the Anglo-Saxon bar, i. e. bare, and wic, i. e. vicus, castellum, sinus, the curving-reach of a river. "It hath bene," says Lambard, "of very long tyme under the realme of England; for Hector sayeth, that in Fergus tyme, the first kinge of Scottes, (what tyme he devided that realme into countries) the towne of Berwyk was very populous, and was, as he calleth it, a Shyredome, which the Scottes and Pictes recovered from the Romaynes cominge in aid of the Britons. The tymes and causes of the change of possession of this towne from Ingland to Scotland, and from Scotland to Ingland, are so variably discoursed amongst hystorians, as they are not in myne opinion to be reconciled. I will, therefore, follow those that in myne owne opinion seme to use most probabilitie. Edgar, a kinge of Scottes, gave it to the bishop of Durham about the yere 1120, which byshoprick was then within Scotland, as Hector affirmeth. Henry the Second gate it by composition, or rather compulsion, from William, then kinge of Scottes, anno 1175. Richard I. toward his expedition to Jerusalem, delivered it and Rokesbrough to the same William for 10,000 poundes. Kinge Jhon wan it againe from Alexander of Scotland, and many other holdes that weare then in common opinion thought impreignable, whom also he called Red Fox, (bycause he was red headed,) and said that he would beate him out of al his holdes after the same maner. But Alexander of Scotland recovered it agayne from Henry III. within age, and exchanged it with hym for Carleil. After his death, Edward I. who, in his epitaph at Westminster, is named Scotorum Malleus, wan it from Baliol about the yere 1296, and caused al the nobles of Scotland to do him homage; the maner whereof is at large set forthe by him that continued the hystorie of Prosper. Aquit. Edward II. his son, whiche incurred the displeasure of his nobles, and dislikinge of the comons for his careles government, lost it agayne by the treason of one Spaldinge an Englishman, whose posteritie enjoy the comoditie of his reward, for that service to this day, as Hector Boetius confesseth. Lastly, Edward III. wan it, as it appeareth manifestly by consent of al writers. Yet Hector Boetius sayth, that the Scottes recovered it duringe the tyme of the imprisonment of David their kinge; but fearinge that they should be constrained to rendre it, thei set it on fyre, and left it to Kinge Edward III., who walled it about. Sence which tyme it hathe not retourned to Scotland." Honest Lambard is incorrect in his concluding statement; for Berwick after this was frequently besieged, and frequently changed masters, in the wars between the two kingdoms, till 1482, when it finally fell into the hands of Edward IV. By a treaty of Edward VI. and Mary, queen of Scots, it was erected into an independent town; Elizabeth, however, resumed possession of it, and strengthened the fortifications. On the accession of James VI. to the throne of England, its importance as a frontier-town was extinguished; and as a fortified town it has only once appeared in history since that period,

* At the epoch of domesday-book, berewics signified a village which appertained to some manor or town. Thus, Tothill was called the berewicks of Westminster; and it has been supposed by some that Berwick may have been the berewicke of Coldingham. But there is no evidence, and very little appearance of probability for this. Somner and Lye, the Saxon glossarists, inform us that berewic is the same with beretum, i. e. villa frumentaria, a grange, or village. But the same objections lie to this derivation of the name. In some ancient deeds this place receives the name of 'South Berwick,' probably to distinguish it from North Berwick, a small seaport and borough in East Lothian.

having been garrisoned by the parliament in the civil war in the reign of Charles I. Pop. of Berwick, in 1801, 7,187; in 1831, 8,920. Pop. of the parliamentary borough, that is, including Tweedmouth and Spittal, 12,190, in 1831. Houses 1,190. Acres 5,120. The amount of assessed property in the parish of Berwick, in 1831, was £30,811.

BESFORD, a township in the parish of Shawbury, hund. of Pimhill, county of Salop. Pop., in 1821, 169; in 1831, 158. Houses 23. Acres 1,310.

BESFORD, a parochial chapelry in the upper division of the hund. and union of Pershore, county of Worcester; $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles west by south of Pershore, near the Avon, and on the line of the Birmingham and Gloucester railway. Living, a curacy subordinate to the vicarage of St Andrew's, Pershore. There is a daily school here. Pop., in 1801, 126; in 1831, 146. Houses 31. Acres 1,300. A. P. £1,991. Poor rates, in 1837, £76.

BESSEL'S GREEN, a hamlet in the parish of Orpington, county of Kent. Here is a Baptist church, formed in 1715.

BESSELSLEIGH, a parish in the hund. of Hormer, union of Abingdon, county of Berks; 4 miles north-west of Abingdon, and about 6 north of the Great Western railway. Living, a discharged rectory, formerly in the archd. of Berks and dio. of Salisbury, now in the dio. of Oxford; valued at £4 17s. 3d.; gross income £200. Patron, in 1835, W. J. Lenthall, Esq. The inhabitants of this parish are entitled to send their children to the school at Appleton, erected and endowed by Sir R. Fettiplace. W. Lenthall, Esq., speaker of the Long parliament, resided at the ancient manor-house of Besselsleigh, having purchased it of the Fettiplace family. Pop., in 1801, 99; in 1831, 124. Houses 21. Acres 960. A. P. £1,153. Poor rates, in 1837, £52.

BESSINGBY, a parish in the wapentake of Dicker, east riding of Yorkshire; $1\frac{1}{2}$ mile south-west of Bridlington. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. of the east riding and dio. of York; valued at £5 6s. 8d., and rated in the parliamentary returns at £83; gross income £59. Patron, in 1835, Henry Hudson, Esq. Certain great and small tithes, the property of the lay-impropriator, were commuted in 1766. Pop., in 1801, 87; in 1831, 83. Houses 13. Acres 1,230. A. P. £2,045. Poor rates, in 1837, £43.

BESSINGHAM, or BASSINGHAM, a parish in the northern division of the hund. and union of Erpingham, county of Norfolk; 5 miles south-west of Cromer. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. of Norfolk and dio. of Norwich; valued at £4 6s. 8d., and in the parliamentary returns at £110; gross income £135. Patron, in 1835, the Rev. F. E. Arden. There is a day and Sunday National school here. Pop., in 1831, 137. Houses 30. Acres 410. A. P. £586. Poor rates, in 1837, £62.

BESTHORPE, a parish in the hund. of Shropham, union of Wayland, county of Norfolk; 1 mile east of Attleborough, on the post-road to Norwich. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Norfolk and dio. of Norwich; valued at £5 6s. 10d., and in the parliamentary returns at £140; gross income £250. Patron, in 1835, the Earl of Winterton. Pop., in 1801, 391; in 1831, 542. Houses 99. Acres 2,440. A. P. £3,745. Poor rates, in 1837, £462.

BESTHORPE, a chapelry in the parish of South Scarle, hund. of Newark, county of Nottingham; 7 miles north-north-east of Newark-upon-Trent. There are three daily schools here, one of which is endowed with £8 12s. per annum. Pop., in 1801, 216; in 1831, 322. Houses 59. Acres 510. A. P. £1,518. Poor rates, in 1837, £133.

BESWICK, a township in the parish of Manchester, hund. of Salford, co.-palatine of Lancaster; 1 mile north-east of the Manchester and Sheffield railway depot. There are a daily and a Sunday school here. Pop., in 1821, 35; in 1831, 248. Houses 39. Acres 60. Other returns with the parish.

BESWICK, a chapelry in the parish of Kilnwick, Bainton-Beacon division of the wapentake of Hart-hill, east riding of Yorkshire; 6 miles north by west of Beverley. Living, a perpetual curacy not in charge, annexed to the curacy of Kilnwick. The Baptists have a place of worship here, and there is an infant school. Pop., in 1801, 136; in 1831, 205. Houses 39. Acres 1,430. A. P. £2,104. Poor rates, in 1837, £69.

BETCHWORTH, or BEACHWORTH, a parish in the first division of the hund. and union of Reigate, county of Surrey; 3½ miles west of Reigate, through which borough the Croydon railway passes. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Surrey and dio. of Winchester; valued at £7 8s. 11½d.; gross income £184; in the patronage of the dean and canons of Windsor. There are a Baptist church, formed in 1785, and a school, supported partly by an endowment of £20 per annum, and 3 daily schools in this parish. Charities to the poor produce annually £60 5s. 8d. This manor formerly belonged to Abraham Tucker, author of the well-known philosophical work entitled 'The Light of Nature Pursued.' Pop., in 1801, 930; in 1831, 1,000. Houses 192. Acres 3,660. A. P. £5,402. Poor rates, in 1837, £719.

BETHELKING. See BAULKING.

BETHGELERT. See BEDDGELEART.

BETHERSDEN, a parish in the upper half-hund. of Chart and Longbridge, lathe of Scray, union of West Ashford, Kent; 5½ miles west-south-west of Ashford, intersected by the South Eastern railway. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Canterbury; valued at £12; gross income £166; in the patronage of the archbishop of Canterbury. Tithes commuted in 1839; rent-charge £480 19s. 6d. The Baptists have a church here which was formed in 1809. The parish possesses 3 daily schools. A fair is held on the 3d Monday of April for pedlars' ware.—Pop., in 1801, 740; in 1831, 973. Houses 146. Acres 6,410; of which about 140 are in hops. A. P. £4,906. Poor rates, in 1837, £779.

BETHNAL-GREEN, a parish in the Tower division of the hund. of Ossulstone, union of Bethnal-Green, Middlesex; 2½ miles north-east by east of St. Paul's; and containing the depot of the Eastern Counties railroad. It is within the bills of mortality, and was formerly only a hamlet in the large parish of Stepney, from which it was separated by act of parliament in 1740. In the petition for the act it was stated that the hamlet then contained 1800 houses, and a population of 15,000. The houses in the streets immediately contiguous to Christ-church, Spitalfields, were probably erected in the reigns of Queen Anne and George I., and are larger and more lofty than in that part of the parish erected within the present century. It consists of the Church, Green, Hackney-road, and Tower divisions.—Living, a rectory in the dio. of London, not in charge; gross income £614; annual stipends paid to two curates, £225; in the patronage of the principal and fellows of Brasenose college, Oxford. The church, on the east side of Church row, was erected in 1746, under the authority of the commissioners for building new churches. In 1828, a new church was erected, from designs by Mr. Soane, at an expense of £17,638 18s., by the parliamentary commissioners. It is a handsome edifice in the Grecian style, with a tower; and is capable of accommodating 2,000 persons. There is also an Episcopal Jew's chapel erected in 1814, to which are attached 2 schools. The Independents have 12 chapels here, the oldest of which was built about 1700. The Baptists have 4 chapels; the Wesleyan Methodists 8; and several other classes of dissenters have places of worship here.—Here are a free school and alms-house, for the foundation of which, in 1722, Mr. Thomas Parmiter left an estate in Suffolk. Mrs. Elizabeth Carter gave the ground on which the school was erected, rent free, for 600 years; and the endowment has been increased by £10 per annum given by Mrs. Carter, £10 per annum by Mr. William Lee, and £5 by Mr. Edward Mayhew. The income has been well-managed and has increased considerably; the salary of the master is £50, and each of the people in the alms-house receives £5, and a supply of coals annually. The companies of drapers and dyers have alms-houses in this parish, in which are also those founded in 1711 by Captain Fisher. At Mile-end is Trinity hospital, erected in 1695, on land given by Captain Henry Mudd, an elder brother of the Trinity house, and endowed in 1701 by Captain Robert Sandes. Certain funds arising from lighthouses, ballast-offices, buoys, beacons, &c. are appropriated to it by government. The inmates are 28 in number, and must be decayed masters of vessels, or their widows. In 1771, the inhabitants founded St. Matthew's school, for the education and clothing of 45 boys and 45 girls. Besides these, there are in this populous district 11 daily schools, containing 473 scholars, 5 day and Sunday schools attended by 1,337 children, and 7 Sunday schools. But notwithstanding all this provision, the Bethnal-Green Educational committee state, "that after making allowance for such as must at all times be prevented from attending school, there were, in 1838, from 8,000 to 10,000 children in Bethnal-Green alone, not only without daily instruction, but for whom no means of daily instruction are provided."—The inhabitants of Bethnal-Green are chiefly journeymen silk-weavers, who work in their own houses for the master-weavers in Spitalfields. The manufacture of silks was introduced here, shortly after the revocation of the edict of Nantz, by French refugees, many of whose descendants still exist here. There was a French church in St. John street, till about the year 1815. In July, 1838, there were 7,847 looms employed in this parish as follows: viz. 2,144 on velvets; 23 on jacquard velvets; 445 on jacquard or figured goods; and 5,235 on plain goods. To these might be added 776 unemployed looms, and 189 which had been parted with. The value of a new loom is from 30s. to 40s.; they are sometimes hired at 1s. 4d. a month; and 1s. per week is charged for a loom-standing. The gross earnings of a skilful weaver cannot at present exceed 15s. a-week, from which 4s. may be deducted for expenses. [See ARTICLES CHRIST-CHURCH AND SPITALFIELDS.] The houses are in general built of brick, and often inhabited by several families. Part of the parish is occupied by market-gardens. In the greater part of it the streets are not close; but in one part the population is as densely crowded as in the closest and most thickly-peopled parts of the city; and a large portion of Bethnal-Green is a swamp, hardly any part of which is drained. "In the less open parts of Bethnal-Green, and in a considerable part of White-chapel," say the poor-law commissioners, "the closeness of the streets, lanes, alleys, and courts, is most oppressive. A fresh current of air can hardly ever reach them; and the evil is greatly aggravated by the very general custom of the people permanently to close the windows of their houses, partly for the sake of warmth, and partly to prevent the real or imaginary effects of the air on the silk used in their work." A fair was formerly held here, but has been suppressed in consequence of the riots which occurred at it. The workhouse, erected here for the union of Bethnal-Green, has been enlarged by the commissioners, at an expense of £1,000. The average annual expenditure on the poor of this district, during the three years preceding the formation of the Bethnal-Green union, was £14,218. Expenditure, in 1838, £12,451.—Pop., in 1740, 15,000; houses, 1800; the number of people to a house being about 8·3. Pop., in 1801, 22,310; in 1831, 62,018. Houses, in 1831, 10,877; in 1839, 12,048; of which 11,193 were rated under £20. Acres 780. A. P. £69,722. Poor rates, in 1837, £15,945.

BETLEY, a parish in the northern division of the hund. of Pirehill, county of Stafford; 6½ miles west by north of Newcastle-under-Lyne, on the line of the Grand Junction railroad. This was formerly a market-town, but the market has long ago fallen into disuse. Living, a perpetual curacy not in charge, in the archd. of Stafford and dio. of Lichfield and Coventry; valued at £101 9s. 6d.; gross income £150. Patron, in 1835, George Tollett, Esq. This parish possesses four daily schools, and two day and Sunday National schools, one of which has an endowment for the instruction of ten boys, and both have lending libraries attached. Charities connected with the parish produce about £14 annually. The remains of Healy-castle, belonging to Lord Audley, stand on a rock about a mile to the south-east of Betley. Pop., in 1801, 670; in 1831, 870. Houses 163. Acres 1,480. A. P. £2,804. Poor rates, in 1837, £192.

BETTERTON, a tything in the parish of Lockinge, Berks; 2½ miles east-south-east of Wantage, in the vicinity of the Berks and Wilts canal.

BETTESHANGER, or BETSHANGER, a parish in the hund. and union of Estry, lathe of St Augustine, county of Kent; 3½ miles south-south-west of Sandwich. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. and dio. of Canterbury; valued at £6 4s. 4d., and in the parliamentary returns at £120; gross income £166. Patron, in 1835, F. E. Morrice, Esq. Pop., in 1801, 38; in 1831, 20. Houses 2. Acres 370. A. P. £1,331. Poor rates, in 1837, £25.

BETTISCOMBE, a parish in the liberty of Frampton, locally situated in the hund. of Godderthorne, union of Beaminster, Bridport division of the county of Dorset; 7 miles north by east of Lyme Regis. Living, a rectory, formerly in the archd. of Dorset and dio. of Bristol, now in the dio. of Salisbury; valued at £8 2s. 3½d.; gross income £180. Patron, in 1835, F. J. Browne, Esq. Pop., in 1801, 47; in 1831, 65. Houses 12. Acres 1,810. A. P. £731. Poor rates, in 1837, £67.

BETTUS, a parish in the hund. of Clunn, county of Salop; 7 miles north-west of Knighton. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. of Salop and dio. of Hereford; valued at £20; gross income £57. Patron, in 1835, the Earl of Powis. Pop., in 1801, 308; in 1831, 389. Houses 59. Acres 8,500. A. P. £2,159. Poor rates, in 1837, £203.

BETTWS, a parish in the hund. of Ickennen, union of Llanelly, county of Caermarthen, South Wales; 9 miles north-west of Caermarthen. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. of Caermarthen and dio. of St David's; valued at £6; gross income £96; in the patronage of the Bishop of St David's. The Calvinistic Methodists have a place of worship here; the church was formed in 1795. This parish is about 5 miles in length and 1½ in breadth, and is supposed to contain some valuable beds of coal. Pop., in 1821, 1,026; in 1831, 830. Houses 182. A. P. £1,593. Poor rates, in 1837, £178.

BETTWS-YN-RHOS, or BETTWS-ABERGELEY,

a parish with a hamlet of the same name, in the hund. of Idulaa, union of St Asaph, county of Denbigh, North Wales; 3½ miles south-west of Abergely. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of St Asaph and dio. of St Asaph and Bangor; valued at £12 15s. 5d.; gross income £395; in the patronage of the Bishop of St Asaph and Bangor. The Calvinistic Methodists have a place of worship here, and there is a daily National school, containing 61 pupils, partly supported by an endowment of £23 per annum, arising from the rents of premises bequeathed for that purpose, and partly by subscription. There are also four Sunday schools. The petty-sessions for the hundred are sometimes held at the hamlet. The parish occupies an elevated situation, and is in a great measure uncultivated. Pop., in 1821, 897; in 1831, 912. Houses 182. A. P. £2,745. Poor rates, in 1837, £702.

BETTWS, a parish in the hund. of Newcastle, union of Bridgend and Cowbridge, county of Glamorgan, South Wales; 5 miles north of Bridgend. Living, a curacy not in charge, subordinate to the vicarage of Newcastle. There is a daily school here. The parish contains 1,000 acres of land, and is subject to rectorial tithes. Pop., in 1821, 344; in 1831, 362. Houses 64. A. P. £1,506. Poor rates, in 1837, £116.

BETTWS, a township in the parish of Llan-fawr, hund. of Penllyn, county of Merioneth, North Wales; 2 miles north-east of Bala. This village stands in the picturesque vale of Eidernion. The Calvinistic Methodists have a place of worship here; the church was formed in 1822. Pop., in 1821, 467. Other returns with the parish.

BETTWS, a parochial chapelry in the upper division of the hund. of Wentloog, union of Newport, county of Monmouth; 2½ miles north-west of Newport, intersected by the Crumlin canal. Living, a curacy not in charge, subordinate to the vicarage of Newport. Pop., in 1801, 106; in 1831, 95. Houses 20. Acres 1,470. A. P. £932. Poor rates, in 1837, £97.

BETTWS, a parish in the hund. of Newtown, union of Newtown and Llanidloes, county of Montgomery, North Wales; 3½ miles north of Newtown, on the river Bechan, a little above its junction with the Severn. It includes the township of Garthgillin and Glanithan, and of Ucheldre and Dolewain. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. and dio. of St Asaph and Bangor; valued at £10; gross income £254; in the patronage of the Bishop of St Asaph and Bangor. There are four daily and two Sunday schools here. This parish is an upland district, and presents an undulating surface of nearly 7,000 acres in extent, part of which is pretty fertile. In the township of Dolewain are the ruins of a castle of the same name, near which some curiously wrought brazen and earthen vessels have been found. The authentic history of this structure is involved in obscurity; it has been conjectured that it was erected by the British during the Roman occupancy. Leland and Milton are said to have taken from the name of this castle (forwyn, signifying a maiden,) the hint of the tale of 'the Maiden Sabrina.' Pop., in 1821, 853; in 1831, 890. Houses 154. A. P. £3,083. Poor rates, in 1837, £538.

BETTWS-BLEDDRWS, a parish in the hund. of Moeddyn (Moythen), union of Lampeter, county of Cardigan, South Wales; 2½ miles north of Lampeter, on the river Tivy, and crossed by the high road from Tregaron to Lampeter. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. of Cardigan and dio. of St David's; valued at £4 7s. 8½d.; gross income £152; in the patronage of the Bishop of St David's. This parish possesses a daily and a Sunday school.

Pop., in 1821, 216; in 1831, 285. Houses 46. A. P. £820. Poor rates, in 1837, £54.

BETTWS-CLYRO, a small parish in the hund. of Pains-castle, union of Hay, county of Radnor, South Wales; $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles north of Hay, on the western bank of the Wye. Living, a curacy not in charge, subordinate to the vicarage of Clyro. There is a day and Sunday school here, to which the parish contributes £15 annually for the education of 10 poor children. Pop., in 1801, 167; in 1831, 683. Houses 45. A. P. £1,742. Poor rates, in 1837, £122.

BETTWS-DISERTH, a parish in the hund. of Colwyn, union of Builth, county of Radnor, South Wales; 7 miles west-south-west of New Radnor. Living, a curacy not in charge, subordinate to the rectory of Diserth. A school is generally kept here during the summer months. This parish lies near the source of the river Eddw, and embraces an area of 1,800 acres. Pop., in 1821, 128; in 1831, 141. Houses 22. A. P. £468. Poor rates, in 1837, £79.

BETTWS-GARMON, a parish in the hund. of Is-Gorfa, or Gwyrfa, union of Caernarvon, county of Caernarvon, North Wales; 5 miles south-east of Caernarvon, on a rivulet flowing from Llyn-Llewellyn, and falling into the Menai strait. Living, a curacy, to which is annexed the vicarage of Llanfair-in-Gaer, in the archd. and dio. of Bangor; valued in the parliamentary returns at £45; gross income £93; in the patronage of the bishop of Bangor. There are two Sunday schools here, containing 122 children. This parish lies at the base of Snowdon, and the high road from Caernarvon to Beddgelart and Tan-y-Bwch passes through it, on which is situated the hamlet of Bettws-Garmon, consisting of a few cottages, a public-house, and the little church dedicated to St Garmon. Pop., in 1821, 111; in 1831, 128. Houses 20. A. P. £580. Poor rates, in 1837, £57.

BETTWS-GWERFYL-GOCH, a parish in the hund. of Eideinion, union of Corwen, county of Merioneth, North Wales; 4 miles north-west of Corwen, near the post-road to Bangor. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. and dio. of St Asaph and Bangor; valued at £5 4s. 7d., and in the parliamentary returns at £121 16s. 10d.; gross income £125; in the patronage of the bishop of St Asaph and Bangor. In this parish is a hamlet of the same name, situated near the river Alwen. Fairs for sheep, horned cattle, and horses, are held here on the 16th of March, 22d of June, 12th of August, 16th of September, and 12th of December. Pop., in 1821, 273; in 1831, 273. Houses 59. A. P. £960. Poor rates, in 1837, £146.

BETTWS-JEVAN, or EVAN, a parish in the hund. of Troedysaur, union of Newcastle-in-Emlyn, county of Cardigan, South Wales; 5 miles north by west of Newcastle-in-Emlyn, on elevated ground, between Cardigan bay and the river Tivy. Living, a curacy not in charge, subordinate to the vicarage of Pembroyn. Pop., in 1821, 402; in 1831, 386. Houses 72. A. P. £1,175. Poor rates, in 1837, £193.

BETTWS-LLEUCE, or LEIKI, a parish in the hund. of Moythen, union of Tregaron, county of Cardigan, South Wales; 7 miles north by east of Lampeter. Living, a perpetual curacy not in charge, in the archd. of Cardigan and dio. of St David's, united with the curacy of Llandewy-Brefi; valued at £12 4s., and rated in the parliamentary returns at £80; gross income £50; in the patronage of the perpetual curate of Llandewy-Brefi. There is a Sunday-school here. Pop., in 1821, 355; in 1831, 381. Houses 76. A. P. £2,240. Poor rates, in 1837, £77.

BETTWS-NEWYDD, a parish in the hund. of Ragland, union of Abergavenny, county of Monmouth; $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles north by west of Usk, near the river Usk, over which there is a suspension bridge here. Living, a curacy not in charge, subordinate to the vicarage of Lanarth. There is a Sunday school in this parish, among the poor of which £5 is annually distributed from Davies' charity. Pop., in 1801, 66; in 1831, 108. Houses 19. Acres 1,200. A. P. £611. Poor rates, in 1837, £38.

BETTWS-Y-CEOD, a parish in the hund. of Nant-Conway, union of Llanrwst, county of Caernarvon, North Wales; $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles south of Llanrwst, on the river Llygwy, near its junction with the Conway, and in the immediate vicinity of the post-road to Bangor. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. of Bangor and dio. of St Asaph and Bangor; valued at £3 13s. 4d., and rated in the parliamentary returns at £28; gross income £101; in the patronage of the bishop of St Asaph and Bangor. The church contains the tomb of Gryffyd, grand-nephew of Llewellyn, the last prince of Wales. The Calvinistic Methodists have a place of worship here; the church was formed in 1804. The parish possesses a daily school, and a Sunday school. Here is the picturesque bridge of the cauldron, (Pont-y-Pain,) beneath which is a famous salmon-leap. The Holyhead road passes through this parish. Fairs are held on May 15th and December 3d. Pop., in 1821, 389; in 1831, 348. Houses 74. A. P. £591. Poor rates, in 1837, £170.

BEVERCOATES, a parish in the South Clay division of the wapentake of Bassetlaw, union of East Retford, county of Nottingham; $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles north-west of Tuxford. Living, a vicarage united with that of West Markham. There is no school here, but the male children of the parish have a right to attend the daily school at Haughton and Serlby, free of expense. The church is now in ruins. Pop., in 1801, 30; in 1831, 51. Houses 8. Acres 790. A. P. £731. Poor rates, in 1837, £39.

BEVERLEY, an important borough, market-town and township, within the liberty and union of Beverley, east riding of Yorkshire; 183 miles north of London, 29 east-south-east of York, and 9 north-east of Kingston-upon-Hull, at the foot of the wolds, in the Hunsley-Beacon division of the wapentake of Harthill, and about 1 mile west of the river Hull, with which it is connected by means of a canal. The borough consists of three parishes: St Mary, St Nicholas, and St Martin, with a small portion recently added from the parish of St John. The liberty of which Beverley is the head contains the additional townships of Molescroft, Stockhill with Sandholme, Thearne, Ticton with Hullbridge, Weal, Woodmansey with Beverley park, and part of the township of Aike, all of which are in the parish of St John. The parishes of St John, St Martin, St Mary, and St Nicholas, are within the deanery of Harthill, archdeaconry of the east riding and diocese of York. The living of St John's, to which is annexed that of St Martin's, is a perpetual curacy, valued at £31 6s. 8d.; gross income £183; in the patronage of the corporation. The church of St Martin no longer exists. The church of St John—popularly called Beverley minster—is a collegiate church, of which the following history is given by Tanner:—"John, archbishop of York, afterwards called St John of Beverley, is said to have founded, about the year 700, in the choir of the parish-church here, a convent of monks dedicated to St John the Baptist; in the nave of the church, a college of seven secular canons with seven clerks, to the honour of St John the Evangelist; and in the chapel of St Martin, adjoining this church, a society of religious virgins or nuns; but, about 160 years after, the religious here were murdered, and the church and buildings plundered and burnt to the ground by the Danes. Not long after, some of the seculars who had fled from and escaped the Danish fury, began to settle here again, and to repair the church, which was completed and endowed with revenues for seven canons, and with large privileges, (to the honour of St John of Beverley,) by King Athelstan, and the favour and bounty of succeeding kings, and of the archbishops of York, who claimed the immediate patronage. This collegiate society flourished to that degree that it consisted at the dissolution of a provost, eight prebendaries, a chancellor, preceptor, seven rectors choral, nine vicars choral, with many chantry priests, clerks, choristers, officers and servants. The provostship was rated, 26th Henry VIII., at £109 8s. 8d.; the prebend of St Michael at £31 13s. 4d.; of St Peter, at £46 6s. 11d.; of St Martin, at £39 11s. 1d.; of St Catherine, at £10 18s. 4d.; of St Mary, at £35 17s.; of St Stephen, at £44; of St Andrews, at £48 16s. 1d.; of St James, at £47 1s. 4d.; the chancellorship, at £13 16s.; the precentorship, at £13 9s. 4d.; the fabric lands, at £18 3s. 8d.; the rectors choral had lands in common to the yearly value of £8 13s. 7d., besides a pension of £6 13s. 4d. to every one of them. The vicars choral had in common £12 per annum, and a pension of £8 to every one of them." The town owed the origin of its prosperity to this monastic establishment. St John of Beverley, to whom the church is dedicated, was born at Harpham on the wolds, about the year 640; he held the see of York for 33 years, with a reputation for great sanctity, and afterwards retired to finish his days in obscurity and devotion in the monastery which he had founded here. "He was educated," says Fuller, "under Theodorus the Grecian, and archbishop of Canterbury. Yet was he not so famous for his teacher as for his scholar, Venerable Bede, who wrote this John's life, which he hath so spiced with miracles that it is of the hottest for a discreet man to digest into his belief." After his death—which took place in 721—he was canonized by the title of St John of Beverley; and his memory was held in such veneration, that when William the Conqueror advanced within 7 miles of the town, he issued strict orders that his army should respect the property of the monastery. The day of his death was appointed to be kept holy, and the festival of his translation, October 25th, was ordered in 1416, to be annually celebrated, in commemoration of the battle of Agincourt, the gaining of which was superstitiously attributed to his influence. The original building was almost entirely destroyed by fire in 1188. The present edifice is supposed to have been completed in the early part of the reign of Henry III.: it is a venerable cruciform structure, with two noble towers at the west end. Notwithstanding the mixture of styles which this structure presents, it is considered equal in purity of composition, correctness of detail, and elegance of execution, to any of the great English cathedrals. Mr Rickman says: "The north porch of Beverley minster is, as a panelled front, perhaps unequalled. The door has a double canopy, the inner an ogee, and the outer a triangle, with beautiful crockets and tracery, and is flanked by fine buttresses breaking into niches, and the space above the canopy to the cornice is panelled; the battlement is composed of rich niches, and the buttresses crowned by a group of four pinnacles." Of perpendicular fronts, the same author says, "by far the finest is that of Beverley minster. What the west front of York is to the decorated style, this is to the perpendicular, with this addition, that in this front nothing but one style is seen; all is harmonious. Like

York minster, it consists of a very large west window to the nave, and two towers for the end of the aisles. This window is of nine lights, and the tower windows of three lights. The windows in the tower correspond in range nearly with those of the aisles and clerestory windows of the nave; the upper windows of the tower are belfry windows. Each tower has four large and eight small pinnacles, and a very beautiful battlement. The whole front is panelled, and the buttresses, which have a very bold projection, are ornamented with various tiers of niche-work, of excellent composition, and most delicate execution. The doors are uncommonly rich, and have the hanging feathered ornament; the canopy of the great centre door runs up above the sill of the window, and stands free in the centre light with a very fine effect. The gable has a real tympanum, which is filled with fine tracery. The east front is fine, but mixed with early English." In the body of the choir is a beautiful monument to a female member of the Percy family, and in the north transept is an altar-tomb, both of which are in the decorated style. The right of sanctuary was conferred on this church by Athelstan, and extended for a mile round the town, the limits being marked by four stone crosses, set up at the principal approaches. The collegiate church of Beverley, until the dissolution in 1544, exercised a jurisdiction over Beverley and several other parishes, namely, Brandsburton, Cherryburton, Leckonfield, Leven, Middleton on the wolds, Ottringham, Patrington, Sigglesthorne, Scorbrough, South Dalton, and Welwick, to which Bacon adds Halsham and Rise. The great and small tithes of St John in Beverley and Skidby, the property of Trinity college, Cambridge, and the lay-impropriator, were commuted in 1785. The estates of the minster now produce an annual revenue of about £3,000, a portion of which is appropriated to keeping the edifice in repair.—The living of St Mary's is a vicarage, valued at £14 2s. 8½d., to which is united the rectory of St Nicholas, valued at £5 0s. 10d.; gross income of both £340; in the patronage of the Crown. The church of St Nicholas has long ago fallen into ruin. That of St Mary is an elegant structure, consisting of a nave, transept, chancel, and aisles. At the west end there are two finely pierced and embattled octagonal turrets. The chancel, which is divided from the aisles by five pointed arches, has a lofty and beautifully groined roof, with well-proportioned arches and piers. This church also contains some interesting monuments, and an ancient baptismal font. It possesses a reparation fund, which now produces £800 per annum. The Baptists, Roman Catholics, Society of Friends, Independents, and Methodists, have places of worship here. The first Baptist church was formed about 1791; the second in 1833; the Independent in 1701; a Wesleyan Methodist in 1814.—There is a grammar-school here; the date of its origin appears to be very ancient, but the name of the founder is unknown. It is endowed with £10 per annum, bequeathed in 1652 by Dr Metcalf; which sum is increased by the corporation to £100. The master is also entitled to receive 40s. per annum from each scholar, and has the privilege of taking boarders. The management of this school is vested in the corporation. Scholars from this school are entitled to three scholarships of £6 13s. 4d. per annum each, founded by Dr Metcalf; to one of £6 per annum, founded by William Coates, Esq.; and to two of £8 per annum each, founded by Dr William Lacey, all in St John's college, Cambridge; and to one of £10 per annum, in St John's or Corpus Christi college, founded by Dr Green, bishop of Lincoln.—Here is a Blue-coat charity school for the maintenance, clothing, and education of poor children. It was founded in 1709 by subscription, and has been endowed by various benefactors with property, which now produces an annual income of £126 8s. 8d.; ten boys are educated here, each of whom is apprenticed on leaving school, with a fee of £3.—In 1804, Mr James Graves founded a school for 200 children of both sexes, and endowed it with £84 per annum, drawn from stock in the navy five per cents.; the girls in this establishment are instructed on the system of Dr Bell, and the boys on that of Mr Lancaster. There are also, besides, a Central National school, 22 daily, and 6 Sunday schools, connected with the borough and liberties of Beverley.—In 1636, Mr Thwaite Fox founded alms-houses for four poor widows, with an endowment which yields to each of them 10s. per month. Alms-houses for 32 widows, with a matron and two nurses, were founded and endowed, in 1721, by Mrs Anne Routh. Each of the inmates receives a weekly allowance of 5s., in addition to which the matron receives 2s. 6d., and each of the nurses 2s.—Mr Charles Warton, in 1712, founded an hospital with 14 apartments, for a like number of widows; the endowment consists of property, which now yields a revenue of £404 2s., from which each widow receives a weekly allowance of 4s.—There are, besides these, 26 unendowed alms-houses erected by the corporation, the inmates of which participate in the benefits of several minor charitable bequests. An estate, which now produces from £70 to £100 per annum, was bequeathed in 1711 by Mr Robert Stephenson, for the support of 'Nonconformist preaching ministers'; and, in 1724, Sir Michael Warton, knight, bequeathed 4,000, as a perpetual fund for keeping the minster in repair. Other charities connected with the borough produce about £205 per annum.

The town of Beverley is handsome and well-built. It consists of several streets; the principal one is nearly 1 mile in length, and terminates in an ancient gateway. The streets are lighted and well-paved, and there is a good supply of water; the environs are agreeable, and the air is considered very salubrious. The poorer classes of inhabitants are partially employed in the manufacture of bone-lace. It has considerable trade in coals, corn, oatmeal, malt, and leather, which is much facilitated by a canal called Beverley beck, communicating with the river Hull. This cut appears to have been navigable so early as 1344. The market-days are Wednesday and Saturday, the latter being the most important. Fairs for horses, horned cattle, and sheep, are held on the Thursday before February 25th, Holy Thursday, July 5th, and November 5th. The principal markets for cattle are held on April 5th, Wednesday before May 12th, September 14th, and Wednesday after December 25th. The market-place is a spacious area, with a cross supported on eight pillars. Races take place annually in May on Hurnmeadow, one of the four common pastures belonging to the town. A railway from Beverley to Hull has been proposed.

This borough is now divided into two wards: St. Mary's and Minster,—to each of which 9 councillors are assigned. The burgesses have each a right of pasturage for 12 or 13 head of cattle on the common lands, of 1,174 acres in extent. They also claim exemption from toll and custom in every town and port in England,—a privilege said to have been conferred by King Athelstan, and commemorated by an ancient table which hangs in the south transept of the minster, exhibiting the portraits of St. John of Beverley and King Athelstan, with this distich:—

"Als free make I thee,
As hort may thyneke, or egh see."

Beverley is considered as the capital of the east riding; the quarter-sessions for that division are held in the guild-hall here, and the petty-sessions for the division of Hunsley Beacon in the New sessions-house. The guild-hall—which is better known in Beverley by the name of the Hallgarth—is a handsome building, containing the apartments in which the business of the corporation is conducted, the sessions-hall, and an office for the registration of wills and other deeds. In 1832 the corporation new-fronted the town-hall, and built the adjoining prison at an expense of £4,000. It is detached from other buildings, and appropriated to the reception of debtors and prisoners under examination,—the borough, since the passing of the municipal act, having received no grant of quarter-sessions. The gaol consists of three distinct ranges, with as many airing-yards, divided by lofty walls, and 13 sleeping cells. It is seldom used, except for debtors from the borough-court and those from a jurisdiction over the town and liberties of Beverley for the recovery of small debts. The house of correction for the east riding stands at a short distance from the town, and cost £42,000 in erection. It is connected with the sessions-house, and surrounded by a boundary-wall. Since the passing of the gaol acts it has been enlarged by the addition of three wings, with airing-yards between each, and a central building containing apartments for the turnkeys. It possesses 40 tread-wheel houses,—to which labour both males and females are subjected,—101 cells, 14 wards, and 14 airing-yards. The number of prisoners, in 1837, was 234. Of these 58 could neither read nor write, and 10 could read and write well. Beverley returned two members to parliament in the reign of Edward I, from which period till the 5th of Elizabeth, the privilege was not exerted. Since the latter time it has regularly returned two members. The parishes of St Martin and St Nicholas, and part of the parish of St John, unite with Beverley under the reform act, in returning two members. Beverley is also the place of nomination, and one of the polling-places in the election of members for the east riding of the county. Beverley is supposed to have been the birth-place of Alfred de Beverley, a monkish historian of the 12th century. Among the distinguished men who were natives of this place we may mention Dr John Alcock, bishop of Ely, and founder of Jesus' college, Cambridge; Dr Fisher, bishop of Rochester, the victim of the intolerance of Henry VIII.; and Dr John Green, bishop of Lincoln, an elegant scholar, and one of the authors of the 'Athenian letters,' published by the earl of Hardwicke. Pop., in 1801, 6,033; in 1831, 8,302. Houses 1,805. Acres 9,370. A. P. £33,569. Poor rates, in 1837, £2,664.—The Beverley poor-law union comprehends 36 parishes, embracing an area of 118 square miles; with a population returned, in 1831, at 16,614. The average annual expenditure on the poor of this district, during the three years preceding the formation of the union, was £7,069. Expenditure, in 1838, £5,013.

BEVERLEY-PARK. See WOODMANSEA.

BEVERSTONE, a parish in the upper division of the hund. of Berkeley, union of Tetbury, county of Gloucester; 2 miles west-north-west of Tetbury. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Gloucester and dio. of Gloucester and Bristol; valued at £30, united with the curacy of Kingscote; gross income £595; in the patronage of the Crown. The great and small tithes, the property of the clerical rector, were commuted in 1803. There are two daily schools in this parish. Here are some remains of a moated castle erected in the reign of Edward III., by Thomas, Lord Berkeley. In the parliamentary wars it was repeatedly besieged, and finally taken and burnt. Pop., in 1801, 150; in 1831, 174. Houses 30. Acres 2,360. A. P. £2,304. Poor rates, in 1837, £42.

BEWALDETH AND SNITTELEGARTH, a township in the parish of Torpenhow, ward of Allerdale below Darwent, county of Cumberland; $6\frac{1}{2}$ miles north-east of Cockermouth, in the neighbourhood of the Carlisle railroad. All tithes, moduses, &c. of the manor of Bewaldeth, the property of the vicar, were commuted in 1814. Pop., in 1801, 55; in 1831, 172. Houses 12. Acreage with the parish. A. P. £838. Poor rates, in 1837, £45.

BEWCASTLE, a parish and township in the ward of Eskdale, union of Longtown, county of Cumberland; 10 miles north by east of Brampton, within 6 miles of the Carlisle and Newcastle railroad. It comprises the townships of Bailie, Belbank, and Nixons. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Carlisle; valued at £2, and in the parliamentary returns at £182; gross income £92; in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Carlisle. The parish possesses three daily schools, one of which has a small endowment. In the churchyard is a curious obelisk composed of a single block of stone, bearing inscriptions which are supposed to be of Danish origin. The Scots Presbyterians and Independents have places of worship here. The rivers Levan and Irthing have their sources in this parish. Coal and lead-ore are found here. A market and fair was formerly held here, for which John Swinburn obtained license in the reign of Edward I., but has long ago fallen into disuse. This was anciently a Roman station, garrisoned by the Legio Secunda Augusta, and many relics of that people have been found in the neighbourhood. Some vestiges of Bewcastle, a fortress built by Bueth, lord of Gilsland, soon after the conquest, are yet to be seen here. It was occupied by a border-garrison in the reign of Elizabeth, and in 1641 was demolished by the army of the parliament. Pop., in 1801, 917; in 1831, 1,336. Houses 251. Acres 26,640. A. P. £1,268. Poor rates, in 1837, £876.

BEWDLEY, a borough, market-town, and chapel-ry, having separate jurisdiction, in the parish of Ribbesford, lower division of the hund. of Doddingtree, union of Kidderminster, county of Worcester; 120 miles north-west of London, and 14 north-north-west of Worcester, on the western bank of the Severn, and in the neighbourhood of the Worcester and Stafford canal. Living, a perpetual curacy to the rectory of Ribbesford, in the archd. of Salop and dio. of Hereford; it is valued in the parliamentary returns at £34; gross income £100; in the patronage of the rector of Ribbesford. The chapel, erected in 1748, is a neat stone edifice at the upper end of the street leading from the bridge. The Wesleyan Methodists, Baptists, Society of Friends, and Unitarians, have places of worship here. The Baptist church was formed in 1649; the Unitarian in 1696.—Here is a free grammar-school, of which the corporation are trustees, founded and endowed in 1591 by William Monnox, and further endowed in 1599 by Humphrey Hill. It was made a royal foundation by charter of James I., and the master now receives a salary of £26 per annum, and has a house rent-free. In the school is kept a library, for the general use of the inhabitants, given by the Rev. Thomas Wigan, and under the charge of the master and the rector of Ribbesford.—There are also seven daily and six infant schools, in which 438 children are instructed, besides three Sunday schools, for one of which the Rev. J. Cawood has lately built, at a cost of more than two hundred guineas, a large house in the forest of Wyre.—Here are six almshouses for aged men, founded and endowed with £30 per annum by Mr Sayer, of Nettlestead, in the county of Suffolk; the buildings were re-erected in 1763, by Sir Edward Winnington, Bart., member for the borough.—Burton's almshouses, for fourteen aged women, were founded and endowed in 1645.—Mr Thomas Cook, in 1693, founded eight other almshouses with a small endowment. The property called the Mill and Meadow, is vested in the corporation of Bewdley, and produces £26 15s. per annum. This sum is distributed amongst the poor, according to the size of their families.

The chapel-ry of Bewdley includes the hamlet of Wribbenhall, which, though separated from the borough by the Severn, is connected with it by a handsome bridge, erected in 1797, and, for all the purposes of intercourse and interest, forms a portion of the town. The scenery in the neighbourhood is remarkably fine and the situation pleasant, from which circumstances it received the name of Beau lieu, from which its present name has been derived by corruption. Bewdley was originally an extraparochial liberty, but was united to the parish of Ribbesford, by letters patent of Henry IV. Among its numerous privileges we may notice that of sanctuary for persons who had committed homicide or murder. It was originally included within the marches of Wales, but was united to the county of Worcester by an act of parliament passed in the reign of Henry VIII. It has been a royal domain since the reign of Henry VII., who erected here a palace for his son Arthur, in which that prince was married by proxy to Catharine of Arragon. The palace suffered much in the parliamentary war, and was subsequently taken down and the site built upon, so that no traces whatever of the original edifice remain. After the retreat of Charles I. from Oxford, he took refuge for a time in this town. The town stands on a rising ground on the western bank of the river Severn, over which a very handsome stone-bridge was erected in 1797. The houses are in general well-built and of a respectable aspect, and the streets are neat, clean, and well-paved, but neither lighted nor watched at any period of the year. The inhabitants have a plentiful supply of water, and the air is salubrious. The environs are delightful and present richly diversified scenery, and the general aspect of the town itself, situated on an eminence, with the houses built at different altitudes and alternating with trees and gardens, is remarkably picturesque. The commerce of Bewdley, which is considerable, is chiefly connected with the carrying trade on the river Severn. It was formerly the mart from which the neighbouring towns were supplied with many imported articles of consumption, but this trade has fallen off very much, in consequence of the recent construction of a canal from Stourport to Stourbridge. The tanning of leather is carried on to a considerable extent, and much malt is made for exportation. The principal manufacture is that of comb-making; and in Wribbenhall a manufactory for carpets has been recently established. Markets were formerly held here twice a-week, but only one is now held, on Saturday. Fairs for cattle, horses, cheese, and linen and woollen cloth, are held on the 23d of April, Monday before the 28th of July, and the 11th of December. On December 10th a fair is held for hogs only.

This borough was first made a corporate-town by Edward IV., in the 12th year of his reign. The charter under which it is now governed was granted by James I., surrendered to Charles II. and James II., and restored by Anne. The government was vested in a bailiff, high steward, recorder, deputy recorder, and 12 capital burgesses, with a town-clerk and other officers; under the municipal reform act, it is governed by 2 bailiffs, 4 aldermen, and 12 councillors. The town-hall, erected in 1818, is a handsome building of stone, with three arches in front, under which is the entrance to the market-place, which has arcades on each side for stalls, and an open area in the centre. Bewdley, with the parish of Ribbesford, and the hamlets of Wribbenhall, Hoarstone, Blackstone, Netherton, and Lower Mitton with Lickhill, under the reform act, returns one member to parliament. The elective franchise was originally conferred by James I. on the bailiff and twelve burgesses alone. Number of electors, in 1837, 400. Pop., in 1801, 3,671; in 1831, 3,908. Houses 867. Acres 4,330. A. P. £4,372. Poor rates, in 1837, £1,074.

BEWERLEY, a township in the parish of Ripon, lower division of the wapentake of Claro, west riding of Yorkshire; 8 miles north-west of Ripley. This township, with that of Dacre, possesses one daily school, four day and Sunday schools, one of which is supported by an endowment of £20 per annum, and another by Mr Yorke, and two Sunday schools. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the lead mines in the neighbourhood. Pop., in 1821, 1,408; in 1831, 1,310. Houses 207. Acres 5,320. Assessed property included with the township of Dacre. Poor rates, in 1837, £540.

BEWICK (NEW), a township in the parish of Eglingham, northern division of Coquetdale ward, county of Northumberland; $7\frac{1}{2}$ miles south-east by south of Wooler. Pop., in 1801, 63; in 1831, 106. Houses 16. Acreage with the parish. Poor rates, in 1837, £19.

BEWICK (OLD), a township in the parish of Eglingham, northern division of Coquetdale ward, county of Northumberland; $6\frac{1}{2}$ miles south-east of Wooler. There is a daily school here, containing 40 pupils. Pop., in 1801, 187; in 1831, 227. Houses 42. Acreage with the parish. Poor rates, in 1837, £156.

BEWSBOROUGH HUNDRED, lathe of St Augustine, county of Kent. Area 17,510 acres. Houses 2,416. Pop., in 1831, 13,208.

BEXHILL, a parish and hund. in the rape of Hastings, union of Battle, county of Sussex; 6 miles west of Hastings, near the coast. Living, a vicarage in the archd. of Lewes and dio. of Chichester; valued at £24 10s. 2d.; gross income £1,494; nett income £977; in the patronage of the bishop of Chichester. There are four daily schools here, in which 127 children receive instruction, besides a day and Sunday school. The hundred possessed privileges as a franchise similar to those possessed by that of Battle. This parish contains several chalybeate springs, and is considered remarkably healthy. Pop., in 1801, 1,091; in 1831, 1,931. Houses 367. Acres 7,900. A. P. £6,439. Poor rates, in 1837, £1,233.

BEXINGTON, a hamlet, formerly a parish, in the liberty of Bindon, parish of Abbotsbury, hund. of Uggescombe, Dorchester division of the county of Dorset; $\frac{1}{2}$ mile west by south of Abbotsbury. "This vill, anciently a distinct parish and a manor, in the liberty of Bindon, is now reduced to a farmhouse and two or three cottages. The church of Bexington, dedicated to St Giles in 1541, stands near the sea-shore, and only some small part of the wall remains. The patron of the rectory was anciently the abbot of Abbotsbury, since the dissolution, the lords of Puncknoll, to which it was annexed, 9th September, 1451. In 1291 it was valued at £5."—Hutchins' Dorset, vol. i. Returns with the parish.

BEXLEY, a parish partly in the hund. of Lessness, and partly in that of Ruxley, lathe of Sutton-at-Hone, union of Dartford, county of Kent; 3 miles west by south of Dartford, on the post-road to Deptford, and intersected by the Central Kent railway. This parish contains the hamlets of Blendon, Bridgen, Halfway-street, Hurst, Upton, and the south of Welling. Living, a vicarage in the deanery of Shoreham, and under the peculiar jurisdiction of the archbishop of Canterbury; valued at £13 4s. 7d.; gross income £720; nett income £592. Patron, in 1835, Viscount Sydney. The church contains several ancient monuments, among which are some to members of the Austin family. The parish possesses 15 daily schools, containing, collectively, 492 scholars, and 5 Sunday schools. Here is a Baptist church, formed in 1810. Here are alms-houses for 12 persons. From before the Conquest, this manor belonged to the see of Canterbury, and was alienated, with all the other lands belonging to his see, by Archbishop Crammer, to Henry VIII. Sir John Spilman, who obtained a grant of it from James I., sold it in the reign of Elizabeth to the celebrated antiquary, Camden, who bequeathed it in trust to the master and fellows of the university college, Oxford, for the foundation and endowment of a professorship of history. The inclosure of Bexley heath has tended to increase the population of the parish. Pop., in 1801, 1,441; in 1831, 2,306. Houses 601. Acres 5,370. A. P. £12,115. Poor rates, in 1837, £1,326.

BEXTON, a township in the parish of Knutsford, hund. of Bucklow, co.-palatine of Chester; 1 mile south-south-east of Nether-Knutsford. Pop., in 1801, 49; in 1831, 76. Houses 11. Acres 540. A. P. £1,224. Poor rates, in 1837, £68.

BEXWELL, a parish in the hund. of Clackclose, union of Downham, county of Norfolk; 1 mile east of Downham-Market. Living, a discharged rectory, formerly in the archd. of Norfolk and dio. of Norwich, now in the dio. of Ely; valued at £7 11s. 8d.; gross income £380; in the patronage of the bishop of Ely. Pop., in 1801, 65; in 1831, 53. Houses 11. Acres 1,280. A. P. £1,385. Poor rates, in 1837, £17.

BEYNHURST HUNDRED, in the county of Berks; bounded on the north and north-west by the Thames; on the east by the hund. of Bray; on the south-east by Ripplesmere hund.; and on the south and south-west by that of Wargrave. Area 13,020 acres. Houses 638. Pop., in 1831, 3,424.

BEYTON. See BEXINGTON, Suffolk.

BIBURY, a parish, partly in the hund. of Bradley, and partly in that of Brightwell's Barrow, union of Northleach, county of Gloucester; 4 miles north-west of Fairford, intersected by the proposed Ireland, Cheltenham, and London Junction railway. It contains the chapel of Winson, the township of Bibury, and the tythings of Ablington and Arlington. Living, a discharged vicarage, united with the curacy of Winson; valued at £13 1s. 5d.; gross income £1,045; a peculiar, within which the vicar exercises concurrent jurisdiction with the consistory court of Gloucester. Patron, in 1835, Lord Sherborne. The north and south doors of the church, supposed to have been rebuilt by the works of Osenay, are of Norman architecture. All tithes, the property of the lay-impropriator and vicar, were commuted in 1767. There are two daily schools here, one of which, on the Lancasterian system, is partly supported by an allowance of £5 per annum from Lord Sherborne, who has also provided the necessary accommodation, and a day and boarding school. There is an alms-house here, endowed by Hugh Westwood, for four poor men. It is a stone building, consisting of four apartments. Other charities connected with the parish produce £11 per annum. Petty-sessions for the division of Bibury are held at the Swan inn here. Races take place in July. Pop., in 1801, 852; in 1831, 850. Houses 201. Acres 6,300. A. P. £2,022. Poor rates, in 1837, £329.

BICESTER, a market-town and parish in the hund. of Ploughley, union of Bicester, county of Oxford; 12 miles north-north-east of Oxford, on the post-road to Banbury. The town, which occupies a low position on the eastern border of the county, is neat, and possessed of some handsome edifices. Living, a vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Oxford; valued at £16; gross income £252. Patron, in 1835, Sir George O. P. Turner, Bart. The church is a spacious edifice, erected in 1400, on the site of a still more ancient edifice, and contains many interesting monuments with some antique sculptures. The Wesleyan Methodists have a place of worship here, and there are two Independent churches; one of them formed in 1730. The Methodist church was formed in 1816. Lands producing £200 per annum, and a few minor charitable foundations, are here appropriated to the relief of the poor. Here is a school for the instruction and clothing of 30 boys, supported partly by subscription, and partly by endowment. In 1811, Mr Walker gave £1,000 stock, of the interest of which £14 is annually divided between two Sunday schools, the one of which is connected with the established church, and the other with the Dissenters, and the remainder is given to the school above-mentioned. There are, besides these, two daily and five infant schools in this parish.—Under the Saxons, the name of this place was Burenceaster, or Bernaceaster, implying a fortified place, and has been variously derived from its vicinity to Bernwood, a forest in the county of Buckingham, and from the name of its supposed founder, Birinus, a canonized Saxon prelate. Tanner, in his 'Notitia,' says, "Gilbert Basset, baron of Hedingdon, built a monastery here, A. D. 1182, for a prior and eleven black canons, to the honour of St Mary and St Edburgh. It was valued, 26th Henry VIII., at £167 2s. 10d., and granted, 30th Henry VIII., to Charles, duke of Suffolk." In 1819, some workmen, in making excavations, discovered the foundations of the conventual buildings, in which many relics of various kinds were found. "A royal license," says Tanner, "was granted, A. D. 1355, to Nicholas Jurdan, hermit, warden of the chapel of St John the Baptist here, to found a new hospital in this town for poor and infirm people, to the honour of the blessed Virgin and St John the Baptist, and to purchase lands for the endowment of it, to the value of £5 per annum." This design does not appear ever to have been put into execution. The parish is divided into the two townships of King's End and Market End, each maintaining its own poor; part of the latter is in the parish of Caversfield, within the counties of both Oxford and Buckingham. The chief business of the inhabitants arises from the well-attended markets and cattle-fairs; the town is also celebrated for ale. Friday is market-day. Fairs are held on the Friday in Easter week, on Whit-Monday, on the first Friday in June, August 5th, and December 17th, for horses, cows, sheep, pigs, wool, &c.; and on the Friday after old Michaelmas, and October 10th, for hiring servants. The town is within the jurisdiction of the county-magistrates, who hold the petty-sessions for the hundred of Ploughley here. Races take place here in September. This town suffered from both parties during the civil war in the reign of Charles I., and, in 1643, the royalists were defeated in a skirmish here. Pop., in 1801, 1,946; in 1831, 2,868. Houses 565. Acres 2,580. A. P. £8,268. Poor rates, in 1837, £1,908. —A workhouse has been erected here for the union of Bicester, by the poor-law commissioners, at an expense of £4,640, capable of accommodating 350 persons. The Bicester poor-law union comprehends 38 parishes, embracing an area of 103 square miles, with a population returned, in 1831, at 14,850. The average annual expenditure on the poor of this district, during the three years preceding the formation of the union, was £15,327. Expenditure, in 1838, £8,090.

BICKENHALL, a parochial chapelry in the division of Ilminster, hund. of Abddick and Bulstone, county of Somerset; 5 miles south-east of Taunton, in the neighbourhood of the Bristol and Exeter railway, and the Bridgewater and Taunton canal. Living, a perpetual curacy subordinate to the rectory of Staple-Fitzpaine. There is a daily school here. Pop., in 1801, 155; in 1831, 270. Houses 40. Acres 1,090. A. P. £1,067. Poor rates, in 1837, £89.

BICKENHILL (CHURCH), a parish in the Solihull division of the hund. of Hemlingford, union of Meriden, county of Warwick, including the quarters of Lyndon and Marston; 4½ miles south-south-west of Coles Hill, on the line of the Birmingham and London railway, and in the vicinity of the Birmingham and Warwick canal. Living, a discharged vicarage, formerly in the archd. of Coventry and dio. of Lichfield and Coventry, now in the dio. of Worcester; valued at £7 17s. 3d.; gross income £222. Patron, in 1835, the Earl of Aylesford. The great and small tithes of Bickenhill and Diddington, the property of the lay-impropriator and vicar, were commuted in 1818. There is a daily school here. Pop., in 1801, 664; in 1831, 725. Houses 143. Acres 3,810. A. P. £3,844. Poor rates, in 1837, £428.

BICKER, a parish in the wapentake of Kirton, parts of Holland, union of Boston, county of Lincoln; 9½ miles north-east by east of Folkingham. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Lincoln; valued at £15; gross income £560; in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Lincoln. The great and vicarial tithes, the property of the dean and chapter of Lincoln, and the vicar, were commuted in 1768. There are three daily schools here, one of which is endowed with the rent of an acre of land bequeathed by Thomas Copley, Esq., late of Donnington. Pop., in 1801, 485; in 1831, with the extra-parochial liberties of Coppin-syke and Ferry-corner, 712. Houses 156. Acres 3,720. A. P. £6,550. Poor rates, in 1837, £397.

BICKERSTAFFE, a township in the parish of Ormakirk, hund. of West Derby, co.-palatine of Lancaster; 4 miles south-east of Ormakirk. There are three daily schools here, containing 82 pupils. Pop., in 1801, 811; in 1831, 1,309. Houses 214. Acres 5,860. A. P. £6,776. Poor rates, in 1837, £457.

BICKERTON, a township in the parish of Malpas, hund. of Broxton, co.-palatine of Chester; 4 miles north of Malpas. The Chester Junction railway passes 4½ miles north of the township. There is a daily school here, including 63 scholars. Pop., in 1801, 270; in 1831, 373. Houses 73. Acres 1,780. A. P. £1,702. Poor rates, in 1837, £140.

BICKERTON, a township in the parish of Rothbury, western division of Coquetdale-ward, county of Northumberland; 15½ miles south-west of Alnwick, in the immediate neighbourhood of the river Coquet. Here is a school endowed with about £20 per annum. Pop., in 1821, 31; in 1831, 26. Houses 4. Acreage with the parish. Poor rates, in 1837, £13.

BICKERTON, a township in the parish of Bilton, ainstey of the city of York; $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles north-east by east of Wetherby. Pop., in 1801, 127; in 1831, 150. Houses 29. Acres 1,080. A. P. £915. Poor rates, in 1837, £92.

BICKINGTON, a parish in the hund. and division of Teignbridge, union of Bickington, county of Devon; $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles north-east of Ashburton. Living, perpetual curacy annexed to the vicarage of Ashburton. There are three daily schools here, attended by 54 children. Here are two schools with small endowments. Pop., in 1801, 231; in 1831, 351. Houses 57. Acres 1,220. A. P. £1,516. Poor rates, in 1837, £190.

BICKINGTON-ABBOTS. See ABBOTS-BICKINGTON.

BICKINGTON (HIGN), a parish in the South Molton division, hund. of North Tawton with Winkley, county of Devon; 7 miles east by north of Great Torrington, intersected by the river Taw. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Barnstaple and dio. of Exeter; valued at £29 7s. 6d.; gross income £532. Patron, in 1835, W. M. Stowell, Esq. A Baptist church was formed here in 1834. There are six daily schools in the parish, two of which have small endowments. Pop., in 1801, 693; in 1831, 853. Houses 142. Acres 390. A. P. £2,854. Poor rates, in 1837, £285.

BICKLEIGH, a parish in the Collumpton division, hund. of Hayridge, union of Tiverton, county of Devon; 3 miles south-west of Tiverton, intersected by the river Exe, which is here joined by the Dart, and crossed by a bridge near its confluence. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Exeter; valued at £18 4s. 9d.; gross income £434. Patron, in 1835, Sir W. P. Carew, Bart. The church has been recently repaired and improved. There are a daily and a Sunday school here. The celebrated Bamfylde Moore Carew, was the son of the rector of this parish, and was born here in 1693. He received part of his education at Tiverton; but having formed acquaintance with a gipsy-gang in the neighbourhood of that place, and being captivated by their roving mode of life, he deserted the school, and was subsequently made king of the fraternity. After his extraordinary wanderings, he returned to the place of his nativity, and died here in 1758. Charities connected with the parish produce £25 10s. per annum. Pop., in 1801, 297; in 1831, 282. Houses 64. Acres 1,690. A. P. £2,487. Poor rates, in 1837, £123.

BICKLEIGH, a parish in the division and hund. of Roborough, union of Plympton-St-Mary, county of Devon; 6 miles north-north-east of Plymouth, crossed by the Dartmoor railway. Living, a vicarage in the archd. of Totness and dio. of Exeter, with the chapelry of Sheepstor annexed; valued at £11 7s. 4d.; gross income £300. Patron, in 1835, Sir R. Lopez, Bart. There are two daily schools here, containing 28 scholars, and a day and Sunday school. Pop., in 1801, 264; in 1831, 466. Houses 69. Acres 2,960. A. P. £2,281. Poor rates, in 1837, £75.

BICKLEY, a township in the parish of Malpas, higher division of the hund. of Broxton, co.-palatine of Chester; 5 miles north by west of Whitchurch. There are three daily schools here, including 173 children, supported by the marquis of Cholmondeley; to one of which, a lending library is attached. On the 18th of June, 1657, about a quarter of an acre of elevated ground, covered with full-grown trees, sank suddenly here with a thundering noise to such a depth below the surface of the surrounding ground, that even the summits of the trees were not visible, from their total immersion in water: the water has long been dried up, and the chasm, called the Barrel Fall, from being situated on the Barrel farm, is now quite dry. Pop., in 1821, 435; in 1831, 451. Houses 82. Acres 2,200. A. P. £2,064. Poor rates, in 1837, £171.

BICKMERSH AND LITTLE DOBSINGTON, a hamlet in the parish of Welford, Stratford division of the hund. of Barlichway, county of Warwick; 8 miles south-west of Stratford-on-Avon, intersected by the Ikniel-street. Pop., in 1811, 21; in 1831, 65. Houses 12. Acres 1,340. Other returns with the parish.

BICKNOLLER, a parish in the hund. of Williton and Freemanors, Bishops Lydeard division, union of Williton, county of Somerset; 13 miles west by north of Bridgewater. Living, a perpetual curacy, subordinate to the vicarage of Stogumber. There is a daily school here, in which 28 children receive instruction. Near the church are the remains of some ancient fortifications, known by the names of Trendle's castle and Turk's castle. In the neighbourhood many Roman coins have been found from time to time. Pop., in 1801, 246; in 1831, 285. Houses 44. Acres 1,370. A. P. £2,081. Poor rates, in 1837, £94.

BICKNOR (CHURCH), anciently written BYKKNOR, a parish in the upper half-hund. of Eyborne, lathe of Aylesford, union of Hollingbourn, county of Kent; $4\frac{1}{2}$ miles south-west of Milton. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. and dio. of Canterbury; valued at £5 10s., and in the parliamentary returns at £120; gross income £122; in the patronage of the Crown. The church is an ancient and curious building. This place was formerly part of the possessions of a family of the same name. Pop., in 1801, 52; in 1831, 44. Houses 7. Acres 500. A. P. £341. Poor rates, in 1837, £20.

BICKNOR (ENGLISH), a parish in the hund. of St Briavells, union of Monmouth, county of Gloucester; 3 miles north of Colford, on the eastern bank of the Wye. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Gloucester and dio. of Gloucester and Bristol; valued at £13 6s. 8d.; gross income £300; in the patronage of the provost and fellows of Queen's college, Oxford. The church stands within the fosse of an ancient fortification, and beyond it is a jutting promontory round which the river winds romantically. There is a daily school here. Charities connected with the parish produce £10 17s. per annum. This vicinity is remarkable for fine orchards and meadow lands, and a considerable quantity of cider is made. Pop., in 1801, 464; in 1831, 598. Houses 117. Acres 2,440. A. P. £2,081. Poor rates, in 1837, £179.

BICKNOR (WELCH), a parish in the lower division of the hund. of Skenfreh, union and county of Monmouth; 7 miles west by south of Ross, almost encircled by the river Wye. Living, a discharged rectory, formerly in the archd. and dio. of Hereford, now in the dio. of Llandaff; valued at £4 6s. 8d.; gross income £172; in the patronage of the Crown. A recumbent stone-figure in the church, is said to represent the countess of Salisbury, who, as tradition relates, nursed Henry V. at Courtfield, a mansion about half a mile off. Pop., in 1801, 80; in 1831, 91. Houses 16. Acres 960. A. P. £284. Poor rates, in 1837, £59.

BICKTON, a chapelry in the parish of St Chad, within the liberty of the borough of Shrewsbury, county of Salop; $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles north-west by west of Shrewsbury, on the post-road to Oswestry, and intersected by the river Severn, which is here navigable. Living, a perpetual curacy, formerly in the archd. of Salop and dio. of Lichfield and Coventry, now in the dio. of Chester; valued at £20 4s., and rated in the parliamentary returns at £47 10s.; gross income £60; in the patronage of the vicar of St Chad. Pop. returned with the parish.

BICTON, a parish in the division of Woodbury, hund. of east Budleigh, union of St Thomas, county of Devon, including a portion of the tything of Rawleigh; 4 miles west-south-west of Sidmouth, on the coast. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Exeter; valued at £12 13s. 4d.; gross income £237. Patron, in 1835, Lord Rolle. Pop., in 1801, 173; in 1831, 213. Houses 32. Acres 1,180. A. P. £1,966. Poor rates, in 1837, £126.

BIDBOROUGH, a parish and small village in the hund. of Washlingstone, lathe of Aylesford, union of Tunbridge, county of Kent; 3 miles south-west of Tunbridge, in the neighbourhood of the South-Eastern railroad. Living, a discharged rectory, formerly in the archd. and dio. of Rochester, now in the dio. of Canterbury; valued at £5 4s. 4d.; gross income £273. Patrons, in 1835, the trustees of W. Gay, Esq. The church is a very ancient stone-building. There is a daily school in this parish. Pop., in 1801, 157; in 1831, 237. Houses 30. Acres 1,360. A. P. £991. Poor rates, in 1837, £200.

BIDDENDEN, a parish forming the hund. of Barclay, in the lathe of Scray, union of Tenterden, county of Kent; 5 miles east by north of Cranbrook, in the vicinity of the South-Eastern railroad. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Canterbury; valued at £35, and in the parliamentary returns at £108; gross income £669; nett income £436; in the patronage of the archbishop of Canterbury. There are three daily schools here, one of which is endowed with an annual rent charge of £20 3s. 4d. by John Mayne. For this sum the teacher instructs 15 children, and keeps a large and very old school-house in repair. There are also two Sunday schools. A fair is held here, on November 8th, for cattle and horses. Pop., in 1801, 1,151; in 1831, 1,658. Houses 223. Acres 7,110. A. P. £6,356. Poor rates, in 1837, £1,073.

BIDDENHAM, a parish in the hund. of Willey, union and county of Bedford; 2 miles west of Bedford. Living, a discharged vicarage, formerly in the archd. of Bedford and dio. of Lincoln, now in the dio. of Ely; valued at £8; gross income £100. Patron, in 1835, the honourable G. R. Trevor. There are three daily schools here, principally for lace-making, and two Sunday schools. Charities connected with the parish produce £15 per annum. Pop., in 1801, 252; in 1831, 369. Houses 59. Acres 1,760. A. P. £1,933. Poor rates, in 1837, £158.

BIDDESCOTE, a township in the parish of Tamworth, southern division of the hund. of Offlow, county of Stafford; $\frac{1}{2}$ mile south-west of Tamworth, in the immediate vicinity of the Birmingham and Derby railway, and the Coventry canal. Pop., in 1801, 84; in 1831, 11. Houses 2. Acres 350. Other returns with the parish.

BIDDESHAM, a parish in the hund. of Bempstone, union of Axbridge, county of Somerset; 3 miles west by south of Axbridge, intersected by the river Axe, and in the neighbourhood of the Bristol and Exeter railway. Living, a perpetual curacy subordinate to the vicarage of Compton-Dundon. Pop., in 1801, 88; in 1831, 158. Houses 25. Acres 510. A. P. £1,756. Poor rates, in 1837, £88.

BIDDESTONE (ST NICHOLAS AND ST PETER), a parish in the hund. and union of Chippenham, county of Wilts; 4 miles west of Chippenham, in the vicinity of the Great Western railroad. Living, a discharged rectory, composed of the united rectories of St Nicholas and St Peter, with the perpetual curacy of Slaughterford, formerly in the archd. of Wilts and dio. of Salisbury, now in the dio. of Gloucester and Bristol; valued at £2 18s. 4d., and in the parliamentary returns at £140; gross income £112; in the patronage of the warden and fellows of Winchester college. In the church of St Nicholas is a monument to Edmund Smith, the translator of Longinus, and author of the tragedy of Phædra and Hippolytus. There are three daily and two Sunday schools in this parish. Pop., in 1801, 331; in 1831, 454. Houses 93. Acres 2,530. A. P. £2,435. Poor rates, in 1837, £92.

BIDDICK (South), a township in the parish of Houghton-le-Spring, Eastington ward, county of Durham; 6 miles west-south-west of Sunderland, on the line of the Durham Junction railway. There are two daily schools here. Pop., in 1801, 490; in 1831, 199. Houses 48. Acres 280. Poor rates, in 1837, £241.

BIDDLESDEN, or BITTLESDEN, a parish in the second division of the three hundreds of Buckingham, county of Buckingham; $\frac{3}{4}$ miles north-east of Brackley. Living, a perpetual curacy, formerly in the archd. of Buckingham and dio. of Lincoln, now in the dio. of Oxford; valued at £6 8s., rated in the parliamentary returns at £55; gross income £72. Patron, in 1835, G. Morgan, Esq. "Ernald de Bosco, steward to Robert, earl of Leicester, gave this village to the Cistercian monks of Gerondon, to the intent that an abbey of the same order might be founded here, which was accordingly begun A.D. 1147. It was dedicated to St Mary and St Nicholas, and had, at the dissolution, annual revenues rated at £143 1s. 3d. There belonged to this house eleven monks and fifty-one servants. The site passed from the crown, 32d Henry VIII., to Thomas Wriothesley." Tanner's Not. Mon. "On the destruction of the abbey the parishioners resorted to a small chapel adjoining to a dwelling-house; this was a little tiled fabric and had a bell in a turret. I presume it was sometimes made use of in the time of the abbey by the parishioners, especially on common days. It was, as appears by old deeds, dedicated to St Margaret, on whose festival here was a fair granted to the convent, in 1315, 8th Edward II., and also a Monday market. This parish contains 1700 acres." Willis's Hist. of Bucks. Adjoining Biddlesden house there is a modern chapel, appropriated to the use of the parishioners. A Sunday school, in which 70 children are instructed, is supported by George Morgan, Esq. Pop., in 1801, 147; in 1831, 184. Houses 33. Acres 1,630. A. P. £2,119. Poor rates, in 1837, £49.

BIDDLESTONE, or BIDDLESTON, a township in the parish of Allenton, western division of Coquetdale ward, county of Northumberland; 15 miles west by south of Alnwick. There is a Roman Catholic chapel here. Biddlestone has long been the seat and manor of the ancient and honourable Catholic family of the Selbys. The first of this name obtained a grant of Biddlestone—which formerly belonged to the Viscounts—from Edward I. in 1272. Pop., in 1801, 186; in 1831, 156. Houses 27. Acreage with the parish. Poor rates, in 1837, £27.

BIDDULPH, a parish in the northern division of the hund. of Firehill, union of Congleton, county of Stafford; $\frac{5}{8}$ miles west-north-west of Leek, in the neighbourhood of the Macclesfield canal, and the Manchester and Birmingham railroad. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Stafford and dio. of Lichfield and Coventry; valued at £4 9s. 8d., and in the parliamentary returns at £86; gross income £122. Patron, in 1835, J. Bateman, Esq. There are three daily schools here, one of which is endowed with £14 per annum, and three Sunday schools. Several charities connected with this parish have been lost; those which remain produce, beside the school-endowment, £5 6s. per annum. The inhabitants are employed in iron-works, collieries, potteries, and cotton manufactories, which are numerous in the neighbourhood. There are 112 men connected with coal mines alone in this parish. It possesses a curious relic of antiquity called the Bredstones, consisting of eight upright free-stones, six of which are placed in a circle, inclosing the other two, and also several artificial caves paved with stones. Pop., in 1801, 1,180; in 1831, 1,987. Houses 364. Acres 5,530. A. P. £4,390. Poor rates, in 1837, £387.

BIDEFORD, a sea-port, incorporated market-town, and parish, in the division of Great Torrington, hund. of Shebbear, union of Bideford, county of Devon, but possessing separate jurisdiction; 201 miles west by south of London; 42 north-west by west of Exeter; and 9 south-west of Barnstaple; the town stands on both sides of the river Torridge, above its confluence with the Taw, but the buildings on the eastern side are comparatively few. Geographical position, 51° 2' N. lat., and 4° 3' W. long. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Barnstaple and dio. of Exeter; valued at £27 7s. 6d.; gross income £777; nett income £633. Patron, in 1835, Lewis W. Buck, Esq. The Baptists, Independents, and Wesleyan Methodists, have chapels here. The Independent church was formed in 1640; the Wesleyan Methodist in 1807; and the Baptist in 1829. Here is a free grammar-school of remote foundation. In 1689, it was endowed with an estate, now yielding £56 per annum, by Mrs Susannah Stuckley, after which a good house was purchased for the use of the master. The number of boys on the foundation was originally intended to be ten, at present there are only three, who are nominated by the corporation.—The British and Foreign school society have a good school here, at which about 170 children are educated. There is also a National school, in which 150 boys and the same number of girls receive instruction.—The trustees of the bridge-estate also support a charity school for reading, writing, and arithmetic; the school-room adjoins the hall, erected in 1758, for the use of the trustees. Besides these, the parish possesses twenty-five daily schools, including 544 children and two Sunday schools.—An institution for the acquirement and diffusion of useful knowledge, was formed here in 1832. The library attached contains about 250 volumes.—In 1646, Mr John Strange, alderman of Bideford, erected alms-houses in Maiden street, for seven poor families.—In 1663, Mr Henry Amory bequeathed funds for the erection of an hospital for twelve poor families. There is a considerable fund for the relief of poor dissenters, bequeathed, in 1810, by Mrs Margaret Newcommen. Other charities connected with the parish produce £25 14s. 4d. per annum.

The name Bideford is a corruption of the original word 'By-the-ford,' derived from its situation near an ancient ford over the Torridge. In the earliest records in which it appears it is called a borough, and returned members to parliament in the reigns of Edward I. and II. It was granted, soon after the Conquest, to Richard de Grandavilla, a Norman knight, whose posterity retained possession of it till the year 1750, when it was sold by one of the heirs of William Granville, third earl of Bath. In the 11th year of Queen Anne, it gave the title of baron to Lord Lansdown. In 1271, a grant of a market and fair was obtained by Richard de Granville, lord of the manor, a descendant of the original possessor. In 1573, it was made a free borough and an incorporated town by Queen Elizabeth, soon after which it began to rise into importance as a sea-port, and to participate in the advantages of the Newfoundland and American trade. During the civil war, forts were erected here on both sides of the Torridge, so as to command the river, on the part of the parliament, but they were taken for the king by Colonel Digby, after the battle of Torrington, which took place September 2d, 1643. In 1646 and 1680 the plague raged here. The weaving of silk was introduced in 1650, and was carried to great perfection by many French emigrants who settled here in 1685 after the revocation of the edict of Nantes. The importations of wool from Spain, and of tobacco from Virginia, were inferior only to those of London, in the early part of the last century. The greater part of the town is built on a steep acclivity on the western side of the Torridge, and the remainder is at the foot of a hill on the eastern side. These are connected by a noble stone bridge, forming the approach to the town on the north-east, consisting of 24 arches, and 677 feet in length. It was erected in the 14th century by subscriptions raised in the counties of Devon and Cornwall, forwarded in an especial manner by the exertions of Grandison, bishop of Exeter, and Sir Theobald Granville. In Prince's account of the worthies of Devonshire, a somewhat curious tradition is given regarding the necessity and origin of this bridge:—"At first the town of Bytheford had no other passage over the river there but by boats; the breadth and roughness whereof upon times was such as did often put people in jeopardy of their lives; and some were drowned, to the great grief of the inhabitants. To prevent which great inconveniences, some did divers times, and in sundry places, begin to build a bridge; but no firm foundation after often proof being to be found, their attempt in that kind came to no effect. At this time Sir Richard Gernard, or Gurney, was parish-priest of the place, who, as the story of that town hath it, was admonished by a vision in his sleep to set about the foundation of a bridge near a rock which he should find rolled from the higher grounds upon the strand. This at first he esteemed as a dream; yet, to second the same with some act, in the morning he went to see the place, and found a huge rock there fixed, whose greatness argued its being in that place to be only the work of God, which not only bred admiration but incited him to set forward so charitable a work. Upon this encouragement, he, afterwards with Sir Theobald Granville, Knt., lord of the land, an especial furtherer of, and a great benefactor to that design, began the foundation of the bridge where it stands now." It was thoroughly repaired in 1683, and is endowed with lands for keeping it in repair; these are called the bridge-estate, and amount to about £400 per annum. The streets are in general paved and partially lighted, but the houses have often a mean appearance; in this respect, however, a considerable improvement has taken place of late years. Many opulent merchants in the West Indian and American trade live here; and a succession of villas connects the town with the village of Northam, which is 1½ mile to the north, between Bideford and Appledore. The editors of the Magna Britannia, writing in 1737, represent Bideford as "now one of the best trading-towns in England, sending every year great fleets to Newfoundland and the West Indies, and particularly to Virginia. It has almost drawn away the trade of Barnstaple to itself; and though the merchants here were great losers by the late wars, yet they still keep up a thriving trade, and the customs amount to considerable sums yearly, for the management of which his majesty keeps here a collector, comptroller, customer, searchers, waiters, and other inferior officers." There is still a considerable trade carried on at this port, which includes within its jurisdiction the harbours of Appledore, Clovelly, and Hartland. Sails, cordage, oak-bark, fruit, earthenware, corn and flour, are among the exports; American and Baltic timber, and coal from Bristol and Wales, now form the chief imports. The quay is remarkably convenient, being near the centre of the town, and is capable of admitting vessels of 500 tons burden, except at ebb-tide. Vessels of 300 tons burden in full-tides can come up as far as the bridge, above which lesser vessels can pass to a considerable distance, and enter the Torrington canal through a sea-lock, at the distance of $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles. The number of vessels belonging to the port, in 1832, was 117, and the tonnage 9,820, trading chiefly to Ireland, Wales, and North America. The quay-duties are the property of the lord of the manor. There are several dock-yards of considerable extent here, chiefly for the erection of vessels of moderate size. The market-day is Tuesday, and fairs for cattle are held on February 14th, July 18th, and November 13th. The charter of incorporation granted to Bideford in the 16th of Elizabeth, was confirmed and extended in the 7th and 16th of James I. The borough and manor of Bideford is coextensive with the parish. The government was vested in a mayor, 7 aldermen, and 10 capital burgesses, with a recorder, a town-clerk, two sergeants-at-mace, and other officers. By the new Municipal act, the government is vested in a mayor, 4 aldermen, and 12 councillors. A court of general session is held quarterly, the mayor presiding as a justice of the peace; a civil court, or court of record, having jurisdiction in all plaints and actions, used to be held occasionally, but has fallen into desuetude. A court of petty-session is held weekly, by adjournment from Buckland-Brewer, for the division of Great Torrington. The property of the incorporation, consisting of lands and tenements in this borough, amounts to about £50 per annum. The town-hall is a substantial structure, and was erected in 1698. The gaol forms part of the parish workhouse, and consists of 6 cells. This town was the birth-place of Dr Shebbeare, a noted political writer, born in 1709. About 2 miles down the river is a place called Hubblestone, from a large stone supposed to cover the grave of Hubba, a Danish pirate, who was slain in a fight with the men of Devonshire here, in the reign of Alfred. Pop., in 1801, 2,987; in 1831, 4,846. Houses 916. Acres 4,510. A. P. £9,312. The whole rateable property is estimated at £20,000 a-year. Poor rates, in 1837, £2,202.—A workhouse has been erected here by the poor-law commissioners for the union of Bideford, at an expense of £3,645, capable of accommodating 200 persons. The Bideford poor-law union comprehends 18 parishes, embracing an area of 122 square miles; with a population returned, in 1831, at 17,787. The average annual expenditure on the poor of this district, during the three years preceding the formation of the union, was £7,333. Expenditure, in 1838, £5,225.—See articles APPLEDORE and NORTHAM.

BIDFORD, or BITFORD, a parish in the Stratford division of the hund. of Barlichway, union of Alcester, county of Warwick; 4 miles south by east of Alcester, on the northern bank of the Avon, which is here navigable. The parish contains the hamlets of Barton-Broom, and Marcliff. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Worcester; valued at £7 10s. 7½d., and in the parliamentary returns at £60; gross income £213. Patron, in 1835, Sir G. Skipwith. The impropriate and vicarial tithes, the property of the lord of the manor and vicar, were commuted in 1766. There are eight small daily schools here, and one daily National school, containing 52 boys. There are also three Sunday schools. Fairs are held here on April 11th and September 10th. From the duchess of Dudley's charity the poor of this parish receive upwards of £20 per annum. Pop., in 1801, 928; in 1831, 1,268. Houses 267. Acres 3,240. A. P. £4,161. Poor rates, in 1837, £440.

BIDSTONE, a parish in the hund. of Wirral, union of Wirral, co.-palatine of Chester; 7 miles north-north-east of Great Neston, on the western bank of the river Mersey, and intersected by the Chester and Birkenhead railroad. It comprises the chapelry of Birkenhead and the townships of Bidstone with Ford, Cloughton with Grange, Moreton, and Saughall-Massey. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. and dio. of Chester; valued at £21, and rated in the parliamentary returns at £89; gross income £98. Patron, in 1835, B. Keene, Esq. This parish possesses five daily schools, one of which is endowed with £15 per annum, three Sunday, and ten boarding schools. On an elevation in this parish is a lighthouse belonging to the corporation of Liverpool, having been purchased by them under an act obtained in 1762. Pop., in 1801, 684; in 1831, 3,434. Houses 523. Acres 5,160. A. P. £7,145. Poor rates, in 1837, £675.—Pop. of the township of Bidstone with Ford, in 1801, 199; in 1831, 251. Houses 34. Acres 1,620. A. P. £2,218. Poor rates, in 1837, £41.

BIERLEY (NORTH), a township in the parish of Bradford, wapentake of Morley, west riding of Yorkshire; 2 miles south-east of Bradford. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. and dio. of York; of the yearly value of £130. Patroness, in 1835, Miss Currer. The chapel was lately enlarged. There are eleven daily schools here, including 604 scholars, and six Sunday schools. In this township upwards of 800 men are employed in quarries, mines, and coal-pits. Pop., in 1801, 3,820; in 1831, 7,254. Houses 1,349. Acres 3,090. A. P. £6,428. Poor rates, in 1837, £1,557.

BIERTON WITH BROUGHTON, a parish in the hund. and union of Aylesbury, county of Buckingham; $1\frac{1}{4}$ mile north-east of Aylesbury, in the vicinity of the Aylesbury canal, and about 5 miles west of the Birmingham and London railroad. Living, a vicarage to which the curacies of Stoke-Mandeville, Buckland, and Quarendon, are annexed, formerly in the dio. of Lincoln, now in the dio. of Oxford; a peculiar of the dean and chapter of Lincoln; valued at £20 10s.; gross income £292. The great and small tithes, the property of the dean and chapter of Lincoln, the prebend of Aylesbury, and the vicar, were commuted in 1779. This parish possesses two Sunday schools, one of which is endowed with £8 5s. per annum, and a daily school. In 1723, Mr Hill gave property for the foundation of a fund for clothing poor men and educating and apprenticing young persons. Other charities connected with the parish produce £40 8s. per annum. Pop., in 1801, 518; in 1831, 605. Houses 123. Acres 2,470. A. P. 3,469. Poor rates, in 1837, £456.

BIGBURY, a parish in the hund. of Ermington, union of Kingsbridge, county of Devon; $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles south of Modbury; bounded by the river Avon on the east, which here falls into the bay of Bigbury. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Totness and dio. of Exeter; valued at £28 7s. 11d.; gross income £688. Patrons, in 1835, the legatees of the duke of Bolton. There are two daily schools here. Pop., in 1801, 430; in 1831, 578. Houses 109. Acres 4,160. A. P. £4,147. Poor rates, in 1837, £402.

BIGBY, a parish in the southern division of the wapentake of Yarborough, parts of Lindsey, union of Caistor, county of Lincoln; 4 miles east of Glandford bridge. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Lincoln; valued at £13 10s. 10d.; gross income £712. Patron, in 1835, Robert E. Elwes, Esq.

There are a daily and a Sunday school here. Pop., in 1801, 178; in 1831, 180. Houses 32. Acres 1,040. A. P. £4,810. Poor rates, in 1837, £89.

BIGGES, or CARLISLE'S-QUARTER, a township in the parish of Long-Horsley, division of Morpeth ward, county of Northumberland; 6 miles north-north-west of Morpeth. There is a day and Sunday school here containing 110 children. An endowment of £3 18s. 6d. per annum arising from the interest of money in the public funds, has been lost to this school since 1819, owing to the will of the late trustee, Walter Traveley, Esq. of Nether-witton, never having been proved at Doctor's commons. Pop., in 1821, 262; in 1831, 238. Houses 50. Acreage with the parish. Poor rates, in 1837, £155.

BIGGIN, a township in the parish of Wirksworth, hund. of Appletree, county of Derby; 4 miles south-west by south of Wirksworth. There are two daily schools in this township. Pop., in 1801, 123; in 1831, 161. Houses 30. Acres 440. A. P. £745. Poor rates, in 1837, £97.

BIGGIN. See NEWTON-BIGGIN.

BIGGIN, a township partly in the parish of Kirk-Fenton, partly within the liberty of St. Peter of York, and partly in the wapentake of Barkstone-Ash, west riding of Yorkshire; 6 miles west-north-west of Selby, in the vicinity of the York and North Midland railway, and of the railroad between Leeds and Selby. The plant teasle (Dipsacus fal-lunum) was first reared here in England for the use of the fullers. Pop., in 1821, 164; in 1831, 141. Houses 26. Other returns with the parish. A. P. £1,727.

BIGGLESWADE HUNDRED lies at the eastern extremity of the county of Bedford, and is bounded on the west by the hund. of Wixamtree; on the south by that of Clifton; on the east by Cambridgeshire; and on the north by Huntingdonshire. Area 28,265 acres. Houses 1,780. Pop., in 1831, 9,696.

BIGGLESWADE, a market-town and parish in the hund. and union of Biggleswade, county of Bedford; 45 miles north-north-west of London, and 10½ east-south-east of Bedford, on the eastern bank of the river Ivel, which has been made navigable agreeably to act of parliament, as far as its junction with the river Ouse. This parish includes the hamlets of Stratton and Holme. In the early records it is termed 'the borough and foreign of Bykleswade,'—a name of obscure and uncertain derivation. Living, a vicarage exempt from visitation, being a prebend in the cathedral church of Lincoln; valued at £10, and in the parliamentary returns at £60; gross income £300; in the patronage of the bishop of Lincoln. The church is an ancient structure, in the early style of English architecture, erected about the year 1230. John Reeding, archdeacon of Bedford, whose arms are carved on some wooden stalls which still remain in the north aisle, is said to have rebuilt the chancel in 1467. This church was formerly collegiate. A chantry belonging to the guild of the Holy Trinity was founded here, with an endowment of £7 per annum. The prebend of Biggleswade is valued at £42 7s. 6d. A Baptist church was formed here in 1771. There is also a Wesleyan Methodist chapel. Here is a charity school, in which 30 boys, nominated by the lord of the manor, receive gratuitous instruction. The endowment consists of two-ninths of the rental of lands situated at Flitwick, for the purchase of which £1,800 were bequeathed in 1752 by Sir John Cotton. There is an additional endowment of £13 per annum arising from other lands at Holme, given by Edward Peake, Esq. Two-thirds of the rental of the land purchased under the will of Sir John Cotton, are bestowed on the poor of the parish, and one-ninth is paid to the vicar. There are also a National school, and a British and Foreign school here. Other charities connected with the parish produce £27 17s. 3d. per annum. A water-communication has been opened with Lynn-Regis, and the trade of the place greatly improved. The town contains several modern edifices, owing to a great fire which took place in 1785, and burned to the ground not less than 150 houses. The houses are chiefly built of brick, and have in general a respectable aspect; and in the neighbourhood there are many handsome villas. The air is salubrious, and the country in the environs, though flat, presents some points of picturesque scenery. A part of the female population derives employment in manufacturing thread-lace and straw-plait. The market is held on Wednesday, and, from the fertility of the vicinity, used to be one of the most extensive grain-markets in England; but for some years it has greatly declined, in consequence, probably, of selling by sample having become a more general practice amongst dealers, and the general improvement of the roads throughout the county having induced purchasers to attend market at Hitchin, Bedford, St. Neot's, and the larger towns in the neighbourhood. Fairs for all kinds of cattle are held;—February 14th, the Saturday in Easter week, Whit-Monday, August 2d, and November 8th, at which much business is transacted. The town is under the jurisdiction of the county-magistrates, who hold the petty-sessions here for the division of Biggleswade. By the reform bill it was constituted a polling-place for the county-elections. Around Biggleswade, and also at Potton, Sandy, and other places in the neighbourhood, a great quantity of ground is cultivated by market-gardeners, who raise onions, carrots, and other vegetables for the London market. Pop., in 1801, 1,650; in 1831, 3,226. Houses 598. Acres 4,220. A. P. £7,504. Poor rates, in 1837, £1,281.—A workhouse has been erected here for the union of Biggleswade, by the poor-law commissioners, at an expense of £4,850, capable of containing 300 persons. The Biggleswade poor-law union comprehends 26 parishes, embracing an area of 96 square miles; with a population returned, in 1831, at 18,296. The average annual expenditure on the poor of this district, during the three years preceding the formation of the union, was £12,372. Expenditure, in 1838, £7,927.—Roman remains have been occasionally discovered in this neighbourhood.

BIGHTON, a parish in the hund. of Bishop's-Sutton, union of Alresford, Alton (northern) division of the county of Southampton; 2 miles north-east by north of Alresford. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Winchester; valued at £19 8s. 1½d.; gross income £330. Patron, in 1835, the Duke of Buckingham. There is a day and Sunday school here, supported by the duchess of Buckingham, with a lending library attached. Pop., in 1801, 198; in 1831, 290. Houses 33. Acres 1,580. A. P. £1,395. Poor rates, in 1837, £182.

BIGLANDS and GAMELSBY, a township in the parish of Aikton, Cumberland ward, county of Cumberland; 3 miles north of Wigton, in the vicinity of the Carlisle railroad. Pop., in 1801, 151; in 1831, 192. Houses 37. Other returns with the parish.

SIGNAL-END, a township in the parish of Audley, northern division of the hund. of Pirehill, county of Stafford; 4 miles north-west of Newcastle-under-Lyne, in the neighbourhood of the Grand Trunk canal, and of the Manchester and Birmingham railroad. Pop., in 1811, 236; in 1831, 432. Houses 87. Other returns with the parish.

BIGNOR, a parish in the hund. of Bury, rape of Arundel, county of Sussex; $4\frac{1}{2}$ miles south by east of Petworth. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Chichester; valued at £8 3s. 6d.; gross income £238; nett income £143. Patron, in 1835, the Earl of Egremont. The church is in the English style of architecture, chiefly in that of the early period, but with some intermixture of the decorated. The electors resident in that part of Bignor surrounded by Easebourn vote for a member for Midhurst. In a field in this parish some finely executed tessellated pavements were found in 1811, which are supposed to mark the site of a Roman villa. Pop., in 1801, 95; in 1831, 130. Houses 22. Acres 1,180. A. P. £792. Poor rates, in 1837, £82.

BIKINACRE, or BITACRE, a hamlet, partly in the parish of Danbury and partly in that of Woodham-Ferrers, hund. of Chelmsford, county of Essex. "In that part of this hamlet, which is in the parish of Woodham-Ferrers, was at first an hermitage, and then a priory of Black canons, dedicated to St John the Baptist, built and endowed by Maurice Fitz-Jeffrey of Tiretai, sheriff of Essex, at the charge, for the most part, of King Henry II., who forgave him on this account several sums of money, which otherwise he must have paid into the exchequer out of the profits of his bailiwick. This house, being almost forsaken, was, about the latter end of the time of Henry VII., annexed to the hospital of St Mary without Bishopsgate, London: and as parcel of the possessions of that hospital, was granted, after the general dissolution, 31^o Henry VIII., to Henry Polsted."—Tanner's Not. Mon.

BILAND-ABBEY, in the north riding of Yorkshire, near the valley of Rydale. It was formerly the lordship of Roger de Mowbray, who founded a monastery here, called, for its pleasantness, La belle land.

BILBANK. See BELBANK.

BILBOROUGH, a parish in the southern division of the hund. of Broxtow, union of Basford, county of Nottingham; 4 miles west-north-west of Nottingham, intersected by the Nottingham canal. Living, a discharged rectory, formerly in the archd. of Nottingham and dio. of York, now in the dio. of Lincoln; valued at £3 12s. 6d.; gross income £273. Patron, in 1835, T. Webbe Edge, Esq. For commutation of tithes, see STREILEY. There are a daily school here, containing 60 pupils, and a Sunday school. The hamlet of Broxtow in this parish was formerly of considerable importance and gave name to the hundred. There are some coal-works here. Pop., in 1801, 307; in 1831, 380. Houses 60. Acres 1,090. A. P. £1,475. Poor rates, in 1837, £126.

BILBROUGH, a parish in the lower division of the ainstey of the city of York; 4 miles north-east of Tadcaster, on the line of the York and North Midland railroad. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. of the east riding and dio. of York; valued at £46 6s. 10d.; gross income £189. Patron, in 1835, T. L. Fairfax, Esq. The church contains the remains of Thomas, Lord Fairfax, the celebrated parliamentary general. There is a day and Sunday school here, partly supported by Lady Hewley's charity of £4, and partly by two annual donations of £5 5s. from the Rev. B. Edmonson, and of £10 from T. L. Fairfax, Esq. Other charities connected with the parish produce £8 10s. per annum. Pop., in 1801, 185; in 1831, 228. Houses 49. Acres 1,410. A. P. £2,002. Poor rates, in 1837, £118.

BILDESTONE, or BILSTON, a township and parish in the hund. of Cosford, county of Suffolk; 14 miles west-north-west of Ipswich, intersected by the line of the proposed Ipswich and St Edmunds Bury railway. Living, a rectory, formerly in the archd. of Sudbury and dio. of Norwich, now in the dio. of Ely; valued at £12 16s. 10d.; gross income £372. Patron, in 1835, the Rev. Charles Johnson. The church is a handsome structure situated on a hill at the west-end of the town. The Baptists have a place of worship here; the church was formed in 1794. There are seven daily schools here, in which 165 children are instructed, and two Sunday schools. The manufacture of blankets and blue woollen-cloths formerly flourished here. The market day is Wednesday, and fairs for wearing-apparel and toys are held on Ash-Wednesday and Holy-Thursday. Pop., in 1801, 744; in 1831, 836. Houses 182. Acres 1,420. A. P. £1,840. Poor rates, in 1837, £271.

BILEIGH, a hamlet in the parish of St Mary, town of Maldon, hund. of Dengie, county of Essex. "There was anciently at Perendune or Parndon, in this county, an house of Premonstratensian canons, who removed to Bileigh, when, A.D. 1180, Robert Mantell built a monastery for them to the honour of St Nicholas. About the time of the dissolution, this abbey was rated at £169 4s. 5d., and maintained nine canons; it was granted, 32d Henry VIII., to Sir John Gate." Tanner's Not. Mon.

BILHAM, a township in that part of the parish of Hooton-Pagnell, which is in the northern division of the wapentake of Strafforth and Tickhill, west riding of Yorkshire; $6\frac{1}{2}$ miles west-north-west of Doncaster, in the vicinity of the York and North Midland railway. Lime and coal are found here, as well as a peculiar kind of sand used in the iron-foundries at Rotherham and Sheffield. Pop., in 1801, 45; in 1831, 76. Houses 14. Acreage with the parish. A. P. £1,026. Poor rates, in 1837, £36.

BILLERICAY, or BILLECCA, a market-town and chapelry to the parish of Great Burstead, hund. of Barstable, county of Essex; 23 miles east-north-east of London, and 3 south-east of the railroad from London to Norwich. It stands on an eminence, overlooking an extensive and richly cultivated vale, and commands a distant view of the river Thames, the coast of Kent, and the Nore. Living, a perpetual curacy not in charge, formerly in the archd. of Essex and dio. of London, now in the dio. of Rochester; valued in the parliamentary returns at £130 12s. 6d.; gross income £90. Patrons, in 1835, Trustees. The chapel is an ancient brick building in the centre of the town. The Baptists, Independents, and Society of Friends, have places of worship here. The Baptist church was formed in 1815. Ten poor children are educated here, on a foundation endowed with an estate of £20 per annum, in 1654, by the Rev. Mr Bayley, rector of Benfleet. There are few manufactures here, these being chiefly of wire-ribbon and silk-braid-laces. A market on Tuesday was granted by Edward IV.; it is still in existence, but the increasing prosperity of the neighbouring towns of Chelmsford and Romford has rendered it of less importance than formerly. Fairs for horses and cattle are held on the 2d of August and 7th of October. Billericay is one of the polling places for the members for South Essex. Petty sessions for the division of Barstable and Chafford are held here and at Brentwood. Here is a parochial alma-house for poor females. Pop. and other returns with the parish.

BILLEDSON, a market-town and parish in the hund. of Gartree, union of Billesdon, county of Leicester; $8\frac{1}{2}$ miles east of Leicester. The parish comprises the chapelries of GOADBY and ROLLESTON, (which see) with the township of Billesdon. Living, a vicarage, with the curacies of Rolleston and Goadby annexed, formerly in the archd. of Leicester and dio. of Lincoln, now in the dio. of Peterborough; valued at £14 10s.; gross income £298. Patron, in 1835, the Rev. H. Greene. All tithes of Billesdon-fields, the property of the lay-impropriators and the vicar, were commuted in 1764. The Baptists have a place of worship here; the church was formed in 1820. This parish possesses three daily schools, one of which is partly supported by various endowments, amounting to £23 per annum, and two Sunday schools. A school-house was erected in 1850 by William Sharp for the use of the parishioners. Here are almshouses for four poor widows, founded and endowed by William Ward, Esq. Other charities connected with this parish produce about £53 per annum. Fairs for pewter, brass, and toys, are held here on April 23d and July 25th. There are here some traces of a Roman camp. Pop., in 1801, 580; in 1831, 908. Houses 156. Acres 4,430. A. P. £3,529. Poor rates, in 1837, £381. The Billesdon poor-law union comprehends 36 parishes, embracing an area of 82 square miles, with a population returned in 1831, at 6,749. The average annual expenditure on the poor of this district, during the three years preceding the formation of the union, was £5,066. Expenditure, in 1838, £2,715.

BILLESLEY, a parish in the Stratford division of the hund. of Barlichway, union of Stratford-on-Avon, county of Warwick; $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles west-north-west of Stratford-on-Avon, intersected by the Birmingham and Stratford-on-Avon canal. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. and dio. of Worcester; valued at £5 4s. 7d.; gross income £100. Patrons, in 1835, M. and J. Miles, Esqrs. There is a Sunday school here. The extent of this parish is about 800 acres, which are in the hands of two tenants. Pop., in 1821, 27; in 1831, 24. Houses 3. Acres 750. Poor rates, in 1837, £11.

BILLING (GREAT), a parish in the hund. of Spelhoe, union and county of Northampton; 4 miles north-east of Northampton, near the river Nen. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Northampton and dio. of Peterborough; valued at £19; gross income £521; in the patronage of the principal and fellows of Brazen-nose college, Oxford. The great and small tithes, the property of the clerical rector, were commuted in 1778. There are four daily schools in this parish. Here is an almshouse, founded by John Freeman, Esq., for five poor aged widows and one poor aged widower. They do not now reside in the almshouse, which has been given up to the parish, but receive each £6 per annum. Pop., in 1801, 267; in 1831, 372. Houses 67. Acres 1,290. A. P. £2,319. Poor rates, in 1837, £136.

BILLING (LITTLE), a parish in the hund. of Spelhoe, union and county of Northampton; 3 miles east-north-east of Northampton, on the river Nen. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Northampton and dio. of Peterborough; valued at £10 2s. 11d.; gross income £336. Patron, in 1835, Earl Brownlow. There is a Sunday school here. Pop., in 1801, 64; in 1831, 88. Houses 15. Acres 890. A. P. £1,763. Poor rates, in 1837, £49.

BILLINGBOROUGH, a parish in the wapentake of Aveland, parts of Kesteven, union of Bourn, county of Lincoln; 3 miles east by south of Folkingham. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Lincoln; valued at £6 1s. 8d.; gross income £237. Patron, in 1835, Earl Fortescue. The church has a fine tower and spire. The great and small tithes of Billingborough and Birtthorpe, the property of the lord of the manor and vicar, were commuted in 1768. Here is a free school, for the foundation and endowment of which, Mary Toller, in 1671, gave land producing about £25 per annum. There are also three other daily schools, containing 53 pupils, and two Sunday schools in this parish. Pop., in 1801, 537; in 1831, 881. Houses 168. Acres 2,020. A. P. £5,800. Poor rates, in 1837, £309.

BILLINGE (CHAPEL END), a chapelry in the parish of Wigan, hund. of West Derby, co.-palatine of Lancaster; 5 miles south-west of Wigan, in the neighbourhood of the Wigan and Newton railroad. Living, a perpetual curacy, formerly in the archd. and dio. of Chester, now in the dio. of Manchester; valued at £34 0s. 8d., and rated in the parliamentary returns at £52 8s. 8d.; gross income £235; in the patronage of the rector of Wigan. At Birchley, within this chapelry, the Roman Catholics have a place of worship. There are four daily schools here, to one of which a yearly stipend of £10 is attached by the trustees of Eddlestones charity, for the tuition of 12 boys. There are also two Sunday schools. Pop., in 1801, 765; in 1831, 1,279. Houses 222. Acres 1,340. A. P. £2,105. Poor rates, in 1837, £254.

BILLINGE (HIGHER END), a township in the parish of Wigan, hund. of West Derby, co.-palatine of Lancaster; $4\frac{1}{2}$ miles west-south-west of Wigan. There is a daily school here, containing 40 pupils; £10 was formerly allowed to teach 8 poor children to read, but this stipend has been withheld for several years. Pop., in 1811, 555; in 1831, 676. Houses 110. Acres 1,410. A. P. £2,317. Poor rates, in 1837, £213.

BILLINGFORD, or PIRLESTON, a parish in the hund. of Earsham, union of Depwade, county of Norfolk; $1\frac{1}{2}$ mile east of Scole, on the line of the railroad from London to Norwich. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. of Norfolk and dio. of Norwich; valued at £9; gross income £314. Patron, in 1835, T. W. Coke, Esq. There is a daily school here. Pop., in 1801, 180; in 1831, 313. Houses 26. Acres 1,100. A. P. £1,679. Poor rates, in 1837, £134.

BILLINGFORD, a parish in the hund. of Eynesford, union of Mitford and Launditch, county of Norfolk; 5 miles north-north-east of East Dereham. Living, a discharged rectory united with that of Thorpe Little, in the archd. of Norfolk and dio. of Norwich; valued at £7 10s.; gross income £272. Patron, in 1835, George Wilson, Esq. A fair was formerly held here, under a grant obtained in the 33d of Edward I. At Beck hall, the seat of Mr Coke, was formerly an hospital, founded in the reign of Henry III, by William Beck, for the accommodation of poor travellers. Pop., in 1801, 269; in 1831, 305. Houses 36. Acres 1,650. A. P. £1,680. Poor rates, in 1837, £126.

BILLINGHAM, a parish in the north-eastern division and union of Stockton-ward, co.-palatine of Durham; 3 miles north-north-east of Stockton, on the line of the Clarence railway, and intersected by the Clarence and Hartlepool union railway. It comprises the chapelry of Wolviston, and the townships of Billingham, Cowpen-Bewley, and Newton-Bewley. Living, a vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Durham; valued at £11 3s. 1 $\frac{1}{2}$ d.; gross income £274; in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Durham. There are a daily school, to which the dean and chapter of Durham allow £4 4s. per annum for teaching 6 poor children, and a Sunday school. Other charities connected with the parish produce £17 15s. per annum. Pop. of the town, in 1801, 355; in 1831, 401. Houses 92. Acres 2,720. A. P. £4,350. Poor rates, in 1837, £230.

BILLINGHAY, a parish in the first division of the wapentake of Lango, parts of Kesteven, union of Sleaford, county of Lincoln; $8\frac{1}{2}$ miles north-east of Sleaford. It comprises the township of Dogdyke, and the hamlet of Walcott. Living, a vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Lincoln; valued at £13 14s.; gross income £283. Patron, in 1835, Earl Fitzwilliam. There are four daily schools here, containing 134 pupils, and two Sunday schools. Pop., in 1801, 1,132; in 1831, 1,787. Houses 459. Acres 7,630. A. P. £8,898. Poor rates, in 1837, £291.

BILLINGLEY, a township in that part of the parish of Darfield which is in the northern division of the wapentake of Stratforth and Tickhill, west riding of Yorkshire; 6½ miles east by south of Barnesley, on the line of the York and North Midland railroad, and in the vicinity of the Dearne and Dove canal. There are two Sunday schools here. Pop., in 1801, 172; in 1831, 217. Houses 39. Acres 830. A. P. £1,289. Poor rates, in 1837, £82.

BILLINGSHURST, a parish in the hund. of West Easwirth, rape of Arundel, union of Petworth, county of Sussex; 6½ miles south-west of Horsham, intersected by the Arun and Wye canal. The parish includes the hamlets of East and West Billingshurst. Living, a vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Chichester; valued at £9 6s. 0½d., and in the parliamentary returns at £140; gross income £140. Patron, in 1835, Sir C. F. Goring, Bart. The Baptists have a place of worship here. There is also an Independent church, formed in 1814. There are four daily schools in this parish. Fairs are held here on Whit-Monday, and November 8th, for horses, horned cattle, hogs, and pedlery. Pop., in 1801, 1,164; in 1831, 1,540. Houses 265. Acres 6,830. A. P. £3,199. Poor rates, in 1837, £792.

BILLINGSIDE, a township in the parish of Lanchester, west division of Chester-ward, co.-palatine of Durham; 13 miles north-west of Durham, intersected by a branch of the Stanhope and Tyne railway. Pop., in 1831, 18. Houses 2. Acres 340. A. P. £8,917. Poor rates, in 1837, £15.

BILLINGSLEY, a parish in the hund. of Stot-tesden, union of Bridgnorth, county of Salop; 5 miles south by west of Bridgnorth. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. of Salop and dio. of Hereford; valued at £4 13s. 4d., and rated in the parliamentary returns at £102 10s.; gross income £217. Patron, in 1835, the Duke of Cleveland. This parish possesses one daily school. There are considerable collieries here. Pop., in 1801, 320; in 1831, 161. Houses 32. Acres 1,560. A. P. £1,231. Poor rates, in 1837, £38.

BILLINGTON, a chapelry in the parish and union of Leighton-Buzzard, hund. of Manshead, county of Bedford; 2 miles south-east of Leighton-Buzzard. Living, a perpetual curacy, formerly in the archd. of Bedford and dio. of Lincoln, now in the dio. of Ely; valued at £20; gross income £45; in the patronage of the inhabitants. This chapelry includes the hamlets of Great and Little Billington. Pop., in 1801, 200; in 1831, 271. Houses 55. Acreage with the parish. A. P. £1,366. Poor rates, in 1837, £121.

BILLINGTON (LARGO), a chapelry in the parish and lower division of the hund. of Blackburn, co.-palatine of Lancaster; 5½ miles north-north-east of Blackburn. Living, a perpetual curacy, formerly in the archd. and dio. of Chester, now in the dio. of Manchester; of the yearly value of £125; in the patronage of the vicar of Blackburn. There is a dissenting chapel here. Here are a daily free school, endowed with about £14 per annum, and a Sunday school. The inhabitants are chiefly cotton-weavers. Pop., in 1801, 844; in 1831, 1,069. Houses 191. Acres 2,960. A. P. £3,407. Poor rates, in 1837, £284.

BILLOCKLY, or BILLOCKBY, a parish in the western division of the hund. of Flegg, county of Norfolk; 3 miles north-east of Acle. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. and dio. of Norwich; valued at £2 8s. 9d., and in the parliamentary returns at £98; gross income £100; in the patronage of the Lucas family. There is a Sunday school here. Pop., in 1801, 42; in 1831, 67. Houses 7. Acres 260. A. P. £497. Poor rates, in 1837, £52.

BILLSBOROUGH, or BULLSBOROUGH, a township in the parish of Garstang, hund. of Amounderness, co.-palatine of Lancaster; 4½ miles south-east of Garstang, in the vicinity of the Lancaster and Preston railway. Here is a daily free school for children of the townships of Billsborough and Myer-cough, endowed with £46 per annum by John Cross, in 1718. Pop., in 1801, 163; in 1831, 199. Houses 36. Acres 750. A. P. £1,426. Poor rates, in 1837, £50.

BILNEY (EAST), a parish in the hund. of Lann-ditch, union of Mitford and Launditch, county of Norfolk; 5 miles north-north-west of East Dere-ham. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. and dio. of Norwich; valued at £5 14s. 2d.; gross income £142. Patron, in 1835, W. Collison, Esq. There is a daily school in this parish. Charities connected with it produce £9 per annum. Thomas Bilney, a learned divine, who was burned at Nor-wich in 1531, for his opposition to popery, is said to have been born here. Pop., in 1801, 165; in 1831, 166. Houses 29. Acres 670. A. P. £553. Poor rates, in 1837, £96.

BILNEY (WEST), a parish in the Lynn division of the hund. of Freebridge, union of Freebridge-Lynn, county of Norfolk; 7 miles south-east of Kings-Lynn. Living, a perpetual curacy not in charge, in the archd. and dio. of Norwich; valued at £20, and rated in the parliamentary returns at £24; gross income £60. Patron, in 1835, John Dalton, Esq. Pop., in 1801, 135; in 1831, 236. Houses 17. Acres 2,750. A. P. £1,680. Poor rates, in 1837, £188.

BILSBY AND THURLBY, a parish in the Wold division of the hund. of Cakeworth, parts of Lind-sey, union of Spilsby, county of Lincoln; 1 mile east of Alford. Living, a vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Lincoln; valued at £13 3s. 4d., and in the parliamentary returns at £136 5s.; gross income £166. Patron, in 1835, J. Mason, Esq. There are two daily schools here, one of which has a small endowment, arising from certain lands in the parish. Pop., in 1801, 337; in 1831, 453. Houses 77. Acres 2,960. A. P. £2,866. Poor rates, in 1837, £584.

BILSDALE-MIDCABLE, a township in the parish of Helmsley, wapentake of Ryedale, north riding of Yorkshire; 12 miles north-north-west of Helmsley. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. of Cleveland and dio. of York; valued at £6, and rated in the parliamentary returns at £62 5s.; gross income £91; in the patronage of the vicar of Helms-ley. There is a daily school here. Pop., in 1801, 644; in 1831, 759. Houses 132. Acres 8,380. A. P. £4,412. Poor rates, in 1837, £219.

BILSDALE (WEST SIDE), a township in the parish of Hawnby, wapentake of Birdforth, north riding of Yorkshire; 8 miles north-west by north of Helmsley. There is a daily school in this township. Pop., in 1801, 115; in 1831, 149. Houses 27. Acres 6,090. A. P. £2,610. Poor rates, in 1837, £134.

BILSINGTON, a parish, partly within the liberty of Romney-marsh, and partly in the upper half-hundred of Newchurch, lathe of Shepway, union of East Ashford, county of Kent; 6 miles south-south-east of Ashford, intersected by the Royal Military canal, and 4 miles south of the South-Eastern railroad. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. and dio. of Canterbury; valued at £30, and rated in the parliamentary returns at £49; gross income £52. Patron, in 1835, Sir W. R. Cosway. There is a daily National school in this parish. A fair is held here on the 5th of July. Here are some remains of a priory of black canons, founded by John Mansell, provost of Beverley, A.D. 1253. The manor of Belsington Inferior was held in grand serjeantry in the reign of Edward III. by the service of presenting three maple cups at the king's coronation, and, at the time of the coronation of Charles II., by the additional service of carrying the last dish of the second course to the king's table. Pop., in 1801, 213; in 1831, 322. Houses 46. Acres 2,800. A. P. £4,347. Poor rates, in 1837, £321.

BILSTHORPE, or BILDESTHORPE, a parish in the South Clay division of the wapentake of Bassetlaw, union of Southwell, county of Nottingham; 5 miles south of Ollerton. Living, a discharged rectory, formerly in the archd. of Nottingham and dio. of York, now in the dio. of Lincoln; valued at £5 4s. 8d.; gross income £360. Patron, in 1835, the Earl of Scarborough. There is a daily school here. Pop., in 1801, 201; in 1831, 217. Houses 43. Acres 1,600. A. P. £1,489. Poor rates, in 1837, £155.

BILSTON, a market-town, and chapelry, in that part of the parish of Wolverhampton which is in the northern division of the hund. of Seisdon, Staffordshire; 3 miles south-east of Wolverhampton, 19 south by east of Stafford, and 121 north-west of London. Living, a perpetual curacy, within the jurisdiction of the dean of Wolverhampton, dio. of Lichfield and Coventry; yearly income £635; in the patronage of the resident householders. The chapel was rebuilt in 1826. A new church was erected in 1829 in the later style of English architecture, with a fine tower, at an expense of £7,223 6s. 1d., part of which was defrayed by a grant from the parliamentary commissioners. Sittings 1,494. There are two Baptist churches, and the Independents, and Methodists of various denominations, have places of worship here. The second Baptist church was formed in 1835; the Independent church in 1764; the Methodist in 1795. There is also a Roman Catholic chapel, to which a large school is attached. There are schools on the British system, at which about 300 children are educated, and an orphan school, which was opened in 1833. It was built at the cost of £400, and endowed with the interest of £2,000, for the education of 450 orphans, who were bereaved of their parents in 1832 when the cholera visited the town. There are also ten Sunday schools.—Bilston owes its prosperity to the numerous and rich mines of coal and ironstone in the neighbourhood. It is situated in the immediate vicinity of the Birmingham and Stafford canal, by the various branches of which a communication is opened up to every part of the kingdom, through the Mersey, Dee, Ribble, Ouse, Trent, Derwent, Severn, Humber, Avon, and Thames. By the opening of a new line—which is conducted through a noble tunnel at Coely, near Bilston—the direct canal route between Birmingham and Wolverhampton has been shortened 4 miles. The Liverpool and Birmingham Grand Junction railway also passes within $1\frac{1}{2}$ mile; the nearest station on the line being the Willenhall station, which is $85\frac{1}{2}$ miles from Liverpool. The vicinity abounds with forges, furnaces, steam-engines, and manufactories, the smoke of which darkens the air by day, while the flames illuminate the country by night. The principal manufactures consist in the heavier description of iron castings, machinery of all kinds, tin-plate, japanned and enamelled wares, nails, wire, and screws. Clay of a coarse kind, used for making pottery, and a kind of deep orange-coloured sand which is found very useful in casting, are procured in abundance. Coal mines are numerous and productive; at Bradley, in the immediate vicinity, a stratum of coal about four feet in thickness has been burning for about fifty years. The town is two miles in length, and irregularly built. The houses are substantial and in many instances handsome. The exports consist chiefly of coals and iron-work of all kinds. The markets are held on Monday and Saturday. Fairs are held on Whit-Monday, and on the Monday preceding the Michaelmas fair at Birmingham. The Bilston District banking company was established in September, 1836. Petty-sessions are held here, at Wolverhampton and at Kingswinford, for the division of Seisdon North. Bilston unites with the township of Wolverhampton in returning two members to parliament. Pop., in 1801, 6,914; in 1831, 14,492. Houses 2,744. Acres 2,580. A. P. £15,634. Poor rates, in 1837, £2,785.

BILSTONE, or BILSTON, a township in the parish of Norton-juxta-Twycross, hund. of Sparkenhoe, county of Leicester; 3 miles north-west of Market-Bosworth, in the immediate vicinity of the Ashby-de-la-Zouch canal. This was formerly a chapelry to the rectory of Norton. There are a daily and a Sunday school here, supported by the Earl and Countess Howe. This township is in the honour of Tutbury. Pop., in 1801, 116; in 1831, 136. Houses 32. Acres 570. A. P. £1,095. Poor rates, in 1837, £72.

BILTON, a small parish and village in the division and union of Rugby, hund. of Knightlow, county of Warwick; $1\frac{1}{2}$ mile south-west of Rugby, and intersected by the railway from Birmingham to London. Living, a rectory, formerly in the archd. of Coventry and dio. of Lichfield and Coventry, now in the dio. of Worcester; valued at £16 10s. 7½d.; gross income £680. Patron, in 1835, the Rev. T. T. Parker. Here is a day and Sunday National school, with an endowment of £20 per annum, bequeathed in 1783 by Langton Freeman, Esq. In this village Addison resided, after his marriage with the countess of Warwick, who left £10 a-year out of her estate in Bilton for the use of the poor. Other charities connected with the parish produce £61 4s. per annum. Pop., in 1801, 347; in 1831, 463. Houses 101. Acres 1,820. A. P. £4,320. Poor rates, in 1837, £261.

BILTON, a chapelry in the parish of Swine, middle division of the wapentake of Holderness, east riding of Yorkshire; 4 miles north-east of Kingston-upon-Hull. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. of the east riding and dio. of York; yearly income £50. Patron, in 1835, Viscount Downe. Pop., in 1801, 101; in 1831, 105. Houses 18. Acres 1,120. A. P. £1,390. Poor rates, in 1837, £99.

BILTON, a parish in the union of Skirlaugh, and within the amsiey of the city of York; 5 miles east-north-east of Wetherby. It comprises the townships of Bilton, Bickerton, and Tockwith. Living, a discharged vicarage in the peculiar jurisdiction of the dean and chapter of York, and in the patronage of the prebendary of Bilton in the cathedral church of York; valued at £3 16s., and rated in the parliamentary returns at £124; gross income £131. This parish possesses six daily and four Sunday schools. Pop., in 1801, 737; in 1831, 894. Houses 178. Acres 4,150. A. P. £5,531. Poor rates, in 1837, £567. Pop. of the township of Bilton, in 1801, 120; in 1831, 197. Houses 36. Acres 1,460. A. P. £2,448. Poor rates, in 1837, £249.

BILTON AND HARROGATE, a chapelry in that part of the parish of Knaresborough which is in the lower division of the wapentake of Claro, west riding of Yorkshire; 2 miles west of Knaresborough. There are five daily schools here, one of which is endowed by Richard Taylor with £30 per annum for the instruction of 20 children; there are also two boarding, and three Sunday schools. Pop., in 1801, 1,195; in 1831, 2,812. Houses 466. Acres 4,800. A. P. £7,142. Poor rates, in 1837, £820.

BINACRE, or BENACRE, a parish in the hund. and union of Blything, county of Suffolk; 6 miles north-east of Southwold, near the post-road to Lowestoft. Living, a rectory, to which are united the rectory of Easton-Bavents and the vicarage of North Hales, in the archd. of Suffolk and dio. of Norwich; valued at £18; gross income £467. Patron, in 1835, Sir T. Gooch, Bart. There are a daily and a Sunday school here, supported by Sir T. S. Gooch, Bart. and the Rev. Wm. Gooch. In 1786, a labourer, in mending the roads of this parish, discovered a stone vessel, containing 900 Roman silver coins, the most ancient of which were those of the emperor Vespasian.—About half a mile from the sea is a sheet of fresh water, of about one hundred acres in extent, called Binacre Broad, and abounding in pike and other fish. Pop., in 1831, 208. Houses 19. Acres 1,660. A. P. £1,467. Poor rates, in 1837, £160.

BINBROOKE, a village, formerly a market-town, comprising the parishes of St. Gabriel and St. Mary, in the southern division of the wapentake of Walscroft, parts of Lindsey, union of Louth, county of Lincoln; 8 miles north-east of Market-Raisen. Living of St. Gabriel's, a discharged vicarage in the peculiar jurisdiction of the dean and chapter of Lincoln; valued at £8; gross income £75; in the patronage of the prebendary of Milton in the cathedral church of Lincoln. Living of St. Mary's, a discharged rectory in the archd. and dio. of Lincoln; valued at £10 4s. 2d.; gross income £312; in the patronage of the Crown. There are four daily and two Sunday schools in this parish. It stands on the river Auklam, which is celebrated for fine eels, caught in the vicinity of the wolds. It was formerly a place of some note, but has decayed considerably. There are extensive rabbit-warrens here. Pop., in 1801, 484; in 1831, 1,030. Houses 183. Acres 6,070. A. P. £5,672. Poor rates, in 1837, £597.

BINCHESTER, a township in that part of the parish of St. Andrew-Auckland which is in the north-western division of Darlington ward, co-palatine of Durham; 1 mile north by east of Bishop-Auckland, in the vicinity of the Bishop-Auckland and Weardale railway, and on the western bank of the river Wear. This is supposed by antiquarians to have been the Roman station Vinovium, or Binovium; and many traces of the Romans have been discovered here. The Watling-street either passed through this station, or close on its western side. Binchester is the seat and manor of the Wren family, who have possessed it from the time of James I. The mansion-house is a venerable building with wings, and its environs present a variety of beautiful prospects. Pop., in 1801, 42; in 1831, 37. Houses 5. Acres 500. A. P. £1,139. Poor rates, in 1837, £44.

BINCOMBE, a parish in the hund. of Godertorne, union of Weymouth, Bridport division of the county of Dorset; 4½ miles south by west of Dorchester, intersected by the river Wey. Living, a rectory united with that of Broadway, formerly in the archd. of Dorset and dio. of Bristol, now in the dio. of Salisbury, valued at £9 1s. 5½d.; gross income £505; in the patronage of the master and fellows of Caius college, Cambridge. There is a small daily school in this parish. Here are quarries of good stone, and a mineral spring. On the downs in the neighbourhood are numerous barrows. Pop., in 1801, 129; in 1831, 177. Houses 36. Acres 1220. A. P. £778. Poor rates, in 1837, £108.

BINDERTON, a township and chapelry in the hund. of West-Bourne and Singleton, rape of Chichester, county of Sussex; 3¼ miles north by west of Chichester. The chapel is not used. Pop., in 1801, 53; in 1831, 89. Houses 15. Acres 1790. A. P. £1,031. Poor rates, in 1837, £29.

BINDON (GREAT), a hamlet in the liberty of Bindon, chapelry of Wool, Cerne division, county of Dorset; on the south side of the river Frome, about ¼ a mile to the eastward of Wool. The liberty to which it gives name contains the following places:—Great Bindon, Bexington, East and West Chaldon, Creech Grange in the parish of Steeple, Chamberlain's-mills in the parish of Bere-Regis, Fordington East-mills, West-mills, and Mill-street, the priory in Dorchester, Langcotes in the parish of Winfrith, East Pulham, Wool, and Eastworth in the parish of Edmondsham. "Robert de Novo Burgo, and Maud, his wife, built here an abbey of the Cistercian order, to the honour of St. Mary, A. D. 1172, which was valued, 26th Henry VIII., at £229 2s. 1d. The site of this religious house, (wherein used to be an abbot and nine monks,) was granted 32nd Henry VIII., to Sir Thomas Poyning's." Tanner's Not. Mon.

BINEGAR, a parish in the hund. of Wells-Forum, union of Shepton-Mallet, county of Somerset; 4 miles north of Shepton-Mallet, on the post road to Bath. Living, a rectory within the peculiar jurisdiction of the dean of Wells, valued at £13 12s. 8½d.; rated in the parliamentary returns at £52; and in the patronage of the prebendary of Whitechurch in the cathedral church of Wells. There are two daily schools here. A large fair is held here during Whit-sun-week, chiefly for the sale of horses. This was formerly held at Wells, but in consequence of the plague, was removed hither in the 17th century. Pop., in 1831, 376. Houses 80. Acres 680. A. P. £1,703. Poor rates, in 1837, £61.

BINFIELD HUNDRED, in Oxfordshire, at the south-eastern extremity of the county. Area 23,040 acres. Houses 1,709. Pop., in 1831, 8,607.

BINFIELD, a small village and parish in the hund. of Cookham, union of East-hamstead, county of Berks; 3 miles north-east of Wokingham, and 4 south-east of the Great Western railway. Living, a rectory formerly in the archd. of Berks and dio. of Salisbury, now in the dio. of Oxford; valued at £18 17s. 1d.; gross income £695; in the patronage of the Crown. Here is a day and Sunday National school with an endowment of £37 15s. 6d. per annum, containing 200 children. There are also four daily schools in the parish. This village stands in the midst of the park called the Royal hunt in Windsor forest. Pope's father resided here; and near this a tree is shown as that under which the poet sat and composed many parts of his poem of 'Windsor Forest.' Pop., in 1801, 808; in 1831, 1,045. Houses 222. Acres 3,530. A. P. £4,965. Poor rates, in 1837, £795.

BINGFIELD, a chapelry in the parish of St. John-Lee, southern division of Tindale ward, county of Northumberland; 6 miles north-north-east of Hexham. Living, a perpetual curacy, united with that of St. John-Lee, formerly within the jurisdiction of the peculiar court of Hexham, in the dio. of York, now in the archd. of Northumberland and dio. of Durham, valued at £8; gross income with St. John-Lee; in the patronage, in 1835, of Colonel and Mrs. Beaumont. Here is a daily school with an endowment of £10 per annum, payable out of the estate of W. H. Clarke, Esq. In the neighbourhood there is a mineral spring. Pop., in 1801, 91; in 1831, 96;

Houses 17. Acreage with the parish. Poor rates, in 1837, £46.

BINGHAM HUNDRED, or WAPENTAKE, in the county of Nottingham, consists of two divisions, north and south; and is bounded on the north-west by the hundred of Thurgarton; on the south-west by that of Rushcliff; on the south-east by Leicestershire; and on the north-east by the hund. of Newark. Area 55,760 acres. Houses 2,394. Pop., in 1831, 12,442.

BINGHAM, a small market-town and parish in the northern division of the wapentake and union of Bingham, county of Nottingham; 124 miles north-north-west of London, and 10 east of Nottingham, in the neighbourhood of the Grantham canal. It stands in the centre of the fertile vale of Belvoir, of which it may be considered the metropolis; and consists chiefly of two principal streets running parallel to each other. Bingham is one of the polling places for the members for the southern division of Nottinghamshire. The market is held on Thursday; fairs for draught horses are held on February 9th, 10th, 11th, and 12th; on the first Thursday in May, for horses, cattle, sheep, and swine; on Whit-Thurs-day, May 31st, and November 8th and 9th for foals and hops. Living, a rectory, formerly in the archd. of Nottingham and dio. of York, now in the dio. of Lincoln, valued at £44 7s. 11d.; gross income £1,600. Patron, in 1835, the Earl of Chesterfield. The church is a heavy building, but with an air of considerable magnificence. It has a square tower, highly sculptured, above which rises a lofty spire. Some parts of the interior present specimens of richly sculptured foliage. This church is said by Speed to have been collegiate, and to have been endowed with revenues amounting to £40 lls.; but, according to Tanner, in the valuation of Monasticon, it is only called a guild, and rated at £4 lls. Here was a chantry in the chapel of St. Helen. The Wesleyan and Primitive Methodists have places of worship here. There are nine daily schools in this parish, one of which is endowed with £16 15s. per annum, and three Sunday schools. Charities connected with the parish, exclusive of the school endowment, produce £19 8s. 6d. per annum. Petty sessions for the hundred of Brigham are held here. The living of Bingham was successively held by Abbot, archbishop of Canterbury, Wren, bishop of Ely, and Hammer, bishop of Bangor. Pop., in 1801, 1,092; in 1831, 1,738. Houses 352. Acres 2,930. A. P. £7,493. Poor rates, in 1837, £379. The workhouse erected here for the union of Bingham has been enlarged by the poor law commissioners at an expense of £600. The Bingham poor law union comprehends 40 parishes, embracing an area of 107 square miles; with a population returned in 1831, at 14,773. The average annual expenditure on the poor of this district, during the three years preceding the formation of the union, was £4,386. Expenditure, in 1838, £2,822.

BINGLEY, a parish in the union of Keighley, upper division of the wapentake of Skyrack, west riding of Yorkshire; 202 miles north-north-west of London, and 14 west by north of Leeds, intersected by the Leeds and Liverpool canal. It contains the market-town of Bingley, and the townships of Micklethwaite, East Morton, and West Morton. Living, a discharged vicarage, formerly in the archd. and dio. of York, now in the dio. of Ripon, valued at £7 6s. 8d., rated in the parliamentary returns at £138; gross income £233. Patron, the Crown. The Baptists, Independents, and Methodists, have places of worship here. The Independent church was formed in 1694; the Baptist in 1760; and the Wesleyan Methodist in 1763. Here is a free grammar-school, founded in the reign of Henry VIII., and endowed with lands and tenements, now yielding a yearly revenue of £480. It contains 20 pupils. The endowment is subject to certain payments to the poor; the master has a free house and garden. There are also eleven daily schools, one of which has an endowment of £10, and fifteen Sunday schools in this parish. Here are five alms-houses, each of the inmates of which receives £3 per annum, the gift of Mrs. Sarah Rhodes. Other charities connected with the parish produce about £73 per annum. The principal branch of manufacture is that of worsted yarn, which is carried on to a considerable extent. In 1838 there were 5 cotton mills, employing 466 hands, and 18 worsted mills, employing 1312 hands within this parish. There are also several factories for the manufacture of paper, and malt is made in considerable quantity. Tuesday is the market-day; fairs are held on the 25th January for horned cattle; and on the 25th, 26th, and 27th August for horned cattle, sheep, and linen. There is a branch of the Yorkshire District bank here. The town stands on a hill, on the eastern bank of the river Aire, in a richly wooded country. It consists principally of one long street. Petty-sessions for Bingley and the vicinity are held here and at Keighley; also the petty-sessions for the upper division of Skyrack and the east division of Morley. Pop., in 1801, 4,100; in 1831, 9,256. Houses 1,791. Acres 13,180. A. P. £12,596. Poor rates, in 1837, £1,350.

BINHAM, a parish in the northern division of the hund. of Greenhoe, county of Norfolk; 4 miles north-east of New Walsingham. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Norwich; valued at £6 13s. 4d., and rated in the parliamentary returns at £110; gross income £103. Patron, in 1835, T. T. Clarke, Esq. The church formed part of an ancient monastery, and the western front presents a fine specimen of the early style of English architecture. "Peter de Valois, nephew to William the Conqueror, and Albrede his wife, in the beginning of the reign of Henry I., gave the church of St. Mary and the manor of Binham to the abbey of St. Albans, to the intent that here might be settled a priory of Benedictine monks, subordinate to them of St. Albans, in the same manner as Lewes in Sussex was to the abbey of Cluny. This cell had, about the time of the dissolution, six monks, and estates to the value of £160 lls. per annum, and was granted, 33rd Henry VIII., to Thomas Paston, Esq."—Tanner's Not. Mon. There are two daily and two infant schools here, one of the former is supported by Thomas Clarke, Esq., lord of the manor. Charities connected with the parish produce £55 10s. per annum. Pop., in 1801, 393; in 1831, 493. Houses 121. Acres 2,200. A. P. £2,525. Poor rates, in 1837, £323.

BINLEY, a parish in the Kirby division of the hund. of Knightlow, union of Poleshill, county of Warwick; 2½ miles east of Coventry, on the line of the railway from Birmingham to London. Living, a perpetual curacy not in charge, formerly in the archd. of Coventry and dio. of Lichfield and Coventry, now in the dio. of Worcester; valued in the parliamentary returns at £53; gross income £52. Patron, in 1835, the Earl of Craven. Pop., in 1801, 203; in 1831, 212. Houses 44. Acres 2,470. A. P. £2,694. Poor rates, in 1837, £149.

BINNINGTON, a township in the parish of Willerby, wapentake of Dicker, east riding of Yorkshire; 8 miles south-west by south of Scarborough, on the southern bank of the river Hartford. Pop., in 1801, 38; in 1831, 58. Houses 8. Acres 910.

BINSEY, a parish within the liberty of the city of Oxford, locally situated in the hund. of Wootton, Oxfordshire; $1\frac{1}{2}$ mile north-west of Oxford, on the western bank of the Iais, and intersected by the Oxford canal. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. and dio. of Oxford, of the yearly value of £90; and in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Christ-church. There is a Sunday school here, endowed with the interest of £105, bequeathed by the Rev. William Corne, formerly curate of this parish. Pop., in 1801, 55; in 1831, 74. Houses 13. Acres 470. Poor rates, in 1837, £98.

BINSTEAD, a chapelry in the parish and upper half-hund. of Alton, Alton division of the county of Southampton; 4 miles north-east of Alton, near the post-road to London. Living, a curacy annexed to the vicarage of Alton. Pop., in 1801, 906; in 1831, 980. Houses 144. Acres 7,060. A. P. £5,518. Poor rates, in 1837, £579.

BINSTEAD, a parish in the liberty of East Medina, isle of Wight division of the county of Southampton; $5\frac{1}{2}$ miles east-north-east of Newport, on the coast. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. and dio. of Winchester; valued at £1 7s. 1d., and in the parliamentary returns at £37; gross income £55; in the patronage of the bishop of Winchester. There is a Sunday school here; all the children in the parish have the benefit of daily instruction, at the expense of Mr. Fleming, at schools in adjoining parishes. In this parish are the remains of an abbey of Cistercian monks, founded, in 1132, by Baldwin de Redveris, afterwards earl of Devonshire. Its revenue, at the dissolution, amounted to £184 1s. 10d. Pop., in 1801, 180; in 1831, 258. Houses 46. Acres 1,140. A. P. £1,044. Poor rates, in 1837, £149.

BINSTED, a parish in the hund. of Avisford, rape of Arundel, union of West Hampnett, county of Sussex; 2 miles west by south of Arundel. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Chichester; valued at £5 17s. 8½d.; gross income £150. Patron, in 1835, the Earl of Newburgh. Pop., in 1801, 100; in 1831, 114. Houses 15. Acres 1,010; of which about 180 are in hops. A. P. £796. Poor rates, in 1837, £98.

BINTON, a parish in the Stratford division of the hund. of Barlichway, union of Stratford-on-Avon, county of Warwick; 4 miles west by south of Stratford-on-Avon, on the northern bank of the Avon. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Worcester; valued at £8 10s., and in the parliamentary returns at £140; gross income £140. Patron, in 1835, the Marquis of Hertford. The great and small tithes, the property of the clerical rector, were commuted in 1779. Pop., in 1801, 217; in 1831, 277. Houses 58. Acres 1,260. A. P. £1,330. Poor rates, in 1837, £172.

BINTREE, or BINTRY, a parish in the hund. of Eynesford, union of Mitford and Launditch, county of Norfolk; $5\frac{1}{2}$ miles west by north of Reepham. Living, a rectory, with that of Themelthorpe annexed, in the archd. of Norfolk and dio. of Norwich; valued at £10; gross income £475. Patron, in 1835, Sir J. Astley, Bart. The sum of £45, arising from town-lands, is annually distributed in fuel among the poor of the parish. Pop., in 1801, 278; in 1831, 412. Houses 81. Acres 2,120. A. P. £1,564. Poor rates, in 1837, £160.

BIRBECK-FELLS, a district of Westmoreland, containing portions of the parishes of Crosby-Ravenworth, Orton, and Shap.

BIRCH, a chapelry in the parish of Middleton, hund. of Salford, co.-palatine of Lancaster; 2 miles west-north-west of Middleton, in the vicinity of the York and North Midland railway. There is a new church here, built by the parliamentary commissioners in the Gothic style, at an expense of £4,000.

Sittings 1,000. Pop., and other returns, are included in those of Hopwood.

BIRCH, a chapelry in the parish of Warrington, hund. of West Derby, co.-palatine of Lancaster; $5\frac{1}{2}$ miles west of Warrington, in the vicinity of the Runcorn Gap and St. Helen's railway. Living, a donative curacy formerly in the archd. and dio. of Chester, now in the dio. of Manchester; valued at £3 10s., and rated in the parliamentary returns at £140; gross income, £160. Patron, in 1835, J. Dickenson, Esq. Pop. returned with the parish.

BIRCH (GREAT AND LITTLE), a parish in the Colchester division of the hund. of Lexden, county of Essex; 5 miles south-west of Colchester, in the neighbourhood of the railroad from London to Norwich. Living, a rectory, formerly in the archd. of Colchester and dio. of London, now in the dio. of Rochester; valued at £11; gross income, with the rectory of Little Birch, £484; in the patronage of the bishop of London, and Charles Round, Esq. There are five daily schools, containing 88 pupils, and two Sunday schools in this parish. Here was formerly a castle, the remains of which are yet visible. Pop., in 1801, 560; in 1831, 764. Houses 141. Acres 2,940. A. P. £3,921. Poor rates, in 1837, £464.

BIRCH (MUCH), a parochial chapelry in the upper division of the hund. of Wormelow, union and county of Hereford; $6\frac{1}{2}$ miles south of Hereford. Living, a perpetual curacy not in charge, united with the vicarage of Much Dewchurch. The great and small tithes of Much and Little Birch, the property of the impropricator, vicar, and clerical rector, were commuted in 1812. Pop., in 1801, 329; in 1831, 489. Houses 94. Acres 1,330. A. P. £1,604. Poor rates, in 1837, £99.

BIRCH (LITTLE), a parish in the Colchester division of the hund. of Lexden, county of Essex; 4 miles south-west by south of Colchester, in the neighbourhood of the railroad from London to Norwich. Living, a discharged rectory, formerly in the archd. of Colchester and dio. of London, now in the dio. of Rochester; valued at £5 6s. 8d.; united with the rectory of Great Birch, to which—the church here being desecrated—the inhabitants repair. Returns included in those of Great Birch.

BIRCH (LITTLE), a parish in the upper division of the hund. of Wormelow, union and county of Hereford; $5\frac{1}{2}$ miles south by east of Hereford. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. and dio. of Hereford; valued at £6 12s. 11d., and in the parliamentary returns at £96; gross income £149. Patrons, the governors of Guy's hospital, London. Pop., in 1801, 247; in 1831, 351. Houses 72. Acres 980. A. P. £1,132. Poor rates, in 1837, £102.

BIRCHAM (GREAT), a parish in the hund. of Smithdon, union of Docking, county of Norfolk; $7\frac{1}{2}$ miles south-west by south of Burnham-Westgate. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Norfolk and dio. of Norwich; valued at £22; gross income £527. Patron, in 1835, A. Hamond, Esq. There are two daily schools here, supported by the Marquis and Marchioness of Cholmondeley, and one day and Sunday school supported by the rector. Pop., in 1801, 325; in 1831, 451. Houses 78. Acres 3,530. A. P. £2,216. Poor rates, in 1837, £365.

BIRCHAM (NEWTON), a parish in the hund. of Smithdon, union of Docking, county of Norfolk; 7 miles south-west by south of Burnham-Westgate. Living, a discharged rectory united with that of Bircham-Tofts, in the archd. of Norfolk and dio. of Norwich; valued at £7 13s. 4d.; gross income £435. Patron, in 1835, the Marquis of Cholmondeley. Pop., in 1801, 70; in 1831, 95. Houses

21. Acres 1,150. A. P. £901. Poor rates, in 1837, £43.

BIRCHAM-TOFTS, a parish in the hund. of Smithdon, union of Docking, county of Norfolk; 7½ miles south-south-west of Burnham-Westgate. Living, a discharged rectory united with that of Bircham-Newton. Pop., in 1801, 103; in 1831, 130. Houses 23. Acres 1,450. A. P. £941. Poor rates, in 1837, £110.

BIRCHANGER, a parish in the hund. of Uttlesford, union of Bishop Stortford, county of Essex; 1½ mile south-west by south of Stanstead-Mountfitchet, intersected by the railroad from London to Cambridge. Living, a rectory, formerly in the archd. of Colchester and dio. of London, now in the dio. of Rochester; valued at £9 13s. 4d.; gross income £230; in the patronage of the warden and fellows of New college, Oxford. There is a daily school in this parish. "An hospital was founded here, in the time of King John, by Richard, son of Serlo de Newport, for a master and two chaplains. It was dedicated to St. Mary and St. Leonard, and under the peculiar jurisdiction of the dean of St. Martin's in London. The revenues of it were rated, 26th Henry VIII., at £31 13s. 11d.; and after the suppression, it was granted by King Henry VIII. to Sir Martin Bowes." Tanner's Not. Mon. Pop., in 1801, 299; in 1831, 360. Houses 65. Acres 1,150. A. P. £1,780. Poor rates, in 1837, £276.

BIRCHER. See YARPOLE.

BIRCHES, a township in the parish of Great Budworth, hund. of Northwich, co.-palatine of Chester; 3 miles east-south-east of Northwich. Here, in 1695, Mrs. Elizabeth Dobson bequeathed an estate for the education of two boys, one to be the son of a divine of the church of England, and the other the son of a counsellor. Pop., in 1801, 13; in 1831, 9. House 1. Acres 100. A. P. £180.

BIRCHES (THE), in the franchise of Wenlock, county of Salop, between the parish of Buildwas and Colebrook dale; 3 miles distant from Madeley-market. This place is remarkable as having been the scene of an extraordinary landslip on the 27th of May, 1773, of which a full account was published by Fletcher of Madeley, in connexion with a discourse which that celebrated clergyman preached on the spot, the day after the catastrophe, to an immense concourse of people.

BIRCHINGTON, a parish and seaport, a member of the town and within the liberty of the Cinque port of Dover, locally situated in the hund. of Kingslow, lathe of St. Augustine, union of the Isle of Thanet, county of Kent; 3½ miles west by south of Margate, on the coast. It was anciently called Birchington-in-Gorend. Living, a perpetual curacy, not in charge, annexed to the vicarage of Monkton. The church contains many ancient monuments of the Quekes and Crisp families and others. Here is an independent church, formed in 1819, and one of Wesleyan Methodists, in 1830. There are three daily schools, one of which, containing 65 pupils, is endowed with about £30 per annum, and two Sunday schools, here. Pop., in 1801, 527; in 1831, 843. Houses 183. Acres 1,760. A. P. £3,750. Poor rates, in 1837, £366.

BIRCHOLT, a parish in the franchise and barony of Bircholt, lathe of Shepway, union of East Ashford, county of Kent; 4 miles east by south of Ashford. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Canterbury; valued at £2 10s. 10d., and in the parliamentary returns at £30; gross income £50. Patron, in 1835, Sir E. Knatchbull. The church has been in ruins since the 16th century. Pop., in 1801, 28; in 1831, 45. Houses 5. Acres 310. A. P. £420. Expended for the relief of the poor, in 1837, £3.

BIRCHOVER, a chapelry in that part of the parish of Youlgreave which is in the hund. of High Peake, county of Derby; 5 miles west-north-west of Matlock, and 1 mile from Winster. This place is frequently visited from Matlock and Buxton, on account of a famous rocking-stone, about 32 feet in circumference, and weighing 20 tons. Several other stones of a similar kind once existed in this neighbourhood; and there is a curious range of rocks, called the Router rocks, from which grit-stone is obtained for filtering-cisterns. Pop., in 1801, 125; in 1831, 101. Houses 21. Acreage with the parish. A. P. £719. Poor rates, in 1837, £77.

BIRCLE, or BIRTLE. See BARNFORD.

BIRDBROOK, a parish in the hund. of Hinckford, county of Essex; 7 miles north-west of Castle-Hedingham. Living, a rectory, formerly in the archd. of Middlesex and dio. of London, now in the dio. of Rochester; valued at £19; gross income £500. Patron, in 1835, Sir W. Rush, deceased. There are a daily and a Sunday school here, supported by part of the proceeds of a charity farm. Pop., in 1801, 398; in 1831, 515. Houses 95. Acres 2,640. A. P. £2,562. Poor rates, in 1837, £355.

BIRDFORTH, a wapentake in the north riding of Yorkshire, bounded on the north by the western division of Langbaurgh wapentake; on the north-west by that of Allertonshire; on the south-west by the wapentake of Hallikeld; on the south and south-east by Bulmer wapentake; and on the east by that of Ryedale. Area 92,330 acres. Houses 2,523. Pop., in 1831, 12,316.

BIRDFORTH, a chapelry in the parish of Coxwold, wapentake of Birdforth, north riding of the county of York; 4½ miles north-west of Easingwold, on the post-road to Thirsk, and in the vicinity of the Great North of England railroad. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. of Cleveland and dio. of York; valued at £6 6s. 2d., and rated in the parliamentary returns at £84; gross income £94; in the patronage of the archbishop of York. Pop., in 1801, 32; in 1831, 35. Houses 8. Acres 540.

BIRDHAM, a parish in the hund. of Manhood, rape of Chichester, union of West Hampnett, county of Sussex; 4 miles south-west by south of Chichester, intersected by the Arundel and Portsmouth canal. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Chichester; valued at £10 0s. 10d.; gross income £396; in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Chichester. There is a daily National school here, containing 111 children. Pop., in 1801, 361; in 1831, 486. Houses 71. Acres 1,930. A. P. £2,865. Poor rates, in 1837, £309.

BIRDINBURY, or BIRBURY, a parish in the Southam division of the hund. of Knightlow, union of Rugby, county of Warwick; 4½ miles north by east of Southam, in the neighbourhood of the Warwick and Napton canal. Living, a discharged rectory, formerly in the archd. of Coventry and dio. of Lichfield and Coventry, now in the dio. of Worcester; valued at £7 10s.; gross income £120. Patron, in 1835, Sir T. Biddulph, Bart. The great and small tithes of Birbury and Martin, the property of the clerical rector, lay-impropriator, and vicar, were commuted in 1802. This parish possesses a day and boarding school, including 27 children, and a small daily school. Pop., in 1801, 121; in 1831, 212. Houses 44. Acres 1,180. A. P. £1,527. Poor rates, in 1837, £87.

BIRDSALL, a parish in the wapentake of Buckrose, union of Malton, east riding of Yorkshire; 5½ miles south-south-east of New-Malton. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. of the east riding and dio. of York; valued at £15, and rated in the parliamentary returns at £49; gross income £40. Patron, in 1835, the Marquis of Hertford. There is a daily school here. This parish was the birth-place of Henry Burton, a celebrated puritan divine. Pop., in 1801, 234; in 1831, 244. Houses 38. Acres 3,650. A. P. £4,090. Poor rates, in 1838, £81 11s.

BIRKBY. See CROSS-CANNONBY.

BIRKBY. See MUNCASTER with BIRKBY.

BIRKBY, or BÆRBY, a parish in the wapentake of Allertonshire, union of Northallerton, north riding of Yorkshire; 6 miles north-west of Northallerton, on the line of the Great North of England railroad. It comprises the townships of Birkby, Hutton-Bonville, and Little Smeaton. Living, a discharged rectory in the patronage of the bishop of Ripon; valued at £6 13s. 4d.; gross income £198. There is no school within two miles of this parish. Pop., in 1801, 213; in 1831, 275. Houses 53. Acres 3,400. A. P. £4,069. Poor rates, in 1838, £168 15s. Pop. of the township, in 1801, 91; in 1831, 96. Houses 16. Acres 1,030. A. P. £1,414. Poor rates, in 1838, £70 18s.

BIRKDALE, a township in the parish of Ormskirk, hund. of West Derby, co.-palatine of Lancaster; 7 miles north-west of Ormskirk, on the coast. There is a daily school here, with about 40 children. Pop., in 1811, 391; in 1831, 518. Houses 87. Acres 2,130. Poor rates, in 1838, £88 10s.

BIRKENHEAD, or BIRKET-WOOD, a chapelry in the parish of Bidstone, lower division of the hund. of Wirral, co.-palatine of Chester; 8 miles north-north-east of Great Neston, on the western bank of the Mersey, opposite to Liverpool, to which there is a ferry here. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. and dio. of Chester, rated in the parliamentary returns at £40; gross income £153. Patron, in 1835, F. R. Price, Esq. The chapel, part of the remains of the ancient priory of Birkenhead, stands on a peninsular rock projecting into the Mersey. In the latter part of the reign of King Henry II., or the beginning of that of Richard I., Hamon de Massey, third baron of Dunham-Massey, founded a priory here for 16 Benedictine monks. This monastery was, according to Leland, subordinate to the abbey of St. Werburgh, at Chester, but, in the opinion of Bishop Tanner, it was an independent establishment. The revenue, at the dissolution, was £90 13s., clear; and the site was granted by Henry VIII. to Ralph Worseley. A Wesleyan Methodist chapel was founded here in 1830. Here is also a Roman Catholic chapel. There are two daily schools in the parish. Petty-sessions are held here and at Great Neston for the hundred of Wirral. The Chester Junction railway is at this place carried through a tunnel 324 yards in length. This railway, now executing, was authorized by 7th Will. IV., and 1st Vict. c. 17. It is held in 5,000 shares of £50 each. Its length is 14½ miles. Birkenhead is one of the polling-places for the members for South Chester. Pop., in 1801, 110; in 1831, 236. Houses 396. Acres 900. A. P. £1,732. Poor rates, in 1838, £475.

BIRKENSHAW. See BIRSTALL.

BIRKER, or BERKER, a joint-township with Aushwaite, parish of Millom, Cumberland; 6½ miles east by north of Ravenglass. Pop., in 1801, 96; in 1831, 102. Houses 19. A. P. £603. Poor rates, in 1838, £5 19s.

BIRK-FELL, a mountain on the southern side of Ullswater, Cumberland.

BIRKIN, a parish in the lower division of the wapentake of Barkstone-Ash, west riding of Yorkshire; 3½ miles north-east of Ferry-Bridge, in the vicinity of the York and North Midland railway, and intersected by the Selby canal and the river Aire. It comprises the townships of Birkin, Chapel-Haddlesley, Courteny-Hurst, and temple-Hurst.—Living, a rectory united with the curacy of Haddlesley, in the archd. and dio. of York; valued at £36; gross income £1,024. Patron, in 1835, the Rev. T. Hill. All tithes of Birkin manor and township, the property of the prebendary of Wistow, were commuted in 1809. There is a small daily school in this parish.—Pop., in 1801, 766; in 1831, 873. Houses 163. Acres 5,890. A. P. £6,935. Pop. of the township, in 1801, 139; in 1831, 129. Houses 24. Acres 2,320. A. P. £2,528. Poor rates, in 1838, £114 1s.

BIRKBRIGG, an elevated common in the neighbourhood of Dalton-in-Furness. It commands a prospect of the whole circuit of Morecambe bay, the coast of Lancashire as far as Liverpool, and that of Wales beyond, with the lofty Snowdon.

BIRLEY, a parish in the hund. of Stretford, union of Weobley, county of Hereford; 4 miles east by north of Weobley. Living, a vicarage, subordinate to that of King's Pyon. Pop., in 1801, 126; in 1831, 147. Houses 31. Acres 1,200. A. P. £1,253. Poor rates, in 1838, £60 14s.

BIRLING, or BYRLING, a parish in the hund. of Larkfield, lathe of Aylesford, union of Malling, county of Kent; 6 miles north-west of Maidstone, intersected by the river Medway. It lies at the foot of a range of chalk hills called Birling hills.—Living, a vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Rochester; valued at £6 9s. 4d.; gross income £164. Patron, in 1835, the Earl of Abergavenny. There is a daily school here; and the inhabitants of this parish have the privilege of sending 30 children to two endowed schools in the neighbouring parishes of Leybourne and Snodland. Pop., in 1801, 371; in 1831, 502. Houses 95. Acres 2,240. A. P. £2,351. Poor rates, in 1838, £241 14s.—Between the church and the foot of the Birling-hills is Birling-place, the ancient residence of the Nevills, now occupied as a farm-house.

BIRLING, a township in the parish of Warkworth, Northumberland; 6½ miles south-east of Alnwick, on the northern bank of the river Coquet. Pop., in 1801, 87; in 1831, 85. Houses 15. Acreage with the parish. Poor rates, in 1838, £23 16s.

BIRLINGHAM, a parish in the upper division of the hund. and union of Pershore, county of Worcester; 2½ miles south-south-west of Pershore, on the northern bank of the river Avon, and in the immediate vicinity of the Birmingham and Gloucester railway.—Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Worcester; valued at £9 17s. 4d.; gross income £220. Patron, in 1835, the Rev. R. E. Landor. There are two daily schools in this parish. Pop., in 1801, 353; in 1831, 360. Houses 72. Acres 1,450, of which about 112 are in hops. A. P. £2,802. Poor rates, in 1838, £56 2s.

BIRMINGHAM DIVISION, in the hund. of Hemlingford, county of Warwick, a district comprising the town of Birmingham and 7 parishes. Area 44,830 acres. Houses 31,014. Pop., in 1831, 153,778.

BIRMINGHAM,

One of the greatest manufacturing towns in England, is situated in the above division of the hund. of Hemlingford, on an eminence near the river Rea, in the north-western extremity of Warwickshire, and on the borders of the counties of Stafford and Worcester; 20 miles north-west of Warwick; 109 miles north-west of London through Coventry, by the coach-road, and 112½ by railway; and 97½ by railway, south-south-west of Liverpool. Pop., in 1801, 60,822; in 1831, 146,986; in 1690, it was only 4,000. Houses 29,656. Acres 18,780. The annual rental was assessed, in 1826, at £239,407.—The relief of the poor of Birmingham is administered under a local act. The sum expended for this purpose in the year ending March 25th, 1838, was £34,825.—There are cross mails to Bristol, 88 miles; to Sheffield, 76; to Stourport, 28½; to Leamington, 24; to Shrewsbury, 45; to Tamworth, 15; to Worcester, 26; and to Yarmouth, 200 miles:—and short posts to Curdworth, Erdington, King's Norton, Northfield, Castle Broomwich, Great Barr, Eladon, Tipton, Smethwick, Sutton-Coldfield, Oldbury, Handsworth, Edgbaston, Shirley-street, and Brierley Hill.

The superintendent-registrar has reported that for the two

Ecclesiastical affairs.—Birmingham originally consisted of but one parish,—that of St. Martin, a portion of which was separated, in 1715, for the erection of the parish of St. Philip. The parishes of St. George and St. Thomas were formed in 1829. These four parishes were formerly within the archd. of Coventry and dio. of Lichfield and Coventry, but have been transferred by the church-commissioners to the diocese of Worcester; for all civil purposes, however, Birmingham is still considered as one parish.—The living of St. Martin's is a rectory, valued at £19 3s. 6½d.; gross income £1,200. Patrons, in 1835, Richard Moseley and others, trustees of Mr. T. Walker. The church, originally built of stone in 1300, has been cased in brick. It is in the lower part of the town, and contains some ancient monuments.—The living of St. Philip's is a rectory not in charge, in the patronage of the bishop of Worcester, and annexed to the treasurership of Lichfield cathedral. The church is an elegant edifice in the later Roman, or rather Italian style, erected in 1725, on an eminence in the centre of an area of four acres, which is planted with trees, and surrounded by modern houses.—The living of St. George is a rectory, not in charge; of the yearly value of £408. Patrons, in 1835, the executors of W. Hawkes, Esq. The church was erected in 1822, at an expense of £12,491 6s. 6d.; defrayed partly by a grant from the parliamentary commissioners, and partly by private subscriptions; it contains 1,378 free sittings.—The living of St. Thomas is a rectory, not in charge; of the yearly value of £600; in the patronage of the rector of St. Martin's. The church is a handsome structure in the Grecian style. It was erected, by the parliamentary commissioners, in 1829, at an expense of £14,712, and contains 1,423 free sittings.—Besides these churches there are several chapels. St. Mary's chapel, in the parish of St. Martin, was erected in 1774 by subscription. Living, a perpetual curacy, of the yearly value of £350, and, in 1835, in the patronage of trustees.—St. Paul's chapel, in the same parish, was erected by subscription in 1779. Living, a perpetual curacy, of the yearly value of £200. Patron, in 1835, E. Latimer. The building is in the Grecian style.—Christ-church, a chapel for the especial accommodation of the poor, was erected in 1813, in St. Philip's parish. Living, a perpetual curacy, annexed to the prebend of Tachbrook in the cathedral of Lichfield, and in the patronage of the bishop of Worcester.—St. Bartholomew's is a chapel-of-ease to the rectory of St. Martin's; and St. Peter's a chapel-of-ease to the rectory of St. Philip's. The latter was erected in 1827, by the parliamentary commissioners, in the Grecian Doric style, with a cupola, at an expense of £13,365 16s. 6d.; sittings 1,971. Another church has lately been erected by subscription, bearing the title of 'Bishop Ryder's church,' being a testimonial of the respect entertained for the memory of the late excellent prelate of that name. Its cost was about £4,000; it is of Gothic character, neatly constructed of brick, with stone mouldings.—Several churches have also been built in those populous parts of the adjoining parishes, which fall within the parliamentary boundary of the borough; but it is still contemplated to erect ten additional churches in this large town. The foundation stone of the first of these was laid in October, 1839, near Great Lister street. The building is to be of the decorated Gothic style, with a tower and spire o. 125 feet in height, with lancet-windows in the side-walls.—The Baptists, Society of Friends, Independents, Primitive and Wesleyan Methodists, Swedenborgians, Unitarians, Roman Catholics, and Jews, have places of worship here, some of which are very handsome and spacious buildings. The two Unitarian churches were both formed out of an earlier congregation of Presbyterians about the year 1732. The Cannon-street, Bond-street, and Lombard-street, Baptist churches were formed in 1737, 1785, and 1786, and a fourth Baptist church in 1831; the Carr-lane and Steel-house-lane Independent chapels, in 1747 and 1819, with two others more recently; the Wesleyan Methodist chapels, in 1786, 1789, 1790, and 1825. A church of Primitive Methodists was organized in Bordesley-street in 1831; and a church of Calvinistic Methodists in 1785. To one of the Roman Catholic chapels, and to most of the other dissenting chapels, Sunday and day schools are attached.

Schools, &c.—The free-grammar-school of Birmingham is endowed with revenues arising from land feued for building, of which the rental, in 1839, was £5,000, and which is still increasing by the expiration of leases. It was founded in 1552 by Edward VI. The management of this school is vested in a bailiff and 18 governors, who appoint the masters and ushers. A new and suitable edifice was erected in 1834 by the governors of this wealthy establishment, on a convenient site in the centre of the town, at an expense of nearly £50,000. The design was furnished by Mr. C. Barry of London, and presents a mixed style of Gothic architecture, characterised by new but beautiful and appropriate combinations. The external form of the structure is quadrangular, and extends 174 feet in front, and 125 feet in flank; the internal arrangements embrace two courts similar in form, around and between which the different sections of the buildings rise. The wings of the fronts and the flanking buildings form elegant mansions for the head and second masters. Besides a fixed salary of £400 a-year, the head-master derives additional emoluments in proportion to the number of boys in the school, by a capitation fee on each boy, which, calculating the number of boys at 400, will make the salary £1,000. The governors have recently obtained an act to enable them to appoint masters to teach mathematics, modern languages, and the arts and sciences, in the grammar-school; when these plans, which are now in progress, are effected, it is expected that the number of boys will be 400. The head-master is also entitled to receive 18 boarders, and the second master, 12. An annual visitation of the school is held, at which three examiners, resident members of the universities, attend and examine the boys, and report upon the state of the school to the governors. There are ten exhibitions of £50 a-year each, for four years, attached to this school; they are open to any college, and are given by the governors to the boys who are declared by the examiners to be highest in classical attainments.—The blue-coat charity school has an income of £2,700. It was originally years ending June 30, 1839, there were 6,021 deaths, and 8,218 births registered, of which latter 347 were illegitimate. Of 2,108 marriages solemnized within the same period, 1,854 were according to the rites of the church of England.

founded by subscription, in 1724, for 22 boys and 10 girls, but its plan was extended in 1794, and about 160 boys, and 80 girls, are now clothed, educated, and maintained in it.—On an elevated spot in the suburbs is a school—lately removed from Park street—at which about 50 girls receive an education suitable for domestic servants. This school was established, chiefly by the Unitarian congregations, in 1762. Income £615.—St. Philip's school of industry contains 60 girls. The Statistical society of Birmingham reported, in 1840, that 27,659 children, or about 15.36 per cent. of the population were attending schools of some kind or other. The average period of attendance being 3.3 years. Several branch schools have been erected in judiciously chosen situations, in which large numbers of the children of the working-classes receive a sound and useful English education.—Spring-hill college, an institution for the education of young men for the dissenting ministry amongst Independents and Baptists, is a well-endowed seminary of recent establishment. Its first year's receipts amounted to £2,401.—The general hospital was established in 1779, and is supported in great measure by the profits arising from the triennial musical festival. The number of patients admitted, in 1837, was 2,901; and of slight cases relieved, 10,919.—A dispensary was established in 1794, from which upwards of 5,000 patients annually obtain medical relief. It is supported by subscription.—Here is also a self-supporting dispensary, maintained by small annual contributions from the poor.—An infirmary for the cure of bodily deformity was opened in 1817, and another for diseases of the eye and ear, in 1823, both of which receive liberal support. The general hospital and dispensary are open to students under the usual regulations; and clinical lectures, with pathological illustrations, are given.—Here are numerous alms-houses for the aged and infirm poor, which have been erected and are supported by the judicious application of part of the increasing revenues arising from lands bequeathed for this and other public purposes, by William Lench, in the reign of Henry VIII.—The infant asylum, a house-of-industry, is an extensive establishment, in which upwards of 300 children are maintained, and employed in various occupations suited to their age and capacity.—Other charities connected with the town produce about £238 per annum. "At the end of this town, towards Wolverhampton," says Tanner, "stood the hospital of St. Thomas the apostle, consisting of a warden or prior, and several brethren. It was in being before 13th Edward I.; and was valued, 26th Henry VIII. at £8 5s. 3d. per annum. The ancestors of the Berminghams were accounted founders." This establishment gives name to two streets called the Upper and Lower Priors.

General description.—The town of Birmingham is about 2 miles in length. The older part is in a low and damp situation, but the upper and more recent part is elevated, being approached by an ascent from every side except the north-west. The air is considered salubrious, notwithstanding the large number of manufactories and furnaces; Dr. Price indeed considered Birmingham the most healthy town in England, the rate of mortality on an average of six years, being only as 1 to 59, while in Manchester it was as 1 to 37, and in London as 1 to 31. The streets are lighted with gas, and, upon the whole, well-paved. The houses are in general well-built, chiefly of brick; the more recently erected are in most instances faced with Roman cement and plaster. Some remarkably handsome private dwelling-houses have been erected within the last few years. The town is at present rapidly extending itself. The estate of Lord Calthorpe at Edgbaston is in itself a town of no inconsiderable magnitude, and its annual rental as building-land considerably exceeds the sum paid for its purchase in the last century. The total amount of taxes collected in 1816 was about £36,000; and those of 1838, if calculated at the same rate, would have produced considerably more than £50,000.

Manufactures.—The prosperity of Birmingham has arisen from the extensive manufactures carried on in it,—the abundance of coal and iron-ore in the neighbouring districts,—and the extent of its connections by inland navigation and railroad communication with every part of the kingdom. It has been celebrated for workers in iron since the time of Henry VIII., when Leland described it as inhabited by "smiths that use to make knives and all manner of cutting tools, and lorners that make bites, and a great many nailours." It has participated in the fame of the Soho works, belonging to Messrs. Boulton and Watt, which, though in the county of Stafford, are within 1½ mile of Birmingham. It began to flourish in the reign of Charles II., but the manufacture of fire-arms was not introduced till that of William III., since which period it has risen to be the great mart for muskets, swords, army-accoutrements, and machinery. Before the close of the late war, no less than 14,500 stand of arms were delivered per week to the ordnance office from the manufactures in this town. Burke pronounced Birmingham the 'toyshop of Europe'; but this designation is now by no means characteristic, for the articles of universal utility manufactured here far exceed those intended for ornament and show. Of the smaller articles of manufacture, buttons are the most important, being made here on a very extensive scale; pins, steel-pens, small iron-ware, plated goods, jewellery, and toys of all descriptions, are also extensively manufactured. At the pin-works, 12,000 pins can be cut and pointed, and 50,000 pin-heads made from the wire, in an hour. Of the quantity of steel-pens now manufactured here some idea may be gathered from the fact that upwards of 40 tons of fine sheet steel have been consumed in a year by the principal maker of these light and delicate articles. Factories for articles of a larger description are also numerous. Among these are iron and brass-foundries, manufactories of steam-engines, machinery of every description, and metallic hot-houses. There are also some extensive glass-works. The most interesting establishments are those of Messrs. Boulton and Watt, the Soho works; and the splendid suit of show-rooms now belonging to Mr. Collier, in Church-street, where the most costly and elaborate specimens of workmanship in gold, silver, plated ware, and bronze are exhibited.* In 1838-9 the amount of silver assayed was 114,500 ounces; of gold, 2,125 ounces. The average of men's wages, in 1839, was 24s. 3d. per week; of females 8s.; of boys under 13, 3s. 1d.; of girls 2s. 4d.

* By a report made to the Birmingham Philosophical Institution, in October, 1836, it appears that 160 steam-engines had been erected in this town from 1780 to that period, of which 17 had been erected in 1834, and 22 in 1835. The total horse-power was equal to 2,700 horses. In 1839, it amounted to 4,436 horse-power; consuming 340 tons of coals per day. In 1836, of the estimated horse-power, 275 were used for grinding flour; 1,770 for working metals; 275 for pumping water; 87 for glass-grinding; 97 for working wood; 44 for paper-making and glazing; 37 for grinding clay; 61 for grinding colours and chemicals; and 50 for sundry purposes. The estimated consumption of coals, in 1836, was 216 tons per day; estimated number of persons employed, 4,000 males, and 1,300 females; and the estimated amount of power hired out, equal to 440 horses. These estimates were confined to engines within the borough. Of the 1,770 horse-power employed in working metals, it was computed that 162 is used by iron-founders, first applied in 1788; 570 in rolling copper, brass, and other metals, first applied in 1790; 150 in drawing wire, first applied in 1806; 801 in iron-forges and wrought-iron mills, first applied in 1810; 74 in nail-cutting, first applied in 1813; 104 in Canals and Railroads.—The canals and railroads, by means of which Birmingham communicates with other parts of the island and with the sea, are numerous and important. The old canal opens a communication through the Severn with Shrewsbury, Gloucester, and Bristol, and through the Trent with Gainsborough, Hull, and London. This canal has also a junction with the grand line running through the Potteries of Staffordshire, to Manchester and Liverpool; so that both the Irish sea and the German ocean are laid directly open to Birmingham traders. The new Birmingham and Fazely canal provides a similar water-conveyance by Tamworth, Atherston, Nuneaton, and Coventry, to Oxford; and hence by the Thames to London.—The London and Birmingham railroad, first surveyed in 1830, and ultimately constructed at an expense little short of £5,500,000—nearly double the original estimate—connects the metropolis with this great manufacturing town, and affords increased facilities to commerce. The bill for its formation was first introduced in the commons in February, 1832, but in June was lost in the lords. In the following session the application was renewed, and at last the act was obtained at a cost of £72,869. In June, 1834, the works were begun, and on the 20th July, 1837, about 25 miles of it from London to Boxmoor, were opened; on October 16, 1837, it was opened to Tring, 31½ miles; on April 9, 1838, to Denbigh Hall, 48 miles; and from Birmingham to Rugby, 29 miles; and, finally, the remaining portion, between Denbigh Hall and Rugby, 35½ miles, Sept. 17, 1838: making the total length 112½ miles. Originally it was to have had eleven, but it has now only eight tunnels; viz., the Primrose Hill, 1,164½ yards; Kensal Green, 322½ yards; Watford, 1,791½ yards; North Church, 345½ yards; Linslade, 272 yards; Stowe Hill, 418 yards; Kilsby, 2,398 yards; and Beechwood, about 600 yards.* The London terminus is at Euston Grove, on the New road. This line is 112½ miles in length, and passes near the towns of Coventry, Rugby, Weedon, Wolverton, Leighton, Tring, Berkhamstead, Boxmoor, Watford, and Harrow; intersecting six of the most beautiful counties of England, viz., Middlesex, Hertfordshire, Buckingham, Bedfordshire, Northamptonshire, and Warwickshire.—By means of the Grand Junction railway between Birmingham and Warrington, communication is maintained with Walsall, Bilston, Wolverhampton, Penkridge, Stafford, the Potteries, Whitmore, Crewe, Hartford, Northwich, Warrington, Manchester, and Liverpool; and about 800 mail-bags are taken up and set down every day on this line. Its whole course to its junction at Warrington, with the Liverpool and Manchester railway, is 82½ miles; the expense of executing it was £18,180 per mile. The Birmingham terminus is 371 feet 5 inches above low-water mark at Liverpool. The steepest part of the road is between Madeley and Crewe, where the inclination for nearly 3 miles, is 1 in 180.—A new and competing line of railway is now in progress, under the name of the Manchester and Birmingham Extension railway, which will open a communication between the towns of Stone, Rugeley, Lichfield, Tamworth, Atherstone, and Nuneaton, and between all those places and Manchester to the north; and in conjunction with the Birmingham and Derby railway afford a communication between Derby and other parts to the eastward, and the Potteries, Manchester, Liverpool, and Chester. The length of the main line of this railway is 54 miles and 67 chains; and of the branch 7 miles and 56 chains; and the amount of the estimate of the costs and expenses to be incurred up to the time of the completion of the railway, is £1,158,683.—Gloucester and Derby are also connected with Birmingham, by separate lines of railroad. See DERBY and GLOUCESTER.

Markets.—Monday, Thursday, and Saturday, are the market-days. An excellently-arranged and spacious market-hall, with extensive storing-vaults beneath, has recently been erected, in a simple, massive, and appropriate style of architecture. Fairs are held on the Thursday and two following days in Whitsun-week; and on Thursday and the two following days nearest to the 29th of September. Horses and horned cattle are sold on Thursdays, in a spacious area to the south-west of the town, called Smithfield. At these fairs considerable business is done in cattle, horses, and agricultural produce generally. At the Michaelmas fair such immense quantities of onions are exposed for sale as to give a name to the fair; that of Whitsuntide is most celebrated for its toys and shows. There are several joint-stock banks in Birmingham, viz. the Birmingham banking company, established in September, 1829; the Birmingham Town and District banking company, in July, 1836; and the Birmingham and Midland bank, in August, 1836. The bank of England, the National Provincial bank of England, the Northern and Central bank of England, and the Commercial bank of England, have also branches here; and there are several private banks.

Places of Amusement, Societies, &c.—The public amusements of Birmingham are conducted on a very superior scale. The theatre—erected in 1821 on the site of one burned to the ground in the preceding year—is a handsome building, with a stone front in the Ionic order, adorned with busts in bas-relief or Shakespeare and Garrick. The expense of erecting this building was about £14,000; the season generally commences in May and terminates in October.—The musical festival of Birmingham occurs every third year, and generally attracts crowds of strangers. The town-hall is a very splendid edifice of the Corinthian order, erected in 1833. The interior exhibits a saloon 140 feet in length, 65 feet wide, and 65 feet high, calculated to be capable of containing about 3,000 persons seated, and at public meetings, when the forms are removed, upwards of 8,000. Here the musical festivals are held, and are aided by a magnificent organ. Machinery in union with steam-power was employed in cutting and fluting the columns and working the stones. The structure is of brick, faced with Anglesea marble; the estimated new-making, first applied in 1819; and 34 in drawing metal-labs, first applied in 1822.

* The most formidable works on the line, from the great difficulties encountered in quicksands, water, &c., were the Kilsby tunnel, 2,308 yards, or 1 one-third mile long, and the Bilsworth cutting of about 1,200,000 cubic yards, and averaging 50 feet deep for about two miles. It is estimated that the former cost near £400,000, and the latter above £300,000. "The stone blocks for the whole line" [See 'Leicestershire and Rutland's History, &c.'] "may be estimated at 152,460 tons, and their cost at £180,000. The weight of iron rail used for the whole line is nearly 35,000 tons, which cost about £450,000. The greatest inclination is 16 feet in a mile, excepting that part between Camden Town and Euston-square, about a mile in length. The labour expended on the great pyramid was equivalent to lifting 15,723 million cubic feet of stone one foot high, and required 300,000 men according to Diodorus Siculus, and 100,000 according to Herodotus, twenty years to execute it; whereas the labour expended in the construction of the Birmingham railway is equivalent to 25,000 million cubic feet of stone raised one foot, and has been executed by about 20,000 men in 4½ years!" The Birmingham station is at the eastern extremity of the town, adjoining the station of the Grand Junction railway, and not far from the great London road. The roof covering the Birmingham terminus, and similar to the one at Euston-square, is 133 feet 6 inches in diameter, and carried on iron pillars. The engine-house, 120 feet in diameter, is fitted up with store-rooms, offices, &c., and is capable of holding, exclusive of tenders, 28 engines. The turntables, for removing carriages from one line on to another, are 15 feet in diameter. At this station also there is very extensive accommodation for luggage, &c., and every facility afforded to carriers for the transmission of goods.

cost was £18,000.—Numerous subscription concerts, which are well-supported, take place in the course of the winter. For the amusement and health of the inhabitants, there is an extensive establishment of hot, cold, and sulphurous vapour, and fumigating baths; with a swimming bath 110 feet in length, and 52 in breadth, supplied with a constant influx of water, at the rate of 1,000 hogsheads per hour.—A Society of Arts was instituted here in 1814, and revived and rearranged in 1821. The object was to promote the study of the fine arts by the establishment of an academy for training from the antique; and to encourage and assist living artists by exhibiting and purchasing their works. A well-arranged edifice was erected in 1829, containing several well-lighted rooms for the exhibition of pictures and sculptures, with a commodious drawing-academy, and adorned in front by a superb portico of the Corinthian order. The exhibitions take place annually, and are generally of a high order, as vigorous efforts are made to induce the purchase of pictures. These exhibitions of living artists are occasionally alternated with those of deceased and ancient painters, to which the neighbouring possessors of collections liberally contribute their stores.—A library was established in 1798, which now contains 30,000 volumes; it is a handsome pile of building, containing, besides the spacious apartment in which the principal portion of the books is deposited, a circular reading-room lighted by a dome-lantern resting on elegant Ionic pillars of porphyry. Right of access to this library is obtained by the purchase of a share of the value of £5, and the payment of an annual subscription of £1 5s. 6d. A new library on a similar principle, but on a smaller scale, has more recently been established.—A news-room was erected in 1825; it is a handsome structure, ornamented with lofty pillars of the Ionic order, and containing an appropriate suite of apartments.—The Philosophical institution, consisting of about 400 members, was established about 50 years ago; its plan was extended in 1810, and lectures on various branches of science are delivered in the theatre erected for the purpose; connected with this establishment, is a museum, at present chiefly rich in geological specimens, scientifically arranged; an extensive collection of philosophical apparatus; a library and reading-room. At this institution was fixed the first complete anemometer, or self-recording rain and wind-gauge, invented by Follett Osler, Esq., a resident in the town.—A school of medicine and surgery was established here in 1828, in which lectures are delivered on anatomy, physiology, pathological anatomy, chemistry, materia medica, forensic medicine, midwifery, botany and surgery; and prizes liberally distributed by the munificence of the friends of the institution. Certificates of having attended the lectures are received by the court of examiners of the royal college of surgeons in London. Attached to this school is a valuable and well-selected library, and an extensive museum, comprising objects in various branches of natural history, and a splendid collection of anatomical preparations and models. A second school of medicine has lately been formed, which, in its incipient state, promises to produce useful effects. Its lectures are well-attended, and its proceedings characterized by energy and spirit.—A mechanics' institution has been in existence here since 1825; it numbers about 400 members. A second institution of nearly similar nature, under the name of the 'Athenaeum,' was established in 1839, and is increasing. There are also several minor societies formed by persons of the industrious classes for intellectual improvement and rational recreation.—A public cemetery company was formed here in 1832.—A horticultural society was established a few years ago. The gardens, in the parish of Edgbaston, are extensive, and the conservatories lofty and well-filled with valuable specimens. A Savings bank was established in 1827. In 1838 the deposits in it amounted to £134,525; averaging £5 3s. 8d. each deposit.

Municipal Government.—Birmingham was not until recently incorporated; and to this probably it owes in part its rapid advancement, for there is no obstacle to the settlement of strangers here in any line of business. This town, without disposable public or corporate funds, has, within the last thirty years, by the spirited expenditure of individuals, and the judicious management of the street commissioners, changed its character of blackness, closeness, and defective taste, for that of a town of spacious, wide, and well-paved streets, abounding in public buildings, in the offices of large trading companies and in private undertakings, exhibiting generally a highly-advanced state of architectural decorations, and a general air of substantial wealth and independence, which is seldom equalled.—Birmingham obtained a municipal charter on 31st October, 1838; and on the 26th December, 1838, the first election of mayor, town-councillors, and aldermen, 64 in number, took place, when William Scholefield, Esq., was elected mayor. A separate court of quarter-sessions for the borough has recently been granted by the Crown. A court of requests for the town, and the hamlet of Deritend, for the recovery of debts under 40s., was established by act of the 25th of George II., the powers of which were extended to the recovery of debts under £5, by an act of the 4th of George III. It is under the jurisdiction of 112 commissioners, 3 of whom are a quorum, assisted by two clerks, who must be lawyers. The number of cases decided in this court, in 1837, was 6,113. Under the new representation act, this most important town, so long without a representative in the great councils of the nation, sends two members to parliament. The parishes of Birmingham and Edgbaston; and the townships of Bordeley, Duddeston, Netchels, and Deritend, are included within the elective boundary of the new borough. The constituency is about 4,500. The police of Birmingham have been newly organized under the direction of the home-secretary. The prison has the police-office, in Moor-street, in front, with a court-yard attached. Behind it are the gaoler's apartments and the main prison, which possesses two yards,—one for men, the other for women. There are 2 day-rooms and 16 cells, and also rooms in the gaoler's house which he lets out to those who can pay for the accommodation. The cells are dark and the ventilation defective. Prisoners, after being brought before the magistrates, are transferred to Warwick. No clothing is allowed. On payment of 1s. a-night for the first three nights, and of 6d. a-night afterwards, a separate room and a better bed may be obtained. Five police officers are attached to this establishment, who also act as turn-keys, by alternate weeks. There is also a prison exclusively for debtors of the court of requests. It is in a dilapidated and neglected condition. It has 4 day-rooms, and 2 airing-yards, one for the higher and another for the lower class of debtors. The prisoners are allowed to labour at trades, but the profit must go to the creditor. One pound and a half of bread is allowed daily. During 1832, 424 male, and 24 female debtors were admitted; the average number appears to be 18 or 20.

History.—Birmingham is mentioned in Domesday book, under the name of Bermenheham. The name, as well as those of the neighbouring hamlets of Castle and West Bromwich, is supposed to have been derived from the Saxon brom,—‘broom,’ which grows in the vicinity, and wick, ‘a descent.’ Some antiquaries suppose it to be the Breminium of the Romans; others, amongst whom is the local historian Hutton, assert that it was a British town of some importance, and celebrated for the manufacture of arms, even previous to the Roman invasion. During the last four centuries it has been written Brumwycheham, Bromwychem, Bermicham, Bre-mecham, and Burmyngham, also with various transpositions of the vowels in the two first syllables.* In the reign of Charles I. Birmingham distinguished itself in the parliamentary cause; in 1643 it suffered considerably, having been taken and partially burnt by Prince Rupert, who inflicted a heavy fine on the inhabitants. The editors of the ‘Magna Britannia’ published in 1734, describing Birmingham, say: “The present state of this town is this: It is very populous, and swarms with inhabitants, but most of them of the meaner sort, which serve for carrying on the trade of iron-works, for which they are such ingenious artificers, that their performances in iron and steel are admired not only at home, but in foreign parts. We hear nothing here but the noise of hammers and anvils, which gain makes the sweetest music to the people of it. The lower part of the town is very watery, but the upper is stored with many handsome buildings.” Birmingham was the scene of a disgraceful political riot in July 1791, which commenced on the 14th, and continued several days, during which property was destroyed to the amount of £60,000, for which a compensation was granted by parliament to the amount of about £27,000, and some of the ringleaders were executed. A somewhat similar outrage was perpetrated in this town, in 1839, by some misguided chartists, who set fire to several private buildings in the neighbourhood of the Bullring, and committed various gross excesses until dispersed by the appearance of the military.

BIRSTALL, or BURSTALL, a chapelry in the parish of Belgrave, county of Leicester; 3½ miles north-by-east of Leicester, on the western bank of the river Soar, and in the vicinity of the Midland counties railway. There are two daily schools here. Pop., in 1801, 285; in 1831, 393. Houses 80. Acres 1,260. A. P. £2,868. Poor rates, in 1838, £171 5s. Tithes commuted. See BELGRAVE.

BIRSTALL, a parish and village in the wapentake of Morley, west riding of Yorkshire; 7 miles south-west of Leeds, in the vicinity of the York and North-Midland railway. It comprises the chapels of Clackheaton, Drighlington, Liversedge, and Tong, with the townships of Great and Little Gomersall, Heckmondwike, Hunsworth, and Wike, and the hamlet of Birkenshaw.—Living, a discharged vicarage, formerly in the archd. and dio. of York, now in the dio. of Ripon; valued at £23 19s. 2d.; gross income £275; in the patronage of the bishop of Ripon. The church, which was erected in the time of Henry VIII., has recently been enlarged. At Birkenshaw a new church has been erected by the parliamentary commissioners, in the Gothic style of architecture, with tower and spire, at an expense of £2,929 5s. 6d. Sitings 708. A Wesleyan Methodist church was formed here in 1782. This parish possesses 23 daily schools. Charities connected with Birstall produce about £57 per annum.—The inhabitants of this populous district are chiefly engaged in the manufacture of woollens. In 1838 there were 33 woollen mills employing 1,332 hands, 8 worsted mills employing 760 hands, 1 cotton mill in which 88 persons were engaged, and 2 silk mills employing 33 individuals, within this parish. Coal and iron-stone abound here, the mines of which give employment to about 500 men. Fieldhead, in this parish, was the birth-place of the celebrated Dr. Priestley, in 1733. Pop. in 1801, 14,657; in 1831, 24,103. Houses 5,311. Acres 13,180. A. P. £33,990. Poor rates, in 1838, £4,435 10s.—Birstall is now within the jurisdiction of the second division of a court of requests for the recovery of debts under £15, erected by act of parliament in 1839 in the parishes of Halifax, Bradford, and others. It was also created a polling-district for the west riding in 1837.

BIRSTWITH, a township in the parish of Hampsthwaite, west riding of Yorkshire; 7½ miles west of Knaresborough, on the southern bank of the river Nidd. There is a daily school here. Pop., in 1801, 630; in 1831, 747. Houses 127. Acres 1,670. A. P. £1,656. Poor rates, in 1838, £202 7s.

BIRTHORPE, a chapelry in the parish of Semperingham, county of Lincoln; 2½ miles east of Folkeham. Living, a curacy, not in charge, annexed to the vicarage of Semperingham. Pop., in 1801, 58; in 1831, 54. Houses 12. Acres 390. A. P. £694. Poor rates, in 1838, £32 11s. Tithes commuted. See BILLINGBOROUGH.

BIRTLE, a township, with Bamford, in the parish of Middleton, co.-palatine of Lancaster; 2½ miles north-east of Bury. There are two daily schools here. Pop., in 1801, 753; in 1831, 1,650. Houses 262. Acres 1,480. A. P. £2,025. Poor rates, in 1838, £232 5s.

BIRTLES, a township in the parish of Prestbury, co.-palatine of Chester; 2½ miles west by north of Macclesfield. Pop., in 1801, 35; in 1831, 54. Houses 9. Acres 460. A. P. £1,043. Poor rates, in 1838, £66 5s.

BIRTLEY, a chapelry in the parish of Chester-le-Street, county of Durham; 5 miles south by east of Gateshead, in the immediate vicinity of the Great North of England railway. There are 3 daily schools here. The inhabitants are chiefly colliers. Salt is made from a brine spring in the vicinity. There is a Roman Catholic chapel here, registered in 1791. Pop., in 1801, 1,026; in 1831, 1,520. Houses 269. Acres 1,480. A. P. £3,730. Poor rates, in 1838, £296 4s.

BIRTLEY, or BIRKLEY, a parochial chapelry—separated in 1765 from the parish of Chollerton—union of Bellingham, county of Northumberland; 5 miles south-east of Bellingham. It includes the township of Broomhope with Buteland, and anciently formed part of the barony of Prudhoe. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. of Northumberland and dio. of Durham; rated in the parliamentary returns at £140; gross income £85. Patron, in 1835, the Duke of Northumberland. There are 2 daily schools here. Pop., in 1801, 351; in 1831, 447. Houses 100. Acres 2,290. A. P. £4,398. Poor rates, in 1838, £28 4s.

BIRTSMORTON, a parish in the lower division of the hund. of Pershore, union of Upton-upon-Severn, county of Worcester; 5½ miles south-west of Upton-upon-Severn. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Worcester; valued at £7 8s. 1½d.; gross income £200. Patron, in 1835, the Rev. S. Thackwell. Here is a charity school, endowed, in 1703, by the Rev. Samuel Juice; and farther endowed, some years since, with the interest of £300, bequeathed by Lady Judith Coot. Birtsmorton was long the property of a very ancient family, of Cornish origin, the Nanfaus. The manor-house, moated round, is of great antiquity, the rooms are all wainscotted and carved with armorial bearings. In the church are many curious monuments. Pop., in 1801, 238; in 1831,

* The late Mr. Hamper affirms that the name has been spelt in different books upwards of 140 ways.

311 Houses 52. Acres 1,410. A. P. £1,537. Poor rates, in 1837, £118.

BISBROOKE, a parish in the hund. of Wrاندike, union of Uppingham, county of Rutland; 1½ mile east of Uppingham. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Northampton and dio. of Peterborough; valued at £6 0s. 4d.; gross income £258. Patron, in 1835, the Duke of Rutland. The great and small tithes of Bisbrooke manor, the property of the clerical rector, lord of the manor and vicar, were commuted in 1795. Pop., in 1801, 196; in 1831, 177. Houses 38. Acres 720. A. P. £1,815. Poor rates, in 1837, £841.

BISCATHORPE, or BESKERTHORPE, a parish and small village on the banks of the river Bane, in the eastern division of the wapentake of Wraghoe, parts of Lindsey, union of Louth, county of Lincoln; 8 miles north-east by east of Wragby. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. and dio. of Lincoln; valued at £5 18s. 4d., and in the parliamentary returns at £137; gross income £180. Patron, the Crown. Pop., in 1801, 43; in 1831, 45. Houses 8. Acres 1,050. A. P. £964. Poor rates, in 1837, £22.

BISHAM, or BYSHAM-MONTAGUE, a parish in the hund. of Beynhurst, union of Cookham, county of Berks; 4½ miles north-west of Maidenhead, on the eastern bank of the Thames. Living, a discharged rectory, formerly in the archd. of Berks and dio. of Salisbury, now in the dio. of Oxford; valued at £7 13s. 1d., and in the parliamentary returns at £57; gross income £156. Patron, in 1835, G. Vansittart, Esq. There is a day and Sunday National school here, attended by 67 children. There is an extensive manufactory of sheet-copper, copper-bolts, and other articles here. Here was anciently a preceptory of the Knights Templars, a part of the buildings of which now forms part of the manor-house. It was often visited by Henry VIII. and by Queen Elizabeth, and a chamber is shown as that which she occupied. The following account of this religious house is given by Tanner in his Notitia Monastica:—"Robert de Ferraris, in the time of Stephen, gave the manor of Bisleham to the Templars, who thereupon made here a preceptory for the knights of that order. Upon their dissolution, in the time of Edward II., this seems not to have passed with the greater part of their estates to the knights of St. John of Jerusalem, for they had before granted it away in fee to Hugh de Spencer, junr. Afterwards it came to William Montacute, earl of Salisbury, who, A. D. 1338, built a priory here for canons of the order of St. Augustine, which was endowed, 26th Henry VIII., with £327 4s. 6d., per annum. The prior and convent having surrendered this monastery 5th July, 1536, King Henry VIII., in the year following, re-founded and more amply endowed it with the lands of the late dissolved abbey of Chertsey, and the priories of Cardigan, Bethgelert, Ankerwike, Little Marlo, Medmenham, &c., to the yearly value of £681 14s. 9d., for the maintenance of an abbot, who was to have the privilege of wearing a mitre, and thirteen Benedictine monks. But this new abbey was of short continuance, being surrendered 19th June, 30th Hen. VIII., and the site was granted, 7th Edward VI. to Sir Edward Hoby." Pop., in 1801, 596; in 1831, 771. Houses 142. Acres 2,520. A. P. £4,434. Poor rates, in 1837, £333.

BISHAMPTON, a parish in the middle division of the hund. of Oswaldslow, union of Pershore, county of Worcester; 4½ miles north-east by north of Pershore. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Worcester; valued at £7 9s. 9d.; gross income £113; in the patronage of the bishop of Worcester. Tithes, moduses, &c., the property of the bishop of Worcester and the vicar, were commuted in 1795. There is a daily school here. Pop., in 1801, 308; in 1831, 393. Houses 78. Acres 2,140. A. P. £2,478. Poor rates, in 1837, £167.

BISHOP-AUCKLAND. See AUCKLAND (BISHOP).

BISHOPSBOURNE, a parish in the hund. of Kinghamford, lathe of St. Augustine, union of Bridge, county of Kent; 4 miles south-east by south of Canterbury, on the post-road to Dover. It is called in Domesday, Burnes, that is, borne, from the bourn or stream which runs into it, being the head of the river called the Lesser Sour. It had the name of Bishop's bourne from its belonging to the archbishop. There is but one village in the parish, namely, Bourne. Living, a rectory with the curacy of Barham, in the archd. and dio. of Canterbury; valued at £39 19s. 2d.; gross income £1,549; nett income £1,240; in the patronage of the archbishop of Canterbury. There is a day and Sunday school here. The pious and celebrated Richard Hooker died, rector of this parish, in 1600. His monument, which is in the chancel, exhibits his bust, in a square cap and gown. Pop., in 1801, 242; in 1831, 358. Houses 65. Acres 1,860. A. P. £1,913. Poor rates, in 1837, £354.

BISHOP'S-CANNINGS. See CANNINGS (BISHOP'S).

BISHOP'S CASTLE, a borough, parish, and market-town, with separate jurisdiction, in the hund. of Purslow, union of Clun, county of Salop, comprising five several townships; 159 miles north-west by west of London, and 20 south-west by south of Shrewsbury. The town is built on a hill near the river Clun. The bishops of Hereford, Camden remarks, "had a castle at Bishop's Castle, the site of which is now the Castle-inn, and the keep a bowling-green, and part of the walls and vaults remaining; a mile from hence towards the borders of Montgomeryshire, on a high hill, is Bishop's Mote, an intrenchment of near an acre, with a keep at the west end; this is supposed a remain of the Roman wars, but more probably of much later date." The local limits of the borough are extensive, embracing a circuit of about 15 miles, and being from 3 to 4 miles in width in all directions. Living, a vicarage in the archd. of Salop and dio. of Hereford; valued at £9 12s. 11d., and in the parliamentary returns at £129; gross income £385. Patron, in 1835, the Earl of Powis, who takes the great tithes as lay-impropriator. The church presents some fine specimens of Norman architecture. The Independents and Primitive Methodists have chapels here; the Independent church was formed in 1810. Here is a free school for 25 boys and as many girls, founded, in 1737, by Mrs. Mary Morris, and endowed with £1,000 in the 3 per cents. The bishop of Hereford appoints the master. There are, besides, four daily and two Sunday schools here. Charities connected with the parish produce about £17 1s. per annum. The townhouse is an elegant structure, and the streets, though not regular, are remarkable for their cleanliness. Water is obtained chiefly from wells, but a small supply is brought in pipes to the marketplace from the neighbouring hills. Friday is the market-day, when the corn-dealers attend with samples. Fairs are held on Friday before February 13th, Friday before March 15th, first Friday after May day, July 5th, September 9th, and November 13th, for sheep, horned cattle, and horses. The day preceding the last three fairs is for sheep and pigs. The town is governed by a bailiff, recorder, and 15 capital burgesses, assisted by a town-clerk, two sergeants-at-mace, and inferior officers, under charters of 15^o Elizabeth and 15^o James I. A court of quarter-sessions for the borough is held on the Wednesday after the county quarter-sessions. A court of record is held every second Saturday for the recovery of debts under £20. The petty-sessions for the hundreds of Clunna and Purlow, are held here. The town was erected into a borough in the 26^o of Elizabeth, and returned two members to parliament. The right of election was finally vested in the resident burgesses, who were only about 160 in number. The bailiff was returning officer; and the earl of Powis, as proprietor of the town, had a predominating influence. It was disfranchised by the reform act, but is one of the polling places for the members for South Salop. The common called the Moat, or Burgesses' hill, constitutes the principal landed property of the corporation, which presents the rare example of being free of debt. The fairs are much attended by the Welsh, and the great intercourse with Wales is a source of considerable advantage to the town. Pop., in 1801, 1,813; in 1831, 2,007. Houses 488. Acres 6,000. A. P. £8,248. Poor rates, in 1837, £438.

BISHOP'S-COURT, Isle of Man. See KIRK-MICHAEL.

BISHOP-DALE, a township in the parish of Aygarth, western division of the wapentake of Hang, north riding of Yorkshire; 12 miles south-west by south of Middleham. There is a small daily school here. Pop., in 1801, 84; in 1831, 108. Houses 16. Acres 5,960. Poor rates, in 1837, £29.

BISHOP'S-FONTHILL. See FONTHILL (BISHOP'S).

BISHOP'S-FROME. See FROME (BISHOP'S).

BISHOP'S-HULL. See HULL (BISHOP'S).

BISHOP-SIDE (HIGH and LOW), a chapelry in the parish and liberty of Ripon, locally situated in the wapentake of Claro, west riding of Yorkshire; 11 miles west-south-west of Ripon, on the northern bank of the river Nidd. It contains the market-town of Pateley-bridge. There are twelve daily schools here, one of which, containing 36 pupils, is endowed by the will of Miss Shepherd for the instruction of 22 boys and 4 girls, and three Sunday schools. The lead-mines of this chapelry give employment to 97 men. Pop., in 1801, 1,487; in 1831, 1,843. Houses 387. Acres 3,480. A. P. £4,160. Poor rates, in 1837, £1,006.

BISHOP'S-LYDEARD. See LYDEARD (BISHOP'S).

BISHOP'S-MIDDLEHAM. See MIDDLEHAM (BISHOP'S).

BISHOP'S-MONKTON. See MONKTON (BISHOP'S).

BISHOP'S-NYMPTON. See NYMPTON (BISHOP'S).

BISHOP'S-OFFLOW. See OFFLOW (BISHOP'S).

BISHOP'S-STOKE. See STOKE (BISHOP'S).

BISHOPSTONE HUNDRED, in the rape of Pevensey, county of Sussex. Area 2,710 acres. Houses 50. Pop., in 1831, 410.

BISHOPSTONE, a parish in the hund. and union of Swansea, county of Glamorgan, South Wales; 6 miles south-west of Swansea, near the coast. Living, a rectory, formerly in the archd. of Caermarthen and dio. of St. David's, now in the dio. of Llandaff; valued at £9 6s. 8d.; gross income £251; in the patronage of the bishop of Llandaff. Here is a daily charity school with a small endowment. Pop., in 1801, 303; in 1831, 476. Houses 105. A. P. £1,234. Poor rates, in 1837, £104.

BISHOPSTONE, a parish in the hund. of Grima-worth, county of Hereford; 7 miles west-north-west of Hereford. Living, a discharged rectory, united with the vicarage of Yazor, in the archd. and dio. of Hereford; valued at £7 7s. 6d. Patron, Sir R. Price. Here are 2 daily schools; and Berrington's hospital for 5 women: income, in 1836, £43 7s. 6d. Pop., in 1801, 172; in 1831, 278. Houses 61. Acres 840. A. P. £1,025. Poor rates, in 1837, £49.

BISHOPSTONE, a parish in the hund. of Flexborough, rape of Pevensey, union of Newhaven, county of Sussex; 2 miles north-west by north of Seaford. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Lewes and dio. of Chichester; valued at £8 13s. 4d., and in the parliamentary returns at £75; gross income £68; in the patronage of the bishop of Chichester. There is a small daily school here. This parish is within the liberty of the duchy of Lancaster. Pop., in 1801, 188; in 1831, 293. Houses 24. Acres 1,820. A. P. £2,050. Poor rates, in 1837, £178.

BISHOPSTONE, a parish in the hund. of Downton, county of Wilts; 3½ miles south of Wilton. Living, a vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Salisbury; valued at £12 1s. 3d.; there is also a sinecure rectory, valued at £19 14s. 2d.; gross income £806. Patron, in 1835, the Earl of Pembroke. The church is a handsome structure. There are two daily and two Sunday schools here. Pop., in 1801, 535; in 1831, 603. Houses 127. Acres 2,730. A. P. £4,987. Poor rates, in 1837, £537.

BISHOPSTONE, a parish in the hund. of Ramsbury, union of Highworth and Swindon, county of Wilts; 5½ miles east of Swindon, in the neighbourhood of the Great Western railway. Living, a vicarage, formerly in the archd. of Wilts and dio. of Salisbury, now in the dio. of Gloucester and Bristol; valued at £6 6s. 8d., and in the parliamentary returns at £97 14s. 3d.; gross income £208. There is a daily school here, containing 83 scholars, originally founded by the Rev. Thomas Cocker, and endowed with funds now producing £11 6s. per annum, and subsequently, by Mr. Thomas Goddard, with £27 19s. 1½d. per annum. There are also two Sunday schools. Charities connected with the parish produce about £70. Pop., in 1801, 530; in 1831, 688. Houses 121. Acres 3,330. A. P. £3,831. Poor rates, in 1837, £243.

BISHOP'S-STORTFORD. See STORTFORD (BISHOP'S).

BISHOP'S-SUTTON HUNDRED, in the Alton north division of the county of Southampton. Area 20,570 acres. Houses 531. Pop., in 1831, 3,303.

BISHOP'S SUTTON, a parish in the hund. of Bishop's-Sutton, Alton north division, county of Southampton; 2 miles south-east of New Alresford, on the post-road to London. Living, a vicarage, united with that of Ropley, in the archd. and dio. of Winchester; valued at £19 10s. 2½d.; gross income £360. Patrons, in 1835, Sir Baring, Bart. and J. Deacon, Esq. There are a daily and a Sunday school here. There is also a parochial charity school for this parish and Ropley, situated in the latter. Pop., in 1801, 379; in 1831, 527. Houses 95. Acres 3,510. A. P. £3,370. Poor rates, in 1837, £344.

BISHOP'S-TACKBROOK. See TACKBROOK (BISHOP'S).

BISHOP'S-TAWTON. See TAWTON (BISHOP'S).

BISHOP'S-TEIGNTON. See TEIGNTON (BISHOP'S).

BISHOP'S-THORNTON. See THORNTON (BISHOP'S).

BISHOPSTROW, a parish in the hund. and union of Warminster, county of Wilts; 1½ mile south-east of Warminster. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Wilts and dio. of Salisbury; valued at £11 10s.; gross income £222. Patron, in 1835, Sir J. D. Astley, Bart. There is a daily school in this parish. Pop., in 1801, 227; in 1831, 278. Houses 54. Acres 980. A. P. £1,463. Poor rates, in 1837, £219.

BISHOP'S-WOOD. See BREWOOD.

BISHOPS-WALTHAM HUNDRED, situate partly in the New Forest, eastern division, and partly in the Portadown division of the county of Southampton. Area 32,620 acres. Houses 1,565. Pop., in 1831, 8,408.

BISHOP'S-WALTHAM. See WALTHAM (BISHOP'S).

BISHOP'S-WILTON. See WILTON (BISHOP'S).

BISHOPTHORPE, or THORPE-UPON-OUSE, a parish and township in the ainstey of the city and union of York; $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles south by west of York, on the western bank of the river Ouse, and in the vicinity of the York and North Midland railway. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. and dio. of York, valued at £4; gross income £134; in the patronage of the archbishop of York. This parish possesses two day and Sunday National schools. Since the destruction of Cawood castle, in the parliamentary war, the palace erected here in the reign of John, by Archbishop Walter de Grey, has been the residence of the archbishops of York. The great and small tithes of the township, the property of the lay-impropriator and vicar, were commuted in 1757. De Grey also founded the chapel, which is in the early style of English architecture. The principal additions and alterations were made by Archbishop Drummond in 1763-6; and several new apartments were added by Archbishop Vernon. The pleasure-grounds occupy about six acres. Charities connected with this parish produce £11 12s. per annum. Pop., in 1801, 218; in 1831, 445. Houses 79. Acres 760. A. P. £1,110. Poor rates, in 1837, £101.

BISHOPTON, a parish and village in the south-western division of Stockton ward, union of Sedgfield, co.-palatine of Durham; 6 miles west-north-west of Stockton-on-Tees, and 2 miles south of the Clarence railway. It comprises the townships of Bishopton, East and West Newbiggins, and Little Stainton. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Durham, valued at £4 5s. 10d.; gross income £179; in the patronage of Sherburn hospital. This parish possesses two daily schools containing 90 pupils, and a Sunday school. There are here vestiges of an intrenchment, supposed to have surrounded the mansion of Roger de Conyers, who, says Lambard, "in tyme of Kinge Stephen resistid one William Cumyn an ambitious prelate which sought by forcible and warlike means to invade the sea, and to have compelled the monkes of Durham to have elected him after Gaufride (which died about the yeare 1136,) their byshop, which bycause they refused to do, he beseiged, sacked, and spoiled, not only thabbey, but the towne of Durham also, with suche crueltie and exquisite tormortes of deathe against suche as resisted him, as scarcely is the like to be found eyther in the Scottes or Danes themselves, which have after a most barbarous sort often tymes heryed that quarter; howbeit, in thend, he bothe lost his desyre, and was compelled by the nobilitie of the country (armed for that purpose) to submitte himselfe to the lawfully elect, whose name was William also; whatsoever the cause was, it is named of the byshop." Pop. of the township, in 1801, 349; in 1831, 423. Houses 102. Acres 5,100. A. P. £2,067. Poor rates, in 1837, £77.

BISHOPTON, a township in the parish and liberty of Ripon, west riding of Yorkshire; $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles west-north-west of Ripon. Pop., in 1801, 106; in 1831, 118. Houses 13. Acres 350. A. P. £1,161. Poor rates, in 1837, £57.

BISHOP-WEARMOUTH. See WEARMOUTH (BISHOP).

BISHTON, a parish in the lower division of the hund. of Caldecott, union of Newport, county of Monmouth; 4 miles south-east of Caerleon. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. and dio. of Llandaff, rated in the parliamentary returns at £60; gross income £51; in the patronage of the archdeacon of Llandaff. There are two boarding schools here. Pop., in 1801, 145; in 1831, 155. Houses 33. Acres 1,850. A. P. £1,364. Poor rates, in 1837, £70.

BISLEY HUNDRED, in the county of Gloucester, is bounded on the north by the hund. of Tewkesbury; on the north-east by that of Rapsgate; on the south-east by Crowthorne and Minety hund.; on the south by the hund. of Longtree; and on the west by that of Whitstone. Area 27,730 acres. Houses 4,098. Pop., in 1831, 19,776.

BISLEY, a market-town and extensive parish in the hund. of Bisley, union of Stroud, county of Gloucester, 97 miles west of London, and $3\frac{1}{2}$ east by north of Stroud, intersected by the Gloucester and Bristol railway, and the Stroudwater canal. The parish includes the chapelry of Chalford. The market-day is Thursday, but from the difficulty of access it is little attended. Fairs are held on May 4th, and November 12th, for cattle, sheep, and horses. The inhabitants are much employed in the manufacture of woollens. In 1838 there were 3 woollen mills here, employing 70 hands. The electors vote for the members for East Gloucester. Living, a vicarage in the archd. of Gloucester, and dio. of Gloucester and Bristol, valued at £19 10s. 5d.; gross income £528. Patron, the Crown. The church is an elegant building, in a mixed style of architecture. In the church-yard is an octagonal cross surmounted by an ancient font. The Independents have a chapel here. Here is a free school with an endowment of £13 14s. per annum, the master of which also receives £12 12s. for the education of ten boys, who are also clothed on an endowment given in 1820 by Mr. Taylor. There are thirteen other daily schools in this parish, two of which are partly supported by endowment, and five Sunday schools. Charities connected with the parish produce about £88 per annum. The common was given to the poor of Bisley by Roger Mortimer, earl of March, in the reign of Edward III.; it consisted at first of 1200 acres, but has been in a great measure inclosed. Several Roman antiquities have been found in the parish. Pop., in 1801, 4,227; in 1831, 5,896. Houses 1,264. Acres 7,980. A. P. £7,683. Poor rates, in 1837, £1,911.

BISLEY, a parish in the hund. of Godley, union of Chertsey, county of Surrey; 4 miles south-east of Bagshot, in the vicinity of the Southampton and London railroad, and of the Basingstoke canal. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Surrey and dio. of Winchester, valued at £7 16s. 8d.; gross income £202. Patron, in 1835, S. Thornton, Esq. There are two daily schools here. Charities connected with the parish produce £24 4s. Pop., in 1801, 196; in 1831, 270. Houses 57. Acres 780. A. P. £1,025. Poor rates, in 1837, £73.

BISPHAM, a parish in the hund. of Amounderness, union of the Fylde, co.-palatine of Lancaster; 2 miles west by north of Poulton, on the coast. It comprises the townships of Bispham with Norbreck, and Layton with Warbreck. Living, a perpetual curacy, formerly in the archd. of Richmond and dio. of Chester, now in the dio. of Manchester, valued at £8, and rated in the parliamentary returns at £150; gross income £375. Patron, in 1835, P. K. Fleetwood. There are four daily schools in this parish, one of which has an endowment of £70 per annum, and three Sunday schools. Pop., in 1801, 727; in 1831, 1,256. Houses 233. Acres 3,490. A. P. £7,616. Poor rates, in 1837, £537. Pop. of the township, in 1801, 254; in 1831, 313. Houses 71. Acres 1,490. A. P. £3,177. Poor rates, in 1837, £195.

BISPHAM, a township in the parish of Croston, hund. of Leyland, co.-palatine of Lancaster; 6 miles north-east of Ormskirk, in the vicinity of the Leeds and Liverpool canal. Here is a free grammar-school, containing about 30 boys, founded by Richard Durning, in 1692, and endowed with land producing £200 per annum. Pop., in 1801, 172; in 1831, 256. Houses 44. Acres 850. A. P. £1,736. Poor rates, in 1837, £99.

BISTERN-CLOSES. See BURLEY.

BITCHFIELD, a parish in the wapentake of Beltisloe, parts of Kesteven, union of Grantham, county of Lincoln; 3 miles north by west of Corby. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Lincoln, valued at £5 11s. 5½d., and in the parliamentary returns at £33; gross income £134; in the patronage of the bishop of Lincoln. There is a daily school here. Pop., in 1801, 95; in 1831, 135. Houses 26. Acres 1,540. A. P. £2,385. Poor rates, in 1837, £62.

BITCHFIELD, a township in the parish of Stamfordham, Tindale ward, county of Northumberland; 1 mile north-east of Black Heddon. Pop., in 1801, 28; in 1831, 40. Houses 6. Acreage with the parish. Poor rates, in 1837, £8.

BITTADON, a parish in the hund. of Braunton, south Molton division of Devon, county of Devon; 5½ miles north by west of Barnstaple. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Barnstaple and dio. of Exeter, valued at £6 2s. 8½d., and rated in the parliamentary returns at £90; gross income £83. Patron, in 1835, G. Barbor, Esq. Pop., in 1801, 24; in 1831, 57. Houses 8. Acres 5,100. B. P. £698. Poor rates, in 1837, £18.

BITTERING (LITTLE). See BRESTON.

BITTERLEY, a parish partly in the hund. of Munsalw, and partly in that of Overs, county of Salop; 4 miles north-east by east of Ludlow. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Salop and dio. of Hereford, valued at £18 6s. 3d.; united with the curacy of Middleton; gross income £652; nett income £555. Patron, in 1835, Sir J. D. King, Bart. The church of Bitterley is a handsome structure, consisting of a body without side aisles. The chancel is divided from the body by a screen of oak carved in open quatre foils; at the top are foliage and grotesque ornaments. It contains an ancient stone font. The pulpit is of oak, finely carved. In the church-yard is an elegant stone cross, raised on steps, supporting an hexagonal shaft. On the top are tabernacled niches, containing sculptured representations of the Virgin and Child, the crucifixion, &c.—This parish possesses five daily schools, one of which is partly supported by an endowment, consisting of the rent of a small estate of the value of £36 per annum. Other charities connected with the parish produce about £28 per annum.—The Clec hill near the church-yard, is a bold and grand object, upon the top of which are the remains of an encampment, said to be Roman. Its extreme point, called Titterstone, appears to be of volcanic formation. Many parts of the hill afford very extensive prospects, varied and beautiful. The interior of this immense mountain produces coal and ironstone in abundance. The inhabitants of Bitterley are chiefly miners, and, in 1831, 50 men were employed in the collieries here. Pop., in 1801, 1,063; in 1831, 1,194. Houses 232. Acres 5,610. A. P. £3,574. Poor rates, in 1837, £728.

BITTERN AND POLLOCK, a tything in the parish of South Stoneham, hund. of Mansbridge, Fawley division of the county of Southampton; 2 miles north-east of Southampton, in the vicinity of the Southampton and London railroad. It is within the jurisdiction of the Cheyney-court of Winchester. This was the seat of the Roman Clausentum, and relics of the Romans have been found here. Pop., in 1831, 703. Houses 139. Other returns with the parish.

BITTESBY, a liberty in the parish of Claybrooke, hund. of Guthlaxton, county of Leicester; 3 miles west by north of Lutterworth, on the line of the Midland Counties railway. Pop., in 1831, 11. House 1. A. P. £1,204. Poor rates, in 1837, £28.

BITTESWELL, a small parish and village in the hund. of Guthlaxton, county of Leicester; 1 mile north by west of Lutterworth, and 2 miles east of the Midland Counties railway. Living, a vicarage, formerly in the archd. of Leicester and dio. of Lincoln, now in the dio. of Peterborough, valued at £4 3s. 0½d.; gross income £428; in the patronage of the Haberdashers' company and Christ's Hospital, London. The church has been renovated within these few years. All tithes, the property of the Haberdashers' company, London, and the vicar, were commuted in 1787. There is a daily school here. Charities connected with this parish produce £58 7s. per annum. Pop., in 1801, 398; in 1831, 439. Houses 97. Acres 2,630. A. P. £3,064. Poor rates, in 1837, £255.

BITTON, a parish in the upper division of the hund. of Langley and Swinehead, county of Gloucester; 6 miles south-east of Bristol, on the northern bank of the river Avon, and in the vicinity of the Great Western railway. It comprises the chapelries of Hanham and Oldland, with the hamlet of Bitton. Living, a discharged vicarage, formerly in the dio. of Gloucester, now in the archd. of Bristol, and dio. of Gloucester and Bristol, valued at £18 15s.; gross income £350. The church is a handsome edifice in the Norman style of architecture. A new church has been erected here by the parliamentary commissioners, in the Gothic style, with a tower, at an expense of £2,293. Sitings 1,019. There are seven daily and seven Sunday schools in this parish, besides three infant schools. Charities connected with Bitton produce about £27 per annum. In this parish are extensive collieries, and much iron ore; 531 men are employed in coal-mines, quarries, and on the railroad. At Hanham there are traces of a camp and station of the Romans. Pop., in 1801, 4,992; in 1831, 8,703. Houses 1,696. Acres 7,520. A. P. £15,373. Pop. of the hamlet, in 1801, was 1,094; and in 1831, 2,258. Houses 435. A. P. £7,386. Poor rates, in 1837, £753.

BIX, or BIXBRAND, a parish in the hund. of Binfield, union of Henley, county of Oxford; 4 miles north-west by north of Henley-on-Thames. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Oxford, valued at £9 15s.; gross income £500. Patron, in 1835, the Earl of Maclesfield. There is a daily school here. Pop., in 1801, 303; in 1831, 409. Houses 77. Acres 3,130. A. P. £2,957. Poor rates, in 1837, £375.

BIXLEY, or BEXLEY, a parish in the hund. and union of Henstead, county of Norfolk; 3 miles south-east by south of Norwich, on the line of the railroad from London to Norwich. Living, a discharged rectory with Earl's Framlingham, in the archd. of Norfolk and dio. of Norwich, valued at £5; gross income £691. Patron, in 1835, Charles Brereton, Esq. Pilgrimages were formerly made here to the image of St. Wandegisilus, the patron saint. Bexley Hall, the seat of the Earl of Roseberry, is a handsome, well-built edifice, erected about the middle of last century, by Sir Edward Ward. It is situated in well-wooded grounds near the high-road leading from Norwich to Bungay. Pop., in 1801, 33; in 1821, 84. Houses 20. Acres 760. A. P. £1,408. Poor rates, in 1837, £70.

BLABY, a parish in the hund. of Guthlaxton, union of Blaby, county of Leicester; 4 miles south by west of Leicester, on the line of the Midland Counties railway, and intersected by the Union canal. It includes the chapelry of Countess-Thorpe. Living, a rectory, formerly in the archd. of Leicester and dio. of Lincoln, now in the dio. of Peterborough, valued at £15 5s.; gross income £400. Patron, the Crown. The great and small tithes, the property of the clerical rector, were commuted in 1766. The Baptists have a place of worship here; the church was formed in 1807. This parish possesses eight daily and four Sunday schools. Pop., in 1801, 1258; in 1831, 1840. Houses 381. Acres 3,300. A. P. £4,845. Poor rates, in 1837, £462.—A work-house has been erected here by the poor-law commissioners, for the union of Blaby, at an expense of £4,400, capable of accommodating 350 persons.—The Blaby poor-law union comprehends 22 parishes, embracing an area of 53 square miles; with a population returned in 1831 at 13,061. The average annual expenditure on the poor of this district, during the three years preceding the formation of the union, was £9,145. Expenditure, in 1838, £6,604.

BLACKAUTON, a parish in the hund. of Cole-ridge, union of King's-bridge, county of Devon; 5 miles west of Dartmouth. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. of Totness and dio. of Exeter, valued at £15 8s. 9d., and in the parliamentary returns at £118; gross income £126. Patron, in 1835, J. H. Seale, Esq. The church contains a Norman font and a richly carved wooden screen. There is a daily school in this parish. Pop., in 1801, 1,019; in 1831, 1,477. Houses 212. Acres 5,850. A. P. £8,332. Poor rates, in 1837, £886.

BLACKBOROUGH, a parish in the hund. of Hayridge, county of Devon; 5 miles east-south-east of Cullompton. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Exeter, valued at £4, and in the parliamentary returns at £113; gross income £140. Patron, in 1835, the Earl of Egremont. The church is desecrated, and the inhabitants resort to the church of Kentisbere, with which parish the population is returned.

BLACKBOROUGH, or BLACKBURGH, in the parish of Middleton, hund. of Free-bridge, county of Norfolk.—“Roger de Scales, and Muriel his wife, temp. Henry II., brought some monks to this place, (then also called Shiplade,) and built a priory for them to the honour of the blessed Virgin and St. Catherine, wherein were afterward religious of both sexes, under the government of Hamo Wauter and Maud his mother, but Robert, son to the said Roger Scales, before the year 1200, settled this house upon nuns of the order of St. Benedict, who continued here (about ten in number) till the general suppression, when it was rated at £76 3s. 9d., per annum. It was granted to the bishop of Norwich and his successors, 4^o Edward VI.”—Tanner's Not. Mon.

BLACKBOURNE HUNDRED, in the lathe of Scray, county of Kent. Area 17,050 acres. Houses 449. Population, in 1831, 2,829.

BLACKBOURN HUNDRED, in the county of Suffolk, is bounded on the north by the county of Norfolk; on the west by the hundred of Lackford; on the south by that of Thedwestry; and on the east by the hundred of Hartesmere. Area 67,370 acres. Houses 1,929. Pop., in 1831, 14,267.

BLACKBROOK (THE), a river, running into the Stour, near Loughborough, county of Leicester.

BLACKBURN HUNDRED, in the co.-palatine of Lancaster, consists of two divisions—higher and lower—and is bounded on the north and east by Yorkshire; on the south by the hundred of Salford; on the south-west by that of Leyland; and on the west by Amounderness hundred. Area 175,590 acres. Houses 29,509. Pop., in 1831, 168,057. Petty-sessions for places generally within the higher and lower divisions of the hund., are held at Blackburn, Clitheroe, Whalley, and at other places, when and where the magistrates' services are required.

BLACKBURN,

A parish and market-town in the lower division of the hund. and union of Blackburn, co.-palatine of Lancaster; 212 miles north-west of London, 30 south-east of Lancaster, and 24 north-north-west of Manchester, intersected by the Leeds and Liverpool canal, which passes close to the town, and affords an extensive line of inland navigation. The parish comprises 23 townships, viz. the market-town of Blackburn, and the townships of Balderston, Billington, Lango, Great Harward, Over Darwen, Salisbury, Samlesbury, Tockholes, Walton-le-dale, Clayton-le-dale, Cuerdale, Lower Darwen, Dinkley, Eccleshill, Little Harwood, Livesley, Mellor, Osbaldeston, Plessington, Ramsgate, Richton, Wilpshire, and Witton. These townships, except such as are under the immediate care of the vicar of Blackburn, are divided into 8 chapelries. The parish of Blackburn, which is 14 miles long by 10 broad, was originally part of the parish of Whalley.

Ecclesiastical Affairs, &c.—The living is a vicarage, formerly in the archd. and dio. of Chester, now in the dio. of Manchester, valued at £8 1s. 8d.; gross income £918. The church was originally part of the ancient monastery of Whalley, but was almost entirely rebuilt in 1819. In 1826, a new church was completed at an expense of £26,000. Besides these, there are the chapels of St. John, St. Peter, and St. Paul, the livings of which are curacies, and, as well as all the out-chapelries in this parish, in the patronage of the vicar, but independent of him in point of revenue. The Baptists, Independents, Scottish Secession, Society of Friends, Methodists, Swedenborgians, Unitarians, and Roman Catholics, have places of worship here. The oldest Baptist church was formed in 1760; the Wesleyan Methodist church in 1780; one of Association Methodists in 1838; and a church of Primitive Methodists in 1825. In 1778 a church of a Presbyterian character was formed, which, in 1792, became Independent. A second Independent chapel is now (1840) in process of erection. The Baptists have also a second chapel in course of erection. The Secession church was formed in 1828.—Here is a free grammar-school, founded in 1567, and endowed with £120 per annum; also a school in which 90 girls receive instruction and clothing, founded in 1764 by William Leyland. There are 53 daily, 50 Sunday-schools, and 14 infant-schools in this parish. Several of these schools are conducted on the principles of the National, and others on those of the British and Foreign school system. There are also several charitable institutions and donations to the poor: among others, a strangers' friend society, and a society for the relief of poor women during childbirth. The Independents have at present an academy here for the education of young men for the ministry, but it is intended shortly to remove this institution to the neighbourhood of Manchester.

General description.—The market-town of Blackburn was formerly the capital of a sterile distract called Blackburnshire. It stands on a small stream, anciently called Blakeburn, or the yellow stream; and is sheltered by hills on the north-east and north-west. The country around is barren, but has been much improved by cultivation. The streets are irregularly built, partly owing to the intermixture of glebe and other lands; but they contain some good houses, and are paved, lighted with gas, and watched under the provisions of an act of parliament. There is a good supply of water; and an act for better lighting with gas the town and township was passed in the session of 1837-8. A theatre was erected here in 1818, and there are assembly-rooms, and a subscription library. Two newspapers are published in this town; and there is a savings' bank. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the various branches of the cotton-manufacture. In 1821, of 9,795 families in this parish, only 552 were employed in agriculture. In 1838 there were 44 cotton mills, employing 10,460 hands. Under the reform act, Blackburn returns two members to parliament. The number of electors is about 840.

Manufactures.—“The manufactures of Blackburn,” says Baines, in his excellent ‘Lancashire Directory,’ “appear to have arisen in the time of the commonwealth, and may be dated about the year 1650. The first fabrics for which this place was distinguished, were called Blackburn checks, a species of cloth consisting of a linen warp and cotton wool, one or both of which being dyed in the thread gave to the piece, when woven, a striped or checked appearance. This article was afterwards superseded by the Blackburn greys, so called from the colour, neither the warp nor the weft having been dyed. The component parts of this cloth consisted of a mixture of linen and cotton, and when manufactured, the pieces were generally sent to London to be printed. The great era of improvements in the cotton business, which opened about the year 1765, led the manufacturers of this district to turn their attention to the making of calicoes,—so called from their resemblance to the India manufacture brought from the province of Calicut, and from that time to the present Blackburn has enjoyed the advantages of this branch of the cotton business more perhaps than any other place in Lancashire. James Hargrave, a carpenter of Blackburn, was amongst the first of those persons who endeavoured to overcome the disadvantages under which the cotton weavers laboured, owing to the want of yarn when it was to be produced by the distaff and the spindle. This ingenious artisan, in 1767, according to the statement submitted to the house of commons, by Mr. (afterwards Sir Richard) Arkwright, ‘constructed an engine that would at once spin 20 or 30 threads of cotton into yarn for the fustian manufacture; but because it was likely to answer in some measure the end proposed, his engines were burnt and destroyed (by a mob), and himself driven out of Lancashire; he afterwards removed to Nottingham in 1769, and obtained a patent for his engine; but his patent right was invaded, and his invention being thus cruelly wrested from him, he died in obscurity and in great distress.’ This representation, made by Mr. Arkwright, does not appear to be strictly correct: though James Hargrave did construct, he did not invent the spinning machine. The merit of inventing the crank and comb for taking the carding from the cylinder of the carding-engine belongs to James Hargrave, and fairly ranks this ingenious, but ill-fated man, amongst that class of worthies to which Lancashire is indebted for its present pre-eminence in the manufacture of cotton. The number of pieces of cotton goods manufactured at Blackburn weekly is now estimated at 49,200, the workmanship of which, in the various processes, gives employment to 10,000 persons, and the annual value of these goods before they are dyed and printed, is calculated at two millions sterling. One of the causes of the extent of the cotton manufacture here is to be found in the abundant supply of fuel furnished by the southern part of this parish, and another in the skill, industry, and enterprise of the inhabitants. Although Blackburn may justly lay claim to the earliest improvements in spinning machinery, yet it is only within the last seven years that the spinning of cotton has been carried on in this town and neighbourhood to any great extent. Where property is not secure, trade can never flourish, at least not that particular branch of it to which the insecurity applies. It has been seen that the machines of James Hargrave, the patentee of the spinning jenny, were destroyed by popular violence, as early as the year 1769; and ten years afterwards a spinning factory, on a large scale, established at Wensley Fold, 1 mile to the west of this town, shared the same fate. The natural consequence of these outrages was to drive persons inclined to prosecute this branch of the manufacture to Manchester and other places where the business was less obnoxious. Nearly half a century was necessary to inspire public confidence; but about the end of the revolutionary war spinning manufactories began to be erected here, and there are now about 100,000 spindles at work in the town and its immediate vicinity, which yield an average weight of yarn of about 100,000 lbs. weekly, chiefly about 40 hanks to the pound.”

Government, &c.] The town is regulated by commissioners, appointed according to act of parliament, and by constables. It is within the jurisdiction of the magistrates of the hundred, who hold petty-sessions here. The market-days are Wednesday and Saturday. A convenient market-place is much wanted; Fleming square, which is now used, being much too small. In this square is a handsome cloth hall for the exhibition and sale of woollens. Fairs for horses, horned cattle, and toys, are held on Easter Monday and Tuesday, May 11th and 12th, and October 17th. The Manchester and Liverpool District bank, and the Commercial bank of England, have branches here. There are penny-posts to Whalley, Darwen, Gisburne, Accrington, and Clitheroe. Pop., in 1790, 5,000; in 1801, 83,531; in 1831, 59,791. Houses 10,041. Acres 45,620. A. P. £107,639. Poor rates, in 1837, £10,893. Pop. of the town, in 1801, 11,980; in 1831, 27,091. Houses 4,594. Acres 3,610. A. P. £37,758. Poor rates, in 1837, £3,840.—Robert Bolton, a celebrated divine, was born at Blackburn in 1572.—It is in contemplation to form a railway from Preston, by Blackburn, to Todmorden on the Manchester and Leeds railway:—see TODMORDEN.

BLACKBURNTON, a parochial town in the hundred of Bampton, union of Witney, county of Oxford; $5\frac{1}{2}$ miles south-south-east of Burford. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Oxford; valued at £140; gross income £160; in the patronage of the dean and canons of Christ church. The impropriate and vicarial tithes, moduses, &c., the property of the dean of Oxford and the vicar, were commuted in 1770. There are two daily schools here. Pop., in 1801, 273; in 1831, 352. Houses 66. Acres 1,300. A. P. £346. Poor rates, in 1837, £216.

BLACK-CALLERTON, a township in the parish of Newburn, west division of Castle ward, county of Northumberland; 6 miles north-west of Newcastle-upon-Tyne. There is a daily school in this township endowed with £9 10s. per annum, payable for ever out of the Black-Callerton estate

There is also a Sunday school, to which a lending library is attached. Pop., in 1801, 495; in 1831, 436. Houses 80. Acreage with the parish. Poor rates, in 1837, 293.

BLACK-CHAPEL. See WALTHAM (GREAT).

BLACKDEN, a township in the parish of Sandbach, hund. of Northwich, co.-palatine of Chester; $6\frac{1}{2}$ miles south-south-east of Nether Knutsford, on the line of the Chester extension railway. There is a daily school here. Pop., in 1801, 136; in 1831, 170. Houses 32. Acres 760. A. P. £1,018. Poor rates, in 1837, £122.

BLACKDOWN, or BLADEN, a ridge of hills in the county of Dorset. Here are many pits, running from east to west; they are of the form of an inverted cone, in some instances 60 yards across, and never containing water even in the wettest seasons. Their origin is ascribed to the Druidical priests.

BLACKENHURST HUNDRED, in the county of Worcester, consists of two divisions, lower and upper; the former is situated in the division of Northfield; the latter in that of Pershore. Area 17,340 acres. Houses 683. Pop., in 1831, 3,115.

BLACKFORD, a parish in the hund. of Whitley, union of Wincanton, county of Somerset; $4\frac{1}{2}$ miles west-south-west of Wincanton. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. of Wells and dio. of Bath and Wells; valued at £6 11s. 0½d., and in the parliamentary returns at £129 5s. 3d.; gross income £177. Patrons, in 1835, the heirs of J. Hunt. It is an ancient building in the early style of English architecture, with a Norman arch at the entrance. Pop., in 1801, 159; in 1831, 192. Houses 21. Acres 680. A. P. £948. Poor rates, in 1837, £67.

BLACKFORDBY, a chapelry in the parish of Ashby-de-la-Zouch, western division of the hund. of Goscote, county of Leicester; 2 miles west-north-west of Ashby-de-la-Zouch. This chapelry possesses a daily school and two Sunday schools. Pop., in 1801, 243; in 1831, 327. Houses 67. Acres 1,320. A. P. £2,039. Poor rates, in 1837, £123.

BLACKHEATH HUNDRED, in the lathe of Sutton-at-Hone, county of Kent. Area 16,580 acres. Houses 13,483. Pop., in 1831, 77,690.

BLACKHEATH, a hamlet, chiefly in the parish of Greenwich, but extending into those of Lewisham, Lee, and Charlton, hund. of Blackheath, lathe of Sutton-at-Hone, county of Kent; $6\frac{1}{2}$ miles south-east of London, in the vicinity of the Croydon railroad, and the Croydon canal. On this heath, and in its vicinity, there are many handsome villas. Here are two episcopal chapels, the one in the parish of Lewisham, and the other in an extra-parochial place called Kidbrook. There are also several schools here. The most important is the free grammar-school, founded and endowed in 1652 by the Rev. Abraham Colfe, vicar of Lewisham, for the instruction of 31 boys of Lewisham and the adjoining parishes, and for the sons of all the clergy in the hundred of Blackheath. On the east side of the heath is Morden college, for the support of decayed merchants above sixty years of age. It was completed in 1695, by Sir John Morden, Bart., an affluent Turkey merchant, who was interred in the chapel here in 1708. He endowed it with the manor of Old-court, now producing £1,600 per annum. The establishment consists of 30 brethren, who must be upwards of 50 years of age, and a chaplain. The inmates dine at a common table, and receive £20 per annum each.—The hundred of Blackheath is called in Domesday book the hundred of Grenoez, i. e. Greenwich, but the present name was in use in the 7th Edward I., and was probably derived either from the bleakness of its situation or the nature of its soil. From its vicinity to London, Blackheath has been the scene of several memorable transactions. In the reign of Richard II., the insurgents under Wat Tyler assembled here, as did Jack Cade and his followers in 1451. Foreign ambassadors have been met here in great pomp, and the corporation of London received Henry V. at this place on his return from the battle of Agincourt. The Cornish rebels under Lord Audley were met here, and vanquished by Henry VII., in 1497.—In the immediate vicinity of the heath, towards Deptford, a cavern, consisting of several irregular chambers, excavated from solid chalk, was discovered about 1780. It is supposed to have been intended as a retreat during the struggles of the Danes and Saxons. Fairs are held here on May 12th and October 11th for bullocks, horses, and toys.

BLACKHEATH HUNDRED, in the county of Surrey, consists of two divisions, first and second, and is bounded on the north by the hundred of Woking; on the east by that of Watton; on the south by the county of Sussex; and on the west by the hundred of Godalming. Area 40,930 acres. Houses 1,504. Pop., in 1831, 8,681.

BLACKHEDDON, a township in the parish of Stamfordham, north-east division of Tindale ward, county of Northumberland; 14 miles north-west of Newcastle-on-Tyne. Pop., in 1801, 56; in 1831, 64. Houses 12. Poor rates, in 1837, £76.

BLACKHOUSE, in the parish of Polton, hund. of Bewsbury, lathe of St. Augustine, county of Kent. Tanner says that here was "a priory of White or Premonstratensian canons dedicated to St. Nicholas, at first a cell to Lavinden in Bucks, but afterwards annexed to St. Radegund's near Dover."

BLACKLAND, a parish in the hund. and union of Calne, county of Wilts; $1\frac{1}{2}$ mile south-east of Calne, on the post-road to Marlborough. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. of Wilts and dio. of Salisbury; valued at £3 10s. 10d.; gross income £160. Patron, in 1835, the Rev. James Mayo. Pop., in 1801, 48; in 1831, 55. Houses 13. Acres 460. A. P. £1,613. Poor rates, in 1837, £33.

BLACKLEY, or BLAKELEY, a chapelry in the parish of Manchester, hund. of Salford, co.-palatine of Lancaster; $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles north of Manchester. Living, a curacy, not in charge, formerly in the archd. and dio. of Chester, now in the dio. of Manchester; rated at £132 9s.; gross income £140; in the patronage of the collegiate church of Manchester. The church was built about A. D. 1610, and has recently been enlarged. The Wesleyan Methodists, Independents, and Socinians, have meeting-houses here. A Presbyterian church was formed in 1700; a Methodist church in 1806. This chapelry possesses five daily and four Sunday schools. Some of the most extensive dyeing works in England are situated here. The river Irk waters this place. Pop., in 1801, 2,361; in 1831, 3,020. Houses 492. Acres 1,840. A. P. £5,455. Poor rates, in 1837, £456.

BLACKLOW HILL, in the hund. of Knightlow, Warwickshire, 2 miles north of Warwick, is memorable as being the spot where Piers Gaveston, the ill-starred minion of Edward II. was beheaded by order of the Earl of Warwick and other powerful barons. A grey-stone cross, bearing the following inscription, marks the place of execution:—"In the hollow of this rock was beheaded, on the 1st day of July 1312, by barons, lawless as himself, Piers Gaveston, Earl of Cornwall; the minion of a hateful king—in life and death a memorable instance of misrule." From the summit of the hill a delightful and diversified view of surrounding scenery is obtained.

BLACKMANSTONE. See DYMCHURCH.

BLACKMORE, a parish in the hund. of Chelmsford, union of Ongar, county of Essex; $8\frac{1}{2}$ miles north-west by west of Ingatstone. Living, a vicarage in the archd. of Essex and dio. of London; valued at £6 13s. 4d., and in the parliamentary returns at £52; gross income £83. Patrons, in 1835, the representatives of C. A. Crickitt, Esq. There are four daily and two Sunday schools in this parish. Here "an hermitage or priory of Black canons was built by Adam and Jordan de Samford, to the honour of St. Lawrence, before or in the beginning of King John's reign. This was one of the small monasteries which Cardinal Wolsey procured to be dissolved, 17th Henry VIII, in order to the endowment of his two colleges at Oxford and Ipswich, at which time the earl of Oxford claimed to be founder, and it was valued at £85 9s. 7d. per annum. Upon the attainder of the cardinal, this priory was granted in exchange, 23d Henry VIII. to Waltham abbey; and after the general suppression, to John Smith, 23d Henry VIII." Tanner's Not. Mon. A fair is held here on August 21st for cattle in general. Pop., in 1801, 591; in 1831, 648. Houses 127. Acres 1,990. A. P. £4,248. Poor rates, in 1837, £280.

BLACKPOOL, a chapelry in the parish of Bispham, hund. of Amounderness, co.-palatine of Lancaster; 4 miles south-west of Poulton, on the coast. Living, a perpetual curacy, formerly in the archd. of Richmond and dio. of Chester, now in the dio. of Manchester; of the yearly value of £130; in the patronage of the perpetual curate of Bispham. The chapel was erected in 1821. Here is also an Independent chapel. Blackpool, which was formerly an inconsiderable hamlet, is now much resorted to in summer as a bathing-place, and has therefore increased considerably. The visitors—chiefly from Manchester—are sometimes so numerous as 800. There are some good hotels, and two coaches run daily between this place and Preston. The beach is smooth and sandy, and therefore excellently adapted for bathers; the view from the beach on a fine day is varied and extensive, commanding the promontory of Furness, the fells of Westmoreland, the crags of Lancashire, the hills of Cumberland, and the mountains of North Wales. A theatre, library, and news-room, have lately been erected, and assemblies are occasionally held. The pool which gives name to the place is at the south end of the village near a house called Foxhall, once the residence of the Tyldesleys. The sea appears to have encroached very considerably on the land at this place. At the south end of the chapelry is a building, called Vauxhall, now in a ruinous condition, but formerly the retreat of popish recusants. In 1715 the Pretender was concealed here till matters were ripe for a general insurrection. Returns with the township of Layton and Warbrick.

BLACKBOD, a village and chapelry in the parish of Bolton, hund. of Salford, co.-palatine of Lancaster; $4\frac{1}{2}$ miles south-south-east of Chorley, in the vicinity of the Leeds and Liverpool canal, and the Wigan and Preston railway. Living, a perpetual curacy, formerly in the archd. and dio. of Chester, now in the dio. of Manchester; valued at £21 0s. 9d., and rated in the parliamentary returns at £139 10s. 5d.; gross income £100; in the patronage of the vicar of Bolton. Here is a free grammar-school, containing 117 pupils, with an endowment of £140 per annum. For scholars on the foundation there are three exhibitions, of £60, £70, and £80 per annum, for four years, at Pembroke college, Cambridge, founded in 1568 by John Holmes. There is a house for the master. Here are also two Sunday schools. This place is pleasantly situated upon elevated ground, and is supposed to be on the site of the Roman station which Antoninus calls Coccium, and Ptolemy, Rigodunum. Pop., in 1801, 1,623; in 1831, 2,591. Houses 447. Acres 2,660. A. P. £4,618. Poor rates, in 1837, £365.

BLACKSTONE-EDGE, a range of high hills in the hund. of Salford, parish of Rochdale, Lancashire, forming part of 'the Backbone of England'; 6 miles east-north-east of Rochdale. The division stone of the counties of York and Lancaster stands on the summit of these hills, near Whiteholm reservoir.

BLACKTAIL, a great shoal on the coast of Essex, below Leigh-road, or Canvooy island. It runs out nearly three leagues to sea, and a beacon has been erected on it by the brethren of the Trinity house.

BLACKTHORN, a hamlet, formerly a chapelry, in the parish of Ambrosden, hund. of Bullington, county of Oxford; 3 miles south-east by east of Bicester. The great and small tithes, the property of the bishop of Oxford and vicar, were commuted in 1776. Pop., in 1801, 305; in 1831, 417. Houses 81. Acres 2,280. A. P. £2,179. Poor rates, in 1837, £192.

BLACKTOFT, a parish in the wapentake of Howdenshire, union of Howden, east riding of Yorkshire; 7 miles south-east by east of Howden, and $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles south of the Selby and Hull railroad. It comprises the townships of Blacktoft and Scalby. Living, a curacy in the archd. of the east riding and dio. of York; valued at £20, and rated in the parliamentary returns at £38; gross income £58; in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Durham. There is a daily school in this parish. The village stands near the junction of the Ouse with the Trent. Pop., in 1801, 238; in 1831, 267. Houses 74. Acres 2,730. A. P. £2,434. Poor rates, in 1837, £230.

BLACK-TORRINGTON. See TORRINGTON-BLACK.

BLACK-TORRINGTON HUNDRED, in the county of Devon. Area 141,600 acres. Houses 3,337. Pop., in 1831, 19,492.

BLACKWALL. See POPULAR and BLACKWALL.

BLACKWATER (THE), a river rising near Cranbrook in Dorset, and falling into the Stour.

BLACKWATER (THE), a river rising in the north-west part of the county of Essex, near Saffron-Walden, and, after uniting with the Chelmer, falling into the estuary called Blackwater bay.

BLACKWELL, a township in the parish of Bakewell, hund. of High Peak, county of Derby; $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles south-west of Tidswell. Pop., in 1801, 55; in 1831, 69. Houses 10. A. P. £712. Poor rates, in 1837, £22.

BLACKWELL, a parish in the hund. of Scarsdale, county of Derby; 3 miles north-east of Alfreton. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Derby and dio. of Lichfield and Coventry; valued at £5 4s. 2d.; gross income £113; in the patronage of the duke of Devonshire. Pop., in 1801, 420; in 1831, 432. Houses 99. Acres 1,700. A. P. £2,082. Poor rates, in 1837, £193.

BLACKWELL, a township in the parish of Darlington, ward of Darlington, south-east division, co.-palatine of Durham; 1 mile south-west by south of Darlington, on the eastern bank of the Tees, which is here navigable, and in the vicinity of the Great North of England railway. There is a daily school here. Pop., in 1801, 277; in 1831, 271. Houses 48. Acres 1,670. A. P. £3,377. Poor rates, in 1837, £202.

BLACKWELL, a hamlet in the parish of Tredington, hund. of Oswaldslow, county of Worcester; $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles north-north-west of Shipston-upon-Stour, in the vicinity of the Moreton and Stratford-on-Avon railroad. Pop., in 1811, 198; in 1831, 176. Houses 48. Other returns with the parish.

BLACKWELL, or BLACKHALL (HIGH), a township in the parish of St. Cuthbert, within the liberties of the city of Carlisle, county of Cumberland; 2½ miles south of Carlisle, in the immediate vicinity of the Carlisle railroad. This manor was given by Margaret de Wigton, heiress of Sir John de Wigton, to Sir Robert Parvinge, sergeant-at-law, and afterwards lord-chancellor, in the reign of Edward III., for successfully conducting her cause against Sir Robert de Bridekirk, who had impugned her title to the barony of Wigton. Here is a school with a small endowment. Pop., in 1801, 265; in 1831, 268. Houses 45. Other returns with the parish.

BLACKWELL, or BLACKHALL (LOW), a township in the parish of St. Cuthbert, within the liberties of Carlisle, county of Cumberland; 2 miles south of Carlisle. Pop., in 1801, 105; in 1831, 150. Houses 29. Other returns with the parish.

BLACKWOOD and CROWBOROUGH, a township in the parish of Horton, hund. of Totmonslow, county of Stafford; 4 miles west of Leek. There is a Sunday school here, attended by 80 children. Pop., in 1811, 354; in 1831, 527. Houses 106. Acreage with the parish. A. P. £1,708. Poor rates, in 1837, £166.

BLACKWORTH. See BACKWORTH.

BLACON WITH CRABHALL, a township in the parish of the Holy Trinity, hund. of Wirrall, co.-palatine of Chester; 2 miles west-south-west of Chester, in the vicinity of the Chester and Birkenhead railroad. Pop., in 1801, 36; in 1831, 72. Houses 12. Acres 1,170. A. P. £1,852. Poor rates, in 1837, £84.

BLADON, a parish in the hund. of Wooton, union of Woodstock, county of Oxford; 2 miles south of Woodstock. Living, a rectory with the chapelry of Woodstock, in the archd. and dio. of Oxford; valued at £16 0s. 5d.; gross income £446. Patron, in 1835, the Duke of Marlborough. All tithes, the property of the clerical rector, were commuted in 1766. There is a Sunday school here, containing 66 scholars, endowed with £1 10s. per annum. In 1798 an almshouse was erected here by the late Duchess of Marlborough for six poor women, endowed with £3,000 three per cent. consols. Each alms-woman receives £1 monthly. Other charities connected with this parish produce about £18 per annum. This parish contains the hamlet of Hensington, and unites with the borough of New Woodstock and adjacent parishes, in returning one member to parliament. Pop., in 1801, 351; in 1831, 585. Houses 125. Acres 1,350. A. P. £1,986. Poor rates, in 1837, £272.

BLAEN-AERON, a township in the parish of Caron, or Tregaron, hund. of Penarth, county of Cardigan, South Wales; 4 miles north-east of Tregaron. There are two dissenting chapels here. Pop., in 1801, 250; in 1831, 304. Other returns with the parish.

BLAENCARON, a township in the parish of Caron, hund. of Penarth, county of Cardigan, South Wales. Pop., in 1821, 96; in 1831, 94. Houses 21. Other returns with the parish.

BLAENGWRACK, a hamlet in the parish of Glynnorwg, hund. of Neath, county of Glamorgan; 10 miles north-east of Neath. Pop., in 1801, 132; in 1831, 414. Houses 69. A. P. £242. Poor rates, in 1837, £127.

BLAEN-HONDDAN, a hamlet in the parish of Cadoxton, hund. of Neath, county of Glamorgan, South Wales; 3 miles north-north-west of Neath. There are a daily and a Sunday National school here. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in copper-mines in the vicinity. Pop., in 1801, 801; in 1831, 1,029. Houses 218. A. P. £684. Poor rates, in 1837, £497.

BLAEN-PENAL, a chapelry in the parish of Llan-ddeuwr-brefi, hund. of Penarth, county of Cardigan, South Wales; 11 miles north by east of Llanpeter. Living, a curacy in the archd. of Cardigan and dio. of St. David's; valued at 13s. 4d., and rated in the parliamentary returns at £80; gross income £94. Patrons, in 1835, the Earl of Lisburne, and R. Price, Esq., alternately. There is a daily school here, endowed with £5 per annum. Pop., in 1801, 331; in 1831, 543. Houses 109. A. P. £700. Poor rates, in 1837, £72.

BLAEN-PORTH, a parish in the hund. of Troedryaur, union and county of Cardigan, South Wales; 6 miles east by north of Cardigan. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. of Cardigan and dio. of St. David's; valued at £5, and rated in the parliamentary returns at £59 19s.; gross income £97. Patrons, in 1835, the Earl of Lisburne, and J. V. Loyd, Esq., alternately. There are three Sunday schools here, containing 207 children. On a tumulus in this parish stood an ancient fortress of great strength, thought to have been built by Gilbert, earl of Clare. In 1116 it was besieged and taken by Gryffydd-ap-Rhys, and subsequently demolished. There are also traces of two ancient encampments in this neighbourhood, the one called Caer Sonydd, the other Castell Tydur, or Tudor's castle, on the sea-coast. Pop., in 1801, 538; in 1831, 695. Houses 155. A. P. £1,260. Poor rates, in 1837, £228.

BLAGDON, a township in the parish of Stanington, western division of Castle ward, county of Northumberland; 7 miles south of Morpeth. Blagdon was held of the barony of Morpeth by John de Plessis, in the time of Henry III. In 1567 it belonged to the Fenwicks, who sold it to the Whites. Pop. returned with the parish.

BLAGDON. See PITMISTON.

BLAGDON, a parish in the hund. of Winterstoke, union of Axbridge, county of Somerset; 6 miles north-east of Axbridge. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Wells and dio. of Bath and Wells; valued at £29 13s. 9d.; gross income £260. Patron, in 1835, George Thorne, Esq. The church was lately rebuilt. The Methodists have a meeting-house here. There are seven daily schools in this parish, one of which, containing 50 pupils, is endowed with £15 10s. per annum, arising from land bequeathed for this purpose, in 1687, by Thomas Baynard. A fund of £13 per annum, left by John Leman, is appropriated to the apprenticing of children. Other charities connected with the parish produce £16 12s. per annum. Teasel is cultivated here to a considerable extent, and part of the inhabitants receive employment from a paper-mill. Some ruins at a place called Reg-hill-bury, are said to indicate the site of an ancient palace. The well-known Dr. John Langhorne was rector of this parish. Pop., in 1801, 797; in 1831, 1,109. Houses 161. Acres 2,520. A. P. £5,308. Poor rates, in 1837, £473.

BLAGRAVE. See HADLEY with BLACRAVE.

BLAISDON, a parish in the hund. and union of Westbury, county of Gloucester; 4 miles north of Newnham. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. of Gloucester and dio. of Gloucester and Bristol; valued at £5 7s. 3½d. Patroness, in 1835, Mrs. Anna Gordon. Pop., in 1801, 152; in 1831, 255. Houses 44. Acres 760. A. P. £1,139. Poor rates, in 1837, £60.

BLAKEDON, in the parish of Paington, hund. of Haytor, county of Devon. "In the 28^o year of Henry III., one Nicholas de Blakedon gave lands in Blakedon, Aleborn, &c., to Ralph de Wulveleg, prior of Torneford, chief minister in England of the order of the Holy Trinity, for the redemption of captives, upon condition, that before Michaelmas that year, or at farthest before Michaelmas the next year, there should be placed and maintained here at Blakeden at least seven brethren of the same order, who were to serve God and keep hospitality according to the rules of the same order." Tanner's Not. Mon.

BLAKEMERE, or BLACKMOOR, a parish in the hund. of Webtree, county of Hereford; 10½ miles west of Hereford. Living, a discharged vicarage united with that of Preston. There is a small daily school here. Pop., in 1801, 167; in 1831, 190. Houses 36. Acres 1,080. A. P. £1,119. Poor rates, in 1837, £48.

BLAKEMORE FOREST, in the hund. and division of Sherborne, county of Dorset. "Here was formerly a house of Friars hermits, who had been settled before A. D. 1300, in which year died Edmund, earl of Cornwall, who had been a great benefactor, if not founder of it. But the convent seems to have forsaken this habitation before 1460, for after that time it is spoken of as a free chapel, the mastership of which was bestowed on secular priests till it was annexed to Cern abbey, 5th Henry VIII. It was dedicated to the Virgin Mary." Tanner's Not. Mon.—"The vale or Forest of Blakemore, or White Hart, comprehended a large tract of this county in the north and western parts of it, viz. the whole hundreds of Brownshall and Buckland Abbas, the greatest part of Sherborne and Whiteway, and some parts of Pimper, Tollerford, and Gateminster hundreds." Hutchins' Dorset.

BLAKENEY, a tything in the parish of Awre, hund. of Blideseale, county of Gloucester; 14 miles south-west by west of Gloucester, on the western bank of the river Severn. Living, a curacy in the archd. of Gloucester and dio. of Gloucester and Bristol, of the yearly value of £250; in the patronage of the Haberdashers' company, London. The Baptists have a place of worship here. Fairs for live stock are held on 12th May, and 12th November. Pop. returned with the parish.

BLAKENEY, a parish and sea-port in the hund. of Holt, union of Walsingham, county of Norfolk; 8 miles east of Wells. Living, a rectory united with СОКТОМОРЪ: which see. The church is an ancient and curious structure. The great and small tithes, the property of the clerical rector, were commuted in 1820. The Methodists have a place of worship here, and a Baptist congregation was formed in 1833. This parish possesses a day and Sunday National school, attended by 110 children, with a lending library attached, and two daily schools. Several small charities connected with this parish produce about £9 per annum. This place has an excellent harbour, well-adapted for sheltering vessels. About 54 vessels averaging 60 tons burden, belonged to this port in 1833. Some vessels are employed in the oyster-fisheries. Blakeney was called Snitterley in the reign of Henry III., who granted it a market. Here are some fine remains of an ancient Carmelite monastery. "About 24th Edward I., Richard Stormer, John Stormer, Thomas Thober, and other copyhold tenants of the manor gave and set apart 13 acres of ground, whereon to build a church and habitation for friars of the Carmelite order; which grant was afterward confirmed by the king and Sir William de Roos, knight, lord of the manor; so the church and all the offices of the house were finished in 1321. The friars were, by composition, to acknowledge the said Sir William, and Maud his wife, (daughter and one of the co-heiresses of John de Vallibus,) as their principal founders, and from them the patronage of this house descended to the earls of Rutland. But after the suppression, the site was granted to William Rede." Tanner's Not. Mon. Pop., in 1801, 618; in 1831, 929. Houses 215. Acres 1,630. A. P. £1,468. Poor rates, in 1837, £560.

BLAKENHALL, a township in the parish of Wybunbury, hund. of Nantwich, co.-palatine of Chester; 5½ miles south-east of Nantwich, on the line of the Grand Junction railway. There is a daily school here, containing 20 females, supported by Sir John Delves Broughton's charity. Pop., in 1801, 199; in 1831, 245. Houses 39. Acres 1,700. A. P. £1,441. Poor rates, in 1837, £197.

BLAKENHAM (GREAT), a parish in the hund. and union of Bosmere and Claydon, county of Suffolk; 3½ miles south-east of Needham, on the western bank of the river Gipping. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. of Suffolk and dio. of Norwich, valued at £6 16s. 0½d.; gross income £170; in the patronage of Eton college. "Walter Gifford, earl of Buckingham, in the time of William Rufus, gave this manor to the abbey of Bec in Normandy, to which it became a distinct alien priory; though sometimes reckoned as parcel of the priory of Okeburn in Wiltshire, or of Russelep in Middlesex, both of which were subordinate to that great abbey. After the dissolution of the alien priories, King Henry VI. gave this to the provost and fellows of Eton, and King Edward IV. confirmed it to them." Tanner's Not. Mon. Pop., in 1801, 120; in 1831, 192. Houses 35. Acres 1,850. A. P. £1,011. Poor rates, in 1837, £135.

BLAKENHAM (LITTLE), a parish in the hund. and union of Bosmere and Claydon, county of Suffolk; 4 miles south by east of Needham. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Suffolk and dio. of Norwich, valued at £10 3s. 4d.; gross income £280. Patron, in 1835, S. Jackson, Esq. There is a small daily school in this parish. Pop., in 1801, 115; in 1831, 102. Houses 24. Acres 250. A. P. £1,302. Poor rates, in 1837, £73.

BLAKESLEY, a parish in the hund. of Green's-Norton, union of Towcester, county of Northampton; 4 miles west-north-west of Towcester. It contains the hamlet of Woodend. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Northampton and dio. of Peterborough, valued at £9 17s.; gross income £176. Patron, in 1835, — Wight, Esq. Improprate and vicarial tithes, the property of the lay-impropriator, and the vicar, were commuted in 1760. Here is a free school for children of all resident inhabitants, founded in 1669 by William Foxley, and endowed with land which now yields £85 per annum. Here are also two Sunday schools, for the endowment of which Sir John Knightley, Bart., bequeathed £200, vested in the funds, which, having been thrown into Chancery, payment is obtained only at long intervals, and with much difficulty; the sum received is £6 per annum. It is said that a fraternity of the order of St. John of Jerusalem anciently occupied Blakesley hall. Pop., in 1801, 659; in 1831, 829. Houses 172. Acres 2,840. A. P. £5,256. Poor rates, in 1837, £141.

BLANCHLAND (HIGH), or SHOTLEY HIGH QUARTER, a chapelry in the parish of Shotley, eastern division of Tindale ward, county of Northumberland; 9 miles south by east of Hexham, on the northern bank of the river Derwent, over which there is a bridge here. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. of Northumberland and dio. of Durham, not in charge, rated in the parliamentary returns at £115; gross income £198. Patrons, in 1835, Lord Creve's trustees. There are two day and Sunday National schools here, attended by 108 pupils, founded and supported by the trustees of the late Lord Crewe. The scholars are divided into four classes,—the boys being taught writing and arithmetic, the girls reading, knitting, and sewing. All the children within distance, regardless of parish boundary or religious persuasion, are admitted on the same terms as those belonging to the township. The village is seated in a deep narrow green vale, on the north side of the Derwent, and is inclosed by heathy hills and morasses. Lead ore is found in considerable abundance in the vicinity. In 1165, Walter de Bolbec founded here an abbey of Premonstratensian canons, in honour of the blessed Virgin. The abbey was raised to the house of peers in the 23d Edward I., and at the dissolution the revenues were valued at £44 9s. 1d., there being an abbot and fourteen canons in the establishment. The property was granted, 37th Henry VIII., to John Bellow and John Broxholm. It was afterwards bought by Bishop Crewe, who bequeathed it along with other estates, for charitable purposes. The gateway and various parts of the buildings yet remain. In 1752, the trustees of Lord Crewe formed a chapel out of the tower of the ruined abbey, which contains some ancient grave-stones; they erected also a house for the curate. Pop., in 1811, 518; in 1831, 454. Houses 85. Acreage with the parish. Poor rates, in 1837, £100.

BLANDFORD DIVISION, in the county of Dorset, consists of two parts, north and south. Area 132,620 acres. Houses 4,032. Pop., in 1831, 18,903.

BLANDFORD-FORUM, or CHIPPING-BLANDFORD, a market-town and parish in the hund. of Pimperne, Blandford union and division of the county of Dorset, possessing separate jurisdiction; 103 miles south-west of London, and 46 of Popham Beacons on the Southampton railway. It stands on a bend of the river Stower, near the ancient ford, called by the Romans, Trajectus Belaniensis, from which it takes its name. In some ancient records it is styled a borough, but it does not appear to have had any corporate existence until the reign of James I.; a charter of incorporation was then bestowed, dated 15th November 3^d James I., and a grant was made of the manor from the Crown to the bailiff and burgesses, bearing date the same day. The boundaries of the borough, as recently fixed by the parliamentary commissioners, extend to the river on the south; to Bryanstone park on the west; to Barton, near the entrance to the Shaftesbury road on the north; and Damory Lane on the east. The inhabitants were noted for their attachment to Charles I. during the civil war, in consequence of which it suffered much from the parliamentary army under Major Sydenham. It has suffered frequently from fire, so that though it is a very ancient town, the houses are in general comparatively modern. It was partially consumed in 1677 and 1713, but the most extensive conflagration took place in 1731, when the whole town, with the exception of forty houses, and the whole hamlets of Blandford, St. Mary, and Bryanstone, were burnt to the ground. The damage was estimated at £40,000. This disaster is commemorated by an inscription on a pump within the town-hall, erected by John Bastard after the fire, in order to insure a supply of water on any similar occasion, and a local act of parliament was obtained, which embodies no general provisions but one,—a prohibition against thatched roofs. Two supervisors of fire continue to be appointed every year. The town is now a handsome place, the houses being neatly built of brick, and the streets regular and well-paved, but not lighted. There is no general watch maintained, nor any police force, except a constabulary one, which does not extend beyond the limits of the borough. There are three good bridges over the Stower, and there is an ample supply of water. The town-hall is a handsome building of Portland stone in the Doric style of architecture. The theatre is a neat building which is occasionally open, and races are held in August, on a fine race-course in the immediate vicinity of the town.—There are scarcely any manufactures here, that of lace, which formerly flourished, having declined. A number of females receive employment in the manufacture of shirt-buttons, which is still considerable, though not so extensive as in former times. Blandford is chiefly supported by travellers, and by the numerous gentry in the vicinity; its markets and fairs are also well-attended. Saturday is market-day, and fairs for horses, sheep, and cheese, are held on the 7th of March, 10th July, and 8th November. There is a branch of the Wilts and Dorset banking company here. The town was governed by a bailiff and ten capital burgesses, chosen annually, at the court-leet of the lord of the manor, with a recorder, town-clerk, and other corporate officers; under the new municipal act its magistracy consists of 17 members: viz. a mayor, 4 aldermen, and 12 councillors. The only court now in use within the borough is the court-leet, held before the recorder. A jury is summoned to attend this court by the serjeant at mace, under the directions of the bailiff, who gives him the list, which consists of the most respectable tradesmen of the town. The petty sessions for the Blandford division are held here. The courts of the bishop and archdeacon are held here monthly. The corporation is entitled to purchase and hold lands in fee, and has a common seal. The corporate revenues, in 1837, amounted to about £200; they arise from the tolls of markets and fairs, from premises let at rack rent, from quit rents, from annual fines for encroachments, and from the renewal of leases on lines. Blandford is one of the polling-places in the election of the members for Dorsetshire.

Living, a vicarage, formerly in the archd. of Dorset and dio. of Bristol, now in the dio. of Salisbury, valued at £12 8s. 1½d., and in the parliamentary returns at £145 8s.; gross income £210; in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Winchester. The church is a handsome Grecian edifice, with a tower 80 feet in height. The Independents have a place of worship here; and the Roman Catholics a chapel which was licensed in 1794. Here is a grammar-school, in which Archbishop Wake received the rudiments of his education. In 1729, Archbishop Wake founded a blue-coat charity school, on which he settled £1,616, which now produces an annual income of £48 9s. 8d. There are nine infant schools in this parish, three of which are supported by an endowment of £12 12s. per annum; and five daily schools. There are also two day and Sunday National schools, attended by 219 scholars, and four day and boarding schools.—In 1685, George Ryves, Esq. founded alms-houses for ten aged persons, and bequeathed the residue of his estate, which now yields £120 per annum, for the education of poor boys. Six alms-houses in the church-yard were built in 1736 by the corporation.—In 1621, William Williams gave £3,000 for the establishment of a fund for charitable purposes, and for the education of four children; the land purchased with this donation now yields £300 per annum.—In the vicinity are some traces of an ancient intrenchment. At the east end of the town are the remains of Damory court, the baronial mansion of the family of that name, who were anciently lords of the manor. Near this stood the famous Damory oak, which in 1747 was 75 feet in height, the branches extending 72; the trunk was 23 feet in diameter at the bottom, and a cavity in its centre was 15 feet wide. It was rooted out for firewood in 1755.—The duke of Marlborough takes the title of marquess from Blandford. Pop., in 1801, 2,326; in 1831, 3,109. Houses 522. Acres 920. A. P. £6,019. Poor rates, in 1837, £985.—A workhouse has been erected here for the union of Blandford, by the poor-law commissioners, at an expense of £1,200. The Blandford poor-law union comprehends 33 parishes, embracing an area of 92 square miles; with a population returned, in 1831, at 13,056. The average annual expenditure on the poor of this district, during the three years preceding the formation of the union, was £8,387. Expenditure, in 1838, £6,027.—There are penny-posts to Almer, Bere, Durweston, Iwerne, Milborne, Piddletown, Shillington, Spettisbury, Storminster, Thickthorne, and Whitchurch.

BLANDFORD (ST. MARY), a parish in the hund. of Coomb's-ditch, Blandford union and division of the county of Dorset; $\frac{1}{2}$ mile south of Blandford Forum, on the opposite side of the river Stower, over which there is a bridge here. Living, a rectory, formerly in the archd. of Dorset and dio. of Bristol, now in the dio. of Salisbury; valued at £15 17s. 8½d.; gross income £315. Patron, in 1835, Sir J. Burrough. There is a day and Sunday school here, supported by the Honourable and Rev. S. Best. This was the birth-place of the celebrated antiquary, Dr. Browne Willis, born on the 14th September, 1682. Pop., in 1801, 292; in 1831, 363. Houses 70. Acres 420. A. P. £2,278. Poor rates, in 1837, £192.

BLANKNEY WITH LINWOOD, a parish in the second division of the wapentake of Langoe, parts of Kesteven, union of Sleaford, county of Lincoln; 9½ miles north of Sleaford. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Lincoln; valued at £16 10s. 7½d.; gross income £321. Patron, in 1835, C. Chaplin, Esq. All tithes of Blankney and Scopwick, the property of the bishop of Lincoln, clerical rector, and vicar, were commuted in 1797. There are two daily schools here, containing 41 pupils. There is also a day and Sunday National school, the teacher of which receives £13 per annum from Charles Chaplin, Esq. Pop., in 1801, 410; in 1831, 543. Houses 96. Acres 6,000. A. P. £4,811. Poor rates, in 1837, £384.

BLASTON (ST. MICHAEL), a parish in the hund. of Gartree, county of Leicester; 7 miles north-east of Market-Harborough. Living, a curacy, subordinate to the rectory of Hallaton. There is a day and Sunday school here.—The share of the rents of Goodman's charity due to this parish amounts at present to £10 per annum. Pop., in 1801, 76; in 1831, 73. Houses 14. Acres 1,300. A. P. £1,986. Poor rates, in 1837, £87.

BLATCHINGTON. See BLETCHINGTON.
BLATCHINWORTH AND CALDERBROOK, a chapelry and township, in the parish of Rochdale and hund. of Salford, co.-palatine of Lancaster; 4½ miles north-east of Rochdale, in the immediate vicinity of the Rochdale canal, 7 chains west of which the Manchester and Leeds railway passes. It is adjacent to Huddersfield, and the inhabitants are chiefly employed in the manufacture of woollens. Pop., in 1801, 1,647; in 1831, 4,221. Houses 715. Acreage with the parish. A. P. £4,892. Poor rates, in 1837, £490.

BLATHERWYCKE, a parish in the hund. of Corby, union of Oundle, county of Northampton; 8 miles north by east of Rockingham. It comprises the parishes of the Holy Trinity, and St. Mary Magdalene, united in 1448. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Northampton and dio. of Peterborough; valued at £14 13s. 3d.; gross income £408. Patron, in 1835, S. O'Brien, Esq. There is a day and Sunday school here, wholly maintained by the lady of the 'Squire. Pop., in 1801, 154; in 1831, 227.

Houses 39. Acres 2,750. A. P. £1,073. Poor rates, in 1837, £61.

BLAWITH, a chapelry in the parish of Ulverstone, hund. of Lonsdale, north of the sands, co.-palatine of Lancaster; 7 miles north of Ulverstone, on the western bank of the river Crake, over which there is a bridge here. Living, a perpetual curacy, formerly in the archd. of Richmond and dio. of Chester, now in the dio. of Carlisle; valued at £4, and rated in the parliamentary returns at £65 8s.; gross income £59. Patron, in 1835, T. R. G. Braddyll, Esq. There are two daily schools here, one, containing 30 boys, is endowed with £6 8s. per annum, being the interest of £160. Pop., in 1801, 160; in 1831, 171. Houses 32. Acres 2,620. A. P. £859. Poor rates, in 1837, £98.

BLAXHALL, a parish in the hund. and union of Plomegate, county of Suffolk; 3½ miles east of Market-Wickham. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Suffolk and dio. of Norwich; valued at £20; gross income £500. Patron, in 1835, A. Arredeckne. There are two daily schools in this parish. The poor of Blaxhall receive £18 per annum, arising from land bequeathed for this purpose by Mr. and Mrs. Garthwaite. Pop., in 1801, 373; in 1831, 525. Houses 57. Acres 1,930. A. P. £2,203. Poor rates, in 1837, £413.

BLAXTON, a township in the parish of Finningley, soke of Doncaster, west riding of Yorkshire; 5 miles north-east of Bawtry. There is a small daily school here. Pop., in 1811, 132; in 1831, 176. Houses 32. Acres 1,640. Assessed property with the township of Awkley. Poor rates, in 1837, £38.

BLAYDON, a small village in the township of Winlaton, parish of Ryton, western division of Chester ward, co.-palatine of Durham. Here are some iron and lead works: see WINLATON. The railway from Newcastle to Blaydon, on the north side of the river Tyne, commencing from the station west of the infirmary, and forming part of the Newcastle and Carlisle railway, was opened on the 21st October, 1839, when several very elegant and commodious omnibuses were to be seen plying for the first time between the station and the different inns in Newcastle,—an undoubted improvement upon the old plan of the passengers coming to Redheugh, and from thence by steam-boat to the Close.

BLAZEY (ST.), a parish in the eastern division of the hund. of Powder, union of St. Austell, county of Cornwall; 4 miles north-east of St. Austell, on the post-road to Liskeard. There are four daily and four Sunday schools here, and an infant school. Living, a curacy in the archd. of Cornwall and dio. of Exeter, annexed to the vicarage of St. Austell. Many of the inhabitants of this parish are employed in mines. A fair is held here for cattle, &c. on February 2d. Pop., in 1801, 467; in 1831, 2,155. Houses 343. Acres 2,000. A. P. £1,878. Poor rates, in 1837, £602.

BLEADON, a parish in the hund. of Winterstoke, division of Wrington, and union of Axbridge, county of Somerset; 6 miles west-north-west of Axbridge, on the northern bank of the river Axe, and intersected by the Bristol and Exeter railway. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Wells and dio. of Bath and Wells; valued at £27 7s. 8½d.; gross income £505; in the patronage of the bishop of Winchester. In several barrows in the vicinity—supposed to be Danish—bones, coins, and armour have been found. Pop., in 1801, 381; in 1831, 599. Houses 95. Acres 2,490. A. P. £4,522. Poor rates, in 1837, £231.

BLEAN, or ST. COSMUS AND DAMIAN-IN-THE-BLEAN, a parish in the hund. of Whitstable, lathe of St. Augustine, union of Blean, county of Kent;

2 miles north-west by north of Canterbury, intersected by the railway between Swalecliffe and Canterbury. Living, a vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Canterbury; valued at £10; gross income £423; in the patronage of the master of Eastbridge hospital. The northern part of this parish is all coppice-wood. A court-leet is held for the manor of Blean, at which a borsholder is chosen. Pop., in 1801, 287; in 1831, 554. Houses 101. Acres 5,760, of which about 70 are in hops. A. P. £2,092. Poor rates, in 1837, £137.—A workhouse has been erected here by the poor-law commissioners for the union of Blean, at an expense of £6,300, capable of containing 478 persons. The Blean poor-law union comprehends 16 parishes, embracing an area of 54 square miles; with a population returned in 1831, at 10,639. The average annual expenditure on the poor of this district during the three years preceding the formation of the union, was £10,516. Expenditure, in 1838, £4,329.

BLEAN (FOREST OF). The king's ancient forest of Blean is a large district, says Hasted, "consisting almost all of it of large tracts of coppice-woods, mostly of oak, having great quantities of that timber growing over the whole of them. It extends from the bottom of Boughton-hill, in length eastward, almost as far as the Harbledown turnpike on the London-road, about 2½ miles, and across from Whitstable and Sea-salter parishes southward as far as that at Chartham, about 4 miles, besides the manor and large wood of Thornden which lies detached from the north-east corner of it, and contains in the whole about 5,000 acres of land, having many houses and cottages interspersed throughout in different parts of it. The forests of this realm were anciently waste grounds belonging to the kings of it, in which there were all beasts of chase, which were under their royal protection for their pleasure and recreation. And so late as King Henry the Sixth's reign, there were wild boars which were hunted in these woods. And in the 15th year of Queen Elizabeth, it appears there was then a patent subsisting, granted by the Crown, of the office of keeper of the Blean, and the woods contained within it. This forest seems formerly to have been of much greater extent, for in King Henry the First's reign it reached as far and partly encircled the hospital of Harbledown, then called from it the hospital of Blean-wood; and from the name of the parish of St. Cosmus and Damian, in the Blean, it seems probable that it was once likewise, or the greatest part of it, within the bounds of this district. But before the Norman conquest, as well as afterwards, the several kings made grants at different times of large tracts of land within it, especially to the neighbouring religious houses, till at length almost the whole of it was separated from the Crown, and became the property of the subject, by which means it entirely lost all privileges of a forest, and even the name of being one, and in the room acquired that of the Blean, without any further distinction, which name continued till within memory; but several houses having been built within the bounds of it, many, especially on the south side of the common, at the bottom of Boughton-hill, which were inhabited by low persons of suspicious character, who sheltered themselves there, this being a place exempt from the jurisdiction of either hundred or parish, as in a free port, which receives all who enter it without distinction, the whole district hence gained the name of Dunkirk. But the neighbouring parishes complaining of the burdens they were continually subject to, occasioned by the casual support of the poor resorting hither, and other inconveniences arising from it, procured it, though not without great opposition from the inhabitants, to be made a ville, by the name of the Ville of the Hundred of Westgate, alias Dunkirk, and the jurisdiction over it was annexed to the upper division of justices acting for the lathe of Scray."

BLEANGATE HUNDRED, in the lathe of St. Augustine, county of Kent. Area 18,800 acres. Houses 882. Pop., in 1831, 5,212.

BLEASBY, a parish in the bund. of Southwell and Scrooby, union of Southwell, county of Nottingham; 3¼ miles south-south-east of Southwell, on the western bank of the river Trent, over which there is a ferry here. Living, a discharged vicarage in the peculiar jurisdiction and patronage of the collegiate church of Southwell, dio. of Lincoln; valued at £4, and in the parliamentary returns at £97; gross income £107. The great and small tithes, &c., the property of the prebendary of Normanton, &c. and the vicar, were commuted in 1777. There are two daily schools here. Pop., in 1801, 215; in 1831, 324. Houses 60. Acres 1,550. A. P. £2,116. Poor rates, in 1837, £57.

BLEASDALE, a chapelry in the parish of Lancaster, hund. of Amounderness, co.-palatine of Lancaster; 4 miles east by north of Garstang, in the neighbourhood of the Lancaster and Preston railway. There are a daily National school here, with an endowment of £10 per annum, and a Sunday school. Pop., in 1801, 220; in 1831, 236. Houses 39. Acres 8,490. A. P. £1,642. Poor rates, in 1837, £90.

BLEATARN, a hamlet in the parish of Warcop, East ward, county of Westmoreland. Some estates in this manor are tithe-free, if occupied by the proprietor. The manor was given in the reign of Henry II., by John Talbois, to the abbey of Byland, in Yorkshire, a cell to which was founded here, which appears from the ruins to have been of considerable extent. Wordsworth has made this sequestered spot the abode of his 'Solitary.' The poet has accurately described it as —'A little lowly vale,

A lowly vale, and yet uplifted high
Among the mountains.'

Pop., in 1821, 129. Other returns with the parish.

BLECHINGLY. See BLETCHINGLY.

BLECHINGDON, a parish in the hund. of Ploughley, union of Bicester, county of Oxford; 4 miles east by north of Woodstock. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Oxford; valued at £12 9s. 4½d.; gross income £439; nett income £236; in the patronage of Queen's college, Oxford. There are four daily and two Sunday schools in this parish. Here are alms-houses for four poor persons, with endowments, founded in 1620 by Leonard Power. Other charities connected with the parish produce about £40 per annum. Pop., in 1801, 503; in 1831, 641. Houses 131. Acres 2,540. A. P. £3,580. Poor rates, in 1837, £471.

BLEDINGTON, or BLADINGTON, a parish in the upper division of the hund. of Slaughter, union of Stow-on-the-Wold, county of Gloucester; 4 miles south-east of Stow-on-the-Wold. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Gloucester and dio. of Gloucester and Bristol; rated at £6 13s. 4d., and in the parliamentary returns at £70; gross income £88; in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Christ church, Oxford. All tithes, the property of the dean and chapter of Christ church, Oxford, were commuted in 1769. There are a daily and a day and Sunday school here. Pop., in 1801, 232; in 1831, 335. Houses 71. Acres 1,110. A. P. £2,567. Poor rates, in 1837, £145.

BLEDDFA, or BLETHVAUGH, a parish in the bund. of Kevenleece, union of Knighton, county of Radnor, South Wales, in the forest of the same name; 6 miles south-west by south of Knighton. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Brecon and dio. of St. David's; valued at £10 12s. 3d., and in the parliamentary returns at £150; gross income £190; in the patronage of the bishop of St. David's. There is a daily school in this parish. Pop., in 1801, 201; in 1831, 233. Houses 41. A. P. £1,171. Poor rates, in 1837, £188.

BLEDOW WITH BLEDOW-RIDGE, a parish in the hund. of Aylesbury, union of Wycombe, county of Buckingham; $5\frac{1}{2}$ miles east-south-east of Thame. Living, a discharged vicarage, formerly in the archd. of Buckingham and dio. of Lincoln, now in the dio. of Oxford; valued at £16 9s. 7d.; gross income £250. Patron, in 1835, Lord Carrington. The great and small tithes, the property of the lord of the manor, lay-impropriators, and vicar, were commuted in 1809. The church stands on the edge of a cliff above a deep glen. There are three Sunday and eight lace schools here. Pop., in 1801, 917; in 1831, 1,135. Houses 217. Acres 4,130. A. P. £5,108. Poor rates, in 1837, £564.

BLENCOGS, a township in the parish of Broomfield, Cumberland ward, county of Cumberland; $4\frac{1}{2}$ miles west by south of Wigton, in the neighbourhood of Maryport and Carlisle railway. There is a daily school here. Pop., in 1801, 167; in 1831, 226. Houses 37. Acreage with the parish. A. P. £1,918. Poor rates, in 1837, £54.

BLENCOW (GREAT), a township in the parish of Dacre, Leath ward, county of Cumberland; 5 miles west-north-west of Penrith. Here is a free grammar-school for all children, founded in 1576, and endowed with £190 per annum, by Thomas Burbank. The late Lord Ellenborough was educated here. Pop. with the parish.

BLENCOW (LITTLE), a township in the parish of Greystoke, Leath ward, county of Cumberland; 5 miles west of Penrith. Here are the remains of a chapel and other ancient buildings, and a churchyard with an ancient stone cross. Pop., in 1801, 68; in 1831, 60. Houses 11. Other returns with the parish.

BLENDWORTH, a parish in the hund. of Finch-Dean, Alton, south division, union of Catherington, county of Southampton; $7\frac{1}{2}$ miles south-south-east of Petersfield. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Winchester; valued at £6 7s. 8d.; gross income £204. Patron, the late Rev. E. Ward. There is a daily school here, the mistress of which receives a salary from a fund for the education of children, bequeathed, in 1695, by William Appleford. Pop., in 1801, 174; in 1831, 246. Houses 53. Acres 3,110. A. P. £1,441. Poor rates, in 1837, £183.

BLENHEIM, an extra-parochial hamlet, locally situated in the parish of Woodstock, hund. of Wootton, liberty and county of Oxford; $62\frac{1}{2}$ miles west-north-west of London. This is the demeane of the dukes of Marlborough. Blenheim castle was founded in 1704, the demeane having been conferred on the celebrated John Churchill, duke of Marlborough, by Queen Anne, and the sum of £500,000 having been voted by parliament for the erection of a suitable mansion for the duke and his descendants, and for laying out the grounds properly, as a permanent testimony of royal favour and national gratitude for his services in the field. The architect was Sir John Vanbrugh, and the castle was called Blenheim, after a German village near which the duke obtained a signal victory over the French and Bavarians, on the 2d of August, 1704. On the anniversary of this battle, it was directed, by way of tenure, that, "every year, for ever, the inheritors of his grace's honours and titles, should render at Windsor, to her majesty, her heirs and successors, one standard or colours with three flour-de-lis painted thereon, as an acquittance for all manner of rents, suits, and services, due to the Crown;"—a custom strictly and pointedly observed. The building is in a splendid, though not a faultless style of architecture, and measures 348 feet from wing to wing. The interior is magnificent, especially the hall, the walls of which are 67 feet in height; the roof, which is supported by Corinthian pillars, was painted by Sir James Thornhill. The bay-window room is hung with tapestry of great beauty. The duke's study is full of pictures, and contains some fine bronzes. The east drawing-room, the grand cabinet, the little drawing-room, and the great drawing-room, are all hung with crimson cloth, and crowded with pictures. Every apartment at Blenheim is indeed adorned in a similar manner, and some of the finest specimens of the old masters are here to be met with. The dining-room is a lofty and commodious apartment, containing, among other pictures, several by Sir J. Reynolds, of the Marlborough family. From this room we enter a magnificent apartment called the saloon, the lower part of which is lined with marble, of which the large door-cases are likewise composed. The ceiling and compartments of the walls are painted by La Guerre. The state drawing-room is the finest of the whole for the richness of its furniture, its proportions, the splendour of its decorations, and the taste displayed in its arrangement. It contains some fine tapestry, representing the march to Bouchain and its siege. The state bedchamber is hung with blue damask, with which the furniture and bed are covered. The bed-posts are carved and enriched with gold, their extremities being adorned with military trophies, and the top of the bed, rising into a dome, is surmounted by a ducal coronet. The library occupies the entire west front, and is 200 feet long by 32 wide in the centre. It is supported with solid marble columns, the basement being composed of black marble, and contains the books of the Sunderland collection consisting of 20,000 volumes; but the whole of the collection formed by Charles, earl of Sunderland, is not kept in this room, there being another portion in a part of the palace not shown to strangers. At the upper end is a fine statue in white marble, by Rysbrach, of Queen Anne; and other statues, busts, and paintings adorn the walls. From the library we proceed along a piazza to the chapel, in the western wing of the building. The china gallery is a small building, containing a fine collection of porcelain, delf, and Japan manufactures, formed by Mr. Spalding, and presented by him as an appendant to Blenheim, on condition that it should be annexed as an heirloom to the Marlborough family, unless the duke should choose to give it to some university, museum, or corporation. The grounds are extensive and laid out with great beauty and picturesque effect, being considered the chef-d'œuvre of the celebrated landscape-gardener, Brown. They contain a triumphal arch, a pillar 130 feet high supporting a colossal statue of the duke in a Roman garb, a fountain copied from that of the Piazza Navona at Rome, and an artificial lake supplied by the small river Glyme. The ancient palace of Woodstock formerly stood in this park, for an account of which, see the article Woodstock. The northern part of the park is crossed by the Roman road, Akeman-street, near which remains of Roman buildings have been discovered.

BLINKINSOP, a township in the parish of Haltwhistle, western division of Tindale ward, county of Northumberland; 18 miles west of Hexham, intersected by the Newcastle and Carlisle railway. Here are extensive coal-works. Blinkinsop castle is a strong square tower built upon vaults, on a little eminence on the south side of the Tippal. It was the ancient seat of the Blenkinsops, noted for their border feuds. There are a daily and a Sunday school here, the latter of which has a lending library attached. Pop., in 1801, 196; in 1831, 344. Houses 57. Acreage with the parish. Poor rates, in 1837, £188.

BLENNERHASSET AND KIRKLAND, a township in the parish of Torpenhow, ward of Allerdale-below-Darwent, county of Cumberland; $7\frac{1}{2}$ miles south-west of Wigton, on the southern bank of the river Ellen, and in the vicinity of the Maryport and Carlisle railroad. Here are a chapel for Independents, and two daily schools. Pop., in 1801, 204; in 1831, 238. Houses 45. Acreage with the parish. A. P. £2,047. Poor rates, in 1837, £92.

BLETCHINGLY, or BLECHINGLY, a borough and parish, formerly a market-town, in the first division of the hund. of Tandridge, union of Godstone, county of Surrey; 5 miles east of Reigate, intersected by a branch of the London and Brighton railway. The town is situated near the chalk hills which divide the county, on an eminence commanding a view of the South Downs and other parts of Sussex. The market has fallen into disuse, but fairs for horses, bullocks, and toys, are or were till very recently held on June 22d, and November 2d. This borough returned members to parliament since the 23d Edward I. The right of election was vested in the resident holders of burghage tenures. These were about 130 in number, but being all the property of one individual, he returned the members. There was no returning officer, the bailiff not taking part in the elections. It has of course been wholly 'cashiered' by the reform bill; and has sunk into such insignificance consequently as to have been brought to the hammer in September, 1835, when upwards of 100 dwelling-houses, comprising almost the whole town, and some beautiful meadow and garden-ground, were sold by public auction. The property (which to an ordinary observer had the most unsaleable aspect) realized nearly £11,000, including the manor, which was purchased by John Perkins, Esq., of Pondhill, a gentleman of large landed property in the neighbourhood. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in agriculture. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Surrey and dio. of Winchester; valued at £19 19s. 4½d.; gross income £905. Patrons, in 1835, the heirs of the late — Ward. The church is an ancient structure in the early style of English architecture, consisting of a nave, south aisle, and double chancels, the latter of which contains a magnificent monument to Sir Robert Clayton, mayor of London in 1680, and his lady. The Independents have a chapel here. This parish possesses a charity school for 25 boys, founded in the 8th of Elizabeth, by Mr. John Whatman, and endowed with £23 per annum, with a house and garden for the master, and four daily schools. There are also alms-houses for ten aged persons, founded in 1668. Other charities connected with Bletchingly produce about £28 per annum. Near the town was a Roman road, and traces of Roman buildings have been discovered. The ancient manor-house in which Stafford, duke of Buckingham—afterwards beheaded by Henry VIII.—resided, no longer exists. Here was also the residence of Earl Godwin, who retreated to this place when his estates in Kent were inundated by the sea. Pop., in 1801, 1,344; in 1831, 1,203. Houses 201. Acres 5,250. A. P. £6,770. Poor rates, in 1837, £711.

BLETCHINGTON (EAST), or BLATCHINGTON, a parish in the hund. of Flexborough, rape of Pevensey, union of Newhaven, county of Sussex; 11 miles east by south of Brighton, on the coast. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Lewes and dio. of Chichester, valued at £14; gross income £88. Patron, in 1835, John King, Esq. Here is a strong battery for the defence of the coast. Pop., in 1801, 154; in 1831, 170. Houses 20. Acres 2,110. A. P. £785. Poor rates, in 1837, £194.

BLETCHINGTON (WEST), or BLATCHINGTON, a parish in the hund. of Whalesbone, rape of Lewes, union of Steyning, county of Sussex; $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles north-west by west of Brighton, in the neighbourhood of the railroad from London to Brighton. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. of Lewes and dio. of Chichester, subordinate to the vicarage of Brighton. Pop., in 1801, 50; in 1831, 58. Houses 10. Acres 590.

BLETCHLEY, a parish in the hund. of Newport, union of Newport-Pagnell, county of Buckingham; $1\frac{1}{2}$ mile west of Fenny-Stratford, on the line of the London and Birmingham railway. It comprises part of the chapelry of Fenny-Stratford, and the township of Water-Eaton. Living, a rectory, formerly in the archd. of Buckingham and dio. of Lincoln, now in the dio. of Oxford, valued at £29 13s. 1½d.; gross income £500. Patron, in 1835, J. Fleming, Esq. All tithes, the property of the clerical rector, were commuted in 1810. This parish possesses a daily National school, and four Sunday schools. Pop., in 1801, 1,038; in 1831, 1,254. Houses 254. Acres 3,150. A. P. £5,377. Poor rates, in 1837, £172.

BLETHERSTON, a parish in the hund. of Dungleddy, union of Narberth, county of Pembroke, South Wales; 5 miles west-north-west of Narberth. Living, a curacy, not in charge, attached to the vicarage of Llawhaden, in the dio. of St David's. There is a Sunday school here. Pop., in 1801, 235; in 1831, 300. Houses 58. A. P. £1,392. Poor rates, in 1837, £127.

BLETHVAUGH. See BLEDD-PA.

BLETSOE, a parish in the hund. of Willey, union and county of Bedford; 6 miles north-north-west of Bedford. Living, a rectory, formerly in the archd. of Bedford and dio. of Lincoln, now in the dio. of Ely, valued at £17; gross income £316. Patron, in 1835, Lord St. John. This parish possesses a daily school, and two Sunday schools,—the two latter being supported by a bequest of £8 per annum. The petty-sessions for the hundreds of Bedford, Stodden, and Willey, are sometimes held here. Charities connected with this parish produce £12 10s. per annum. Pop., in 1801, 321; in 1831, 410. Houses 68. Acres 2,220. A. P. £2,611. Poor rates, in 1837, £217.

BLEWBERRY, a parish partly in the hund. of Reading and partly in that of Moreton, union of Wantage, county of Berks, containing the chapelry of Aston-Upthorpe, and the liberty of Upton and Nottingham-fee; 4 miles north-east of East-Itale, in the neighbourhood of the Great Western railway. Living, a discharged vicarage, with the curacies of Ashton-Upthorpe and Upton, formerly in the archd. of Berks and dio. of Salisbury, now in the dio. of Oxford, valued at £16 6s. 10½d.; gross income £166; in the patronage of the bishop of Oxford. Here is a Baptist church, formed in 1835. There are three daily schools in this parish, two of which are endowed by Mr. Malthus with estates now producing £600 per annum; 30 boys and 30 girls are educated and clothed on this foundation. The boys are allowed 1s. 6d. for two years, and 2s. per week for other two years, and £20 to apprentice them; the girls 1s. 6d. per week for three years, and £1 15s. to fit them for service, and if they remain a year in one place they receive a further sum of £2 5s. Here is an alms-house, founded and endowed with £271 13s. 4d., in 1732, by Mr. Bacon. In the vicinity a battle was fought between the Saxons and Danes, and some remains of intrenchments are observable on the neighbouring hills. The Roman road Ickleton, and the British road Grimsditch, cross the parish. A fair is held here on Thursday after September 29th. Pop., in 1801, 986; in 1831, 1,056. Houses 197. Acres 6,950. A. P. £7,789. Poor rates, in 1837, £730.

BLICKLING, a parish and manor in the hund. of South Erpingham, union of Aylsham, county of Norfolk; $\frac{1}{4}$ mile north-west of Aylsham. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Norwich, valued at £10 13s. 4d.; united with that of Erpingham; gross income £530. Patroness, in 1835, the Dowager Lady Suffield. There are three daily schools here, one of which is supported by the Dowager Lady Suffield. This was a royal demesne from the time of the Confessor. When the Domesday survey was made, one part of it belonged to Beausoe, bishop of Thetford, and the other moiety to the crown. William I. settled the whole town and advowson on the see. The manor was successively in the possession of the families of Dagworth, Erpingham, Fastolf, and Boleyn. Its proprietor, Sir Thomas Boleyn, the father of Anne Boleyn, who was born here in 1507, was advanced to the title of earl of Wiltshire and Ormonde, in the 21st of Henry VIII. Upon his death in 1538, the estate was purchased by Sir Henry Hobart, who built the present stately mansion, which is now, through marriage, the seat of Lord Suffield. Blickling-hall is an interesting specimen of the architecture of the era of James I. The library measures 127 feet in length by 21 feet wide, and contains upwards of 10,000 volumes. The park and gardens comprehend about 1,000 acres. They enclose one of the finest pieces of water in the kingdom, about one mile in length and 400 yards in breadth. Pop., in 1801, 394; in 1831, 365. Houses 83. Acres 2,240. A. P. £1,605. Poor rates, in 1837, £239.

BLIDESLOE. See AURE.

BLIDESLOE HUNDRED, in the county of Gloucester, is bounded on the east and north-east by the river Severn; on the north-west by the hundred of St. Brivels; and on the south-west by that of Westbury. Area 12,990 acres. Houses 541. Pop., in 1831, 2,945.

BLIDWORTH, a parish in the liberty of Southwell and Scrooby, union of Mansfield, county of Nottingham; 5 miles south-east of Mansfield. Living, a discharged vicarage, a peculiar of Southwell college, dio. of Lincoln, valued at £4; gross income £200; in the patronage of the prebendaries of Oton, in the collegiate church of Southwell. The church is desecrated. Tithes of wool and lamb, the property of the lay-impropriator and vicar, were commuted in 1769. The great and small tithes, the property of the prebends of Oton and the vicar, were commuted in 1805. The Wesleyan Methodists have a chapel here; the congregation was formed in 1766. There are two daily schools in this parish, containing 50 scholars, and a day and Sunday school, with a lending library attached. Pop., in 1801, 427; in 1831, 901. Houses 157. Acres 6,610. A. P. £3,157. Poor rates, in 1837, £143.

BLINDBOTHEL, a township in the parish of Brigham, ward of Allerdale-above-Darwent, county of Cumberland; 2 miles west of Cockermouth. There is a small daily school here. Pop., in 1801, 82; in 1831, 106. Houses 19. Acreage with the parish. A. P. £891. Poor rates, in 1837, £25.

BLINDCRAGE, a joint-township with Isall and Redmin, in the parish of Isall, ward of Allerdale-below-Darwent, county of Cumberland; $\frac{3}{4}$ miles north-north-east of Cockermouth. Pop., in 1801, 188; in 1831, 323. Houses 58. Acreage with the parish. A. P. £4,631. Poor rates, in 1837, £85.

BLISLAND, a parish in the hund. of Trigg, union of Bodmin, county of Cornwall; 4 miles north-north-west of Bodmin. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Cornwall and dio. of Exeter; valued at £13 10s.; gross income £635. Patron, in 1835, the Rev. W. Pye. There are three daily schools in this parish. A cattle-fair is held here annually, on the first Monday after September 22d. Pop., in 1801, 437; in 1831, 644. Houses 120. Acres 6,800. A. P. £3,643. Poor rates, in 1837, £199.

BLISWORTH, a parish in the hund. of Wymersley, union of Towcester, county of Northampton; 5 miles north-west of Castle Thorp, and $\frac{4}{5}$ north-east of Towcester. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Northampton and dio. of Peterborough; valued at £20 3s. 9d.; gross income £335. Patron, in 1835, G. F. Hatton, Esq. All tithes, moduses, &c. the property of the clerical rector, were commuted in 1808. A Baptist church was formed here in 1825. There are a daily school in this parish, endowed with £10 4s. 9d. per annum, and two Sunday schools. The Grand Junction canal passes through a tunnel in the vicinity of the village; and the London and Birmingham railway is conducted through a very deep cutting here, which, though not the largest work of the description on the line, has, from the character of the material, been by far the most expensive and arduous. The Tring cutting contains a greater cubic content, but the material being entirely chalk, less difficulty was experienced in the execution than in the Blisworth, which consists chiefly of hard blue limestone belonging to the oolitic series of rocks, and which yielded throughout all seasons large quantities of water, which it was necessary to drain by pumping. The working of the rock in this cutting was also rendered more difficult and tedious than it otherwise would have been by the strata of rock being interstratified by these beds of blue shade, which being impervious to water, rendered every means of drawing off—except that of pumping—unavailable. The Blisworth excavation contains 1,200,000 cubic yards, averaging 50 feet deep, for two miles in length. About 400,000 have been removed from each end to form adjoining embankments, which reach the height of 45 feet at the highest point. The remaining 400,000 have been raised up the steep side of the excavation, and deposited on the adjoining lands, forming what are termed sprit banks. The cost of this work has been £200,000, and is believed to be the largest excavation of the kind ever executed. Pop., in 1801, 730; in 1831, 679. Houses 145. Acres 1,980. A. P. £2,725. Poor rates, in 1837, £248.

BLITHFIELD WITH NEWTON, a parish in the south division of the hund. of Pirehill, county of Stafford; $\frac{3}{4}$ miles north of Rugeley. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Stafford and dio. of Lichfield and Coventry; valued at £10 19s. 2d.; gross income £468. Patron, in 1835, Lord Bagot. Here are two daily schools, endowed with land given in 1729, by Elizabeth Bagot and Jane Jones, and also aided by the munificence of Lord Bagot; a lending library is attached to these schools. Other charities connected with this parish produce about £23 per annum. Pop., in 1801, 439; in 1831, 468. Houses 80. Acres 4,180. A. P. £4,009. Poor rates, in 1837, £181.

BLOCKLEY, a parish surrounded by Gloucestershire, but belonging to the upper division of the hund. of Oswaldslow, union of Shipston-on-Stour, county of Worcester; 3 miles north-west of Moreton-in-the-Marsh; and 10 south-east of Evesham. It comprises the hamlets of Aston-Magna, Blockley, Ditchford, Dorne, Draycot, Northwich, and Paxford. There are 6 silk-mills, which, in 1838, gave employment to 215 hands, within this parish, besides several corn-mills on a branch of the Stour. In the vicinity are some good stone-quarries. Fairs are held on the Tuesday after Easter week for cattle, and on the 10th of October for hiring servants. There is a branch of the Gloucestershire Banking company here. Living, a vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Worcester; valued at £54; gross income £780; in the patronage of the bishop of Worcester. The impropriate and vicarial tithes of the township of Blockley, and the hamlets of Draycot and Paxford, were commuted in 1772. The Baptists have a place of worship here; the church was formed in 1820. There are two day and Sunday schools in this parish, endowed with £12 14s. per annum, arising from the interest of bequests. There was anciently a monastery here. Vestiges of the ancient fosse-way of the Romans, are visible within this parish, and many coins and other relics of that people have been found here. Blockley, previous to the Reformation, possessed a bishop's palace; but no traces of it now exist. Pop., in 1801, 1,569; in 1831, 2,015. Houses 431. Acres 7,660. A. P. £11,722. Poor rates, in 1837, £752.

BLOFIELD HUNDRED, in the county of Norfolk. Area 20,290 acres. Houses 888. Pop., in 1831, 5,290.

BLOFIELD, a parish in the hund. and union of Blofield, county of Norfolk; 4 miles west by south of Acle, on the line of the railroad from Norwich to Yarmouth. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Norwich; valued at £23 6s. 8d.; gross income £933; in the patronage of Caius college, Cambridge. Here is a daily school endowed with the produce of land, lying in the parish of Halvergate, given in 1729, by the Rev. Charles Reeve, for charitable purposes. There are besides four other daily schools and a Sunday school within this parish. Charities connected with Blofield produce about £84 per annum. Petty-sessions for the hundred of Blofield and Walsingham are held here. Pop., in 1801, 657; in 1831, 1,092. Houses 215. Acres 1,990. A. P. £4,168. Poor rates, in 1837, £638. A work-house has been erected here for the union of Blofield, by the poor-law commissioners, at an expense of £5,810, capable of accommodating 250 persons. The Blofield poor-law union comprehends 32 parishes, embracing an area of 73 square miles; with a population, returned in 1831, at 9,815. The annual average expenditure on the poor of this district, during the three years preceding the formation of the union, was £5,816. Expenditure, in 1838, £6,042. A paid constabulary force has been successfully introduced into Blofield union.

BLOOMFIELD, a village in the parish of Tipton, county of Worcester. The Wesleyan Methodists have a place of worship here, a congregation having been formed in 1823.

BLOORE-IN-TYRLEY, a township in the parish of Drayton-in-Hales, northern division of Pirehill hund., county of Stafford; 2½ miles east of Drayton, in the neighbourhood of the Birmingham and Liverpool Junction canal. Pop., in 1811, 187; in 1831, 397. Houses 72. Other returns with the parish.

BLORE, a parish and township in the northern division of the hund. of Totmanslow, county of Stafford; 3½ miles north-west of Ashborne, on the western bank of the river Dove. It comprises the chapelry of Blore with Swainscoe, and part of the chapelry of Calton. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. of Stafford and dio. of Lichfield and Coventry; valued at £8 8s., and in the parliamentary returns at £110; gross income £131. Patron, in 1835, S. Shore, Esq. There is a small daily school here. The church contains some curious monuments of the Basset family. Bloreheath was the scene of a sanguinary conflict between the partisans of York and Lancaster in 1459. Pop., in 1801, 203; in 1831, 299. Houses 71. Acres 3,730. A. P. £623. Poor rates, in 1837, £125.

BLO'-NORTON, or NORTON-BELLEAU, a parish in the hund. and union of Guiltcross, county of Norfolk; 5 miles south of East Harling, on the northern bank of the river Waveney. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. of Norfolk and dio. of Norwich; valued at £5 6s. 3d.; gross income £237. Patron, in 1835, the Rev. C. H. Browne. There is a daily school here supported by endowments, containing 60 scholars. Pop., in 1801, 267; in 1831, 411. Houses 57. Acres 1,400. A. P. £1,665. Poor rates, in 1837, £337.

BLOXHAM HUNDRED, in the county of Oxford. Area 27,710 acres. Houses 1,873. Pop., in 1831, 8,706.

BLOXHAM, a parish in the hund. of Bloxham, union of Banbury, county of Oxford; 4 miles south-west of Banbury. Living, a discharged vicarage, united with the curacy of Milcombe, in the archd. and dio. of Oxford; valued at £17 9s. 4d.; gross income £284; in the patronage of Eton college. The great and small tithes of this parish were commuted in 1799 and 1800. The Presbyterians and Baptists have chapels here. The Baptist church was formed in 1814. There are three daily schools in this parish, one of which—the free-school—is endowed by the will of Mr. Job Faulkner, late of Bloxham, with the interest of £666 13s. 4d., three per cent. consols. There are also four Sunday schools. From the fee-farmer's estate of this parish a clear income of £213 13s. is derived, which is divided into three parts, one of which is carried to an account called the poor's book, the second to the town's book, and the third is devoted to the repairs of the church and bridges. Pop., in 1801, 1,157; in 1831, 1,573. Houses 350. Acres 4,240. A. P. £6,879. Poor rates, in 1837, £781.

BLOXHOLME, a parish in the wapentake of Flaxwell, parts of Keesteven, county of Lincoln; 5 miles north by west of Sleaford. Living, a rectory with the vicarage of Digby, in the archd. and dio. of Lincoln; valued at £9 9s. 4½d.; gross income £245. Patroness, in 1835, Mrs. L. Manners. There is a day and Sunday school here. Pop., in 1801, 81; in 1831, 76. Houses 15. Acres 1,100. A. P. £1,355. Poor rates, in 1837, £46.

BLOXWICH, a chapelry in the parish of Walsall, southern division of the hund. of Offlow, county of Stafford; 2½ miles north-north-west of Walsall, intersected by the Wyrley and Essington canal. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. of Stafford and dio. of Lichfield and Coventry; valued at £7; gross income £143; in the patronage of the bishop of Lichfield and Coventry. The Roman Catholics have a chapel here, licensed under the marriage act. The hamlet is noted for the production of good saddlery. Returns with the parish.

BLOXWORTH, a parish in the hund. of Coombe-ditch, Blandford division of the county of Dorset; 5½ miles north-north-west of Wareham. Living, a rectory, a peculiar of the dean of Salisbury, formerly in the archd. of Dorset and dio. of Bristol, now in the dio. of Salisbury; valued at £15 7s. 1d.; gross income £230. Patron, in 1835, the Rev. G. Pickard. There is a day and Sunday National school in this parish. In the neighbourhood are vestiges of a Danish fort. Pop. in 1801, 182; in 1831, 251. Houses 34. Acres 3,420. A. P. £1,115. Poor rates, in 1837, £116.

BLUBBERHOUSES, a township in the parish of Fewston, lower division of the wapentake of Claro, west riding of Yorkshire; 7 miles north by west of Otley. The Independents have a chapel here. Pop., in 1801, 120; in 1831, 118. Houses 18. Acres 3,600. A. P. £303. Poor rates, in 1837, £14.

BLUNDESTON, a parish in the hund. of Mutford and Lothingland, county of Suffolk; $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles north-west of Lowestoft, in the vicinity of the Norwich and Lowestoft navigation. Living, a discharged rectory with Flitton, in the archd. of Suffolk and dio. of Norwich; valued at £13 6s. 8d.; gross income £617. Patron, in 1835, the Rev. G. Anguish. There are four daily schools in this parish, one of which is endowed with a small cottage and an acre and a half of land, producing annually about £11. There is a Baptist chapel here. Pop., in 1801, 386; in 1831, 517. Houses 106. Acres 1,500. A. P. £2,397. Poor rates, in 1837, £207.

BLUNHAM, a parish in the hund. of Wixamtree, county of Bedford, including the hamlet of Moggerhanger; 5 miles north-north-west of Biggleswade, on the western bank of the river Ivel. Living, a rectory, formerly in the archd. of Bedford and dio. of Lincoln, now in the dio. of Ely; valued at £46 2s. 11d.; gross income £815. Patron, in 1835, Earl de Grey. The church contains several ancient monuments. The Baptists have a chapel here; the church was formed in 1670. This parish possesses a daily school and two Sunday schools. A market and fair were formerly held here, but have been discontinued. Pop., in 1801, 376; in 1831, 916. Houses 187. Acres 3,300. A. P. £1,807. Poor rates, in 1837, £222.

BLUNSDON (St. ANDREW), a parish in the hund. of Highworth, Crickdale and Staple, county of Wilts; 5 miles west-south-west of Highworth, in the vicinity of the North Wilts canal, and the Cheltenham and Great Western railroad union. Living, a rectory, formerly in the archd. of Wilts and dio. of Salisbury, now in the dio. of Gloucester; valued at £8 19s. 2d.; gross income £285. Patroness, in 1835, Mrs. D. M. Barker. Pop., in 1801, 65; in 1831, 73. Houses 12. Acres 1,420. A. P. £1,968. Poor rates, in 1837, £47.

BLUNSDON (BROAD), a chapelry in the parish of Highworth, hund. of Highworth, Crickdale and Staple, county of Wilts; $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles west by south of Highworth, in the neighbourhood of the North Wilts canal. Pop., in 1801, 396; in 1831, 699. Houses 154. Acres 2,260. Other returns with the parish.

BLUNTISHAM AND EARITH, a parish in the hund. of Hurstingstone, county of Huntingdon; 5 miles north-east by east of St. Ives, on the western bank of the river Ouse. Living, a rectory, formerly in the archd. of Huntingdon and dio. of Lincoln, now in the dio. of Ely; valued at £32 16s. 0d.; gross income £1,139; nett income £1,010; in the patronage of the bishop of Ely. The church is a handsome Gothic structure. There is a Baptist church here, formed in 1787. The Independents have also a place of worship here. There are five daily schools here, one of which is endowed with land yielding £100 per annum, and two Sunday schools. Charities connected with this parish produce about £108 per annum. A destructive hurricane occurred here in September, 1741. Pop., in 1801, 460; in 1831, 674. Houses 137. Acres 2,410. A. P. £3,618. Poor rates, in 1837, £706.

BLURTON AND LIGHTWOOD FOREST, a chapelry in the parish of Trentham, northern division of the hund. of Firehill, county of Stafford; 5 miles south-east by east of Newcastle-under-Lyne, in the vicinity of the Grand Trunk canal, and the Manchester and Birmingham railroad. Living, a curacy in the archd. of Stafford and dio. of Lichfield and Coventry, not in charge, of the yearly value of £189. Patron, in 1835, the Duke of Sutherland. Pop., in 1821, 844; in 1831, 849. Houses 149. Acres 2,210. Other returns with the parish.

BLYBOROUGH, a parish in the western division of the wapentake of Aslaoce, parts of Lindsey, county of Lincoln; 9 miles north-east of Gainsborough. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Stow and dio. of Lincoln; valued at £19; gross income £525; in the patronage of the Crown. There is a daily school in this parish. Pop., in 1801, 157; in 1831, 201. Houses 30. Acres 3,080. A. P. £2,935. Poor rates, in 1837, £152.

BLYMILL WITH BRINCTON, a parish in the western division of the hund. of Cuttlestone, county of Stafford; 6 miles west-north-west of Brewwood, in the vicinity of the Birmingham and Liverpool Junction canal. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Stafford and dio. of Lichfield and Coventry; valued at £13 10s. 7d.; gross income £630. Patron, in 1835, the Earl of Bradford. There is a day and Sunday National school here, with a small endowment, containing 60 pupils. Pop., in 1801, 475; in 1831, 566. Houses 122. Acres 2,190. A. P. £3,490. Poor rates, in 1837, £321.

BLYSOOG (THE), a river rising in Pembroke-shire, and falling into the Tavy, near Kilgarrin castle, in Cardiganshire.

BLYTH, a parish comprising the chapelries of Ansterfield and Bawtry, in the wapentake of Stratford and Tickhill, county of Doncaster, west riding of the county of York,—the township of Banakill, in the liberty of Southwell and Scrooby,—the market-town of Blyth,—the lordship of Hodssock, and the townships of Barnby-moor with Bilby, Styrrup, and Torworth, in the Hatfield division of the wapentake of Bassettlaw, union of Worksop, county of Nottingham; 152 miles north-north-west of London, and 6 of East Retford. The town of Blyth is an agreeable village, occupying a gentle ascent, and had formerly a market on Wednesday. This has fallen into disuse, but fairs are held on Holy Thursday and October 20, for cattle, horses, and swine. The North of England, and the Newcastle, Shields, and Sunderland union banks, have branches here. Living, a discharged vicarage, formerly in the archd. of Nottingham and dio. of York, now in the dio. of Lincoln; valued at £14 9s. 4d.; gross income £751; in the patronage of Trinity college, Cambridge. The church is a capacious and elegant Gothic structure, with an ancient tower, the whole being evidently of very high antiquity. The interior presents a noble nave, with arches supported by lofty pillars, blended with some beautiful monuments of the Mellish family. The Society of Friends have a place of worship here. This parish possesses 11 daily and 8 Sunday schools, with 4 infant schools. There are several endowed almshouses here. Other charities connected with the parish produce about £28 per annum. "Here was a priory of Benedictine monks, built by Roger de Builly and Muriel his wife, about A. D. 1088, to the honour of the blessed Virgin. It was in some respects subordinate to the abbey of the Holy Trinity, on the mount of St. Catherine, near Rox, in Normandy; however, it was not seized with the alien priories, but continued till the general dissolution, when the revenues were equal to £126 8s. 2d. The site was granted, 35° Henry VIII., to Richard Andrews and William Ramsden.—A hospital for a warden, three chaplains, and several leprous people, was founded here by William de Cressy, lord of Hodesac, and dedicated to St. John the Evangelist. It was valued, 26° Henry VIII., at £8 14s.—Tanner's Not. Mon. Of this hospital no traces remain. The country around the township of Blyth, embracing the grounds not only belonging to the mansion of the Mellishes, but also those of Serlby-hall, presents a scene of cultivation so rich and varied as to resemble that of a garden. The high road itself seems an ornamented walk, leading over a magnificent bridge of Rock-Abby stone, built for the purpose of crossing the extensive piece of water formed by damming up the river Idle and the little brook called Ryton, which intersects these grounds. See BAWTRY. Pop., in 1801, 1,565; in 1831, 3,735. Houses 502. Acres 17,070. A. P. £24,255. Poor rates, in 1837, £1,761. Pop. of the township, in 1801, 589; in 1831, 811. Houses 166. Poor rates, in 1837, £368.

BLYTH (NORTH). See BEDLINGTON.

BLYTH (SOUTH), AND NEWSHAM, a seaport town and chapelry in the parish of Earsdon, eastern division of Castle ward, county of Northumberland; 268 miles north-north-west of London, and 9 south-east of Morpeth. There is a chapel-of-ease here, erected in 1751 by Sir M. W. Ridley, Bart., in whose family the patronage remains. The church of Scotland, Wesleyans, New Connexion Methodists, and United Seceders, have places of worship here. This township possesses eight daily and four Sunday schools. The exports are chiefly coal and salt, and above 100 small vessels belong to the port, whose harbour is secure, but accessible only by vessels of moderate burden. In full tides there are 16 feet of water at the bar. There is a lighthouse here, showing a fixed light, visible at 10 miles distance in clear weather. Position 55° 7' N. lat.; 1° 30' W. long. Pop., in 1801, 1,170; in 1831, 1,769. Houses 246. Acreage with the parish. A. P. £4,909. Poor rates, in 1837, £791.

BLYTHBURGH, a parish in the hund. and union of Blything, county of Suffolk; 4 miles west of Southwold, on the post-road to Saxmundham, intersected by the river Blythe, which is here navigable. Living, a perpetual curacy not in charge, in the archd. of Suffolk and dio. of Norwich; valued in the parliamentary returns at £26; gross income £45. Patron, in 1835, Sir Charles Blois, Bart. The chapel is a large and ancient structure, very much decayed. According to Stow, a severe thunder-storm occurred here on Sunday the 4th August, 1577, during divine service, when the church sustained great damage from the lightning, and upwards of 20 people were struck down by it, two of whom were killed, and the others scorched. There are two daily schools here, one of which, held in the poor-house, and including 151 children, is supported by the incorporated hundred of Blything from the poor rate. There is also a Sunday school endowed with £3 per annum. The town was formerly of much importance, and had a weekly market and three annual fairs; but it declined on the suppression of the priory, of which there are trifling remains. In 1679 it sustained a loss by fire to the amount of £1,803, on which occasion some of the inhabitants, from inability to rebuild their houses, and others from the failure of trade, removed elsewhere, and reduced the place to poverty. A fair is held on April 5th for toys. "Here was a priory of Black canons, cell to the abbey of St. Osith in Essex, to which house the church here was given by King Henry I. It was dedicated to the blessed Virgin, and valued 26° Henry VIII., about which time there were here five religious, at £48 8s. 10d. per annum. It was granted, 36° Henry VIII., to Sir Arthur Hopeton."—Tanner's Not. Mon. Pop., in 1801, 363; in 1831, 579. Houses 113. Acres 3,590. A. P. £2,818. Poor rates, in 1837, £563.

BLYTHER, (THE), a river in Warwickshire, falling into the Tame, near Maxstock castle.

BLYTHER (THE), a river in Northumberland, flowing through Stanington vale, and falling into the sea at Blythe.

BLYTHER (THE), or BLITHE, a river in Suffolk, rising near Laxford, flowing east, and falling into the German sea near Southwold. It is navigable to Halesworth, a distance of 9 miles.

BLYTHFORD, a parish in the hund. and union of Blything, county of Suffolk; 2½ miles east by south of Halesworth, on the northern bank of the river Blythe. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. of Suffolk and dio. of Norwich, not in charge; valued at £16; and, in 1835, in the patronage of the Rev. Jeremy Day. Pop., in 1801, 163; in 1831, 197. Houses 23. Acres 1,240. A. P. £709. Poor rates, in 1837, £182.

BLYTHING HUNDRED, in the county of Suffolk, is bounded on the north by the hundred of Wangford; on the north-east by that of Mutford; on the east by the North sea; on the south by the hundred of Plomesgate; and on the west by that of Hoxne. Area 83,850 acres. Houses 3,917. Pop., in 1831, 24,177. A workhouse has been erected at an expense of £713 2s. 6d., at Bulcamp, by the poor-law commissioners, for the union of Blything, and is distinctly returned. The population of this house of industry in 1801, was 523; in 1831, 404.—The Blything poor-law union comprehends 49 parishes, embracing an area of 138 square miles, with a population returned, in 1831, at 25,803. The average annual expenditure on the poor of this district, during the three years preceding the formation of the union, was £21,979. Expenditure, in 1838, £10,379.

BLYTTON WITH WHARTON, a parish in the wapentake of Corringham, parts of Lindsey, union of Gainsborough, county of Lincoln; 4 miles north-east of Gainsborough. Living, a vicarage in the archd. of Stow and dio. of Lincoln; valued at £12; gross income £400. Patron, in 1835, the Earl of Scarborough. This parish possesses five daily schools, one of which is endowed with £20 per annum. Pop., in 1801, 377; in 1831, 551. Houses 117. Acres 2,890. A. P. £4,946. Poor rates, in 1837, £190.

BOARHUNT, a parish in the hund. and division of Portsdown, union of Fareham, county of Southampton; 2 miles north-north-east of Fareham. Living, a donative in the archd. and dio. of Winchester, not in charge; no return was made. Patron, in 1835, T. Thistlethwayte, Esq. Here is a monument to Lord Nelson. Pop., in 1801, 133; in 1831, 225. Houses 25. Acres 1,850. A. P. £1,744. Poor rates, in 1837, £118.

BOARSHURST. See SADDLEWORTH WITH QUICK.

BOARSTALL. See BORSTALL.

BOBBING, a parish in the hund. and union of Milton, lathe of Scray, county of Kent; 1½ mile west by north of Milton, near the post-road to Chatham. Living, a vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Canterbury; valued at £30 16s.; gross income £120. Patron, in 1835, V. Simpson, Esq. There is a daily school here. Bobbing-court, now in ruins, was the ancient residence of the Savages, and in the principal chancel of the church there are some curious memorials of that family. Titus Oates, the discoverer of the popish plot, in the reign of Charles II., was vicar of this parish. Pop., in 1801, 231; in 1831, 364. Houses 60. Acres 1,040. A. P. £1,549. Poor rates, in 1837, £153.

BOBBINGTON, a parish in the union of Seisdon, partly in the hund. of Brimstrey, county of Salop, and partly in the southern division of the hund. of Seisdon, county of Stafford; $8\frac{1}{2}$ miles south-west of Wolverhampton, and $3\frac{1}{2}$ west of the Stafford and Birmingham canal. Living, a perpetual curacy, formerly in the archd. of Salop and dio. of Lichfield and Coventry, now in the dio. of Chester, a peculiar of the yearly value of £97. Patron, in 1835, T. Whitmore, Esq. Here is a school for 20 boys and 12 girls, founded and endowed with £1,400, by Hannah Cobbett, in 1792. There are also a daily school, containing 33 pupils, and two Sunday schools. Pop., in 1801, 381; in 1831, 429. Houses 82. Acres 2,320. A. P. £4,025. Poor rates, in 1837, £187.

BOBBINGWORTH, a parish in the hund. and union of Ongar, county of Essex; $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles north-west of Chipping-Ongar. Living, a rectory, formerly in the archd. of Essex and dio. of London, now in the dio. of Rochester; valued at £13 6s. 8d.; gross income £395. Patrons, in 1835, — Honblon and C. Cure, Esqrs. There is a daily school in this parish supported by Capel Cure, Esq. Pop., in 1801, 216; in 1831, 277. Houses 48. Acres 1,430. A. P. £2,458. Poor rates, in 1837, £190.

BOCKENFIELD, a township in the parish of Felton, eastern division of Morpeth ward, county of Northumberland; 8 miles north of Morpeth. Pop., in 1801, 130; in 1831, 107. Houses 26. Acreage with the parish. Poor rates, in 1837, £51.

BOCKHAMPTON. See STINSFORD.

BOCKING, a parish and village in the hund. of Hinchford, union of Braintree, county of Essex; 2 miles north of Braintree, on the northern bank of the river Pant, and 41 miles east of London. It forms the northern suburb of Braintree, and derives some advantage from its situation as a thoroughfare from the metropolis to the eastern counties. This manor was presented by Ethelred to the see of Canterbury, to which it was attached till the dissolution of monasteries by Henry VIII. It is still the seat of a deanery. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Canterbury; valued at £35 10s. 8d.; gross income £1,128; nett income £923; in the patronage of the archbishop of Canterbury. The church, supposed to have been built in the 14th century, is a spacious structure, and contained, before the Reformation, three altars and five chantries. There is an independent church here, which has existed since 1710. This parish possesses four daily schools, one of which was endowed by John Gauden, bishop of Worcester, with £21 per annum, three Sunday schools, with lending libraries attached, and four boarding schools. Bocking has increased considerably from the manufacture of silk and crape, which gives employment to many of the inhabitants. In 1838, 223 hands were employed in a silk-mill here. There are also some corn and fulling-mills driven by power from the river Pant. Here are alms-houses for nine persons, endowed with £80 per annum, and an hospital, founded by John Doreward, Esq. for a provost or master, and six poor persons, 18th Henry VI. Petty-sessions are held here and at Halstead for the division of South Hinkford. Pop., in 1801, 2,680; in 1831, 3,128. Houses 647. Acres 3,800. A. P. £6,957. Poor rates, in 1837, £2,015.

BOCKLETON, a parish in the union of Tenbury, partly in the hund. of Broxash, county of Hereford, and partly in the hund. of Doddingtree, county of Worcester; 5 miles south of Tenbury. It includes the hamlet of Hampton-Charles. Living, a perpetual curacy, formerly in the archd. of Salop and dio. of Hereford, now in the dio. of Worcester; valued at £13 4s., and rated in the parliamentary returns at £100; gross income £133. Patron, in 1835, the Rev. J. K. Miller. There is a daily National school in this parish. Pop., in 1801, 223; in 1831, 385. Houses 71. Acres 3,300, of which about 100 are in hops. A. P. £2,364. Poor rates, in 1837, £239.

BOCONNOC, a parish in the hund. of West, union of Liskeard, county of Cornwall; 4 miles east-north-east of Lostwithiel. Living, a discharged rectory, with that of Broad-Oak, in the archd. of Cornwall and dio. of Exeter; valued at £9 17s. 8d.; gross income £416. Patron, in 1835, Lord Grenville. There are two daily schools here. In Bocconoc house, once the property of Lord Camelford, Charles I. resided a short time in 1644, and was shot at when walking in the grounds. The ball missed the king and killed a fisherman who was gazing at him. Some lead mines were formerly worked here but were not productive. Bocconoc is the birth-place of the celebrated statesman William Pitt, earl of Chatham. Pop., in 1801, 212; in 1831, 259. Houses 49. Acres 2,230. A. P. £1,254. Poor rates, in 1837, £116.

BODAIOCH. See TREF-EGLWYS.

BODDINGTON, a parish in the union of Tewkesbury, partly in the hund. of Tewkesbury and partly in that of Westminster, lower divisions, county of Gloucester; 4 miles north-west by west of Cheltenham, and 3 west of the Cheltenham railway. Living, a curacy, subordinate to the vicarage of Staverton. Pop., in 1801, 273; in 1831, 421. Houses 62. Acres 1,550. A. P. £3,243. Poor rates, in 1837, £229.

BODDINGTON (LOWER and UPPER), a parish in the hund. of Chipping-Warden, county of Northampton; 9 miles south-west of Daventry, in the vicinity of the Oxford canal. It includes the hamlet of Barrow. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Northampton and dio. of Peterborough; valued at £20; gross income £780; in the patronage of Emanuel college, Cambridge. All tithes of Upper Boddington, the property of the clerical rector, were commuted in 1758. There are four daily schools in this parish, one of which is endowed by Richard Lamprey. Pop., in 1801, 476; in 1831, 662. Houses 122. Acres 3,770. A. P. £4,117.

BODEDERN, a parish in the hund. of Llyffon, union and county of Anglesey, North Wales; 6 miles east of Holyhead, on the post-road to Bangor. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. of Anglesey and dio. of St. Asaph and Bangor; valued at £12 15s., and rated in the parliamentary returns at £78; gross income £104; in the patronage of Jesus college, Cambridge. The Calvinistic Methodists have a chapel here; the church was formed in 1784. There are two daily schools in this parish, one of which, containing 78 pupils, is supported by endowment and five Sunday schools. Fairs are held here or March 13th, April 16th, May 5th, June 9th, Tuesday after Whit-Monday, August 16th, September 14th, and October 1st and 21st, for cattle. Here are two druidical cromlechs. Pop., in 1801, 593; in 1831, 1,085. Houses 228. A. P. £2,038. Poor rates, in 1837, £436.

BODENHAM, a parish in the hund. of Broxash, union of Leominster, county of Hereford; 8 miles north-north-east of Hereford. Living, a vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Hereford; rated at £12 1s. 5d.; gross income £686. Patron, in 1835, R. Arkwright, Esq. The great and small tithes, the property of the bishop of Hereford, clerical rector and vicar, were commuted in 1802. Here are 2 daily schools, and a National one, endowed with £30 per annum. There is an endowment for poor housekeepers not receiving parochial aid. Pop., in 1801, 887; in 1831, 998. Houses 199. Acres 5,550, of which about 270 are in hops. A. P. £5,661. Poor rates, in 1837, £400.

BODEWRYD, a parish in the hund. of Twrcelyn, county of Anglesey, North Wales; 2½ miles south-west of Amlwch. Living, a curacy, not in charge, in the archd. of Anglesey and dio. of St. Asaph and Bangor; of the yearly value of £70. Patron, in 1835, Sir J. T. Stanley, Bart. Pop., in 1801, 58; in 1831, 35. Houses 6.

BODFARY, or BODVARI, a parish in the union of St. Asaph, partly in the hund. of Ruthin, county of Denbigh, and partly in that of Rhudalan, county of Flint, North Wales; 4 miles north-east of Denbigh. It contains the township of Aberwheeler. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. and dio. of St. Asaph and Bangor; valued at £9 5s. 2½d.; gross income £326; in the patronage of the bishop of St. Asaph. This parish possesses two daily schools, one of which is partly supported by the interest of £100, bequeathed in trust by the late Sir Robert Cotton, Bart., and paid by Lord Combermere, and two Sunday schools. At this place the Romans built a small city, which they named Bodvari,—the mansion of Varus,—who is supposed to have had his residence here. The ruins of the buildings still exist upon an adjoining hill, called Moel-y-gaer. Pop., in 1801, 825; in 1831, 873. Houses 170. A. P. £4,870. Poor rates, in 1837, £131.

BODFERIN, or BODVERN, a parish in the hund. of Commitmaen, union of Pwllheli, county of Caernarvon, North Wales; 14 miles south-west by south of Pwllheli. Pop., in 1801, 58; in 1831, 56. Houses 11. A. P. £250. Poor rates, in 1837, £14.

BODFUAN, or BODVEAN, a parish in the hund. of Dinlleyn, union of Pwllheli, county of Caernarvon, North Wales; 2½ miles south-south-east of Nevins. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Bangor and dio. of St. Asaph and Bangor; valued at £6 6s. 8d.; gross income £223; in the patronage of the bishop of St. Asaph and Bangor. The Calvinistic Methodists have a place of worship here; the church having been formed in 1827. There are a daily school here, endowed with £100, and a Sunday school. Pop., in 1831, 378. Houses 69. A. P. £1,175. Poor rates, in 1837, £156.

BODHAM, a parish in the hund. of Holt, union of Erpingham, county of Norfolk; 3 miles east of Holt. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. and dio. of Norwich; valued at £9; and, in 1835, in the patronage of Thomas V. Mott, Esq. Pop., in 1801, 227; in 1831, 308. Houses 65. Acres 1,680. A. P. £1,356. Poor rates, in 1837, £225.

BODICOTT, a chapelry in the parish of East Adderbury, hund. of Bloxham, county of Oxford; 2 miles south of Banbury, in the vicinity of the Oxford canal. Living, a curacy, not in charge, annexed to the vicarage of East Adderbury. The Baptists have a chapel here; the church was formed in 1817. There are two daily and two Sunday schools here. Pop., in 1801, 574; in 1831, 779. Houses 138. Acres 1,680. A. P. £2,968. Poor rates, in 1837, £400.

BODIHAM, a parish in the hund. of Staple, rape of Hastings, union of Ticehurst, county of Sussex; 7 miles north-north-east of Battle, on the northern bank of the river Rother, over which there is a bridge here. Living, a vicarage in the archd. of Lewes and dio. of Chichester; valued at £6 18s. 6½d.; gross income £280. Patron, in 1835, Sir J. G. Thomas. There are a daily and a Sunday school here, supported by the vicar of the parish. A fair is held here on June 6th for cattle and pedlery. Bodiham castle, which stands at a small distance eastward of the village, was built in the 13th century, and is still a magnificent pile of building even in ruins. It is surrounded by a large and deep moat, now stagnant. The great gate is flanked by two square machicolated towers, and over it are three escutcheons of arms, and the iron portcullis, yet entire. Pop., in 1801, 225; in 1831, 349. Houses 58. Acres 1,480, of which 130 are in hops. A. P. £1,665. Poor rates, in 1837, £165.

BODMIN, a borough and parish in the hund. of Trigg, union of Bodmin, county of Cornwall; 232 miles west-south-west of London, 21 south-west of Launceston. The limits of the borough are well-defined. Bodmin, formerly a stannary town, consists of a single long street running east and west, and lighted with gas. It is situated near the centre of the county, in a hollow between two hills. A railway from Wadebridge was opened in 1834; it extends up the valley towards Camelford. Its whole length is 14 miles, 5 furlongs, 6 chains. An excellent market-house was opened in 1840. Races take place annually, and assemblies are occasionally held here. Bone-lace was formerly made in considerable quantity; but the chief manufacture at present is that of shoes. Saturday is market-day. Fairs for oxen, sheep, and cloth—of which last but a small quantity is now sold—are held on the 25th January, Saturday before Palm Sunday, Tuesday and Wednesday before Whit-Sunday, and December 6th. In the hamlet of St. Lawrence, in the immediate vicinity, large cattle-fairs are held on the 21st August, and 29th and 30th October. There are a branch of the Devon and Cornwall banking company, and of the East Cornwall bank, here. The corporation are in possession of the following charters:—36° Edward III., 1362; 3° Richard II., 1390; 5° Elizabeth, 1563; 36° Elizabeth, 1594; and 38° George III., 1798. There is also a charter granted by James II.; but this is considered illegal, and has never been acted on. By the municipal act of 1835, the government, under the title of 'the mayor and burgesses of Bodmin, in the county of Cornwall,' is vested in a mayor, 4 aldermen, and 12 councillors. The mayor, and the late mayor, are justices of the peace, ex officio. By the charter of George III., a court-of-record was granted, before which all personal actions, not exceeding £100, might be brought, and also a court of pie-powder. Bodmin is the place of election for the two members for the eastern division of Cornwall; it also unites with the parishes of Lanivet, Lanhedock, and Helland, in returning two borough-members. Under the old regime its 37 corporation-voters enjoyed the same right. The county sessions and assizes are all now holden in this town: the spring assizes having been removed from Launceston, and the April sessions from Truro, in 1839. A new hall has been erected in the town for the purpose of the assize-business, with two very handsome courts. The grand jury-room, indictment-room, and other requisite offices, are all within the building. A new mayoralty house, and judge's lodging, was built in 1838. A part of the ancient convent of Grey friars—afterwards noticed—with some modern additions, is used as a corn-market. Previous to the erection of the new county-hall, the summer assizes were holden in the old refectory of the Grey friars. The county-gaol and house-of-correction is situated below the town. It is neat and well-arranged, and contains 177 cells, 15 wards, 16 day-rooms, and 15 airing-yards. Two tread-mills, both connected with the same shaft, and two crank-machines, are attached to the building. The employments of the inmates, though various, are not very productive to the county. The number of prisoners, in 1835, was 569.

St. Guron had an hermitage here, on the site of which St. Petroc founded a cell for four monks, about A. D. 518. Dr. Borlase is of opinion that here was the first seat of the bishopric of Cornwall, but Whitaker has shown this to be an error. The monastery of Bodmin was granted by King Ethelred to the bishop of St. Germans, in 994. The following is the account given by Tanner in his Notitia.—"The body of St. Petroc having been moved to this place, there was a church built to his memory, and the episcopal see for Cornwall was therein placed by King Edward the Elder, and Archbishop Plegmund, A. D. 905. Here King Athelstan is reported to have met with old Saxon, or rather British monks, following the rule of St. Benedict, to whom he granted so great privileges and endowments, that he is accounted the founder of the monastery here, about A. D. 926. That settlement was destroyed by Danish pirates in 981, yet the religious continued here under several shapes, and much alienation of their lands, both before and after the conquest, till about the year 1120, when one Algar, with the king's licence and the consent of William Warlewast, bishop of Exeter, re-established this religious house, and placed therein regular canons of the order of St. Austin, who continued here till the general suppression, when it was styled the priory of St. Mary and St. Petroc, and was valued at £289 11s. 11d., per annum. The site, with the demesnes, were granted, 36th Henry VIII., to Thomas Sternhold, one of the first translators of the Psalms into English metre."—A house of Grey friars was on the south side of the market-place, begun by John of London, a merchant, and augmented by Edmund, earl of Cornwall. After the dissolution, this friary was granted to one William Abbott, 37th Henry VIII., and in Queen Elizabeth's time it was the house of correction for the county. The town was formerly of much greater extent than it now is; for besides a priory and cathedral, it possessed, according to Hals, thirteen churches or free chapels, the sites of some of which are still distinguishable. It was one of those decayed towns for the repairing of which an act was passed in the 32nd Henry VIII.

Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Cornwall and dio. of Exeter; valued at £13 6s. 8d.; gross income £300; in the patronage of the Baroness Bassett. The church is a spacious structure, in the later style of English architecture. It contains a large Norman font, and a finely sculptured monument in honour of Thomas Vivian, bishop of Megara, and one of its latest priors, whose bones are kept above ground, in a closet. Here are also places of worship belonging to the Wesleyan Methodists, Brynites, and the connexion of the Countess of Huntingdon. The Wesleyan church was formed in 1803; that of Lady Huntingdon's connexion in 1825. There are here 22 daily schools, collectively containing 592 children, one of which was founded and endowed by Queen Elizabeth.—It appears that the inhabitants long exercised the right of cutting wood for fuel in the Dunmeer woods; the exercise of this right often occasioned great riots in the days of the prior of Bodmin, to whom these woods belonged. After the dissolution of the priory, they came into the possession of John Chamond, who conveyed to the corporation the Dunmeer mills, upon special trust that the rents and profits should be given for the relief of poor persons resident within the borough. The municipal commissioners report, that the rents derived from these mills, and the fines received on granting various leases, have been appropriated to the general purposes of the corporation. Near the town was an ancient hospital for lazars, endowed with £140 per annum, the revenue of which has been transferred, by decree of the court of Chancery, to the infirmary of Truro. Pop., in 1801, 2,299; in 1831, 3,782. Houses 641. Acres 6,310. A. P. £10,861. Poor rates, in 1837, £943.—The Bodmin poor-law union comprehends 19 parishes, embracing an area of 128 square miles; with a population returned, in 1831, at 18,836.

BODNEY, a parish in the hund. of South Greenhoe, union of Swaffham, county of Norfolk, 5½ miles west by south of Watton. Living, a discharged rectory subordinate to Great Cressingham. Pop., in 1801, 89; in 1831, 110. Houses 8. Acres 2,590. A. P. £1,000. Poor rates, in 1837, £91.

BODWROG, a parish in the hund. of Llyfion, union and county of Anglesey, North Wales; 10½ miles east by south of Holyhead, on the post-road to Bangor. Living, a perpetual curacy united with that of Llandrygarn. This parish possesses a Sunday school, containing 80 children, with the privilege of sending 12 pupils to the National school in the adjoining parish of Llandrygarn. Pop., in 1801, 219; in 1831, 312. Houses 63. A. P. £896. Poor rates, in 1837, £145.

BOGNOR, or HOHAMPTON, a market-town and chapelry in the parish of South Bersted, hund. of Aldwich, rape of Chichester, county of Sussex; 6½ miles south-east of Chichester, in the neighbourhood of the Arundel and Portsmouth canal. The town is an agreeable, favourite, and fashionable, watering-place: it is sheltered from the north winds by the South Downs, and commands a fine inland prospect. "The mildness of the temperature of Bognor," says Dally, in his Bognor Guide, "is manifested by the luxuriance of the trees and shrubs that grow near the shore, and the facility with which all sorts of native, and many exotic, plants are cultivated. At the very edge of the ocean, the elegant tamarisk is seen to blossom in full perfection during several of the winter months; and whilst the snow lies embedded on the northern sides of the hills, it is either not seen here, or soon dissolves away under the genial influence of the climate." A chapel was erected here in 1821. Living, a perpetual curacy of the yearly value of £107, in the peculiar jurisdiction and patronage of the archbishop of Canterbury. The Independents and Wesleyan Methodists have places of worship here. The Independent church was formed in 1826. The Jubilee National school here, consisting of 50 girls, who are instructed in their religious duties, reading, writing, and needle-work, and also partly clothed, was instituted in 1809 by her late Royal Highness, the Princess Charlotte of Wales; another school, likewise for girls, is supported at the sole charge of Mrs. Smith of Bersted Lodge. Pop. returned with the parish. Bognor, or Hothampton, owes its present consequence to Sir Richard Hotham, who having amassed a large fortune by commercial pursuits, happened to visit this part of the Sussex coast, about the year 1784, when he conceived the design of making Bognor, then occupied by a few farmers and fishermen, a fashionable resort. To effect this favourite object, he devoted the remainder of his life, and not less than £60,000 of his fortune, leaving but a nett income of £8,000 to his astonished heirs.

BOLAM, a township in the parish of Gainford, south-western division of Darlington ward, co.-palatine of Durham; 7¼ miles north-west of Darlington, and 3 south of the Clarence railway. Pop., in 1801, 93; in 1831, 115. Houses 26. Acres 810. A. P. £953. Poor rates, in 1837, £43.

* A manuscript copy of the gospels, of the 9th century, or earlier, and formerly belonging to the church of St. Petroc in Bodmin, has recently been discovered in Oxfordshire, and is now deposited in the British Museum. There are entries in it, in Saxon and Latin, of the time of Edgar.

BOLIAM, a parish in the union of Castle ward, Northumberland, consisting of the township of Trewhick, in the western division of Castle ward; the townships of Bolam, Bolam-Vicarage, and Gallowhill, in the western division of Morpeth ward; and the townships of Belsay, Bradford, Harnham, and Shortflatt, in the north-eastern division of Tindale ward; 9 miles west-south-west of Morpeth. Living, a vicarage in the archd. of Northumberland and dio. of Durham; valued at £6 13s. 4d.; gross income £240; in the patronage of the Crown. The church is very ancient, and contains the figure of a knight templar, supposed to be the effigies of Sir Walter de Bolam. There are two daily and two Sunday schools in this parish. Near the village are vestiges of an intrenchment, the origin of which is doubtful. On Bolam moor is a tumulus of earth, between two large upright stones, in which Mr. Warburton found a stone-coffin, smoked within, and containing nothing but several pieces of glutinous matter. Pop., in 1801, 434; in 1831, 608. Houses 112. Acres 8,260. A. P. £7,505. Poor rates, in 1837, £211. Pop. of the township, in 1801, 35; in 1831, 67. Houses 11. Poor rates, in 1837, £35.

BOLAS (MAGNA) AND MEESON, a parish in Newport division of the hund. of South Bradford, union of Wellington, county of Salop; 6½ miles west by north of Newport. Living, a rectory, formerly in the archd. of Salop and dio. of Lichfield and Coventry, now in the dio. of Chester; valued at £7 9s. 4½d.; gross income £371. Patron, in 1835, Sir R. Hill, Bart. There is a daily school here. Pop., in 1801, 207; in 1831, 255. Houses 48. Acres 2,650. A. P. £2,505. Poor rates, in 1837, £126.

BOLBECK, an extensive common of 12,000 acres in the parish of Shotley, ward of Tindale, Northumberland, for the enclosure of which an act of parliament was obtained in 1765.

BOLD, a township in the parish of Prescott, hund. of West Derby, co.-palatine of Lancaster; 4 miles east-south-east of Prescott, intersected by the Run-corn Gap and St. Helens railway, and in the immediate vicinity of the Liverpool and Manchester line. There are two daily schools in this township, and a Sunday school, wholly supported by Lady B. Houghton. Here is the mansion-house of the family of Bold, who are said to have resided here in uninterrupted succession, from the Conquest to 1761. Pop., in 1801, 713; in 1831, 866. Houses 130. Acres 3,910. A. P. £6,572. Poor rates, in 1837, £360.

BOLDON, or BOLDWIN, a parish, containing the townships of East and West Boldon, in the eastern division of Chester ward, union of South Shields, co.-palatine of Durham; 4½ miles north-west of Sunderland, intersected by the Stanhope and Tyne railway. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Durham; valued at £24 13s. 4d.; gross income £730; nett income £653; in the patronage of the bishop of Durham. The Wesleyan Methodists have a place of worship here. There are four daily schools in this parish, one of which was endowed, in 1808, with £10 per annum, by the Rev. Henry Blacket, two Sunday, and two day and boarding schools. Other charities connected with the parish produce £7 17s. per annum. This manor has from time immemorial belonged to the bishopric of Durham, and been noted for having given title to the provincial domesday-book, called the Bolden-Buke, from its frequent reference to services within this manor. Limestone is abundant here. Pop., in 1801, 619; in 1831, 855. Houses 158. Acres 4,760. A. P. £5,017. Poor rates, in 1837, £279.

BOLDRE, a parish in the eastern division of the hund. of New Forest, union of Lymington, New Forest division of the county of Southampton; 2½ miles north of Lymington. Living, a discharged vicarage with the curacies of Lymington and Brockenhurst, in the archd. and dio. of Winchester; valued at £12; gross income £440. Patron, in 1835, J. P. Shrubbs, Esq. The vicarial tithes, moduses, &c., of the manors of Sway-Quarr, Sway-Romsey, and Arnewood, in Boldre and Hordle, the property of the vicar, were commuted in 1811. There are here eleven daily and four Sunday schools, besides two day and Sunday National schools supported by endowment. This parish comprises the village of Boldre, the hamlet of South Baddeley, and the borough of Lymington, which latter has separate jurisdiction. The Rev. William Gilpin, author of 'A Tour of the Lakes,' and many other well-known works, was vicar of this parish, and, with the profits which he derived from his pen and pencil, endowed two schools here for 20 boys and as many girls, who are to be "taken, as far as can be, out of the labouring part of the parish." The church is an ancient and venerable structure, beautifully situated on the summit of a thickly wooded eminence, about a mile from the village. The view from the churchyard is very extensive. Mr. Gilpin died in April, 1804, and is buried here, "amidst the scenes he so much loved and so well described." Such part of the parish of Boldre as lies within a line drawn from Eastend bridge through Boldre church to the west bank of Lymington river, unites with Lymington in returning two members to parliament. Pop., in 1801, 1,793; in 1831, 2,111. Houses 438. Acres 5,260. A. P. £7,780. Poor rates, in 1837, £938.

BOLDRON, a township in the parish of Bowes, western division of the wapentake of Gilling, north riding of Yorkshire; 2 miles south-west by south of Barnard castle, on the post-road to Richmond. There is a daily National school here,—a branch of the endowed school at Bowes, the trustees of which allow £10 per annum to relieve the master of that school, and benefit the poor of Boldron. Pop., in 1801, 128; in 1831, 148. Houses 34. Acres 1,340. Other returns with the parish.

BOLE, a parish in the North Clay division of the wapentake of Bassetlaw, union of Gainsborough, county of Nottingham; 2½ miles south-west of Gainsborough, on the western bank of the river Trent. Living, a discharged vicarage, a peculiar, formerly in the dio. of York, now in that of Lincoln; valued at £4 13s. 4d.; gross income £100. Here is a daily school with a small endowment for the education of four children. Pop., in 1801, 160; in 1831, 144. Houses 35. Acres 1,250. A. P. £1,537. Poor rates, in 1837, £50.

BOLEHALL AND GLASCOTE, a township in the parish of Tamworth, Tamworth division of the hund. of Hemlingford, county of Warwick; 1 mile south-east of Tamworth, intersected by the Birmingham and Derby Junction railway. It forms a small part of some of the streets in the borough of Tamworth. There is an infant school here. Pop., in 1801, 213; in 1831, 421. Houses 92. Acreage with the parish. A. P. £2,965. Poor rates, in 1837, £257.

BOLINGBROKE HUNDRED, or SOKE, in the parts of Lindsey, county of Lincoln, consists of two divisions—east and west—and is bounded on the north by the hundred of Hill; on the east by that of Candleshoe; on the south-east by Skirbeck hundred; and on the west and south-west by that of Horncastle. Area 59,980 acres. Houses 2,114. Pop., in 1831, 11,119.

BOLINGBROKE, a market-town and parish in the western division of the soke of Bolingbroke, parts of Lindsey, union of Spilsby, county of Lincoln; $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles west by south of Spilsby, and 127 north of London. Living, a discharged rectory, united with Hareby (since 1739), in the archd. and dio. of Lincoln; valued at £9 19s. 4d.; gross income £397. Patron, in 1835, C. Bosanquet, Esq. The church suffered much in the civil war in the reign of Charles I. There are two daily schools here, one of which is endowed with lands for the instruction of poor children of the parish of Bolingbroke and Hareby. The market is on Tuesday, and a fair is held on St. Peter's day. There is an earthenware manufactory in this parish. William de Romara, earl of Lincoln, built a castle here, in which Henry IV. was born, from which circumstance the title, Henry of Bolingbroke, was given that monarch. The south-west tower alone remains. The St. John family take the title of Viscount from this village. Pop., in 1801, 283; in 1831, 725. Houses 160. Acres 2,570. A. P. £2,950. Poor rates, in 1837, £366.

BOLLEN-FEE, a township in the parish of Wilmalov, hund. of Macclesfield, co.-palatine of Chester; 6 miles south-west of Stockport, on the line of the Chester extension railway. Besides two daily schools, there are a day and Sunday National school, attended by 80 of each sex daily, and 245 children on Sundays, with a lending library attached, and a Sunday school, in this township. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the silk and cotton manufacture. Pop., in 1801, 1,506; in 1831, 1,784. Houses 339. Acres 2,360. A. P. £4,341. Poor rates, in 1837, £411.

BOLLINGTON, a township, partly in the parish of Bowden, partly in that of Rosthern, hund. of Bucklow, co.-palatine of Chester; $5\frac{1}{2}$ miles north by west of Nether-Knutford, intersected by the Duke of Bridgewater's canal. There are two daily schools here. Pop., in 1801, 202; in 1831, 268. Houses 50. Acres 400. A. P. £1,097.

BOLLINGTON, a township in the parish of Prestbury, hund. of Macclesfield, co.-palatine of Chester; 3 miles north by east of Macclesfield, in the immediate vicinity of the Macclesfield canal. There is a new church here, built by the parliamentary commissioners, in the Gothic style, with a tower, at an expense of £4,002 2s. 3d. The Wesleyan Methodists have a meeting-house here, founded in 1807. There is also a Roman Catholic place of worship. This township possesses four daily schools, containing 159 pupils, and a Sunday school. Pop., in 1801, 1,231; in 1831, 2,685. Houses 495. Acres 1,000. A. P. £3,067. Poor rates, in 1837, £82.

BOLNEY. See HARPSDEN WITH BOLNEY.

BOLNEY, a parish in the hund. of Buttinghill, rape of Lewes, union of Cuckfield, county of Sussex; $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles south-west of Cuckfield, and 4 west of the London and Brighton railroad. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Lewes and dio. of Chichester; valued at £5 12s. 2½d.; gross income £183; in the patronage of the prebendary of Hove, in the cathedral church of Chichester. There is a daily school here. Pop., in 1801, 497; in 1831, 625. Houses 97. Acres 3,550. A. P. £2,066. Poor rates, in 1837, £404.

BOLNHURST, a parish in the hund. of Stodden, union and county of Bedford; $6\frac{1}{2}$ miles north by east of Bedford. Living, a rectory, formerly in the archd. of Bedford and dio. of Lincoln, now in the dio. of Ely; valued at £9; gross income £173. Patron, in 1835, the Rev. H. W. Gery. The great and small tithes, the property of the clerical rector and lay-impropriator, were commuted in 1778. There is a day and Sunday school in this parish, supported by endowments. Pop., in 1801, 225; in 1831, 300. Houses 50. Acres 2,130. A. P. £1,968. Poor rates, in 1837, £238.

BOLSOVER, a parish and once a market-town, in the hund. of Scarsdale, county of Derby; $5\frac{1}{2}$ miles east of Chesterfield, and 145 north by west of London. The parish contains part of the township of Glapwell. The town occupies the summit of a steep hill, from which the view is varied and extensive. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Derby and dio. of Lichfield and Coventry; valued at £5 19s. 4d.; and in the parliamentary returns at £117; gross income £111. Patron, in 1835, the Duke of Portland. The church is an ancient structure, containing a fine sepulchral chapel belonging to the family of Cavendish. The great and small tithes, the property of the lay-impropriator and vicar, were commuted in 1778. Here are places of worship for Independents and Wesleyan Methodists. This parish possesses five daily schools, to one of which the Duke of Portland gives £3 per annum for teaching 5 poor boys. Bolsover was celebrated at one period for the making of steel-buckles; but this branch of trade has long since declined. The test of their excellent temper still traditionally reported in the neighbourhood—was, that though the wheel of a loaded cart should pass over a Bolsover buckle, the latter, in consequence of its elasticity, would not suffer any permanent alteration of shape. The manufacture of tobacco pipes is carried on to some extent here, and a kind of clay suitable for that purpose is found in the neighbourhood. The fire-bricks of this place are also held in high repute. The market day is Friday, and a fair chiefly for pedlery is held on June 24th. On the site of the former castle—the ancient seat of the Peverils, and for which this place was formerly noted—Sir Charles Cavendish erected a fortress in 1619, part of which is still habitable. In this mansion, in 1633, a magnificent entertainment was given by William, duke of Newcastle, to Charles I. and his queen. The decorations and speeches were devised by Ben Jonson, and the expenses amounted to nearly £15,000. Charities connected with this parish, including the legacy of Isabella Smithson, with which £3,308 4s. 3d. consols was purchased, amount to £104 per annum. Pop., in 1811, 1,091; in 1831, 1,429. Houses 313. Acres 6,060. A. P. £5,280. Poor rates, in 1837, £535.—A very fine building-stone is found in this neighbourhood. The professional gentlemen employed in selecting a proper material to be employed in the new houses of parliament, have reported, that "having weighed to the best of their judgment the evidence in favour of the various building-stones which has been brought under their consideration, and freely admitting that many sandstones as well as limestones possess very great advantages as building materials, they feel bound to state, that for durability; for crystalline character, combined with a close approach to the equivalent proportions of carbonate of lime and carbonate of magnesia; for uniformity of structure, facility and economy in conversion; and for advantage of colour, the magnesian limestone, or dolomite of Bolsover moor and its neighbourhood is, in their opinion, the most fit and proper material to be employed in the proposed new houses of parliament."

BOLTBY, a chapelry in the parish of Felix-Kirk, wapentake of Birdforth, north riding of Yorkshire; 5 miles north-east of Thirsk. Living, a curacy united with the vicarage of Felix-Kirk. There are two daily schools here; £5 is annually paid by the devisees of the late Edward Manners, Esq., for teaching 5 children; £8 by the Rev. C. Johnstone for 5, and £2 by the Rev. E. Serjeantson for 2 others. Weaving is almost discontinued in this chapelry, to which cause the decrease of population—61 persons—is attributed. Pop., in 1821, 403; in 1831, 342.

Houses 65. Acres 3,140. A. P. £3,012. Poor rates, in 1837, £187.

BOLTON, a parish in the ward of Allerdale below Darwent, union of Wigton, county of Cumberland, consisting of the townships of Bolton High-side, and Bolton Low-side; 6 miles south-south-west of Wigton, in the neighbourhood of the Carlisle railroad. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Carlisle, valued at £19 18s. 4d.; gross income £533. Patron, in 1835, the Earl of Lonsdale. There are four daily and two Sunday schools in this parish. Coal and limestone are found here in great abundance, and a copper mine has lately been opened. A battle-axe of copper was found in the moss of Bolton-wood. Pop., in 1801, 695; in 1831, 1,245. Houses 225. Acres 8,760. A. P. £7,157. Poor rates, in 1837, £416.

BOLTON, a township in the parish of Edlingham, northern division of the ward of Coquetdale, county of Northumberland; $5\frac{1}{2}$ miles west of Alnwick. Living, a curacy, not in charge, annexed to the vicarage of Edlingham. The Earl of Surrey held a congress here consisting of noblemen and gentlemen, with their retinues, to the number of 24,000 men, on the 5th of September 1513, before the battle of Flodden-field. "Here was a collegiate church, or rather an hospital, founded by Robert Roos of Hamlake before the year 1225, for a master or prior, three chaplains, thirteen leprous men and lay brethren. The abbot of Ryevall and the prior of Kirkham were by the founder appointed governors of this house, which was dedicated to St. Thomas the Martyr, or rather to the Holy Trinity." Tanner's Not. Mon. Some remains of antiquity have been found in the vicinity. Pop., in 1801, 115; in 1831, 117. Houses 20. Acreage with the parish. Poor rates, in 1837, £131.

BOLTON, a township in the parish of Bishop-Wilton, Wilton beacon division, wapentake of Hart-hill, east riding of Yorkshire; 3 miles north-west of Pocklington. Living, a curacy, annexed to the vicarage of Pocklington. Pop., in 1801, 92; in 1831, 103. Houses 21. Acres 960. A. P. £1,042. Poor rates, in 1837, £78.

BOLTON, a township in the parish of Calverley, wapentake of Morley, west riding of Yorkshire; $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles north by east, in the vicinity of the Bradford canal. This township possesses a daily school, in which 60 children are instructed, and three Sunday schools. Pop., in 1801, 474; in 1831, 671. Houses 144. Acres 510. A. P. £1,344. Poor rates, in 1837, £169.

BOLTON-ABBEY, or EAST BOLTON, a chapelry in the parish of Skipton, eastern division of the wapentake of Staincliffe and Ewcross, west riding of Yorkshire; $5\frac{1}{2}$ miles north-east of Skipton. Living, a perpetual curacy, formerly in the archd. and dio. of York, now in the dio. of Ripon; valued at £32 10s.; gross income £111. Patron, in 1835, the Duke of Devonshire. The chapel is part of the conventual church of the ancient priory. The vicinity is a beautiful and romantic country, especially in the neighbourhood of the river Wharfe. "The remains of the priory," says Mr. Baines, "being surrounded by bold and majestic high grounds, are scarcely seen until the traveller arrives on the spot. Bolton priory stands upon a beautiful curvature of the Wharfe, on a level sufficiently elevated to protect it from inundations, and low enough for every purpose of picturesque effect. In the latter respect it has no equal among the northern houses, perhaps not in the kingdom. Opposite to the east-window of the priory church the river washes the rock nearly perpendicular. To the south all is soft and delicious, but the glories of Bolton are on the north. Whatever the most fastidious taste could require to constitute a perfect landscape, is not only found here, but found in its proper place. In front, and immediately under the eye, is a smooth expanse of park-like enclosure, spotted with native elm, ash, &c., of the finest growth; on the right, a skirting oak wood, with jutting points of grey rock; on the left, a rising copse. Still forward are seen the aged groves of Bolton-park, the growth of centuries; and farther yet, the barren and rocky distances of Simonsseat and Bardenfell, contrasted with the warmth, fertility, and luxuriant foliage of the valley below. About half a mile above Bolton, the valley closes, and either side of the Wharfe is overhung by deep and solemn woods, from which huge perpendicular masses of grey rock jut out at intervals. Here a tributary stream rushes from a waterfall, and bursts through a woody glen to mingle its waters with the Wharfe. There the river itself is nearly lost in a deep cleft of the rock, and next becomes an horned flood inclosing a woody island; sometimes it reposes for a moment, and then resumes its native character, lively, irregular, impetuous. The cleft mentioned above is the tremendous Strid. This chasm, being incapable of receiving the winter floods, has formed on either side a broad strand of native grit-stone, full of rock-basons, or 'pots of the lin,' which bear witness to the restless impetuosity of so many northern torrents. But if the Wharfe is here lost to the eye, it repays another sense by its deep and solemn roar, like the voice of 'the angry spirit of the waters,' heard far above and beneath, amidst the silence of the surrounding woods. The terminating objects of the landscape are the remains of Barden tower, interesting from their form and situation, but still more so from the recollections which they excite. The principal remains of Bolton priory now standing, were parts of the church. The nave is still used as a parochial chapel. Over the west door are two escutcheons; that on the north displays the Cliffords' arms, the other on the south side a cross formée. Besides the west end, parts of the nave and choir are yet standing, though much mutilated. According to Dr. Whitaker—from whom we quote—the priory was founded by William Maschines and Cecilia his wife, at Embsay, in the year 1121, and continued there about thirty-three years, when it is said by tradition to have been transferred to Bolton, on the following account:—"The founders were now dead, and had left a daughter who adopted her mother's name, Romille, and was married to William Fitz-Duncan, nephew of David, king of Scotland. They had issue a son, commonly called the Boy of Egremond, (one of his grandfather's baronies, where he was probably born,) who surviving an elder brother, became the last hope of the family. In the deep solitude of the woods betwixt Bolton and Barden, four miles up the river, the Wharfe suddenly contracts itself to a rocky channel, little more than four feet wide, and pours through the tremendous fissure with a rapidity proportioned to its confinement. The place was then, as it is yet, called the Strid, from a feat often exercised by persons of more agility than prudence, who stride from brink to brink, regardless of the destruction which awaits a faltering step. Such was the fate of young Romille, who inconsiderately bounding over the chasm with a greyhound in his leash, the animal hung back, and drew his unfortunate master into the torrent. The misfortune is said to have occasioned the translation of the priory from Embsay to Bolton, which was the nearest eligible site to the place where it happened." One of the gates of the priory still remains; and by stopping up its openings, has been converted into a dwelling—the ground-floor being one large room—which has been used as an occasional residence by the duke of Devonshire. This priory was dissolved the 11th of June, 1540; and in 1543, was granted to Henry Clifford, earl of Cumberland, in which family it remained till 1635; when Elizabeth, the daughter and sole heiress of Henry, the last earl of Cumberland, marrying Richard, the first earl of Burlington, carried the demesnes into that family, whose daughter Charlotte, sole heiress, married in 1748, the duke of Devonshire, in whose family the property still remains." Wordsworth's poem of 'the White Doe of Rylstone,' is founded on a local tradition connected with Bolton priory churchyard. The same poet has also made the fate of 'the Boy of Egremont' the subject of a short but beautiful poem. Pop., in 1801, 120; in 1831, 112. Houses 22. A. P. £1,165. Poor rates, in 1837, £89.

BOLTON-BY-BOWLAND, or WEST BOLTON, a parish in the western division of the wapentake of Staincliffe and Ewcross, union of Clitheroe, west riding of Yorkshire; 6 miles north-east of Clitheroe, on the northern bank of the river Ribble. Living, a rectory, formerly in the archd. and dio. of York, now in the dio. of Ripon, valued at £11 13s., and in the parliamentary returns at £123 12s.; in the patronage, in 1835, of the vicar of Pocklington. There are three daily schools here, one of which is partly supported by endowment, and three Sunday schools. Charities connected with the parish, exclusive of school endowment, produce £12 3s. per annum.—At Bolton-hall, an ancient mansion formerly belonging to the Pudsey family, and which, to use the words of Dodsworth, "stands very pleasantly among sweet woods and fruitful hills," are preserved various relics of Henry VI., who received shelter here after the battle of Hexham. Pop., in 1801, 996; in 1831, 1,174. Houses 199. Acres 4,940. A. P. £6,249.

BOLTON-CASTLE, a township in the parish of Wensley, western division of the wapentake of Hang, north riding of Yorkshire, 7 miles north-west by west of Middleham. There is an infant school in this township, the inhabitants of which have the privilege of sending four boys to a free school at the adjoining township of Redmire. Here are the ruins of the castle of Lord Scrope, chancellor of England. Leland has thus described it:—"Bolton village and castle is four miles from Middleham. The castell standithe on a roke syde; and all the substaunce of the lodgyngs in it includyd in 4 principall towens. Yt was an 18 yerres in buildyng, and the expensis of every yere came to 1000 marks. One thing I muche notyd in the haulte of Bolton, how chimeneys were conveyed by tunnells made on the sides of the waulles bytwixt the lightes in the haulte, and by this meanes and no covers, is the smoke of the barthe in the haulte wonder straungly conveyed. Most part of the tymber that was occupied in buildyng of this castell was fett out of the forest of Engleby in Cumberland, and Richard Lord Scrope for conveyance of it had layde by the way dyvers drawghts of oxen to carry it from place to place till it cam to Bolton." A considerable portion of this building still remains, two portions of it being occupied by respectable farmers, who cultivate the lands adjoining. It was here that Mary, Queen of Scots, was lodged on her forced journey towards the south, from whence she was never permitted to return. It is from it, and the surrounding estates, that the present Lord Bolton and his ancestors have derived their titles. Bolton Hall, the family mansion, stands 3 miles farther down the vale of the Ure. Pop., in 1801, 242; in 1831, 269. Houses 52. Acres 5,160. A. P. £2,585. Poor rates, in 1837, £115.

BOLTON-IN-COPELAND. See GOSFORTH.

BOLTON-UPON-DEARNE, a parish in the northern division of the wapentake of Strafforth and Tickhill, union of Doncaster, west riding of Yorkshire; 7 miles north by east of Rotherham, in the immediate vicinity of the York and North Midland railroad, and of the Dearne and Dove canal. Living, a perpetual curacy, in the archd. and dio. of York, rated at £6 15s. 5d.; gross income £88. Patron, in 1835, the executors of W. H. Marsden, Esq. There are three daily schools here, one of which is endowed with £11 12s. per annum, and two Sunday schools. Charities connected with the parish produce £19 3s. 4d. A statute fair is held here on the second Thursday in November, for hiring servants. Pop., in 1801, 547; in 1831, 596. Houses 124. Acres 2,390. A. P. £3,247. Poor rates, in 1837, £266.

BOLTON-LE-MOORS,

Or GREAT BOLTON, an important and thriving parish, and a recently enfranchised borough, in the hund. of Salford, union of Bolton, co.-palatine of Lancaster; 197 miles north-west of London, 11 north-west of Manchester, and 44 south-south-west of Lancaster. The parish forms the north-west part of the hundred; and comprises the chapelrys of Blackrod, Little Bolton, Bradshaw, Darcy-Lever, Rivington, and Turton, the townships of Anglezarke, Great Bolton, Brightmet, Edgeworth, Entwistle, Harwood, Little Lever, Longworth, Quarlon, Sharples, and Tonge with Haugh, and the hamlet of Lostock. Its name is derived from its early situation in the middle of dreary moors, which are now, however, under cultivation; and its importance is dated from 1837, when a number of emigrant Flemings settled here, and introduced various manufactures, especially that of woollen cloth. These small streams, the Crol, the Bradshaw, and the Tonge, unite at Bolton, and join the Irwell in one stream, $1\frac{1}{4}$ mile south-south-east of the town. Among the hills in this parish are Rivington pike, Winter bill, Horrocksmoor, and Edgeworth-moor. Coal and good freestone are found in abundance; and veins of lead ore and calamine have been discovered at Rivington, though they have not hitherto proved productive. The market-days are Saturday and Monday; fairs for horned-cattle, horses, and cheese, are held on July 30th and 31st, and October 13th and 14th. The market-place is a spacious area in Great Bolton. The townships of Great Bolton, Little Bolton, and Haugh, except part of Little Bolton to the north of the town of Bolton, return two members to parliament under the reform bill.

Ecclesiastical affairs, &c.—The parochial living of Bolton is a discharged vicarage, presently in the archd. and dio. of Chester; rated in the King's books at £10 3s.; gross income £484; in the patronage of the bishop of Chester. The parish church is a very ancient and somewhat dilapidated structure. In Bradford-square, in Great Bolton, a new chapel, capable of accommodating 1,906 persons, was erected in 1825, at an expense of £13,412 13s. It is a handsome and spacious structure, in the Gothic style of architecture, ornamented with a tower. Living, a perpetual curacy, of the yearly value of £121, in the patronage of the vicar of Bolton. A second chapel in connexion with the Establishment has been recently erected in Cannon-street. In Little Bolton there are two chapels, the one erected by subscription in 1796, a perpetual curacy, of the yearly value of £168, and in the patronage of trustees appointed by the proprietors; the other a perpetual curacy, of the yearly value of £128, and, in 1835, in the patronage of T. Tipping, Esq. There are 23 places of worship belonging to various classes of dissenters, viz. the Baptists, Methodists, both of the old and new connexion, Independents, Unitarians, Friends, Swedenborgians, and Roman Catholics, in different parts of the parish. One Independent church was formed in 1808, another in 1754. A Baptist church was formed in 1793; a Methodist in 1750; the Methodist church in Bridge-street, Little Bolton, was formed in 1803; a church of the New Connexion Methodists was organized in 1797. The Swedenborgian church originated in 1803; and there is a congregation in connexion with the church of Scotland in Little Bolton. The free grammar-school was founded in 1641, and endowed with estates, now producing £396 3s. 3d. per annum, by Robert Lever of London. To this the revenue of another school was added, and the whole now amounts to £485 per annum, of which £160 is paid to the head-master, £100 to the second master, and £75 to the writing-master. The governors were made a corporate body in 1784.—Here is also a charity school containing 90 pupils, with an income of £227 per annum, founded and endowed in 1693 by Nathaniel Hulton. The master receives a salary of £45, and the mistress, £25; the management is vested in trustees.—A school for poor children was founded in 1714 by Thomas Marsden, Esq.—This parish possesses schools conducted on the system of the British and Foreign school society, and also of the National society. The number of daily schools was 84, in 1835. Local charities are numerous, and exclusive of school-endowments, produce about £265 per annum. There are numerous Sunday schools in connexion with the various congregations, in which religious instruction is communicated to upwards of 11,000 children. A dispensary was instituted in the town in 1816.

Manufactures.—The parish of Bolton owes its prosperity to its manufactures. The most important of these is the cotton-manufacture,—a branch of trade to which the invention of the mule-jenny by Samuel Crompton—who long resided in the immediate neighbourhood of Bolton at a house called ‘Hall-in-the-Wood’—gave an astonishing impulse. This machine combines the powers of the spinning-jenny and the water-frame. The ingenious mechanic was rewarded by two donations of £105, and £400 raised by private subscription, and subsequently, in 1812, by a parliamentary grant of £5,000. The spinning factories here were long on a small scale, in consequence of the scarcity of water; but since the introduction of the steam-engine as a motive power, and improved machinery, they have become very extensive and lucrative. In 1838 there were 69 cotton-mills, employing 9,918 hands, and 1 flax-mill in which 261 persons were engaged, within this parish. Here are also very large bleaching-grounds, some paper-mills and chemical works, and numerous iron foundries and machine-factories. There are branches here of the Northern and Central bank, and the Manchester bank. The Bolton bank was established in 1836.—Pop. of the parish, in 1801, 29,826; in 1811, 39,701; in 1821, 50,197; and in 1831, 63,034. Houses 10,866. Acres 31,390. The assessment, in 1814, was £169,673; in 1829, £320,467. Poor rates, in 1837, £9,071.

Borough.—The borough of Bolton consists of the townships of Great and Little Bolton, which are separated by the Crol; 17 miles south-south-east of Preston. Information respecting ecclesiastical affairs and schools is given under the parish.—In the reign of Henry VIII. Leland gives the following description of Bolton:—“Bolton-upon-Moore market standeth most by cottons and coarse yarne. Divers villages in the moores about Bolton do make cottons.” Blome, who wrote about a century after, says, “Bolton hath a market on Mondays, which is very good for clothing and provisions, and it is a place of great trade for fustians.” The town has extended very much of late years, and a considerable portion of the neighbouring moor has been enclosed under an act passed in 1792. It received a charter in 1838; and is now governed by a mayor, 36 common councillors, and 12 aldermen. In consequence of serious riots which took place here in 1839, a special police bill for the borough of Bolton, and part of Little Bolton, was carried through parliament. There are several good libraries and news-rooms, and a theatre and assembly-rooms. The exchange buildings is a neat stone edifice, erected in 1825, in which year a mechanics’ institution was also founded. In Little Bolton a town-hall has lately been erected, and it is intended to erect one in Great Bolton. The Bolton and Leigh railroad joins this borough to the Liverpool and Manchester line, crossing in its progress the Wigan and Leigh canal; while the Bolton railway, which commences in New Bailey-street, Salford, and runs almost parallel with the Bury and Bolton canal, establishes a direct line of communication with Manchester. This railway was opened on the 29th May, 1838, and is carried over the town of Salford by a series of superb arches, which, when viewed from any of the streets they span, have a striking and singular appearance. From the report of the directors, of 9th January, 1839, we learn that 228,799 passengers had been conveyed over the line since the period of its opening. Pop. of Great Bolton, in 1801, 12,549; in 1831, 28,290. Houses 4,813. Acres 820. A. P. £27,887; in 1829, £63,865. Poor rates, in 1837, £3,854.—Pop. of Little Bolton, in 1801, 4,867; in 1831, 12,896. Houses 2,311. Acres 1,450. A. P. £11,747; in 1829, £23,680. Poor rates, in 1837, £1,027. The parochial affairs of the two townships of Great and Little Bolton are managed by separate bodies.

History.—The manor of Bolton is of considerable antiquity. Roger de Maresay sold it, with his other lands between the Ribble and Mersey, to Ranulf de Blunderville, earl of Chester, for 240 silver marks, and a pair of white gloves, to be presented annually at Easter. In the 4th Edward III., this manor was inherited by the Ferrers, from whom it passed to the Pilkingtons. Sir Thomas Pilkington, adhering to the cause of Richard III., was attainted and beheaded in the 1st Henry VII., and his estates given to Thomas, Lord Stanley, then created earl of Derby. By the munificence of Henry VII. the Stanley family became possessed of the principal part of the town of Bolton; but a considerable portion was confiscated during the commonwealth. At the commencement of the civil war in the reign of Charles I., the inhabitants declared themselves in favour of the parliament, in whose interest the town was garrisoned. In 1644, Prince Rupert and the earl of Derby invested Bolton, and made an attempt to take it by storm, but were repulsed; the earl, however, returned with a reinforcement, and got possession of the place. It was subsequently given up, and after the battle of Worcester, the earl of Derby was beheaded here on the 15th of October, 1651, in pursuance of the sentence of a military tribunal at Chester.

BOLTON-PERCY, a parish in the ainstey of the city, and east riding of Yorkshire; 4 miles east by south of Tadcaster, intersected by the York and North Midland railway, by which it is 7 miles 40 chains from York. It includes the townships of Appleton-Roebeck, Bolton-Percy, Colton, and Steeton. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of York; valued at £39 15s. 2½d.; and in the parliamentary returns at £150; gross income £1,705; nett income £1,540; in the patronage of the archbishop of York. The church, which is an ancient and noble building, the windows of which are adorned with some fine stained glass, was built by the rector, Thomas Parker, in 1423. It contains several monuments to the family of Fairfax. All tithes, the property of the clerical rector, were commuted in 1797. There are two daily schools here, and a day and Sunday National school. Charities connected with the parish produce £30 16s. per annum. Pop., in 1801, 827; in 1831, 993. Houses 201. Acres 7,320. A. P. £9,867: that of the township, in 1801, 189; in 1831, 220. Houses 35. Acres 2,170. A. P. £3,346. Poor rates, in 1837, £610.

BOLTON-LE-SANDS, a parish in the hund. of Lonsdale, south of the sands, co.-palatine of Lancaster; 4 miles north of Lancaster, on the post-road to Kirkby Kendal, and intersected by the Lancaster and Kendal canal. It comprises the chapelry of Over-Kellet, and the townships of Bolton-le-Sands, Nether-Kellet, and Styne with Hest. Living, a discharged vicarage, formerly in the archd. of Richmond and dio. of Chester, now in the dio. of Manchester; valued at £4 15s., and in the parliamentary returns at £130; gross income £191; in the patronage of the bishop of Manchester. The church was recently rebuilt. There are seven daily schools in this parish, two of which are endowed, and four Sunday schools. Charities connected with Bolton-le-Sands produce £125 per annum. Pop., in 1801, 1,609; in 1831, 1,781. Houses 345. Acres 7,630. A. P. £7,630. Poor rates, in 1837, £1,249. Pop. of the township, in 1801, 639; in 1831, 695. Houses 131. Acres 1,370. A. P. £4,009. Poor rates, in 1837, £384.

BOLTON-IN-THE-SANDS, a chapelry in the parish of Morland, West ward, county of Westmoreland; 3½ miles north-west of Appleby, on the western bank of the river Eden, over which a chain-bridge has been constructed here. Living, a perpetual curacy, in the archd. and dio. of Carlisle; valued at £19 18s. 4d.; gross income £63; in the patronage of the vicar of Morland. The chapel has been recently rebuilt. All tithes of Bolton manor, the property of the dean and chapter of Carlisle, vicar and perpetual curate, were commuted in 1808. The Methodists have a place of worship here. There are three daily schools in this chapelry, one of which is endowed with £13 per annum, for the instruction of 13 children. In the vicinity is Beeley castle, anciently one of the residences of the bishops of Carlisle, now occupied as a farm-house. Pop., in 1801, 324; in 1831, 391. Houses 63. Acreage with the parish. A. P. £3,019. Poor rates, in 1837, £197.

BOLTON-UPON-SWALE, a chapelry in the parish of Catterick, eastern division of the wapentake of Gilling, north riding of Yorkshire; 6 miles east by south of Richmond, and 5 west of the Great North of England railroad. Living, a perpetual curacy, formerly in the archd. of Richmond and dio. of Chester, now in the dio. of Ripon; valued at £17 5s.; gross income £118; in the patronage of the vicar of Catterick. There is a daily school here, containing 55 pupils, 18 of whom are paid for by the earl and countess of Tyrconnel. Charities connected with this chapelry produce about £17 per annum. Henry Jenkins, who lived to the amazing age of 169 years, was a native of this place. He died on the 6th of December, 1670, at Ellerton-upon-Swale, and was buried in the churchyard here. In the church, a handsome monument, recording the fact, was erected in 1743. A fair is held here on June 28th for cattle and pedlery. Pop., in 1801, 93; in 1831, 85. Houses 20. Acres 500. A. P. £1,214. Poor rates, in 1837, £64.

BONBY, a parish in the northern division of the wapentake of Yarborough, parts of Lindsey, county of Lincoln; 6 miles north of Glandford bridge. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Lincoln; valued at £6 4s. 4d.; gross income £268. Patron, in 1835, Lord Yarborough. There are two daily schools in this parish. "The churches of Bondeby, Saxelby, and Stanford All Saints being granted to the priory of St. Fromund in Normandy by the priory and convent of Merton in exchange for other revenues, in the beginning of King John's reign, there was shortly afterwards an alien priory erected at Bondeby, which was granted 4^o Henry IV. to the Chartreux house at Beaulieu in Nottinghamshire."—Tanner's Not. Mon. Pop., in 1801, 178; in 1831, 339. Houses 70. Acres 2,900. A. P. £2,535. Poor rates, in 1837, £123.

BONCHURCH, a parish in the south eastern division of the liberty of East Medina, Isle of Wight, county of Southampton; 9 miles south-east of Newport, on the coast. Living, a discharged rectory, with the curacy of Shanklin, in the archd. and dio. of Winchester; valued at £6 15s. 5d., and in the parliamentary returns at £140; gross income £144. Patrons, in 1835, — White, and — Hill. The church is a small antique erection, imbosomed in trees. The coast is here very rugged and precipitous, rising to the height of from 90 to 120 feet. This was the birth-place of Admiral Hobson. Pop., in 1801, 174; in 1831, 146. Houses 24. Acres 150. A. P. £464. Poor rates, in 1837, £43.

BONDGATE. See AIMSUNDERBY.

BONDS. See BARNACE WITH BONDS.

BONEHILL AND BANGLEY, a township in the parish of Tamworth, southern division of the hund. of Offlow, county of Stafford; 1½ mile south-west by west of Tamworth, in the vicinity of the Coventry canal. Pop., in 1801, 210; in 1831, 283. Houses 59. Acres, including Fazely, 2,150.

BONGATE. See APPLEBY.

BONINGALE. See STOCKTON.

BONNINGTON, a parish, partly within the liberty of Romney marsh, and partly in the hund. of Street, lathe of Shepway, union of East Ashford, county of Kent; 6½ miles south-east by south of Ashford, intersected by the Royal Military canal. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Canterbury; valued at £10 12s. 3½d.; gross income £180. Patron, in 1835, T. Papillon. Pop., in 1801, 126; in 1831, 127. Houses 23. Acres 1,310. A. P. £1,747. Poor rates, in 1837, £86.

BONNINGTON-SUTTON. See SUTTON-BONNINGTON.

BONTESHALL, or BONSALL, a parish in the hund. of Wirksworth, county of Derby; 2 miles south-west of Matlock, on the western bank of the river Derwent, and in the vicinity of the Cromford canal. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Derby and dio. of Lichfield and Coventry; valued at £9 16s. 0½d.; gross income £204; in the patronage of the dean of Lincoln. The church is a handsome edifice with a tower and spire. Here is a place of worship belonging to the Baptists. In the vicinity mines of lead and zinc are wrought. Here also are Caek-mills for grinding and converting cauk into an article little inferior to white lead, and cupolas for smelting lead-ore. Here is a school, with an income of £100 per annum, founded and endowed, in 1704, by William Cragge and his wife, with an additional gift of land, in 1763, by Elizabeth Turner. The master receives £46 per annum; the remainder of the income is appropriated to the apprenticing of boys and the purchase of religious books. It contains 100 children. There are also two daily and two Sunday schools here. Pop., in 1801, 1,204; in 1831, 1,315. Houses 278. Acres 2,750. A. P. £3,886. Poor rates, in 1837, £386.

BONVILSTON, a parish in the hund. of Dinas-Powis, union of Cardiff, county of Glamorgan, South Wales; 8 miles west by south of Cardiff, on the post-road to Cowbridge. There is a daily school in this parish. Pop., in 1801, 203; in 1831, 247. Houses 50. A. P. £1,232. Poor rates, in 1837, £137.

BONWICK, a township in the parish of Skipssea, northern division of the wapentake of Holderness, east riding of Yorkshire; 11 miles east-south-east of Great Driffield. Pop., in 1801, 31; in 1831, 22. Houses 2. Acres 920. A. P. £948. Poor rates, in 1837, £19.

BOOKHAM (GREAT), a parish in the hund. of Effingham, union of Epsom, county of Surrey; 2½ miles south-west of Leatherhead. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Surrey and dio. of Winchester; valued at £9 17s. 3½d.; gross income £458; nett income £340. Patron, in 1835, Dr. Heberden. There are two daily schools here, and two day and Sunday National schools, for this and the adjoining parishes of Little Bookham and Fetcham. Bishop Turner thinks that there was anciently an hospital, dedicated to St. Anthony, in this parish. A fair is held here on old Michaelmas day for cattle, horses, &c. Pop., in 1801, 587; in 1831, 890. Houses 137. Acres 3,170. A. P. £2,867. Poor rates, in 1837, £421.

BOOKHAM (LITTLE), a parish in the hund. of Effingham, union of Epsom, county of Surrey; 3 miles south-west of Leatherhead. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. of Surrey and dio. of Winchester; valued at £6 15s. 7d.; gross income £186. Patron, in 1835, the Rev. G. P. B. Pollen. There is a daily school here. Here is a fund of £65 per annum, founded by Sir Benjamin Maddox, for the benefit of the clergyman and poor of the parish. Pop., in 1801, 119; in 1831, 191. Houses 27. Acres 950. A. P. £990. Poor rates, in 1837, £61.

BOOLEY, a township in the parish of Stanton-upon-Hine-heath, Whitchurch division of the hund. of North Bradford, county of Salop; about 5 miles south-east of Wem. Pop., in 1821, 134; in 1831, 138. Houses 25. Other returns with the parish.

BOOTHBY-GRAFFO WAPENTAKE, in the parts of Kesteven, county of Lincoln, consists of two divisions—higher and lower—and is bounded on the north by the wapentake of Lawress; on the west by Nottinghamshire; on the south by the wapentake of Loveden; on the south-east by that of Flaxwell; and on the east by the wapentake of Langoe, and the liberty of Lincoln. Area 56,250 acres. Houses 1,458. Pop., in 1831, 7,943.

BOOTHBY, a parish in the union of Lincoln, higher division of the above wapentake; 10½ miles north-west by north of Sleaford. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Lincoln; valued at £11 12s. 3½d.; gross income £659. Patron, in 1835, J. Fullerton, Esq. The great and small tithes, moduses, &c. the property of the clerical rector, were commuted in 1771. Pop., in 1801, 174; in 1831, 173. Houses 34. Acres 2,850. A. P. £2,876. Poor rates, in 1837, £90.

BOOTHY-PAGNELL, a parish in the wapentake of Winnibriggs and Threo, parts of Kesteven, union of Grantham, county of Lincoln; 4½ miles north-north-west of Corby. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Lincoln; valued at £11 10s. 5d.; gross income £403. Patron, in 1835, J. Fardell, Esq. There is a day and Sunday school here. Pop., in 1801, 100; in 1831, 116. Houses 23. Acres 2,560. A. P. £1,598. Poor rates, in 1837, £51.

BOOTHEN. See PENKULL and BOOTHER.

BOOTHES (HIGHER), a township in the parish of Whalley, upper division of the hund. of Blackburn, co.-palatine of Lancaster; 4½ miles south by west of Burnley. There are seven daily, six Sunday, and four infant schools here. This township has increased very considerably by the extension of cotton manufactories. Pop., in 1801, 1,661; in 1831, 4,347. Houses 728. Acres 2,000. A. P. £5,096. Poor rates, in 1837, £522.

BOOTHES (LOWER), a township in the parish of Whalley, upper division of the hund. of Blackburn, co.-palatine of Lancaster; 3½ miles south by west of Burnley. There are three daily and two Sunday schools here. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the cotton manufacture. Pop., in 1801, 934; in 1831, 2,178. Houses 395. Acres 630. Poor rates, in 1837, including Dunnockshaw, £338.

BOOTLE, a parish and market-town in the ward of Allerdale above Derwent, union of Bootle, Cumberland; 278 miles north-west by north of London, and 5 south-south-west of Ravenglass, on the coast of the Irish sea. Living, a rectory, formerly in the archd. of Richmond and dio. of Chester, now in the dio. of Carlisle; valued at £19 17s. 3½d.; gross income £525. Patron, in 1835, the Earl of Lonsdale. The Independents have a place of worship here. There are three daily schools in this parish, one of which is endowed with £16 3s. per annum. The town consists of a single well-built street. In the immediate vicinity are the Corney and Bootle fells, and the lofty mountain called Black-comb, which rises to the height of 1,919 feet. There is some trade, chiefly with Liverpool, in corn, pork, and bacon. Wednesday is the market-day; and fairs are held on April 5th and September 24th, for cloth and corn. Bootle is one of the polling-places for the members for West Cumberland. There are some remains of a Benedictine nunnery at Seton in this parish. It was founded by Gunild, daughter of Henry de Boyvill, fourth lord of Millom. Henry IV. annexed to it the hospital of St. Leonard, in Lancaster, and its revenue, at the dissolution, amounted to £13 17s. 4d. Pop., in 1801, 547; in 1831, 737. Houses 123. Acres 6,570. A. P. £3,965. Poor rates, in 1837, £283.—The Bootle poor-law union comprehends 12 parishes; with a population returned, in 1831, at 5,083.

BOOTLE WITH LINACRE, a township in the parish of Walton-on-the-hill, hund. of West Derby, co.-palatine of Lancaster; 3 miles north of Liverpool, intersected by the Leeds and Liverpool canal. There are five daily schools here. The village is much resorted to in summer, from Liverpool, for sea-bathing. Pop., in 1801, 537; in 1831, 1,133. Houses 183. Acres 1,050. A. P. £4,197. Poor rates, in 1837, £287.

BOOTON, a parish in the southern division of the hund. of Erpingham, union of St. Faith's, county of Norfolk; 5 miles south-west of Aylsham. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. and dio. of Norwich; valued at £7 12s. 6d.; gross income £238. Patron, in 1835, H. Elwin, Esq. There is a day and Sunday school here. Pop., in 1831, 199. Houses 46. Acres 1,030. A. P. £1,150. Poor rates, in 1837, £191.

BORDEAN. See EAST MEON.

BORDEN, a parish in the hund. and union of Milton, lathe of Scray, county of Kent; 1 mile west of Sittingbourn, on the post-road to Chatham. Living, a vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Canterbury; valued at £8 10s.; gross income £282. The church is an ancient structure, presenting some specimens of Saxon architecture. There are two daily schools in this parish. The manor-house of Sutton-Baron, in this parish, was the birth-place of Dr. Robert Plot, the celebrated natural historian of the counties of Oxford and Stafford. In the church, a neat mural monument has been erected to his memory. Pop., in 1801, 528; in 1831, 771. Houses 164. Acres 2,010. A. P. £2,122. Poor rates, in 1837, £293.

BORDESLEY, a chapelry in the parish of Aston, forming part of the town of Birmingham. See ASTON, Warwickshire.

BORDESLEY, a hamlet and chapelry in the parish of Tardebigg, upper division of the hund. of Halfshire, county of Worcester; 3 miles south-east of Broomgrove, in the vicinity of the Birmingham and Gloucester railway. Living, a curacy not in charge. The chapel was part of the ancient abbey. "Maud, the empress, built, A.D. 1138, a Cistercian abbey here to the honour of the blessed Virgin. Its yearly revenues, not long before the suppression, amounted to £392 8s. 6d. The site of this monastery was granted, 34th Henry VIII., to Andrew, Lord Windsor."—Tanner's Net. Mon.

BOREHAM, a parish in the hund. and union of Chelmsford, county of Essex; 3½ miles north-east of Chelmsford, on the line of the railroad from London to Norwich. Living, a vicarage, formerly in the archd. of Essex and dio. of London, now in the dio. of Rochester; valued at £10 3s. 9d.; in the patronage of the bishop of Rochester. The church contains some monuments of the Radcliffs, earls of Sussex. The Independents have a place of worship here. There are four daily schools in this parish, one of which is endowed with rents of lands for the education and clothing of 25 children of the parishes of Boreham and Little Baddow. In this parish is New Hall, a building erected in the reign of Henry VII., and successively occupied by the Princess Mary, Villiers, duke of Buckingham, Cromwell, and the duke of Albemarle. It is now inhabited by a society of English nuns, who were driven from Liege during the French republic, and superintend here the education of about 80 Catholic ladies. Pop., in 1801, 813; in 1831, 991. Houses 101. Acres 3,820. A. P. £5,411. Poor rates, in 1837, £644.

BORESFORD AND PEDWARDINE, a township in the parish of Brampton-Bryan, hund. of Wigmore, county of Hereford; 4 miles east by south of Knighton. Pop., in 1801, 94; in 1831, 109. Houses 18. Acres, including the township of Brampton-Bryan, 3,190.

BORLEY, a parish in the hund. of Hincford, union of Sudbury, county of Essex; 2½ miles north-west of Sudbury. Living, a rectory, formerly in the archd. of Essex and dio. of London, now in the dio. of Rochester; valued at £9; gross income £249. Patron, in 1835, the Earl of Waldegrave. There is a daily school here. In the church are some splendid monuments of the Waldegrave family. Pop., in 1801, 196; in 1831, 195. Houses 41. Acres 730. A. P. £1,335. Poor rates, in 1837, £65.

BORLEY. See OMBERSLEY.

BORNE (THE), a small river in Warwick, flowing into the Tame, near Tamworth.

BOROUGH, a hamlet in the parish of Llanelly, hund. of Carnwallan, county of Caermarthen, South Wales; 14 miles south-east of Caermarthen, on the northern bank of the river Burry. The inhabitants are chiefly miners and sailors. Excellent coal is found here. Pop., in 1821, 2,621; in 1831, 4,173. Houses 736.

BOROUGHBRIDGE, a market-town and chapelry in the parish of Aldborough, lower division of the wapentake of Claro, west riding of Yorkshire; 206 miles north-north-west of London, and 17 north-west of York, on the great northern road. The town stands on the southern bank of the river Ure, which is here navigable, and over which a stone-bridge has been thrown. Living, a perpetual curacy, formerly in the archd. of Richmond and dio. of Chester, now in the dio. of Ripon; valued at £10; gross income £95; in the patronage of the vicar of Aldborough. The church is a small building, with a tower at the west end. The Methodists have a place of worship here; there are also Independent and Baptist chapels. The Baptist church was formed in 1836. This chapelry possesses three daily and two Sunday schools. This was formerly a borough. The elective franchise was conferred in the reign of Mary, and two members were returned to parliament. The right of election, previous to its disfranchisement by the Reform bill, was held only by about 74 individuals, burgage tenants, who were wholly under the influence of the duke of Newcastle. It derives its name from a bridge over the river Ure, erected soon after the Conquest. In 1322 a battle was fought in the vicinity, between the forces of Edward II. and those of the earl of Lancaster. There is some trade in hardware here, but the place derives its support chiefly from travellers on the great northern road. Saturday is market-day, and fairs are held on April 27th and 28th for horned cattle and sheep; June 22^d and 23^d for the same, with horses and hardware, and October 23^d for cattle. Here are branches of the Manchester and Liverpool District bank, the Knareborough and Claro banking company, and the Yorkshire Agricultural and Commercial banking company. In the market-place, which stands near the centre of the town, is a very elevated cross, formed of eight columns united with a foliated capital. Races are held annually in the vicinity. About half a mile to the south of the town are three rude monumental pillars, called the Devil's Arrows, approaching somewhat to the form of obelisks, and measuring, respectively, 18, 22, and 31 feet in height. They are composed of the common coarse rag-stone, and those parts which are below the surface of the ground exhibit indubitable marks of the chisel. "Here was, in the British times," observes Dr. Stukeley, "the great Panegyre of the Druids, the midsummer meeting of all the country round, to celebrate the great quarterly sacrifice; accompanied with games, sports, races, and all kinds of exercises, with universal festivity. This was like the Panathenæan, the Olympian, Nemean meetings and games among the Grecians. These obelisks were as the metæ of the races; the remembrance hereof is transmitted in the great fair held here on St. Barnabas'-day. By Dr. Stillingfleet they are regarded as ancient British deities, while Camden, Leland, and Drake, suppose them to have been the work of the Romans. Many relics of the latter people have been found in the vicinity of Boroughbridge, Aldborough having been a Roman station. Pop., in 1801, 680; in 1831, 950. Houses 155. Acres 220. A. P. £894. Poor rates, in 1837, £374.

BOROUGHBRIDGE, a chapelry in the parishes of Ling, Othery, Middlezoy, and West Zoyland, hund. of Andersfield and Whithy, county of Somerset; 5 miles north-west of Langport, on the eastern bank of the river Parret, which is here navigable, and in the neighbourhood of the Bristol and Exeter railway. The chapel is an ancient cruciform building, now in ruins, but a church for the accommodation of 360 persons has recently been built. The Baptists have also a place of worship here; the church was formed in 1837. Returns with Ling and the other parishes. "Close to the hamlet of Boroughbridge," says Warner, "and near the conflux of the rivers Parret and Thone, a large mound or barrow to the left hand, which gives name to the neighbouring village, attracted our attention. From the regularity of its form, we immediately judged it to be at least partly artificial; and this idea of its origin was strongly confirmed, when we learnt that the materials of which it is composed, are not found within three miles of the spot which the barrow occupies. Its summit is crowned by an ancient chapel dedicated to St. Michael, who by the bye seems to have been complimented with these elevated situations, probably from his being the head or chief of the angelical hierarchies. Having fallen into ruins, it has of late years been repaired and modernized. From the loftiness of this mound, swelling boldly out of a wide level, and towering far above the adjoining country, it appeared to be peculiarly adapted to the use to which it was originally dedicated; for as the district around exhibited only a woody marsh, without roads cut through it to any particular spot, it was indispensable to place the house of worship in a conspicuous situation, that the inhabitants might the more easily find their way to this place of public meeting. The barrow, however, does not appear to have been always the pacific scene of prayer and thanksgiving. During the disturbances of the seventeenth century, it served far different purposes; and echoed the tumults of warfare, the shouts of triumph, and the cry of defeat. Goring having seized its summit, garrisoned it with 120 men, and made a gallant and successful resistance against the parliamentary forces. Nor was it taken from the royalists, till after the battle of Langport; when all hope of relief being extinguished, and a formidable body of forces being prepared to attack it, the governor was compelled to surrender the place he had so long and so nobly defended."

BOROUGH-FEN (VILLE), an extra-parochial district in the liberty of Peterborough, county of Northampton; 5 miles north-north-east of Peterborough. Pop., in 1801, 116; in 1831, 200. Houses 28. Acres 3,130. A. P. £4,196.

BOROUGH-GREEN. See BURROUGH-GREEN.

BOROUGH-GREEN, a hamlet in the parish and hund. of Wrotham, lathe of Aylesford, county of Kent, 6½ miles west of Maidstone. The Baptists have a chapel here; the church was formed in 1808. Returns with the parish.

BORRAS-BOVAGH, a township in the parish of Wrexham, hund. of Bromfield, county of Denbigh, North Wales; 2½ miles west by south of Holt. Pop., in 1801, 42; in 1831, 45. Houses 6. Poor rates, in 1837, £43.

BORRAS-RIFFREY, a township in the parish of Gresford, hund. of Bromfield, county of Denbigh, North Wales; about 3 miles north-north-east of Wrexham. Pop., in 1811, 17; in 1831, 41. Houses 4.

BORROWBY, a township in the parish of Leak, wapentake of Allertonshire, north riding of Yorkshire; 5 miles north of Thirsk. There are two daily schools here, one of which is endowed with £5 10s. per annum. Pop., in 1801, 251; in 1831, 350. Houses 85. Acres 1,280. A. P. £1,405. Poor rates, in 1837, £98.

BORROWBY, a township in the parish of Lythe, eastern division of the liberty of Langbaugh, north riding of Yorkshire; 10 miles north-west of Whitby. Pop., in 1801, 81; in 1831, 68. Houses 15. Acres 650. A. P. £804. Poor rates, in 1837, £16.

BORROWDALE, a chapelry in the parish of Crosthwaite, ward of Allerdale above Derwent, county of Cumberland; 7 miles south by west of Keswick. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. and dio. of Carlisle, not in charge, of the yearly value of £62; in the patronage of the vicar of Crosthwaite. There are two daily schools here.

At Grange and Crosthwaite, some dissenters have a meeting-house. This chapelry is celebrated for the production of the finest plumbago in the world. The mineral is found in nodules imbedded in grey felspar porphyry, and is all sent to London for sale; even the pencil-makers of Keswick must obtain the plumbago from London. Once a year the mine at Borrowdale is opened, and a sufficient quantity of plumbago is extracted, to supply the market during the ensuing year. It is then closed up, and the product is carried in small fragments of about three and four inches long, to London, where it is exposed to sale, at the black-lead market, which is held on the first Monday of every month, at a public-house in Essex-street, Strand. The buyers, who amount to about seven or eight, examine every piece with a sharp instrument to ascertain its hardness—those which are too soft being rejected. The individual who has the first choice pays 45s. per pound; the other 30s. But as there is no addition made to the first quantity in the market, during the course of the year, the residual portions are examined over and over again, until they are exhausted. The annual amount of sale is about £3,000. There are three kinds of pencils, common, ever-pointed, and plumbago. The latter are composed of one-third sulphuret of antimony and two-thirds plumbago. The 1st part of the process is sawing out the cedar into long planks, and then into what are technically called tops and bottoms. The 2d, sawing out the grooves by means of a fly-wheel. The 3d, scraping the lead on a stone; having been previously made into thin slices, to suit the groove; introducing it into the groove, and scratching the side with a sharp-pointed instrument, so as to break it off exactly above the groove. The 4th, gluing the tops and bottoms together, and turning the cedar cases in a gauge. The ever pointed pencils are first cut into thin slabs, then into square pieces, by means of a steel gauge. They are then passed through three small holes, armed with rubies, which last about three or four days. Steel does not last above as many hours. Six of these ever-pointed pencils may be had for 2s. 6d. If they are cheaper than this, we may be sure that they are adulterated. In Paris, when you buy a sheet of paper in a stationer's shop, some of these pencils are added to the purchase. Now these are formed of a mixture of plumbago, fuller's earth, and vermicelli. Genuine cedar pencils must cost 6d. each. If they are sold at a lower price, they must be formed from a mixture, not from pure plumbago. Pencils are, however, sold as low as 4½d. a dozen. The vicinity is remarkably picturesque and is much visited by tourists. Here are the remains of an ancient fort. At the lower extremity of the dale is a mineral spring, somewhat similar to that of Cheltenham. A fair for sheep is held in September. Pop., in 1801, 342; in 1831, 356. Houses 64. Acreage with the parish. A. P. £5,043. Poor rates, in 1837, £113.

BORROWDEN, or BURRADON, a township in the parish of Allenton, western division of Coquetdale ward, county of Northumberland; 19 miles west by south of Alnwick. There is a daily school here. Pop., in 1801, 109; in 1831, 174. Houses 38. Acreage with the parish. Poor rates, in 1837, £79.

BORSTALL, or BOARSTALL, sometimes written BURGHSTALL, a parish in the hund. of Ashendon, union of Bicester, county of Buckingham; 6 miles south-south-east of Bicester. Living, a perpetual curacy, formerly in the archd. of Buckingham and dio. of Lincoln, now in the dio. of Oxford, united with that of Brill. The chapel was rebuilt, in 1818, on the original foundation, by Sir John Aubrey, the improprator. It contains several monuments to the Aubrey family. Charities connected with this parish produce £20 per annum. Tradition says that Bernwode forest was, in the reign of Edward the Confessor, infested by a wild boar, which was at last slain by a huntsman named Nigel, to whom the king granted some lands as a reward to be held by cornage, or the service of a horn. On the lands thus given, Nigel erected a manor-house, and named it Borestall, or Boar stall, in memory of the event through which he obtained the possession. This building was fortified in 1312. At an early period of the civil war Borestall house was garrisoned under Sir William Campion, for King Charles; in 1646 it was reduced by General Fairfax. There is an ancient decoy pond for wild ducks within this lordship. Pop., in 1801, 179; in 1831, 268. Houses 49. Acres 3,080. A. P. £3,530. Poor rates, in 1837, £242.

BORWICK, a chapelry in the parish of Warton, hund. of Lonsdale, south of the Sands, co.-palatine of Lancaster; $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles south of Barton-in-Kendal, intersected by the Lancaster and Kendal canal. Pop., in 1801, 206; in 1831, 270. Houses 43. Acres 820. A. P. £1,085. Poor rates, in 1837, £228.

BOSBURY WITH UPLEADER, a parish in the hund. of Radlow, union of Ledbury, county of Hereford; 4 miles north by west of Ledbury. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Hereford, valued at £10 3s. 8d.; gross income £379; in the patronage of the bishop of Hereford. This parish possesses a daily school, and two Sunday schools. In addition to these there is a school here, endowed by Sir Rowland Morton with lands and houses; but having been thrown into the chancery, the revenues are swallowed up by law expenses, the houses dilapidated, the school-room shut up, and the tenants now refuse to pay the rents. Pop., in 1801, 776; in 1831, 1061. Houses 224. Acres 5,200; upwards of 200 acres of hops are grown. A. P. £5,760. Poor rates, in 1837, £718.

BOSCASTLE, or BOTTEREAUX CASTLE, a small port on the Bristol channel, in the parishes of Forrabury and Minster, hund. of Lesnewth, county of Cornwall; 2 miles south-east of Bossiney, in a deep valley surrounded on all sides by mountainous eminences clad with brushwood. Thursday is market-day, and fairs for oxen, sheep, and cloths, are held on August 5th, and November 22d. Here stood a castle of the family of Bottereaux, who settled here in the reign of Henry II., and gave name to the place. The ancient chapel is now in ruins. The Wesleyan Methodists have a place of worship here. Returns with the parishes of Forrabury and Minster.

BOSCOBEL, an extra-parochial liberty in the division of Hales-Owen, hund. of Brimstree, county of Salop; 6 miles east by north of Shifnal. The manor-house—now much altered—was the retreat of Charles II. on the 3d of September, 1651, after the battle of Worcester; and an oak on the grounds was long pointed out as the tree in which the king remained concealed while his pursuers actually passed round and under it. One of the Pepys's manuscripts, which is entitled "An Account of his Majesty's escape from Worcester, dictated by the king himself," has the following passage:—Major Careless told me" (Charles), "that it would be very dangerous for me either to stay in that house, or to go into the wood, there being a great wood hard by Boscobel; that he knew but one way how to pass the next day, and that was to get up into a great oak, in a pretty plain place, where we might see round about us; for the enemy would certainly search at the wood for people that had made their escape. Of which proposition of his, I approving, we (that is to say, Careless and I) went, and carried up with us some victuals for the whole day, viz. bread, cheese, small beer, and nothing else, and got up into a great oak that had been lopped some three or four years before, and being grown out again, very bushy and thick, could not be seen through, and here we staid all the day. I having, in the mean time, sent Penderell's brother to Mr. Pitchcroft's, (Whitgreave?) to know whether my Lord Wilmot was there or no; and had word brought me by him at night, that my lord was there; that there was a very secure hiding-hole in Mr. Pitchcroft's house, and that he desired me to come thither to him. Memorandum, That while we were in this tree we see soldiers going up and down, in the thicket of the wood, searching for persons escaped, we seeing them, now and then, peeping out of the wood. That night, Richard Penderell and I went to Mr. Pitchcroft's, about 6 or 7 miles off. There were six brothers of the Penderell's, who all appear to have known the secret of the king's concealment, but Richard and William were chiefly instrumental in aiding him. The former was known by the name of 'Trusty Richard.' Some of the brothers were taken into the royal service; and Humphrey, the miller, in 1680, was footman to the queen at Somerset house. From the numerous engravings of William and Richard Penderell, noticed in Granger, under the class of 'persons remarkable for a single circumstance in their lives,' it is evident that they were popular characters, and probably well known in London. Richard died in the metropolis, and lies buried in the church of St. Giles's-in-the-Fields, where a monument is erected to his memory, bearing the following epitaph:—'Here lieth the body of Richard Penderell, Preserver and Conductor to his Sacred Majesty, King Charles of Great Britain, after his escape from Worcester Fight, in the year 1651, who died, February 8, 1671:—

'Hold, passenger, here's shrouded in this herse, Unparrall'd Pan'o'ALL, thro' the Universe;
Like when the Eastern Star from Heav'n gave Light
To three lost Kings, so he, in such dark night,
To Britain's monarch, lost by adverse War,
On Earth appear'd a second Eastern Star;
A Pile astern, in her rebellious Main,
A Pilot to her Royal Sovereign;
Now to triumph in Heav'n's eternal sphere,
He's hence advanc'd for his just steerage here;
Whilst Albion's Chronicle, with matchless Fame,
Embalsms the story of Great Pan'o'ALL's name.'

Charles used jocosely to say, in afterwards 'fighting over again his battles by the fire-side,' that the rustling of Richard's calves-skin breeches was the best guide for him in that dark night when he followed his faithful subject. Mrs. Woolf discoloured his majesty's hands with walnut-tree leaves, as suitable to his other disguise. William Penderell's wife regaled him with an old English posset of skimmed milk and small beer,—homely fare for a British monarch; and as his host could find no other shoes to change for those taken from the monarch's dripping feet, the 'good wife' put some hot embers in them to evaporate the damp. William Penderell then shaved the king, and cut his hair off his head as short as the scissors would shear it, but leaving some about his ears, according to the evangelical fashion of the country people. The king enjoined William to burn the hair which he cut off; but Blount says, the peasant disobediently secreted it, 'wherewith he has since pleased some persons of honour' be this as it may, William had, doubtless, sagacity enough to find (like the retailers of the Royal oak and the Shakspeare mulberry tree) sufficient hair for the accommodation of all those whose loyalty demanded it."—[Retrospective Review, vol. xiv. pp. 59—61.] The oak here, to which the name of the Royal oak is now given, is supposed to have sprung from an acorn of the original tree. Pop. included with that of Donnington parish, Salop.

BOSCOMBE, a parish in the hund. and union of Amesbury, county of Wilts; 4 miles south-east of Amesbury. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Salisbury; valued at £13 17s. 1d., and in the parliamentary returns at £130; gross income £330; in the patronage of the bishop of Salisbury. There is a daily school in this parish. Here are four almshouses, endowed with £24 per annum. Pop., in 1801, 103; in 1831, 148. Houses 31. Acres 2,000. A. P. £1,023. Poor rates, in 1837, £19.

BOSHAM HUNDRED, in the rape of Chichester, county of Sussex. Area 10,690 acres. Houses 445. Pop., in 1831, 2,675.

BOSHAM, a parish in the hund. of Bosham, rape of Chichester, union of West Hampnett, county of Sussex; 3½ miles west by south of Chichester. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Chichester; valued at £6 11s. 3d., and in the parliamentary returns at £90; gross income £106; in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Chichester. An Independent chapel here was formed in 1812. There are six daily schools here, one of which is endowed with £5 per annum. The colossal head of a Saxon idol, of rude and ill-proportioned sculpture, was found in the churchyard here. Pop., in 1801, 880; in 1831, 1,181. Houses 211. Acres 3,860. A. P. £6,545. Poor rates, in 1837, £429.

—"Upon St. Wilfrid's coming among the South Saxons about A.D. 681, he found," says Tanner, on the authority of Bede, "here a small monastery of five or six religious, under the government of one Dicul, a Scottish monk. After the Conquest, William Warlewast, bishop of Exeter, obtained of King Henry I. the grant of this place to himself and successors, who were patrons and visitors of the secular canons or prebendaries founded by that bishop in the choir of the parish-church here, which was looked upon as a royal free chapel, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, and exempt from the ordinary jurisdiction of the bishop of Chichester and his archdeacon. The bishop of Exeter was in the place of dean or provost, the prebends of Waleton, Chedeham, Westbrook, Fountington, and Apulderham, are mentioned in the Lincoln taxation, and some show of a collegiate church remained here till the general dissolution. The site of this free chapel or college was granted, 6th Elizabeth, to Vincent Calmady, and the next year to the dean and chapter of Chichester." The manor of Bosham, or Bosenham, was the lordship of the archbishops of Canterbury, 'till by a will and force, Godwin, earl of Kent, got, and kept it from them. His device was this: Godwin, then earl of Kent, having a desire to obtain this manor, met the archbishop in a certain place with a feigned countenance,—said to him, Da mihi Basium; i.e. Give me a kiss, which, when the archbishop had done, he interpreted it Bosham, and immediately with his dependants took possession of it, thanking the archbishop for his generous gift, and so kept it peaceably. Harold, his son, inherited it after him, but as it was gotten unlawfully, it proved fatal to him and his family; for retreating hither upon a time, as he used to do for privacy, because it is situated between woods and arms of the sea, he in a pinnacle put to sea for his pleasure, and the wind turning of a sudden, he was driven ashore at Ponthieu in France, where, being taken prisoner, he was forced to pretend that he was sent of a private message to the duke of Normandy, which he could not deliver to him unless that duke would get his release, which he soon did, and Harold was carry'd into Normandy, where he behaved himself so well, that the duke was in love with him. Harold, 'tis probable, had then no thoughts of being king, but being desirous to ingratiate himself as much as he could with the duke, promised him to deliver the castle of Dover (which was then his own estate) to him, and contribute his assistance to make him king of England after Edward the Confessor's death, which last promise he confirmed by oath, and so was dismissed into England. King Edward died a little after, and Harold possessed himself of the throne, which William, duke of Normandy, being enraged at, not so much for Harold's breach of oath as for his own disappointment, raised an army, and having conquered Harold, made himself king. This manor, upon this revolution, was given by the conqueror to William Fitz-Aucher and his heirs in fee-farm, paying out of it yearly into the exchequer 40 pounds of silver, try'd and weigh'd. After him it was the inheritance of William Marshall, and from him it passed to the family of Berkleys, for Maurice Lord Berkley having recovered it from those to whom his brother William had given it, died possessed of it and other estates, 22nd Henry VII. Herbert de Bosham was a native of this place; he was a good scholar, and amanuensis to Thomas Becket, archbishop of Canterbury. He was present at the murder of his master, but had that discretion as to make no resistance, lest he should suffer the same fate. He wrote many books, and among the rest, one of his master's sufferings and death; after which going over into Italy, the pope made him bishop of Beneventum, and afterward a cardinal. His death is not known as to the time."—[Mag. Brit. Edin. 1738, vol. v. p. 492.]

BOSHINGTON, a parish in the hund. of Castle-Martin, union and county of Pembroke, South Wales; 5½ miles south-southwest of Pembroke, near the coast. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of St. David's; valued at £11 6s. 8d., and in the parliamentary returns at £140; gross income £175. Patron, in 1835, the Earl of Cawdor. There is a small daily school in this parish. Here is a cave or pit, termed Bosheston meer, wide at the bottom and narrow at the top, and of great depth, communicating with the sea by a large winding aperture. The waters rush in with violence at full tides, and make a noise similar to that of the Bullers of Buchan in Scotland; and instances have occurred when they have been so impelled and agitated by the winds and the swell of the sea, as to project a column of foam more than 30 feet above the mouth of the pit. Pop., in 1801, 191; in 1831, 222. Houses 40. A. P. £603. Poor rates, in 1837, £105.

BOSLEY, a chapelry in the parish of Prestbury, hund. of Macclesfield, co.-palatine of Chester; 4½ miles east-north-east of Congleton, in the vicinity of the Macclesfield canal. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. and dio. of Chester; valued at £3 10s., and rated in the parliamentary returns at £50; gross income £82; in the patronage of the vicar of Prestbury. There are two daily schools here. Pop., in 1801, 417; in 1831, 597. Houses 97. Acres 3,180. A. P. £2,541. Poor rates, in 1837, £196.

BOSMERE HUNDRED, in the Portsdown division of the county of Southampton. Area 6,060 acres. Houses 601. Pop., in 1831, 3,000.

BOSMERE and CLAYDON HUNDRED, in the county of Suffolk, is bounded on the north by the hundred of Hartismere; on the north-east by Threading hundred; on the east and south-east by the hundred of Carlford and the liberty of Ipswich; on the south by Sampford hundred; on the south-west by that of Cosford; and on the north-west by the hundred of Stow. Area 50,640 acres. Houses 2,361. Pop., in 1831, 12,950. See BARHAM. The Bosmere and Claydon poor-law union comprehends 38 parishes, embracing 91 square miles; with a population returned, in 1831, at 15,957. The average annual expenditure on the poor of this district, during the three years preceding the formation of the union, was £14,306. Expenditure, in 1838, £6,983. Under Gilbert's act, which was dissolved on 7th September, 1835, the expenditure was £10,816.

BOSSALL, a parish, partly in the union of York, partly in the wapentake of Birdforth, and partly in that of Bulmer, north riding of Yorkshire; 10 miles north-east of York, on the western bank of the Derwent. It contains the chapelry of Sand-Hutton and the townships of Bossall, Butter-Crambe, Claxton, Harton, Sand-Hutton, and a part of Flaxton-on-the-Moor. Living, a vicarage, valued at £12, with the curacies of Sand-Hutton, Flaxton, and Butter-Crambe annexed, in the archd. of Cleveland and dio. of York; gross income £467; in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Durham. The church, built in the form of a cross, is an elegant edifice. There are seven daily and three Sunday schools in this parish. Pop., in 1801, 992; in 1831, 1,375. Houses 248. Acres 9,820. A. P. £11,866. Poor rates, in 1837, £564. Pop. of the township, in 1811, 50; in 1831, 76. Houses 9. Acres 1,090.

BOSSINEY. See TINTAGELL and BOSSINEY.

BOSSINGTON, a chapelry in the parish of Broughton, hund. of Thorngate, Andover division of the county of Southampton; 3½ miles south-west by south of Stockbridge, on the western bank of the river Anton, and in the vicinity of the Andover canal. Pop., in 1801, 61; in 1831, 47. Houses 8. Acres 1,500. A. P. £986. Poor rates, in 1837, £25.

BOSTOCK, a township in the parish of Davenham, hund. of Northwich, co.-palatine of Chester; 3 miles north-west of Middlewich, in the immediate vicinity of the Warrington and Newton railway. There is an infant school here. Pop., in 1801, 173; in 1831, 218. Houses 35. Acres 930. A. P. £2,363. Poor rates, in 1837, £158.

BOSTON,

A parish, borough, port, and market-town, in the wapentake of Skirbeck, union of Boston, parts of Kesteven and Holland, county of Lincoln; 116 miles north of London, and 36 south-east of Lincoln, on the river Witham, which here forms a considerable estuary, though 5 miles from the sea. The Witham flows through the town, and over which an elegant iron-bridge of one arch, 86 feet in span,—after a design by Rennie, was erected in 1804–7 by the corporation, at an expense of £22,000.

Ecclesiastical affairs.—The living is a vicarage, in the archd. and dio. of Lincoln; valued at £33 6s. 8d.; gross income £360; recently in the patronage of the corporation. The church is a spacious and elegant structure. The interior is 382 feet in length, by 99 in breadth; the nave is rich and lofty; and on each side of the chancel are ranges of stalls. The tower is 262 feet 9 inches in height, and resembles that of the cathedral of Antwerp. It forms a conspicuous landmark for sailors, being visible at sea for 40 miles, and surmounted by an elegant octagonal lantern, which seems designed to have been lighted up at night for a sea-mark. This structure was erected in 1309, and is said to have been founded by Sir John Tilney and his lady, whose effigies are in the church.—The church of St. John has long ago been removed; the burying-ground alone remains.—Boston chapel-of-ease, erected in 1822, is a perpetual curacy, of the yearly value of £100; in the patronage of trustees. The great and small tithes of East Boston, the property of the corporation, were commuted in 1810. All tithes of Fen, West Boston, the property of the mayor and burgesses of the town, were commuted in 1771.—The General and Particular Baptists, Independents, Wesleyan, and New Connexion Methodists, Unitarians, the Society of Friends, and Roman Catholics, have places of worship here. The Independent church was formed in 1819; the New Connexion Methodist in 1827; the Primitive Methodist in 1822. The first Baptist church was formed in 1653; the second in 1800; and the third more recently. A very large Wesleyan Methodist chapel is now in course of erection.—Queen Mary, in 1554, founded a free grammar-school here, now under the direction of the corporation, the master of which receives £100, and the usher £60 per annum.—In 1707, Mr. Laughton founded a school for 25 boys, each of whom, at the age of 14, if apprenticed to a free burgess, is entitled to have a fee of £15 paid for him. The original endowment was £50 per annum.—Here are also a National and a blue-coat school, the latter of which is partly supported by bequests. Besides these, there are 49 daily, and 8 Sunday schools, in this parish. There is a dispensary in the town. Here were an Augustine friary, founded in 1307, and granted 37° Henry VIII. to the mayor and burgesses of the town; a Dominican monastery, founded prior to the year 1288, granted 32° Henry VIII. to Charles, duke of Suffolk; a Franciscan monastery, founded by the Esterving merchants, granted 37° Henry VIII. to the mayor and burgesses; and a Carmelite friary, founded in 1700.

General description.—The town is well-built, contains many good dwelling-houses and shops, and extensive granaries and other warehouses. The streets are well-paved and lighted with gas, under the provisions of a local act; but the supply of water is bad, notwithstanding great expenses have been incurred in the attempt to improve it. Wednesday and Saturday are market-days, on which large quantities of poultry are sold, much of which is sent to the London market, and extensive business done in corn and wool. A cattle market is held once a week—sometimes twice—on an open space near the north-eastern end of the town, called the Wide Bargate. Fairs are held on the 4th and 5th of May for sheep chiefly; August 5th is the town-fair; on November 20th, and three following days, for horses; and on December 11th for cattle. The navigation of the Witham has suffered much from the deposition of silt, but since the middle of the last century it has been deepened, and a canal carried from the town to Dogdyke, with most beneficial consequences. The quay is now accessible to vessels of 100 tons burden, and the river is navigable to Lincoln, whence is a vast inland communication by canals communicating with the river Trent. For the improvement of the port and harbour of Boston extensive powers are vested by two local acts of parliament, in the mayor and burgesses. They are authorized to collect tonnage, wharfage, and lastage, from vessels coming into the harbour, according to certain specified rates, the proceeds of which, after defraying the necessary expenses, are to be applied to deepening, cleansing, enlarging, and improving the harbour. The expenditure under these acts, from 1812 to 1832, was £88,749 1s. 10d. In 1832, 174 vessels belonged to this port. There are not any manufactures carried on in the borough; but the town contains two iron-foundries and three building-yards, (with a patent slip,) where vessels from 200 tons burden and downwards are constructed. The tide rises 13 feet in the harbour, but if certain improvements on the great level of the Waah, now contemplated, are carried out, it is expected that 19 feet of water will be obtained here. The state of commerce appears to be by no means flourishing. The export trade is chiefly in agricultural produce. This has increased greatly since the draining of the extensive fens, from which upwards of 70,000 acres of rich marsh land have been obtained. Here is a custom-house, a pilot-office, and a large fish-market. The Stamford and Boston banking company, and the National provincial bank, have branches here.

Municipal Government, &c.—Boston is a borough by prescription, but is chiefly governed by a charter of the 37th Henry VIII., extended by Elizabeth. The following are the dates of other charters granted to the corporation:—3rd Elizabeth, 2nd James I., 3rd Charles I., 1st James II., and 4th James II. The freedom of it is acquired by birth, servitude, gift, and purchase. By the municipal act of 1835, the borough has been divided into two wards: Boston West ward, and Barge ward; to each of which nine councillors have been assigned. The mayor is, by virtue of his office, escheator, returning officer at the election of members of parliament for the borough, and clerk of the market. A commission of the peace has been granted to this town. The corporation had a right, under the charter of Queen Elizabeth, to hold admiralty courts for the neighbouring coast. Quarterly courts of session for the borough, and courts of record for the recovery of debts, were also held by the corporation. Petty-sessions are held every Friday. By a local act, 47th George III., repealing and altering former acts, a court of requests is constituted for the recovery of small debts in the borough and parish of Boston, and the hundreds of Skirbeck and Kirton, excepting the parishes of Gosberton and Surfleet. A court of pie-powder, at which the mayor presides, is held at each of the fairs. Here are the house of correction for the parts of Holland, a borough-gaol, and guild-hall, which last is an ancient building. The gaol and house of correction stands on ground, the property of the corporation, known as the Dock Pasture. It is detached from other buildings, but very insecure on account of the absence of a boundary wall. It is a plain elevation of three stories, with the apartments for prisoners ranged on each side of central passages. On the ground-floor are 7 day-rooms, with airing-yard attached;—on the first floor, the chapel and 7 sleeping-cells, with arched roofs and brick floors; and on the second, 7 cells, from which many attempts at escape have been made. The keeper is allowed sixpence a-day for the maintenance of the prisoners. The tread-wheel for the males and females, with which the prison is furnished, moves with the same velocity, and is on the same shaft. Before the tread-wheel for the males, there is a contrivance for keeping them at labour of a novel description. A pit or trough of water, about 3 feet deep, extends the whole length of the wheel, to prevent them jumping off. Total number of prisoners, in 1837, 128. The elective franchise was conferred in the reign of Edward VI., from which period Boston returned two members to parliament, who were chosen by the resident freemen generally, paying scot and lot, in number about 400. During the old regime bribery prevailed to a large extent. The regular practice, it appears, was for the candidates to pay the voters five guineas for a single vote, and ten for a plumper. Under the reform bill the old borough of Boston, with the parish of Skirbeck and hamlet of Skirbeck quarter, exclusive of the fen-allotment of the parish of Skirbeck, returns two members to parliament. Boston is also a polling-place for the members for the parts of Kesteven. John Fox, the biographer of the martyrs, was born here; also the ecclesiastical writer, John of Boston, sometimes called Boston of Bury. "He travelled all over England, and exactly perused the libraries in all monasteries, whereby he was enabled to write a catalogue of ecclesiastical writers, as well foreign as English, extant in his age, in which he was so accurate as not only to give us the general titles, but the initial words of every book, and the place in each library where they are to be found, which was a great help to John Leland. His manuscript was never printed; but the archbishop of Armagh is said to have rejoiced much in this,—that he had the best copy of it in Europe. It is certain that the lovers of antiquities value it as a rarity of rarities. It was dedicated to Henry IV., king of England, in whose reign he flourished, and finished this work in the year 1410, or thereabouts."—[Mag. Brit. Edin. 1738, p. 1408.]—The Irby family hold the title of Viscount from this town. Pop., in 1601, 5,926; in 1831, 11,240. Houses 2,437. Acres 5,220. A. P. £3,423. Poor rates, in 1837, £5,051.—A workhouse has been erected here for the union of Boston by the poor-law commissioners. The Boston poor-law union comprehends 27 parishes, embracing an area of 168 square miles; with a population returned, in 1831, at 29,941. The average annual expenditure on the poor of this district, during the three years preceding the formation of the union, was £16,705. Expenditure, in 1838, £10,161.—There are penny-posts to Gosporton, Sutterton, Wanfleet, Friskney, Wrangle, Leak, Leverton, and Bennington.

History.—The name is supposed by some to be a contraction of Botolph's-town; a monastery having been founded here in 650, by the Saxon, St. Botolph. In the 'Ordinacio Stapularum' of Edward III., it is termed St. Botolph. Lambard writes: "St. Botulphes, now Bostonstow. A good towne in Lincolnshyre, commonly and corruptly called Boston, where whiles men weare occupied at a faire holden in tyme of Edward I. one Robert Chambers and his companions set fyre on sundry partes of the same; and when they of the towne leaving their bouthes did their best to quenche it, he rann upon them, and killing them, spoiled their goodes, 1288. Vide Part 2, Bale 27, of another Botulphes within the jurisdiction of Lincolnne towne, &c." Having been destroyed by the Danes in 870, the monastery was rebuilt to the north of the church, and its remains are still visible in a dwelling-house, called Botolph's priory. Dr. Stukeley supposes that a Roman ferry crossed the river Witham, in the immediate vicinity of this town. In 1204, Boston paid £780 of duty, while London, under the same tax, paid only £836; it must, therefore, have ranked pretty near in commercial importance to the metropolis itself. The town suffered greatly by fire—the work of an incendiary—in the reign of Edward I.; and, in 1285, from a great inundation, so that its prosperity was on the decline, when, in the 27th of Edward III., it was made a staple for wools, leather, tin, lead, and other commodities. The Hanseatic merchants also having settled a guild here, its prosperity revived; and in the reign of Edward III. it was able to supply 16 vessels to an armament intended for the invasion of Brittany. When Leland wrote in 1530, its decay as a place of commerce had recommenced; and notwithstanding the patronage of Henry VIII. and Elizabeth, it gradually declined with the increasing difficulty of the Witham navigation.

BOSTON, a hamlet in the parish of Bramham, wapentake of Barkstone-Ash, west riding of Yorkshire; 4 miles west-north-west of Tadcaster, on the southern bank of the river Wharfe, situate in a beautiful and romantic vale. Living, a perpetual curacy, in the archd. and dio. of York, of the yearly value of £146; in the patronage of the vicar of Bramham. The church is an elegant modern building, with a tower at the west end. The houses are neat and substantial erections. There is a saline spring here, discovered in 1744, the waters of which are conveyed by means of a pump into a small room for the convenience of visitors. Immediately adjoining this room, hot and cold baths have been erected. The discovery of this spring and the picturesque beauty of the vicinity, have been the means of attracting thither many strangers, and rendering it a favourite place of resort. Returns with the parish.

BOSWORTH (HUSBANDS), a parish in the hund. of Gartree, union of Market-Harborough, county of Leicester; 6 miles west-south-west of Market-Harborough, intersected by the Union canal, which passes through a tunnel here, a mile in length. Living, a rectory, formerly in the archd. of Leicester and dio. of Lincoln, now in the dio. of Peterborough, valued at £24 15s. 7½d.; gross income £992. Patron, in 1835, the Rev. J. T. Maine. The great and small tithes, the property of the clerical rector, were commuted in 1764. The Baptists and Roman Catholics have places of worship here; the Baptist church was formed in 1793. There are eight daily schools here, one of which possesses a charitable bequest of £13 per annum; another, containing 36 pupils, is supported by Mrs. Maine: and a third by Miss Turville. There are also three Sunday schools. Other charities connected with the parish produce £79 4s. 2d. per annum. A fair is held here on October 16th for cattle and sheep. Pop., in 1801, 660; in 1831, 865. Houses 177. Acres 3,870. A. P. £5,875. Poor rates, in 1837, £510.

BOSWORTH (MARKET), a parish in the hund. of Sparkenhoe, union of Market-Bosworth, county of Leicester; 106 miles north-west of London, and 11½ south-west of Leicester. It comprises the market-town of Bosworth, the chapelries of Barleston, Carlton, Shenton, and Sutton-Cheney, the township of Barton-in-the-Beans, and part of the township of Osbaston. Living, a rectory, formerly in the archd. of Leicester and dio. of Lincoln, now in the dio. of Peterborough; valued at £55 18s. 4d.; with the curacies of Sutton, Barleston, Carlton, and Shenton annexed; gross income £956. Patron, in 1835, — Dixie. The church contains some interesting monuments, and has an elegant spire. The Independents and Baptists have chapels here.—Here is a grammar-school, free to the children of all residents, founded and endowed in 1592, by Sir Wolstan Dixie, Knt. Its affairs have been long in Chancery, during which time tuition has been suspended, and its funds have accumulated to nearly £20,000. The governors are ten in number, including the rector and church-wardens of the parish. Connected with this school are two fellowships of £30, and four scholarships of £10 per annum each, founded by the same person. One of the masters of this school was the Rev. Anthony Blackwall; among its ushers were Dr. Samuel Johnson, and the celebrated mathematician, Thomas Simpson. There are also eight daily and eight Sunday schools in this parish, and six infant schools. Market-Bosworth has the right of sending six poor widows to the hospital at Carlton, near Skipton, in Yorkshire, founded by Ferrand Spence. At present six poor widows enjoy the benefit of this charity. Each of them has a separate apartment and £21 a-year. At Sutton-Cheney there is an alms-house for six poor men. Other charities connected with the parish produce about £60 per annum. Pop. of the town, in 1801, 791; of the parish, in 1831, 2,530. Houses 523. Acres 8,040. A. P. £1,962. Poor rates, in 1837, £611.—The Market-Bosworth poor-law union comprehends 28 parishes embracing an area of 79 square miles; with a population returned in 1831, at 11,365. The average annual expenditure on the poor of this district, during the three years preceding the formation of the union was £7,101. Expenditure, in 1838, £5,497. The market—from which the town takes the name of Market-Bosworth, and which was granted in the reign of Edward I.—is held on Wednesday. Fairs for horses, horned-cattle, and sheep, are held on May 8th and July 10th. Here are some manufactures of coarse woollen articles, and the Ashby canal passes near the town.

On an extensive moor in the neighbourhood of Market-Bosworth was fought, on the 22d of August, 1485, the celebrated battle between Richard III. and Henry, earl of Richmond, which terminated the struggles of the houses of York and Lancaster. A well, at which the king is said to have refreshed himself during the battle, is still in existence, and bears a Latin inscription from the pen of Dr. Parr. Richmond, afterwards Henry VII., landed at Milford on the 6th, and arrived at Tamworth on the 18th of August. On the 19th he had an interview with his father-in-law, Lord Stanley, when measures were concerted for their further operations. On the 20th, he encamped at Atherstone; and on the 21st, both armies were in sight of each other the whole day. Richard entered Leicester with his army on the 16th; he slept at Elmesthorpe on the night of the 17th; and on the 18th he arrived at Stapleton, where he continued till Sunday the 21st. The number of his forces exceeded 16,000; those of Richmond did not amount to 5,000. On each side the leader addressed his troops, "which was scarcely finished," says an old historian, "but the one army espied the other. Lord! how hastily the soldiers buckled their helms! how quickly the archers bent their bows and brushed their feathers! how readily the billmen shook their bills and proved their staves, ready to approach and join when the terrible trumpet should sound the bloody blast to victory or death!" The first conflict of the archers being over, the armies fiercely encountered each other with sword and bills; and at this juncture Richmond was joined by Lord Stanley, which determined the fortune of the day. In this battle, which lasted little more than two hours, above 1000 persons were slain on the side of Richard. Of Richmond's army scarcely 100 were killed, amongst whom, the principal person was Sir William Brandon, his standard-bearer. Richard is allowed to have performed prodigies of valour, and is said to have fallen at last by treachery, in consequence of a blow from one of his followers. His body was thrown across a horse, and carried, for interment, to the Greyfriars at Leicester. He was the only English monarch, since the Conquest, who fell in battle; and the second who entered the battle-field in his crown. Henry V. appeared in his at Agincourt, which was the means of saving his life, by sustaining a stroke with a battle-axe which cleft it. Richard's falling off in the engagement, was taken up and secreted in a bush, where it was discovered by Sir Reginald Bray and placed upon Henry's head; hence the device of a crown in a hawthorn-bush, at each end of Henry's tomb in Westminster-abbey. In 1644, Bosworth field again became the scene of warfare: an engagement, or rather skirmish, taking place upon it between the parliamentary and royal forces, in which the former were victorious without the loss of a single individual.

BOTCHARDBY, a township in the parish of St. Cuthbert, within the liberties of the city of Carlisle, county of Cumberland; 2 miles north-north-east of Blackwell, and in the immediate vicinity of the Carlisle and Newcastle railroad. Pop., in 1801, 94; in 1831, 144. Other returns with the parish.

BOTCHESTON AND NEWTON, a township in the parish of Rathy, hund. of Sparkenboe, county of Leicester; 6 miles east-north-east of Market-Bosworth, in the immediate vicinity of the Leicester and Swannington railway. Pop., in 1801, 94; in 1831, 82. Houses 15. A. P. £1,168. Other returns with the parish.

BOTESDALE, or BOTULPH'S DALE, a parish in the hund. and union of Hartismere, county of Suffolk; 86 miles north-east of London, and 7 west-north-west of Eye. The town consists chiefly of one long street, extending into the parishes of Upper and Lower Rickingball. Living, a rectory annexed to that of Redgrave. The chapel contains the remains of Sir Nicholas Bacon and Lord-chief-justice Holt, with monuments to their memory. Here is a free grammar-school, with an income of £30 per annum, which was founded and endowed in 1576 by Sir Nicholas Bacon. Connected with this school are six exhibitions at Corpus Christi college, Cambridge. There are also a day and Sunday school, attended by 130 children, endowed by John Dyas, Esq., with about 16 acres of land, and a daily school. Botesdale is a polling-place for the member for West Suffolk. Thursday is the market-day, and a fair is held on Holy Thursday for cattle and toys. Pop., in 1801, 565; in 1831, 655. Houses 119. Acres 540. A. P. £1,565. Poor rates, in 1837, £310.

BOTHALL, a parish and township in the eastern division of the ward and union of Morpeth, county of Northumberland; 3 miles east of Morpeth, on the northern bank of the river Wansbeck. It comprises the townships of Ashington with Sheepwash, Bothall-Demesne, Longhirst, Old Moor, Pegaworth, and Hebburn chapelry in the west division of the ward. Living, a rectory, with the curacy of Hebburn, in the archd. of Northumberland and dio. of Durham, valued at £25; gross income £1,493. Patron, in 1835, the Duke of Portland. The church contains a fine alabaster tomb of some member of the Ogle family. On the south side of the chancel the genealogy of the Ogles—of whom there were seven lords and thirty knights—is painted on the wall, in old black letter. There are a daily National school, containing 55 pupils, with a small endowment, and a daily school, in this parish.—At Sheepwash, about 2 miles down the Wansbeck, where the parsonage house is, stood the old parochial church. Here are the remains of an ancient chapel.—Of Bothall castle, formerly the property of the Ogle family, the great gate-way and fragments of ruined walls alone remain. In a survey, called the book of Bothool Baronrye, taken in 1576, we find this building described as "ane castell in circumference 480 foote wharto belongeth ane castell, great chaulmer, parler, vii bed chaulmers, one galare, butterie, pantrie, lardener, kitchinge, backhouse, brewhouse, a stable, an court called the yet-house wherein there is a prison, a porter-loge, and diverse faire chaulmering, an common stable, and a toure called Blanke toure, a gardine, ane nurice, chapel, and an toure called Ogle's toure, and pastrie, with many other prittie beauldings herenot specified, faire gardingeas, and orchetts, wharin growes all kind of herbeas and flowres and fine appeles, plumbes of all kynds, peers, damsellis, nuttes, wardens, cherries to the black and reede, wallnuttes, and also licoris verie fyne worth by the yeare xx£." Bothall lordship was possessed by Richard Bertram in the time of Henry II. The manor was created a barony to Richard's son. Helen, daughter and heiress of Robert Bertram, sheriff of Northumberland in the reign of Edward III., marrying Sir Robert Ogle of Ogle, knight, transferred this barony to his family. From the Ogles it was carried by marriage into the family of Cavendish, and subsequently into the Port and family. Charities connected with the parish produce £24 18s. per annum. Pop., in 1801, 1,161; in 1831, 1,319. Houses 249. Acres 15,190. A. P. £18,236. Poor rates, in 1837, £663. Pop. of the township of Bothall-Demesne, in 1801, 193; in 1831, 227. Houses 41. A. P. £4,895. Poor rates, in 1837, £80.

BOTHAMSALL, or BOTHAMSKILL, a parish in the Hatfield division of the wapentake of Bassetlaw, union of East Retford, county of Nottingham; 4 miles north-west of Tuxford, on the northern bank of the river Meden. Living, a perpetual curacy, formerly in the archd. of Nottingham and dio. of York, now in the dio. of Lincoln; valued at £21 6s. 8d., and in the parliamentary returns at £50; gross income £52. Patron, in 1835, the Duke of Newcastle. There are two small daily schools in this parish, the inhabitants of which have the right of sending children to a free school at Haughton with Serlby. Pop., in 1801, 235; in 1831, 328. Houses 58. Acres 1,630. A. P. £1,810. Poor rates, in 1837, £122.

BOTHEL AND THREAPLAND, a township in the parish of Torpenhow, ward of Allerdale below Derwent, county of Cumberland; 7 miles north-north-east of Cockermouth, and 2½ south-east of the Carlisle railroad. There are a daily and a Sunday school here, the former of which is endowed with £42 per annum, and possesses a small lending library,—the gift of Sir W. Lawson. Lime is found in abundance in this neighbourhood. Pop., in 1801, 313; in 1831, 405. Houses 86. Acreage with th. parish. A. P. £2,758. Poor rates, in 1837, £158.

BOTHENHAMPTON, a parish in the liberty of Bothenhampton and Loders, Bridport union and division of the county of Dorset; 1 mile south-south-east of Bridport. Living, a perpetual curacy, formerly in the archd. of Dorset and dio. of Bristol, now in the dio. of Lincoln, not in charge; valued in the parliamentary returns at £45; gross income £53. Patron, in 1835, Sir H. M. Nepean. There are two infant schools in this parish. Pop., in 1801, 334; in 1831, 424. Houses 62. Acres 600. A. P. £1,927. Poor rates, in 1837, £161.

BOTH-HERGESTS, a township in the parish of Kington, hund. of Huntington, county of Hereford; 2½ miles south-west of Kington. Pop., in 1801, 124; in 1831, 159. Houses 34. Other returns with the parish.

BOTLEY, a tything in the parish of Cumnor, hund. of Horner, county of Berks; 2 miles west of Oxford. Pop., in 1801, 68; in 1831, 133. Houses 24. Other returns with the parish.

BOTLEY. See CHESHAM.

BOTLEY, a parish in the hund. of Mansbridge, union of South Stoneham, Fawley division of the county of Southampton; 4 miles south-south-west of Bishop's-Waltham. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Winchester; valued at £5 10s. 2½d.; gross income £330. Patron, in 1835, the Duke of Rutland. The church contains an ancient and curious font. The Independents have a place of worship here, and there are two daily and four infant schools. On the river Hamble, in this parish, there are some flour mills. Fairs are held here on February 20th and May 28th for cheese, and on July 23d, August 20th, and November 13th, for cattle. Pop., in 1801, 614; in 1831, 722. Houses 144. Acres 3,090. A. P. £1,660. Poor rates, in 1837, £399.

BOTLOE HUNDRED, in the county of Gloucester, is bounded on the north and west by Herefordshire; on the south by the duchy of Lancaster; on the south-east by the hundred of Berkeley; and on the north-east by Worcestershire. Area 25,310 acres. Houses 1,269. Pop., in 1831, 6,622.

BOTOLPH (St.). See LONDON.

BOTOLPH-BRIDGE. See ORTON-LONGVILLE.

BOTOLPHS. See BUTTOLPHS.

BOTTESFORD with NORMANTON and EASTTHORPE, a parish in the hund. of Framland, union of Grantham, county of Leicester; 7 miles west-north-west of Grantham, in the vale of Belvoir, and intersected by the Grantham canal. Living, a rectory, formerly in the archd. of Leicester and dio. of Lincoln, now in the dio. of Peterborough; valued at £51 5s.; gross income £1,026. Patron, in 1835, the Duke of Rutland. The church is a large handsome building, consisting of a nave, a spacious chancel, two aisles, south porch, and north and south transept, with a tower at the west end. It contains the burying-place of the Manners family, and monuments to many of the earls and dukes of Rutland. All tithes, moduses, &c. of Bottesford, including the hamlets of Eastthorpe and Normanton, the property of the lord of the manor and clerical rector, were commuted in 1770. The Baptists have a place of worship here; the church was formed in 1791. This parish possesses four daily schools, one of which is partly supported by an endowment of 32 acres of land, and two Sunday schools. There is an hospital here for poor men, founded and endowed in 1612, by Roger, Earl of Rutland, and subsequently increased by successive earls and dukes of Rutland. By an order of the trustees, in 1821, the number of pensioners was increased to 17. Each pensioner receives the yearly allowance of £23 16s. 8d. A matron is attached to the establishment, who receives a salary of £15 per annum. There is also an hospital for six poor widows, founded and endowed by Samuel Fleming, rector of Bottesford, who died in 1620, the entire income of which amounts to £132 17s. 8d. per annum. Other charities connected with the parish produce £78 3s. 3d. a-year. Pop., in 1801, 804; in 1831, 1,320. Houses 277. Acres 5,010. A. P. £7,825. Poor rates, in 1837, £413.

BOTTESFORD, a parish, partly in the northern and partly in the eastern division of the wapentake of Manley, parts of Lindsey, union of Glandford-Brigg, county of Lincoln; 7 miles west of Glandford-Brigg. It contains the chapelry of Burringham, the townships of Ashby, Bottesford, and Crosby, and the hamlets of Holm and Yaddlethorpe. Living, a discharged vicarage, united in 1727, to that of Messingham. All tithes of the township of Bottesford and hamlets of Yaddlethorpe, the property of the dean and chapter of Lincoln and the vicar, were commuted in 1794. There are eight daily and two Sunday schools in this parish. Pop., in 1801, 783; in 1831, 1,229. Houses 233. Acres 8,210. A. P. £6,213. Poor rates, in 1837, £509. Pop. of the township, in 1801, 104; in 1831, 286. Houses 20. A. P. £2,168. Poor rates, in 1837, £44.

BOTTESLAW, a township in the parish of Stoke-upon-Trent, northern division of the hund. of Pirehill, county of Stafford; 2 miles east of Newcastle. Pop., in 1811, 46; in 1831, 65. Houses 9. Other returns with the parish.

BOTTISHAM, a parish in the hund. of Staine, union of Newmarket, county of Cambridge; 6½ miles west-south-west of Newmarket. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Ely; valued at £16; gross income £270; in the patronage of Trinity college, Cambridge. The church is an ancient structure, and contains the tomb of Elias de Beckingham, justiciary of England in the time of Edward I. The great and small tithes, the property of Trinity college, Cambridge, and the vicar, were commuted in 1801. The Independents and Baptists have chapels here; the church of the latter having been formed in 1810. There are four daily schools here, one of which is endowed with £20 per annum. The petty sessions are occasionally held here. Henry I. founded here a small priory of Augustine canons, parts of which are yet visible. Pop., in 1801, 864; in 1831, 1,302. Houses 255. Acres 4,700. A. P. £5,597. Poor rates, in 1837, £668.

BOTTWNOG, a parish in the hund. of Gafflogian, union of Pwllheli, county of Caernarvon, North Wales; 7½ miles south-west by west of Pwllheli. Living, a curacy, not in charge, annexed to the vicarage of Meylltyme. The Calvinistic Methodists have a place of worship here; the church was formed in 1784. There is a daily school here, containing 66 boys, endowed with £170 per annum. There are also two Sunday schools. Pop., in 1801, 152; in 1831, 179. Houses 40. A. P. £450. Poor rates, in 1837, £77.

BOTUSFLEMING, a parish in the southern division of East hund., union of St. Germans, county of Cornwall; 3 miles north-west by north of Saltash. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Cornwall and dio. of Exeter; valued at £16 15s. 7½d.; gross income £236. Patron, in 1835, the Rev. William Spry. There is a daily school in this parish. Pop., in 1801, 201; in 1831, 299. Houses 47. Acres 1,290. Poor rates, in 1837, £236.

BOTULPH'S DALE. See BOTESDALE.

BOUGHROOD, a parish in the hund. of Pains-Castle, county of Radnor, South Wales; 7 miles south-west by west of Hay. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Brecon and dio. of St. David's; valued at £12 6s. 8d.; gross income £250; in the patronage of the bishop of St. David's. There are two daily schools here. This parish comprehends about 1,000 acres, chiefly in wood, and is beautifully situated on the northern bank of the Wye, in the picturesque glen where the Caletwyr and the Machwy fall into that river at directly opposite points. The dingle of the Machwy, noted for the grandeur of its scenery, is terminated by an enormous rock, on the summit of which are the remains of an ancient rude structure, the "terrific foundations" of which excite the curiosity of the tourist. An act was passed in the session of 1837-8 for building a bridge over the Wye at this place. Pop., in 1801, 285; in 1831, 354. Houses 63. A. P. £1,480. Poor rates, in 1837, £168.

BOUGHTON-UNDER-BLEAN HUNDRED, in the lathe of Scray, county of Kent. Area 9,360 acres. Houses 460. Pop., in 1831, 2,543.

BOUGHTON, a parish in the hund. of Clackclose, county of Norfolk; 1½ mile north of Stoke Ferry. Living, a discharged rectory, formerly in the archd. of Norfolk and dio. of Norwich, now in the dio. of Ely; valued at £10; gross income £400. Patron, in 1835, Sir W. Folkes, Bart. Pop., in 1801, 182; in 1831, 221. Houses 41. Acres 1,500. A. P. £1,880. Poor rates, in 1837, £115.

BOUGHTON, a parish in the hund. of Spelhoe, union of Brixworth, Northamptonshire; 3½ miles north of Northampton. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Northampton and dio. of Peterborough; valued at £20 9s. 7d.; gross income £360. Patron, in 1835, Sir W. H. Vyse. The church is in ruins, but a chapel has been erected for public worship. There are two daily and two Sunday schools here. Pop., in 1801, 344; in 1831, 360. Houses 84. Acres 1,850. A. P. £2,495. Poor rates, in 1837, £207.

* The name of Boughton, or Boeton, as it is often written in ancient deeds, may have been derived from the Saxon boec, signifying 'a charter,' and ton, 'a town' or parish; that is, 'the place held by charter.'

BOUGHTON, a parish in the Hatfield division of the wapentake of Bassetlaw, union of Southwell, county of Nottingham; 2 miles north-east of Ollerton. Living, a perpetual curacy, formerly in the archd. of Nottingham and dio. of York, now in the dio. of Lincoln; valued at £10; gross income £300; in the patronage of the chapter of the collegiate church of Southwell. The church is in ruins. The Baptists have a chapel here; the church was formed in 1806. There are two daily schools in this parish. Pop., in 1801, 190; in 1831, 285. Houses 62. Acres 1,630. A. P. £1,331. Poor rates, in 1837, £102.

BOUGHTON-ALUPH, a parish in the hund. of Wye, lathe of Scray, union of East Ashford, county of Kent; 4 miles north-north-east of Ashford, intersected by the Central Kent railway. Living, a vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Canterbury; valued at £6 5s., and in the parliamentary returns at £97; gross income £216. Patron, in 1835, W. Breton, Esq. There is a small daily school here. A fair is held here on Monday after June 29th. Pop., in 1801, 403; in 1831, 492. Houses 77. Acres 2,200. A. P. £3,193. Poor rates, in 1837, £489.

BOUGHTON-UNDER-BLEAN, a parish and village in the hund. of Boughton, lathe of Scray, union of Faversham, county of Kent; 3 miles south-south-east of Faversham. Living, a vicarage in the peculiar jurisdiction and patronage of the archbishop of Canterbury; valued at £9 4s. 2½d.; gross income £350. The church contains some ancient monuments. Here are four daily schools, two boarding-schools, and a Sunday school. Pop., in 1801, 884; in 1831, 1,300. Houses 261. Acres 2,390, of which about 300 are in hops. A. P. £4,295. Poor rates, in 1837, £696. Hasted, speaking of this parish, says, "The house at Nash, commonly called Nash Court"—which is at present in Chancery, and seemingly fast going to decay—"was plundered by the neighbourhood in the year 1715, during the ferment the nation was thrown into on account of the rebellion in Scotland, in consequence of the family of Hawkins, who then held it, being of the Roman Catholic persuasion. Every part of the furniture, family-pictures, writings of the estates and family, were burnt, with an excellent library of books, and the family-plate was carried off, and never heard of afterwards. It was rebuilt, however, by the owner, who lived to the great age of 92, and died in 1766." Old as he was at the time of his death, it appears from an inscription in the chancel of Boughton church, that one of his ancestors lived to a still more advanced age, and died after he had completed his 101st year. The inscription on his tomb says that this venerable old gentleman served King Henry VIII., which won him fame; that the said King Henry was a gracious prince to him, and made him well to spend his ancient days; that he was high of stature, with body long and strong, excelling all that lived in his time. See DUNKIRK.

BOUGHTON (GREAT), a township in the parish of Aldford, hund. of Broxton, co.-palatine of Chester; 1 mile east of Chester, intersected by the Chester and Crewe railway. There are two daily schools here, and a Sunday school, to which a lending library is attached. Pop., in 1801, 544; in 1831, 900. Houses 181. Acres 840. A. P. £3,440. Poor rates, in 1837, £269.

BOUGHTON-MALHERBE, a parish in the hund. of Eyborne, lathe of Aylesford, union of Hollingbourn, county of Kent; 11 miles east-south-east of Maidstone, and 4 north of the South-Eastern railway. It is written in ancient deeds Boughton alias Bocton. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Canterbury; valued at £13 15s.; gross income £352. Patron, in 1835, Earl Cornwallis. The church contains several monuments to various members of the Wotton family. There is a daily National school here. So much of the parish as is eastward of a line drawn from the church, through the middle of Chilston house, to Lenham church, is in the lathe of Shepway. This parish was the birth-place of the celebrated scholar and diplomatist, Sir Henry Wotton, who was born at Bocton-hall in 1568. Pop., in 1801, 327; in 1831, 478. Houses 80. Acres 2,590, of which 134 were in hops in 1837. A. P. £2,894. Poor rates, in 1837, £514.

BOUGHTON-MONCHELSEA, a parish in the hund. of Eyborne, lathe of Aylesford, union of Maidstone, county of Kent; 4 miles south by east of Maidstone, and 3 north of the South-Eastern railway. Living, a vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Canterbury; valued at £7 13s. 4d.; gross income £395; in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Rochester. The church was almost entirely consumed by fire in December, 1832. There are three daily schools here, and a day and Sunday school. This parish is written in Domesday, Boltone; in later records, Bocton, and sometimes West Bocton. It has the addition of Monchelsea from the ancient possessors of the manor, whose principal seat was at Swanscombe in this county. This parish possesses large quarries of ragstone. Pop., in 1801, 712; in 1831, 1,025. Houses 116. Acres 1,740, of which 259 were in hops in 1837. A. P. £4,014. Poor rates, in 1837, £685.

BOULBY. See EASTINGTON.

BOULDON, a township in the parish of Holdgate, hund. of Munslow, county of Salop; 7½ miles north-north-east of Ludlow. Pop., in 1821, 60; in 1831, 49. Houses 11. Acres 240.

BOULGE, a parish in the hund. of Wilford, union of Woodbridge, county of Suffolk; 3 miles north-north-west of Woodbridge. Living, a discharged rectory united with that of Debach, in the archd. of Suffolk and dio. of Norwich; valued at £3 12s. 1d.; gross income £235. Patroness, in 1835, Mrs. S. Reynolds. Pop., in 1801, 39; in 1831, 55. Houses 5. Acres 700. A. P. £968. Poor rates, in 1837, £15.

BOULMER AND SEATON-HOUSE, a township in the parish of Longhoughton, southern division of Bambrough ward, county of Northumberland; 5½ miles east of Alnwick, on the coast, near Boulmer Point, inhabited chiefly by fishermen. Pop., in 1801, 110; in 1831, 140. Houses 23. Acreage with the parish. A. P. £474. Poor rates, in 1837, £44.

BOULSTON, or BULLSTON, a parish in the hund. of Dungledy, union of Haverford-West, county of Pembroke, South Wales; 5 miles south-east of Haverford-West. Living, a curacy in the archd. and dio. of St. David's; valued at £6 13s. 4d.; gross income £25. Patron, in 1835, R. T. Ackland, Esq. The church, says Fenton, "has the reputation of being a peculiar." In the parish-church are several monuments to the Wogans, a branch of the Wiston family, whose ruined mansion is in the vicinity. Pop., in 1801, 167; in 1831, 302. Houses 62. A. P. £1,030. Poor rates, in 1837, £53.

BOULTHAM, a parish in the lower division of the wapentake of Boothby-Graffo, parts of Kesteven, union and county of Lincoln; 2 miles south-south-west of Lincoln. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. and dio. of Lincoln; valued at £7 15s. 2d., and in the parliamentary returns at £122 8s. 9d.; gross income £126. Patrons, in 1835, the trustees of the late Rev. R. Ellison. The great and small tithes, the property of the clerical rector, were commuted in 1803. Pop., in 1801, 73; in 1831, 79. Houses 10. Acres 1,210. A. P. £2,502. Poor rates, in 1837, £81.

BOULTON, a chapelry in the parish of St. Peter, hund. of Morleston and Litchurch, county of Derby; 3 miles south-east of Derby, in the vicinity of the Birmingham and Derby railroad, and the Derby canal. Pop., in 1801, 108; in 1831, 175. Houses 38. Acres 1,240. Poor rates, in 1837, £133.

BOUNTISBOROUGH HUNDRED, in the Fawley division of the county of Southampton. Area 6,700 acres. Houses 118. Pop., in 1831, 634.

BOURN, or BURN, a parish in the hund. of Long-Stow, union of Caxton and Arrington, county of Cambridge; 2 miles south-east by south of Caxton. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Ely; valued at £9 15s. 10d., and in the parliamentary returns at £110; gross income £167; in the patronage of Christ college, Cambridge. There are three daily schools in this parish, one of which is endowed by the Countess De La Warr with £20 per annum. Here was anciently a castle, long since destroyed. Pop., in 1801, 554; in 1831, 767. Houses 152. Acres 4,073. A. P. £7,427. Poor rates, in 1837, £373.

BOURN. See WRECKLESHAM AND BOURN.

BOURN-MOOR, a township in the parish of Houghton-le-Spring, northern division of Easington ward, co.-palatine of Durham; 2 miles north of Houghton-le-Spring. There are three daily schools here, and a Sunday school. Pop., in 1801, 889; in 1831, 938. Houses 194. Acres 450. Poor rates, in 1837, £552.

BOURN, a parish in the wapentake of Aveland, parts of Kesteven, union of Bourn, county of Lincoln; 97 miles north by west of London, and 35 south-south-east of Lincoln, connected with Boston by means of a canal for boats of ten tons burden. It comprises the hamlets of Bourn with Tongue-End, Cawthorpe, and Dyke. It is in a flat country, in the vicinity of the fens, and takes its name from a spring of remarkably pure water, called Bournwell-head, the source of a small river. The town consists chiefly of one street about a mile and a quarter in length. There is some trade in wool and malt, and leather is made extensively. The market is on Saturday, and fairs for horses and cattle are held on September 30th and October 29th. There is a branch of the Stamford and Boston banking company here. The sessions for the parts of Kesteven are held here; and the county-magistrates hold petty-sessions for the hundreds of Aveland, Ness, and Beltsloe, in the town-hall, which is a fine building erected on the site of one originally built by the Lord-Treasurer Burleigh. Bourn is one of the polling-places for the members for the parts of Kesteven.—Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Lincoln; valued at £8; gross income £320. Patron, in 1835, the honourable W. Cavendish. The church is a large and handsome Gothic edifice, consisting of a lofty chancel, a nave, with side aisles, and a short transept. The interior is partly in the later style, and contains some interesting monuments and a finely enriched font. The great and small tithes, the property of the lay-impropriators and vicar, were commuted in 1766. The Baptists and Wesleyan Methodists have places of worship here. The Baptist church was formed in 1688, the Wesleyan Methodist in 1811. There are eleven daily schools in this parish, one of which is endowed with £30, and another, a National school, with £42 per annum. There are also two Sunday schools, and an hospital for 6 men, and an almshouse for 6 women, founded and endowed in 1653 by Thomas Trollope, Esq.—Here were formerly a castle of considerable extent of which very slight traces now remain, and a monastery, founded in 1138, of which the site alone is visible. From various antiquities discovered here, Bourn has been supposed to have been a place of some importance under the Romans.

Bourn was the birth-place of the celebrated but unfortunate Dr. Dodd, who was born in 1729, and executed for forgery in 1777. Pop., in 1801, 1,684; in 1831, 2,589. Houses 511. Acres 8,190. A. P. £10,139. Poor rates, in 1837, £750. Pop. of the hamlet, in 1801, 1,474; in 1831, 2,355. Houses 467. A workhouse has been erected here for the union of Bourn by the poor-law commissioners, at an expense of £6,700, capable of accommodating 300 persons. The Bourn poor-law union comprehends 37 parishes, embracing an area of 133 square miles; with a population returned in 1831, at 17,174. The average annual expenditure on the poor of this district, during the three years preceding the formation of the union, was £8,506. Expenditure, in 1838, £4,256.

BOURNE (EAST). See EASTBOURNE.

BOURNE (ST. MARY), a parish in the hund. of Evingar, King's-clere division, Whitchurch union, county of Southampton; 3 miles north-west of Whitchurch. Living, a curacy, annexed to the vicarage of Hurstbourne-Priors. There are three daily and three Sunday schools in this parish. Pop., in 1801, 771; in 1831, 1,068. Houses 201. Acres 6,640. A. P. £1,825. Poor rates, in 1837, £697.

BOURNE (WEST), a parish in the hund. of Westbourne and Singleton, rape of Chichester, union of Westbourne, county of Sussex; 7 miles west-north-west of Chichester. Living, a sinecure rectory in the archd. and dio. of Chichester; valued at £24 13s. 4d.; gross income £920; and a vicarage valued at £10 10s. 5d.; gross income £291. Patron, in 1835, the Rev. H. G. Newland. There are three daily and two day and Sunday schools in this parish. Pop., in 1801, 1,549; in 1831, 2,031. Houses 409. Acres 4,230. A. P. £3,710. Poor rates, in 1837, £857. The Westbourne poor-law union comprehends 12 parishes, embracing an area of 48 square miles; with a population returned, in 1831, at 6,585. The average annual expenditure on the poor of this district, during the three years preceding the formation of the union, was £8,095. Expenditure, in 1838, £2,578.

BOURTON, a tything in the parish and hund. of Shrivenham, county of Berks; 7 miles south-west by south of Faringdon, intersected by the Great Western railway, and in the vicinity of the Berks and Wilts canal. The great and small tithes of Bourton and Watchfield, the property of the lay-impropriators and vicar, were commuted in 1789. There are a small daily school, and two Sunday schools here. Pop., in 1801, 257; in 1831, 302. Houses 60. Acreage with the parish. A. P. £2,318. Poor rates, in 1837, £148.

BOURTON, or BOROTON, a hamlet in the borough and parish of Buckingham, Buckinghamshire; 1 mile east of Buckingham. There is a tradition, according to Willis, that an ancient house in this hamlet, with a large arched doorway, was formerly a chapel. Pop., in 1801, 64; in 1821, 50. Acres 1,360. Other returns with the parish.

BOURTON, a chapelry in the parish and liberty of Gillingham, Shaston division, county of Dorset; 2½ miles south-west of Mere. The chapelry possesses three daily and two Sunday schools. "The constable is chosen yearly at the court-leet of the lord of the liberty. The tything man owes suit and service to the lord's court, is called there every month, and obliged to pay yearly to the steward 6s., Law-day silver. The tything consists of copyholders." Hutchin's Dorset. In 1838 there was a flax-mill here, employing 68 hands. Pop., in 1801, 637; in 1831, 810. Houses 182. Acreage with the parish. A. P. £1,464. Poor rates, in 1837, £222.

BOURTON-UPON-DUNSMOOR, a parish in the hund. of Knightlow, division and union of Rugby, county of Warwick; 4 miles west by south of Dunchurch. Living, a rectory, formerly in the archd. of Coventry and dio. of Lichfield and Coventry, now in the dio. of Worcester; valued at £19 17s. 3d.; gross income £350. Patron, in 1835, John Shuckburgh. There are three daily and two Sunday schools in this parish. Pop., in 1801, including the tything of Draycot, 318; in 1831, 367. Houses 76. Acres 2,520. A. P. £3,401. Poor rates, in 1837, £244.

BOURTON (GREAT AND LITTLE), a hamlet in the parish of Cropredy, hund. of Banbury, county of Oxford; 3 miles north of Banbury, intersected by the Oxford canal. Living, a curacy annexed to the vicarage of Cropredy. The great and small tithes of Great and Little Bourton, the property of the bishop of Oxford, lay-impropriators, and vicar, were commuted in 1777. There are two day and Sunday schools here, both of which are endowed; the one with £21 10s., the other with £10 per annum, and a daily school. Pop., in 1801, 433; in 1831, 563. Houses 115. Acres 1,390. A. P. £3,468. Poor rates, in 1837, £337.

BOURTON-ON-THE-HILL, a parish in the upper divisions of the hundreds of Tewksbury and Westminster, union of Shipston-on-Stour, county of Gloucester; 2 miles west of Moreton-in-the-Marsh, on the post-road to Evesham. It stands on the side of a hill, whence the prospect is varied and delightful. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Gloucester and dio. of Gloucester and Bristol; valued at £14, with the perpetual curacy of Moreton-in-the-Marsh annexed; gross income £675. Patron, in 1835, Dr. Warneford. The great and small tithes of Bourton-on-the-Hill and Moreton-in-the-Marsh, the property of the clerical rector and lay-impropriator, were commuted in 1821. This parish possesses two endowed Sunday schools and a daily school. Pop., in 1801, 369; in 1831, 553. Houses 111. Acres 2,960. A. P. £1,221. Poor rates, in 1837, £239.

BOURTON-ON-THE-WATER, a parish in the lower division of the hund. of Slaughter, union of Stow-on-the-Wold, county of Gloucester; 4 miles south-south-west of Stow-on-the-Wold. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Gloucester and dio. of Gloucester and Bristol, with the curacies of Clapton and Low-Slaughter united; valued at £27 2s. 8½d.; gross income £575; nett income £475. Patron, in 1835, the Rev. J. Croome. The church is a handsome Grecian edifice. The great and small tithes of Bourton-on-the-Water, and Clapton-on-the-Hill, the property of the clerical rector and lay-impropriator, were commuted in 1773. A Baptist church here was formed in 1645. There are four daily schools here, one of which is endowed with £12 per annum, accruing from property bequeathed by Anthony Collett, Esq., in 1719. There are also two Sunday schools. This parish is crossed by the Roman fosse-way, and many Roman antiquities have been found in the vicinity of the village. Among these, a curious gold signet, bearing the impress of a soldier seated on a tripod, with a spear in his left hand and the Roman eagle at his feet, is worthy of notice. A paved aqueduct formerly existed here. Pop., in 1801, 697; in 1831, 858. Houses 183. Acres 2,290. A. P. £5,088. Poor rates, in 1837, £249.

BOUSTEAD-HILL, a township in the parish of Burgh-on-the-Sands, ward and county of Cumberland; 7 miles west by north of Carlisle, intersected by the Ship canal, communicating with the Solway frith. Pop., in 1801, 84; in 1831, 63. Houses 12. Other returns with the parish.

BOVENY (LOWER), a chapelry in the parish and hund. of Burnham, county of Buckingham; 2 miles west of Eton, on the northern bank of the river Thames. Living, a curacy annexed to the vicarage of Burnham. There is a daily school here. Pop., in 1801, 165; in 1831, 207. Houses 38. Acres 590. A. P. £2,572. Poor rates, in 1837, £69.

BOVERIDGE, or BOURIDEN, a hamlet in the parish and hund. of Cranborne, Shafton division of the county of Dorset; 1½ mile north-north-east of Cranborne. "Here is an alms-house, founded and endowed by the Hoopers, for three poor people, nominated by them, and a small stipend for a chaplain. Here is a chapel-of-ease, served once in three weeks by the vicar of Cranborne." Hutchins' Dorset. Returns with the parish.

BOVEY (NORTH), a parish in the hund. of Teinbridge, union of Newton-Abbot, county of Devon; 13 miles west-south-west of Exeter. Living, a vicarage in the archd. of Totness and dio. of Exeter; valued at £22 10s. 5d.; gross income £303. Patron, in 1835, Earl of Devon. There are three daily schools in this parish, one of which is endowed with £3 per annum. Here are extensive mines of tin. A fair is held on the first Monday after Midsommer-day. Pop., in 1801, 519; in 1831, 609. Houses 106. Acres 6,600. A. P. £1,870. Poor rates, in 1837, £293.

BOVEY (SOUTH), or BOVEY-TRACEY, a parish in the hund. of Teinbridge, union of Newton-Abbot, county of Devon; 4 miles south-west of Chudleigh, on the eastern bank of the river Wrey, and in the vicinity of the Stover railway. Living, a vicarage in the archd. of Totness and dio. of Exeter; valued at £26 2s. 1d.; gross income £226. Patron, the Crown. The Baptists and Wesleyan Methodists have places of worship here. The Baptist church was formed in 1773. Here is a free school for 20 boys, endowed with about £30 per annum. There are also eight daily and three Sunday schools in this parish. This parish possesses several extensive manufactories of earthen ware, and some coal-mines. Antimony has been discovered here, but in no great quantity. In 1259, the lord of the manor obtained a grant of a market and fair. Fairs for sheep are held on Easter-Monday and Holy-Thursday; and for wool on the first Thursday in July and in November; but the market has fallen into disuse. Pop., in 1801, 1,431; in 1831, 1,697. Houses 319. Acres 6,480. A. P. 6,714. Poor rates, in 1837, £720.

BOVINGDON, a chapelry in the parish of Hemel-Hempstead, hund. of Dacorum, county of Hertford; 4 miles west-north-west of King's-Langley. Living, a curacy annexed to the vicarage of Hemel-Hempstead. There are two schools of industry here, one of which is wholly supported by the honourable G. Ryder, besides an infant school, and two Sunday schools. Pop., in 1801, 779; in 1831, 962. Houses 189. Acres 4,160. A. P. £4,451. Poor rates, in 1837, £414.

BOW, or NYMET-TRACEY, a parish in the hund. of North Tawton with Winkley, union of Crediton, county of Devon; 7½ miles west of Crediton, on the post-road to Oakhampton. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Barnstaple and dio. of Exeter; valued at £19 8s. 9d.; gross income £402. Patron, in 1835, C. Chichester. The Independent church here was formed in 1821; the Baptist church in 1773. There are four daily schools in this parish, one of which is endowed with £12 per annum, besides two Sunday and two infant schools. Charities connected with this parish produce about £40 per annum. Fairs for cattle are held on Holy-Thursday, and on November 22d. Thursdays are the market-days. Pop., in 1801, 677; in 1831, 962. Houses 181. Acres 2,740. A. P. £2,165. Poor rates, in 1837, £360.

BOW, or STRATFORD-LE-BOW, a parish in the Tower division of the hund. of Ossulstone, city of London union, county of Middlesex; 4 miles east-north-east of St. Paul's, London, intersected by the Eastern Counties railway. It was originally a chapelry to the parish of Stepney, and was made parochial in 1730. It takes its name from an ancient ford over the river Lea, on the line of a Roman road, and of the highroad from London to Essex, where a narrow bridge of three arches—said to be the oldest stone-bridge in England—was erected in the early part of the 11th century, under the auspices of Matilda, queen of Henry I. A new bridge of one oblique arch of 70 feet square, substituted for the old bridge, was opened February 14, 1839. It cost £11,000. Living, a rectory, formerly in the archd. of Middlesex and dio. of London, now in the dio. of Rochester, of the yearly value of £819; in the patronage of Brasenose college, Oxford. The church was built in the reign of Henry II., and presents a curious mixture of the Norman and English styles of architecture. The Baptists and Wesleyan Methodists have places of worship here. Here was formerly an extensive manufactory of porcelain; and a fair, which, from its vicinity to the metropolis, and the numerous doubtful characters which it there attracted, became at last so great a nuisance, that it was suppressed by the authority of the legislature. In 1838 there was a flax-mill here, employing 7 hands. Here is a free school under the superintendence of the Drapers' company, founded in 1613, by Sir John Jolles. A school for fifty boys was founded in 1701 by Mrs. Prisca Cobourne, who endowed it with land then worth £40 per annum, but the property has risen in value and now produces about £500, so that the school has been greatly extended. It is under the superintendence of the rectors of several adjacent parishes. Here are also three daily and three boarding schools, and alms-houses, founded by Sir John Jolles, and John Edmansou. Other charities connected with this parish produce about £79 per annum. Pop., in 1821, 2,349; in 1831, 3,371. Houses 603. Acres 630. A. P. £10,771. Poor rates, in 1837, £2,325.

BOWDEN'S-EDGE, a township in the parish of Chapel-en-le-Frith, hund. of High-Peak, county of Derby; 1 mile north-north-east of Chapel-en-le-Frith, and within the jurisdiction of a court of pleas held at Tutbury every third Tuesday, for the recovery of debts under 40s. Pop., in 1801, 902; in 1831, 1,067. Houses 209. Other returns with the parish.

BOWDEN (GREAT), a parish in the hund. of Gartree, union of Market-Harborough, county of Leicester; 1½ mile north-east of Market-Harborough, intersected by the union canal. This parish includes the chapelry of Market-Harborough. Living, a perpetual curacy, formerly in the archd. of Leicester and dio. of Lincoln, now in the dio. of Peterborough, valued at £31, and rated in the parliamentary returns at £65; gross income £87; in the patronage of Christ church, Oxford. The great and small tithes, the property of the dean and chapter of Oxford, were commuted in 1776. There are eleven daily, eleven infant, and six Sunday schools in this parish. In 1838, there was a worsted and flax mill here, employing 8 hands. Pop., in 1801, 2,499; in 1831, 3,346. Houses 678. Acres 3,120. A. P. £11,501. Poor rates, in 1837, £720.

BOWDEN (LITTLE), a parish in the hund. of Rothwell, union of Market-Harborough, county of Northampton; 1 mile south-east of Market-Harborough, divided from Leicestershire by the river Welland. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Northampton and dio. of Peterborough, valued at £15 4s. 2d.; gross income £293. Patron, in 1835, the Rev. J. Barlow. The great and small tithes of the parishes of Little Bowden, the property of the dean and chapter of Oxford and the clerical rector, were commuted in 1779. Pop., including the hamlet of Little Oxenden, in 1801, 327; in 1831, 346. Houses 81. Acres 2,410. A. P. £3,087. Poor rates, in 1837, £300.

BOWDON, a parish in the hund. of Bucklow union of Altrincham, co.-palatine of Chester; 6 miles north by east of Nether-Knutsford, in the vicinity of the Duke of Bridgewater's canal. It comprises the chapelries of Altrincham, and Carrington, and the townships of Agden, Ashley, Baguley, Bollington, Bowdon, Dunham-Massey, Hale, Partridge, and Timperley. Living, a vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Chester, valued at £24; gross income £437; in the patronage of the bishop of Chester. The church belonged anciently to Birkenhead priory, and was annexed to the see of Chester by Henry VIII. The rectorial tithes are leased by the bishop to the earl of Stamford and Warrington. This parish possesses twenty-five daily and fourteen Sunday schools. It was intersected by one of the Roman roads. Pop., in 1801, 6,066; in 1831, 8,200. Houses 1,505. Acres 18,870. A. P. £33,836. Poor rates, in 1837, £2,357. Pop. of the township, in 1801, 340; in 1831, 458. Houses 81. Acres 690. Poor rates, in 1837, £131.

BOWER-CHALK, a parish in the hund. of Chalk, union of Wilton, county of Wilts; 7½ miles south-south-west of Wilton. Living, a vicarage, united to the rectory of Broadchalk. There are two small daily schools in this parish, and a Sunday school. Pop., in 1801, 320; in 1831, 370. Houses 83. Acres 3,120. A. P. £2,006. Poor rates, in 1837, £199.

BOWER-HENTON, a hamlet in the parish and hund. of Martock, county of Somerset. There is a dissenting chapel here.

BOWERS-GIFFORD, a parish in the hund. of Barstable, union of Billericay, county of Essex; 4 miles west-south-west of Rayleigh. Living, a rectory, formerly in the archd. of Essex and dio. of London, now in the dio. of Rochester, valued at £25; gross income £571. Patron, in 1835, John Curtis, Esq. Pop., in 1801, 156; in 1831, 231. Houses 26. Acres 2,230. A. P. £3,582. Poor rates, in 1837, £128.

BOWES, a parish in the western division of the wapentake of Gilling, union of Teesdale, north riding of Yorkshire; 4 miles south-west of Barnard castle, on the post road to Richmond, and intersected by the river Greta. It comprises the townships of Boldron, Bowes, and Gilmontonby. Living, a perpetual curacy, formerly in the archd. of Richmond and dio. of Chester, now in the dio. of Ripon, valued at £20 15s.; gross income £90. In 1693, William Hutchinson, Esq. of Clement's inn, founded a grammar-school, free to all children of the parish, and endowed it with land now producing £258 per annum. In addition to this endowment the Rev. Charles Parken left a scholarship at Cambridge for its benefit. There are also a daily and a Sunday school here. The village, which consists principally of one long street, is situated on the edge of Staunmore, a mountainous and dreary tract on which—soon after the Conquest—Alan, Earl of Richmond, built a castle, the ruins of which still remain, forming a square of equal sides of 53 feet each. In 1838 there were a woollen and a worsted mill here, employing 39 hands. Camden states that in his time a slab was used here for the communion-table, on which was an inscription dedicatory to the emperor Adrian, and this is supposed to have been the Roman station, called Lavatra by Antoninus. A market and fair were formerly held in the town, but they have fallen into disuse. In the vicinity is a natural bridge, which the river Greta has formed in a limestone rock. It is called God's bridge, and has a span of 16 feet, and is occasionally used as a carriage road over the river. In the village the tragical event occurred which gave rise to Mallet's touching ballad of Edwin and Emma. Pop., in 1801, 943; in 1831, 1,145. Houses 185. Acres 19,780. A. P. £7,948. Poor rates, in 1837, £359. Pop. of the township in 1801, 670; in 1831, 899. Poor rates, in 1837, £298. Houses 133. Acres 16,090.

BOWFELL, a mountain in Westmoreland, rising to the height of 2,911 feet.

BOWLAND-FOREST (High and Low), a township, partly in the parish of Whalley and hund. of Blackburn, co.-palatine of Lancaster, but chiefly in the parish of Slaidburn, western division of the wapentake of Staincliffe and Ewcross, west riding of Yorkshire; 10 miles north-west of Clitheroe. The greater part of the forest has been enclosed; the office of master-forester has long been in possession of the family of Parker, of Brownsholme-hall. Pop., including Bowland-with-Leagram, in 1801, 841; in 1831, 809. Houses 125. Acres 25,760. A. P. £9,514. Poor rates, in 1837, £486.

BOWLING, a township in the parish of Bradford, wapentake of Morley, west riding of Yorkshire; 1½ mile south-west of Bradford. Here is a church of Primitive Methodists, formed in 1824. There are five daily, four Sunday, and seven infant schools in this township, many of the inhabitants of which are employed in quarries and mines. Pop., in 1801, 2,055; in 1831, 5,958. Houses 1,115. Acres 1,240. A. P. £9,548. Poor rates, in 1837, £450.

BOWNESS, a parish in the union of Wigton, ward and county of Cumberland; 13½ miles west-north-west of Carlisle, on the southern bank of the Solway Frith, intersected by the ship canal. It comprises the townships of Anthorn, Bowness, Drumburgh, and Fingland. Living, a rectory, in the archd. and dio. of Carlisle, valued at £21 3s. 11½d.; gross income £414. Patron, in 1835, the Earl of Lonsdale. This parish possesses seven daily schools, four of which have small endowments, and two Sunday schools. The sum of £12, arising from Frountbeck's charity, is annually distributed amongst poor persons of Bowness, not receiving parish relief. In the vicinity were the Roman stations Tunnocellum and Gabrosentum. Pop., in 1801, 825; in 1831, 1,196. Houses 225. Acres 10,830. A. P. £5,951. Poor rates, in 1837, £227. Pop. of the township, in 1801, 220; in 1831, 388. Houses 72. A. P. £1,438.

BOWNESS, a hamlet to the township of Undermillbeck, parish of Windermere, Kendal ward, county of Westmoreland; 8 miles west-north-west of Kirkby-Kendal, finely situated on a small bay on the eastern shore of Windermere lake, opposite Great Island. Here is the parish-church, possessing some exquisite glass-paintings, which formerly belonged to the abbey of Furness. A market is held on Wednesday; a fair was formerly held in October, but it has fallen into disuse. A few fishing-vessels belong to this place. Mr. Gilpin says, "Bowness is the capital port town on the lake; if we may adopt a dignified style, which the grandeur of the scene suggests. It is the great mart for fish and charcoal; both which commodities are largely imported here; and carried by land into the country. Its harbour is crowded with vessels of various kinds, some of which are used merely as pleasure boats in navigating the lake." Returns with the township of Undermillbeck. See WINDERMERE.

BOWOOD, a liberty in the parish and hund. of Calne, county of Wilts; 3½ miles south-east by east of Chippenham, in the neighbourhood of the Wilts and Berks canal. There is a daily school here for the benefit of this and the adjacent places of Derry-hill, Sandy-lane, and Studley, supported by the Marquis of Lansdowne, whose mansion stands within this liberty. It is surrounded by extensive pleasure-grounds, richly ornamented with plantations. The only other building, besides the mansion-house, is a mausoleum, consecrated to the memory of John, Earl of Shelburne. Pop., in 1801, 137; in 1831, 81. Other returns with the parish.

BOWTHORP. See BAWBOURH.

BOX, a parish in the hund. of Chippenham, union of Chippenham, county of Wilts; 7½ miles south-west by west of Chippenham, on the line of the Great Western railroad, in a valley of singular beauty, watered by a rivulet of the same name. Living, a vicarage, formerly in the archd. of Wilts and dio. of Salisbury, now in the dio. of Gloucester and Bristol, valued at £15 8s. 9d.; gross income £350. Patron, in 1835, the Rev. H. D. C. S. Horlock. Freestone of an excellent quality, much of which was used in erecting the city of Bath, is found in this parish. Here is a charity school endowed with £30 per annum, but the commissioners for examining public charities having recommended an increase, the master now receives £50. Here are also two daily and two boarding schools. The village is overlooked by an eminence of singular appearance, called Tautney hill. According to the tradition of the place, there were formerly baths here, supposed to be of Roman origin. Tesselated pavements and other Roman remains have been found in the vicinity, and several stone coffins, each hewn out of a solid piece of freestone, have been dug up in the churchyard.—Box-hill in this parish consists of a large extent of elevated ground, composed in great part of solid beds of freestone, lying directly between, and almost equidistant from, Chippenham and Bath. It presented one of the most formidable obstacles with which the Great Western railway has had to contend. A tunnel through this immense mass, a mile and three quarters in length, was commenced in 1836, and although the difficulties were great, considerable progress has been made towards the completion of the work, which it is expected will be finished in 1841. Pop., in 1801, 1,165; in 1831, 1,550. Houses 271. Acres 4,130. A. P. £8,345. Poor rates, in 1837, £538.

BOX AND STOCKBRIDGE HUNDRED, in the rape of Chichester, county of Sussex. Area 21,220 acres. Houses 864. Pop., in 1831, 4,852.

BOXFORD cum WESTBROOK, a parish in the hund. of Faircross, union of Newbury, county of Berks; 4½ miles north-west of Newbury, on the eastern bank of the river Lambourn. Living, a rectory, formerly in the archd. of Berks and dio. of Salisbury, now in the dio. of Oxford, valued at £20; gross income £798. Patron, in 1835, J. Wells, Esq. This parish possesses two daily schools, besides an evening and a Sunday school. Pop., in 1801, 293; in 1831, 628. Houses 126. Acres 2,880. A. P. £3,095. Poor rates, in 1837, £346.

BOXFORD, a parish, partly in the hund. of Cosford and partly in that of Babergh, union of Cosford, county of Suffolk; 15 miles west by south of Ipswich. It includes the hamlet of Hadleigh. Living, a rectory, formerly in the archd. of Sudbury and dio. of Norwich, now in the dio. of Ely; valued at £20; gross income £720; in the patronage of the Crown. The church is a spacious building, with a spire steeple. There are ten daily schools in this parish, one of which, a grammar-school, was endowed by Queen Elizabeth in the 38th year of her reign. There is also a Sunday school. Charities connected with this parish produce about £100 per annum. The Independents have a chapel here. Fairs are held on Easter-Monday, and December 21st. Pop., in 1801, 636; in 1831, 1,088. Houses 220. Acres 2,450. A. P. £3,102. Poor rates, in 1837, £368.

BOXGROVE, a parish in the hund. of Box and Stockbridge, rape of Chichester, union of West Hampnett, county of Sussex; $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles north-east by east of Chichester, and 3 miles north of the Arundel and Portsmouth canal. Living, a vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Chichester, valued at £9 5s. 5d.; gross income £721. Patron, in 1835, the Duke of Richmond. The church belonged to an ancient priory, and contains several altar-tombs, one of which, tradition relates, covers the remains of Queen Adeliza. Here are twelve almshouses, and a school, endowed, in 1740, by Mary, countess dowager of Derby. There are also a day and Sunday National school, containing 95 girls, and a daily school, in this parish. "Here was an alien priory, subordinate to the abbey de L'Essay in Normandy, to which it was first given to Robert de Heys, in the times of Henry I. From three Benedictine monks, by the benefactions of the St. John family, the number was raised at one time to sixteen, but reduced to nine not long before the dissolution. It was dedicated to St. Mary and St. Blase, and was made 'prioratus indigena,' 13^o Edward VI. In 26^o Henry VIII., its yearly revenues were valued at £185 19s. 8d. The site was granted in exchange to Henry, earl of Arundel, 3^o Elizabeth."—Tanner's Not. Mon. Pop., in 1801, 682; in 1831, 778. Houses 153. Acres 3,410. A. P. £4,423. Poor rates, in 1837, £477.

BOX-HILL, a hill in the parish of Dorking, hund. of Wootton, county of Surrey, remarkable for the fine box-trees which grow on it. It commands an extensive and varied prospect.

BOXLEY, written in the Textus Roffensis Boxele, a parish in the hund. of Maidstone, lathe of Aylesford, union of Hollingbourn, county of Kent; $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles north-north-east of Maidstone, intersected by the Central Kent railway. Living, a vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Canterbury; valued at £12 19s. 2d.; gross income £852; in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Rochester. There are two daily schools in this parish. The village is situated at the foot of the chalk hills, above which this parish extends over a barren dreary country. Here are extensive paper mills. The premises were originally used as fulling-mills. In 1838 there was a woollen-mill, employing 16 hands, within this parish. "William de Ipre, earl of Kent, who afterwards became monk himself at Laon in France, founded here, A. D. 1146, an abbey of Cistercian monks from Claraville in Burgundy, which was dedicated to the blessed Virgin; yet from the famous rood here, it is in some records called Abbatia S. Crucis de Gratilis. It was endowed with £218 19s. 10d., and granted, 32^o Henry VIII., to Sir Thomas Wyat."—Tanner's Not. Mon. To this abbey Henry III. granted a weekly market, and in the reign of Edward I. the abbot sat in parliament. The rood or crucifix of this abbey, termed the Rood of Grace, appears to have been of extremely ingenious mechanism. In 1538, at the period of dissolution, it was publicly exposed in London, in presence of an immense multitude, and subsequently destroyed. Some small portions of the conventual buildings are yet visible. In the vicinity is an extensive rabbit warren, which belonged to the abbey.—In nearly the centre of the parish—excepting that Maidstone stretches itself with a point or nook over a part of it—is the famous Pinnenden or Pickenden heath, which has been from time immemorial used for all great public meetings of the county. The poet George Sandys was buried in Boxley church. Pop., in 1801, 1,010; in 1831, 1,391. Houses 214. Acres 5,670, of which above 200 are devoted to the cultivation of hops. A. P. £8,230. Poor rates, in 1837, £906.

BOXMOOR, a station on the London and Birmingham railway, $24\frac{1}{2}$ miles north-west by west of London, and $97\frac{1}{2}$ east by south of Birmingham, in the vicinity of the village of Two Waters. For the convenience of travellers a commodious inn has been erected near this station.

BOXTED, a parish in the Colchester division of the hund. of Lexden, union of Lexden and Winstree, county of Essex; 2 miles south-east of Neyland, and $4\frac{1}{2}$ north-west of the railroad from London to Norwich, on the southern bank of the river Stour. Living, a discharged vicarage, formerly in the archd. of Colchester and dio. of London, now in the dio. of Rochester; valued at £7 13s. 9d., and rated in the parliamentary returns at £122; gross income £190; in the patronage of the bishop of Rochester. There is a day and Sunday school here. Charities connected with this parish produce £7 10s. per annum. Pop., in 1801, 558; in 1831, 832. Houses 133. Acres 3,120. A. P. £3,895. Poor rates, in 1837, £343.

BOXTED, a parish in the hund. of Babergh, union of Sudbury, county of Suffolk; 5 miles north-east of Clare. Living, a rectory, not in charge, consolidated with Hartest. A fair is held here on Whit-Monday for cattle. Pop., in 1801, 171; in 1831, 239. Houses 23. Acres 1,580. A. P. £1,460. Poor rates, in 1837, £186.

BOXWELL WITH LEIGHTERTON, a parish in the upper division of the hund. of Grombold's Ash, union of Tetbury, county of Gloucester; 4 miles east by south of Wotton-under-Edge. Living, a rectory with the curacy of Leighterton, in the archd. of Bristol, and dio. of Gloucester and Bristol; valued at £23 4s. 9d.; gross income £350. Patron, in 1835, the Rev. R. W. Huntley. This parish possesses a daily school and two Sunday schools. "There were nunes," says Leland, "at Boxwell, 2 miles from Wotton-under-Edge, destroyed, as sum say, by the Danes. It longid now to the abbey of Gloucester." Pop., in 1801, 217; in 1831, 297. Houses 64. Acres 2,210. A. P. £2,295. Poor rates, in 1837, £65.

BOXWORTH, a parish in the hund. of Papworth, union of St. Ives, county of Cambridge; 6 miles north-east by north of Caxton. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Ely; valued at £18 12s. 3d.; gross income £498. Patron, in 1835, G. Thornhill, Esq. There are a daily and a Sunday school here, both of which are supported by the lord of the manor, the rector, and the curate. The interest of £45, left by different individuals, is distributed every four years amongst the poor of this parish. Pop., in 1801, 220; in 1831, 283. Houses 44. Acres 2,000. A. P. £1,767. Poor rates, in 1837, £232.

BOYATT. See OTTERBOURNE.

BOYLSTON, a parish in the hund. of Apple-tree, union of Uttoxeter, county of Derby; 7 miles south of Ashborne. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. of Derby, and dio. of Lichfield and Coventry; valued at £6 0s. 2d.; gross income £268. Patron, in 1835, the Rev. T. Gell. The great and small tithes, the property of the clerical rector, were commuted in 1783. There is a daily school here. Pop., in 1801, 253; in 1831, 330. Houses 61. Acres 1,360. A. P. £2,050. Poor rates, in 1837, £143.

BOYNTON, parish in the wapentake of Dickering, east riding, union of Bridlington, county of York; $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles west by north of Bridlington. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of the east riding and dio. of York; valued at £7 14s. 2d., and rated in the parliamentary returns at £140; gross income £142. Patron, in 1835, Sir W. Strickland. The impropriate and vicarial tithes of the township, the property of the lord of the manor and vicar, were commuted in 1777. The interest of £100 is distributed amongst the poor of Boynton and Carnaby, in the way of occasional relief. Pop., in 1801, 66; in 1831, 114. Houses 18. Acres 2,690. A. P. £1,479. Poor rates, in 1837, £44.

BOYTHORPE. See FOXHOLES WITH BOYTHORP.

BOYTON, a parish, partly in the hund. of Black Torrington, county of Devon, and partly in that of Stratton, county of Cornwall; 5 miles north by west of Launceston, intersected by the Bude canal. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. of Cornwall and dio. of Exeter; valued at £18,—returned value £59 4s. 9d.; gross income £136. Patron, in 1835, the Rev. G. Prideaux. There are a daily and an evening school in this parish, and two Sunday schools. Fairs are held here on Monday fortnight after Lammas-day, and August 18th for cattle, &c. Pop., with the hamlet of Northcott, in 1801, 319; in 1831, 557. Houses 82. Acres 5,120. A. P. £1,477. Poor rates, in 1837, £84.

BOYTON, a parish in the hund. of Wilford, union of Woodbridge, county of Suffolk; 7 miles east-south-east of Woodbridge, on the western bank of the river Butley, near Hollesley bay. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Suffolk and dio. of Norwich; valued at £5 12s. 1d.; gross income £365. Patrons, in 1835, Trustees. This parish possesses a daily and a Sunday school. Here are almshouses for eight men and as many women, with a liberal endowment. Pop., in 1801, 201; in 1831, 247. Houses 45. Acres 1,890. A. P. £1,646. Poor rates, in 1837, £232.

BOYTON, a parish in the hund. of Heytesbury, union of Warminster, county of Wilts; 6 miles south-east by east of Warminster. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Salisbury; valued at £27 17s. 3½d.; gross income £553; in the patronage of Magdalene college, Oxford. There are a daily and a Sunday school here. Pop., in 1801, 248; in 1831, 362. Houses 40. Acres 4,580. A. P. £2,071. Poor rates, in 1837, £154.

BOYTON. See BRIGHTON, Norfolk.

BOZEAT, or BOZIATE, a parish in the hund. of Higham-Ferrers, union of Wellingborough, county of Northampton; 6 miles south of Wellingborough. Living, a discharged vicarage, with the rectory of Strixton, in the archd. of Northampton and dio. of Peterborough; valued at £8; gross income £210. Patron, in 1835, Earl Spencer. The great and small tithes, the property of the lord of the manor and vicar, were commuted in 1793. There is a Sunday school, containing 187 children, in this parish. Pop., in 1801, 680; in 1831, 812. Houses 156. Acres 2,400. A. P. £2,402. Poor rates, in 1837, £421.

BRABOURNE, a parish in the franchise and barony of Bircholt, lathe of Shepway, union of East Ashford, county of Kent; 5 miles east of Ashford, in the neighbourhood of the South Eastern railroad. Living, a vicarage, consolidated in 1776 with Monk's Horton, in the archd. and dio. of Canterbury; valued at £11 12s. 6d.; gross income £385; in the patronage of the archbishop of Canterbury. Here is a Baptist church, formed in 1818. There is also another chapel belonging to the same body; the church was organized in 1824. This parish possesses five daily and two Sunday schools. Here are extensive infantry and cavalry barracks. Pop., in 1801, 423; in 1831, 664. Houses 92. Acres 3,640. A. P. £3,809. Poor rates, in 1837, £469.

BRACEBOROUGH, a parish in the wapentake of Ness, parts of Kesteven, union of Stamford, county of Lincoln; $5\frac{1}{2}$ miles west-north-west of Market-Deeping, intersected by the river Glen. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Lincoln; valued at £9 10s., and rated in the parliamentary returns at £160; gross income £205; in the patronage of the Crown. The great and small tithes, the property of the clerical rectors, were commuted in 1799–1800. There is a daily school here. Pop., in 1801, 148; in 1831, 219. Houses 34. Acres 2,230. A. P. £1,662. Poor rates, in 1837, £47.

BRACEBRIDGE, a parish in the liberty of the city of Lincoln, union and county of Lincoln; 3 miles south by east of Lincoln, on the post-road to Sleaford. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Lincoln; valued at £3 9s. 9½d.; gross income £229. Patron, in 1835, the Rev. J. Peurose. There is a daily school here. Pop., in 1801, 145; in 1831, 158. Houses 26. Poor rates, in 1837, £120.

BRACEBY, a parish in the soke of Grantham, parts of Kesteven, union of Grantham, county of Lincoln; 5 miles west by north of Folkingham. Living, a vicarage united to South Grantham. There is a day and Sunday school in this parish. Pop., in 1801, 71; in 1831, 123. Houses 21. Acres 970. A. P. £1,196. Poor rates, in 1837, £75.

BRACE-MEOL, a parish within the liberty of the borough of Shrewsbury, county of Salop; 2 miles south of Shrewsbury. It includes the house of industry for all the town parishes. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Salop and dio. of Hereford; valued at £5; gross income £389. Patron, in 1835, the Rev. E. Bather. There are a day and Sunday National school, containing 112 children, a Sunday school, and three boarding schools, in this parish. Pop., in 1801, 1,253; in 1831, 1,207. Houses 230. A. P. £6,892. Poor rates, in 1837, £461.

BRACEWELL, a parish and township in the eastern division of the wapentake of Staincliffe and Ewcross, union of Skipton, west riding of Yorkshire; 9 miles west by south of Skipton, in the vicinity of the Leeds and Liverpool canal. Living, a discharged vicarage, formerly in the archd. and dio. of York, now in the dio. of Ripon; valued at £2 9s. 9½d., and rated in the parliamentary returns at £60; gross income £123. Patron, in 1835, Earl de Grey. Limestone is found here. Pop., in 1801, 173; in 1831, 160. Houses 36. Acres 1,920. A. P. £1,941. Poor rates, in 1837, £128.

BRACKEN, a township in the parish of Kilnwick, Bainton-Beacon division of the wapentake of Hart-hill, east riding of Yorkshire; 6 miles south-west by south of Great Driffield. Pop., in 1801, 14; in 1831, 28. Houses 8. Acres 400. Poor rates, in 1837, £23.

BRACKENBOROUGH, a chapelry in the parish of Great Grimsby, wapentake of Ludborough, parts of Lindsey, union of Louth, county of Lincoln; 2 miles north of Louth. Pop., in 1801, 36; in 1831, 44. Houses 7. Acres 890. A. P. £815. Poor rates, in 1837, £37.

BRACKENFIELD, a chapelry in the parish of Morton, hund. of Scarsdale, county of Derby; 4 miles north-west of Alfreton, in the vicinity of the North Midland railroad. There is a daily school here. Pop., in 1811, 322; in 1831, 363. Houses 69. Acreage with the parish. A. P. £1,596. Poor rates, in 1837, £128.

BRACKENHILL, a township in the parish of Arthuret, Eskdale ward, county of Cumberland; 4½ miles east by north of Longtown, intersected by the river Line. There is a daily school here, endowed by Lady Widdrington with £4 per annum. Pop., in 1801, 489; in 1831, 391. Houses 63. Acreage with the parish. A. P. £3,152.

BRACKENHOLME WITH WOODHALL, a township in the parish of Hemingbrough, wapentake of Ouse and Derwent, east riding of Yorkshire; 4 miles west-north-west of Howden, on the western bank of the river Derwent, and in the immediate vicinity of the Selby and Hull railroad. Pop., in 1801, 65; in 1831, 69. Houses 11. Acres 1,050. A. P. £1,063. Poor rates, in 1837, £38.

BRACKENTHWAITE, a township in the parochial chapelry of Lorton, ward of Allerdale above Darwent, county of Cumberland; 8½ miles west of Keswick. Pop., in 1801, 136; in 1831, 130. Houses 25. Acreage with the parish. A. P. £894. Poor rates, in 1837, £64.

BRACKLEY, a borough, market-town, and parish, in the hund. of King's-Sutton, union of Brackley, county of Northampton; 63 miles north-west of London, 9½ east by south of Banbury, and 11 south-west of Towcester. The name is derived from the Anglo-Saxon name for a fern, bracken, plants of that family having formerly abounded in the vicinity. Under the Saxons it was a borough of considerable importance, but was nearly destroyed by the Danes. It became a famous staple town for wool after the Conquest, and in the reign of Edward III. sent three 'merchant-staplers' to a grand council held at Westminster. Brackley was anciently one of the places where tournaments were allowed to be held. The scene of the tournaments was Bayard's green, corruptly called Bear's green, an elevated spot of table-land, on the south bank of the Ouse. The name is synonymous with Horse's green. The site afterwards became the place where the once famous Brackley horse-races were held. The town stands on a rising ground, near a branch of the river Ouse, by which it is separated from the county of Buckingham. It consists mainly of a single street, nearly a mile in length, containing some good houses, which are chiefly built of stone. There is a handsome town-hall in the middle of the street, supported on arches, under which the market is held. It was erected in 1706 by Scroop, duke of Bridgewater, at an expense of £2,000. No extensive manufactures are carried on here. Formerly this town was a great mart for wool; but the inhabitants are now chiefly employed in the manufacture of bobbin-lace, and boots and shoes. Wednesday is market-day; fairs are held on the first Wednesday after February 25th, and April 19th for horses, cows, and sheep; on the first Wednesday after June 22d, and October 11th, for horses, cows, and hiring servants; and on December 11th for horses, cows, and sheep. The town is said to have been incorporated by Henry III.; but the only evidence of a documentary nature which the corporation possessed of their corporate-existence, at the period of the parliamentary inquiry in 1835, consisted of the abstracts of two charters of James II., published in Baker's 'History of Northamptonshire,' and transcribed for that work from the copies at the Rolls chapel. It appears from the warrant-books at the State Paper office, that Brackley was one of the places to which charters were given, in 1688, by James II. at the king's charge, by the advice of "the honourable committee for regulating corporations,"—the design of which obviously was to pack, as far as possible, the parliament he then intended to call. This borough, though possessing a mayor and other functionaries, has not been, for many years, a municipal institution; indeed it has not exercised any of the functions of town-government within the memory of the present generation; nor, in the opinion of the municipal commissioners, is it capable of defraying the necessary expense of such an institution. The town, which is within the jurisdiction of the county-magistrates, is divided into New and Old Brackley. The limits of the borough are co-extensive with those of the parish. The elective franchise was first conferred in the first of Edward VI.; and two members were returned by the corporation, in number only 33, until the Reform act, by placing this borough in schedule A., deprived them, or rather deprived the Marquess of Stafford and Earl of Bridgewater, whose influence predominated here, of their monopoly.

